TO HIS MOST SACRED MAIESTIE CHARLES,

By the grace of GOD, KING of Great Britaine, France and Ireland, DEFENDER OF THE FAITH, &c.

Most Gracious and Dread SOVERAIGNE;

WE here preſent to Your moſt Sacred Majeſtie, a booke of Sermons. We need not tell whoſe they are, the Sermons are able to ſpeake their Author. When the Author died, Your Majeſty thought it not fit his ſermons ſhould die with him. And though they could not live with all that elegancie which they had upon his tongue, yet you were graciouſly pleaſed to thinke a paper-life better than none. Vpon this Your Majeſty gave us a ſtrict charge, that we ſhould over looke the Papers (as well Sermons as other Tractates) of that Reverend and Worthy Prelate, and print all that we found perfect. There came to our hands a world of Sermon-notes, but theſe came perfect Had they not come perfect, we ſhould not have ventured to adde any limme unto them, leſt mixing a pen farre inferiour, we ſhould have disfigured ſuch compleat bodies.

Your Majeſties firſt care was for the Preſſe, that the worke might be publike. Your ſecond was for the worke it ſelfe, that it might come forth worthy the Author; which could not be, if it came not forth as he left it. In purſuance of theſe two, we have brought the work to light, and we have done it with care and fidelity; for as the Sermons were preached, ſo are they publiſhed. When he preached them, they had the generall approbation of the Court, and they made him famous for making them. Now they are printed, we hope they will have as generall liking of the Church, and inlarge and indeare his name, to them that knew not him.

We know there is a great prejudice attends the after-printing of dead mens workes. For the living may make the dead ſpeake as they will, and as the dead would not ſpeake, did they live. And many worthy Authors in all profeſsions, have had ſuch unſutable peeces ſtitched to their former workes, as make them ſpeake contrary to themſelves, and to their knowne Iudgement while they lived. As if they had ſeene ſome viſion after death, to croſſe or recall their Iudgement in their life. We would be loth to ſuffer under the ſuſpition of this. And therefore in a full obedience to Your Majeſties Command, as we have printed all that we could finde perfect, and worthy his Name: ſo have we not added or detracted in the leaſt, to alter or divert his ſenſe. That ſo the worke may not onely be his, but as himſelfe made it: And the honour Your Majeſties that ſo carefully commanded it: And the faithfulneſſe ours in our obedience to Your Majeſtie, and our love to his memorie.

And now will Your Majeſtie graciouſly be pleaſed to give us leave, to commend this worke to Your Protection, which would have needed none, had not Your Majeſtie commanded it to be publike. For, publike view is as great a ſearch as many eyes can make. And many eyes can ſee what two cannot, be they never ſo good. And among many eyes, ſome will ever looke aſquint upon worth, and maligne that which they cannot equall. And if ever any mans patience and temper could prevent this evill Eye, we hope his may: And yet, even whilſt we hope the beſt, we humbly begge your Majeſties protection againſt the worſt, becauſe the daies are evill.

Eph. 5. 15.

We have but two things to preſent to Your Majeſtie. They are the Perſon to your memorie; and this his worke to your eye. For the perſon, we can adde nothing to him. To name him, is enough to all that knew him; and to read him, will be enough to them that knew him not. And though Vertue have but its due, when ti's commended, yet we conceive not how praiſe may make vertue better than it is, eſpecially when the perſon in whom it was, is dead to all encouragement or comfort by it. And yet though vertue cannot thus be bettered, it may be righted thus. For, Vivorum ut magna admiratio, ita cenſura difficilis. Tis eaſie to admire the living, and we doe it, but 'its hard to cenſure them any way. Both becauſe there will be no preferring one before another without offence: And becauſe, as we know not what may come upon them before death, ſo the cenſure may be ſo good, as they will ner'e deſerve; or ſo bad, as though they doe deſerve, they will not beare. Twas Bibulus-his caſe. The admiration of men had carried him up to heaven, no lower place would ſerve him. Yet when it came to a wiſemans cenſure, he profeſſed, profeſſed, he knew no ground for that admiration, and leſſe worth in him for ſuch a height. But when men have payd all their rights of nature to death, and are gone into their ſilence; then where admiration ceaſeth, cenſure begins. Now if the cenſure bee heavy (as it is too oft upon the beſt) yet then it ſhould be ſparing for, humanities ſake. For that humanitie, which forbids the rifling of a grave; bidds forbeare him that is ſhut up in it, and cannot anſwere. But if the cenſure be good, you may be bold with the grave: And you cannot prayſe any ſo ſafely as the dead; for you cannot humor them into danger, nor melt away your ſelfe into flattery.

Pater. Lib. 2.

The Perſon therefore, whoſe workes theſe are, was from his youth, a man of extraordinary worth and note. A man, as if he had beene made up of Learning and Vertue. Both of them ſo eminent in him, as 'tis hard to judge, which had precedency and greater intereſt. His Vertue (which we muſt ſtill judge the more worthy in any man) was comparable to that which was wont to be found in the Primitive Biſhops of the Church. And had Hee lived among thoſe ancient Fathers, his Vertue would have ſhined, even amongſt thoſe vertuous men. And for his Learning, that was as well, if not better knowne abroad, than reſpected at home. And take him in his Latitude, we which knew him well, knew not any kinde of Learning to which he was a ſtranger; but in his profeſsion admirable. None ſtronger than he, where he wreſtled with an Adverſary. And that Bellarmine felt, who was as well able to ſhift for himſelfe, as any that ſtood for the Roman party. None more exact, more judicious than he, where he was to inſtruct and informe others. And that, as they knew, which often heard him preach, ſo they may learne, which will reade this which he hath left behinde him. And yet this fulneſſe of his Materiall Learning, left roome enough in the temper of his braine, for almoſt all Languages, learned and moderne, to ſeat themſelves. So that his Learning had all the helpes Language could affoord; and his Languages learning enough for the beſt of them to expreſſe. His Iudgement, in the meane time, ſo commanding over both, as that neither of them was ſuffered idly, or curiouſly to ſtart from, or fall ſhort of, their intended ſcope. So that we may better ſay of him, than 'twas ſometimes ſaid of Claudius Druſus; He was of as many, and as great vertues, as mortall nature could receive, or induſtrie make perfect. Patere. Hiſt. lib. 2.

And ſince we are both taught, and ſee it by experience, that wiſe men alſo dye, and periſh together as well as the ignorant and fooliſh, and though they leave their riches, yet cannot diſpoſe their wiſedome to others: 'tis fit we ſhould be converſant in the writings of wiſe and religious men, that we may in part learne that in their workes, which the dying Authors had not power to bequeath unto us. Pſal. 49. 10.

Theſe workes then comming from ſo Grave, Learned, and Religious an Author, have but two things to doe in their publiſhing to the world.

The one is, to teach the world, what a treaſure they have of them. And the other, to tell this Church, what a Iewell ſhe loſt, when ſhe loſt their Author. The worke is a Body of Sermons. To them he had been moſt bred, and in them he moſt excelled. And he was not a greater Preacher in his age, than he was both great and frequent, in his younger and ſtronger time. As for the body of the worke it ſelfe, were it not that we like not to diſparage any mans endevours by comparing, we would ſay, the Chriſtian world hath not many ſuch Bodies of Sermons, as we here preſent, under Your Majeſties favour, to the view, and uſe of this Church. And if another Nation had them, they would as highly value them.

And here we humbly beg leave to tell Your Majeſtie, that theſe Sermons are in this, like their Author, mixed, of Religion and wiſedome. It is an excellent thing for a man to ſpeake wiſely, and eloquently, both at once: but where theſe perfections meet not, there ſaith S. Auguſtine, Dicat ſapienter, quod non poteſt eloquenter. Let the Preacher (of all men) ſpeak that wiſely, which he cannot utter eloquently. And if S. Auguſtine in his time found that fit, out of all doubt 'tis neceſſarie now, that men of our profeſsion, ſet themſelves to preach with more wiſdome, than eloquence. With Chriſtian and religious Wiſedome; which alone knows how to preſerve truth and peace together. For as all other Churches in the world, are moſt happy when theſe meete; ſo is this too. But too many among the people, chooſe rather to have their humor fed, than their ſoules edified. And carry partiall eares even to the houſe of that God, who is no accepter of perſons. To ſettle therefore the peace of the one, and to abate the humor of the other, nothing certainly under God, would be of greater efficacie, than Conciones ſapientes, wiſe, and diſcreete Sermons, which yet may be as zealous and devout as any other. For he that is zealous according to knowledge, is not leſſe zealous for his knowledge ſake. And true wiſedome, which is not true if it be not Chriſtian, carries no water about it to quench zeale, but only to ſprinkle it, that it may burn within compaſſe, and not fire that houſe which it intended but to warme.

Act. 10. 34.

Wee have neither purpoſe nor Commiſsion to ſtep aſide here, and complaine of the Times. All times have ſomewhat amiſſe in them, elſe Preachers ſhould have the leſſe worke. And if theſe times have more than many others, which our Forefathers have ſeen, we muſt needs be ſorry there is ſo much worke for Preachers: and more, if they which live by the Goſpell of peace, ſhould make any. For after the building up of the Faith of Chriſt, their chiefe worke ſhould be, to beate down thoſe ſtrong Holds, which any ſins have built up in the hearts of men, to pollute or defame Chriſtianitie. And true Preachers indeed are, as S. Ierome ſpeakes, Maxillæ Eccleſiæ, the Iawbones of the Church, which by preaching, beate downe the carnall life of man. Now all hatred, contention, variance, all ſedition and diſobedience to Lawfull Authoritie is (as 'tis reckoned by the Apoſtle among the works of the fleſh. And therfore ſince all Preachers

In Thren. 1.

Gal. 5. 19.

are the Iawes of the Church, and the ſinnes of the people are, as it were, to be grownd inter Maxillas, betweene theſe Iawes, before the People themſelves can be made fit to nouriſh the Church, or the Church them: How can this be done, (eſpecially done as it ought) if the Iawes be weak or fallen, and cannot doe their office?

But our hope is that God will ſo bleſſe Your Majeſtie in your government; Your people in their loyaltie, the Preachers in their wiſedome added to zeale and diligence, that the hearts and hands of all ſorts of men, ſhall be joyn'd together to preſerve Gods worſhip in truth, Your Maieſties throne in honour, the Church in religious devotion, and all Your People in obedience and union; the onely meanes to make both your Majeſtie, and your People happy in this life, and bleſſed in that which is to come. And we humbly deſire men of all ſorts to thinke ſeriouſly of this; that if the Publike ſuffer either in Church or State, no mans private pleaſure, or profit can ſtand firme unto him. No mans. And Cicero had reaſon enough to laugh at the folly of thoſe men, Qui amiſſâ Repub. Piſcinas ſuas fore ſalvas ſperare videntur, which in his time ſeemed to conceive ſuch a windy hope, that their fiſh-ponds and places of pleaſure, ſhould be ſafe, when the Common-wealth was loſt. Lib. 1. Ep. 15. ad At.

Theſe Sermons, when they were preached, gave great contentment to the religious, and judicious eares of Your Royall Father, of ever bleſſed memorie, the moſt able Prince that ever this Kingdome had, to judge of Church-worke. And therefore we hope that the printing of them ſhall be as acceptable to Your Majeſtie, as the preaching of them was both to your ſelfe and him. We conceive, if your liking had not continued to them, Your Majeſtie would not have commanded us the printing of them. And we aſſure our ſelves, ſince the Lines are the ſame, the Preſſe which hath made them legible, hath made no blot upon your gratious favours. We have been only Servants, as we are many waies bound to be, to Your Majeſties command, in making them ready for the Preſſe, but Authors of nothing in them. And we heartily pray that the publiſhing of them, may be Honour to Your Majeſtie; Good to the Church; and meanes of Comfort and ſalvation, to them which read them. And in theſe, and all other prayers for your Majeſties long life, and happy Governement, we humbly beſeech You to conceive of us, as we are, and ſhall ever be

and humbly devoted

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE THE KINGS MAIESTIE, AT VVHITE-HALL,

On Tueſday, the XXV. of December, A. D. MDCV.
being CHRISTMAS Day.

HEBR. Chap. II. Ver. XVI.

For, He in no wiſe tooke the Angels: But, the Seed of ABRAHAM He tooke.

AND, even becauſe, this day, He tooke not the Angels Nature upon Him, but tooke our Nature, in the ſeed of Abraham: therefore hold we this Day, as a high Feaſt: therefore meet we thus, every yeare, in a holy Aſſembly; even, for a ſolemne memoriall, that He hath, as this day, beſtowed upon us a dignitie, which upon the Angels, Hee beſtowed not. That Hee (as in the Chapter before, the Apoſtle ſetteth him forth) that is the brightneſſe of His Fathers glory, the very Character of his ſubſtance, the Heire of all things, by whom Hee made the World: Hee, when both needed it, (His taking upon Him their Nature:) and both ſtood before Him, Men and Angels: the Angels Hee tooke not, but Men Hee tooke; was made Man, was not made an Angell: that is, did more for them, than Hee did for the Angels of Heaven. Hebr. 1. 3.

Elſe-where the Apoſtle doth deliver this very point poſitively; (and that) not without ſome vehemencie: Without all queſtion, Great is the myſterie of Godlineſſe, God is manifeſted in the fleſh. 1 Tim. 3. 16. Which is in effect, the ſame, that is here ſaid; but that, here it is delivered by way of compariſon. For, this ſpeech is evidently a compariſon. If he had thus ſet it downe: Our Nature He

tooke; that had beene positive. But, setting it downe thus; Ours He tooke, the Angels He tooke not, it is (certainly) comparative.

1. Now, the Masters of speech tell us, that there is power in the Positive, if it be given forth, with an earnest asseveration. But nothing to that, that is in the Comparative. It is nothing so full, to say; I will never forget you: as, thus to say it; Can a mother forget the childe of her owne wombe? well, if shee can, yet will not I forget you. Nothing so forcible, to say thus; I will hold my word with you: as thus, Heaven and earth shall passe, but my word shall not passe. The Comparative expressing is (without all question) more significant: And this here is such. Theirs, the Angels, nusquam, at no hand He tooke: but, ours he did.

Luke 19.17.

2. Now, the comparison is, as is the thing in nature, whereunto it is made: If the thing be ordinary, the comparison is according: But, then is it full of force, when it is, with no meane or base thing, but with the chiefe, and choice of all the Creatures; as, here, it is: even with the Angels themselves. For then, it is at the highest. 1. That of Elihu, in Iob: That GOD teacheth us more than the beasts, and giveth us more understanding than the fowles of the ayre; (that is) that GOD hath beene more gratious to us, than to them, being made of the same mould that we are; that (yet) He hath given us a privilege, above them; this, is much: 2. That of the Psalmist: He hath not dealt so with every nation; nay, not with any other nation, in giving us the knowledge of his heavenly truth and Lawes; Even, that we have a prerogative, if we bee compared with the rest of mankinde: (More than the beasts, much: more than all men besides, much more:) 3. But this here, Nusquam Angelos, &c. that he hath given us a preheminence above the Angels themselves; granted us that, that he hath not granted the Angels; that, is a Comparison at the very highest, and further we cannot goe.

3. One degree yet more: And that is this. As, in comparisons making, it skilleth much, the excellencie of the thing, wherewithall it is compared; so doth it too, the manner, how the comparison is made, the pitch that is taken in it. It is one thing, to make it in tanto; another, in toto. One thing, when it is in degrees; (that more, this lesse: this not so much as that, yet that, somewhat though:) Another, when one is, the other is not at all. So is it here: Assumpsit; non assumpsit: Vs He did take; The Angels, ἀδήπου, not in any wise; not, in a lesse, or a lower degree than us: but them, not at all. So, it is with the highest, and at the highest. So much is said here; and more cannot be said.

The only exception that may be made to these comparisons, is; that, (most-what,) they be odious: it breedeth a kinde of disdaine in the higher, to be matched with the lower; Especially, to be over-matched with him. We need not feare it, here. The blessed spirits, (the Angels) will take no offence at it; they will not remove Iacobs ladder for all this; or descend to us, or ascend for us, ever a whit the slower, because He is become the Sonne of man. There is not, in them, that envious minde, that was in the elder brother, in the Gospell, when the younger was received to grace after his riotous course.

Luke 15.28.

When the Apostle tells us of the great mysterie, that God was manifested in the flesh; immediately after, He tels, that He was seene of the Angels: And (lest we might think, they saw it, as we doe many things here, which we would not see) Saint Peter tells us, that desiderant prospicere; that, with desire, and delight, they saw it; and cannot be satisfied with the sight of it, it pleaseth them so well. And, even this day, the day that it was done, an Angell was the first, that came to bring newes of it, to the shepherds; and he no sooner had delivered his message, but presently there was with him a whole Quier of Angels, singing and joying, and making melodie, for this εὐλογία ἐν ἀνθρώποις, this Good-will of GOD towards men. So that, without dread of any disdaine or exception, on the Angels parts, we may proceed in our Text.

The Division

Wherein, first of the parties compared: Angels, and Men.

I. 2 Then, 1 of that, wherein they are compared, (assumption, or apprehension;) in the word Taking: 2 And, not every taking, but apprehensio seminis, taking on Him the seed.

2

III. 3. Lastly, of this terme [Abrahams seed:] the choice of that word, or terme, to expresse mankinde by, thus taken on by Him. That Hee saith not: But men Hee tooke: or, But, the seed of Adam; or, the seed of the woman Hee tooke: But, the seed of Abraham He tooke.

1. Of

1 OF the parties compared; Angels and Men. Theſe two we muſt firſt compare, that we may the more clearely ſee the greatneſſe of the grace and benefit, this day, vouchſafed us. No long proceſſe will need, to lay before you, how farre inferiour our Nature is, to that of the Angels: It is a compariſon without compariſon. It is too apparant, if we be laid together, or weighed together, we ſhall be found minus habentes, farre too light. They are, in expreſſe termes, ſaid, (both, in the Old, and in the New Teſtament) to excell us in power: And as in power, ſo in all the reſt. This one thing may ſuffice, to ſhew the oddes: That our Nature; that we, when we are at our very higheſt perfection, (it is even thus expreſſed, that) we come neare, or are therein like to, or as an Angell. Perfect beautie, in Saint Stephen: They ſaw his face, as the face of an Angell. Perfect wiſdome, in David: My LORD the King is wiſe, as an Angell of GOD. Perfect eloquence in Saint Paul: Though I ſpake with the tongues of men, nay of Angels. All our excellencie, our higheſt and moſt perfect eſtate, is but to be, as they: therefore, they above us farre.

I. The Parties compared. Men, with Angels.

Pſal.103.20. 2 Pet.2.11. Act.6.15. 2 Sam.14.20. 1 Cor.13.1.

But, to come nearer: What are Angels? Surely, they are ſpirits; Glorious ſpirits; Heavenly ſpirits; Immortall ſpirits. For their Nature or ſubſtance, Spirits: For their Qualitie, or propertie, Glorious: For their Place, or abode, Heavenly: For their Durance, or continuance, Immortall.

Hebr.1.14. Hebr.9.5. Matth.24.36. Luke 20.36.

And, what is the ſeed of Abraham, but, as Abraham himſelfe is? And, what is Abraham? Let him anſwer himſelfe; I am duſt and aſhes. What is the ſeed of Abraham? Let one anſwer, in the perſons of all the reſt; Dicens putredini, &c. ſaying to rottenneſſe, thou art my mother, and to the wormes, yee are my brethren. 1. They are ſpirits; Now, what are we, what is the ſeed of Abraham? Fleſh. And what is the very harveſt of this ſeed of fleſh? what, but corruption, and rottenneſſe, and wormes: There is the ſubſtance of our bodies.

Gen.18.27. Iob 17.14. Gal.6.8.

2 They, glorious ſpirits: We, vile bodies (beare with it, it is the Holy Ghoſts owne terme; Who ſhall change our vile bodies.) And not only baſe and vile, but filthy and uncleane: ex immundo conceptum ſemine, conceived of uncleane ſeed: There is the metall. And, the mould is no better: the wombe, wherein we were conceived vile, baſe, filthy, and uncleane. There, is our qualitie.

Phil.3.21. Iob 14.4. Pſal.51.6.

3 They, heavenly Spirits, Angels of heaven: that is, their place of abode is in heaven above. Ours is here below, in the duſt; inter pulices, & culices, tineas, araneas, & vermes; Our place is here among fleas and flies, moths and ſpiders, and crawling wormes. There is our place of dwelling.

4 They, immortall ſpirits; that is their durance. Our time is proclaimed in the Prophet: Fleſh, All fleſh is graſſe, and the glory of it, as the floure of the field; (From April to Iune.) The Sithe commeth; nay, the wind but bloweth, and, we are gone. Withering ſooner than the graſſe, which is ſhort: Nay, fading ſooner, than the floure of the graſſe, which is much ſhorter: Nay, (ſaith Iob) rubbed in peeces more eaſily, than any moth.

Eſay 40.6. Iob 4.19.

This we are, to them, if you lay us together. And, if you weigh us upon the ballance, wee are altogether lighter than vanity it ſelfe: There is our weight. And, if you value us; Man is but a thing of nought: There is our worth. Hoc eſt omnis homo; This is Abraham, and this is Abrahams ſeed: And who would ſtand to compare theſe with Angels? Verily, there is no compariſon; They are, incomparably, farre better than the beſt of us.

Men, by themſelves. Pſal.62.11. Pſal.144.14.

Now then: this is the rule of reaſon, the guide of all choice, Evermore to take the better and leave the worſe. Thus would man doe; Hæc eſt lex hominis. Here then commeth the matter of admiration: Notwithſtanding theſe things ſtand thus, betweene the Angels and Abrahams ſeed: (They, Spirits, glorious, heavenly, immortall;) yet tooke He not them; yet, in no wiſe, tooke He them; But the ſeed of Abraham. The ſeed of Abraham, with their bodies, vile bodies, earthly bodies of clay, bodies of mortalitie, corruption, and death: Theſe Hee tooke, theſe Hee tooke for all that. Angels, and not men; So, in reaſon, it ſhould be: Men, and not Angels; So it is: And, that granted to us, that denied to them. Granted to us, ſo baſe; that denied them, ſo glorious. Denied, and ſtrongly denied; Οὐ, οὐδαμῶς; Not, not in any wiſe, not at any hand, to them. They, every way, in every thing elſe, above, and before us; in this, beneath and behinde us. And we (unworthy, wretched men that we are,) above and before the Angels, the Cherubim, the Seraphim, and all the Principalities, and Thrones, in this dignitie. This being beyond the rules and reach of all reaſon, is ſurely matter of aſtoniſhment: Τοῦτο, &c. (ſaith Saint Chryſoſtome,) this, it caſteth me into an extaſie, and maketh me to imagine, of our Nature, ſome great matter, I cannot well expreſſe what. Thus it is: It is the Lord, let Him doe what ſeemeth good in His owne eyes.

1 Sam. 3. 18.

II. Wherein they are compared.

And, with this, I paſſe over to the ſecond point. This little is enough, to ſhew what oddes betweene the Parties here matched. It will much better appeare (this) when we ſhall weigh the word ἐπιλαμβάνεται, that, wherein they are matched. Wherein, two degrees we obſerved: 1. Apprehendit, and 2. Apprehendit Semen.

I. In apprehendit, he took.

1. Of Apprehendit, firſt. Many words were more obvious, and offered themſelves to the Apoſtle (no doubt,) Suſcipit, or Aſſumpſit, or other ſuch like: This word was ſought for (certainly,) and made choice of (ſaith the Greeke Scholiaſt: And he can beſt tell us, It is no common word, And tell us alſo what it weigheth:) Δηλοῖ ὃ (ſaith he) ὅτι ἡμεῖς ἐφεύγομεν, ὅδε ἐδίωκε, καὶ διώκων ἐφθασε, καὶ φθάσας ἐπιλάβετο: This word ſuppoſeth a flight of the one partie, and a purſuit of the other: A purſuit, eager, and ſo long, till he overtake; and when he hath overtaken, ἐπιλαμβανόμενος, apprehendens, laying faſt hold, and ſeazing ſurely on him. So two things it ſuppoſeth; 1 a flight of the one, and 2 a hot purſuit of the other.

It may well ſuppoſe a flight. For, of the * Angels there were that fled, that kept not their originall, but forſooke and fell away from their firſt eſtate. And Man fell, and fled too; and hid himſelfe in the thicke trees, from the preſence of God. And this is the firſt iſſue. Vpon the Angels flight, He ſtirred not; ſate ſtill; never vouchſafed to follow them: Let them goe whither they would; as if they had not beene worth the while. Nay, Hee never aſſumed ought, by way of promiſe, for them: No promiſe in the Old, to be borne and to ſuffer; No Goſpell, in the New Teſtament, neither was borne nor ſuffered, for them.

Gen. 3. 8.

But, when Man fell, He did all. Made after him preſently, with Vbi es: ſought to reclaime him, What have you done? Why have you done ſo? Proteſted ennitie to him, that had drawne him thus away: Made his aſſumpſit of the Womans ſeed.

Gen. 3. 9.

And (which is more,) when that would not ſerve, ſent after him ſtill, by the hand of His Prophets, to ſollicit his returne.

And (which is yet more,) when that would not ſerve neither; went after him (Himſelfe) in perſon: left his ninety and nine in the fold, and got Him after the loſt ſheepe: Never left, till He found him, laid him on His owne ſhoulders, and brought him whom againe.

Luke 15. 5.

It was much, even but to looke after us; to reſpect us, ſo farre, who were not worth the caſt of His eye: Much, to call us backe, or vouchſafe us an Vbi es.

But more, when wee came not for all that, to ſend after us. For, if Hee had but onely beene content to give us leave, to come to Him againe; but given us leave to lay hold on Him, to touch but the hemme of His garment; (Himſelfe ſitting ſtill, and never calling to us, nor ſending after us;) it had beene favour enough: farre above that we were worth. But not only to ſend by others, but to come Himſelfe after us; to ſay, Corpus apta mihi, Ecce venio; Get Me a body, I will My ſelfe after him: this, was exceeding much. That we fled, and He followed us flying.

But yet, this is not all; This is but to follow. He not only followed, but did it ſo, with ſuch eagerneſſe, with ſuch earneſtneſſe, as, that is worthy a ſecond conſideration. To follow, is ſomewhat; yet that may be done faintly, and afarre off: but to follow thorow thicke and thin; to follow hard, and not to give over; never to give over, till he overtake: that is it.

And, He gave not over His purſuit, though it were long and laborious, and He full weary; though it caſt Him into a ſweat, a ſweat of bloud. Angelis ſuis non pepercit (ſaith Saint Peter,) The Angels offending, He ſpared not them: Man offending, He ſpared him, and to ſpare him (ſaith Saint Paul) He ſpared not His owne Sonne: Nor His owne Sonne ſpared not Himſelfe; but followed His purſuit, through danger, diſtreſſe, yea, through death it ſelfe. Followed, and ſo followed, as nothing made Him leave following, till He overtooke.

And when He had overtaken (for thoſe two are but preſuppoſed, the more kindly to bring in the word ἐπελάβετο:) When (I ſay) he had overtaken them, commeth in fitly and properly, ἐπιλαμβάνεται. Which is not every taking; not ſuſcipere, or aſſumere; But, manum injicere, arripere, apprehendere; to ſeaze upon it with great vehemencie, to lay hold on it with both hands, as upon a thing, wee are glad wee have got, and will be loth to let goe againe. Wee know, know, assumpsit, and apprehendit, both, take; but, apprehendit, with farre more fervour and zeale, than the other. Assumpsit, any common ordinary thing; apprehendit, a thing of price, which we hold deare, and much esteeme of.

Now, to the former comparison, of what they, and what we, (but specially, what we,) adde this three-fold consideration: 1. That He denied it the Angels, Οὐ: denied it peremptorily, Οὐδαμοῦ; Neither looked, nor called, nor sent, nor went after them: Neither tooke hold of them, nor suffered them to take hold of Him, or any promise from Him: Denied it them, and denied it them thus. 2. But, granted it us; and granted it, how? That He followed us first; and that, with paine: And seazed on us, after; and that with great desire: We flying, and not worth the following: and lying, and not worth the taking up. 1 That He gave not leave for us to come to Him: or, sate still, and suffered us to returne, and take hold: (yet, this He did.) 2 That He did not looke after us, nor call after us, nor send after us only: (yet, all this He did, too.) 3 But, Himselfe rose out of his place; and came after us; and with hand and foot, made after us: Followed us, with his feet; and seazed on us, with his hands; and that, per viam, non assumptionis, sed apprehensionis, (the manner, more than the thing it selfe.) All these, if we lay together, and, when we have done, weigh them well, it is able to worke with us. Surely, it must needs demonstrate to us, the care, the love, the affection, He had to us, we know no cause why; being but (as Abraham was) dust, and, (as Abrahams seed (Iacob) saith) lesse; and not worthy of any one of these: No, not of the meanest of his mercies. Especially, when the same thing so graciously granted us, was denied to no lesse persons, than the Angels, far more worthy than we. Sure, He would not have done it for us, and not for them; if Hee had not esteemed of us, made more account of us, than of them. Gen.18.25. 32.10.

And yet, behold a farre greater than all these: Which is, apprehendit semen. He tooke not the person, but He tooke the seed, (that is) the Nature of man. Many there be, that can be content to take upon them the persons, and to represent them, whose natures, nothing could hire them once to take upon them. But, the seed is the Nature; yea, (as the Philosopher saith) naturæ intimum, the very internall essence of nature is the seed. The Apostle sheweth, what his meaning is, of this taking the seed, when (the verse next afore, save one) he saith, that Forasmuch as the children were partakers of flesh and bloud, He also would take part with them, by taking the same. To take the flesh and bloud, He must-needs take the seed: for, from the seed, the flesh and bloud doth proceed: which is nothing else but the blessed apprehension of our Nature, by this dayes Nativitie. Whereby, He, and we, become not only one flesh, (as man and wife doe, by conjugall union:) but, even one bloud too, (as brethren, by naturall union:) Per omnia similis (saith the Apostle, in the next verse after againe) sinne only set aside: Alike and suitable to us in all things: flesh, and bloud, and nature and all. So taking the seed of Abraham, as that He became (Himselfe) the seed of Abraham: So was, and so is truely termed, in the Scriptures. Which is it, that doth consummate, and knit up all this point, and is the head of all. For, in all other apprehensions, we may let goe, and lay downe, when we will; but, this, this taking on the seed, the nature of man, can never be put off. It is an assumption, without a deposition. One we are, He and we, and so we must be; One, as this day, so for ever. Verse.14. Ephes.5.28,29. Verse.17.

And, emergent, or issuing from this, are all those other apprehendings, or seasures of the persons of men, (by which, GOD layeth hold on them, and bringeth them backe from errour to truth, and from sinne to grace,) that have beene, from the beginning, or shall be to the end of the world. That, of Abraham himselfe, whom GOD laid hold of, and brought from out of Vr of the Chaldeans, and the Idols, he there worshipped. That, of our Apostle Saint Paul, that was apprehended in the way to Damascus. That, of Saint Peter; that in the very act of sinne, was seazed on with bitter remorse for it. All those: and all these, whereby men daily are laid hold of in spirit, and taken from the by-paths of sinne, and errour, and reduced into the right way; and so their persons recovered to GOD, and seazed to His use. All these apprehensions, (of the branches,) come from this apprehension (of the Seed:) they all have their beginning and their being, from this dayes taking, even Semen apprehendit. Our receiving His Spirit, for His taking our flesh. This seed, wherewith Abraham is made the son of GOD, from the seed, wherewith CHRIST is made the sonne of Abraham. Gen.15.7. Act.9.4. Luke 12.62, 63.

And, the end, why He thus tooke upon Him the seed of Abraham, was, because He tooke upon Him, to deliver the seed of Abraham. Deliver them Hee could not, except Hee

Verſe 14. deſtroyed death, and the Lord of death, the Devill. Them, He could not deſtroy, unleſſe Hee died: Die Hee could not, except Hee were mortall: Mortall Hee could not be, except Hee tooke our Nature on Him, that is, the ſeed of ABRAHAM. But, taking it, Hee became mortall, died, deſtroyed Death, delivered us; was (Himſelfe) apprehended, that wee might be let goe.

One thing more then, out of this word Apprehendit. The former toucheth His love, whereby He ſo laid hold of us, as of a thing very precious to Him: This (now) toucheth our danger; whereby, He ſo caught us, as, if He had not, it had beene a great venture, but wee had ſunke and periſhed. One, and the ſame word, [Apprehendit] ſorteth well, to expreſſe both his affection, whereby He did it; and our great perill, whereby we needed it. We had beene (before) laid hold of, and apprehended, by one, mentioned in the 14. verſe, he that hath power of death, even the Devill: We were in danger, to be ſwallowed up by him; we needed one, to lay hold on us faſt, and to plucke us out of his jawes. So He did. And I would have you to marke: It is the ſame word, that is uſed, to Saint Peter, in like danger, (Matth. 14. 13.) when, being readie to ſinke, ἐπελάβετο, CHRIST caught him by the hand, and ſaved him. The ſame here, in the Greeke; that, in the Hebrew, is uſed (Gen. 19. 16.) to Lot and his daughters, in the like danger; when, the Angels caught him, and by ſtrong hand plucked him out of Sodom. One delivered, from the water; the other, from the fire.

1 Cor. 1. 20. And it may truly be ſaid, (inaſmuch as, all GODS promiſes, as well touching temporall, as, eternall deliverances; and as well corporall, as ſpirituall; be in CHRIST yea and Amen: Yea, in the giving forth; Amen, in the performing) that even our temporall delivery, from the dangers, that daily compaſſe us about; even from this laſt, ſo great, and ſo fearfull, as the like was never imagined before; all have their ground, from this Great apprehenſion: are fruits of this Seed, here, this bleſſed Seed, for whoſe ſake, and for whoſe truths ſake, that we (though unworthily) profeſſe, we were by Him caught hold of, and ſo plucked out of it:
Rom. 9. 29. And but for which Seed, facti eſſemus ſicut Sodoma, We had beene even as Sodome, and periſhed in the fire; and the powder there laid had even blowen us up all.

Hebr. 8. 9. And may not I adde to this [apprehendit, ut liberaret,] the other (in the eighth Chapter following) apprehendit, ut manu duceret: to this [of taking us by the hand, to deliver us,] that, [of taking us by the hand, to guide us:] and ſo, out of one word, preſent Him to you, not onely, as our Deliverer, but as our Guide, too? Our Deliverer, to rid us from him, that hath power of death; Our Guide, to Him, that hath power of life. To lead us, even by the way of truth, to the path of life; by the ſtations of well doing, to the manſions in His Fathers houſe. Seeing, Hee hath ſignified, it is His pleaſure not to let goe our hands, but
Ioh. 14. 2. Ioh. 14. 3. to hold us ſtill, till He have brought us, that, where He is, we may alſo be. This alſo is incident to apprehendit; but, becauſe it is out of the compaſſe of the Text, I touch it onely, and paſſe it.

The reaſons of this Apprehendit. * Luke 1. 43. And, can we now paſſe by this, but we muſt aske the queſtion, that Saint Iohn Baptiſts Mother ſometime asked, on the like occaſion? * Vnde mihi hoc? (ſaith ſhee:) Vnde nobis hoc? (may we ſay:) Not, quòd mater Domini; but, quòd Dominus ipſe venit ad nos; Whence commeth this unto us, that the Lord himſelfe, thus came unto us, and tooke us, letting the Angels goe? Angels are better than the beſt of us; and, reaſon would, ever, the better ſhould be taken: how then were we taken, that were not the better?

Sure, not without good ground, (ſay the Fathers,) who have adventured to ſearch out the Theologie of this point: ſuch reaſons, as might ſerve for inducements, to Him, that is, pronus ad miſerendum, naturally enclined to pitie; why, upon us, He would rather have compaſſion. And, divers ſuch I finde: I will touch only one or two of them.

1 Firſt, Mans caſe was more to be pitied, than theirs, becauſe man was tempted, by another; had a tempter. The Angels had none, None, tempted them; None, but themſelves. Et levius eſt alienâ mente peccâſſe, quam propriâ (ſaith Auguſtine.) The offence is the leſſe, if it grow from another, than if it breed in our ſelves: And, the leſſe the offence, the more pardonable.

2 Againe, of the Angels, when ſome fell, otherſome ſtood; and ſo, they (all) did not periſh. But, in the firſt man, all men fell; and ſo, every mothers childe had died, and no fleſh beene ſaved; For, all were in Adam; and ſo, in, and with Adam, all had come to nought. Then commeth meth the Pſalmiſts queſtion; Nunquid in vanum, &c? What haſt thou made all men for nought? That cannot be: So great wiſdome cannot doe ſo great a worke, in vaine. But in vaine it had been, if God had not ſhewed mercie; And, therefore was Mans caſe rather, of the twaine, matter of commiſeration. (This is Leo.) Pſal. 87. 47.

And thus have they travelled, and theſe have they found, why He did apprehend us, rather than them. It may be, not amiſſe. But, we will content our ſelves, for our unde nobis hoc? whence commeth this to us, with the anſwer of the Scriptures: Whence, but from the tender mercies of our God, whereby this day hath viſited us? Zelus Domini (ſaith Eſay,) The zeale of the Lord of Hoſts ſhall bring it to paſſe: Propter nimiam charitatem (ſaith the Apoſtle:) Sic Deus dilexit (ſaith He, He Himſelfe;) And we (taught by Him) ſay, Even ſo Lord, for, ſo it was thy good pleaſure, thus to doe. Luk. 1. 78. Eſa. 9 7. Eph. 2. 4. Ioh. 3. 16. Luk. 10. 21

III.

All this while are we about taking the Seed: the Seed in generall. But now, why Abrahams ſeed? Since it is Angels, in the firſt part, why not Men in the ſecond, but Seed? Or, if Seed, to expreſſe our nature; why not the Seed of the woman, but the Seed of Abraham? It may be thought, becauſe he wrote to the Hebrewes, he rather uſed this terme of Abrahams ſeed, becauſe, ſo they were, and ſo loved to be ſtiled, and he would pleaſe them. But, I find, the ancient Fathers goe further; and, out of it, raiſe matter, both of comfort, and of direction: and that, for us too. The choice. Why Abrahams Seed.

I

1. Of comfort, firſt; with reference to our Saviour, who taking on Him Abrahams ſeed, muſt withall take on Him the ſignature of Abrahams Seed, and be, as He was, circumciſed. There is a great matter dependeth even on that. For, being circumciſed, He became a debtor, to keepe the whole Law of God: which bond we had broken, and forfeited, and incurred the curſe annexed, and were ready to be apprehended, and committed for it. That ſo, He, keeping the Law, might recover backe the chirographum contra nos, the hand-writing that was againſt us; and ſo, ſet us free of the debt. This Bond did not relate, to the Seed of the woman; it pertained (properly) to the ſeed of Abraham: therefore, that terme fitted us better. Without faile, two diſtinct benefits they are: 1 Factus homo, and 2 Factus ſub lege; and, ſo doth Saint Paul recount them. Made man; that is, the Seed of the woman: and, made under the Law; that is the Seed of Abraham. To little purpoſe, He ſhould have taken the one, if He had not alſo undertaken the other, and, as the Seed of Abraham, entred bond for us, and taken our debt upon Him. This firſt. For our comfort. Gal. 5. 3. Col. 2 14. Gal. 4. 4.

2. And, beſides this, there is yet another; referring it to the Nation, or People, whom He took upon him. It is ſure, they were, of all other people, the moſt untoward; both, of the hardeſt hearts, and of the ſtiffeſt neckes; and (as the Heathen man noteth them) of the worſt natures. God Himſelfe telleth them ſo; It was, for no vertue of theirs, or for any pure naturalls in them, that He tooke them to Him, for they were, that way, the worſt of the whole earth. And ſo then, the taking of Abrahams ſeed amounteth to as much, as that of S. Paul, (no leſſe true, than worthie of all men to be received,) that He came into the world, to ſave ſinners; and that, chiefe ſinners, as (it is certaine) they were; even the Seed of Abraham, of all the Seed of Adam. Deut 9. 6. 1 Tim. 1. 15.

But, not for comfort onely, but for direction two, doth He uſe Abrahams name here. Even, to entaile the benefit comming by it, to his Seed; that is, to ſuch as he was. For, for his ſake, were all nations bleſſed. And Chriſt, though He tooke the ſeed of the woman, yet doth not benefit any, but the ſeed of Abraham; even thoſe, that follow the ſtepps of his faith. For, by faith, Abraham tooke hold of Him, by whom, he was in mercie taken hold of: Et tu mitte fidem & tenuiſti (ſaith Saint Auguſtine.) That faith of his, to Him, was accounted for righteouſneſſe. To him was, and to us ſhall be (ſaith the Apoſtle,) if we be in like ſort apprehenſive of Him. Either, as Abraham; or, as the true Seed of Abraham (Iacob) was, that tooke ſuch hold on Him, as he ſaid plainely, Non dimittam te, niſi benedixeris mihi; without a bleſſing, he would not let Him goe. Surely, not the Hebrewes alone; nay, not the Hebrewes, at all, for all their carnall propagation: They onely are Abrahams ſeed, that lay hold of the word of promiſe. And, the Galatians ſo doing, though they were meere heathen men, (as we be,) yet he telleth them, they are Abrahams ſeed, and ſhall be bleſſed together with him. For our Direction. Gen. 22. 18. Gen. 15. 7. Rom. 4. 3. Gen 32. 26. Rom. 9 7. Gal. 3. 6.

But, that is not all; there goeth more to the making us Abrahams ſeed, (as Chriſt Himſelfe, the true ſeed, teacheth both them and us.) Saith He; if ye be Abrahams ſonnes, then muſt you doe the workes of Abraham. Which, the Apoſtle well calleth, the ſtepps, or impreſſions of Abrahams faith; Or, we may call them, the fruits of this ſeed, here. So reaſoneth our Savi-Iohn 8.39. Rom 4.12. our: Hoc non fecit Abraham; This did not He; if ye doe it, yee are not His ſeed: This did Iam.2 22. Gal.5.6. He; doe ye the like, and His ſeed ye are. So, here is a double apprehenſion: [1] one of S. Paul;

1. Tim.6.10. [2] the other of S. Iames; Worke, for both hands to apprehend. Both, [1] Charitas, quæ ex fide; and [2] fides quæ per charitatem operatur. By which we ſhall be able (ſaith Saint Paul) to lay hold of eternall life; and ſo, be Abrahams ſeed here at the firſt; and come to Abrahams boſome there, at the laſt. So have we a briefe of Semen Abrahæ.

The Vſe of the Text. Now, what is to be commended to us out of this Text, for us to lay hold of? Verily,
1 For Meditation. firſt, to take us to our meditation; the meditation, which the * Pſalmiſt hath, and which the
* Pſal.8.4. Apoſtle, (in this Chapter,) voucheth out of him (at the ſixth Verſe;) When I conſider (ſaith he) the Heavens, (ſay we, the Angels of Heaven,) and ſee thoſe Glorious Spirits paſſed by, and man taken, even to ſigh with him, and ſay, Lord what is man, (either Adam, or Abraham,) that thou ſhouldeſt be thus mindfull of him, or the ſeed, or ſonnes of either, that thou ſhouldeſt make this doe about Him! The caſe is here farre other wiſe, farre more worth our conſideration. There, Thou haſt made Him a little lower: Here, Thou haſt made Him a great deale higher, than the Angels. For they, this day firſt, and ever ſince, daily have, and doe adore our Nature, in the perſonall Vnion with the Deitie. Looke you (ſaith the Apoſtle;) when He brought His onely begotten Sonne into the world, this He proclaimed before Him, Let Heb.1.6. all the Angels worſhip Him: and ſo they did. And upon this verie daies taking the ſeed, 1 Chron.21. 16. hath enſued (as the Fathers note) a great alteration. Before, in the Old Teſtament, they ſuf-
Apoc.22.9. fered David to ſit upon his knees before them: Since, (in the New) they endure not, Saint Iohn ſhould fall downe to them, but acknowledge, the caſe is altered, now; and no more ſuperioritie, but all fellow ſervants. And, even in this one part, two things preſent themſelves unto us: [1] His humilitie, Qui non eſt confuſus (as, in the eleventh Verſe, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) who was not confounded, thus to take our Nature. [2] And withall, the Honor and happineſſe of Abrahams ſeed, ut digni haberentur, that were counted worthie to be taken, ſo neere Luk.21.35. unto him.

2 For Reſolution. The next point: That, after we have well conſidered it, we be affected with it; and that, no otherwiſe, than Abraham was. Abraham ſaw it, even this day, and but afarre off, and He Iohn.8.56. rejoyced at it: And ſo ſhall we, on it, if we be His true ſeed. It brought forth a Benedictus, and a Magnificat, from the true ſeed of Abraham; If it doe not the like, from us, certainely it but flotes in our braines; we but warble about it: But, we beleeve it not, and therefore, neither doe we rightly underſtand it. Sure I am, if the Angels had ſuch a feaſt to keepe, if he had done the like for them, they would hold it with all joy and jubilee. They rejoyce of our good; but, if they had one of their owne, they muſt needs doe it after another manner; farre more effectually. If we doe not, as they would doe, (were the caſe theirs,) it is, becauſe we are ſhort, in conceiving the excellencie of the benefit. It would have (ſurely) due obſervation, if it had his due and ſerious meditation.

Luk 12.48. Further, we are to underſtand this: That to whom much is given, of them will much be required; and (as Gregorie well ſaith) Cum creſcunt dona, creſcunt & rationes donorum, As the gifts grow, ſo grow the accompts too: Therefore, that by this new dignitie befallen us, Neceſſitas quædam nobis impoſita eſt (ſaith Saint Auguſtine,) there is a certaine neceſſitie layd upon us, to become, in ſome meaſure, ſuteable unto it; in that we are one; one fleſh, and one bloud, with the Sonne of God. Being thus in honor, we ought to underſtand our eſtate, and not Pſal.49.13 fall into the Pſalmiſts reproofe, that we become like the beaſts that periſh. For, if we do (indeed) thinke, our Nature is ennobled by this ſo high a conjunction, we ſhall henceforth hold our ſelves more deare, and at a higher rate, than to proſtitute our ſelves to ſinne, for every baſe, trifling, and tranſitory pleaſure. For tell me, men that are taken to this degree, ſhall any of them prove a Devill (as Chriſt ſaid of Iudas:) or ever (as theſe with us, of late) have to Iohn 6. 70. do with any deviliſh, or Iudaſly fact? Shall any man, after this aſſumption, be as horſe or mule, Pſal. 32 9. that have no underſtanding; and, in a Chriſtian profeſſion, live a brutiſh life? Nay then, Saint 1 Cor. 3. 3. Paul tells us further, that if we henceforth walke like men, (like but even carnall or naturall men,) it is a fault in us. Some-what muſt appeare, in us, more than in ordinarie men, who are vouchſafed ſo extraordinarie a favour. Some-what more, than common, would come from us, if it were but for this Daies ſake.

are

To conclude, not onely thus to frame meditations and reſolutions, but even ſome practice too, out of this act of apprehenſion. It is verie agreeable to reaſon, (ſaith the Apoſtle) that we endevour and make a proffer, if we may by any meanes, to apprehend Him, in His, by whom we are thus, in our Nature, apprehended, or (as He termeth it) comprehended, even Chriſt Ieſus; and be united to Him, this day, as He was to us, this day, by a mutuall and reciprocall apprehenſion. We may ſo, and we are bound ſo: verè dignum & juſtum eſt. And we doe ſo, ſo oft, as we doe (with Saint Iames) lay hold of, apprehend, or receive inſitum verbum, the word which is daily grafted into us. For, the Word He is, and, in the word, He is received by us. But, that is not the proper of this day, unleſſe there be another joyned vnto it. This day, Verbum caro factum eſt; and ſo muſt be apprehended, in both. But ſpecially, in His fleſh, as this day giveth it, as this day would have us. Now, the bread which we breake, is it not the partaking of the bodie, of the fleſh, of Ieſus Chriſt? It is ſurely; and by it, (and by nothing more,) are we made partakers of this bleſſed union. A little before, he ſaid; Becauſe the children were partakers of fleſh and bloud, He alſo would take part with them; May not we ſay the ſame? Becauſe He hath ſo done, taken ours of us we alſo enſuing his ſtepps, will participate with Him, and with His fleſh which he hath taken of us. It is moſt kindly, to take part with Him, in that, which He tooke part in, with us; and that to no other end, but that He might make the receiving of it by us a meanes, whereby He might dwell in us, and we in Him. He taking our fleſh, and we receiving His ſpirit; by His fleſh, which He tooke of us, receiving His ſpirit, which He imparteth to us; That, as He, by ours, became conſors humanæ naturæ; ſo we, by His, might become conſortes divinæ naturæ, partakers of the Divine nature. Verily, it is the moſt ſtreight and perfect taking hold that is. No union ſo knitteth, as it. Not conſanguinitie; Brethren fall out: Not marriage; Man and wife are ſevered. But, that which is nouriſhed, & the nouriſhment, wherewith, they never are, never can be ſeve red; but remaine one for ever. With this Act then of mutuall taking, taking of His fleſh, as He hath taken ours, let us ſeale our dutie to Him, this day, for taking not Angels, but the ſeed of ABRAHAM.

Almighty GOD
grant, &c.

A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED before the KINGS MAIESTIE, at White-Hall, on Wedneſday, the XXV. of December, A. D. MDCVI. being CHRISTMAS day.

ESA. Chap. IX. Ver. VI.

For, unto us a Child is borne, and unto us a Sonne is given; and the Government is upon His ſhoulder; and he ſhall call His Name WONDERFVLL, COVNSELLER, THE MIGHTY GOD, THE EVERLASTING FATHER, THE PRINCE OF PEACE.

THE words are out of Eſay: and, if we had not heard him named, might well have been thought, out of one of the Evangeliſts, as more like a ſtorie than a Prophecie. Is borne, is given, ſound, as if they had been written at, or ſince the Birth of Chriſt: yet were they written more than ſix hundred yeares before.

There is no one thing ſo great a ſtay to our faith, as that we find the things, we beleeve, ſo plainly fore-told, ſo many yeares before. Is borne, is given? Nay, ſhall be; ſpeake like a Prophet: Nay, is; loquens de futuro per modum præteriti; ſpeaking of things to come as if they were already paſt. This cannot be, but God, who calleth things that are not, as if they were, and challengeth any other, to doe the like. It is true; miracles move much: but yet, even in Scripture, we reade of lying miracles: and the poſſibility of falſe dealing leaveth place of doubt, even in thoſe that be true. But, for one, ſix hundred yeares before He is borne, to cauſe prophecies, plaine direct prophecies to be written of Him; that paſſeth all conceit; cannot be imagined, how poſſibly it may be, but by God alone. Therefore Mahomet, and all falſe Prophets came, (at leaſt boaſted to come) in ſignes. But, challenge them, at this; not a word, no mention of them in the world, till they were borne. True therefore, that Saint Iohn ſaith: The teſtimonie (that is, the great principall teſtimonie) of Ieſus, is the ſpirit of prophecie. It made Saint Peter, when he had recounted what he himſelfe had heard, in the Mount (yet, as if there might be, even in that, deceptio ſenſus) to adde, Habemus etiam firmiorem ſermonem prophetiæ: We have a word of prophecie, beſides; and that, firmiorem: the ſurer of the twaine.

This prophecie is of a certaine Childe. And, if we aske, of this place, (as the Eunuch did, of another, in this Prophet) Of whom ſpeaketh the Prophet this? we muſt make the anſwer, that (there) Philip doth; of Chriſt: and the teſtimonie of Ieſus is the ſpirit of this Prophecie. The ancient Iewes make the ſame. It is but a fond ſhift, to draw it (as the latter Iewes doe) to Ezekias: it will not cleave. It was ſpoken to Ahaz, Ezekias Father, now king: and that after the great overthrow he had, by the kings of Syria and Iſrael, in the fourth of his raigne. But, it is deduced, by plaine ſupputation, out of the eighteenth of the ſecond of Kings: Ezekias was nine yeare old, before Ahaz his Father came to the crowne. It was by that time, too late, to tell it for tidings, (then) that he was born; he then, being thirteene yeares of age.

Beſide, how ſenſleſſe is it, to applie, to Ezekias, that in the next verſe; that, of his government and peace there ſhould be none end, that his throne ſhould be eſtabliſhed from thence forth for ever: whereas his peace and government (both) had an end within few yeares?

Rom. 4 17. Eſa. 41. 23. 2 Theſ. 2. 9. Apoc. 19. 10. 2 Pet. 1. 19. Acts 8. 34. Verſe 7.

To

To us it is ſufficient, that the fore-part of the Chapter is, by Saint Matthew, expreſſely applied to our Saviour : and that, this verſe doth inſeparably depend on that, and is alleaged as the reaſon of it; For, unto us. Of Him therefore, we take it, and to Him applie it, that cannot be taken of any, or applied to any other, but Him. Mat.4.15.

But, how came Eſay to ſpeake of Chriſt, to Ahaz? Thus: Ahaz was then in very great diſtreſſe; he had loſt in one day eighty thouſand of his people; and two hundred thouſand of them (more) carried away captives. And now, the two Kings were raiſing new power againſt him: The times grew very much overcaſt. And, this you ſhall obſerve: The chiefeſt prophecies of Chriſt came ever, in ſuch times: That, Saint Peter did well, to reſemble the word of prophecie to a candle, in loco caliginoſo, a darke roome. Iacobs, of Shilo, in Egypt, a darke place: Daniel's, of Meſſias, in Babylon; a place as darke, as Egypt: This of Eſay, when the ten Tribes were on the point of carrying away, under Hoſhea. That of Ieremie (A Woman ſhall incloſe a man) when Iuda, in the ſame caſe, under Iechonias. Ever, in darke times, who therefore needed moſt the light of comfort. The occaſion of this Prophecie. 2 Pet 1.19. Gen.49.10. Dan 9.24,25. Ier.31.22.

But, what's this to Ahaz caſe? He looked for an other meſſage from him; How to eſcape his enemies. A cold comfort might he thinke it, to be preached to, of Immanuel. Indeed, he ſo thought it; and therefore he gave over Eſay, and betooke him to Shebna, who wiſhed him to ſeeke to the King of Aſhur for helpe, and let Immanuel goe. Yet, for all that, even then to ſpeake of Chriſt, being looked into, it is neither impertinent, nor out of ſeaſon. With all the Prophets it is uſuall, in the calamities of this people, to have recourſe ſtill, to the fundamentall promiſe of the Meſſias. For that, till He were come, they might be ſure they could not be rooted out; but muſt be preſerved, if it were but for this Childs ſake, till He were borne. And yet, if they could beleeve on Him, otherwiſe it is no match: Niſi credideritis. Then, thus the Prophets argue: He will not denie you this favour, for He will grant you a farre greater than this, even his owne Sonne; and, by him, a farre greater deliverance; and, if He can deliver you from the devouring fire of Hell, much more, from them: and, if give you peace with God, much more with them. So, teaching thoſe that will learne, the onely right way to compaſſe their owne ſafetie, is by making ſure worke of Immanuel, God with us. To the true regard of whom, God hath annexed the promiſes as well of this, as of the other life. All are, as lines drawne from this center; all in Him, yea and Amen. Which all ſerve, to rayſe Ahaz up, and his people, to receive this Childe, and to rejoyce in His day, as their Father Abraham did. Eſa.7.9. 1 Tim.4.8. 2 Cor.1.20. Iohn 8.56.

Thus, the Occaſion you have heard. The parts, ad oculum evidently, are two: 1 a Child-birth: and a 2 Baptiſme. 1 The Child-birth, in theſe: For unto you, &c. 2 The Baptiſme, in theſe: His name, &c. The diviſion

In the former; 1 Firſt of the maine points, The Natures, Perſon and Office; 1 Natures, in theſe: Child and Sonne. 2 Perſon, in theſe: His ſhoulders, His Name. 3 Office, in theſe; His Government. 2. Then of the deriving of an intereſt to us in theſe [To us,] two times. And that is of two ſorts: 1 By being borne; a right, by His birth. 2 By being given: a right, by a deed of gift. I. 1. 2.

In the latter, of His Baptiſme, is ſet downe His ſtile conſiſting of five peeces, conteining five uſes, for which He was thus given: each to be conſidered in his order. II.

IT is ever our firſt care, to begin with, and to ſettle the maine point of the myſterie: 1 Nature, 2 Perſon and 3 Office: and after, to looke to our owne benefit by them. To beginne with the Natures, of God, and Man: They be * ſuper hanc petram: upon them lyeth the weight of all the reſt; they are the two ſhoulders whereon this Government doth reſt. I. The Child-birth. 1 The Maine points. 1 His Natures. * Mat.16.18.

We have two words, Child, and Sonne: neither, waſt. But, if no more in the ſecond, than in the firſt, the firſt had been enough: if the firſt enough, the ſecond ſuperfluous. But, in this Booke, nothing is ſuperfluous. So then, two diverſe things they import.

Weigh the words: Child is not ſaid, but in humanis, among men. Sonne may be in divinis: from heaven, God ſpake it, This is my Sonne: May; and muſt be, here. As Man. As God. Mat.17.5.

Weigh the other two: 1 borne and 2 given. That, which is borne, beginneth then (firſt) to have his being. That, which is given preſuppoſeth a former being: for, be it muſt, that it may be given.

Againe,

Againe, when we ſay borne; of whom? of the Virgin His Mother: when we ſay Given; by whom? by God His Father.

Eſa.7.11. Eſay promiſed, the ſigne, wee ſhould have, ſhould be from the deepe heere beneath, and ſhould be from the height above: both, a Child, from beneath; and a Sonne, from above. To conclude: it is an expoſition decreed by the Fathers aſſembled in the Councell of Sevill: who,

Can.2.13. upon theſe grounds, expound this very place ſo: The Child, to import His Humane; The Sonne, His Divine Nature.

All along His life, you ſhall ſee theſe two. At His birth: A Cratch for the Child; a Starre for the Sonne: A companie of Shepheards viewing the Child; A Quire of Angels celebrating the Son. In His life: Hungry Himſelfe, to ſhew the nature of the Child: yet feeding five thouſand, to ſhew the power of the Sonne. At His death: dying on the Croſſe, as the Sonne of Adam; at the ſame time diſpoſing of Paradiſe, as the Sonne of God.

If you aske, why both theſe? For that, in vaine had been the one, without the other. Some-what there muſt be borne (by this mention of Shoulders:) meet it is every one ſhould beare his owne burden. The nature, that ſinned, beare his owne ſinne; not, Ziba make the fault, and Mephiboſheth beare the puniſhment. Our nature had ſinned, that therefore ought to ſuffer: The reaſon, why a Child. But, that which our nature ſhould, our nature could not beare; not the weight of Gods wrath due to our ſinne: But, the Sonne could: The reaſon, why a Son. The one ought, but could not: the other could, but ought not. Therefore, either alone would not ſerve; they muſt be joyned, Child and Son. But that He was a Child, He could not have ſuffered. But that He was a Sonne, He had ſunke in His ſuffering, and not gone through with it. God had no Shoulders; Man had; but, too weake, to ſuſteine ſuch a weight. Therefore, that He might be lyable, He was a Child; that He might be able, He was the Sonne: that He might be both, he was both.

2 His Perſon. This, why God. But, why this perſon, the Sonne? Behold, Adam would have become one of us; the fault: Behold, one of us will become Adam, is the ſatisfaction. Which of us would He have become? Sicut Dij, Scientes, the perſon of knowledge. He therefore ſhall become Adam: A Sonne ſhall be given. Deſire of knowledge, our attainder; He, in whom all the treaſures of knowledge, our reſtoring. Fleſh, would have been the Word, as wiſe as the Word; the cauſe of our ruine: meet then, the Word become fleſh, that ſo, our ruine repaired. There is a touch given, in the name COVNSELLOR, to note out unto us, which Perſon; as well, as the Sonne.

Gen.3.22. Gen.3.5. Coloſ.2.3. Ioh.1.4.

3 One more; if theſe joyned, why is not the Sonne firſt, and then the Childe; but, the Childe is firſt, and then the Sonne. The Sonne is farre the worthier, and therefore to have

Chap.7.14. the place. And thus too it was, in his other name Immanuel, (CHAP. VII.) It is not

Luk. 3. 31 38. Elimanu; not Deus nobiſcum; but, Nobiſcum Deus. We, in His name, ſtand before God. It is ſo in the Goſpell: the Sonne of David, firſt; the Sonne of God after. It is but this ſtill, Verſe 7. zelus Domini Exercituum fecit hoc: but to ſhew His zeale, how deare He holdeth us, that He preferreth, and ſetteth us before Himſelfe; and, in His verie name, give us the precedence.

The Perſon, briefely. The Child, and the Sonne: theſe two make but one Perſon, cleerely, for, both theſe have but one name, His name ſhall be called: and both theſe have but one payre of ſhoulders, Vpon His ſhoulders. Therefore, though two natures, yet but one Perſon, in both. A meet perſon, to make a Mediator of God and Man, as ſymbolizing with either, God and Man. A meet perſon, if there be diviſion betweene them, (as there was, and great Epheſ.2.14. thoughts of heart for it) to make an union: Ex utroque unum, ſeeing He was unum ex utroque. Not man only; there lacked the ſhoulder of power: Not God only; there lacked the ſhoulder of Iuſtice: But, both together. And ſo have ye the two Supporters of all, 1 Iuſtice, and 2 Power. A meet perſon, to ceaſe Hoſtilitie, as having taken pledges of both heaven and earth; the chiefe nature in heaven, and the chiefe on earth: To ſet forward commerce betweene

Gen.23.12. heaven and earth, by Iacobs Ladder, one end touching earth, the other reaching to heaven: [To incorporate either to other: Himſelfe, by His birth, being become Sonne of man, by our Newbirth

Ioh.1.12. giving us a capacitie, to become the Sonnes of God.

3. His Office. His Office: The Kingdome on His ſhoulders. For, He ſaw, when the Child was borne, it ſhould ſo poorely be borne, as (leſt we ſhould conceive of Him too meanely) He tells us, He commeth cum Principatu, with a Principalitie; is borne a Prince: and beautifieth Him with with ſuch names, as make amends for the manger? That He is not onely Puer, a Childe; and Filius, a Sonne; but Princeps, a Prince.

Truth is, other Offices wee finde beſides. But, this you ſhall obſerve, that the Prophets ſpeaking of CHRIST, in good congruitie, ever apply themſelves, to the ſtate of them they ſpeake to; and uſe that Office, and Name, which beſt agreeth to the matter in hand. Here, that which was ſought, by Ahaz, was protection: that (we know) is for a King: As a King therefore, he ſpeaketh of Him. Elſe-where He is brought forth by David, as a Prieſt: and againe elſe-where, by Moſes, as a Prophet. If it be matter of ſinne, for which ſacrifice to be offered, He is a Prieſt for ever after the order of MELCHIZEDEK. If the Will of GOD, if His great Counſell to be revealed, A Prophet will the Lord raiſe, &c. Heare Him. But here is matter of delivery (only) in hand: here therefore, he repreſented Him, Cum Principatu, with a Principalitie. Pſal. 110.4. Deut. 18.18.

A Principalitie, not of this world. HEROD need not feare it, nor envie it. If it had, His officers, as they would have ſeene Him better defended at His Death, ſo would they have ſeene Him better lodged at His Birth, than in a ſtable with beaſts: for, if the Inne were full, the ſtable (we may be ſure) was not emptie. Of what world then? of that, He is Father; Futuri ſæculi. Of that He is Father; and He is a Prince of the government, that guideth us thither. Luke 2.7.

Yet, a Prince He is, and ſo He is ſtyled: borne, and given, to eſtabliſh a government: That none imagine, they ſhall live like Libertines under Him; every man beleeve, and live, as hee liſt. It is CHRIST, not Belial, that is borne to day: He bringeth a government with Him: they, that be His, muſt live in ſubjection under a government: elſe, neither in Childe, nor Son; in Birth, nor Gift, have they any intereſt.

And this government is, by name, a Principalitie: Wherein, neither the popular confuſion of many; nor the factious ambition, of a few, beare all the ſway: but, where one is Soveraigne. Such is the government of Heaven: Such is CHRISTS government.

With a Principalitie, or Government; and that upon His ſhoulders: Somewhat a ſtrange ſituation. It is wiſdome, that governes: That is, in the head; and there is the Crowne worne: What have the ſhoulders to doe with it? Certainly, ſomewhat by this Deſcription. The Shoulder (as we know) is the bearing member: and unleſſe it be for heavie things, we uſe it not. Ordinary things we carry in our hands, or lift at the armes end: It muſt be very heavie, if we muſt put ſhoulders and all to it. Belike, Governments have their weight; be heavie; And ſo they be: they need not only a good head, but good ſhoulders, that ſuſtaine them. But that not ſo much, while they be in good tune and temper; then, they need no great carriage: but when they grow unwealdie, (be it weakneſſe, or way-wardneſſe of the governed;) in that caſe they need: And in that caſe, there is no Governour, but, at one time or other, he beares his government upon his ſhoulders. It is a morall, they give, of Aarons apparell: Hee carved the twelve Tribes in his Breſt-plate, next his heart; to ſhew, that in care he was to beare them: But, hee had them alſo engraven in two Onyx-ſtones, and thoſe ſet upon his very ſhoulders; to ſhew, he muſt other-while beare them in patience too. And, it is not Aarons caſe alone; it was ſo with Moſes too. He bare his government as a Nurſe doth her childe, (as He ſaith, Numb. XI.) that is, full tenderly. But, when they fell a murmuring (as they did often,) He bare them upon His ſhoulders, in great patience, and long ſuffering. Yea, he complained, Non poſſum portare, I am not able to beare all this people, &c. Exod. 28.29. Exod. 28.12, &c. Numb. 11.12. Numb. 11.14.

It were (ſure) to be wiſhed, that they, that are in place, might never be put to it. Beare their people only in their armes, by love; and in their breſts, by care. Yet if need be, they muſt follow CHRISTS example and patience, here; and even that way, beare them: not only beare with them; but even beare them alſo.

Yet is not this CHRISTS bearing, (though this Hee did too:) There is yet a further thing, He hath a patience paramount, beyond all the reſt. Two differences I finde, betweene Him and others. 1. The faults and errours of their government, others doe beare, and ſuffer (indeed) ſuffer them; but, ſuffer not for them. He did both: Endured them; and endured, for them, heavie things: A ſtrange Superhumerall, the print whereof was to be ſeene on his ſhoulders. The Chaldee Paraphraſt tranſlateth it thus, The Law was upon His ſhoulders: (And ſo it was too:) A burthen (ſaith Saint Peter) neither He, nor the Apoſtles, nor their Fathers were able to beare. This he did: and bare it ſo evenly, as He brake, nay bruiſed not a Commandement. 1 Acts 15.10.

But, there is another ſenſe, when the Law is taken for the puniſhment due by the Law. It is Eſay 53.4,&c. that, which our Prophet meaneth (in the 53. Chap.) when he ſaith, Poſuit ſuper humeros; Hee hath laid upon His ſhoulders, the iniquities of us all. And, not againſt His will: Come (ſaith He)
Matth. 11. 28. you that are heavie loden, and I will refreſh you, by loding my ſelfe; take it from your neckes, and lay it on mine owne. Which His ſuffering, though it grew ſo heavie, as it wrung from Luke 22. 44. Him plentie of teares, a ſtrong crie, a ſweat of bloud, (ſuch was the weight of it;) yet would
Ioh. 19. 30. He not caſt it off, but, there held it ſtill, till it made Him bow downe His head and give up the ghoſt. If He had diſcharged it, it muſt have light upon us; (it was the Yoke of our burthen, as in the 4. verſe He termeth it:) If it had light upon us, it had preſſed us downe to Hell; ſo inſupportable was it. Rather than ſo, He held it ſtill, and bare it; and did that, which never Prince did, dyed for His government. It was not for nothing (we ſee) that, of the Childe borne, no part but the ſhoulders is mentioned: for, that (we ſee) in this Childe, is a part of ſpeciall imployment.

2 The other point of difference betweene Him and other Governours. When we ſay, [On His ſhoulders,] this we ſay; on no other ſhoulders, but His. For, others, (by Moſes example, Exod. 18. 23. upon Iethroes advice, and GODS owne allowance,) may, and doe lay off, and tranſlate their burthen, (if it be too heavie) upon others, and ſo eaſe it, in part: Not ſo, He: It could not be ſo, in His. He, and He alone: He, and none but He: Vpon His owne ſhoulders, and none
Eſay 63. 3. but his owne, bare He all. He trod the wine-preſſe, and bare the burthen Solus, alone; Et vir de Gentibus, and, of all the Nations, there was not a man with Him. Vpon His onely ſhoulders did the burthen only reſt.

3 Now, from theſe two doth the Prophet argue to a third: to the point (here) of principall intendment. That if, for His government ſake, Hee will beare ſo great things; beare
Mat. 18. 13, 14. their weakneſſes, as the loſt ſheepe; beare their ſinnes, as the Scape-goat: Hee will, over the Levit. 16. 8, 9. government it ſelfe, (as in Deut. 32. Hee maketh the Simile,) ſtretch forth His wings, as the Deut. 32. 11. Eagle over her young-ones, and take them, and beare them betweene His pinions; Beare them, Ioh. 10. 28. and beare them through. They need take no thought: No man ſhall take them out of His hands; no man reach them off His ſhoulders. He had begunne ſo to carry them; and thorow He would ſtill carry them: At leaſt-wiſe, till this Childe Immanuel were borne. Till then, He would: and not wax weary, nor caſt them off. And (like the Scape-goat) beare their
Gal. 4. 4. ſinnes; and (like the Eagle) beare up their eſtate, till the fulneſſe of time came, and He, in it, with the fulneſſe of all grace and bleſſing. And this point I hold ſo materiall; as Puer natus, nothing, and Filius datus, as much, without Princeps oneratus: For, that is all in all, and, of the three, the chiefe.

II. The ſecond maine point. The Benefit: To Vs. And now, what is all this to us? Yes; to us, it is; and that, twice over, for failing. We come now to looke another while into our intereſt to it, and our benefit by it. Nobis is acquiſitivè poſitus: We get by it; we are gainers by all this.

To us; not to Himſelfe. For, a farre more noble Nativitie had He, before all worlds, and needed no more birth. Not to be borne at all; ſpecially, not thus baſely to be borne. Not to Him therefore; but to us, and our behoofe.

Hebr. 2 16. To us, as in barre of Himſelfe, ſo likewiſe of His Angels. Nuſquam Angelos, not to the Angels was He borne, or given; but, to us He was both. Not an Angell in Heaven can ſay Nobis.
Luke 1. 31, &c. 2. 11. Vobis, they can: The Angels ſaid it twice. Nobis natus or datus, they cannot; but wee can, both.

I. Nobis excluſivè, and Nobis incluſivè. Eſay ſpeakes not of himſelfe only, but taketh in Ahaz. Both are in Nobis; Eſay, an holy Prophet; and Ahaz, a worſe than whom you ſhall hardly reade of. Eſay includeth himſelfe, as having need, though a Saint; and excludeth not Ahaz, Luke 2. 25. 1 Tim. 1. 15. from having part, though a ſinner. Not only Simeon the juſt; but Paul the ſinner, of the Quorum, and the firſt of the Quorum.

Incluſivè: not onely of Eſay, and his Countrey-men the Iewes; It is of a larger extent. The Angell ſo interpreteth it, this day, to the ſhepherds: Gaudium quod erit omni populo, Ioy that ſhall bee to all people, Not the people of the Iewes; or the people of the Gentiles;
Luke 2 12. but ſimply to all people. His name is IESVS CHRIST, halfe Hebrew, halfe Greeke: Ieſus Hebrew; Chriſt, Greeke: So ſorted, of purpoſe, to ſhew, Iewes and Greekes have equall intereſt in in Him. And now, ſo is His Fathers name too, Abba, Father: To ſhew the benefit equally intended by Him, to them, that call Him Abba, that is, the Iewes; to us, that call Him Father, that is, the Gentiles. Marke 14 36. Rom.8.15.

But yet, it is incluſivè of none, but thoſe that include themſelves; that beleeve, and therefore ſay, Nobis, to us He is borne, to us He is given. Which excludes all thoſe, that include not themſelves. Saint Ambroſe ſaith well: Facit multorum infidelitas, ut non omnibus naſceretur, qui omnibus natus eſt: Want of faith makes, that He, that is borne to all, is not borne to all, though. The Turkes, and Iewes, can ſay, Puer natus eſt: The Devill can ſay, Filius natus eſt, too: But neither ſay, Nobis; but, Quid Nobis & tibi? They have not to doe with Him; and for lacke of it, of this, neither Childe nor Sonne, birth nor gift doth availe them: We muſt make much of this word, and hold it faſt; for, thereby, our tenure and intereſt groweth. Which intereſt groweth by a double right, (and therefore is Nobis twice repeated:) 1 The one, of His birth, Natus: 2 the other, by a deed of gift, Datus. Of which, the one (his Birth) referreth to Himſelfe: the other (the gift) to His Father: To ſhew the joynt conſent and concurrence, in both, For our good. So CHRIST loved us, that He was given: So GOD loved us, that He gave His Sonne. Rom.3.22. Epheſ.5.2. Ioh.1.11. Ioh.3.16.

By His very birth, there groweth to us an intereſt in Him; thereby partaker of our nature, our fleſh, and our bloud. That which is de nobis, He tooke of us, is ours: fleſh and bloud is our owne; and, to that is our owne, we have good right.

His humanitie is cleerely ours; good right to that. But, no right to His Deitie. Therefore his Father, (who hath beſt right to diſpoſe of Him,) hath paſſed over that by a deed of gift. So that, what by participation of our nature, what by good conveyance; both are ours. Whether a Childe, He is ours: or whether a Sonne, Hee is ours. Wee gave Him the one; His Father gave us the other. So, both ours: and He ours, ſo farre as both theſe can make Him. Thus, GOD, willing more abundantly to ſhew to the heires of promiſe the ſtableneſſe of His Counſell, tooke both courſes; that, by two ſtrong titles, which it is impoſſible ſhould be defeated, wee might have ſtrong conſolation, and ride (as it were) at a double anchor. 1 Ioh.3.16. Gal.4.4. Hebr.6.17.

I want time, to tell of the benefit which the Prophet (Verſe III.) calleth the harveſt, or bootie of His Nativitie. This it is in a word: If the tree be ours, the fruit is: If He be ours, His Birth is ours; His Life is ours; His Death is ours; His Satisfaction, His Merit, all Hee Did, all He Suffered is ours. Further, all that the Father hath is His, He is Heire of all; then, all that is ours too. Saint Paul hath caſt up our account: Having given Him, there is nothing, but He will give us with Him: So that, by this Deed, we have title to all, that His Father, or He is worth. Hebr.1.2 Iohn 3.35. Matth.21.38. 1 Cor.3.22,23. Rom.8.32.

And now, ſhall wee bring forth nothing for Him that was thus borne? No Quid retribuam, no giving backe, for Him that gave Him us? Yes, thankes to the Father, for His great bountie in giving. Sure, ſo good a giving; ſo perfect a gift there never came downe from the Father of lights. And to the Sonne, for being willing ſo to be borne, and ſo to be burthened as Hee was. For Him to condeſcend to be borne, as Children are borne; To become a Childe; great humilitie: Great, ut Verbum, infans; ut tonans, vagiens; ut immenſus, parvulus: that the Word, not be able to ſpeake a word; Hee, that thundereth in Heaven crie in a cradle; He, that ſo great and ſo high, ſhould become ſo little as a Childe, and ſo low as a manger. Not to abhorre the Virgins wombe, not to abhorre the beaſts manger, not to diſdaine to be fed with butter and honey; All, great humilitie. All great, and very great: But, that is greater, is behinde. Puer natus, much; Princeps oneratus, much more: That, which He bare for us, more; than that He was borne for us: For, greater is Mors crucis, than Nativitas præſepis: Worſe to drinke vineger and gall, than to eat butter and honey; worſe, to endure an infamous death, than to be content, with an inglorious birth. Our Dutie. Pſal.116.12. 2 Cor.9.14,15. Coloſ.1.12. Iames 1.17. Phil.2.8.

Let us therefore ſing to the Father (with Zachary) Benedictus: and to the Sonne (with the bleſſed Virgin) Magnificat: and (with all the Angels,) Gloria in Excelſis; To the Prince with His government on His ſhoulders. Luke 1.68. 46. 2.14.

Nothing but thankes? Yes; by way of dutie too, to render, unto the Childe, confidence; Puer eſt, ne metuas: To the Sonne reverence; Filius eſt, ne ſpernas: To the Prince, obedience; Princeps Princeps eſt, ne offendas. And againe; To Natus; is He borne? then cheriſh Him. (I ſpeake of His ſpirituall birth, wherein, we, by hearing and doing His word, are (as Himſelfe ſaith)

Mat.12. 49,50. His Mothers. To Datus; is He given? then keepe Him. To Oneratus: is He burthened? favour Him; lay no more on, than needs you muſt.

This is good morall counſell. But, Saint Bernard gives us politike advice; to looke to our intereſt, to thinke of making our beſt benefit by Him. De Nobis nato & dato faciamus id, ad quod, natus eſt & datus; utamur noſtro, in utilitatem noſtram; de Servatore noſtro, ſalutem operemur: With this borne and given Childe, let us then doe that, for which He was borne and given us: Seeing He is ours, let us uſe that, that is ours, to our beſt behoofe; and even worke out our ſalvation, out of this our SAVIOVR. His counſell is, to make our uſe of Him: but, that is not, to doe with him what we liſt; but, to imploy Him to thoſe ends, for which Hee was beſtowed. Thoſe are foure:

1 He is given us (ſaith Saint Peter) εἰς ὑπογραμμὸν for an example, to follow. In all; but (that
1 Pet.2.21. which is proper to this day,) to doe it, in humilitie. It is that, which the Angell ſet up, for a ſigne and ſample, upon this very day. It is the vertue appropriate to His birth. As faith, to His conception, (Beata quæ credidit;) So humilitie, to His birth, (& Hoc erit ſignum:) Fieri voluit in vitâ primum, quod exhibuit in ortu vitæ, (it is Cyprian;) That, Hee would have us, firſt to expreſſe in our life, that He firſt ſhewed us, in the very entrie of His life. And to commend us this vertue the more, Placuit Deo majora pro nobis operari, It hath pleaſed Him to doe greater things for us, in this eſtate, than ever He did, in the high degree of His Majeſtie: as, (we know) the worke of Redemption paſſeth that of Creation, by much.

2 Hee is given us in pretium, for a price. A price, either of ranſome, to bring us
2 Pet.1.19. out de loco caliginoſo: or a price, of purchaſe, of (that, where, without it, we have no intereſt,) the Kingdome of Heaven. For both, He is given; offer we Him for both. We ſpeake of Quid retribuam; We can never retribute the like thing. He was given us, to that end, we might give Him backe. We wanted, wee had nothing valuable; that wee might have, this He gave us, (as a thing of greateſt price,) to offer for that, which needeth a great price, our ſinnes, ſo many in number, and ſo foule in qualitie. We had nothing worthy GOD; this He gave us, that is worthy Him, which cannot bee but accepted, offer wee it never ſo Matth.7.7,8. often. Let us then offer Him; and, in the act of offering, aske of Him what is meet:
Matth.14.6,7. for we ſhall finde Him no leſſe bounteous, than Herod, to grant what is duely asked upon His birth-day.

3 Hee is given us (as Himſelfe ſaith) as the living Bread from Heaven: which bread is His Ioh.6.53. fleſh, borne this day, and after given for the life of the world. For, looke how wee doe give backe that He gave us, even ſo doth He give backe to us that which we gave Him, that which He had of us. This He gave for us, in Sacrifice; and, this He giveth us, in the Sacrament;
Matth.26.26. that the Sacrifice may, by the Sacrament, be truly applyed to us. And let me commend this
1 Cor.11.24. to you; He never bade, Accipite, (plainly, take,) but in this onely: and that, becauſe the effect of this Dayes union is no wayes more lively repreſented, no way more effectually wrought, than by this uſe.

4 And laſtly, He is given us in præmium: (Not now to be ſeene, only in hope;) but hereafter, by His bleſſed fruition, to be our finall reward; when, where He is, we ſhall be; and what He is, we ſhall be; In the ſame place, and in the ſame ſtate of glory, joy, and bliſſe, to endure for evermore.

At His firſt comming, you ſee, what He had on His ſhoulders. At His ſecond, He ſhall

A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED

before the KINGS MAIESTIE, at White-Hall, on Thurſday, the XXV. of December, A. D. MDCVII.
being CHRISTMAS day.

I TIM. Chap. III. Ver. XVI.

And without controverſie, great is the Myſterie of Godlineſſe, which is, GOD is manifeſted in the fleſh, juſtified in the Spirit, ſeene of Angels, preached unto the Gentiles, beleeved on in the world, and received up in glorie.

THE Myſterie (here mentioned) is the myſterie of this Feaſt; And this Feaſt, the Feaſt of this Myſterie: for, as at this Feaſt, GOD was manifeſted in the fleſh. In that it is a great Myſterie, it maketh the Feaſt great. In that it is a Myſterie of Godlineſſe, it ſhould make it likewiſe a Feaſt of godlineſſe. Great, wee grant; and godly too, wee truſt: Would GOD, as godly, as great; and, no more controverſie of one, than of the other.

The manifeſtation of GOD in the fleſh, the Evangeliſts ſet downe, by way of an Hiſtorie: The Apoſtle goeth further, and findeth a deepe Myſterie in it; and for a Myſterie, commends it unto us. Now, there is difference betweene theſe two; Many: This, for one; that a man may heare a Story, and never waſh his hands; but, a Myſterie requireth both the hands and heart to be cleane, that ſhall deale with it.

SPeaking of it then, as a Myſterie, the Apoſtle doth here propound two things: 1 Firſt, that it is one: Without controverſie, &c. 2 Then, what it is: GOD manifeſted, &c. 3 And, out of theſe, a third will grow neceſſarily; (Becauſe Myſteries will admit a fellowſhip,) how to order the matter, that we may have our fellowſhip, in this Myſterie. Ephes. 3. 9. The Diviſion I.

In the firſt part, foure things he affirmeth: 1 That it is a Myſterie: 2 A Myſterie of godlineſſe: 3 That it is a great one: 4 A great one, without controverſie.

Then doth He (as it were) rend the veile in ſunder, and ſhew us, what it is: 1 GOD, manifeſted; 2 Manifeſted, in the fleſh. II.

Which Myſterie, how it may concerne us, will be our third, and laſt conſideration. And that two wayes: 1 by the Operation of it, in us: 2 by the Initiation of us, into it. III.

I. A Myſterie it is: preſented to us in that terme, by the Apoſtle, to ſtirre up our attention. Omnes homines naturâ ſcire deſiderant, All men, even by nature, love to be knowing: The Philoſopher hath made it his ground, and ſet it in the front of his Metaphyſickes. So ſaith Philoſophie. A Myſterie it is.

And, even to this day (ſaith Divinitie,) doth the Tree of Knowledge ſtill worke in the ſonnes of Eve; we ſtill reckon the attaining of knowledge, a thing to be deſired, and, be it good, or evill, we love to be knowing, all the ſort of us. Knowing: but, what? Not, ſuch things as every one knoweth, that goeth by the way; vulgar, and triviall. Tuſh, thoſe are nothing. But, Metaphyſickes, that are the Arcana of Philoſophie; Myſteries, that are the Secrets of Divinitie; ſuch, as few beſides are admitted to: Thoſe be the things wee deſire to know. Wee ſee it, in the Bethſhemites; they longed to be prying into the Arke of GOD: They were Heathen. We ſee it in the People of GOD too: they preſſed too neare the Mount: Gen. 3. 6. 1 Sam. 6. 19. Exod. 19. 12.

Railes were faine to be ſet, to keepe them backe. It is, becauſe it is held a point of a deepe wit, to ſearch out ſecrets: as, in Ioſeph. At leaſt of ſpeciall favour, to be received ſo farre, as Vobis datum eſt, noſſe Myſteria. All deſire to be in credit. The mention of Myſteries will make us ſtand attentive: Why then, if our nature like ſo well of Myſteries, Ecce oſtendo vobis Myſterium, Behold I ſhew you a Myſterie (ſaith the Apoſtle.)

2 A Myſtery of Godlineſſe:

A Myſterie of Godlineſſe. The World hath her Myſteries in all Arts and Trades, (yea, Mechanicall, pertaining to this life;) which are imparted to none, but ſuch as are filij ſcientiæ, apprentices to them. Theſe have their Myſteries: have them, nay, are nothing but Myſteries. So they delight to ſtile themſelves by the name of ſuch and ſuch a Myſterie. Now, Pietas eſt quæſtus, (Chap. VI. Verſ.6.) and (in the next Chap.) ad omnia utilis, a Trade of good returne; to be in requeſt with us; whether we looke to this life preſent (ſaith he) or to that to come. Therefore, to be allowed her Myſteries: At leaſt, as all other Trades are. The rather, for that there is Myſterium iniquitatis: Aud, it were ſomewhat hard, that there ſhould not be Myſterium pietatis, to encounter and to match it: That Babylon ſhould be allowed the name of a Myſterie, and Sion, not. It were an evident Non ſequitur, that there ſhould be profunda Satanæ, deep things of Satans; and there ſhould not be deepe and profound things of God and Godlineſſe, for the Spirit to ſearch out. But, ſuch there be; Myſteries of Godlineſſe. And we will (I truſt) ſtand affected, as in all other Trades, ſo in this, to be acquainted with theſe; and (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) to pierce ad interiora Velaminis, to that which is within the veile; to the very Myſterie of Godlineſſe.

3 A great Myſterie.

It is not only a Myſterie of Godlineſſe; but a Great one. The Apoſtle, (where he ſaith, * If I knew all Myſteries) giveth us to underſtand, there be more than one; there is a pluralitie of them. And, (here, in this place) telleth us; they be not all of one ſcantling; there is magis and minus in them: ſome little, ſome great. 1 Some Great; (if you will) according to all the dimenſions, length and breadth, &c. 2 Or, Great, Virtute, non mole, of greater value, more pretious than other: 3 Or, Great, a third way, that is, gravida Myſterijs; one Myſterie, but hath many Myſteries with it. That ſuch there are, and that this here is one of them: Great. Now, that which leadeth us to make account of Myſteries, will likewiſe lead us to make Great account, of Great Myſteries; ſuch, as this is.

* 1 Cor.13.3.
2 Pet.1.4.

2 A great one, without controverſie.

Yet have we not all, one point further. It is a great one; a great one, Without controverſie. For, even of thoſe Myſteries, that are great, all are not great alike. Many great there are; yet is not the greatneſſe of all generally acknowledged, in confeſſo. Doubts are made, queſtions ariſe about them: all are not manifeſtè magna. We ſee, in our dayes, how men languiſh about ſome points, which they would have thought to be great; and great controverſies there be, and great bookes of controverſies about them. Well, howſoever it is with other, it is not ſo with this. This is ὁμολογουμένως, taken pro confeſſo, Great; Great without controverſie: the manifeſting of GOD in the fleſh, is a Myſterie manifeſtly great. Being then one of the Myſteries of Religion; a great one among them; ſo great, as though queſtions grow about the greatneſſe of others, none may about this: I hope there will be no more queſtion, or controverſie of our account, and our great account of it, than there is of the Myſterie it ſelfe, and the Greatneſſe of it.

But, before we goe any further, to remove the veile, and ſhew what it is, let us pauſe here a while, till we have rendred thankes to GOD, and ſaid with Nazianzen, Χάρις τῷ μακαρίῳ ΘΕΩ, &c. Now yet, bleſſed be GOD, that, among diverſe other Myſteries, about which there are ſo many miſts and clouds of controverſies raiſed in all Ages, and even in this of ours, hath yet left us ſome cleare, and without controverſie; manifeſt, and yet great; and againe, great, and yet manifeſt. So Great, as no exception to be taken: ſo manifeſt, as no queſtion to be made about them.

Withall, to reforme our judgements in this point. For, a falſe conceit is crept into the mindes of men, To thinke, the points of Religion, that be manifeſt, to be certaine pettie points, ſcarce worth the hearing: Thoſe, yea, thoſe bee great, and none but thoſe, that have great Diſputes about them. It is not ſo: Τὰ μὲν ἀναγκαῖα, &c. Thoſe that are neceſſarie He hath made plaine: thoſe, that not plaine, not neceſſarie. What better proofe, than this here? This here, a Myſterie, a Great one, (Religion hath no greater,) yet manifeſt, and in confeſſo, with all Chriſtians. Zacharies Prophecie, and promiſe, touching CHRIST, wherewherewith he concludeth his Benedictus, (we heare it every day,) ſhall not deceive us, for this Myſterie : He came, to guide our feet into the way of peace. A way of peace then, there ſhall be, whereof all parts ſhall agree, even in the midſt of a world of controverſies. That, there need not ſuch adoe in complayning, if men did not delight, rather to be treading mazes, than to walke in the waies of peace. For, even ſtill, ſuch a way there is, which lyeth faire enough, and would lead us ſure enough to ſalvation; if, leaving thoſe other rough labyrinthes, we would but be ſhod with the preparation of the Goſpell of peace. Luk.1.79. Epeſ.6.15.

Yea further, the Apoſtle doth aſſure us, that if, whereunto we are come, and wherein we all agree, we would conſtantly proceed, by the Rule, thoſe things, wherin we are otherwiſe minded, even them would GOD reveale unto us. That is, He maketh no controverſie, but controverſies would ceaſe, if conſcience were made of the practice, of that, which is out of controverſie. And I would to GOD it were ſo; and that this here, and ſuch other manifeſtè magna were in account. With the Apoſtle himſelfe it was ſo. He ſheweth plainely, what reckoning he made of this plaine Myſterie; in that, having been raviſht in ſpirit up to the third heavens, and there heard wonderfull high Myſteries, paſt mans utterance; yet reckoned he all thoſe nothing, in compariſon of this plaine Myſterie here, nay, eſteemed himſelfe not to know any thing at all, but this. Phil.3.15. 2 Cor.12 2.

And, as he eſteemed it himſelfe, ſo would he have us. It is his expreſſe charge, we ſee (in the Verſe next before) where he tells his Biſhop Timothee, how he would have him, his Prieſts, and Deacons occupie themſelves, in his abſence : This he commends to them; wills them, to be doing with this Myſterie. That you may know what to doe (ſaith he,) What? doe but deale with this point; throughly, deale with it. Howſoever it is manifeſt, it is great: Great regard to be had to it, great paines to be beſtowed about it. And, even ſo then let us doe, and ſee now another while, this Myſterie, what it is. 1 Cor.2.1.

1 GOD. * Rom.1.20. Heb.1 3.

GOD is manifeſted in the fleſh. Being one of the Myſteries of godlineſſe, it cannot be, but GOD muſt be a part, and a cheefe part of it. And, GODS being a part maketh it great. For, great muſt that needs be, whereof He is a part, of whoſe Greatneſſe there is no end. And marke firſt, that it is not aliquid Dei, but DEVS; not any thing divine, or of GOD, but GOD himſelfe. Diverſe things, diverſe inviſible things of GOD had been formerly made manifeſt: * His eternall Power, Wiſdome, Providence, in, and ſince the Creation. They be no Myſteries : But, this is; that, not the things of GOD, but GODS owne ſelfe: not the ἀπαυγάσματα, the beames of His brightneſſe; but, the very Character of His ſubſtance, the very Nature and Perſon of GOD. This, is a great Myſterie.

2 GOD manifeſted. 1 Tim.6.16. Exod.32.1.

Of GOD, the Prophet Eſay ſaith (Chap. XLV. Ver. XV.) Verè Deus abſconditus es tu : GOD is, of himſelfe, a Myſterie, and hidden; and (that which is ſtrange) hidden with light, which will make any eyes paſt looking on Him. But, a hidden GOD our nature did not endure. Will you heare them ſpeake it plainely? Fac nobis Deos, Make us Viſible gods, who may goe before us, and we ſee them. Myſticall, inviſible GODS we cannot skill of. This we would have; GOD to be manifeſted. Why then, GOD is manifeſted.

Manifeſted; Wherein? Sure, if GOD will condeſcend to be manifeſted, there is none but will thinke, it is meet to bee, and it would be, in the moſt glorious Creature, that is under or above the ſunne : None, good enough. Yea, in what thing ſoever, be it never ſo excellent, for GOD to manifeſt himſelfe in, is a diſparagement too. What ſay you to fleſh? is it meet GOD be manifeſted therein? Without controverſie it is not. Why, what is fleſh? It is no myſterie to tell what it is : It is duſt (ſaith the Patriarch Abraham.) It is graſſe (ſaith the Prophet Eſay;) Fœnum, graſſe cut downe, and withering : It is corruption, not corruptible, but even corruption it ſelfe, (ſaith the Apoſtle Paul.) There being then (as Abraham ſaid to him, *Luc.*XVI.) χάσμα μέγα, ſo great a gulfe, ſo huge a ſpace, ſo infinite a diſtance betweene thoſe two, betweene GOD, and duſt; GOD, and Hay; GOD, and Corruption; as no comming of one at the other; ſileat omnis caro, talke not of fleſh. Were it not a proud deſire, and full of preſumption, to wiſh things ſo remote to come together? to wiſh, that the Deitie, in the fleſh, may be made manifeſt? Yet we ſee, wiſhed it was, by one in a place (CANT. VIII.) in reaſonable expreſſe termes : O that thou wert as my brother, that ſucked the breſts of my mother ! That is, O that Hee might bee manifeſted in Gen.18.27. Eſay 40.6. 1 Cor.15.54. Luk.16.26. Zach. 2.13. Can.8.1.

the fleſh. O that He might be ! and ſo He was. Not onely manifeſt, at all; (that, is great :) but manifeſt in the fleſh; (that is greater.) For, if gold mixed, though it be with ſilver, is abaſed by it; what if it be mixed with the ruſt of iron or droſſe of leade ? This muſt needs be great, in it ſelfe : But greater, with us : With us eſpecially, that make ſuch adoe at any, though never ſo little diſparagement; and that, if any, (though not much our inferiour) be ranked with us, take our ſelves mightily wronged. We cannot chooſe, but hold this Myſterie for Great, and ſay (with S. Auguſtine,) DEVS : quid glorioſius ? Caro : quid vilius ? DEVS in carne : quid mirabilius ? GOD : what more glorious ? fleſh : what more baſe ? Then, GOD in the fleſh : what more marvellous ?

But, I aske further : Manifeſted in the fleſh; what fleſh ? Or, how manifeſted ? In what fleſh ? What, in the pride and beauty of our nature ? No : but, in the moſt diſgracefull eſtate of it that might be. And, how manifeſted ? Ad gloriam, for His credit or glorie ? No : but ad ignominiam, to His great contempt and ſhame. So to have been manifeſted, as in the holy mount, (His face, as the ſunne; His garments as lightning; betweene MOSES and ELIAS, in all glorie, and glorious manner :) This had not been ſo great an impeachment. Was that the manner ? No : But how ? In clouts, in a ſtable, in a manger. The GOD, whom the heavens, and the heaven of heavens cannot containe, in a little Childs fleſh not a ſpanne long : and that fleſh of a Child not very well conditioned, as you may read in the XVI. of Ezekiel.

Ezek. 16. 4, 5, &c.

So, to day : but after, much worſe. To day, in the fleſh of a poore Babe, crying in the Cratch, in medio animalium : After, in the rent and torne fleſh of a condemned perſon, hanging on the Croſſe, in medio latronum, in the midſt of other manner perſons, than MOSES and ELIAS; That, men even hid their faces at Him; not, for the brightneſſe of His glorie, but for ſorrow and ſhame. Call you this manifeſting ? Nay, well doth the Apoſtle call it, the Veile of His fleſh; as whereby He was rather obſcured, than any way ſet forth; yea, eclipſed, in all the darkeſt points of it. Verily, the condition of the fleſh was more than the fleſh it ſelfe : and the manner of the manifeſtation, farre more, than the manifeſtation it ſelfe was. Both ſtill make the Myſterie greater and greater.

As a condemned perſon.

Heb. 10. 20.

The Manner of this Manifeſtation.

And now, to weigh the word Manifeſted, another while; becauſe, that may ſeeme to bee terminus diminuens, a qualified terme, rather abating than any way tending to make great the Myſterie; In that, a thing may be manifeſted, and not bee that, for which it is manifeſted; be manifeſted for one thing, and be another. Would to GOD, wee had not too plaine examples of theſe, even in that we are about, in godlineſſe it ſelfe : That there were not, that manifeſted themſelves ἐν μορφώσει, in the vizor, or mask of godlineſſe, but bee nothing leſſe. Well, this, how or whereſoever it may bee with men, with GOD it is not : Hee is not like to us : And howſoever, not here in this. For firſt, it is not in the ſhaddow, ſhew, or ſhape of fleſh : but, in very fleſh it ſelfe. Then, it is not (ſaith the Greek Scholiaſt) Φανθὲις, but. Φανερωθὲις : Φανθὲις, which importeth but an apparition, tranſitory, for a ſeaſon, and then vaniſheth againe; but Φανερωθὲις, a manifeſtation; ſuch, as is (ſay they) permanent, which paſſeth not, but laſteth for ever. And, to put all out of queſtion, (that here is nihil perſonatum, but even perſona,) He that here is ſaid to bee GOD manifeſted in the fleſh, is, in another place, ſaid to bee Verbum caro factum, the word made fleſh. So manifeſted, that made : ſo taking our nature, as, His, and it are growen into one perſon, never to be ſevered, or taken in ſunder any more. And, in ſigne thereof, that fleſh, wherein He is manifeſted, (in the beginning of the Verſe; in the end of the Verſe,) in the very ſame fleſh, He is received up into glorie; And in the ſame, ſhall appeare againe, at his ſecond manifeſtation.

Ioh. 1. 14.

And yet, to goe further; I ſay, that this word [manifeſted,] is ſo farre from being Terminus diminuens, that it doth greatly ampliate and inlarge the Myſterie yet ſtill. To be, and, to be manifeſted; Eſſe, and videri; Dici de, & eſſe in, are two things. And, as, in ſome caſes, it is more to be, than to be manifeſted; ſo, in ſome other, it is more to be manifeſted, than to be : And namely, in this here. More, for GOD, to be manifeſted, than to be in the fleſh. It is well knowne, when a great high Perſon doth fall into low eſtate, he careth not ſo much for being ſo, as for appearing ſuch : Manifeſt him not, and you doe him a pleaſure. More it is, for Him, to be made knowne, than to be, that, He is. O it is naturally given us, to hide our abaſing, what we can. Our miſerie muſt be kept in a myſterie, and that myſterie not manifeſted in any wiſe.

wiſe. Blow a trumpet in Sion, if any good come to us. But, whiſt, let it not be heard in Gath, nor in Aſcalon, if any evill fall upon us. Not ſo much as Naomi (we ſee,) but when ſhee was fallen into povertie, ſhee could not endure to be called by that name: No, her name was Mara; as if ſhe had been ſome other partie: So loth ſhee was, to have her miſerie made manifeſt. Humilitie intrinſecall is not ſo much: it is the manifeſting our humilitie that poſeth us. That DAVID ſhould have been humble in heart before GOD, and his Arke; that Michal could have borne well enough: This was the griefe; that DAVID muſt make it manifeſt, uncover himſelfe, weare an Ephod, and thereby (as ſhee thought) mightily diſgrace, and make himſelfe vile in the eyes of his ſervants. That was it, ſhe tooke ſo ill: Not, to be, ſo much; as, to be manifeſt: That ſame manifeſting marred all. And, why would NICODEMVS come to CHRIST, but not but by Candle-light, but that to be ſeene manifeſtly to come, was (with him) a farre greater matter, than to come. By all which it appeareth, that, in caſe of abaſement, to ſeeme, is more than to be; dici de, than eſſe in: And ſo (here) noſci, more than naſci. And I make no queſtion, but we may reckon theſe two, as two diſtinct degrees: [1] He abhorred not to become fleſh: [2] He abhorred not to have it manifeſtly knowne. It was not done (this) in a corner, in an out-corner of Galilee; but, in the Citie of DAVID. His poore cloutes manifeſted, by a Starre: His ſhamefull death publiſhed, by a great Eclipſe: Yea, that it might be manifeſt indeed, (as it followeth after in the Verſe) He would have it preached over all the world.

2 Sam. 1. 20. Ruth 1. 20. 2 Sam. 6. 20. Iohn 19. 39. Acts 6. 26. Luk. 2. 4.

But, when we have done and ſaid all that ever we can, if we had all Myſteries, and no love, The Apoſtle tells us, it is nothing. We can have no Myſterie, except Love be manifeſt. So is it. Two ſeverall times doth the Apoſtle tell us [1] (Tit. II.) apparuit Gratia: [2] (Tit. III.) apparuit Amor erga homines: At the opening of this myſterie, there appeared the [1] Grace of GOD, and the [2] Love of GOD toward mankind. Velatio Deitatis, revelatio charitatis: As manifeſt as GOD was in the fleſh, ſo manifeſt was his love unto fleſh. And then, becauſe great love, a great Myſterie, Dilexit goeth never alone, but with Sic; (ſo, CHRIST:) Ecce quantam charitatem; (ſo, Saint Iohn.) Sure, how great and apparent Humilitie, ſo great and apparent Love. And His Humilitie was too apparent. So, we have GOD manifeſted in the fleſh, DEVS charitas: for, if ever He were Love, or ſhewed it; in this, He was it, and ſhewed it both. GOD, (that is Love,) was manifeſted in the fleſh.

1 Cor. 13. 1. Tit. 2. 11. 3. 4. Ioh. 3. 16. 1 Ioh. 3. 1. 1 Ioh. 4. 8.

To make an end, one queſtion more. To what end? Cui bono? who is the better for all this? GOD, that is manifeſted; or the fleſh, wherein He is manifeſted? Not GOD: To Him, there groweth nothing out of this manifeſtation. It is for the good of the fleſh, that GOD was manifeſted in the fleſh. 1. For the good preſent: for, we let goe that of the Pſalmiſt, now, [Thou that heareſt the prayer, to Thee ſhall all fleſh come;] and much better and more properly ſay; Thou that art manifeſted in the fleſh, to Thee ſhall all fleſh come: With boldneſſe entering into the holy place, by the new and living way prepared for us, through the veile, that is, His fleſh. 2. And, for the good to come; For we are put in hope, that the end of this manifeſting GOD in the fleſh, will be the manifeſting of the fleſh in Him; even as He is: And, that which is the end of the Verſe, be the end of all, The receiving us up into his glorie. To this haven arriveth this Myſterie, of the Manifeſtation of it.

Pſal. 65. 2. Hebr. 10. 19. 20.

The end of this Second part is but the beginning of the third. For, hearing that it is ſo great, and of ſo great availe riſing by it, that it is quæſtus multo uberrimus, a trade ſo beneficiall; it makes us ſeeke, how to incorporate our ſelves (as in the * III. of the Epheſians he ſpeaketh;) how to have our part and fellowſhip, in this Trade or Myſterie. And that may we do (ſaith he, in the ſame place) * ſi operetur in nobis, (that is) if it prove to us, as it is in it ſelfe, a Myſterie. I know, it were a thing verie eaſie, for a ſpeculative Divine, to lead you along, and let you ſee, that this Myſterie is the Subſtance of all the Ceremonies, and the fulfilling of all Prophecies: That all MOSES veiles, and all the Prophets viſions, are recapitulate in it. But it is a point of ſpeculation; We heare thoſe points too often, and love them too well: Points of practice are leſſe pleaſing, but more profitable for us; namely, how we may get into the partnerſhip of this Myſterie.

There is this difference, betweene a Ceremonie and a Myſterie: A Ceremonie repreſents and

II I.

How this Myſterie concerneth us.

1 By the Operation of it, in us.

and ſignifies; but, workes nothing: A Myſterie doth both. Beſide that it ſignifieth, it hath his operation; and, worke it doth; elſe, Myſterie is it none. You may ſee it, by the Myſterie of iniquitie; That doth operari; was at worke in the Apoſtles time; And it is no way to be admitted, but that the Myſterie of godlineſſe ſhould have like operative force.

2 Theſſ. 2. 7.

If you aske, what it is, to worke? It is to doe, as all other Agents; Vt aſſimulet ſibi paſſum, to make that, it workes on, like it ſelfe; to bring forth in it the very ſame qualitie. This, the rather, for that, this day being a Birth day, and the Myſterie of it, a Birth, or generation; in that, (we know) the naturall and moſt proper worke is Sui ſimile procreare, to beget and bring forth the very like to it ſelfe. And what ſhould the Myſterie of godlineſſe beget in us, but godlineſſe? What, the Myſterie of godlineſſe (in this Chapter,) but the Exerciſe of godlineſſe (in the next?) To ſhew, we muſt make Saint Baſils Ασκητικὰ of it: For, his Ασκητικὰ, and Saint Pauls Γυμναστικὰ, I take to be all one.

Within; the Myſtery.

First, Within, (after the manner of a Myſterie,) by entering into our ſelves, and ſaying (with Saint Peter,) Seeing then, GOD hath ſo dealt with us, what manner of perſons ought we to be, in all holy converſation and godlineſſe? How ought we to eſteeme Him, that ſo eſteemed us? How to eſteeme our ſelves, whom He hath ſo eſteemed? How, without ſoile, or ſpot to keepe that fleſh, wherein GOD hath manifeſted himſelfe, That nothing come from it but ſuch as may become that fleſh, which is now all one with the fleſh of the SONNE of GOD.

2 Pet. 3. 11.

Iam. 1. 27.

Without: the Manifeſtation.

Provided, that it be not all Within: For, we deale not with a Myſterie alone, but with a Manifeſtation too. That therefore our godlineſſe be not onely myſticall, but manifeſt, as GOD was. As the Myſterie, ſo the Godlineſſe of it; Great, and conſpicuous, both. For, that is the complaint; that, in our godlineſſe, now adaies, we goe very myſtically to worke indeed; we keepe it under a veile; and nothing manifeſt, but opera Carnis. Which maketh Saint Iames crie, Oſtende mihi, ſhew it me: and Saint Paul tells us, that the life of IESVS muſt not onely be had in our ſpirit, but manifeſt in our fleſh. For, Godlineſſe is not onely Faith, which referreth to the Myſterie (as we have it directly, at the IX. Verſe, the Myſterie of faith:) But, it is Love too; which referreth to the Manifeſtation. For, in hoc cognoſcimus (ſaith Saint Iohn,) By this, we know, our ſelves; and, in hoc cognoſcent omnes (ſaith CHRIST,) By this ſhall all men know, that we are His. And, if Faith worke by Love, the myſterie will be ſo manifeſt in us, as we ſhall need no proſpective glaſſes, or other optique inſtruments, to make it viſible; all men ſhall take notice of it.

Galat. 5. 19. Iam. 2. 18. 2 Cor. 4. 10, 11. 1 Ioh. 3. 14. 4. 13. Ioh. 13. 35.

* By the Initiation of us, into it.

And yet remaineth there one point; than which, there is not one more peculiar to a Myſterie. That which the Apoſtle (Hebr. X. Verſe X.X.) calleth Initiating: whereby we grow into the fellowſhip of this, and what Myſteries ſoever. For, this we are to underſtand, that Myſteries goe not all, by hearing; No, they be diſpenſed alſo: And men are to eſteeme of us (ſaith he) not onely, as of the Vnfolders, but, as of the Stewards (or Diſpencers) of the Myſteries of GOD. Operari myſteriis, is a phraſe well knowne, to the very Heathen themſelves: That, myſteries, as they worke, ſo they are to be wrought. That they are to be handled; and that our hands are to be cleane waſhed, yet we offer to touch them.

By which, I underſtand the Myſterie of godlineſſe, or Exerciſe of godlineſſe (call it whether yee will,) which we call the Sacrament: the Greeke hath no other word for it, but Μυστήριον:) whereby the Church offereth to initiate us, into the fellowſhip, of this daies Myſterie. Nothing ſorteth better than theſe two Myſteries one with the other; the Diſpenſation of a Myſterie, with the Myſterie of diſpenſation. It doth manifeſtly repreſent; it doth myſtically impart, what it repreſenteth. There is in it, even by the very Inſtitution, both a Manifeſtation, and that viſibly, to ſet before us this fleſh; and a myſticall Communication, to infeoffe us in it, or make us partakers of it. For the Elements: What can be more properly fit, to repreſent unto us the union with our Nature, than things, that doe unite themſelves to our Nature? And, if we be to diſpenſe the Myſteries in due ſeaſon; what ſeaſon more due than that His fleſh and bloud be ſet before us, that time, that He was manifeſted in fleſh and bloud for us. Thus we ſhall be initiate.

You looke to heare of a Conſummation of it too; And conſummate it ſhalbe, but not yet: Not, till the daies of the voice of the Seventh Angell. Then ſhall the Myſterie of GOD be finiſhed. So we find it directly, but not before. When, He that was, this day manifeſted feſted in the fleſh, ſhall manifeſt, to the fleſh, the fulneſſe of this Myſterie, His eternitie, glorie, and bliſſe. So, ſtill it remaineth a Myſterie in part; A part thereof there ſtill remaineth behind, to be manifeſted. What He is, appeareth; what we ſhall be, doth not yet appeare; but ſhall, at the ſecond appearing. Two veiles we reade of: [1] The veile of His fleſh (Hebr. X. Verſe XX.) [2] And the veile where our hope hath caſt anchor, even within the veile, meaning heaven it ſelfe. The firſt is rent; theſe myſteries are remembrances of it. The ſecond alſo ſhall be, as we alſo with it; and as He, (in the end of the Verſe) ſo we, with Him, in the end, ſhall be received up into glorie. To the conſummation of which great Myſterie, even that Great Manifeſtation, He vouchſafe to bring us all, that was, this day, for us all, manifeſted in the fleſh, IESVS CHRIST the righteous, &c.

A SERMON PREACHED

before the KINGS MAIESTIE, at White-Hall, on Munday, the XXV. of December, A. D. MDCIX.
being CHRISTMAS day.

GALAT. Chap. III. Ver. IV, V.

When the fulneſſe of time was come, GOD ſent his Sonne, made of a woman, made under the Law.

That, He might redeeme them that were under the Law, that we might receive the Adoption of Sonnes.

IF, when the fulneſſe of time commeth, GOD ſent his Sonne: then, When GOD ſent his Sonne, is the fulneſſe of time come. And at this day, GOD ſent his Sonne. This day therefore (ſo oft as by the revolution of the yeare it commeth about) is to us a yearely repreſentation of the fulneſſe of time. So it is: and a ſpeciall honour it is to the Feaſt, that ſo it is. And we our ſelves ſeeme ſo to eſteeme of it. For we allow for every moneth a day, (Looke how many months ſo many dayes,) to this Feaſt, as if it were, and we ſo thought it to be, the full recapitulation of the whole yeare.

This honour it hath, from CHRIST, who is the ſubſtance of this, and al other Solemnities. Peculiarly, à Chriſti miſſa, from Chriſts ſending. (For, they that read the ancient Writers of the Latine Church (Tertullian, and Cyprian) know, that Miſſa, and Miſſio and Remiſſa, and Remiſſio, with them, are taken for one. So that, Chriſti miſſa, is the ſending of CHRIST.) And when then hath this Text place ſo fit, as Now? Or what time ſo ſeaſonable to intreat of it, as This? Of the ſending of his Sonne; as when GOD ſent his Sonne: Of the fulneſſe of time; as, on the yearely returne and memoriall of it.

To intreat of it then. The Heads are two: 1. Of the fulneſſe of time. 2. And of that, wherewith it is filled. 1. Times fulneſſe, in theſe, When the fulneſſe of time came. 2. Times filling in the reſt, GOD ſent his Sonne, made of a woman, made under the Law, &c. The diviſion.

In the former, (Quando venit plenitudo temporis,) there be foure points: 1. Plenitudo temporis: That, time hath a fulneſſe; or, that there is a fulneſſe of time. 2. Venit plenitudo: I.

That,

That, that fulneſse commeth, by ſteps and degrees; not all at once. 3. Quando venit: That, it hath a Quando, (That is,) there is a time, when time thus commeth to this fulneſse. 4. And when that When is? And that is, When GOD ſent his Sonne. And ſo paſſe we over to the other part, in the ſame Verſe, Miſit DEVS; GOD ſent his Sonne.

II. For the other part (touching the filling of time.) There be Texts, the right way to conſider of them, is to take them in peeces. And this is of that kind. And if we take it in ſunder, we ſhall ſee, as it is of fulneſse, ſo a kind of fulneſſe there is in it: every word, more full than other: every word, a ſtep in it, whereby it riſeth ſtill higher, till by ſeven ſeverall degrees it commeth to the top, and ſo the meaſure is full. 1. GOD ſent, the firſt. 2. Sent his Sonne, the ſecond. 3. His Sonne made, the third. 4. And that twice made, Made of a woman, the fourth. 5. Made under the Law, the fifth; every one fuller than other, ſtill.

And all this, for ſome Perſons, and ſome Purpoſe,; The Perſons, Vt nos, that We. The Purpoſe, Reciperemus, that we might receive. Nay, (if you marke it) there be two Vt's, [1] Vt ille, [2] Vt nos, that He might, and, that We might. He might redeeme; and We might receive: that is, He, pay for it, and, We reape the benefit. 6. A double benefit, of [1] Redemption (firſt) from the ſtate of perſons caſt and condemned, under the Law, which is the ſixth. 7. And then, of [2] Tranſlation into the ſtate of adopted children of GOD, which is the ſeventh, and the verie filling up of the meaſure.

III. All which, we may reduce to a double fulneſſe. GODS, as much as He can ſend. Ours, as much as we can deſire. GODS, in the five firſt 1. GOD ſent. 2. Sent his Sonne. 3. His Sonne made. 4. Made of a Woman. 5. Made under the Law. And Ours in the two latter; 6. We are redeemed, the ſixth. 7. We receive adoption, the ſeventh.

In that of GODS, every point is full. The thing ſent, full. The ſending, and the manner of ſending, full. The making, and the two manners of making, [1] Of a woman, and, [2] Vnder the Law, both full. And our fulneſſe in the two latter, (the effects of theſe two Acts, or makings, [1] of a woman, [2] under the Law,) Redemption and Adoption, which make vp all. That when we were ſtrangers from the Adoption; and not that onely, but lay under the Law, as men whom ſentence had paſſed on: From this latter, we are redeemed, (He under the Law, that we from under the Law,) That, (being ſo redeemed) we might further receive the adoption of children, (and as He the Sonne of man: So we might be made the Sonnes of GOD.) Which two are as much as we can wiſh. And this is Our fulneſſe.

IIII. And to theſe; I will crave leave to adde another fulneſſe of Ours, riſing out of theſe, and to make a motion, for it. That, as it is the time, when we from GOD, receive the fulneſſe of His Bounty: ſo it might be the time alſo, when He from us, may likewiſe receive the fulneſſe of our Dutie. The time of His Bounty-fulneſſe, and the time, of our Thank-fulneſſe: That it may be Plenitudo temporis, quà ad illum, quà ad nos; downeward, and upward; from Him to us, and from us to Him againe: and ſo be, both waies, The fulneſſe of time.

1 Plenitudo temporis. Sap. 11. 17. Ephel. 4. 13.

FIRST there is a fulneſſe in Time. The terme, [Fulneſſe,] carrieth our conceit to Meaſure, ſtreight, from whence it is borrowed: which, is then ſaid to be full, when it hath as much, as it can hold. Now, GOD hath made all things in Meaſure: and if all things, then Time. Yea, Time it ſelfe is by the Apoſtle called, Menſura temporis, The Meaſure of Time. As then, all other Meaſures have theirs; ſo the Meaſure of time alſo hath his fulneſſe, when it receiveth ſo much, as the capacity will containe no more. So, Time is a meaſure: it hath a capacitie: That hath a fulneſſe. That, there is ſuch a thing as the fulneſſe of time.

But, nothing is full at firſt: no more is Time by and by. Venit plenitudo, it commeth, not at once, or ſtraight waies, but by ſteps and paces, neerer & neerer: Fills, firſt a quarter, and then halfe, till at laſt it come to the brim. And degrees there be, by which it commeth. Ecce palmares poſuiſti dies meos, (Pſalm. 39. 6.) From which word [palmares] it is an obſervation of one of the Fathers, a man may reade his time: In his owne hand, viſibly, there in an aſcent, the fingers riſe ſtill, till they come to the top of the middle finger; and when they be come thither, downe againe by like deſcent, till they come to the little, which is the loweſt of all. So is it in our time. It riſeth ſtill by degrees, till we come to the full pitch of our Age, and then declineth againe, till we grow to the lower end of our dayes. But howsoever it may be (as it oft falls out) the descent is sudden, wee goe downe head-long without degrees, goe away in a moment; yet ever this holdeth; to our fulnesse we come not, but by degrees.

Now thirdly, this comming hath a Quando venit, a time, when it commeth thither. As a time there is a great while, when we may say, [a] Nondum venit hora, the time is not yet come, while the measure is yet but in filling: So at the last, a time too, that we may say, [b] Venit hora, the time is now come, when the measure is full: That is, A time there is, when time commeth to the full. As in the day, when the Sunne commeth to the Meridian Line: in the moneth, when it commeth to the point of opposition with the Moone: in the yeare, when to the Solstice: In man, when he commeth to his full yeares: for that is the fulnesse of time the Apostle alleageth in three verses before. 3 Quando venit.

b Ioh. 12. 23.

And when is that When, that time thus commeth to his fulnesse? Quando misit Deus, when GOD sends it: for Time receives his filling from GOD. Of it selfe, time is but an emptie measure, hath nothing in it: Many dayes and moneths run over our heads, Dies inanes, (saith the Psalmist:) Menses vacui, (saith Iob:) Emptie dayes, Psalm. LXXVIII. vers. 33. Void moneths, without any thing to fill them, Iob VII. vers. 3.

That which filleth time, is some memorable thing of Gods powring into it, or (as it is in the Text) of His sending, to fill it withall. Misit Deus is it: and so commeth Time to be more or lesse full; thereafter as that is, which God sends to fill it. 4 Quando.

Now, many memorable missions did God make before this here; whereby in some measure, He filled up certaine times of the yeare under Moses, and the Prophets: all which, may well be termed, The implements of time.

But for all them, the measure was not yet full: filled perhaps to a certaine degree, but not full to the brimme: full it was not (seeing it might be still fuller) till God sent That, than which a more full could not be sent.

And, That Hee sent, when Hee sent His Sonne, a fuller than whom Hee could not send, nor Time could not receive. Therefore, with the sending Him, when that was, Time was at the top, that was the Quando venit, then it was, plenitudo temporis, indeed.

And, well might that time, be called the fulnesse of time. For when He was sent into the world, in whom the fulnesse of the God-head dwelt bodily: In whom the Spirit was not by measure: In whom was the fulnesse of grace and truth: Of whose fulnesse we all receive: When He was sent, that was thus full, then was time at the full. 1 Col 2. 9. Ioh. 3. 34. Ioh. 1. 14. Ioh. 1. 16.

And well also might it be called the fulnesse of time, in another regard. For till then, all was but in promise, in shadowes and figures, and prophecies only, which fill not, God knowes. But when the Performance of those promises, the body of those shadowes, the substance of those figures, the fulfilling or filling full of all those prophecies came, then came the fulnesse of time, truly so called. Till then it came not: then it came. 2

And well might it be called the fulnesse of time, in a third respect. For then the Heire, (that is, the World) was come to His full age: and so that the fittest time for Him to be sent. For to that, compareth the Apostle their estate then; that the former times under Moses and the Prophets were as the Nonage of the world; sub Pædagogo, in the III. Chapter, Vers. XXIIII. ὑπὸ στοιχεῖα, at their A. B. C. or rudiments, (as in the very last words before these.) Their estate then, as of Children in their minority, little differing from servants. For all this while, nondum venit, the fulnesse of time was not yet come. But a time there was, as for man, so for mankind to come to his full yeares: That time came with CHRISTS comming, and CHRISTS comming with it, and never till then was the fulnesse of time; but then it was. 3

And let this be enough for this point; more there is not in the Text. But if any shall further aske, why then, at that age of the world, the world was at his full age, just then, and neither sooner nor later? I know many heads have beene full of devices, to satisfie mens curiositie in that point. But I hold it safest to rest with the Apostle (in the second verse) on GODS προθεσμία. Let that content us. Then was the time, for that was Tempus præfinitum à Patre, the time appointed of the Father. For, even among men, though (the Father being dead) the Law setteth a time, for the Sonne to come to His heritage: yet the Father living, no time can be prefixed, but onely when it liketh Him to appoint; and the Father

Act.1.7. here liveth; and therefore let his θεσμὸς ſtay us. The times and ſeaſons He hath put in His owne power, it is not for us to know them. This is for us to know, that with His appointment, we muſt come to a full point. So doth the Apoſtle, and ſo let us, and not buſie our ſelves much with it, time is but the meaſure or caske, that vvherewith it is filled, doth more concerne us. To that therefore let us come.

2 GOD ſent. 1 The degrees are ſeven (as I ſaid.) To take them as they riſe. Miſit Deus, God ſent. That ſtandeth firſt; and at it, let our firſt ſtay be. That vvill fall out to make the firſt degree. For, even this, that GOD ſent at all, Ipſum mittere Dei, this very ſending it ſelfe, is a degree. It is ſo; and ſo vve vvould reckon of it, if vve knew the Sender, and vvho He is; the Majeſtie of His preſence how great it is, and how glorious, how farre ſurpaſſing all we can ſee on earth.

For Him, for ſuch an one as He, to condeſcend, but to ſend; is ſure a degree. For enough it had beene, and more than enough for Him, to be ſent to; and not to ſend Himſelfe. To have ſit ſtill, and beene content, that we might ſend to Him, and have our meſſage and petition admitted, and not He ſend to us. That had beene as much as we could looke for, and well, if we might have beene vouchſafed but that. But it was He that ſent: not we to Him firſt, nay, not we to Him at all, but He to us.

He to us? And what were we, that He to us? Vs, (as elſe-where He termeth us) meere Aliens
Epheſ.2.12. from Him, and His Houſhold: Not that onely, but Vs, in caſe of men, whom the Law had paſſed upon. (So is our eſtate deſcribed in the end of the Text.) For Him, to ſend to Vs, ſo great as He, to ſuch as we; to thinke us, tanti, ſo much worth, as to make any miſsion, or motion, or to diſeaſe any about us; This may well be the firſt. Be it then ſo; that to us, or for us, or concerning us, GOD would trouble Himſelfe to make any ſending: A fulneſſe there is in this. Full He was; a fulneſſe there was in Him, (even the fulneſſe of compaſsion in His bowels over our eſtate) elſe ſuch a Sender would never once have ſent.

2 His Sonne. GOD ſent: Sent, and ſent His SONNE: That, (I make no queſtion,) will beare a ſecond. Others He might have ſent; and whoſoever it had beene He had ſent, it might well have ſerved our turnes. If ſent by the hand of any His Servants, any Patriarch, Prophet, any ordinary meſſenger, it had beene enough. So, hitherto had beene his Sending. So, and no otherwiſe, ever till now.

Then, if to ſend by any may ſeeme ſufficient, to ſend His SONNE, muſt needs ſeeme full. For ever the more excellent the Perſon ſent, the more honourable the ſending: the greater He,
Col.2.9. the fuller it. Now, greater there is not than His SONNE, His firſt, His only begotten SON, in whom the fulneſſe of the God-head dwelt; In ſending Him, He ſent the greateſt, the beſt, the fulleſt thing He had.

To heape the meaſure up yet more, with the cauſe of His ſending, in the word ἐξαπέστειλε, It was voluntary. He ſent Him not for need: but for meere love to us, and nothing elſe. There was no abſolute neceſsitie that He ſhould have ſent Him. Hee might have done what He intended, by the meanes and miniſtery of ſome beſides. GOD could have enabled a Creature; a Creature enabled by GOD, and the power of his might, could ſoone have trod downe Satan under our feet. But if it had beene any other He had ſent, His love and regard to us had not ſhewed ſo full. It had beene, Oſtendit DEVS charitatem, but not, Ecce quantam charitatem oſtendit
1 Ioh.3.1. DEVS. Whomſoever he had ſent beſides, His love had not beene full: at leaſt, not ſo full as it ſhould have beene, if He had ſent His SONNE. That therefore it might be full, and ſo appeare to us for full, Miſit Deus Filium ſuum. Enough it was, in compaſſion of our eſtate, to have releeved us by any: Men that are in need to be releeved, care not who they be that doe it. Enough then for compaſsion: but not enough to manifeſt the fulneſſe of His love, unleſſe to releeve us, He ſent His owne SONNE.

3 Made. This is full one would thinke: Yet, the Manner of His ſending Him, is fuller ſtill. Miſit Filium; Filium factum. Sent His SONNE; His SONNE made. Sent Him, and ſent Him made: This is a third. For if Hee would have ſent Him, Hee ſhould not have ſent him made: but as Hee was, neither made nor created, but like Himſelfe in His owne eſtate, as vvas meet for the SONNE OF GOD, to be ſent. To make Him any thing, is to marre Him, be it what it will be. To ſend Him made, is to ſend Him marred, and no better. Therefore, I make no doubt, CHRISTS ſending is one degree, His making is another: So to ſend, as withall to make, are two diſtinct meaſures of this filling. As He is, He is a Maker, a Creator: If GOD make Him any thing, Hee muſt be a thing made, a Creature; and that is a great diſparagement. So that, howſoever the Time is the fuller, for this; He is the emptier: πλήρωμα χρόνε, κένωμα Χριςε, The fulneſſe of time, is His emptineſſe; The exalting of that, His abaſing. And this very Exinanivit ſeipſum, emptying Himſelfe, for our ſake, is a preſſing downe the meaſure: and ſo, even by that, ſtill the meaſure is more full. Philip.2.7.

Yea, the very manner of this making, hath his increaſe too, addeth to it ſtill. In the word γενόμενον: which is not every making, but making it His Nature. To have made Him a body and taken it upon Him for a time, till He had performed His Embaſſage, and then laid it off again, that had beene much: But ſo to be made, as once made and ever made; ſo to take it, as never lay it off more, but continue ſo ſtill γενέσθαι, it to become His very nature; ſo to bee made is to make the union full. And to make the union with us full, Hee was content, not to be ſent alone, but to be made; and that γενέσθαι, to be made ſo, as never unmade more. Our Man-hood becomming His Nature, no leſſe than the God-head it ſelfe. This is Filium factum indeed.

Made, and twice made, (for ſo it is in the Verſe) 1 Factum ex, and 2 Factum ſub; made of, and made under: Of a woman; under the Law. So, two makings there be; either of them, of it ſelfe, a filling to the meaſure, but both of them maketh it perfectly full.

Made, firſt of a woman: that, I take cleerely to be one. For, if He, if the SONNE of GOD muſt be made a Creature: it were meet Hee ſhould be made the beſt Creature of all. And if made of any thing, (if any one thing better than another) of that: made ſome glorious Spirit, Some of the orders of the Angels. Nay, made, but made no Spirit; Verbum caro factum eſt, The WORD became fleſh: Made, but made no Angell; Nuſquam Angelos, He in no wiſe tooke the Angels nature upon Him. 4 Made of a woman. Ioh.1.14. Hebr.2.16.

But made man. Firſt, I will aske with DAVID, Domine, quid eſt homo? Lord, what is man? And then, tell you His anſwer: Homo quaſi res nihili, Man is like a thing of nought. And this he was made, this he became, made man, made of a woman: did not abhorre the Virgins wombe, (as we ſing daily, to the high praiſe of the fulneſſe of His humilitie, to which His Love brought Him for our ſakes.) For, whatſoever elſe he had beene made, it would have done us no good. In this then was the fulneſſe of His Love, as before of His Fathers, that He would be made, and was made, not what was fitteſt for Him, but what was beſt for us: not, what was moſt for His glory, but what was moſt for our benefit and behoofe. Pſal.144.3.

Made of a woman. For, Man He might have beene made, and yet have had a body framed for Him in Heaven, and not made of a woman. But when He ſaith, Factum ex muliere, it is evident, He paſſed not thorow Her, as water thorow a Conduit Pipe, (as fondly dreameth the Anabaptiſt.) Made of, Factum ex: Ex, dicit materiam. Made of her; Shee miniſtred the matter, Fleſh of her fleſh. Semen mulieris, The ſeed; and Semen intimum ſubſtantiæ, that is, the principall and very inward chiefe part of the ſubſtance. Made of that, made of her very ſubſtance. Gen.3.15.

And ſo have we here now in one, both twaine His Natures. GOD ſent His Sonne, There His Divine: Made of a woman, Here His Humane Nature. That, from the boſome of His Father, before all worlds; This, from the wombe of His Mother, in the world. So that, as from eternitie, GOD His Father might ſay that verſe of the Pſalme, Filius meus es tu, hodie genui te, Thou art my Sonne, this day have I begotten thee: So, in the fulneſſe of time, might the Virgin His Mother, no leſſe truly, Filius meus es tu, hodie peperi te, Thou art my Sonne, this day have I brought thee into the world. Pſal.2.7.

And here now, at this word, made of a woman, He beginneth to concerne us ſomewhat. There groweth an alliance betweene us: For, we alſo are made of a woman. And our hope is, as, He will not be confounded, to be counted inter natos mulierum; No more will He be, (ſaith the Apoſtle) to ſay, in medio fratrum; to acknowledge us His Brethren. And ſo by this Time He groweth ſomewhat neere us. Hebr.2.11. Rom.8.29.

This now is full for the union with our nature, to be made of a woman. But ſo to bee made of a woman, without hee be alſo made under the Law, is not neere enough yet. For, if He be out of the compaſſe of the Law, that the Law cannot take hold of Him, Factum ex muliere will doe us ſmall pleaſure. And He was ſo borne, ſo made of a woman; As the verity 5 Made under Law.

of His conception, is in this factum ex muliere: So the purity is in this, that it is but ex muliere, and no more; Of the Virgin alone, by the power of the HOLY GHOST, vvithout mixture of fleshly generation. By vertue whereof, no originall soile was in Him. Iust
1 Tim.1 9. borne He was, and Iusto non est lex posita, No law for the Iust, no law could touch Him. And so we, never the better, for factum ex muliere.

For if one be in debt and danger of the Law, to have a Brother, of the same bloud, made of the same woman; both (as we say) lying in one belly, will little availe him, except he will also come under the Law, that is, become his Surety, and undertake for him. And such was our Col 2.14. estate. As Debtors vve vvere, by vertue of Chirographum contra nos, The hand-writing that was against us. Which was our Bond, and vve had forfeited it. And so, factus ex muliere, to us, vvithout factus sub Lege, vvould have beene to small purpose.

No remedy therefore, He must be new made; made againe once more. And so Hee was, cast in a new mould; and at His second making, made under the Law; Vnder which if Hee had not beene made, we had beene marred; even quite undone for ever, if this had not beene done for us too. Therefore, Hee became bound for us also, entered bond anew, tooke on Him, not onely our nature, but our Debt; our Nature, and Condition both. Nature, as men; Condition, as sinfull men; expressed in the words following, [Them that were under the Law:] for that was our Condition. There had indeed beene no capacitie in Him, to doe this, if the former had not gone before, factum ex muliere; if Hee had not beene, as vvee, made of a woman: But the former vvas for this; Made of a woman Hee vvas, that Hee might bee made under the Law: Being ex muliere, Hee might then become sub Lege, which before Hee could not, but then Hee might and did: And so this still is the fuller.

Gal.5.3. And when did Hee this? when was He made under the Law? Even then, when Hee was Circumcised. For this doth Saint Paul testifie, in the third of the next Chapter; Behold, I Paul testifie unto you, whosoever is circumcised, Factus est debitor universæ Legis, He becomes a debtour to the whole Law. At His Circumcision then, He entred Bond anew with us; and in signe that so Hee did, Hee shed then a few drops of His bloud, whereby Hee signed the Bond (as it were) and gave those few drops then, tanquam arrham universi sanguinis effundendi, as a pledge or earnest, that when the fulnesse of time came, He would be readie to shed all the rest; as He did. For I would not have you mistake, though we speake of this, [sub Lege,] being under the Law, in the termes of a Debt sometimes: yet the truth is, this debt of ours was no money debt; we were not sub Lege pecuniariâ, but Capitali: and the debt of a Capitall Law is Death: And under that, under Death Hee vvent, and that the worst death Law had to inflict, even the Death of the Crosse, the most bitter, reproachfull, cursed death of the Crosse. So that upon the matter, factus sub Lege, and factus in Cruce, come both to one; one amounts to as much as the other. Well, this He did undertake for us at His Circumcision: and therefore then, and not till then, He had His name given Him, the name of IESVS
Luke 2.21. a SAVIOVR. For then tooke He on Him the Obligation to save us. And looke what then Col.2.14. at His Circumcision He undertooke, at His Passion He paid even to the full: and having paid it, delevit Chirographum, cancelled the sentence of the Law, that till then was of record, and stood in full force against us.

Howbeit, all this was but one part of the Law; But He was made sub Lege universâ, under the whole Law; and that not by His death only, but by His life too. The one halfe of the Law, (that is, the Directive part,) He was made under that, and satisfied it, by the Innocencie of His life, without breaking so much as one jot or title of the Law: and so answered that part (as it might be the Principall.) The other halfe of the Law, which is the Penaltie: He was under that part also, and satisfied it, by suffering a vvrongfull Death, no vvay deserved, or due by Him; and so answered that (as it might be the Forfeiture.) So He was made under both, under the whole Law. Satisfying the Principall, there was no reason He should be lyable to the forfeiture, and penaltie: yet, under that Hee was also. And all, that the vvhole Law might bee satisfied fully, by His being under both parts; and so no part of it light upon us.

These two then, (1 Made of a woman, 2 Made under the Law,) yee see, are two severall makings, and both very requisite. Therefore, Either hath a severall Feast, they divide vide this Solemnitie betweene them. Six dayes a peece, to Either; as the ſeverall moities of this fulneſſe of time. This day, Verbum caro factum, The Word made fleſh: That day, Ioh.1.14. Him that knew no Sinne, Hee made Sinne, (that is) made Him undertake to be handled as a 2 Cor.5.21. Sinner, to be under the Law, and to endure what the Law could lay upon Him. And ſo now, the thing ſent is full: and fully ſent, becauſe made: and fully made, becauſe made once and twice over: fully made ours, becauſe fully united to us. Made of a woman as well as we: Made under the Law as deepe as we: Both ex muliere, and ſub Lege. So of our nature (of a woman,) that of our condition alſo (under the Law:) So, fully united to us in nature, and condition both.

And ſo we are come to the full meaſure of His ſending. And, that we are come to the full, ye ſhall plainly ſee, by the overflowing, by that which we receive from this fulneſſe; which is Verſ.5. the latter part of the verſe, and is our fulneſſe, even the fulneſſe of all that we can deſire. For, if we come now to aske, For whom, is all this adoe, This Sending, This making, over and over againe? It is for us. So is the concluſion, ut nos, that we might from this fulneſſe, receive the full of our wiſh. For in theſe two behinde, 1 Redemption, and 2 Adoption; to be redeemed, and to be adopted, are the full of all, we can wiſh our ſelves.

The tranſcendent Diviſion, of Good and Evill, is it, that comprehendeth all. And here it is. Our deſire can extend it ſelfe no further than to be rid of all evill, and to attaine all that good is. By theſe two, (being redeemed, and being adopted) we are made partakers of them both: To be redeemed from under the Law, is to be quit of all Evill. To receive the Adoption of children, is to be ſtated in all that is Good. For, all Evill is, in being under the Law, from whence we are redeemed; and, all Good, in being inveſted, in the heavenly Inheritance, whereunto we are adopted. Thus ſtood the caſe with us: Aliens we were from GOD, his Covenant, and his Epheſ.2.12. Kingdome: More than that, Priſoners we were, faſt layed up under the Law. From this latter we are Freed: of the former we are ſeazed: And what would we more?

Onely, this you ſhall obſerve, that in the Idiom of the Scriptures it is uſuall; two points being ſet downe, when they are reſumed againe, to begin with the later, and ſo end with the former. So is it here, At the firſt, made of a woman, made under the Law. At the reſuming, He begins with the later, made under the Law, That he might redeeme them, that were under the Law. And then comes to the former, made of a woman, made the Son of man, That we by adoption might be made the Sons of GOD. But, this we are to marke, it is He that is at all the coſt and paine: and we, that have the benefit by it. At the redeeming it is, Vt Ille: At the receiving it is, Vt Nos.

Briefly of either: And firſt, of our Redeeming. Redeeming (as the word giveth it) is a ſecond 6 buying, or buying backe of a thing, before aliened or ſold. Ever, a former ſale is preſuppoſed That he might redeeme them before it. And ſuch a thing there had gone before. A kinde of alienation had formerly been, that were under the Law. whereby we had made away our ſelves, (for, a ſale I cannot call it, it was for ſuch a trifle:) Our Nature aliened in ADAM, for the forbidden fruit; a matter of no moment. Our Perſons likewiſe; daily we our ſelves alien them, for ſome trifling pleaſure, or profit; matters not much more worth. And, when we have thus paſſed our ſelves away, by this Selling our ſelves under Rom.7.14. ſin, the Law ſeazeth on us, and under it we are συγκεκλεισμένοι (Chap.III.v.23.) even lockt up, as it were, in a Dungeon, tyed faſt with the cords of our ſins, (Pro.V.v.22.) The ſentence paſſed on us, and we waiting but for execution. What evill is there not, in this eſtate, and on every ſoule that is in it? Well then, the firſt Vt, the firſt end is, To get us rid from under this eſtate.

He did it: Not by way of entreaty, ſtep in and begge our pardon: That would not ſerve. Sold we were, and bought we muſt be, A price muſt be laid downe for us. To get us from under the Law, it was not a matter of Interceſſion, to ſue for it, and have it. No, He muſt Purchaſe it, and pay for it. It was a matter of Redemption.

And, in Redemption or a Purchaſe, we looke to the Price. For if it be at any eaſie rate, it is ſo much the better. But with a high price, He Purchaſed us; it coſt Him deare to bring it about. Non auro, nec argento; Neither of them would ſerve; At an higher rate it was, even Pretioſo 1 Pet.1.18,19. ſanguine. His precious bloud was the price we ſtood Him in. Which He payed, when Hee gave his life a ranſome for many. Matth.20.28.

It ſtood thus betweene Him and us, in this point of Redemption. Here are certaine malefactors under the Law, to ſuffer, to be executed: What ſay you to them? Why, I will become under the Law, ſuffer that they ſhould, take upon me their execution, upon condition, they may be quit. In effect ſo much, at his Paſsion, He ſaid, Si ergo me quæritis, (Ioan. XVIII. Verſe VI.) If you lay hold on me, if I muſt diſcharge all, Sinite hos abire, Let thoſe goe their way, Let the price I pay be their Redemption: and ſo it was. And ſo we come to be redeemed from under the Law.

And this is to be marked, that Them that were under the Law, and We that are to receive, are but one, one and the ſame perſons both: But being ſo redeemed, then we are our ſelves. Till then, the Apoſtle ſpeakes of us, in the third perſon, (Them that were under the Law,) as of ſome ſtrangers, as of men of another world, none of our owne. But now being redeemed, the ſtyle changeth. He ſpeaketh of us, in the firſt perſon ut Nos, that We: For, till now, we were not our owne, we were not our ſelves; but now we are: Till this, it was the old yeare ſtill with us; but with the new yeare commeth our new eſtate.

7 That we might receive the Adoption of Children.

Being thus redeemed, we are got from under the Law: and that is much. Till a partie come to be once under it, and feele the weight of it, he ſhall never underſtand this aright; but then he ſhall. And if any have beene under it, hee knowes what it is, and how great a benefit to be got thence. But is this all? No, He leaves us not here; but to make the meaſure compleat, yea, even to flow over, He gives us not over, when He had rid us out of this wretched eſtate, till He have brought us to an eſtate, as good as he himſelfe is in. After our Redemption, we ſtood but as Priſoners inlarged; that was all: But ſtill we were as ſtrangers; no part nor portion in GOD, or His Kingdome: nor no reaſon, we ſhould hope for any. He now goeth one ſtep further, vvhich is the higheſt and furtheſt ſtep of all. For further than it he cannot goe.

That we might receive the Adoption, (that is) from the eſtate of Priſoners condemned, be tranſlated into the eſtate of Children Adopted. Of Adopted: for, of Naturall, we could not: That is His peculiar alone, and He therein only above us, but elſe, fully to the joynt fruition of all that He hath, which is fully aſmuch as wee could deſire. And this is our Fieri out of His Factum ex muliere. We made the Sonnes of GOD, as He the Sonne of Man; We made partakers of His Divine, as He of our Humane nature. To purchaſe our pardon, to free us from death, and the Lawes ſentence, this ſeemed a ſmall thing to Him: yet this is Lex hominis. Mans goodneſſe goeth no farther; and gracious is the Prince that doth but ſo much. For, who ever heard of a condemned man, Adopted afterward; or that thought it not enough and enough, if he did but ſcape with his life? So farre then to exalt His bounty, to that fulneſſe; as Pardon, and Adopt both, Non eſt Lex hominis hæc; No ſuch meaſure amongſt men; Zelus Domini Exercituum, The zeale of the Lord of Hoſts, was to performe this: The fulneſſe of the God-head dwelt in Him, that brought this to paſſe.

2 Sam. 7. 19.
Eſay 9. 7.

For, (to ſpeake of adopting:) Wee ſee it daily; No father adopts, unleſſe Hee be orbe, have no childe; or if he have one, for ſome deepe diſlike have caſt him off. But GOD had a SONNE, The brightneſſe of His Glory; The true character of His Subſtance. And no diſpleaſure there vvas: No, In quo complacitum eſt, In vvhom He vvas abſolutely well pleaſed: yet vvould Hee, by adoption, for all that, bring many Sonnes to Glory. Is not this full on His part?

Hebr. 2. 10.

We ſee againe, no Heire will endure to heare of Adoption, nay, nor divide his Inheritance, no, not vvith his naturall Brethren. Then, that the Heire of all things, ſhould admit joynt Heires to the Kingdome Hee vvas borne to; and that admit them not out of ſuch, as vvere neere him, but from ſuch as vvere ſtrangers, yea, ſuch as had beene condemned men under the Law; Is not this full on His part? To purchaſe us, and to purchaſe for us, both at once? And not to doe this for us alone, but to aſſure it to us: For, as his Father, (in this Verſe,) ſends Him; So, (in the next Verſe,) Hee ſends the Spirit of His Sonne, to give us ſeiſin of this our Adoption: whereby vvee now call Him, the Iewes Abba, the Gentiles Pater, as Children all, and He our Father, which is the privilege of the Adoption, vvee here receive.

Hebr. 1. 3.
Rom. 8. 17.

And now are we come to the fulneſſe indeed. For this Adoption, is the fulneſſe of our option: We cannot extend; We, our wiſh; or He, His love and goodneſſe any further. For, what can vve aske, or He give more, ſeeing in giving this, He giveth all He is worth? By this time, it is full Sea: All the bankes are filled. It is now as EZEKIELS waters that Ezek. 47. 3, 4, 5.

he ſaw flow from under the threſhold of the Temple: that tooke him to the ankles firſt, then to the knees, after to the loynes; at laſt, ſo high riſen, there was no more paſſage.

1. From the fulneſſe of His Compaſsion, He ſent to releaſe us: 2. From the fulneſſe of His Love, He ſent His Sonne: 3. In the fulneſſe of Humility, Hee ſent Him made: 4. Made of a Woman, to make a full union vvith our nature: 5. Made under the Law, to make the union yet more perfectly full with our ſinfull condition: 6. That we might obtaine a full deliverance, from all Evill, by being redeemed: 7. And a full eſtate of all the Ioy and Glory of his heavenly inheritance, by being Adopted. So, there is fulneſſe of all hands. And ſo much for the fulneſſe of the Benefit, we receive.

Now, for the fulneſſe of the Dutie, vvee are to performe this day. For, in the fulneſſe of time, all things are to be full. Plenitudo temporis, tempus plenitudinis. And ſeeing GOD hath ſuffered us to live, to ſee the yeare run about, to this plenitudo temporis: if it be ſo on GODS part; meet alſo, it be ſo on Ours: and that we be not empty, in this fulneſſe of time. It is not fit, if He be at the brinke, that we be at the bottom. But, as we be vvilling, to yeeld Him of ours againe; of our dutie (I meane:) that it, to Him, in a meaſure and proportion be like full; as his Bounty hath been full above meaſure toward us. That ſo from us, and on our parts, it may be plenitudo temporis, or tempus plenitudinis, the fulneſſe of time, or time of fulneſſe, chooſe you vvhether.

1. And a time of fulneſſe it will be, (I know) in a ſenſe: of fulneſſe of bread, of fulneſſe of bravery, of fulneſſe of ſport and paſtime: and this it may be. And it hath beene ever, a joyfull time in appearance, for it ſhould be ſo. With the joy (ſaith Eſay, a verſe or two before Puer natus eſt nobis, unto us a Childe is borne) that men rejoyce with, in harveſt: Not to goe from our Text here, With the joy of men that are come out of priſon, have ſcaped the Law; With the joy of men that have got the reverſion of a goodly heritage. Onely, that vve forget not the principall; that this outward joy eat not up, evacuate not our ſpirituall joy, proper to the Feaſt: that vve have in minde, in the middeſt of our mirth, the cauſe of it, CHRISTS ſending, and the benefits that come thereby. And it ſhall bee a good ſigne unto us, if vvee can thus rejoyce, if this our joy can be full, if we can make a ſpirituall bleſſing the object of our mirth. Beatus populus, qui ſcit jubilationem, Bleſſed is the people, that can rejoyce on this manner. Eſay 9.3. Pſa.89.15.

And after our joy-fulneſſe, or fulneſſe of joy, our fulneſſe of thankes, or thanke-fulneſſe, is to enſue: For, with that fulneſſe, we are to celebrate it likewiſe. Our mindes firſt, and then our mouthes, to be filled with bleſſing, and praiſe, and thankes to Him, that hath made our times not to fall into thoſe emptie ages of the world, but to fall within this fulneſſe of time, which ſo many Kings and Prophets deſired to have lived in, but fell ſhort of; and lived then, when the times were full of ſhadowes, and promiſes, and nothing elſe. How inſtantly they longed to have held ſuch a Feaſt, to have kept a Chriſtmas, it is evident by David's Inclina cælos, by Eſay's Vtinam diſrumpas Cælos, Bow the Heavens, and Breake the Heavens: How much (I ſay) they longed for it: And therefore, that vve make not light account of it. 2 Luke 10.24. Pſal.144.5. Eſay 64.1.

To render our thankes then, and to remember to doe it fully, To forget none: To Him that was ſent, and to Him that Sent; Sent his Sonne, in this; the Spirit of his Sonne, in the next verſe. To begin vvith Oſculamini Filium, it is the firſt duty injoyned us this day, to kiſſe the Babe new borne, that when his Father vvould ſend Him, ſaid, Ecce venio, ſo readily: and vvhen he vvould make Him, was content vvith Corpus aptaſti mihi, to have a body made Him, meet for Him to ſuffer in: vvho vvillingly yeelded to be our SHILO; to this ἀπόστολον here; yea, to be not only CHRIST, but an Apoſtle for us, (Hebr. III. v. 1.) even the Apoſtle of our profeſsion. Pſal.2.12. Pſal.40.7. Gen.49.10.

And not to Him that was ſent and made alone: but to the FATHER that ſent Him, and to the HOLY GHOST that made Him, (as by whom He was conceived.) To the FATHER, for his miſsion; The SONNE, for his Redemption; The HOLY GHOST, for his Adoption; For, by Him it is wrought. He that made Him the Sonne of man, doth likewiſe regenerate us, to the ſtate of the Sonnes of God. And this for our thankfulneſſe.

3. And to theſe two, (to make the meaſure full) to joyne, the fulneſſe of dutie, even vvhatſoever dutifull minded perſons may yeeld to a bountifull minded and a bountifull handed Benefactor. And with this to beginne, to conſecrate this firſt day of this fulneſſe of time: even with our ſervice to Him at the full; which is then at the full, when no part is miſſing: when all our duties of preaching, and praying, of hymnes, of offering, of Sacrament, and all, meet together. No fulneſſe there is of our Liturgie, or publike ſolemne Service, without the Sacrament. Some part; yea, the chiefe part is wanting, if that be wanting. But our thankes are ſurely not full, without the Holy Euchariſt, which is by interpretation, Thankſgiving it ſelfe. Fully we cannot ſay, Quid retribuam Domino? but wee muſt anſwer, Calicem ſalutaris accipiam, we will take the cup of ſalvation, and with it in our hands give thankes to Him, render Him our true Euchariſt, or reall Thankſgiving indeed. In which Cup is the Bloud, not onely of our redemption, of the Covenant, that freeth us from the Law, and maketh the Deſtroyer paſſe over us: but of our Adoption, of the New Teſtament alſo, which entitles us, and conveyes unto us (Teſtament-wiſe, or by way of Legacie) the eſtate we have in the joy and bliſſe of his heavenly Kingdome, whereto wee are adopted. We are then made partakers of Him, and with Him of both theſe His benefits. We there are made to drinke of the Spirit, by which we are ſealed to the day of our Redemption and Adoption both. So that, our freeing from under the Law, our inveſtiture into our new adopted ſtate, are not fully conſummate without it.

Epheſ.4.30.

And what? Shall this be all? No, when this is done, there is allowance of twelve dayes more, for this fulneſſe of time: that we ſhrinke not up our dutie then into this day alone, but in the reſt alſo remember, to redeeme ſome part of the day, to adopt ſome houre at the leaſt, to bethinke our ſelves of the duty, the Time calleth to us for: that ſo, we have not IOBS dies vacuos, no day quite empty in this fulneſſe of time. Hereof aſſuring our ſelves, that what we doe in this fulneſſe of time, will have full acceptance at His hands. It is the time of His Birth, which is ever a time, as accepted, ſo of accepting; wherein, what is done, will be acceptably taken to the full: Fully accepted, and fully rewarded by Him, of whoſe fulneſſe we all receive: With this condition, of grace for grace, ever, one grace for another.

Ioh.1.16.

And ſo, growing from grace to grace, finally from this fulneſſe, wee ſhall come to be partakers of another yet behinde, to which we aſpire. For, all this is but the fulneſſe of time: But that, the fulneſſe of eternitie, when time ſhall be run out, and his glaſſe emptie, Et tempus non erit amplius; which is, at His next ſending. For yet once more ſhall GOD ſend Him, and Hee come againe. At which comming, we ſhall then indeed receive the fulneſſe of our Redemption, not from the Law (that we have already,) but from Corruption, to which our bodies are yet ſubject; and receive the full fruition of the Inheritance, whereto we are here but adopted. And then it will be perfect, compleat, abſolute fulneſſe indeed, when we ſhall all be filled with the fulneſſe of Him that filleth all in all. For ſo ſhall all be, when nothing ſhall be wanting in any: for GOD ſhall be all in all. Not as here He is, ſomething, (and, but ſomething) in every one; but then, omnia in omnibus. And then, the meaſure ſhall be ſo full, as it cannot enter into us, we cannot hold it: We muſt enter into it; Intra in gaudium Domini tui.

A SERMON PREACHED

before the KINGS MAIESTIE, at White Hall, on Tuesday, the XXV. of December, A. D. MDCX.
being CHRISTMAS day.

LVKE Chap. II. Ver. X, XI.

The Angell sayd unto them, Be not afraid, for behold, I bring you good tidings, of great ioy, which shall be to all people.
That, there is borne, unto you, this day a SAVIOVR, which is CHRIST, the LORD, in the Citie of DAVID.

THere is a Word in this Text, and it is Hodiè, by vertue whereof, this Day may seeme to challenge a speciall propertie in this Text, and this Text in this Day. CHRIST was borne, is true any day: but, this day CHRIST was borne, never, but to day onely. For, of no day in the yeare can it be said, Hodiè natus, but of this. By which word, the HOLY GHOST may seeme to have marked it out, and made it the peculiar Text of the day.

Then, it will not be amisse, Donec cognominatur hodiè, (as the Apostle speaketh) while it is called, to day, to heare it. To morrow, the word Hodiè will be lost: This day, and not any day else, it is in season. Let us then heare it this day, which we can heare no day besides. Heb.3.13.

IT is then the first report, the very first newes, that came (as this day) of that, which maketh this day, so high a Feast; the Birth of CHRIST. 1

It came by an Angel then: No Man was meet to be the messenger of it. And looke how it came then, so it should come still; and none but an Angel bring it: as, more fit for the tongues of Angels than of men. Yet since, GOD hath allowed sinfull men, to be the Reporters of it at the second hand; and the newes never the worse; for that Good newes is good newes and welcome, by any, though the person be but even a foule Leper that brings it. Yet, that the meanenesse of the messenger offend us not, ever we are to remember this; Be the party who he will, that brings it, the newes of CHRISTS Birth, is a message for an Angel. Dixit Angelus. 2 Reg.7.9.

This had been newes for the best Prince in the Earth. That these Illis here, these parties were Shepheards, that this Message came to them, needs not seeme strange: It found none else (at the time) to come to: The Angel was glad to find any to tell it to; even to tell it the first he could meet withall: None were then awake, none in case to receive it, but a sort of poore Shepheards; and to them he told it. 2 Dixit illis.

Yet, it fell not out amisse, that Shepheards they were; the newes fitted them well. It well agreed, to tell Shepheards of the yeaning of a strange Lambe: such a Lambe, as should take away the sinnes of the world: such a Lambe, as they might send to the Ruler of the world for a present, Mitte Agnum Dominatori terræ: ESAY'S Lamb. Or (if ye will) to tell Shepheards, Ioh.1.29. Esa.16.1.

Ezek. 34 2 3. heards, of the birth of a Shepheard; EZEKIELS Shepheard: Ecce ſuſcitabo vobis
a 1. Pet. 5 4. PASTOREM; Behold, I will raiſe you a Shepheard: the [a] Chiefe Shepheard, the [b] Great b Heb. 13. 20. Shepheard, and the [c] Good Shepheard, that gave His life for his flocke. And ſo, it was not unc Ioh. 10. 11. fit newes, for the Perſons to whom it came.

3. Dixit, Evangelizo. For the Manner: the Angell delivereth it Evangelizando, Church-wiſe, (and that was a ſigne, this place ſhould ever be the Exchange for this newes:) Church-wiſe (I ſay) for he doth it by a Sermon: heere at this Verſe: and then by Hymne or Antheme after, at the XIIII. Verſe. A Sermon: the Angell himſelfe calls it ſo, Evangelizo vobis, I come to Evangelize, to preach you a Goſpell: that firſt. And preſently after he had done his Sermon, there is the Hymne, Gloria in excelſis, taken up by the Queere of Heaven. An Angell makes the one: A multitude of Angells ſing the other. The whole Service of this day, the Sermon, the Antheme, by Angells, all.

4. Evangelizo gaudium magnum. Now, the end of both Sermon and Antheme, and of the Angells, in publiſhing it, and of the ſhepheards, and us, in hearing it, is gaudium, Ioy, for the Benefit, and Honour; Gaudium magnum, great Ioy, for the great Benefit, and great Honour vouchſafed our Nature, and us, this day. Ioy, is in the Text, and if Ioy be in the time, it is no harme: We keepe the Text, if we hold the Time with Ioy, For ſo the Angell doth warrant us to hold it.

The Diviſion Of this Angelicall, or Evangelicall meſſage, or (as not I, but the Angell calleth it)
1. Sermon; theſe two Verſes, I have read, are a part. Whereof the former is but an Ecce, exci-
2. ting them to heare it, by magnifying the meſſage, as well worth their hearing, Be not afraid, for behold I bring you good tidings, of great Ioy, which ſhall be to all people. The later, is the very meſſage it ſelfe, That, there is borne, unto you, this day, a SAVIOVR, which is CHRIST the LORD, in the City of David.

1. In the former, are theſe points: 1. Feare not, (it is no ill newes, I bring you) 2. Nay, it is good newes. 3. Good, for it is newes of joy. 4. Ioy, and that no ordinary, but great joy. 5. Not to ſome few, but to the whole people. 6. And not toti populo to all one people, but omni populo, to all people whatſoever. 7. And them, not for the preſent, but Quod erit omni populo, that is, and ſo ſhall be, to all, as long as there ſhall be any people, upon earth. And, by vertue of this [Quod erit,] to us, here, this day. Ecce, Behold, ſuch is the newes I bring.

2. The meſſage it ſelfe. In the later, the Meſſage it ſelfe. The ſumme whereof is, the Birth of a Childe, A Childe is borne. Three things are propoſed of Him. 1. This Childe is a SAVIOVR. 2. A Saviour, which is CHRIST. 3. Chriſt the LORD, Chriſtus dominus. For, every Saviour is not CHRIST, nor every Chriſt CHRISTVS DOMINVS, CHRIST the LORD, or the LORD CHRIST. He, is all three.

1. The Names.

2. The circumſtances. Then have we beſides, three circumſtances, of the [1] Perſons, [2] Time, and [3] Place. 1. The Perſons, for whom all this is: twice repeated; [1] Evangelizo vobis in the firſt Verſe, [2] Natus vobis in the ſecond. But this, I make ſome doubt of, whether it be a Circumſtance or no: I rather hold it a principall part of the Subſtance, as, the word of conveyance, whereby it paſſeth to us. And ſure, there is no joy either in Evangelizo, the Meſſage; or Natus, the Birth, without it; without Vobis. But, if the Meſſage, and the Birth it ſelfe both, be ours; then it is Gaudium magnum indeed. Specially, if we adde (2.) the Time when, not many daies hence, but even this very day. And (3.) the Place where, that it is in no remote Region farre hence, but in the Citie of DAVID, even here hard by.

1. The perſons.

2. The Time.

3. The place.

3. Our duty reciprocall. And then laſtly in a word; what our parts are to performe, to theſe two parts, [1] this dayes Meſſage, and [2] this dayes Birth of our SAVIOVR, CHRIST, the LORD.

Be not afraid.

They were afraid. HEre is a ſtop, that the Meſſage cannot proceed: For the ſight of the Meſſenger, hath almoſt marred the hearing of the Meſſage. The parties, to whom it comes, be in ſuch feare, as they be not in caſe to receive it. They were afraid, and that ſore afraid (as is ſaid in the Verſe before) at the ſight of the Angel, that came with the newes.

So were others And this was not the caſe of theſe poore men onely: Others, and other manner of people were ſo, as well as they. This Goſpell of Saint Luke is ſcarce begun; we are yet but a little little way in the ſecond Chapter; and we have already, three Noli timere's in it: and all, as here, at the comming of an Angell. 1 Feare not Zacharie, (Chap. I. 13.) So he was afraid. 2 Feare not Marie, (Chap. I. 30) So, ſhe was afraid. 3 And now, Feare not theſe here, That it ſeemes to be generall, to feare, at an Angel's appearing.

What was it? It was not the feare of an evill conſcience: They were about no harme. Zacharie was at Church at his Office; The bleſſed Virgin (I doubt not) bleſſedly imployed: Theſe here, doing their dutie; watching over their flockes by night: Yet feared, all. What ſhould the matter be? It is a plaine ſigne, our Nature is fallen from her originall: Heaven, and we are not in the termes, we ſhould be: not the beſt of us all. Of what not. Of what.

Angels are the Meſſengers of Heaven. Meſſengers ever come with tydings; but whether good or bad, we cannot tell. Here comes an Angell with newes from Heaven: what newes he brings, we know not, and therefore we feare, becauſe we know not. Which ſhewes, all is not well betweene Heaven and us; that upon every comming of an Angell, we promiſe our ſelves no better newes from thence; but ſtill are afraid of the meſſages and meſſengers that comes from that place. Why of the Angel.

That the Meſſage then may proceed, this feare muſt be removed. In a troubled water, no face will well be ſeene: nor, by a troubled mind, no meſſage received, till it be ſetled. To ſettle them then for it; no other way, no other word to begin with, but Nolite timere, feare not, and that is ever the Angels beginning. Such is our infirmity, ever he muſt begin with theſe two words, Noli timere, feare not: And ſo he doth ſeven times in this Goſpell. Be not afraid.

But, feare will not be caſt out with a couple of words, till they ſee ſome reaſon to quiet them. And no better reaſon, than to ſhew, they have no reaſon to feare. For, feare is the expectation of evill, and there is no evill toward them: and ſo they have no reaſon to feare; quòd trepidaverunt timore, vbi non erat timor. As if he ſhould ſay; Angels have come with weeping newes, as Iud. II. ver. 5. If I were ſuch an one, if I came with ſad tidings, ye had reaſon, ye might feare. But now, your terrour groweth out of error. You are miſtaken in me, I am no ſuch Angell; I am Angelus Evangelizans, an Angell with a Goſpell, one that comes with no bad newes. Feare not then. There is no evill toward. 1 For, no ill tydings. Pſal. 53. 5.

No evill: and that were enough for feare not. But here is a further matter; Not onely privativè, I bring no ill; but poſitivè, I bring you good newes. And good newes is Nolite timere, and ſomewhat beſides, (that is) Feare not, but, be of good cheere. They be two degrees plainly, though one be inferred of the other. Feare no ill, there is none to feare; there is no ill, nay there is good towards. For, good newes is good, in that it repreſents the good it ſelfe to us before it come. It is but words: true: But ſuch words made IACOB revive againe, when he was more than halfe dead, even the good newes of IOSEPHS welfare. If I might but heare good tidings (ſaith David, when his bones were broken) it would make me well againe: That SALOMON ſayd well, A good meſſenger is a good medicine. 2 But good tidings. Gen. 45. 17. Pſal. 51. 8. Pro. 13. 17.

Specially, this here which is ſo good, as it carrieth away the name from the reſt, to be called The Goſpel, or, The glad tydings, as if none ſo glad, nay, none glad at all without it. It is (ſaith the Apoſtle) odor ſuavitatis, a comfortable ſweet ſavour. It is (ſaith the Wiſe man) dulcedo animæ, & ſanitas oſſium, the ſweetneſſe of the ſoule, the very health of the bones. It is ſuch (ſaith the Prophet) as the lipps are precious, and the feet beautifull, of them that bring it, that a Saviour is borne, as by whom, things in heaven and things in earth, men and Angels (which were in feare one of another) are ſet at peace, and love: and Love caſteth out feare, giveth the true Noli timere. 2. Cor. 21. 5. Pro. 16. 24. Eſay 52. 7. Col. 1. 20. 1. Ioh. 14. 18.

Good newes of joy: For, of good newes, there are more ſorts than one. Good newes it had been, if it had been but Evangelizo vobis Spem. Newes of good Hope: that had been enough, for Nolite timere. This is more, it is of joy. I wot well, there is a joy in hope, Spe gaudentes, ſaith the Apoſtle: But that joy is not full, till the fulneſſe of time come. Nor it is not perfect, for it is allaied ſomewhat, with an unpleaſing mixture, which is Spes differtur, and that (as the Wiſe man ſaith) affligit animam: Hope deferred afflicteth the ſoule. Gaudium Spei is nothing to Gaudium Rei: the hope de futuro, of a thing to come hereafter, nothing to the actuall fruition of a thing preſent. 3 Tydings of joy. Rom. 12, 13. Ioh. 16. 24. Gal. 4. 4. Pro. 13. 12.

And indeed, this dayes newes, it was ever Evangelium Spei: ever in the future tenſe, before. Even the very laſt before this, to the bleſſed Virgin, Ecce concipies, Thou ſhalt conceive, Luk. 1. 31.

ceive : Shalt. So it was yet to come. This is the firſt in the preſent tenſe : Not, is to be borne, is to be ſent, is to come, but, Natus eſt, Miſſus eſt, Venit, is borne, is ſent, is come. Hodiè, even to day, takes no time : In the City of David, not farre hence, but even hard by. This is Evangelizo gaudium : This is joy indeed.

4 Of great Ioy.

But even in Ioy, there be diverſe degrees : All are not of one ſize : Some there are leſſer ; ſome (as this here) Gaudium magnum. The fire is, as the fuell is ; and the joy is as the matter is. There is not like joy to a ſhepheard, when his Ewe brings him a Lambe, as when his Wife brings him a Sonne ; (yet that of a Lambe, is a Ioy, ſuch as it is.) But then, if that Sonne ſhould prove to be Princeps Paſtorum, the Cheeſe Shepheard in all the land, that were ſomewhat more : But then, if he ſhould prove to be a CYRVS, or a DAVID, a Prince, then certainely it were another manner of joy, Gaudium magnum indeed. As the matter is, ſo is the Ioy. If great the Benefit, great the Perſon, then great the Ioy. And here the Benefit is great, none greater, as much as the ſaving of us all, as much as all our lives and ſoules are worth ; therefore great. And the Perſon great, none ſo great, (it is the LORD Himſelfe) therefore primæ magnitudinis, great even as He is. Indeed ſo great it is, that the Prophet bids us plainely, remember no more former things, nor regard matters of old : This paſſeth them all, the Ioy of it puts them all downe : ſo that none of them ſhall once be mentioned with it. Therefore well ſayd the Angell, Evangelizo Gaudium magnum.

5 Ioy to the people.

And great, it may be intenſivè, in the parties themſelves : yet not great extenſivè, nor extend it ſelfe to many, not be gaudium magnum Populo. Yes, even that way alſo it is great ; it is publike joy, it is joy to the people. And, well fare that Ioy where it is merry with all. It is added purpoſely, this, that they might not miſtake, when he ſayd, Evangelizo vobis, he brought them good newes ; That though he brought it them ; yet not them onely, it was not appropriate to them, it was common to others : They had their parts in it, but ſo ſhould others have no leſſe than they. And every good ſhepheard, will like it the better for that ; will be pro grege, and ſtill preferre the joy of the whole flocke.

Eſay 9.3.

In other joyes, it fals out as Eſay tells, Multiply the Nation, and ye ſhall not increaſe their joy ; for, that which one winnes, another loſes : But, this Ioy, the Ioy of Puer natus eſt nobis, in it, they ſhall all rejoice before Thee, as men make merry in harveſt, and be joyfull as men that divide the ſpoile. In harveſt ; And a good Harveſt all the Countrey is the better for. At a ſpoile ; wherein every one hath his ſhare. That is gaudium Populi, And ſuch is this. Well figured, in the place of His birth, an Inne, which is domus Populi, open to all Paſſengers that will take it up ; Iuris publici, wherein every one hath right. Yea, and the moſt common part of the Inne. For, though they ſort themſelves, and have every one their ſeverall Chambers ; in the ſtable all have intereſt ; that is common. And as the Place publike, ſo is the Benefit, and ſo is the Ioy Publike of His Birth : Chriſtmas joy right ; All fare the better for this day. Salus Populi is the beſt ; and ſo is Gaudium populi too ; and every good minde will like it ſo much the better, that All the people have their part in it.

6 Ioy to all people.

And this were much, toti populo, to the whole people, if it were but one : But it is omni populo (ſay Theophylact and Beda) that is, to All people, which is a larger extent by farre. And if ye ſpeake of great joy, this is great indeed, for it is univerſall, it is as great as the world is great : when, not the Iew onely but the Gentile, nor the Gentile but the Iew, not one people, but All, keepe a feaſt. And at this word, omni populo, Nec vox hominem ſonat, It is not man that ſpeaketh now, whoſe goodneſſe commonly, when it is at the greateſt, extendeth no further but to one Nation : But with GOD it is never great, till it come to omni populo. It is but a ſmall thing (ſaith He by ESAY) to raiſe the Tribes of Iacob, or to reſtore the decayes of Iſrael : I will give thee a Light to the Gentiles, and a Salvation to the end of the world.

As we ſayd of the Inne, even now, the place of His Birth : So ſay we here, of the time of

it. It is well ſet downe by Saint Luke, to have beene at the Deſcription of the whole World ; for, that was a meet time for the SAVIOVR of the whole world to be borne : The dew of

whoſe Birth is of the wombe of the morning, (the Pſalmiſt in paſſion of joy miſplacing His words,) the meaning is, His Birth from the wombe, is as the morning dew, which watereth and refreſheth the face of the whole earth : Not Gedeon's fleece, alone, but the whole earth ;

Not

Not one part, not the Iewes only: No partition now, but [a] utraque unum, one of two: Nay, one of all: [b] all recapitulate in Himſelfe, and from Him as a Center, lines of joy drawne to all, and every part of the Circle.

[a] Epheſ. 2. 14: [b] 1. 10.

And we may not paſſe by Quod erit, which ſhall be; which not only is, but ſhall be. For by this word, we hold; It is our beſt tenure. Not only to All that then were, (then had we been out:) but that were, or ever ſhould be, to the worlds end. Omni populo, all people, is the latitude or extent: Quod erit, that ſhall be, is the longitude or continuance of the joy. Quod erit, that it ſhall be a feaſt of joy, ſo long as any people ſhall be, to hold a feaſt on the face of the earth. In a word, That ſame Evangelium æternum, that Saint IOHN ſaw in the Angels hand, wee now heare from the Angels mouth, to be preached to every nation, kindred, tongue and people, that be, or ſhall be, while the world endureth.

7 To all people that ſhall be.

Apoc. 14. 6.

So, if we reade Quod erit, with omni populo. But ſome reade gaudium, with quod erit; gaudium quod erit; and make a note of that: The joy, quod erit, that is and ſhall be. For commonly, all our earthly joy, is gaudium quod eſt, & non erit, that is, for the preſent, but continueth not; is, but ſhall not be; like the blaze of a bruſh faggot, all of a flame and out againe ſuddenly, in a moment. Gaudium quod erit, the joy that ſo is, as it ſhall be ſtill; is grounded upon the joy of this day, CHRIST and His Birth. Without which, our joy is as the joy of men in priſon, merry for a while, but within a while, ſentence of death to paſſe upon them. Without which, Extrema gaudii luctus occupat, the end of all our mirth, will be but mourning. All joy elſe is, but ſhall not be within a while: At leaſt-wiſe erit, quando non erit, A time ſhall be when it ſhall not be. Sed gaudium Meum, nemo tollet à vobis; But My joy, Mine, grounded on Me, none ſhall ever take from you; not ſickneſſe, not death it ſelfe. Other it ſhall, this it ſhall not; but, now yee ſhall, this Day, and evermore yee ſhall rejoyce in the holy comfort of it.

2 Joy that ſhal be.

Iohn 16. 22.

And this is the magnifying of the Meſſage. 1. No evill newes, Feare not. 2. Nay good, Be of good cheere. 3. Good newes of joy. 4. Of great joy. 5. Publike joy, toti Populo. 6. Vniverſall joy, omni populo. 7. Ioy to all, that are or ſhall be; And againe joy, which now is, and ſhall be ſo for ever.

Now, upon all theſe He ſetteth an Ecce, and well He may; And, that is never ſet by the HOLY GHOST, but ſuper res magnæ entitatis, upon matters of great moment. But, upon this Hill, upon the top of it, that hath ſo many aſcents, a Beacon would doe well. For looke, how many Ecce's in the Scriptures, ſo many Beacons; And betweene them, as betweene theſe, ye ſhall obſerve a good correſpondence ſtill. This Ecce here, to the laſt [a] Ecce concipies of the bleſſed Virgin; That, to Eſay's [b] Ecce concipiet Virgo; That, to Davids [c] Ecce de fructu ventris tui; That, to Abraham's [d] Ecce in ſemine tuo; and ſo up, till yee come to * Semen mulieris: There they firſt beginne, and take light one from another, till they come to the Ecce natus eſt hodiè, the Ecce of all Ecce's, the laſt and higheſt of them all. And as a Beacon ſerveth to call and ſtirre up men to have regard: ſo is this here to excite them (and in them, us all) with good attention to heare, and to heed theſe ſo great good tidings. And indeed, who is not excited with it? whoſe eye is not turned to behold this Ecce? whoſe eare ſtandeth not attent, to heare this Evangelizo? whoſe heart doth not muſe, what manner of meſſage this ſhould be?

Chap. 1. 29.

This it is then, Quòd natus eſt. The Birth of a Childe: that there is one borne this day, the cauſe of all this joy.

2 That there is borne.

There is joy at every birth. Sorrow in the travaile (ſaith our SAVIOVR;) but after the delivery, the anguiſh is no more remembred, for joy, that a man is borne into the world.

But the greater hee is that is borne, and the more beneficiall his birth, the greater adoe is made. And among men, becauſe there are none greater than Princes, and great things are looked for at their hands, their Births are ever uſed to be kept with great triumph. Pharaohs, in the Old; Herods in the New; both their Natus eſt's, dayes of feaſting.

Gen. 40. 20. Marke 6. 21.

Now of Him, that is borne here, it may truly be ſaid, Ecce major hîc, Behold a greater is borne here. One, whoſe Birth is good newes, even from the pooreſt Shepherd, to the richeſt Prince upon the earth.

Matth. 12. 24.

Who is it? Three things are ſaid of this Childe by the Angell. 1. He is a SAVIÔVR.

2. Which is CHRIST. 3. CHRIST the LORD. Three of His Titles, well and orderly inferred one of another by good conſequence. We cannot miſſe one of them; they be neceſſary all. Our method, on earth, is to begin with great: In Heaven, they begin with good firſt.

A SAVIOVR. In Verrem IV. Firſt then a SAVIOVR, that is His Name: IESVS, Soter; and in that name, His benefit, Salus, ſaving health, or Salvation. Such a name as the great Orator himſelfe ſaith of it, Soter, Hoc quantum eſt? Ita magnum eſt, ut latino uno verbo exprimi non poſsit. This name SAVIOVR is ſo great, as no one word can expreſſe the force of it.

But we are not ſo much to regard the Ecce, how great it is, as Gaudium, what joy is in it. that is the point we are to ſpeake to. And for that; men may talke what they will, but (ſure) there is no joy in the world to the joy of a man ſaved: no joy ſo great, no newes ſo welcome, as to one ready to periſh, in caſe of a loſt man, to heare of one that will ſave him. In danger of periſhing, by ſickneſſe, to heare of one will make him well againe: By ſentence of the Law, of one with a pardon to ſave his life: By enemies, of one that will reſcue, and ſet him in ſafetie. Tell any of theſe, aſſure them but of a Saviour, it is the beſt newes he ever heard in his life. There is joy in the name of a Saviour. And even this way, this Childe is a SAVIOVR too. Poteſt hoc facere, ſed hoc non eſt opus Ejus, This He can doe, but this is not His worke: a further matter there is, a greater Salvation He came for. And it may be, we need not any of theſe; we are not preſently ſicke, in no feare of the Law, in no danger of enemies. And it may be, if we were, we phanſie to our ſelves to be releeved ſome other way. But, that which He came for, that ſaving we need all; and none but He can helpe us to it. We have therefore (all) cauſe to be glad for the Birth of this SAVIOVR.

I know not how, but when we heare of ſaving, or mention of a Saviour, preſently our minde is carried to the ſaving of our skin, of our temporall ſtate, of our bodily life, and further ſaving we thinke not of. But, there is another life, not to be forgotten; and, greater the dangers; and the deſtruction there, more to be feared that of this here; and it would be well, ſometimes we were remembred of it. Beſides our skin and fleſh, a ſoule we have, and it is our better part by farre; that alſo hath need of a Saviour; that hath her deſtruction, out of which; that hath her deſtroyer, from which ſhe would be ſaved; and thoſe would be thought on. Indeed our chiefe thought and care would be for that; how to eſcape the wrath, how to be ſaved from the deſtruction to come, whither our ſinnes will certainly bring us.

Sinne it is, will deſtroy us all. And (to ſpeake of a Saviour) there is no perſon on earth hath ſo much need of a Saviour, as hath a ſinner. Nothing ſo dangerous, ſo deadly unto us, as is the ſinne in our boſome; nothing, from which we have ſo much need to be ſaved, whatſoever account we make of it. From it, commeth upon us all the evill of this life: and from it, all the evill of the life to come: in compariſon whereof, theſe here are not worth the ſpeaking of. Above all then, we need a Saviour, for our ſoules; and from our ſinnes; and from the everlaſting deſtruction, which ſinne will bring upon us in the other life, not farre from us, not from him of us, that thinketh it fartheſt off.

Then, if it be good tidings to heare of a Saviour, where it is but a matter of the loſſe of earth, or of this life here: how then, when it commeth to the loſſe of Heaven; to the danger of Hell, when our ſoule is at the ſtake, and the well-doing or undoing of it for ever? Hee that could ſave our ſoules from that Deſtroyer, were not the birth of ſuch an one good newes trow? Is not ſuch a Saviour worth the hearkening after? Is he not? It is then becauſe wee have not that ſenſe of our ſoules, and the dangers of them, that we have of our bodies: nor that feare of our ghoſtly enemies, nor that lively apprehenſion of the eternall torments of that place, and how neare we are to it, (nothing being betwixt us and it, but this poore puffe of breath which is in our noſtrils:) Our carnall part is quicke and ſenſible; our ſpirituall is dead and dull. We have not the feeling of our ſinnes, that we have of our ſickneſſe: if we had, we would heare this newes with greater cheerefulneſſe, and hold this Day of the birth of ſuch a SAVIOVR, with joy indeed. We cannot conceive it yet, this deſtruction is not neere enough to affect us. But, in noviſsimo intelliget is planè, in the end, when the Deſtroyer ſhall come, and we ſhall finde the want of a Saviour, wee ſhall plainly underſtand this, and value this benefit and the joy of it, as we ought; and finde, there is no joy in the earth to the joy of a Saviour.

Ier. 30. 24.

There

There is borne a Saviour, is the first. The Angell addeth further, A Saviour which is CHRIST. For, many Saviours had beene borne, many had GOD sent them, that at divers times had set them free from divers dangers of their enemies; MOSES, from the AEgyptians; IOSHVA, from the Canaanites; GEDEON, from the Madianites; IEPTHA, from the Ammonites; SAMPSON, from the Philistims. And indeed, the whole story of the Bible is nothing else, but a Calender of Saviours, that GOD from time to time still stirred them up.

2 Which is CHRIST.

But these all were but pettie Saviours; there was one yet behinde, that was worth them all. One, that should save His people from their Sinnes; Save, not their bodies for a time, but their soules for ever, which none of those Saviours could doe. One therefore much spoken of, wished for, and waited for, a Saviour which was CHRIST: when He came they looked for great matters, as said the Woman at the Wells side: For He was the most famous and greatest SAVIOVR of all. And this is He, A Saviour, which is CHRIST. He, of whom all the Promises made mention, and Hee the performance of them all: of whom all the Types under the Law were shadowes, and He the substance of them all: Of whom all the Prophecies ranne, and He the fulfilling of them all: He, of whom all those inferiour Saviours were the figures and fore-runners, and He the accomplishment of all, that in them was wanting. This is Hee: IACOBS [a] Shiloh, ESAYES [b] Immanuel, IEREMIES [c] Branch, DANIELS [d] Messias, ZACHARIES [e] Oriens ab alto, AGGEIS [f] Desideratus cunctis Gentibus. The Desire of all the Nations, then; and now, the Ioy of all Nations: a Saviour, which is CHRIST.

And what is meant by this terme CHRIST? A Saviour anointed; or (as in another place it is said, more agreeable to our phrase of speaking) a * Saviour sealed; a Saviour under GODS Great Seale. That is, not as those other were, Saviours raised up of a sudden, upon some occasion; to serve the turne for the present, and never heard of till they came: but a Saviour in GODS fore-counsell resolved on, and given forth, from the beginning; promised and foretold, and now signed and sent, with absolute commission and fulnesse of power, to be the perfect and compleat SAVIOVR of all.

Chap.1.27.
* Ioh.6.27.

And to be it, ex Officio; His Office, His very profession, to be one, that all may have right to repaire unto Him, and finde it at His hands. Not a Saviour incidently, as it fell out: but one, ex professo, Anointed to that end, and by vertue of His Anointing appointed, set forth, and sent into the world, to exercise this function of a SAVIOVR: Not for a time, but for ever, not to the Iewes, (as did the rest,) but even to all the ends of the earth. So runnes His Bill, [a] Venite ad me omnes, Come all: and [b] Qui ad me venerit non ejiciam foras, of them that come to me, I will cast none out. [c] Servator omnium hominum, the Saviour of all men (and as the Samaritans said of Him, [d] Servator mundi, The Saviour of the world,) of Samaritans, Iewes, Gentiles: of Kings, of Shepheards and all.

b Iohn 6.37.
d Ioh.4.42.

And there is yet more particularitie in this word CHRIST: Three Offices did GOD from the beginning erect to save His people by; and that, by three acts, (The very Heathen tooke notice of them,) 1 Purgare, 2 Illuminare, 3 Perficere. 1 Priests, to purge or expiate; 2 Prophets, to illuminate or direct them; 3 Kings, to set all right, and to keepe all right, in that perfection, which this world admitteth. And all these three had their severall Anointings. Aaron the Priest, (*Levit.*8.12.) Elisha the Prophet, (1 *Reg.*19.16.) Saul the King, (1 Sam. 10.1.) In the Saviour which is CHRIST, His will was, all should meet, that nothing in Him might want, to the perfecting of this worke. That He might be a perfect Saviour of all, He was all. A Priest, after the order of Melchisedek, (*Psal.*110.4.) A Prophet, to be heard when MOSES should hold His peace, (Deut. 18.18.) A King, to save His people, whose Name should be IEHOVA Iustitia nostra, (*Ier.*23.6.) Davids Priest, Moses Prophet, Ieremies King.

And these formerly had met double, two of them in some other; Melchisedek, King and Priest; Samuel, Priest and Prophet; DAVID, Prophet and King. Never all three, but in Him alone; and so, no perfect Christ but He: but He all, and so perfect. By His Priest-hood, to purge, expiate, and save us from our sinnes, being a propitiation to GOD for them: By His Prophecie, to illuminate and save us from the by-paths of errour, guiding our feet in the way of peace. By His Kingdome, protecting and conducting us thorow the miseries of this life, till He perfect us eternally by Himselfe in the joyes of His heavenly Kingdome. Rightly then, a Saviour which is CHRIST.

Chap.1.79.

Now, as in the Name SAVIOVR there was, ſo is there likewiſe Ioy in this Name CHRIST; and that, many wayes: 1. Firſt, that wee ſhall hang no more in expectation, We ſhall be no longer, Vincti ſpei, Hopes priſoners. He that ſhould come, is come. The promiſed SAVIOVR, The SAVIOVR, which is CHRIST, is now borne, and when ſpes becomes res, then our joy is full. 2. That now, there is a Saving Office erected; one Anointed to that end, a profeſſed SAVIOVR, to whom all may reſort. We ſhall not be to ſeeke, there is a Name given under Heaven, whereby we may be ſure of ſalvation, the Name of CHRIST. 3. That to this our ſaving, we have the joynt conſent and good will of all parties; in this Name CHRIST. CHRIST (that is) the Anointed, what perſon is He? The SONNE, the ſecond Perſon. Anointed, by whom? By the FATHER: Quem unxiſti, (Acts 4. 27.) the firſt Perſon. Anointed, with what? With the HOLY GHOST, (Acts 10. 38.) the third Perſon. So a concurrence of all Perſons in this Name; all willing and well-pleaſed, with the worke of our Salvation. 4. If we would be ſaved, we would be ſaved, unctione, by oyle, not by vineger. Et unguentum effuſum, Nomen Ejus: And His Name is CHRIST, one that ſaveth by anointing. 5. And if by Oyle, (there be hot Oyles) with a gentle lenitive Oyle. And the Oyle which He uſeth, wherewith Hee is anointed, is, the Oyle of gladneſſe. Gladneſſe therefore muſt needs goe with this Name. Which Oyle of gladneſſe is not for Himſelfe, but for us: not for His uſe, but for ours. So He ſaith Himſelfe, in His firſt Sermon at Nazareth, upon His Text out of Eſay 61.2. The anointing (this Oyle of gladneſſe) was upon Him to beſtow it upon us, and of us: Vpon them eſpecially, that through a wounded conſcience, were troubled with the ſpirit of heavineſſe, to turne their heavineſſe into joy. Glad then; that He is come, that by His Office is to ſave: and come with the good liking of all: to ſave us by Oyle: and that, the oyle of gladneſſe.

Zach. 9. 12.

Cant. 1. 2.

3 Chriſt the LORD.

And yet to make our joy more full, the Angell addeth the third. A SAVIOVR which is CHRIST; CHRIST the LORD. For neither is this all. He is not CHRIST onely. We muſt not ſtay there. For, the Name CHRIST will agree, hath beene, and may be imparted to others beſides. Many a King, in Scripture, hath had the honour to carry the Name of CHRIST; But with a difference. The King, Chriſtus Domini, the Lords Chriſt: He Chriſtus Dominus, the Lord Chriſt, or Chriſt the Lord. Conſider then, how great this Childe is, whoſe Anointed, Kings themſelves are. For if they be Chriſti Domini, the Lords Anointed; His they are, for He is the LORD. The LORD abſolute, without any addition; yee may put it to what yee will, LORD of men and Angels, LORD of Heaven and Earth, and all the Hoſts of them, Dominus Chriſtorum, and Dominus Dominorum, LORD paramount over all.

Hebr. 7. 4.

But, why The LORD? Becauſe this Name of CHRIST will ſort with men. Nay, as He is CHRIST (that is Anointed) He is Man only. It is His Name as Man, for GOD cannot be Anointed. But He that ſhould ſave us would be more than Man; and ſo, more than CHRIST. Indeed, CHRIST cannot ſave us. He that muſt ſave us muſt be the LORD. For, ſuch a SAVIOVR it behooveth us to have, as might not begin the worke of our Salvation, and leave it in the middeſt, but goe through with it, and make an end too; which the former Saviours could not doe. Formerly, ever their complaint was, that their Saviours, their Chriſts died ſtill, and left them to ſeeke: their Kings, and Prieſts, and Prophets dropt away ſtill; for, they were not ſuffered to endure by reaſon of death. But this SAVIOVR, this CHRIST, becauſe He is the LORD, endureth for ever, hath an everlaſting Prieſthood, Kingdome and Prophecie, and ſo is able perfectly to ſave them, that come to GOD by Him. This is one reaſon, why, hither we muſt come at the laſt, to CHRIST the LORD, and till we be at it, we be not where we ſhould. Elſe, our Saviours will die, and leave us deſtitute.

Hebr. 7. 23, 24.

But, the maine reaſon is ſet downe by Eſay, Ego ſum, Ego ſum, (ſaith GOD Himſelfe) & præter me, non eſt Servator: It is I, I that am the SAVIOVR, I am, and beſides Me, there is no Saviour. None indeed, no true Saviour, but the LORD. All other are ſhort, Vana ſalus hominis, ſaith the Pſalme, Mans ſalvation is vaine, any ſalvation is vaine, if it bee not the LORDS. 1. Thoſe Chriſts, that were not the LORD, could ſave but the bodie, and not one of them quicken his owne ſoule: CHRIST, that is the LORD, can ſave ſoules and bodies, His owne and others both. 2. Thoſe Chriſts, that were not the LORD, could ſave but from carnall enemies, with armes of fleſh: Hee, from our ghoſtly enemies, even ſpirituall wickedneſſes in heavenly places, from Abaddon the great Deſtroyer of the bottomleſſe pit.

Eſay 43. 11.

3. They,

3. They, that were not the LORD, could ſave but from worldly calamities, could but prune and take off the twigs, (as it were:) He, from ſin it ſelfe, and ſo plucketh it up by the roots. 4. They, that were not the LORD, put it off but for a time, and after it came againe, Temporall only. He for ever, once for all: and is become Author of eternall ſalvation, to all that depend on Him. And marke that word [eternall:] For none but the LORD can worke eternall ſalvation. 5. They all had need of a Saviour themſelves, and of this Saviour: He needs none, receives of none, imparts to all; as being not a Saviour only, but Salus ipſa in abſtracto, Salvation it ſelfe, (as Simeon calleth Him) of whoſe fulneſſe we all receive. To ſave, may agree to man: To be ſalvation, can agree to none but to CHRIST the LORD. To begin, and to end; To ſave ſoule and body, from bodily and ghoſtly enemies; from ſinne the root, and miſery the branches; for a time, and for ever; to be a Saviour, and to be Salvation it ſelfe; CHRIST, the LORD is all this, and can doe all this. Now then we are right, and never till now. A Saviour, which is CHRIST the LORD. Hebr. 5. 9. Verſe 20. Iohn 1.

But the Name [LORD] goeth yet further: not only to ſave us, and ſet us free from danger, to deliver us from evill; but to ſtate us in as good and better condition, than we forfeited by our fall; or elſe though we were ſaved, we ſhould not ſave by the match. To make us then ſavers, and not ſavers only, but gainers, and that great gainers by our ſalvation, He doth further impart alſo the eſtate annexed of this laſt title, even whatſoever he is Lord of himſelfe. And He is Lord of Life, (ſaith Saint Peter, Act. 3. 15.) Life then He imparts. And He is Lord of Glory, (ſaith Saint Paul, 1 Cor. 2. 8.) Glory then He imparts. And He is Lord of Ioy, (Intra in gaudium Domini, Enter into the joy of the Lord, Matth. 25. 21.) Ioy then He imparts. Life, and Glory, and Ioy; and makes us Lords of them, and of whatſoever is within the Name, and title of Lord. For having thereto a double right, 1 by Inheritance, as the Sonne, (Hebr. 12.) 2 And by Purchaſe, as a Redeemer (for, therefore He died, and roſe againe, that He might be Lord of all, Rom. 14. 9.) contenting himſelfe with the former; He is well pleaſed to ſet over the latter to us, and admit us with Himſelfe into His eſtate of joynt purchaſe of Heaven, or whatſoever He is owner of; that, in right of it, we may enter into the Life, Glory, and Ioy of our Lord, and ſo be ſaved and be ſavers, and more than ſavers every way. This alſo, is in the word Lord: this benefit further we have by it.

And now, if we will put together, Natus and Servator, Servator and Chriſtus, Chriſtus and Dominus, Dominus and Natus: Borne and Saviour, Saviour and Chriſt, Chriſt and the Lord, the Lord and Borne: take them which way you will in combination, any of the foure, then have we His two Natures in one Perſon. In Servator, His God-head: None but GOD is a Saviour. In Chriſtus, His Man-hood: GOD cannot be Anointed, Man may. In Dominus, His Divine againe, the Lord from Heaven. In Natus, His Humane Nature, directly, borne of a woman: Both (ever) carefully joyned, and to be joyned together. When Saint Matthew had begun his Goſpell thus: The booke of the generation of IESVS CHRIST the Sonne of DAVID, one Nature, His Humanity: Saint Marke was carefull to begin his thus; The beginning of the Goſpell of IESVS CHRIST the Sonne of GOD, the other Nature, His Divinitie. But Saint Iohn, he joynes them, Verbum caro factum eſt, the Word became fleſh. Verbum the Word, there is Dominus; and Caro the Fleſh, that is, Natus. Matth. 1. 1. Marke 1. 1. Iohn 1. 14.

And even this very conjunction is a new Ioy. For, that ſuch an one, that the LORD would condeſcend to be borne, (beſides the benefit,) there is alſo matter of Honour. Even that He, ſo great a Perſon, would become ſuch as we are, would ſo eſteeme our Nature, as to take it upon Him; This certainly is a great dignitie and exaltation of our Nature; And it is matter of new Ioy: That Hee would ſo highly value it, as to aſſume, aſſociate, and unite it into one Perſon, with the Sonne of GOD. By this, wee ſee, why a SAVIOVR: why CHRIST: why the LORD. A SAVIOVR, His Name of benefit, whereby He is to deliver us. CHRIST, His Name of Office, whereby he is bound to undertake it. The LORD, His Name of Power, whereby He is able to effect it. We ſee alſo why Man, and why GOD: Firſt, So it ſhould be; for, of right none was to make ſatisfaction for man, but man. And in very deed, none was able to give ſatisfaction to GOD, but GOD. So that being to ſatisfie GOD for Man, He was to be GOD and Man. Secondly, So we would wiſh it our ſelves: If we would be ſaved, wee would be ſaved by one of our Nature, not by any ſtranger. He is borne, and ſo one of our owne Nature. Againe, if we would be ſaved, we would be ſaved, by no inferiour, but by the beſt: He is the LORD, and ſo the very beſt of all. And ſo, our deſire is ſatisfied every way.

This bleſſed Birth of this SAVIOVR, which is CHRIST the LORD, thus furniſhed in every point, to ſave us throughly, body and ſoule, from ſinne the deſtruction, and Satan the deſtroyer of both, and that both here, and for ever; this bleſſed, and thrice bleſſed Birth, is the ſubſtance of this Dayes ſolemnitie of the Angels Meſſage, and of our Ioy.

The Circumſtance of the Perſons to whom.

AND now to the Circumſtances: and firſt of the Perſons, vobis; I bring you good tydings: That to you is borne, &c.

We finde not any word through all, but there is joy in it: and yet all is ſuſpended, till wee come to this one word [vobis:] this makes up all. This word therefore we ſhall doe well ever to looke for, and when we finde it, to make much of it. Nothing paſſeth without it; it is the word of application. But for it, all the reſt are looſe; this girds it on, this faſtens it to us, and makes it ours. But for it, we are but in their caſe, Quid nobis & tibi, What have we to doe with thee? This SAVIOVR CHRIST the LORD, in this good time and fit place, Quid ad nos? What are we the better? Omni populo, is ſomewhat too generall, and the hundreth part of them ſhall not be benefited by Him. We would heare it in more particularity. Why, vobis, for you it is, Borne for you: Yea, now yee ſay ſomewhat.

Matth. 8. 29.

Evangelizo vobis, and Natus vobis.

And twice it is repeated for failing, in either verſe once. Evangelizo vobis, and natus vobis, that yee may know the Meſſage is yours, and the Birth is yours; therefore the meſſage is ſent to you, becauſe the birth concerneth you. But yours they be, both.

The Vſe wee have of it.

May we then be bold to change the perſon, and utter it in the firſt, which he doth in the ſecond, and ſay Nobis! We may ſure, Puer natus eſt nobis; * ESAY hath ſaid it before us. And thereby, lyeth a myſtery: The Angels they ſay, Vobis; The Prophets were men; men ſay, Nobis. Bid the Angell ſay, Nobis, he cannot, neither ſing nor ſay it: Angelis he cannot, to Angels, Nuſquam Angelos: but Hominibus unto men, he can and doth. And this is a ſpeciall high Prerogative; that which the Angels can neither ſing nor ſay, we can doe both.

* Eſay 9. 6.

Hebr. 2. 16. Verſ. 14.

If then He be borne to us, it is to ſome end. ESAY tells us, what it is, when he expoundeth Natus, by Datus, borne to us, by Given us. Borne, to be beſtowed upon us. And if given us, beſtowed upon us, then He is ours. Ours His Benefit, His Office, His Power: His Benefit to ſave us, His Office to undertake us, His Power to aſſure us. Ours, His ſalvation, as IESVS; His anointing, as CHRIST; His Dominion, as the LORD. And if He be ours, then all His are ours: Omnia Ejus noſtra ſunt: His Birth ours, and if His Birth, all that follow His Birth, ours too.

Luke 15. 31.

Now then, ſeeing He and they be ours, will it not be well done, to make our entry, to take ſeiſin of Him and them, and diſpoſe them to our beſt benefit? And how can we doe that better, Than, as GOD hath offered Him to us this day, that He was borne for us: ſo we reciprocally this day, that He is borne, offer Him againe to GOD, as the beſt pleaſing Oblation that we can offer Him. To day, as in the Temple alive, for our morning oblation: And when the time commeth of His death, offer Him as on the Croſſe, ſlaine for our evening Sacrifice. So ſhall we, as Bernard wiſheth us, uti noſtro, in utilitatem noſtram, & de Salvatore ſalutem operari, Imploy, or make uſe of Him for our beſt behoofe: draw His proper extract from Him, and worke ſalvation out of this our SAVIOVR.

Our dutie reciprocall.

Now, a word only, what is to be done on our parts, and that reſpectively to theſe two points, what we are to returne to them; what to this Meſſage, and what to this Birth.

1. To heare the Meſſage.

To the Meſſage, Evangelizo vobis, this wee are to returne, this is due to a meſſage, to heare it. And that we doe, and that is all: we come to the Sermon, we heare it, and little we doe beſides. But we heare it but heavily, with a faint affection (GOD knoweth:) we heare it not as an Ecce, as matter of high admiration: we heare it not as Gaudium magnum, with that alacritie and cheerefulneſſe wee ſhould. We heare it not as Nobis, as if it nearely touched us, but as a matter that little concerned us, it skilled not much whether wee heard it or no. Many meaner things affect us more, but this ſhould bee the joyfulleſt hearing that wee ever heard.

2. To receiue Him.

And ſhall we not likewiſe performe ſome dutie to Natus eſt? yes, even to that alſo. And not heare of Him, and let Him alone: heare his tidings, and let Himſelfe goe.

He

He was borne for us, and given us, Natus nobis, and, Donatus nobis (both goe together in the Prophet.) To a gift the duty that belongeth properly, is to receive it. If He be Natus Nobis, and Donatus Nobis, I truſt wee will take order, He be Acceptus à nobis. If borne us, and given us, it is our part then, we can doe no leſſe than receive Him. We evacuate the gift, diſgrace both the Giver and it, if we vouchſafe not to accept of it.

How is that? how ſhall we receive Him? who ſhall give Him us? That ſhall one, that will ſay unto us within a while, Accipite, Take, This is my Body, by the offering whereof ye are ſanctified. Take, this is my Bloud, by the ſhedding whereof ye are ſaved. Both, in the holy Myſteries ordained by GOD, as pledges to aſſure us, and as Conduit-pipes to conveigh into us, this and all other the benefits, that come by this our Saviour. Heb.10 12.

Verily, upon His memorable daies, (of which this is the firſt) we are bound to doe ſomething in memory, or remembrance of Him. What is that? Will ye know what it is? Hoc facite, Doe this in remembrance of me.

Something would be thought on, to returne Him for all His benefits, and this day for this firſt, the fountaine of all the reſt; His Birth. Some thanks would be rendred Him for it. And how can we doe that better, than as we are taught by him, that ſtudied the point of Quid retribuam, and reſolved it thus; no way ſo well, as by Accipiam Calicem: I will take the cup of ſalvation. And ſo doe it: So, with it taken into our hands, give thankes to the name of the LORD. And when better, than to day? Hodiè, as we are here directed. What better Day than on this Day? the very Day He was beſtowed on us. To deferre Him, no longer, than He did us. He deferred not us at all, but aſſoone as He was borne, ſent us word the ſame inſtant: and ſhall we deferre Him to heare of us another time; and not be as ready on our part to receive Him inſtantly, as He was on His, to beſtow Himſelfe, even preſently, aſſoone as Hee was borne? Sure, ſomewhat would be done more than ordinary, this day of His Birth; the day it ſelfe is more than ordinary. Pſal.116. 12.

And let this move us. If ever there be a day of ſalvation, Ecce hic eſt dies ſalutis, Behold this is it, when a Saviour is borne unto us. If ever an accepted time, Ecce tempus acceptum, Behold, now it is, this is that time. The Birth-day hath ever beene a time accepted. Then, one King forgave the treſpaſſe of his Servant, and received him to Grace. Another, being pleaſed, was ready in his bounty to have given away the one halfe of his Kingdome. Our Saviour CHRIST, Our LORD, on His Birth-day, will be no worſe than they. His bountie, then, no leſſe than theirs. Gen.40.21. Mar.6.23.

Let us then make this ſo accepted a time in it ſelfe, twice acceptable, by our accepting which, Hee will acceptably take at our hands. Let us honour this day, with our receiving: which He hath honored by His firſt giving: Yeelding Him evermore, (but this day, the day of it, cheefely,) our unfained hearty thankſgiving for this ſo good newes; for this ſo great a Gift; both of them this day vouchſafed us: in Him and for Him, who was Himſelfe the gift, our SAVIOVR, CHRIST, the LORD. To whom, with the FATHER, and the HOLY GHOST, three Perſons, One Immortall, Everliving, Inviſible, onely wiſe GOD; be all Honour, Glorie, Bleſſing, Praiſe, and Thankſgiving, this day and for ever.

A SERMON PREACHED

before the KINGS MAIESTIE, at White-Hall, on Wedneſday, the XXV. of December, A. D. MDCXI.
being CHRISTMAS day.

IOAN. Chap. I. Ver. XIIII.

And the VVORD was made Fleſh, and dwelt among us, (and we ſaw the Glory thereof, as the Glorie of the Onely begotten SONNE of the FATHER ) full of Grace and Truth.

Ezek.10.14. Apoc.4.6,7. Iob.39.30,33. Mat.24.28. Gen.1.1. Verſe.1. Luk.17.37.

THERE is, in the Old Teſtament (in the X. of Ezekiel) and in the New (in the IIII. of the Revelation,) a Viſion of foure ſundry ſhapes, A man, a lyon, an oxe, and an Eagle. It hath been uſually received, to applie theſe foure to the foure Evangeliſts, and of them, the Eagle, to Saint Iohn. The nature of the Eagle is, by GOD himſelfe, deſcribed (Iob 39.) by two properties; 1 elevare ad ardua, no fowle under heaven towreth ſo high: 2 and ubicunque fuerit cadaver ſtatim adeſt; None ſo ſoone or ſo ſodainly downe upon the bodie, as he. Both theſe doe lively expreſſe themſelves in Saint Iohn: and no where more lively, than in this Goſpell. Wherin, as an Eagle in the clouds, he firſt mounteth wonderfully high, beyond MOSES and his In principio, with an higher In principio than it; beyond Geneſis and the worlds Creation: That the Word was then with GOD, and was GOD. This may well be termed the Eagles flight; ſo exceeding high, as the cleareſt eye hath much adoe, to follow him. Yet ſo farre as they can follow him, the very Philoſophers have been driven, to admire the penning of this Goſpell. But after this, as an Eagle againe, (ubi corpus, ibi Aquila,) downe he commeth directly, from the height of heaven, and lights upon the body of His fleſh, the myſterie of His incarnation: and tells us, that He, that in the beginning, was apud Deum, and Deus, He, in the fulneſſe of time, was apud homines, and Homo. He dwelt not long aloft; he knew, it was not to purpoſe: Verbum DEVS is farre above our reach. Verbum caro, that concernes us. No time, but it concernes us: but, this time, above others. This Feaſt is held, this Aſſembly met, for no other end, but to celebrate the contents of the Text, that the Word, being made fleſh, this day, came to dwell among us.

The diviſion.

I. Two parts there be in the Text, ſenſibly parted by a Parentheſis. 1 That without the Parentheſis, is, that he would have us beleeve, Verbum caro, &c. 2 That, within, is the Affidavit, Vidimus, &c.

1. 2. 3. In the former three things are affirmed of the Word. 1 Factus è nobis; 2 habitavit in nobis; 3 plenum pro nobis: 1 That the Word was made fleſh of us; 2 dwelt with us; 3 was full for us.

II. Then followeth the Affidavit of theſe. That S. Iohn (and other more, beſides,) ſaw; and and ſo ſpake no more than they knew; nor teſtifie no more, than they had ſeene. The beſt Proofe that can be. They ſaw (though, not the Word Himſelfe, yet) His glory: We ſaw His glory. And that glory ſuch, as would ſuit with none but Him; and ſo, every Way ſufficient, to demonſtrate Him, the only SONNE of GOD. 1 Iohn 1. 2.

And, after all this, one more there is, without which, His making, Dwelling, and Seeing were to little purpoſe: That is, that as He came not obſcurely, but was ſeene; ſo He came not emptie, but full of grace and truth. This fulneſſe was not for Himſelfe, but for us: Et de plenitudine Ejus omnes accepimus. Verſe 16.

There is not any thing, that concerneth this Myſterie, but is within this Text. His two Natures, The Word, and fleſh: 1 Word, Divine; 2 Fleſh, Humane. The Vnion of them in factum eſt; union into a Perſon, in Habitavit: Habitare, eſt Perſonæ. 3 Then, His office alſo, Ἐπλώσατε which is not only habitavit, but caſtrametavit in nobis: not only, tooke a houſe, but pitched a pavilion in us: Not only, factus Incola, made our Neighbour; but, made a Champion, for us, to undertake our quarrell, and to fight a combate. 4 And laſt, the Benefit: Made, that He might Dwell; and Dwell, that He might impart to us, (and we derive from Him) that, whereof He was full, and we were emptie; wee had need, and He had ſtore; grace, and truth.

All reducible to theſe three: 1 Quòd Verbum, Caro: 2 Quid Verbum, Carni: 3 Quid Caro, Verbo. 1 That the Word became fleſh; the Myſterie: 2 What the Word did for fleſh; the Benefit: 3 And, what fleſh is to doe to the Word againe; the Dutie. I. II. III.

We are in a deepe point, and a dangerous. It will not be amiſſe, to pauſe a little on the three termes, Verbum, Caro, and factum eſt. The Word. 1 There be, that take this Name to be given Him, as who ſhould ſay: He, of whom ſo many excellent words are ſpoken, all along this Booke; ſo many words of promiſe, and propheſie, and all of Him: So, the Word, Objectivè. 2 Others: for that He diſcloſeth to us all GODS counſell, even as the Word openeth the minde of man; by whom as His Word, we know whatſoever we know of the Fathers minde. So, the Word, Effectivè. 3 A third; for that He commeth, not onely as IESVS, to ſave us; but, as the Word, to teach us: We, as to honour Him; ſo, learne His word, as the way to our Salvation. So, the Word, Præceptivè.

I. quòd Verbum, Caro.
Verbum, The Word,

4 Theſe are all well, and true all: but, all ſhort. Wee may have uſe of them; but there is a further matter, than all theſe. This Word (as we finde, in the Affidavit) is the Onely begotten of the Father. Theſe two are one, and the ſame; but, need to be ſet in two termes, that what is wanting in the one, may be ſupplyed by the other: (So high is the Divine Nature above our reach, as no one terme is able to expreſſe it: It is well, if divers will doe it.) In this they agree: As the Sonne is, to the Father; ſo is the Word, to the Minde. The Sonne, Proles Parentis; the Word, Proles mentis: They proceed, both: the Sonne, from the Father; the Word, from the minde: and ſo note out unto us, a Party proceeding, a ſecond Perſon, from the firſt: from Him that begetteth, the Sonne; from Him that ſpeaketh, the Word; Againſt Sabellius.

The Sonne referreth to a living nature: The Word addeth further an intellectuall nature: Generare eſt viventium, Loqui intelligentium: That, there is in Him, not onely the Nature, and Life, but the Wiſdome of the Father.

Both Proceed. The Word ſheweth the Manner; The Sonne, the truth of His proceeding. With us the Sonne is not begot, but by fleſh, by propagation: The Word therefore requiſite, to ſhew, His proceeding was after no carnall manner; but, as the Word from the minde. A better terme could not be deviſed. For, there is not in all the World a more pure, ſimple, inconcrete procreation, than that, whereby the minde conceiveth the Word within it, by dixit in corde. For, in it ſelfe, and of it ſelfe, doth the minde produce it, without helpe of any mixture of ought, without any paſſion ſtirring or agitation at all. Such was the iſſue of the Word eternall. But then, leſt we might imagine GODS Word to be, to Him, no other, than ours is to us, not of our ſubſtance; He makes amends for that, and tells us, He is the Onely begotten, and ſo of the ſubſtance of His Father, (very God, of very God,) as all begotten Sonnes be. The Word, to ſhew His proceeding pure, and meerely ſpirituall: the Sonne, to ſhew, that for all that, it is true and ſubſtantiall. Truly conſubſtantiall with the Father, as the Sonne; but, in all cleane and pure manner conceived, as the Word.

The Sonne, though He be conſubſtantiall, yet the perſon of His Father may have a being long before Him. The Word makes amends for that. For, the mindes conceiving, and the minde cannot be ſevered a moment: if one be eternall, both are. So then, as the Son, He is conſubſtantiall: as the Word, He is coëternall.

But, he begins with the Word. His care being, firſt to tell us of the pureneſſe of His generation, before of His generation it ſelfe: but after, by little and little, unfoldeth Himſelfe and tells, He is ſo the Word, as the SONNE alſo. Indeed, it was beſt beginning with the Word. That terme the Heathen Wiſe-men, the Philoſophers, would never ſtumble at, but brooke it well enough: As (indeed) they did, (not with approbation only, but with high admiration) reade and magnifie the beginning of this Goſpell. Witneſſe Tertul. in Apol. Euſeb. in præpar. Auguſt. de Civit. 10. and Theodoret. It was conforme to their reaſon: Quòd Deus ab æterno intelligit, and that Νοῦς and Λόγος, the conceiving of the minde, and the minde muſt needs be coëternall: the minde never without it: as the Prophet ſaith, Egreſſus Ejus à Diebus æternitatis. This for the Word, of much more, that might be ſaid of it.

1 As the Word, and the Onely Begotten referre to one: ſo doth Caro, and in nobis, Fleſh and in us; that is, ſuch fleſh as is in us, Humane fleſh. 1. To expreſſe the Vnion fully, a better word could not be choſen. It is a part, for the whole; and the worſer part, for the whole, of purpoſe. For, in this caſe, our nature is beſt ſet out, by the worſer part. For, this we know; if the worſe be taken, the better will not be left behinde. If Hee abhorre not the fleſh, of the Spirit there will be no queſtion. More forcible it is, to ſay, He was made fleſh, than He was made man; though both be true. Hee vouchſafed to become man, nothing ſo much, as to become fleſh, the very loweſt and baſeſt part of man.

2 Beſides, from the Fleſh (as from Eve) came the beginning of tranſgreſſion, longing after the forbidden fruit, refuſed the Word quite; ſo, of all other, leaſt likely to be taken. The Word not refuſing it, the reſt have good hope.

3 But, there is a kinde of neceſſitie, to uſe the terme fleſh. If He had ſaid Man, man may be taken for a Perſon. He tooke no Perſon, but our Nature He tooke: fleſh, is no Perſon, but Nature only; and ſo beſt expreſſeth it. And if ſoule, it might have beene taken, as if He tooke not the fleſh, but mediante animâ; but, So He did not, but as immediately, and as ſoone, the fleſh, as the ſoule: in one inſtant, both.

4 בשר בשר in Piel. Yet one more. It will not be amiſſe to tell you; The word, that is Hebrew for fleſh, the ſame is alſo Hebrew, for good tidings, (as we call it, the Goſpell:) Sure, not without the Holy Ghoſt ſo diſpenſing it. There could be no other meaning; but that, ſome Incarnation, or Making fleſh, ſhould be generally good newes for the whole world. To let us know, this good tidings is come to paſſe, He tells us, the Word is now become fleſh.

2 Verbum caro. The Word became fleſh. Thus, why fleſh: now, why the Word, fleſh. Caro Verbum was our bane; fleſh would be the Word; nay, wiſer than the Word, and know what was evill, better than it. If caro Verbum, our bane; then, Verbum caro, our remedie.

2 Surely, if the Word would become fleſh, it were (ſo) moſt kindly. The Word was pars læſa, the party that was moſt offended. If He would undertake it; if Hee, againſt whom the offence was, would be Author of the reconciliation, there were none to that: It were (ſo) moſt proper.

3 Verſe 3. Coloſ. 1.16,17. But, in another reſpect, He were fit too. Hee had ſaid above: All things were made by Him: a kinde of meetneſſe there were, ut per quem facta omnia, per eundem refecta, Hee that firſt made them, ſhould reſtore them; Hee that built, repaire; So is beſt, ever.

4 Iohn 3.15. And indeed, Sic oportet implere omnem juſtitiam, that were the way to fulfill all juſtice; If the Word would take fleſh, He might make full amends for the fleſhes fault, in rejecting the the Word. So is juſtice; that, fleſh for fleſh; and, not the fleſh of oxen and ſheepe; but even that fleſh, that ſinneth, (our fleſh) ſhould ſuffer for it, and ſo ſuffering make ſatisfaction to Iuſtice.

Why then, factum eſt caro; the Word is made Fleſh: This makes up all. For, factum eſt, ergo, eſt; He is made fleſh, therefore, is fleſh: Fieri terminatur ad eſſe, the end of making, is being. And per modum naturæ: (ſo is ἐγένετο, the Greeke word:) this being is naturall, Et nativitas eſt via ad naturam, and nativitie is the way to nature. So, to be borne: as, this day, He was: Venit per carnem, ſanat per verbum, that all fleſh may ſee the Salvation of GOD. Made it was; againſt Manicheus holding that He had no true body: as if, factum had beene fictum, or making were mocking. Made it was: but, how made? Not convertendo, the Word converted into fleſh, (as Cerinthus;) or fleſh converted into the Word, Verbum caro facta eſt (as Valentinus:) for, the Deitie cannot be changed into any thing; nor any thing, into it. Nor made conciliando, (as friends are made,) ſo as, they continue two ſeverall perſons ſtill: and while the fleſh ſuffered, the Word ſtood by and looked on, (as Neſtorius.) That is cum carne, not caro; made with fleſh, not fleſh: And, never was one perſon ſaid to be made another. Nor made, by compounding; and ſo, a third thing produced of both (as Eutyches:) For ſo, He ſhould be neither of both, Word nor fleſh, neither GOD, nor man.

1 Factum eſt caro. Was made.

But, made He was: Saint Paul tells us, how: aſſumendo, by taking the ſeed of Abraham (Hebr. XI.) His generation eternall, (as verbum Deus) is, as the enditing the Word, within the heart. His generation in time (verbum Caro) is as the uttering it forth with the voice. The inward motion of the minde taketh unto it a naturall body of ayre, and ſo becommeth vocall; It is not changed into it, the Word remaineth ſtill, as it was; yet they two become one voice. Take a ſimilitude from our ſelves. Our ſoule is not turned into, nor compounded with the body: yet, they two, though diſtinct in natures, grow into one man: So, into the God-head, was the man-hood taken; the Natures preſerved, without confuſion; the Perſon entire, without diviſion. Take the definition of the fourth Generall Councell: Sic factum eſt caro, ut maneret verbum; non immutando, quod erat, ſed ſuſcipiendo, quod non erat: noſtra auxit, ſua non minuit; nec Sacramentum pietatis, Detrimentum Deitatis: He was ſo made fleſh, that He ceaſed not to be the Word; never changing that He was, but taking that He was not: We were the better, He was never the worſe; the Myſtery of Godlineſſe was no detriment to the God-head, nor the honour of the Creature wrong to the CREATOR.

Hebr. 2.16.

And now, being paſt theſe points of beleefe, I come to that, which I had much rather ſtand on, (and ſo it is beſt for us;) that which may ſtirre up our love to Him, that thus became fleſh for us.

Firſt, comparing Factum with Dictum. For, if we were ſo much beholden for verbum dictum, the word ſpoken, the Promiſe; how much more for verbum factum, the Performance? If, for factum carni, the Word that came to fleſh; how then for factum caro, became fleſh.

Then, taking factum abſolutely. The Word, by whom all things were made, to come to be made it ſelfe. It is more for Him, fieri, to be made any thing, than facere, to make another World, yea, many Worlds more. There is more a great deale, in this factum eſt, than in omnia per Ipſum facta ſunt: In He made, than in All things by Him were made.

Factum eſt, with What He was made. For, if made; made the moſt compleat thing of all, that ever He had made: Made a Spirit, for God is a Spirit; ſome degree of neareneſſe betweene them: But what is man, that He ſhould be made Him, or the Sonne of man, that He ſhould take his Nature upon Him!

Iohn 4.24. Pſal.8.4. Hebr.2.7.

If man, yet the more noble part, the immortall part, the ſoule: What elſe? There are ſome points of His Image in that: It underſtandeth, it loveth, hath a kinde of capacitie of the Word. So hath not the fleſh: It is res bruta, common to them with us; neither able to underſtand, or love, or in any degree capable of it. Make it the Soule, the precious ſoule (ſo calleth it Salomon;) not the bodie, the vile bodie (ſo the Apoſtle calleth it.) Of the Word He ſaid ever, vidimus gloriam Ejus, wee ſaw the glorie of it: of the fleſh

Prov.6.26. Phil.3.21.

we may ſay, vidimus ſordes ejus, we daily ſee that comes from it, as non eſt vilius ſterquilinium, on the dung-hill, worſe is not to be ſeene. Set not ſo pretious a ſtone in ſo baſe metall.

5 But this is not all. If He muſt be made, for love of GOD, make him ſomething wherein is ſome good: For, in our fleſh (Saint Paul ſaith) there dwelleth no good: yea, the very wiſdome of the fleſh at flat defiance with the Word. Make it ſomewhat elſe. For, there is not only a huge diſtance, but maine repugnancie betweene them. Yet, for all this, non poteſt ſolvi Scriptura: The Word was made fleſh.

Rom.7.18. Rom.8.7. Iohn 10.35.

I adde yet further: what fleſh? The fleſh of an Infant. What, Verbum Infans, the Word an Infant? The Word, and not be able to ſpeake a word? How evill agreeth this? This He put up. How borne, how entertained? In a ſtately Palace, Cradle of Ivory, Robes of eſtate? No: but a ſtable for His Palace; a manger for His Cradle; poore clouts for His array. This was His beginning. Follow Him further, if any better afterward: what fleſh afterward? Sudans & algens, in cold and heat; hungry and thirſtie; faint and weary. Is His end any better, (that maketh up all:) what fleſh then? Cujus livore ſanati, blacke and blew; bloudie and ſwolne; rent and torne; the thornes, and nayles ſticking in His fleſh: And ſuch fleſh He was made. A great factum certainly, and much to be made of. To have beene made caput Angelorum had beene an abaſement: To be [a] minoratus Angelis is more: But, to be [b] noviſſimus Virorum, in worſt caſe of all men, nay, [c] a worme, and no man: So to be borne, ſo arrayed, and ſo houſed, and ſo handled; there is not the meaneſt fleſh but is better. So to be made, and ſo unmade; to take it on, and lay it off, with ſo great indignitie; Weigh it, and wonder at it, that ever He would endure to be made fleſh, and to be made it on this manner. What was it made the Word thus to be made fleſh? Non eſt lex hominis iſta, fleſh would never have beene brought to it. It was GOD, and in GOD, nothing but Love: Dilexit, with Sic, Charitas, with an Ecce: Fecit amor, ut Verbum caro fieret: Zelus Domini exercituum fecit hoc. Love only did it. Quid ſit, poſſit, debeat, non recipit jus amoris: That only cares not for any exinanivit, any humiliavit ſe, any emptying, humbling, loſſe of reputation: Love reſpects it not, cares not, what fleſh He be made, ſo the fleſh be made by it.

2 Habitavit, and dwelt. And dwelt. Factum eſt is the Word of Nature; Habitavit, of Perſon: Habitare eſt Perſonæ. And, two there are not. It is not Habitaverunt: therefore, but one Perſon.

1 2 And, habitavit is a word of continuance? that which was begun in factum, is continued in habitavit. Not onely made, but made ſtay, made His abode with us: Not appeared, and was gone againe ſtraight; but, for a time tooke up His dwelling; Factus caro, Factus incola. And this word concernes this day properly. This is the day, the firſt day of habitavit in nobis. Incarnate he was in the Virgins wombe; His taking fleſh could not be ſeene: but this draweth after it a vidimus; dwelt and was ſeene viſibly.

3 Rom. 10.8. Phil.2.7. And this leadeth us to a third: converſatus eſt. Factum, and factum familiare: that He withdrew not Himſelfe into ſome ſolitary place, but was verbum prope nos, neare us, neare neighbours to us. Habitu inventus ut homo, In His habit, and in His habitation, found as a man. One might aske Him (as they, at Verſ. XXXVIII.) ubi habitas, Sir where dwell you? and He invited them to come and ſee.

4 ἐσκήνωσε, dwelt, as in a Tent. And ἐσκήνωσε is not every dwelling, but a dwelling in σκηνὴ a tent, that is, but for a time. Not a houſe, to ſtand for ever; but a tent, to be taken downe againe. Which, as it ſheweth His Tabernacle, of the nature of ours, mortall; ſo withall, that He came but of an errand, to ſojourne till He had done it: A worke Hee had for which Hee was ſent; that being done, He laid His Tabernacle off againe.

5 ἐσκήνωσε, pitched his tent as a Souldier. Gen.3.15. Rom.7.23. And, even that worke it ſelfe, is in σκηνῶσαι: For, it is a word militare: Souldiers dwell in tents: As if He were now factus caro, incola, miles; as if ſome battell were toward. And (indeed) from the beginning, (the very third of Geneſis,) there was warre proclaimed, betweene the Womans ſeed, and the Serpents. An enemie we had, ſtrong and mightie; had, and have ſtill: not one, but many, a whole campe of them. They had prevailed, and led us away captive under the Law of ſinne. Dux nobis opus eſt, A Champion we ſtood in need of, to reſcue us. And here we have one now, even Dux Meſſias, as Daniel calleth Him. Hee, as this day, came into the campe, ſet up His pavilion among us. The Tabernacle of GOD was with men. He might not ſtay eight dayes in the campe, but He muſt take Sacramentum militare: So He did. And the ceremonie of it was to be ſtrucken, and to bleed ſome ſmall quantity: So He was, at his Circumciſion: And after, He performed the battell at his Paſſion. Where, though it coſt Him His life, yet the victory fell on His ſide, Captivitie was led captive, and we were delivered. His Tent was but a fore-runner to His combate. This for His dwelling. Now the Affidavit. Dan. 9 25. Ephes. 4.8.

Champion

As the word Habitavit pointeth us to this firſt day of the Feaſt, and His Tent, to the middle day; when He undertooke our quarrell: So vidimus (now) is proper to the laſt day, the day of Manifeſtation, or Epiphanie. He dwelt; and not inviſibly, or obſcurely, but ſo, as Hee might be (and was) ſeene. Even, this very firſt day, vidimus, might the Shepherds ſay, we ſaw His Angels, and heard them ſing, and then went to Bethlem and ſaw Himſelfe. Vidimus, might the Wiſe-men ſay: we ſaw His Starre in the Eaſt, and we are come to ſee Himſelfe. This they might ſay, and truly: for, theſe things were not done in obſcuro. But (as we ſaid) This clauſe is the Affidavit, it is inferred as a Proofe. You tell us of His making, and His dwelling: Quomodo conſtat? How ſhall it appeare? Vidimus is the beſt proofe that can be; He ſaw it; was an eye-witneſſe of what he teſtified. The Affidavit Vidimus, We ſaw. Matth. 2. 2. Act. 26. 26. Ioh. 19. 35.

And it is not vidi, but vidimus; more eyes than one: Not he alone, others more ſaw it, beſides him. In the mouth [a] of two or three witneſſes: Peter, Iames, and He, (vidimus) were in the holy Mount together, and ſaw Him transfigured. Nay, a whole [b] cloud of witneſſes (CXX.) ſaw Him taken up into Heaven, out of their ſight, in the Mount of Olives. Well might He ſay, vidimus.

2 Vidimus, not vidi, We ſaw. a Matth. 17. 1 Iohn 1. 3. b Act 1 9. Hebr. 12. 1.

And that not per tranſennam, at a bluſh, paſſing by; but had a full ſight, looked well upon Him, at leaſure; did it throughly, for a good time together. It is not ὁρᾶν, but θεάσασθαι (the word, whence a Theater is derived:) As men with good heed behold things there: ſo did we, intentively, all the acts and ſcenes of His life.

3 ἐθεασάμεθα: Saw it intentively.

But I aske: What ſaw they? The fleſh peradventure: The Word, they could not ſee. Hee is GOD; and GOD hath no man ever ſeene. True: that, they could not; yet His glory they might, and did. Which glory was an infallible demonſtration of His preſence, there. Thorow the veile of His fleſh, ſuch beames He caſt, as behinde thoſe clouds, they might know, there was a Sunne; as, that way only, could He be made viſible to the eyes of fleſh, which otherwiſe could not behold Him.

4 Saw His glory. Verſe 18. Hebr. 10. 20.

But it may be it was ſome wrong, this; but ſuch, as was ſeene in MOSES, or in STEPHENS countenance. He anſwers that, and tells us: It was not, quaſi Servi, like a Servant; nay, nor quaſi Filii, like any adopted Sonnes: but, this glory was every way ſuch, as well might it beſeeme the Word, or Only Sonne: but could agree to no creature, though never ſo glorious. To none but Him: and ſo being proprium quarto modo, might be a medius terminus, in a demonſtration.

5 Quaſi unigeniti Dei.

And if you aske, what that glory might be? With a word, to ſay to the wind and ſtorme [a] Obmutesce: and to diſeaſes, [b] Volo, mundare: And to Death it ſelfe, [c] Tibi dico, Surge. His Miracles, they ſhewed His glory, is expreſſely ſaid, (in the next Chap. v. 11.) The Starre at His birth; the eclipſe at His death; the glory of His changing in the Mount: but, above all, His glorious Aſcenſion, and receiving up into Heaven. All which they ſaw; as being in the Theater all the while, from the Epitaſis to the very Cataſtrophe. Therefore he tells us here, (and againe in his Epiſtle,) he writes nothing, but what hee ſaw and beheld; and even his hands had handled of the Word of Life. Wee may beleeve him: He, and his Conteſtes, ſuffered many things for the truth of their witneſſe: and the whole world (ſince) hath beleeved this their Affidavit. Now are we paſt the Parentheſis.

6 What this glorie was. a Marke 4 39. b Matth. 8. 3. c Luke 7. 14. 1 Ioh. 1. 3.

The Conſequente. Full of grace and truth.

But what, is all that a vidimus? Nothing but a maske, to be ſeene? Came He onely to make a glorious ſhew to them all? No: but as Hee came not obſcure, but was ſeene: ſo, He came not emptie, but full, and was felt of them, that ſaw Him not. Vidimus is not all: a Verſe after there is accepimus; To ſee His glory they receive of his fulneſſe: They, and we.

Full of Grace and Truth both.

Many are the perfections, whereof He is full: Two onely here choſen out, as two ſtreames, 1 Grace and 2 Truth. With them He commeth, with the fulneſſe of them: Not of one of them, but of both. Grace referreth to the Sonne: Truth to the Word. Grace is to adopt us: Truth, to beget us anew; for, of His owne will He hath begotten us, by the Word of Truth.

And theſe doe very fitly follow after glory. Glory of it ſelfe terrifies, and makes ſtand aloofe; Grace invites: And His glory is ſuch, as is full of grace. His Mercy, as great as His Majeſtie full out. A bleſſed thing it is, when theſe two meet; and they that are in glory are full of grace, too. It is not ſo with every one, that is in glory: But, though there be Grace, unleſſe there be Truth too, all is nothing. For Grace, becauſe it is plauſible, and pleaſeth the people, it is affected: there is a taking on grace in face and phraſe, but when all is done, it wanteth ſound truth. That is right grace, that hath truth joyned to it. Verbum gratiæ, and verbum charitatis both, and it is both. Yea, verbum caro, His word is not wind, it hath fleſh on it: His Truth is (as it were) the fleſh of His Grace. Thus may be the conſequence.

But of theſe two choice is made, as of thoſe, our nature ſtood moſt in need of. Out of grace we were; and without grace, as Sinners, and in errours, wandring up and downe; as even the beſt of our nature did at His comming into the fleſh. This is the ſtate He found us in, when He came among us.

Epheſ.1.6. Verſ.16.

Againſt the firſt, gratificavit nos in Dilecto, He brought us in grace againe, through His Beloved SONNE: Gratiam pro gratiâ (He ſaith after ſtraight,) for the grace His Sonne had with Him, He received us to grace.

Againſt the later, He brought us Truth, to ſet us in the right way. Via, Veritas, & Vita; Veritas betweene both: Via, & veritas, or veritas viæ, the true way: Vita & veritas, or veritas vitæ, the true life (that is) Life eternall: We cannot be without either.

This for our need. But, within a verſe after, I finde theſe two ſet in oppoſition to the Law, and the Law to them: as if S. Iohn pointed us whereto we ſhould referre them. The Law full of rigour, many threats, and curſes in it: CHRIST bringeth the word of Grace, oppoſeth to that. The Law full of emptie ſhadowes, and Ceremonies; which Truth is ſet againſt: Corpus autem CHRISTVS, CHRIST the very body, to Lex habens umbram: So, requiſite to quit us of the Law; The Law, the Word, that marred fleſh.

Coloſ.2.17. Hebr.10.1.

The bringing of theſe two together is a great matter; and together they muſt be. Grace, take it from Truth, and it is fallax, but a vizour, but a meere illuſion: Truth, ſever it from grace, and it is ingrata, but an unpleaſing thing. Grace and Truth kept in ſunder, and never met before: But, when the Word and fleſh met, then did they meet and kiſſe each other (ſaith the Prophet, and doth with a whole Pſalme celebrate this meeting.)

They muſt meet, and Grace be firſt; as here. We ſhall never endure the ſeveritie of His Truth, unleſſe Grace come before, and allay it. But, when Grace hath brought us to Him, Truth will hold us with Him. By Grace we ſhall accompliſh, what Truth requireth at our hands: that ſo, receiving Grace, and walking in Truth, we may come to the third, the reward of both, Glory.

Full of them; and the word would not be paſſed. We finde others full of grace, as His Bleſſed Mother, and as S. Stephen. Theirs reacheth not to us: None of them have more than ſerves for themſelves. For, the Spirit is given them, but, by meaſure; but plenitudo vaſis, in them, the fulneſſe of a Veſſell; if yee take any thing out, to powre into another, it is the leſſe for it. But, His is plenitudo fontis, the fulneſſe of a fountaine, which is never drawne drie; qui implet abyſſum, & non minoratur, fills a great poole and it ſelfe never the leſſe. Of which fulneſſe they all received, and Hee never the emptier tier. We ſhall not need to goe to any other ſtore-houſe, or helpe to ſupply, or fill up CHRIST with any other, as if Hee were but halfe full. He is full, full of both. Our care is to be, to make our ſelves fit Veſſels, and there is all.

Thus farre, Quòd Verbum factum caro. Now, Quid Verbum carni, the benefit, and (that which the Benefit ever draweth with it) the Dutie, Quid Caro Verbo? II. Quid Verbum Carni, The Benefit.

1. Factus caro benefaciet carni, being made fleſh He will be a Benefactor to it. No man ever hated his fleſh, and no more can He us, who are fleſh of His fleſh, or rather, He of ours. He ſeeth us daily in Himſelfe, Hee cannot looke upon His fleſh, but Hee muſt thinke upon us. And GOD the Father cannot now hate the fleſh, which the Word is made; which is now taken into one perſon with His only Sonne, and united to the Deitie it ſelfe. If He love the Word, He muſt love it too, for the Word is become it; either love both, or hate both. But, love it certainly: for, as this day, When He brought His Sonne clothed with it, into the World, He gave expreſſe commandement, all His Angels ſhould worſhip Him ſo clothed, and our fleſh in Him: A new dignity which is this day accrued to our Nature, to be adored of the bleſſed Angels. Our Nature queſtionleſſe is ſet in high favour with GOD; GOD ſend our perſons ſo too, and all ſhall be well. Eph. 5. 29. Hebr. 1. 6.

Beſides, good hope we now have, that he being now fleſh, All fleſh may come to Him, to preſent Him with their requeſts. Time was, when they fled from Him; but ad factum carnem, jam veniet omnis caro. For, ſince He dwelt amongſt us, all may reſort unto Him: Yea, even Sinners; and of them it is ſaid, Hic recipit peccatores, & comedit cum eis; He receiveth them, receiveth them even to His Table. 1 Pſal. 65. 2. Luke 15. 2.

A ſecond hope, that ſeeing He hath made our fleſh His Tabernacle, He will not ſuffer this of ours, the ſame with that of His, to fall downe quite and come to nothing; the ſame, He dwelleth in Himſelfe, not to periſh utterly; but repaire it againe, and raiſe it out of the duſt. So that inſuper Caro noſtra requieſcet in ſpe, our very body may reſt in hope, to be reſtored againe, and made like to his glorious bodie. 2 Pſal. 16. 9. Phil. 3. 21.

A third; that where it was, fleſh and bloud ſhall not inherit the Kingdome of God, it is reverſed; fleſh and bloud ſhall; for fleſh and bloud already doth. It is that, Saint Iohn is about, to inferre the former verſe out of this, viz. to them gave He power to be made the Sonnes of GOD: For, Ex quo hoc verum eſt, Filium Dei filium hominis fieri potuiſſe, non eſt incredibile, &c. Since, ſure it is, that the Sonne of GOD is made the ſonne of man, it is not incredible, but that the ſonnes of men may be made the Sonnes of GOD. Not incredible, nay, Securitas nobis data eſt, a kinde of bond is entred, ſecurity given; Seeing this Verſe is true, ſo is the laſt, Dedit poteſtatem, He gave power; and well might. Why? for the Word is made fleſh, and therefore fleſh may have reciprocall hope to be regenerate by the Word, and adopted through grace, and ſo exalted to the glorious dignitie of the Sonnes of GOD. 3 1 Cor. 15. 50. Verſ. 12.

And becauſe Grace and Truth doe this, we ſhall faile of neither of them. He is full; and not for Himſelfe; He needs them not. Hee hath them for us, and hath ſufficient. Neither ſhall be wanting, if we be not wanting to our ſelves. His grace ſhall prevent us, and His truth follow us, all the dayes of our life. Pſal. 23. 6.

So we ſee quid Verbum carni, what He hath done for us: Now our Dutie reciprocall, Quid caro verbo, what we for Him againe. III. quid Caro Verbo. Our Dutie.

If the Word become fleſh, we to take order, that fleſh of ours, that the Word hath taken, we take it not, and make it una caro with you know whom, or may reade (1 Cor. 6.) GOD forbid: Know yee not, the WORD is become fleſh? That fleſh is then ſo to be preſerved, that, as he ſaith, we ſaw the Glorie; ſo may we, we ſaw His fleſh, as the fleſh of the only begotten Sonne of GOD. Kept with ſuch care, and in ſuch cleanneſſe, as it might beſeeme His fleſh to be kept. And as much may be ſaid, for habitavit: the houſe would be ſomewhat handſome; as handſome as wee could, that is to receive Him: We blame them, that this day received Him in a ſtable; take heed we doe not worſe our ſelves. 1 Cor. 6. 16.

But the Fathers preſſe a further matter yet, out of verbum caro factum: that we alſo are (after our manner) verbum carnem facere, to incarnate the Word. We have a Word, we may may doe it too, which is the type or abſtract of the very Word, or wiſdome of GOD; and that is the Word which is preached unto us. That Word we may, and are to incarnate, according to this dayes patterne. That we ſo doe. That Word is then incarnate, quando verbum in opus, Scripturas in operas convertimus, When we doe what is ſpoken, or written; and turne the vocall Word into a reall Worke. The Word, with us, turneth to nothing but wind: To give it Saint IOHNS fleſh, and Saint IAMES vidimus, make it both be felt and ſeene. Eſpecially, ſince our SAVIOVR Himſelfe ſaith, He reckoneth of this as His ſecond birth; and, of every one that ſo doth, eſteemeth as His Mother. That is the dutie properly belonging to this Day, the Day of His birth.

3 And to looke alſo to habitavit, aſwell as factum eſt. Fit ſometimes, ſometimes ſomewhat is done; but non habitavit, it vaniſheth againe, it hath no ſtate in us, it continueth not in us, nor we in it. That it be not only, but remaine. By faith factum eſt; Dwell, by perſeverance, the true free-hold indeed.

4 And that this we may, to provide for the fourth: To uſe meanes, to draw from Him that, whereof He hath ſuch plenty, grace and truth. The breſts that are full, have as great pleaſure in being drawne, as the Childe that draweth them. Aſſure our ſelves, it is ſo here. There is majus deſiderium deplendi in Him, than replendi in us: more, in Him, to part with, than in us to receive. And what meanes are thoſe? To goe to the Word and fleſh together. The Word it ſelfe doth well; and, of the twaine, the Word hath leſſe cauſe to complaine; But, this, at other times. But, at this now, we are not to content our ſelves with one alone; but, ſince He offereth to communicate Himſelfe both wayes, never reſtraine Him to one. The Word we heare, is the abſtract of Verbum: The Sacrament, is the antitype of Caro, His fleſh. What better way, than where theſe are actually joyned, actually to partake them both? Not, either alone, the Word or fleſh: but, the Word and fleſh both, for there they are both. If we regard habitavit, this is a ſure way, we have a plaine text for it; Qui manducat carnem, in me manet & ego in illo, He abides in me, and I in Him. If it be Grace and Truth we reſpect, how may we better eſtabliſh our hearts with Grace, or ſettle our mindes in the Truth of His Promiſe, than by partaking theſe the conduit pipes of His Grace, and ſeales of His Truth unto us. Grace and Truth (now) proceeding, not from the Word alone, but even from the fleſh thereto united; the fountaine of the Word flowing into the ciſterne of His fleſh, and from thence deriving downe, to us, this Grace and Truth, to them that partake Him aright.

Ioh.6.56.

But, ſetting them aſide, the day, the Word was made fleſh, it is moſt kindly, that a memoriall be kept, aſwell of the fleſh as the Word. On the Feaſt of their union, they would be united: The day, they were joyned by Him, they would not be ſundred by any: but we to celebrate both, in honour of both. For, judge with your ſelves how inconvenient it is, to keepe a Feaſt in honour of His taking fleſh, and even that day abandon His fleſh, and never once take it. Verbum & caro (if ever) to be joyned, this day, the day of their joyning. Accordingly then, as well by the act, to teſtifie and repreſent the Words making fleſh; as to procure He may dwell in us; and dwelling repleniſh us with His Grace and Truth. And laſtly, that we may hold this Feaſt aright, and doe the dutie that properly belongs to it, let us by both doe honour to both, that from both we may receive the fruit of both; Grace, to enable us; Truth, to guide us, to the hope of glory. Not to that, in the Parentheſis; that is but vidimus quaſi: but, to the other, videbimus ſicut eſt, to ſee Him as He is, and, by ſeeing, to be transformed into the ſame Image of Glorie.

A SERMON PREACHED

before the KINGS MAIESTIE, at White-hall, on Friday, the XXV. of December, A. D. MDCXII.
being CHRISTMAS day.

HEBR. Chap. I. Verſ. I. II. III.

1. At ſundrie times and in diverſe manners, GOD ſpake in the old time to our Fathers, by the Prophets:
2. In theſe laſt dayes, Hee hath ſpoken to us by His SONNE, whom He hath made Heire of all things; by whom alſo He made the worlds;
3. Who, being the brightneſſe of His glory, and the ingraved forme of His Perſon, and bearing up all things by his mighty word, hath by Himſelfe purged our ſins, and ſitteth at the right hand of the MAIESTIE in the higheſt places.

ET erunt noviſſimi, primi (ſaith our SAVIOVR,) And the laſt ſhall be firſt. And this Text tells us of a great Prerogative, of theſe laſt dayes, above the firſt. Of which laſt dayes, this is the firſt day; the day of CHRISTS Birth. For, make a partition of the two times, Olim, and Dies noviſſimi; and this day will be found to end Olim, and to begin Dies noviſſimi; to be the firſt day of theſe laſt dayes; the very Kalends of Chriſtianitie, from whence, wee beginne our AEra, or Chriſtian computation. Matth. 19. 30.

The Summe and Diviſion. I.

The Dignity of this Day, (and ours in it) is here ſet out two wayes: Firſt, by a caſe of compariſon: of compariſon, betweene the times paſt, and theſe now; betweene the Fathers and Vs. The point, wherein, is GODS ſpeaking, ſpeaking, to both: but, in a more excellent manner, and by a farre more excellent perſon, to us, than to them. The end: that ſo we might know, know and acknowledge, quæ à Deo data ſunt nobis, what GOD hath done for us, and done for us, this day. For all the difference is, in this Day: all the dignitie we have above them, is by it: that ſo we may be highly thankfull to GOD for it, and hold the day it ſelfe as an high Feaſt.

GOD is the ſame in both; He that ſpeaketh to both: 1 of old, to them: 2 of late, to Vs. Thus farre, even; they and we. One GOD, one ſpeaker, to both. The oddes: Both ſpoken to; but not both ſpoken to, alike: Not alike in three Points: 1 Not in the Matter, or Parts, of which: 2 Not in the Forme, or Manner, after which: 3 Not in the Perſons, by whom. 1 To the Father, He ſpake πολυμέρως, by many peeces; not entirely. 2 To them, πολυτρόπως, after ſundry faſhions; not uniformely. 3 To them, by His Servants, the Prophets; not by His SONNE.

But, when the Apoſtle commeth to rejoyne upon theſe three, he repeateth not the two firſt, but pitcheth only on the Perſon: That He; that, the Perſon, by whom, is without all compariſon, more honourable, and excellent, than the Prophets, His Servants: (He will doe as much to the Angels, by and by after:) That looke how much a Sonne is better than a Servant, ſo much, our eſtate above theirs.

II. This, for the Comparative. But then, fearing, it might be, wee would not conceive high enough, of this SONNE, or weigh Him, as He is worthy; He goeth to it, Poſitivè; and (as it were) ſets up His Armes, conſiſting of eight ſeverall Coats; or proclaimeth His ſtile, of as many ſeverall Titles. Which we may reduce, to foure ſeverall combinations. [1] Sonne and Heire: [2] the Brightneſſe and Character: [3] Maker, and Supporter of all things: [4] That purgeth our ſinnes, and, that is ſet downe in the throne. And theſe againe may be
1 abridged to theſe two: [1] what He is, in Himſelfe; [2] and, what, to us. 1. In Himſelfe, all
2 the reſt: 2. To us, [1] made Heire: [2] purgeth our ſinnes; [3] and ſo cleanſeth our Nature; that, being ſo cleanſed, He may exalt it. For, it is for us, and not for Himſelfe, Hee taketh up the place mentioned, at the right hand on high.

III. Then, our dutie: Bona ſi ſua nôrint, If wee can skill of our owne good, to finde our eſtate greatly dignified by it; and, to honour this day, the beginning of this dignitie to us; wherein, GOD gave His SONNE, to ſpeake, vivâ voce unto us: to purge our ſinnes; and to exalt us to His throne on high.

I. GOD in times paſt ſpake to the Fathers; and His ſpeech was πολυμερῶς, of many ſeverall parcels; to ſeverall perſons; at ſeverall times; ſome at one time, ſome at another: And as the time grew, ſo grew their knowledge (peece and peece) of the great myſtery, this day manifeſted.

The comparative part and difference.

I In the Matter.

God in times paſt, &c. in many parts, ſpake, concerning His Perſon. Firſt, one peece: Man, He ſhould be; [a] of the Womans ſeed; That, ſhould bruize the Serpents head; and, there was all: *Gen.*3. Then another peece: Of what Nation He ſhould be; [b] of the ſeed of ABRAHAM, (Gen. 22.) Then, another yet: Of what Tribe, [c] of the Tribe of IUDA: (*Gen.*49.) 2. And, (not to hold you long in this) GOD, in times paſt, in ſundry parts, ſpake concerning this Dayes worke: That, came by peeces, too. One parcell, to [h] ESAY, of His Birth: (*Eſa.*9.) To [i] MICA, the Place of it: (Mica 5.) To [k] DANIEL, the Time of it, by weekes: (*Dan.*9.) So you ſee, it was by peeces, and by many peeces, they had it. Now, for the Manner. It was multiformis. GOD, &c. many manner mayes. One manner, by dreames in the night, (Iob 33.) Another manner, by viſions; And thoſe againe of two manners. [1] Either preſented to the outward ſenſe, as Eſay VI. [2] Or, in an extaſie, repreſented to the inward; as Dan. X. Another yet, by Vrim, in the breſt of your Prieſt. And yet another, by a ſmall ſtill voice, in the eares of the Prophet. 1 *Reg.*19. And ſometime, by an Angell, ſpeaking in him (Zach. I.) But, moſt-what, by His SPIRIT. And, (to trouble you no more) very ſure it is; that as, for the Matter, in many broken peeces: ſo, for the Manner, in many diverſe faſhions, ſpake He to them.

Luke 1.78.

GOD,

GOD, in times paſt, ſpake by Prophets: and but by Prophets, He ſpake not, from MOSES, to Iohn Baptiſt (who was the Horizon of the Law and Goſpell.) I will not ſtand, to runne through them all. And now, the Apoſtle, when he is to come to us in the laſt dayes; when he ſhould oppoſe three more, to match the former three, he doth not; but, paſſeth by the two firſt, the Parts, and the Manner: leaveth out πολυμέρως and πολυτρόπως and ſo inſinuates thereby thus much; that, He hath ſpoken to us entirely, without reſervation; and uniformely, without variation. But, thoſe two he waiveth, and inſiſteth onely on this laſt, (as the faireſt marke of difference,) the Prophets, and His SONNE. 3 In the Mem.

The Prophets were holy men; but, men. And, there is a nature more perfect, than that of man; even the nature of GOD. And, in the Houſe of GOD, they were faithfull ſervants; but yet, ſervants: and, that (we know) is but an unperfect condition, in compariſon of a SONNE. To us in the laſt dayes is given, that what we have, we have not from any Prophet, though never ſo excellent; but, from the Lord of the Prophets: Not from any Servant, though in never ſo great place; but, from the SONNE: And, not from any of the ſonnes of men; but, from His own Son, the SONNE of GOD. From His mouth we have received notice of GODS will: He Himſelfe, ore tenus, imparted it to us. 2 Pet.1.21. Heb.3.6. Mat.21.35. Mat.21.38

But then, If any aske: Seeing, GOD, in times paſt, and GOD, in theſe laſt dayes, is the ſame GOD; He that ſpake to the Fathers, and He, that, to us, but one Speaker: why not, by His SONNE, at firſt? I will give a reaſon, fit for this place. A Decorum was to be kept, and ſome kind of correſpondence with State. That as, at the proceeding of a great Prince, before He himſelfe commeth in ſight, many there be, that goe before Him, and thoſe, of divers degrees; and at laſt, Himſelfe doth appeare: So, this Prince, that Sits in the Throne, ſhould not ſtart out at the firſt, and ſhew Himſelfe; but be allowed His traine of Patriarks, and Prophets, to be His Anteambulones; and, in the fulneſſe of time, Himſelfe ſhould come, with the fulneſſe of grace and truth, and eſtabliſh one entire uniforme way, to continue for ever. Gal.4.4. Ioh.1.14.16.

From this Compariſon, theſe are the points, we learne: We muſt ferri ad perfectionem. And, theſe are notes of imperfection: There be too many parts, and too many manners, in that, to be a perfect, State. If the Matter were full, no more would be added: If the Manner were perfect, it would no more be altered. Never then, to reſt in theſe. MOSES himſelfe pointeth us, to one after him, by his Ipſum audite, (Deut. 18.) Who is that? GOD Himſelfe, in the Mount, tells us by His Ipſum audite. And, when GOD ſaid it, MOSES and ELIAS were there in the mount, and reſigned up both their ſeverall audiencies: MOSES, for himſelfe; and ELIAS, as well in his owne name, as in the name of all the Prophets. Deut.18.18. Mat.17.5.

This, againſt the Iewes; that will, no further then MOSES: that will reſt in the Law. For, nihil ad perfectum adducit Lex, the Law brings nothing to perfection: But Finis legis, CHRISTVS. And, all Prophecie hangs in ſuſpence (as imperfect,) till the fulfilling of it; which was done by CHRIST, to whom they all gave witneſſe. Now, when that, is perfect, is come; that, that is unperfect, muſt away. Not to reſt, in them, then: But, to CHRIST; and never reſt, till we come to Him. Rom.10.4. 1. Co.13.10.

And, as never to reſt, till we come to Him: So, there to reſt, when we are come to Him: As ſoone as His voice hath ſounded in our eares, that they itch no more after any new revelations. For, in Him, are all the treaſures of wiſedome, and knowledge. Coloſ.2.3.

God ſpake once and twice: A third time, He will not ſpeake. This, is His laſt time: He will ſpeake no more. Looke for no more peeces, nor phanſie no more faſhions: Conſummatum eſt, there are no more, to looke for. He is the truth: and, he that hath found the truth, and ſeekes further, no remedie, he muſt needs finde a ly; he can finde nothing elſe. To gett us therefore to CHRIST; and never be gott from Him; but, there, hold us. Pſal 62.12. Ioh.19.30.

We cannot follow a better patterne, than the Apoſtle here: We ſee, what haſte he makes. For, (as if he were upon thornes, till he were with CHRIST,) without any Exordium, or preamble, here, in the beginning of his Epiſtle, hee hits on the Point ſtreight; ſtreight; as if all time were loſt, till he were there. Yea, having named the parts, and manners of the times paſt, for very haſt to be at Him, he forgets both parts and manners; only for deſire, to be with Him, the ſooner.

II. The poſitive part.

And (ſo, with him) I haſte and paſſe to the ſecond Poſitive part. Wherein being carefull, we ſhould take perfect notice of Him; and fearing we would not weigh theſe words [by His SONNE] as were meet, but heare them ſleightly, and paſſe them lightly over; the reſt of the Text he ſpends, in making a commentarie of this word SONNE: That we may conſider, how great this Partie is; and conſequently, how much it imports us, to regard His ſpeech, and to eſteeme of His feaſt with no meane accompt. And, (to ſay truth) it was more than needfull, conſidering the meaneſſe of His birth to day; that He ſhould thus proclaime His ſtile of eight titles, and, over the place of it, ſticke them up, as ſo many ſcutcheons, to give us true notice of the greatneſſe of the Partie.

But withall, his meaning was to deſcribe CHRIST at all points: as (indeed) theſe eight conteine a perfect deſcription, of His Natures, His Perſon, His Offices, His Agencie.

1 His Natures, in the very beginning: Quem fecit, is Man; Per quem fecit, is GOD. Not, quem onely, Man alone; but, Per quem ſæcula, GOD alſo. But, for His Divine Nature, He is more full yet; That, He is His SONNE, the Splendor of His glorie, the Character of His ſubſtance, the Maker and Vpholder of the world and all in it.

2 His Perſon: in this word ſemetipſo; He did it Himſelfe, (that is,) in his owne perſon. Himſelfe, is ever ſayd of a Perſon.

3 His Offices: In His ſpeaking, His Prophecie; by which, He unfoldeth the Myſteries of GOD. In His purging our ſinnes, is His Prieſthood: And, His Kingdome, in the throne of Majeſtie, wherein He ſits.

4 His Agencie, (or quid ad nos,) In locutus eſt nobis. To us, He ſpeaketh: and, purgans peccata noſtra, Our ſinnes He purgeth. Nobis, and noſtra: To us, and for us, He is, that He is. All His ſpeaking, and doing, propter nos homines, & propter ſalutem noſtram, for us men, and for our ſalvation: and, our part, in Him, and His.

I. What Chriſt is in Himſelfe.

We reduced all theſe eight, to two. 1 What in Himſelfe; 2 and what, referendo to us. In Himſelfe: what by Nature; Sonne and heire: What by excellencie; Splendor and Character: What by power; Maker and Vpholder of all. To us; What in love already performed; He hath purged our ſinnes: In hope yet expected; He is ſet, and in poſſeſſion of the throne of glorie; which is, in our names, and to our behoofe, and not His owne.

In his Divine nature.

His Divine Nature hath no leſſe than three, to expreſſe it: 1 Sonne, 2 Brightneſſe, and Character: and two, to prove it, the 1 making and 2 ſupporting of all.

I have heretofore remembred you, that the high perfections of that Nature are ſuch and ſo many, as, no one terme will ſuffice, to ſet it forth: we are glad to borrow from many, to do it; and yet, but brokenly, too. And that though there be not any reſemblance tranſlated from the creatures, (though never ſo excellent,) that will hold full aſſay, yet withall, this we are to thinke, that, ſince the HOLY GHOST hath made choice of theſe termes, they are no idle ſpeculations, that are drawen from them.

1. Sonne.

Of theſe three then: 1 Sonne, 2 Brightneſſe, 3 Character. 1 In Sonne, there is a true identitie of Nature: upon it is grounded, ὁμοούσιον, being of one ſubſtance; even as the Sonne is with the Father.

2. Brightneſſe.

2 But the Sonne commeth after the Father, in time, and that a good time: Amends is made for that, in the next terme, (Brightneſſe.) For, it is not to be imagined, that there ever was, or could be a light body, but, in the very ſame inſtant there muſt ſtreame from it, a brightneſſe. So, upon this is grounded Coëternall.

3. Character.

3 But then, there is ſome inequalitie, between the light body it ſelfe, and the beame or brightneſſe of it: The Beame not full out ſo cleere. This, is the imperfection in the terme Brightneſſe. But, that is ſupplied, by the next, Character: For, that, is (ever) juſt equall; neither bigger, nor leſſer, than the type, or ſtampe, that made it. Vpon this (then)

(then) is grounded Coequall, and like per omnia, ὁμοίωσις: So like, as, Shew us the Father (ſaith Philip:) why, He that ſees the Character, never deſires to ſee the ſtamp; if ye ſee the one, ye ſee the other: He that ſeeth me, ſeeth the Father, whoſe expreſſe forme I am. Ioh. 14.8. Verſe 9.

Agreeable to theſe three, we beleeve of Him, that He is conſubſtantiall, as the SONNE; Coeternall, as the Brightneſſe; Coequall, as the Character: Againſt the new heads of the old Hydra ſprung up againe in our daies.

This terme (SONNE of GOD) is ſometime communicated to Saints; ſometime to Magiſtrates. Leſt we might underſtand it, as we doe in Saints, or as we doe in Magiſtrates, he addeth two words; 1 the one, Glorie; 2 the other, Subſtance. Of which, Glorie is imparted to others: Subſtance, to none but Him. His glorie on earth He imparteth to Magiſtrates; and they are called the Sonnes of the moſt High. His heavenly Grace, (which is Glorie inchoate) He imparteth to His Saints; and, to them, gave He power, to be Sonnes of GOD. Pſal. 82.6. Ioh. 1.12.

But, His ſubſtance is in neither. For, the firſt (Magiſtrates) are, by Ego dixi: but He, by Ego genui. And, the ſecond (Saints,) to them He giveth priviledge, or prerogative, ſo to be. So, they, κατ' ἐξουσίαν; but He, κατ' οὐσίαν: Per præſtantiam, they; Per ſubſtantiam, He. Pſal. 2.7.

He, the brightneſſe of His glorie, and Character of His ſubſtance: that is, not in glory only, which may be imparted to another; but even, in His very ſubſtance (too) it ſelfe.

And againe: not in ſubſtance of the Deitie alone, but (in that, which belongeth to it,) the glorie alſo. Subſtance, is Deus; Glorie, is Dei. All, that He is; and all, that He hath: Subſtance and Glorie, both.

The Brightneſſe of His Glorie: He was ſuch a ſonne, as did no way eclipſe His Fathers glorie; but (as a beame) made it ſhine more bright. The Character, the true ſtampe of His ſubſtance: Nor, he rendered not a broken image, as if the ſtampe had been ſet on, or driven away: but, was His very true expreſſe forme.

Another myſterie, yet. Theſe three note a proceeding: The Sonne, from the Father: the Brightneſſe, from a Light: the Character, from the Type: And ſo, a ſecond perſon. I proceeded, and came from the Father, (He ſaith it Himſelfe.) Ioh. 15.28.

Firſt, a true and naturall proceeding, from Him, as the Sonne. Secondly, (to take away all conceit of groſſe or carnall generation,) by a pure and cleane proceeding, as De luce, lux; in which, there is nothing but pure, and undefiled. Thirdly, Character-wiſe, from His hypoſtaſis, (it is the word in the Text, marke it well:) Not, from His οὐσία (that is) not from His ſubſtance at large; but, from His determinate Perſonall eſſence; (for, ſo is hypoſtaſis, properly:) That is, Not from the Deitie, or eſſence of it, (which neither begets, nor is begotten;) but, from a Perſon in the Deitie.

Now theſe three, if we referre them to Olim, the times paſt; Then, as the Sonne, He is oppoſed, to His ſervants (that is) the Prophets. As He is a Beame of light, to the many parts (as it were many ſparkes:) That, was all the light before. As the Character (or firme impreſſion) to the many vaniſhing ſhadowes under the Law.

But if, to the preſent, we referre them: As He is the Sonne: we ſhall find no eſtate, but ſervitude; no adoption, but in Him. As the Brightneſſe: no cleere light of knowledge, nothing but miſts and darkneſſe, but by Him. And, as the Character: no true ſoundneſſe, or ſound truth, but figures and flitting ſhadowes, without Him. From Him, as the Sonne, receive we grace, whereby we are adopted: As the Beame, the cleerneſſe of faith, whereby lightened: As the Character, the true ſignature of charitie, whereby ſtamped, to know (our ſelves) and be knowne of others, that we have heard Him aright, and are His true Diſciples. Ephe. 1.5. Ioh. 1.9.

Theſe three expreſſe His Divine Nature: Two more, to prove it. In them, His excellencie: in theſe, His Power. Which is ſet out, two waies: 1 In the Creation: Omnia per Ipſum facta, & ſine Ipſo nihil, all made by Him; nothing without Him. 2 And againe, in the Preſervation, (by vertue of His Et ego uſque operor,) which is His work to The two to prove it. Ioh. 1.3. Ioh. 5.17.

to this day; to continue and uphold in their being, all that He hath made to be. One, Pſal.148.5,6. by His word ſpoken; So, made: the other, by His Law given: So, made faſt to continue. In a word: all had been nothing, but for Him: and all would fall to nothing, without Him.

Now, in that He thus made all, and makes all to laſt, the meeteſt perſon, He was, to make all new; to reſtore that He had made. And, it was a conveniencie, that He ſhould; and it was an inducement, that He would undertake the buſineſſe, and go through with it.

2 What Chriſt is to us.

All this He is, in Himſelfe: Yet not ſo, but, in all His ſplendor and glorie, He mindeth us. And that ſo, as He is deſirous to bring us, to the joynt partaking of His inheritance, as Sonne; of His glorie, as the Brightneſſe; yea, of the very Divine nature, as the Character of His Subſtance. The ground whereof is laid, in [quem fecit hæredem,] whom He made heire; and that was, as man: For, per quem fecit (we ſaid) is GOD; Quem fecit, is man.

1 He is made Heire.

Made him heire.] Heires, are either borne, or made: So borne, by nature; or, ſo made, by purchaſe. He was His Sonne; and, His onely: Sonne and ſo borne His heire. He was borne, and yet he would be made. There is a myſterie, in this: we are to looke to it; It will fall out, to concerne us. Heire borne He was; and ſo, claimeth all, as His inheritance, by due of birth-right. But, it is further (here) ſaid, He was made: what meanes this? Quem fecit? Nay, quem genuit. That, is true: But, quem fecit is true likewiſe. Fecit hæredem, qui prius fuit hæres: So borne, and ſo made, too; Hæres natus, and hæres factus. So commeth He to a double right, two titles. How ſo? He needed but one: He would have two. To what end? Not, for Himſelfe; for Himſelfe, one was enough. Belike, His meaning was to have two, that He might ſet over one to ſome body elſe. There, is the point. He was borne Heire, for Himſelfe: but, made heire, for us. Hæres natus, that ſerveth Him; that He reteines to Himſelfe; Hæres factus, that, He diſpoſeth of, to us. By this, we hold; euen by Quem fecit: that, is our tenure, and beſt hope. He is, and ever was, in the boſome of His Father, as hæres natus: He now is, but, on our behalfe, and to our behoofe, at the right hand of His Father, as Hæres factus. And now followeth, He purged our ſinnes.

2 He purgeth our ſinnes.

For, he could not bring us to ſin with Him in His throne (thus purchaſed) being ſo ſpotted and foule, as we were, by meanes of the pollution of our ſinnes. He was then to purge and make cleane our Nature firſt, that He might exalt it to partake His purchaſe, being ſo cleanſed. Where firſt our caſe is ſet downe, wherein He found us, and wherein we are, without Him. A ſinners caſe (how glorioufly ſoever he or ſhe gliſter in the eyes of men) being in GODS eyes, as the caſe of a foule diſeaſed perſon: And we thereby taught, ſo to conceive of ſinnes, as, of foule Spots, without; or, of ſuch hu-
2 Cor.7.1. mours (within) as goe from us, by purging. Inquinamenta carnis & Spiritus (as Saint Paul termes them right) defiling both fleſh and Spirit: which unleſſe they be purged, there is no entring into the heavenly Ieruſalem (where, the throne is;) into which, nihil
Apoc.21.27. inquinatum, no polluted thing ſhall ever enter.

Exalt us He could not, being in that plight: for love or pitie therefore, purge us He would. And here now, is the top, or higheſt point of elevation, in this Text. Who being the Brightneſſe (or, though He were the Brightneſſe) that is, a Partie ſo excellent in Nature, Glorie, Perſon, and Power; Nature as Sonne; Glorie, as Brightneſſe; Perſon, as Character; Power, as maker and ſupporter of all: who though He were all this, did not abhorre to come, and viſit us, being in that foule and wretched caſe. This will Pſal.8.4. teach us, Domine quid eſt homo? what is man, that Thou ſhouldeſt viſit him? Viſit him;
Luk.1.78. not, as the day-ſpring from an high doth the earth; but viſit him, as if a great Prince ſhould goe into an Hoſpitall, to viſit and looke on a lothſome diſeaſed creature.

2 And, not onely viſit him; but, not refuſe the baſe office, to looke to his purging from that his vncleaneneſſe.

3 And thirdly, not cauſe it to be done by another; but to come and doe it in Semet ipſo, by his owne ſelfe, in perſon.

4 And, fourthly in doing, not to ſtand by, and preſcribe; but Himſelfe to miniſter and make the medicine.

5. And fifthly, to make it Himſelfe, and make it of Himſelfe; in ſemetipſo, and de ſemetipſo; to make the medicine, and be the medicine.

6. And how, or of what? Spots will out with water; Some will not, with any thing but with bloud: Without ſhedding of bloud, there is no taking away Sinne, as Chap. IX. ver. 22. And not every bloud will ſerve; but, it muſt be Lambs bloud; And a Lambe, without ſpot. And not every lambe neither; but the Lambe of GOD: or (to ſpeake plainly) a Lambe, that is GOD: His bloud, and nothing elſe, will ſerve to doe this. 1 Pet. 1. 19. Ioh. 1. 29.

7. And ſeventhly, not any bloud of His; not, of a veine, (one may live ſtill, for all that:) but, His beſt, moſt pretious, His Heart-bloud, which bringeth certaine death with it. With that bloud, He was to make the medicine. Die He muſt, and His ſide be opened, that there might iſſue both the water and the bloud, that was to be the Ingredients of it. By Himſelfe; His owne ſelfe; and by Himſelfe ſlaine: by His death, and by His bloud-ſhedding, and by no other meanes: Quis audivit talia? The Phyſitian ſlaine; and, of His fleſh and bloud, a receipt made, that the patient might recover!

And now, we may be at our choice, whether we will conceive, of ſinne, as of ſome outward ſoile, in the ſoule; And then, the purging of it, to be per viam balnei, needs a bath, with ſome cleanſing ingredients, as the Prophet ſpeakes, of the herbe Borith: And, this way purged He us; made a bath of the water that came out of His ſide, to that end opened, that from thence might flow a fountaine for ſinne, and for vncleanneſſe (Zach. 13. 1.) Water, and mixed with His bloud; as forcible, to take out the ſtaines of the ſoule, as any herbe Borith in the world, to take away the ſoile of the skinne. Ier. 2. 22. Zach. 13. 1.

Or, whether we will conceive of ſinne, as of ſome inward peſtilent humour, in the ſoule and conſcience, caſting us into perill of mortall (or rather, immortall) death: Then, the purging of us, to be by way of ſome Electuary, or Potion: (And ſo, He purgeth our ſinnes, too.) To that end He hath made an Electuary of His owne body, [Take; eat it:] and tempered a cup with His owne bloud, [Drinke yee all of it:] which, by the operation of His eternall Spirit in it, is able effectually to purge the conſcience from dead workes (or actuall ſinnes) and from the deadly effect of them: No balſame, or medicine, in the world, like it. Matth. 26. 26, 27. Heb. 9. 14.

The Summe of all is: There be two defiling ſinnes, and two wayes He purgeth them. Cleane we are, from the firſt, as waſhed from the originall uncleanneſſe of our Nature, and that, by the Laver of regeneration. And, whole we are, as purged within, from the actuall ſinnes of our perſons; and that, by the cup of the New Teſtament, which we bleſſe in His Name, And the bloud of IESVS CHRIST purgeth us from our ſinnes. By both, He purgeth us from both. And this, for His purging. Tit. 3. 5. 1 Cor. 10. 16. 1 Iohn 1. 7.

And is ſet downe.] Of which, we are not to conceive, as of a thing meerely touching Him; (that, His labour being done, He tooke His reſt; and there is all:) But, that this His ſitting downe is, a taking poſſeſſion of that His deare made purchaſe: And that, not in His owne Name. He had it before; He was in glory, and in the ſelfe-ſame glory with His Father, before ever the world was. 3 And ſitteth at the right hand, &c.

This Hæres factus pertaineth to us, as, done for us; not, for Himſelfe, who needed it not, nor could have any uſe of it.

Theſe two (betweene them) comprehend all, even all we can wiſh: 1 to be purged of the one; 2 and, to be ſeazed of the other. They follow well: For, to what end purged Hee us? To leave us, there? No; but, for ſome further matter: which, though it be laſt in execution, was firſt in intention. Having ſo cleanſed us, not content with that, it was His purpoſe further, to bring us to glory; that is, to no leſſe matter, than to ſit on His throne with Him, purchaſed by Him for no other end.

And theſe two, Purging, and Sitting downe in the throne, as the Alpha and Omega, the firſt and the laſt of that, He doth for us. And ſo, in them, is all well repreſented; Purging our ſinnes, the firſt; Sitting in the throne, the laſt. To purge our ſinnes, He began, this day, the firſt day, the day of His Birth: wherein He purified and ſanctified, by His holy Nativitie, the originall uncleanneſſe of ours. And, Sit in the throne, was His laſt worke, on the laſt day of His Aſcenſion: Then tooke He poſſeſſion, in our names, ὡς πρόδρομος (ſaith the Apoſtle) as forerunner for us. Chap. 6. Verſ. ult.

The

The degrees of this Exaltation, be theſe: 1 Firſt, A throne it is: and, that is not every ſeat; but, a ſpeciall, and chiefe, and honourable ſeat. 2 And ſecondly, of thrones, there be ſome inferiour, as, the thrones of Iuſtice: This is the higheſt; for it is a throne of Majeſtie. 3 Thirdly, It is in excelſis; and that maketh up all. For, the thrones here below (even of Majeſtie) ſooner or later, they that ſit in them, muſt come downe from them.

Pſal.45.7. But, the throne on high, Thy ſeat, ô GOD, is for ever and ever: Not fading, and tranſitory, as ours here. 4 Fourthly, in this throne, ſet He is: and, Sitting is the ſite or poſition of reſt: that is, reſt in glory. Here, where moſt glorie, leaſt reſt. 5 And fifthly, on the Verſe 13. right hand, which is, on the throne, the beſt, and next place to GOD Himſelfe. And, by this, are we above the Angells: for, to which of them (as the Apoſtle after deduceth) ſaid

Verſe 14. He at any time, Sit on my right hand: No: but, ſtand before me, as miniſtring ſpirits, all. Or, when they reſt, it is on the other hand: the right hand is kept for us, and poſſeſſed already, by one in our Nature, who, in this ſeat will not ſit alone, Sed conſedere nos ſecum fecit, in cœleſtibus, (Eph. 2. 6.) Even now, we ſit there, in Him; and ſhall there ſit with Him in the end. So He promiſeth, in expreſſe termes (*Apoc.*3. 21.) that we ſhall ſit with Him in His throne, as He doth in His Fathers. And ſo, not in the throne, will He be above us, but onely, that, He, in the middeſt, and we, on His right hand.

III. Our duty to Chriſt. Our duety then is, for His excellencie, to honor Him; for His Power, to feare Him; for His love ſhewed, reciprocally to love Him againe; for His hope promiſed, truly to ſerve Him. GOD, for His part, would have His ſervants the Prophets well uſed: but how-ever they, in times paſt, were regarded by them, this He makes full accompt of,

Mat.21.17. if He ſend His Sonne, we will not faile but reverence Him. Specially, ſuch a SONNE; of ſuch glorie, ſuch power, and, above all, of ſuch love towards us, to provoke ours againe. And againe, of ſuch ability, to reward with eternall glorie, as He will even buy our ſervice, at Who gives more: and pay us for it to the full, with no leſſe wages than a throne of glorie.

1 As a Prophet, ſpeaking. This in generall. More particular: In three termes, He is ſet out to us (here) in the text: 1 Speaking, 2 Purging, and 3 Sitting: as a Prophet, He ſpeakes; as a Prieſt, purges; as a King, ſits ſpeaking; our duty is to heare Him, to lay up His ſayings in our heart. Two markes His word hath here, 1 fecit, and 2 ſuſtinet; made, and makes continue: Let it have the ſame, in us. In the Sermon time ſomething is begunne to be made in us, but, it continueth not: which ſheweth, it is not verbum virtutis, to us. Againe, let it not be, as a Brightneſſe, only to be ſeene by us; but as a Character too, to leave a marke behinde it, to be ſeene on us; and then, it is right.

Pſal.95.8. Now, hodie ſi vocem, To day if yee will heare His voice, yee can heare none but vagitum infantis, ſuch a voice as uſeth to come from a new borne babe. And even ſo, He ſpeakes to us, if we can underſtand. For, even this Verbum to be infans, and Tonans to be vagiens; He, to ſend forth ſuch a voice; it ſpeaketh humilitie, (I am ſure) and great love, that ſo would humble it ſelfe; if we have eares to heare it. When He, that was the brightneſſe of His Fathers glorie, ſhould be ſo eclipſed: He that ſits on the throne, thus be throwen in a manger.

2 As a Prieſt, purging. Prophets ſpake; but purged not. Purging was ever the Prieſts office. It is true: the word, He ſpeaks, hath a mundifying vertue: Iam mundi eſtis, Now are ye cleane. It cleanſeth then. But, not that only, nor principally. For, the medicine, which purgeth ex proprietate,

C.10.10. His fleſh and bloud goe to it. By which will we are ſanctified, even by the offering of the bodie of IESVS. That bloud of IESVS CHRIST, cleanſeth us from all ſinne (1 Ioh. 1. 7.) Theſe, the true ingredients into this medicine. But better yet, if both goe together. And, this day, they firſt came together, the Word, and Fleſh: therefore, (of all daies,) this day, they would not be parted. For, will you ſever the fleſh from the Word, that day, on which GOD joyned them? GOD forbid. There is a correſpondencie, between the Word, and His Brightneſſe; and between the Sacrament, and His Character. The Word giveth a light, and His brightneſſe ſheweth in it ad horam, and not much longer. The parts of the Sacrament, they are permanent, and ſticke by us: they, they, are a remembrance of the Characters made in His skin and fleſh. And if yee ſeeke to be rid of your ſinnes, this was broken for you, and this was ſhed for you, for that very end, for the remiſſion of ſinnes. And ſo yee receive His Perſon; even Semetipſum: And in Semetipſo, in His Perſon it was, He purged our ſinnes. And ſo, that, a ſure way.

Laſtly, for Sitting: that is His Kingdome; that is kept for dies noviſſimorum noviſſimus, the laſt day indeed. That is yet in hope only. The ſame fleſh that cleanſed our ſins, the ſame now ſitteth on the throne; and ſo, hath both vertues: for the preſent, a power to purge; for the future, a power likewiſe to exalt. The ſame bloud is the bloud of ſacrifice for remiſſion of ſinnes; and the bloud of the New Teſtament, for the paſſing to us the bequeſt, which is the right of His Purchaſe, for which, He was made Heire. And the very Angels, who (this day) adored Him in our fleſh; and it, in Him; thereby ſhewed plainly, not the purging only, but the exalting of it alſo, by this Dayes worke. And that, to day, wherein they ſang alowd in the skie, we have cauſe to make much of, and to rejoyce in it; the Day of the greateſt Glory to GOD, peace to the earth, and goodwill towards men, that ever roſe upon the world.

Luke 2.13,14.

GOD grant that we may ſo hold this firſt Feaſt with Chriſtian joy, as we may hold that laſt, with like joy; and bee found as cheerefull in it.

G A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED

before the KINGS MAIESTIE, at White-hall, on Saturday, the XXV. of December, A. D. MDCXIII.
being CHRISTMAS day.

IOHN Chap. VIII. Verſ. LVI.

ABRAHAM Pater veſter exultavit ut videret Diem meum: & vidit, & gaviſus eſt.

Your Father ABRAHAM rejoyced, to ſee my Day: and hee ſaw it, and was glad.

HEre is Ioy, Ioy at a ſight, at the ſight of a Day, and that day CHRISTS. It is CHRIST that calleth it here, diem meum, His day: And no day ſo properly His, as His Birth Day. So, the Text comes full upon the Day.

But, to deduce it point by point.

Firſt, CHRIST hath a Day proper to Him, which in expreſſe termes, He calleth (here) diem meum, my day.

Secondly, This Day, to be ſeene, is a day of Ioy. Double joy; [1] Exultavit, and [2] Gaviſus eſt: both in the Text.

And thirdly, (which is ſomewhat ſtrange) It was ſo to the Patriarch ABRAHAM. Him we finde (here) doing that, which we now are about; Seeing, and rejoycing, at the ſight of CHRISTS Day: taking notice of it; and taking Ioy in it.

Laſtly, all this nothing diſpleaſing to our SAVIOVR CHRIST: for it is ſpoken by Him, to the praiſe of Abraham that did it; and to the diſlike of the Iewes, that did it not. To them is this ſpeech: CHRIST tels them of Abrahams doing it: and blames them for not doing the like.

And what are we (now) diſpoſing our ſelves to doe, but even the very ſame that is in the Text here, to rejoyce, to ſee CHRISTS Day?

And a three-fold warrant we have in this Verſe, to doe, as we doe. 1. The Patriarch's doing it. 2. CHRISTS allowance of the doing of it. 3. And His diſlike of the Iewes, for not doing it.

We have ABRAHAM for our example; we doe but as he did. In his time, CHRISTS Day was a Day of Ioy; and a Day of Ioy is a Feaſt, and ſo holden by Him, wee ſee. Which falls out much to our content. For, the ſame Feaſts, the ſame Religion. So we finde by this, that he and we are of one Religion. One in ſubſtance, which is CHRIST: One in circumſtance, which is His Day. CHRIST himſelfe, Abrahams Ioy; Nay, His Day Abrahams Ioy too. The ſame meum; that is, CHRIST: the ſame Diem; that is, Chriſtmas.

Then (which is another degree) Abrahams Example approved of, by CHRIST; and and that, after ſomewhat a ſtrange manner: For it is not here (if you marke it) Exultavit, ut videret Me; But, ut videret Diem meum. He makes His Day the object of all this exultation and Ioy. His Day (I ſay) and not Himſelfe: commends Him, that He rejoyced at the ſight, not of Himſelfe, but of it. Verily, this ſpeech of His is much to the honour of His Day; and the very ſolemnity of the Feaſt, and all the Ioy and gladneſſe thereon, may well be thought to have beene founded upon this ſpeech of His. Alwayes, if Exultavit ut videret, were a praiſe to Him; We may be ſure, Exultavit cum viderct, can be no diſpraiſe to us.

Adde thirdly: Abrahams example approved by CHRIST. Not ſo approved, as he leaves it at libertie: They that will may doe the like. But that, He reproves them that doe it not. For He blames the Iewes here, for not doing herein as Abraham: Your Father Abraham did it, you doe it not. Which is againſt them that have a ſpleene at this Feaſt: that thinke they can Ioy in Him well enough, and ſet His Day by; Nay, and abrogate it quite: and in ſo doing, they Ioy in Him all the better. Nay, love Him, love His Feaſt: Ioy not in it, nor in Him neither.

You ſhall ſee how they are miſtaken. Therefore they doe ſo (they tell us) leſt obſerving dayes and times, they ſhould ſeeme to Iudaïze. It falls out quite contrary. For who are they whom CHRIST here blameth? Are they not Iewes? And wherefore blameth He them? for not doing as Abraham: And what did Abraham? Rejoyce on His Day. So upon the point it will fall out, that not to rejoyce on His Day, that is indeed to Iudaïze, and they little better than theſe Iewes, that follow them in it. Gal.4.10.

Nay, here is another thing yet, will grieve them more: Iewes they ſhall be; But none of Abrahams Children; No more than theſe were. Obſerve it well. It is the Occaſion of this ſpeech, the very iſſue CHRIST takes with them: Pater noſter Abraham was ſtill in their mouthes (in the 33, 39, 53. Verſes:) If (ſaith CHRIST) you were His Children (marke that If,) ye would patriſſare; deſire what He deſired, and Ioy what He Ioyed in. Now, My Day he ſo highly eſteemed, as glad He was, that He might ſee it: And you, that would ſo faine father your ſelves, upon Him, are ſo farre from that, as what He deſired abſent, ye deſpiſe preſent: what He would have beene the better to ſee; ye are the worſe that ye ſee it. Now then, how are theſe Abrahams Children, that have nothing of Abraham in them? Before, (at the 40. Verſe,) Yee ſeeke to kill me for telling the truth. This did not Abraham, and yee doe it. Here now againe: Hee rejoyced in My day; And yee doe it not. Doe that he did not; doe not that Hee did: how can theſe be Abrahams ſonnes? Verily, as it is in Eſay 63. Abraham neſcivit nos: Abraham would never know them for his. None of his ſonnes, theſe. Thoſe are his ſonnes, that doe as hee did. And here now come in wee. They Iewes; but not Abrahams Children: Wee, Abrahams children; but not Iewes: For as He did, ſo doe we. There is Ioy with us, at the ſight of His Day: we renew our Ioy ſo oft, as by the Revolution of the yeare it commeth about. And for this very point, we finde our ſelves the neerer to Abraham: Even for the joy of His day. Alwayes ſure we are, ſince 1 Abraham did it, and 2 CHRIST allowed it, and 3 diſallowed the contrary: by theſe three, wee have good warrant to doe, as we doe: To make it a time of Ioy. And ſo, a time of Ioy, GOD make it to us. Eſay 63.16.

Thus it ſtands for the Order. There be in the Text three acts ſpecified, from one, iſſuing; from Abraham all: All directed to one marke; falling all upon one Object. That Object is Diem meum, My day: Of that then firſt. The three Acts be, 1 Exultavit, ut videret: 2 Videt: and 3 gaviſus eſt. 1 Firſt, would be glad, ut videret, that He might ſee; that is, was deſirous to ſee it: 2 Then had his deſire, did ſee it: 3 And laſtly, ſeeing it, tooke joy of his ſight. The Diviſion I. II.

Of which three, the firſt and laſt, deſiderium and gaudium, deſire and joy, are two affections attending upon Love; and are ever ſure ſignes of it. Deſire, when we want and have not what we love. And Ioy, vvhen vvee now poſſeſſe, or (as the terme is) enjoy it. The middle, which is Sight, that pertaines to faith: Faiths light it was, hee ſaw it by. So here is fides per Charitatem operans: Abrahams faith right. Gal.5.6.

But I keepe the Order in the Text, I change it not, it cannot be mended. All goes by a right line. 1 Deſire firſt, that is the way, to ſee. 2 Seeing next; that brings joy. 3 And joy is the end; and a good end it is, to end in joy.

Theſe three, with reference, firſt to Abraham; And then after, to our ſelves.

I.
The Object, Diem meum, My day.

TO finde our marke firſt, that all this deſire is, to ſee; all this joy when it is ſeene; It is Diem meum, CHRISTS Day. CHRIST is GOD and Man; Sonne to both: His day, as the Sonne of GOD; or as the ſonne of Man, Which of theſe?

Note, as the Son of GOD. Mica 5.3. 1 Tim.1.16.

Not as the Sonne of GOD, As the Sonne of GOD, He hath no day. Day and night are parts of time; And Egreſſus Ejus, His goings out are from all eternitie. 2. If we would improperly call it a Day; no day, to be ſeene: The light of it is inacceſſible, not to be approached to; it would ſtrike any man blinde to behold it. 3. If we could ſee it, and Him, in His Deitie; yet there is ſmall joy to ſee CHRIST ſo: Small joy to ſee Him, but by the light of this Day. All the deſire was, that He might be; All the joy, that He was to be ſeene, as the Sonne of Man. As the Sonne of Man, then: His day, ſo.

But as the Son of Man. Luke 17.22.

But as the Sonne of man he hath more dayes than one: So He ſaith, (*Luk.*17.) They ſhall deſire to ſee one day of the Sonne of man: one, of many; any one of them. But this (here) notes ſome one eminent Day, above the reſt: It is a day, with a double article, τὴν ἡμέραν, τὴν ἐμὴν, That Day; That ſame Day: That, if any one day Mine, more than other, I would, by ſpeciall prerogative call, τὴν ἐμὴν, Mine indeed.

Now, there be but two ſuch eminent dayes to ſtand for this: 1 The firſt, and the 2 laſt. Firſt, of His Geneſis: or laſt, of His Exodus. Geneſis, His comming into the world; or Exodus, His going out. That is: the firſt, of His Nativitie: or the laſt of His Paſſion. Which of theſe?

Not the day of His Paſſion. Luke 22.53.

Not of His Paſſion. Firſt: that was none of His. For He ſaith to them that tooke Him: Hæc eſt hora veſtra, Yours: So, theirs it was; not His. Secondly, It was not His Day; Nay, it was no day, neither, but Tenebrarum, as he there addeth: So, night rather than day. But thirdly, without all queſtion, no Day of joy. The Heavens are darkened; the Earth quaking; the ſtones renting; every one going their wayes, beating their breſts for ſorrow: That was no ſight, to rejoyce at; That no day, to rejoyce in.

But of His Birth. Luke 2 11.

Then is it of neceſſitie to be His Birth day: That was a Day; the Angell calls it To day: To day is borne. And His day it was: for every man claimes a kind of property in his Birth day. Men, in the day of the beginning of their life: As Kings, in the day of the beginning of their Reignes: As Cities, their Palilia, when the trench is firſt caſt: As Churches, their Encænia when they are firſt dedicate: So Men their γενέθλια, when they firſt come into the world. It is too plaine, this. His Day then: And ſure, a day of joy withall. Joy in Heauen; joy in Earth. In Heaven: for, a day of Glory to GOD on high. In Earth: for, a day of Peace here below, and for good-will towards men; as ever, nay more than ever was any. The Angell ſo proclaimed it, Gaudium omni populo, A day of Ioy to all People: And proclaimed, why? Quia hodiè natus eſt. And this omni populo (as appeares now by this Text) was not only all People, then in being, or after to be: But (as LEO well expreſſeth it) in præteritas ſe refudit ætates, the joy of it went backe up to the Ages paſt; up, even to Abrahami's time, two thouſand yeares and more before ever it came. I know well, this Day may be taken for the whole time of His life: But it muſt be by a figure then And no man but ſeeth, that a Day doth more literally and properly ſignifie a day, than the time of ones whole life at large. Yet that time too had his beginning on a day: And that day, even for that very beginning, may well chalenge a better right, and neerer property in this word [day] than any longer time whatſoever. As the very day, whereon He was firſt ſeene, firſt ſhewed to the world, as the Son of Man; As the very day, wheron the firſt fruits of all the joy then, & ever ſince: ſure I am, the Fathers fix it all upon one day, and upon this day by name. So [a] Irenæus, [b] Auguſtine, [c] Cyril ſet it down; that, this day it was. This day then be it: the day of His Birth. So have ye the Object.

Now

Now to the three Acts: And first of Desire. Exultavit ut: that [Vt] is Desire. Glad and faine, Vt, that, he might see; that is, he desired, he longed much, to see it. Gaudere ut, and vellem ut, expound one another. This day then, is dies desiderij, or desiderabilis. To be desired, even of Abraham; and, if of him, of all. Of the Cause first, Why: and then, of the Manner, How, he desired it.

II. The Acts of Abraham. 1. His Desire: exultavit ut.

The Cause: why should Abraham so desire to see this day, two thousand yeares and more, after his dayes were at an end, and he in his grave? what was it, to him? how was he concerned, in it? We say; Omnia bonum appetunt: what good had he by it? We say againe, Indigentia desiderij parens: what need had he, of it, that he should so desire it? Yes: Christs Birth he needed; he had good by; and consequently, His Birth day.

1 The cause of it.

Ye remember Iob's EASTER; that, in all his heavinesse, this was spes in sinu, his only comfort and joy, That well yet, his Redeemer should rise againe one day. The joy of Iobs EASTER, the same is the joy of Abraham's Christmas: Even, that a day should come, wherein his Redeemer should come into the world. For, Abraham's case was not such, but that, a Redeemer he stood in need of. One he stood in need of, and one he had: you may read it totidem verbis (Esay 29.22.) Thus saith He that redeemes ABRAHAM. That party; Him, he needed: and Him he desired: And desired His Day, for His sake: Diem for Meum; the Day for Him that was borne on the day.

Iob. 19.1.

Wil ye heare it from his own mouth? Thus he setteth down his own case, Gen. 18. (that very time, when he had this day first shewed him, the first glimpse of it:) Thus complaines he there, of his need, (& complaining, implyes his desire:) Et ecce ego pulvis & cinis: And lo I am but dust and ashes. Dust, is plain: it refers us to Pulvis es, & in pulverem: He was that, by nature; by his very creatiõ. But, why ashes? how come they in? Ashes, he was not made of; That is not naturall: That (sure) refers to somwhat els. Ashes (we know) come of fire, without it they are not made; ever presuppose a fire precedent. So that, besides death to resolve Him into dust, he saw a fire to turne Him into ashes. He saw it in his vision, Gen. 15. when the sun was downe, & it was night; & a great feare, or Horror fell upon Him, he saw Clibanũ fumantem, a fiery furnace. Blame him not, if after such a night, he desired to see day, and this day; dies contra noctem, a day to visit him from on high, after so feareful a night, as this. But, this was but a vision of the night: But, when all daies and nights should be at an end, he saw, there was yet a day, to succeed that day, which Enoch taught the world, wherein the Lord should come with thousands of his Saints, to execute judgement upon sinners. Which day (it seemes) Abraham took notice of. For speaking to God, (in the same Chap.) he calleth Him by this title Iudge of the world. Of which day, a visible signe he had, before his eyes, waking, in the consuming of the five Cities, immediately after. No marvell then, though he desired dies contra diem, a day that should quit him, of the feare of that day. Inasmuch then as dust he was, and ashes he was to be; dust by creation, ashes by condemnation; (and both these he confesseth himselfe lyable unto;) He needed one, as to restore the ruines of the first; so to prevent the danger of the second. Being in need, he desired; desiring, he was glad to heare of; but more glad would be, to see that day, that should bring him into the world: And, ô when shall that day be? And sure, the sun must go down with us too, & what feare we shal then be in, or whither we shal see the furnace, I know not: but sure I am, that joyfull it will be then, to have a comfortable sight and apprehension of the benefit and beginning of this day: When the world shall bid us good-night, then (as S. Austin expresseth it) videre in nocte sæculi, diem CHRISTI.

Gen. 18.27. Gen. 3.19. Gen. 15.17. Luk. 1.78. Iude 14, 15. Gen. 18.25.

This, for the Cause, why Abraham himself should desire this Vt; to see this day: Why but for this day, Abraham had been but ashes of the furnace. Which sheweth, it is a benefit to see this day: And as a benefit, desired by him; and as a benefit, and no small benefit, vouchsafed him, (the sight of this day.) Now, for his manner how, how greatly he desired it. We may take measure, of the greatnesse of the day, by the greatnesse of his Desire. It was no day of small things: for, Exultavit ut is no small desire: there is vigour, there is both passion and action in it. The nature of the word [exultavit] is, He did even fetch a spring for joy that he should see it. And it is not exilijt neither, but exultavit. And that is a frequentative: and so, he did it more than once. To give a spring; and not once, but often; this, was much, if all be well considered. For one to doe it, one in yeares, fast upon an hundred, as Abraham then was; for such an one to doe it, it was very much.

2 The manner of it.

1 Much. Firſt, that he ſhould not containe his affection; not keepe it in, but, out it muſt, even breake forth into an externall act, into a bodily geſture, that all that ſtood by, muſt ſee him doe it.

2. Into a bodily geſture (I ſay;) But then againe, that, into ſuch a bodily geſture; a geſture on this faſhion. It muſt needs be, he was greatly, yea, ſtrangely affected with it, that it made him forget his gravitie, and put a kind of indecorum upon his age, at thoſe yeares, to fall on ſpringing. All men will eaſily know, that (ſuch as he was) ſtayed, diſcreet, grave men will never be ſo exceeding moved, as to be brought to fetch a ſpring, but, upon ſome verie exceeding great occaſion.

3 Thirdly, to doe all this, but onely in deſire, and nothing but deſire, is yet more ſtrange than the reſt. In the fruition, to joy is kindly; but, in the deſire, altogether unuſuall; Exultavit, cum videret, may well be underſtood: Exultavit, ut videret, not ſo well. For deſire, of it ſelfe, is a reſtleſſe thing, unquiet, and complaining: but a very affliction of the ſoule. It makes men, yea, the very creature it ſelfe (ſaith the Apoſtle) ingemiſcere (which is farre from exultare) to grone for griefe, not to ſpring for Ioy; Sad rather than glad, in that they want their deſire. Iudge then, how great a good is the good of this Day; that, not in the enjoying, but, even in the deſiring; and that againſt the nature of deſire, did put old father Abraham into this paſſion; and brought from him this act, the act of exultation, and made him even young againe.

Rom. 8. 22.

But I will tell you yet of another as ſtrange. For, the ſame word, you ſhall obſerve is uſed of the Baptiſt, while he was yet but an Embrio, and in his mothers belly. That at the enter-veiw, and voice of the Bleſſed Virgin MARY, He (then, a babe) gave a ſpring in the wombe of Elizabeth His Mother. So that we ſee, both old and young, Abraham and Iohn Baptiſt, from the eldeſt in yeares to the child unborne; it concernes all; All need it: All are bound to be glad of it: All is for the joy and honour of this Day.

Luk. 1. 44.

And this for his firſt act, and firſt joy, joy of deſire, for there be two. There is another in the laſt word ἐχάρη. As there be two ſights; 1 ut videret, and 2 Et vidit: ſo, two joyes anſwerable; either hath his Ioy. And, this firſt is but Iohn Baptiſt's fore-runner, to the ſecond. For, all this is but the Apoſtles Spe gaudentes, yet; but the joy of hope, onely, anticipating the other before it come; and joying (as it were) that it ſhall joy when that joyfull time ſhall be.

Rom. 12. 12.

And with this, we muſt begin; even with deſire; and ſeeke to poſſeſſe our ſoules of it. This carrieth the next, the eye: for, where the deſire is, there wil the eye be alſo: & where it is not, no proſpect thitherward; no window open, that way. Therfore, ſet that (as the needle point) right, and al the reſt wil follow. For, the truth is; therfore we joy not becauſe we ſee not, and therefore we ſee not, becauſe we deſire not. True it is, and pitie it is; Millions there be never have true ſight of Him: Why? they have no deſire to Him. We muſt then begin there, with deſire, with ut videret, or we ſhall never come to Et vidit. And, for our comfort, the very deſire of this day, or of any other good thing elſe, (if it be true, and uncounterfeit,) a firſt degree it is, and it is not lightly to be accompted of. It is not nothing to ſay, (if one can ſay, and ſay it true) exultarem vt viderem. For, of this deſire, Exultarem ut is (among other) one Character. Three there be beſides; (and lightly they goe together,) and they be Succedanea (as we call them) to any good thing, which we have not, but wiſh that we had, or that we might have. As, if we cannot repent, cannot abſtaine, cannot beleeve, or live as we ought, theſe come in place, and expreſſe yet, how we ſtand inwardly affected toward them: Even theſe foure: 1 Exultarem or gauderem ſi: 2 vellem ut: 3 metuo ne: 4 doleo quod non. Gauderem ſi, Glad I would be, if it were: Vellem ut, and I heartily wiſh, that it were; Metuo ne, but ſure I doubt, it be not: and Doleo quod non, ſorry I am, that it is not. Characters they be all: and, if they be heartie and true, a ſigne it is, the flax ſmoketh yet: Et linum fumigans (ſo gracious He is) the flax, if it doe but ſmoke, He will not quench it. But, of all the reſt, ſpecially if it be this. For there is vigour and vehemency, in Exultarem ut. It is a fervent deſire, a kind of hunger and thirſt, a deſiderio deſideravi, this Exultarem ut, I would doe any thing; I would give any thing, to have a ſight of it. And, ſuch a deſire ſhall never be fruſtrate: It ſhall ſee certainely.

Of

Of Exultare ut videas, the Reward ſhall be videre ut exultes: of deſiring that we ſee not; to ſee that vvee deſire. Wee have Abraham, the Father, in the Text; Take Zachee, the ſonne, for an example of it too. Hee, out of a deſire to ſee CHRIST at His comming to Iericho, and could not for the preaſe, exultavit, gave a ſpring, got him up into a tree, ſo to have a ſight of Him. It vvas ſo well taken, this very deſire, as hee not onely ſaw Him, but received Him to houſe. And our SAVIOVR pronounceth, this Text was fulfilled in him; He was even thereby become the Sonne of ABRAHAM. For, howſoever in things temporall, it may be, and is oft defeated; In things pertaining to CHRIST, and His ſight, Exultavit ut videret, ſhall ever end (as here it doth) in Et vidit. And ſo we paſſe to the next point of Et vidit.

Luke 19.
Verſe 3.
Verſe 4.
Luke 19.

II. Abrahams ſecond Act. Et Vidit. And he ſaw it.

It is here (firſt) directly avouched, the Patriarchs (and Abraham, by name) they did not only deſire to ſee this Day; but ſee it they did. See it, though they did but ſee it and ſalute it [a] πόρρω a farre off; or, [b] ὡς ἐν κατόπτρῳ as in a perſpective glaſſe; yet ſee it they did. It is but Vidit; Vidit, in genere. Any ſight, any deſcrying will ſerve to verifie the Text. I ſay not, they did preciſely know the very day of the moneth; I would not ſo be underſtood. But this they did: They knew and ſaw in genere, ſuch a day there ſhould come, and then, come when it would; or what day of the yeare, it would; all joy they wiſhed to that day, for the joy it was to bring them. This was enough for them in their eſtate: And more particular notice had they had of the Moneth and Day, this I am ſure, they would never have ſcraped it out of their Kalender.

b 1 Cor. 13. 12.

He ſaw it. But then, if you aske how he ſaw it? Sure, not (as they were miſtaken, in the Text) as if Abraham could not ſee His Day, unleſſe CHRIST had beene in the fleſh, in the dayes of Abraham. That is one kinde of ſeeing indeed. For ſo Simeon ſaw: (For mine eyes have ſeene.) But this Text muſt be true: vidit Abraham. Then another there is beſide. This is ſure, what Simeon ſaw, the ſame ſaw Abraham: What Simeon ſaw, (I ſay;) but not as Simeon ſaw. The ſame CHRIST both; and the ſame Day: though not both in the ſame manner.

How he ſaw it.
Luke 2. 30.

But let mee tell you, this of Abrahams vvas the better. And if Simeon had not ſeene Him in the ſame manner Abraham did, for all his viderunt oculi, hee had beene never the nearer. No more than vvere the Iewes here, that hurled ſtones at Him, and ſo ſaw Him; but to no benefit, no matter of Exultation at all; of condemnation, rather.

Then, if not with his eyes, how? Yes; vvith his eyes too, though not of the bodie. Which to conceive, vvee are to take notice, that there is in every man of us two men: (Plato had ſeene ſo much, and ſet it downe: And (it is thought) the Apoſtle tooke it from him:) [1] An Outward, and [2] an Inward man: (Rom. 7. 22. 2 Cor. 4. 6.) Now, if there be an Inward man, vve muſt allow him ſenſes, as a man; hee muſt have eyes. So hee hath: (Epheſ. 1. 18.) Having the eyes of your underſtanding lightened. Here are eyes: by them did Abraham; and even by them (and by no other) doe vve ſee Him.

Thoſe eyes many have beſide, but ſee Him not for vvant of light. By vvhat light ſaw Hee? Hee vvas a Prophet; and as a Prophet, hee might be in the Spirit, and have the viſion clearely repreſented before him, in luce prophetiæ. But vvithout all queſtion, a faithfull man hee vvas, and ſo certaine it is, hee ſaw it in lumine fidei, the light of faith, vvhich faith is the cleareneſſe or evidence of things not ſeene, (Yee know the place) Not ſeene: Nay even of things inviſible. In the 27. Verſe of the ſame Chapter, it is ſaid, Moſes was as if hee had ſeene the Inviſible. By faith, that was: And in Abraham the Father of the faithfull, the ſame faith was. Both ſaw by the ſame light, and by it CHRIST was as verily preſent unto them, as if they had ſeene Him this day in the Manger with the Shepherds; or, with Simeon, had had him in their armes, and beheld him. Thus, Hee; and thus wee. For it is all the light hee had, or wee have, to ſee Him by.

Gal. 3. 9.
Rom. 4. 11.

But where was this, and when? The Text is enough, ſo it was, If we reſt not in that, but vvould know vvhat the Fathers have conceived of the place and time; This they hold: That He ſaw His Birth, at the valley of Mamre, (Gen. 18.) And He ſaw His Paſſion in the Mount of Moria, (Gen. 22.) But, this Day He ſaw at Mamre. (Gen. 18.)

Gen.17.19. 18.10. Then was CHRIST, in perſon there; one of the three: Then made Abraham the confeſſion, we before ſpake of. Then is twice mention of the time of life: which is this time, if ever any. Then Iſaac was delivered as a gage; And then was his feaſt of joy, downe went his fat Heyfer: So, all meet at the time juſt.

Gen.24.2. And, ſo certainly He then ſaw it there, as after (we ſee) he ſware his ſervant on his thigh: His thigh became Ad ſancta Dei Evangelia: He bade his ſervant lay his hand on his thigh, and ſweare by the GOD of Heaven. Et quid vult Deus Cœli, ad femur Abrahæ? What hath the GOD of Heaven to doe with Abrahams thigh? (ſaith Saint Auguſtine:) And his anſwer is, Niſi quia, But only, becauſe he ſaw (certainly) the SONNE of GOD was from thence to take fleſh: Semen Abrahæ, de femore Abrahæ: and ſo, to make us this bleſſed day. And this, of CHRISTS viſus: And now of ABRAHAMS gaviſus, the end of his ſight and deſire both.

3 Abrahams third Act. Et gaviſus eſt. Prov.13.12. Gen.2.9. He that was glad, he ſhould ſee it, muſt needs be glad, when he did ſee it. If Exultavit, ut videret; then Vt vidit, Vt exultavit? when he ſaw, how glad a man was he, now his deſire was accompliſhed? And the deſire accompliſhed (ſaith Salomon) is a tree of Life; And the tree of Life (we know) is in the middeſt, is the very center of all the joyes of Paradiſe. Now, we cannot poſſibly take a view of theſe his joyes better, than out of the Promiſe; which was the very liſt (or briefe) of all, he was either to ſee, or to joy in.

Gen.26.4. We begin with the bleſſed joy of Benedicentur omnes gentes in ſemine tuo: Benedicentur, ſhall be bleſſed. And that is of two ſorts: 1 Bleſſed from: And 2 bleſſed with: and either hath his joyes.

1. 2. Pſal.16.9. Bleſſed from: from pulvis & cinis; duſt of the grave, and aſhes of the furnace. His ſoule bleſſed from the Clibanus fumans, which hee ſaw. Moreover alſo his fleſh ſhould reſt in hope; hope of riſing againe, from the duſt. Elſe how could GOD be called the Matth.22.32. GOD of Abraham: GOD is not the GOD of the dead, but of the living. Abraham then being Luke 2. dead ſhould live againe, and then Nunc dimittis may he ſay, no leſſe than Simeon. Theſe two joyes firſt. And theſe two fit well the words of Ioy in the Verſe: 1 Exultavit, that is a motion of the bodie; for the bodies deliverance from duſt: 2 Gaviſus, that is a fruit of the Spirit; for the Spirits redemption from the furnace. Theſe are his two firſt joyes.

3. 4. Then two more, in bleſſed with, or concerning. Concerning firſt his two gages, Iſaac and Canaan: Iſaac, of CHRIST; Canaan, of the Kingdome of Heaven. And this Ioy was ſurely great; And if the joy of the Pledge (or Gage) were great, farre greater was the joy of the Inheritance it ſelfe which he ſo greatly deſired. For both he was (ſaith the Hebr.11.13. Apoſtle) and hee bare himſelfe like a ſtranger here upon Earth: ſhewing thereby that hee ſought for another, a better, an abiding Citie, whoſe builder is GOD, and that in Heaven. For that it was no earthly thing, which was the object of his joy, nothing but Heaven; thence it may appeare, that when GOD promiſed him, his ſeed ſhould be as the duſt of the Gen.13.16. Earth, (Gen. 13.) It never moved him; it was no Object, that, of his faith, or deſire: not Gen.15.5. ſo much as a Credidit followes upon it. But after, (in the 15. Chap.) when GOD bade him, Looke up, and told him, they ſhould be as the ſtarres of heaven: then preſently fol- Verſ.6. lowes, Credidit Abraham Deo, He caught hold of that; beleeved that ſtraight; and it was counted to him for righteouſneſſe: even that his faith, touching (no duſt of the Earth, but touching) heaven, and heavenly bleſſings. And theſe are the two next joyes of bleſſed with: And theſe two anſwer the two ſights, Vt videret, the Pledge: and Et vidit, the Inheritance.

5 Gen.26.4. Now theſe foure, had they beene granted to himſelfe, and to his owne houſe, well might it have been gaviſus, with him: how much more then that it ſhould, by him, have his extent, and ſtretch to Omnes familiæ, Omnes gentes, All kindreds, All nations of the Earth: be gaudium omni populo; be a day of joy to both Hemiſpheres; the joy of generalitie; That all the world ſhould be the better for him? And this, his fifth, the joy of Omnes gentes.

And

And glad might he have been, to have received all theſe, by whomſoever: yea, though a meere ſtranger. That all theſe then ſhould come to him, not, by any ſtrange partie, but by one to come out of his owne bowells; that his ſeed ſhould be his Saviour, and out of his root, ſhould riſe his Redeemer; All his joy ſhould grow from the fruit of his own body: That He, that Nuſquam Angelos, in no wiſe, them; would take on Him the ſeed of Abraham: This may (I doubt not) be reckoned, for the ſixth, even the joy of in ſemine tuo. 6 Heb. 2. 16.

Now, to in Semine Abrahæ, adde in ſinu Abrahæ, and ſo have we ſeaven compleat: That His boſome ſhould bee the receptacle of all that ſhould enter into bliſſe: Whoſoever there entertained, in ſinu Abrahæ it is to be. This is the laſt; that Semen Abrahæ ſhall bring us to ſinus Abrahæ, and make us partakers of his heavenly joyes there. But, we muſt begin with in Semine, to day; that after, in his good time, in ſinu may follow. And this for Gaviſus eſt, and for Abraham. 7 Luc. 16. 23.

Now to our ſelves. And the firſt point is, whether we will be out with the Iewes, or in with Abraham, in the fellowſhip of this Dayes joy. In, with Abraham, we ſure. If all be well weighed, we have greater cauſe to deſire the day, than he; we have more need of it (I am ſure:) Duſt, as he; but more in danger to be made aſhes than he, by Manaſſes argument, in his prayer. The benefit of his Day, and the like, they doe nothing ſo much concerne the Iuſt, (ſuch as Abraham,) as they doe ſinnefull Manaſſes and ſuch as he. And ſuch are we: And ever, the more ſinner, the more it imports him, to love the dawning of this day. Greater cauſe we have, than he. The Reference to us 1. Our deſire.

And for our ſight we have that clearer than he by much. For, though we ſee, as he; and he, as we; both by the light of Faith: yet, he in the faith of prophecie, yet to come; we in the faith of Hiſtorie, now paſt: And there is great oddes betweene theſe two. We have the record of humane Writers, many; but, of Divine, all; that this day is come and gone: Even, of ſuch, as ſaw Him with the eyes, both of the inward and outward man. 2. Our ſight.

The greater cauſe, and the better ſight: Then is our joy alſo to abound, and be above his. So it ſhould, (ſure). And we would ſeem as if it ſo were; we multiply the dayes, and where he had but one, we hold twelve together, as if we would exceed him twelve to one, in this joy. Being then ſo bound, joy agreeth well with us at this time. The Text invites us to it, the whole ſtraine from the firſt word to the laſt. It beginnes with Exultavit, and ends in Gaviſus eſt. 3. Our joy.

Only, that from whence we take our joy, from thence we take the rules of it: Which be three. 1 One of the two parts, Exultavit, and Gaviſus eſt: 2 One of the end, Diem meum: And 3 the laſt of our patterne, ſicut ABRAHAM pater noſter, to expreſſe it as he did.

I

Heere be two ſorts: 1 One, Exultation a motion of the bodie: 2 The other, Joy a fruit of the Spirit: I am for both. I ſpeake not againſt Exultavit; let the bodie have his part. Reaſon would, the bodie and the fleſh ſhould be allowed their parts, ſince all the joy is for Corpus aptaſti mihi, and that Verbum caro factum eſt, the Word is become fleſh: that CHRIST hath gotten him a bodie. But, let not Exultavit be all whole and ſole. Then, we joy but by halves: we loſe halfe our joy; and the better halfe: for, the joy of the ſpirit is the better part, when all is done. The fleſh fades dayly; ſo doe the joyes of it: The ſpirits is the better part that ſhall not be taken from us. That of the ſpirit ſhould exceed the joy of the outward man, as farre, as Et vidit (to which it is joyned,) doth exceed ut videret. It ſhould ſo: Well, in the meane while, I would they might but part æqually: At leaſt, not to ſtay ſo long, not to make ſo large allowance of time, and coſt for the fleſh, as we leave little or nothing, for the ſpirit's part. Sure ſome-what would be done; ſome ſpeciall uſe of this Feaſt, that may tarry by us, when theſe, of the fleſh, we ſhall either have forgotten, or remember but with ſmall joy. Time will come, that one leſſon in this kind, learned this day, and laid up well, will doe us more plea- 1. The firſt rule of it. That Exultavit exceed not Gaviſus eſt. Luc. 10. 42.

ſure,

ſure, than all the ſports we ſhall ſee, the whole twelve dayes after : that we come not behinde Abraham halfe in halfe.

2 The ſecond: that it be for Diem meum.

Our next Caveat would be, that we looke this our joy be for Diem meum, and that our joy in Diem, be for Meum. For, Meum is here the Subſtantive, it is CHRIST : and Diem, but an accident, or adjective to it. That is, that we joy in it, as it is His, (CHRISTS.) As His; doe we not ſo? As whoſe elſe? To ſpeake plainely the common ſort generally all (ſome few except) wiſh for it, & joy in it; not as it is CHRISTS; but, as it is ſomewhat elſe: That is, as it is a time of cheare, and feaſting, as it is a time of ſports and revelling. Exultavit ut Videret, what? why that we ſhall now fare well: looke you, that is it: As it is dies epuli, not CHRISTI. What farther? that we ſhall now ſee paſtimes: that is, as it is dies ludi, not CHRISTI. Put both together; downe they ſate to feaſt, up they roſe to play : ſo have you the golden Calves Holyday right. As it is dies vituli, not CHRISTI. This is not diem, for meum : In very deed, this is to deſire Him, for the Day; not the Day, for Him. CHRISTS day is not deſired for CHRIST, CHRIST is the leaſt part of his owne Feaſt. If it be but matter of the belly, the Iewes here could have been intreated to have kept this Day, ſo as dies Epuli. For, before (at the 6. Chap.) When their bellyes were filled, then (and never but then,) This is the Prophet, This is He that ſhould come into the world. This was all, they then made; all that many now doe make, of CHRISTS comming into the world: That they may fill their bellyes. Never care for Benedicentur, no more than Eſau : but for bene veſcentur; and, if bene veſtientur too, then all is well.

Exod.32.6.

Or, if it be but ſhewes and matter of ſight, Herod he was glad to ſee CHRIST, too: and it is the ſame word which is here, glad, and very glad λίαν ἐχάρη: But, why was it? Becauſe he hoped to have ſeen him done ſome ſtrange feats. This pertaineth rather to Sara's laughter, than Abrahams joy. There is a difference betweene Sara's laughter, and Abrahams joy. Take heed, that we change not Abrahams joy, into Sara's laughter.

Luk.22.8.

The III. Rule. Sicut Abraham.

Now laſt, ſicut Abraham. He is propounded here to us, as our patterne; we to expreſſe our joy, as he did his, upon the day of his ſight, at the plaine of Mamre. So we ſhall begin right. Two things he did: Firſt, he got them (the three) to turne into him. The ſame would CHRIST doe, to us, this day. That our joy may be ſutable, to turne in hither? The beginning of the joy of His Day would be, in His Houſe, So the Place and the time would agree well. So He ſaith Himſelfe, Lætificabo eos in domo mea, The firſt thing I will doe, I will make them joyfull in Mine Houſe. There firſt, to ſatisfie us with the pleaſures of His houſe, wherewith (GOD he knowes) we are ſoone ſatisfied. Well, this is done, Here we are, (and much adoe too, and long it is firſt) but, here we are.

2 Gen.18.5.

The next was, when they were turned in, Abraham ſayd, Let me ſet ſome-what before you, Ideo enim declinâſtis, For even for this, are ye turned in hither: And ſo made his Feaſt. There is indeed no ſolemne entertainement, or joy, without a Feaſt. CHRIST will be, in all reſpects, as courteous as Abraham. He ſaith, let me ſet ſome-thing before you too, for therefore are you turned in hither, He invites us, to His Feaſt, (His Church (ſo) doth in His name:) Even, this day, prepares and ſets CHRISTS Feaſt before us, wherein He offers Himſelfe to us. Not, as the object of one ſenſe only, (of ſight,) as to Abraham in the Text : but, as the object of two, Sight and Taſte; Guſtate & Videte, both. And wee may not take the one, and leave the other; but ſince both be offered, receive both. For, we are come hither for this cauſe : Here then, ſhew your Ioy in His Feaſt day, by partaking His Feaſt, on His Day, the onely Feaſt, of all the reſt, for which the ſoule is the better. Thus ſhall we vvith joy keepe this Day aright.

Pſal.34.8.

And here now one day calls another : this day of His calls to minde another day of His, called ſo in twenty places (His Day :) And called [That day,] in plaine reference to this. So to joy this day, as, that day we may joy alſo. As this, His day, becauſe it is the Day of his firſt comming : ſo that, His likewiſe, becauſe it is the Day of His comming againe. A Day (howſoever we do with this) which we muſt all ſee : Abraham, the Iewes, we and all. Only, that we ſee that Day with joy : that we ſo demeane our ſelves, in this, as, that alſo may prove a Feſtivall with us, even the laſt, and greateſt day of the Feaſt now begun in this. All will be, how to make that a Day of Ioy, to us, vvhen vve ſee it : To have that day riſe cleare and chearefull to us, will be the joy of all joyes. For here, firſt as we ſee but in part, ſo we can joy but in part : as our ſight, ſo our joy unperfect. But there, we ſhall ſee as wee are ſeene ; our ſight being perfect, ſo ſhall our joy be : Perfect Sight, and perfect Ioy. And beſides, that is another manner of day, than this, or any day here : a day that ſhall never goe downe : No more ſhall the Ioy of it. And it ſhall not indure for twelve dayes, or be a feaſt of a fortnight ; but ſhall be from moneth to moneth, from Iubilee to Iubilee, for ever and ever. To the joy of which Feaſt ; or to the Feaſt of which joy, by, &c. 1.Cor.13.12.

ASER-

A SERMON PREACHED

before the KINGS MAIESTIE, at White-hall, on Sunday, the XXV. of December, A. D. MDCXIIII.
being CHRISTMAS Day.

ESAY Chap. VIII. Ver. XIIII.

Ecce, Virgo concipiet, & pariet filium, & vocabitur nomen Ejus IMMANVEL.

Behold, a Virgin ſhall conceive, and beare a Sonne; and ſhe ſhall call His name, IMMANVEL.

OF all the Writers of the Old Teſtament, the Prophet ESAY hath the honour, to be the firſt, that is vouched in the New. And of all the places, this place, the honour, to be the firſt of all; even in the firſt Evangeliſt, Saint Matthew; and in the very firſt Chapter of him. We may well thinke, Saint Matthew would be carefull to make choice of a very prime and pregnant place, to ſet it (as it were) in the front of his Goſpell. This is much honour, S. Matthew doth it.

Mat. 1. 23.

But the Angell GABRIEL doth it more, (Luc. 1.) who takes this verſe, as it ſtands, word for word, and makes it ſerve for his Annuntiation, or Meſſage, to the Bleſſed Virgin without any alteration: Not ſo much, as the Ecce left out.

Luke. 1. 31.

The tenour of it is, all about a Child to be borne; a child, with an Ecce: in whom, and in whoſe birth, God ſhould be with us: So with us, as never before. On whoſe ſo being with us, depends all our well or evill being here, and for ever. For better not be at all, than be without Him: and, having Him, we need nothing elſe: for, in Ipſo omnia, in Him is all.

Col. 1. 17.

The Eunuch's queſtion fals fitly in, here: Of whom ſpeakes the Prophet this? Who is His Mother? Who the Child? Saint Matthew will be as good to us, as Saint Philip was to him: Who, where he enrolls it, tells us, Who the Mother, the bleſſed Virgin: Who the Child, our Bleſſed SAVIOVR. Who elſe? No Virgin ever bare child, but She: No Child, ever, nobiſcum Deus, (and ſo Deus) but He. There is none other to lay clayme to it, but they.

Act. 8. 34.

The Diviſion

Ecce hath in it two Powers: 1 One, for the eare; to awake it to ſome matter more than ordinarie. 2 Another, for the eye; to direct it, by pointing to ſome certainty: As here; to two certaine perſons: the Mother, and the Child. And ſhewes us two ſtrange ſights in them, Mater, Virgo; and Deus, homo: A virgin, to become a mother; GOD, to become man. A Virgin, to beare; GOD, to be borne. In both, and in either of them, three points points are offered to us. 1 Ecce concipiet: 2 Ecce pariet: 3 Ecce vocabit nomen. Our SAVIOVR CHRISTS firſt triplicitie: 1 The Myſterie of His holy incarnation, in concipiet: 2 His holy Nativitie, in pariet: 3 His Circumciſion, in vocabit nomen. And, every one, of theſe three, makes a ſeverall Feaſt. Ecce concipiet, the Annunciation: Et pariet, this Feaſt, of the Birth of our LORD: Et vocabit nomen, New-yeares Day, when His Name was given. 1.2.3.

I.

But, we apply it, to this Feaſt. So doth Saint Matthew, in his Inſpeximus of it: To the Birth of CHRIST. The birth of CHRIST (ſaith he) was on this faſhion: And then, brings in this Record out of ESAY. As if, this Ecce did in particular point at this day. As (in truth) we ſtand not much upon His conceiving, (now He is borne ſpecially, as, borne He is:) Ecce pariet, is the Point. For, then we ſee Him, take Him in our armes; then, He is with us, indeed. And, when was that? Ecce pariet (ſaith the Text.) Ecce peperit, (ſaith the day,) this very day. This is the chiefe. Matth.1.18.

But, finding them here all, we will deale with them all. 1 CHRIST, as Embrio, in His conception: 2 CHRIST as ἀρτιγέννητον βρέφος, a new-borne babe, but yet ἀνώνυμος without a name: 3 And CHRIST with His full Chriſtendome, as named; and named with this name here in the Text, the Name of Immanuel.

Of which three, yee may reduce the firſt two [conceived, and borne] to His Nature: And (to make two, to two) of the later, make two more; Vocabit, and Nomen, His Name, and His Vocation, (For, in His Name, is His Vocation,) To bring GOD to us; to make GOD with us: Him to be with us: that we may be with Him for ever. Nobiſcum Deus, the way: Nos cum Deo, the end: which is (and ſo may be) the end of the Text, and of the day, and of us all. Nothing more worth our ſight than this Birth: Nor more worth our hearing, than this Name.

ECce ſpreads it ſelfe over the whole Text, may be repeated, at every point of it: But, it firſt points to Ecce Virgo. There, we may make a ſtay: there, is a blocke in our way, by the Iewes. In no one place, doth that of the Apoſtles ſpeech appeare, that, at the reading of the prophecies of CHRIST, the veile is laid over their hearts: no where, how true the Proverbe is, that Malice will even blinde a man, as, here in this. This Verſe ſo dazles them, as, faine would they turne another way, and not ſee, that they doe. They ſee no Virgin here: Eſayes word [Alma] ſay they, is but a young woman; and, not a Virgin, properly. But, they ſay againſt their owne knowledge, in ſo ſaying. For, firſt: Beſide the nature of the word, the very energie gives as much. For, it is, of Alam, and, that is, to cover: and ſo (properly) is one, that is yet covered, and never yet knowne: oppoſed to them, that have beene uncovered, and knowen, after the Hebrew phraſe.

I.
Ecce Virgo concipiet.
1 Ecce Virgo.

1

And, beſide the uſe of the word, for a virgin, in other places. Rebecca (then a virgin) called by this name, *Gen.*24. And Miriam (then, but ſix yeare old) called by it, likewiſe, *Exod.*2.

Exod 2.8.

And, beſide their owne taking of the word, they themſelves (the more ancient of them, ſo) in their Targum, this very word Alamoth (Cant. 2.) they gloſſe and paraphraſe it by Betuloth, the proper word, for virgins: where it ſtands, this day, to be ſeene.

Beſides all this, See, whither their malice carrieth them, by denying this; even, to overturne Prophecie, and Prophet and all. For, he calls us, to ſee a ſigne; and that with an Ecce: And, what is that? if it be but a young woman, to conceive, and, no virgin; where is the ſigne? what is become of the Ecce? It is no ſigne, or wonder, unleſſe it be beſide the courſe of Nature: And, is it any whit, beſide the courſe of Nature, for a young woman, to be with childe? Therefore take away Virgo, and away with the Ecce; downe with the ſigne. Thus, rather than to beare witneſſe to the truth, ſtickt they not, to expoſe the Word of GOD (and ſo, GOD Himſelfe) to ſcorne: Make the Prophet, or (as Saint Matthew, well ſaith) GOD, by the Prophet, to ſpeake idly: give them a ſigne, that is no ſigne; tell them, of a marvell, not to bee marvelled at.

Matth.1.22. Reject them then, and reade confidently, as Saint Matthew doth, Behold, a Virgin: With Him, reſt hardly, on the skill and integritie of all the Seventie; that more than an hundred yeares, before it came to paſſe, turned it παρθενος (in Greeke) that is, a Virgin; who could skill of their owne tongue, better than any Kimchi, or Albo, or any Rabbin of them all. This, for Ecce Virgo.

2. Ecce concipiet. And, looke what worke we had with the Iew, about Ecce Virgo, the like ſhall we have with the Gentile, about Virgo concipiet. To conceive this conceiving; to joyne theſe two, a Virgin, and yet conceive, or beare; or, conceive and beare, and yet be a Virgin. For, before the birth; yea, before the conceiving come, the Virginitie is gone. True, in Nature: But, this is a ſigne; and ſo, above Nature. And, in Reaſon, ſo: but, this, is niſi crediderit is, non intelligetis, to be beleeved, otherwiſe not to be underſtood, (as, a little before was ſaid.) For, what GOD can doe, Faith can beleeve; Reaſon cannot comprehend. But, this, it can: that, we doe GOD no great favour (as, well ſaith Saint Auguſtine) Si Deum fatemur, &c. If we confeſſe, GOD can doe ſome-what, which we confeſſe, our reaſon cannot reach.

Luke 1.34. The Bleſſed Virgin her ſelfe, while ſhee ſtood upon a reaſon, upon quia non cognoſco virum, Luke 1.35. asked, How it might bee? But, reſted in the Angels reſolution: and ſo let us. Which was of two ſorts: Firſt, That the HOLY GHOST ſhould be Agent in it, and the Power of the moſt High bring it to paſſe. That, which, of it ſelfe, ſeemeth not credible, but the Author to it, put to Ex Spiritu Sancto, and it will ſeeme not incredible.

2 Specially (and, that is the ſecond;) If we ſet another by it, as unlikely as it, and done, though: As, this Ecce of the Virgins, the Angell exemplifies, by another Ecce, of Zacharies, in a manner, as hard; which yet fell out, at the ſame time. For, Elizabeth, being barren, firſt by nature, then by age; and ſo, wanting power, to conceive; ſhee, Luke 1.36. was (then) gone ſix moneths with childe. Now, the want of power to conceive, is no leſſe materiall, to hinder the conception, every way; than, want of the ſoile, no leſſe, than the want of ſeed. Hee, that could ſupply that; could alſo, this. Hee, that doe it, without one; doe it, without the other. They were Couſens, (the Bleſſed Virgin, and ſhee:) And, their Signes were ſo, too. One of them made credible, by the other.

Act.26.8. But, I aske Saint Pauls queſtion: Why ſhould it be thought a thing incredible, this to the Gentiles; If, (as their Religion taught them) they admitted, of Minerva's birth, or Pyrrha's progenie, they need not make ſtrange, at this. If they ſay, the GOD of Nature is not bound to the rules of Nature: we ſay the ſame. And yet, even in Nature, we ſee it made not altogether incredible. The light paſſing thorow a body, the body yet remaining whole: And it is put therefore into the Verſe, to patterne this, Luce penetratur, &c. The light commeth thorow the glaſſe, yet the glaſſe is not periſhed. No more, than the light of Heaven, paſſing thorow, breaketh the glaſſe; No more, did the GOD of Heaven, by His paſſage, violate any whit, the Virginitie of His Mother; if wee will allow GOD the maker of the light, to doe as much, as the light, He hath made.

But, I hold ever beſt, to let every thing reſt upon his owne baſe, or bottome: Naturall, upon Reaſon; Supernaturall, upon Faith. And, this is Supernaturall: In which, tota ratio facti eſt in potentiâ facientis: the power of the doer, is the reaſon of the thing done. GOD is the Doer; cujus dicere, eſt facere, to whom, it is as eaſie to doe it, as to

Luke 1.37. ſay it. As the Angell concluded, ſo doe I: With GOD is nothing impoſſible: And that Marke 9.23. of CHRISTS, To faith, all things are poſſible: And here are both: and, where they meet, they make no leſſe a miracle than Mater and Virgo, or Deus and Homo; Even Fides and Ratio. And this, for Virgo concipiet.

Now,

II.
1 Christ an Embrio: Et Concipiet.

Now, to the three particulars: and first, concipiet. To make Him man, it is well knowne, there wanted not other wayes: From the mold, as Adam: from a rib of flesh, as Eve. No need then, of concipiet. Yes: for, He was not to be man only; but, to be the SONNE of man; the name in the text, Filius, and the name that for the most part, He giveth Himselfe, and seems most to delight in. But, Adam was not sonne to the mold; nor Eve, daughter to Adam. And, a Sonne, no way but by concipiet. And, howsoever, of the body of man, there may engender that, which is not of the same kinde: yet by way of conception, there commeth of man, nothing but man; nothing, but of the same nature and substance, with that, he was conceived of.

This, we are to hold: To conceive, is more than to receive. It is, so to receive, as we yeeld somewhat of our owne also. A vessell is not sayd, to conceive the liquor, that is put into it: why? becaus it yeeldeth nothing, from it selfe. The Blessed Virgin, is; and therefore is, becaus she did: She did both give, and take. Give, of her owne substance, whereof His body was framed: and take or receive power, from the HOLY GHOST, whereby was supplyed the office and the efficacie, of the masculine seed. This is concipiet.

And this word is the bane of diverse heresies. That of the Manichee; that held, He had no true body. That had been, virgo decipiet, not concipiet: Not, conceive Him, but deceive us. And that of the Valentinian (revived lately in the Anabaptist) that held, He had a true body; but made in heaven, and sent into her. That had been, recipiet, but not concipiet: Received Him she had; conceived, she had not.

His loue, in so being.

From which His conceiving, we may conceive His great love to us-ward. Love, not only condescending, to take our Nature upon Him; but to take it by the same way, and after the same manner, that we doe; by being conceived. That, and no other better beseeming way. The wombe of the Virgin is (surely) no such place, but He might well have abhorred it. He did not: pudorem exordij nostri non recusavit (saith Hilarie,) He refused not that, our selves are ashamed of: Sed naturæ nostræ contumelias transcurrit, but, the very contumelies of our Nature (transcurrit is too quick a word,) He ran through them: Nay He stayed in them; in this first, nine moneths. I say, the contumelies of our Nature, not to be named, they are so meane. So meane (indeed,) as it is verily thought, they made those old Heretikes (I named) and others moe (who yet yeelded Him to be man) to runne into such phansies, as they did; onely to decline those foule indignities (as they tooke them) for the great GOD of Heaven, to undergoe.

This therefore, even this, would He have set downe, in termes terminant, of concipiet and pariet. Trusting, we would wisely judge of them, and love him never the lesse, but the more even for these. Μὴ διὰ τοῦτο ἄτιμον, ὅτι διὰ σὲ ταπεινός: Honour Him nevertheless, becaus He laid downe His Honor for thy sake. No: but, quantò ille minus debita, tantò ego magis debitor: the lesse due He tooke on Him, the more due from me to Him. In a word, quantò pro me vilior, tantò mihi charior: The lower, for me; the dearer to me. It brings to minde King Davids vilior adhuc fiam; and how GOD, even for that, regarded him the more. Concipiet & pariet, to conceive, and bring forth, in us, love, honour, and due regard, even for them. It reaches both.

Nazianz. Gregor. Bernard. 2 Sam. 6. 22.

This (sure) is matter of love: But, came there any good, to us, by it? There did. For, our conception being the root (as it were) the very groundsill of our nature; that He might goe to the root, and repaire our Nature from the very foundation, thither He went: that what had beene there defiled and decayed, by the first Adam; might, by the second, be cleansed and set right againe. That, had our conception beene stained, by Him? Therefore, primum ante omnia, to be restored againe. He was not idle, all the time He was an Embrio; all the nine moneths, Hee was in the wombe; but then, and there, Hee even eat out the core of corruption, that cleft to our Nature and us, and made both us and it, an unpleasing object, in the sight of GOD.

Our benefit thereby.

And what came of this? We, that were abhorred by GOD, (Filii iræ, was our title) were, were, by this meanes, made beloved in Him. He cannot (we may be ſure) account evil of that Nature, that is now become the Nature of His owne SONNE: His now, no leſſe than ours. Nay further, given this privilege to the children of ſuch as are in Him (though but of one parent beleeving) that, they are not, as the ſeed of two infidels; but, are, in a degree, holy, eo ipſo; and have a farther right to the Laver of regeneration, to ſanctifie them throughout by the renewing of the HOLY GHOST. This honour is to us, by the diſhonour of Him: This, the good, by CHRIST an Embrio.

Ephes. 2. 8.

Titus 3.5.

2 Chriſt a new-borne Babe: Et pariet.

Et pariet: And this, no more than needs. There may be concipiet, and no pariet follow. Venerunt filii ad partum, &c. (ſaith the Prophet) * The children came to the birth, and no ſtrength to deliver: Pariet makes all ſure.

* Eſay 37.3.

And pariet makes all appeare. We could not tell, it was Filium; knew not, what it was, or what it would be. Till He came into the world, He was as theſaurus abſconditus, though we had it, we had it not. But, when He was borne; when, come into the world; we ſee Him and handle Him: then, He was with us, indeed. With us; not, as conceived of the ſame Nature with us; but, as borne, and now a Perſon among us. That which was potentiall in concipiet, made actuall by pariet.

Pſal. 19.6. Luke 1.78.

So that, this is the Θεοφανία, when He came forth, as a Bride-groome out of His chamber; or, as the Sunne from His tabernacle, to runne His race. And, it was with a Viſitavit ab alto. Thence, an Angell cried Ecce, and ſounded it on earth: and a Starre cried Ecce, and proclaimed it from Heaven. Poets, in the Weſt, write of it: and Wiſe-men, in the Eaſt, ſaw it, and came a long journey upon it, to ſee Him. And what did this Pariet bring forth? No ſooner borne, but a multitude of heavenly Souldiers ſung, Peace to the earth (belike there had beene warre, before; but) Peace, now: Nay, more than peace, εὐδοκία; That, GOD had conceived a good liking, was well pleaſed with men. The ſame terme, to men, that he uſeth, to CHRIST Himſelfe, In whom I am well pleaſed: εὐδοκία, to both. And, what would we more? What lacke we now? His Name.

Luke 2. 13. Matth. 3. 17.

3 Chriſt Chriſtened; & vocabitur nomen.

And now He is borne, might we not leave here, and goe no further? Rem tenemus: what care we for the Name? Yes, we muſt: For, CHRISTVS anonymus will not ſerve. Therefore Eſay, therefore the Angell are carefull, to beare Him to His Baptiſme, to adde His name; The Prophet, to intimate it: Saint Matthew to interpret it. For, though we have ſaid much of CHRIST an Embrio; and CHRIST, a new-borne namcleſſe babe; yet, nothing to that that followeth; to the Ecce of His Name.

1 His Name given by God.

This Name, if it had beene of mans giving, I wot well, little heed had beene to bee taken of it. Men, ſet great titles upon emptie boxes. Nay, many times, the Names, given by wiſe men, fall out quite contrary. Salomon called his ſonne Rehoboam, the Enlarger of People: He enlarged them from ten to two. But, His name (Saint Matthew tells us) the Prophet but brought; It was GOD, that ſent it. And, the Names of His impoſing, there is no ſurer place, in Logike, than from them. His Nominalls be Realls: As His dicere, facere; ſo His dici, fieri: what is ſaid, in them, comes ſurely to paſſe.

Matth. 1. 22.

2 That Name. Immanuel. Gen. 49.10. Hebr. 1.9.

Now, there were diverſe names given Him, at diverſe times. To expreſſe all His perfections, no one name was enough. There was Iacobs Name SILO; That was, in reſpect of His Father, by whom, and from whom, He was ſent. There was Pauls name, MESSIAS, CHRIST: That was, regard had to the HOLY GHOST, by, or wherewith He was anointed. But, what were theſe? quid ad nos? We have no part in them: In this we have: And, till this came, all was in nubibus (as they ſay.) But, in this Immanuel, Nobiſcum Deus, (here) come we in firſt. For, in Immanu, is Anu; and, in Nobiſcum, Nos. And, this is the firſt Nobis, and the firſt Cum, wee finde, in any Name of His: and therefore of all other, we are to make much of it. A Virgin, to beare; GOD, to be borne, matter of wonder, but no benefit at all. But when we heare, It is with us, and for us; that Ecce makes us looke up to it.

1 Two Doubts about it. 1. How Immanuel, and not IESVS.

Before I come to it, I would cleare a doubt or two of it. 1 One of the Name it ſelfe: 2 The other of the interpretation, or meaning of the Name.

1. It will be ſaid; This, was not His Name in the end, for all this, but IESVS. True: and Saint Matthew knew that well enough; for he ſets it downe ſo. Yet, even in that place he ſets it ſo downe, preſently he vouches this of ESAY, of Immanuel: as if Immanuel, and IESVS both came to one; as (indeed) they doe; One infers the other. Immanuel, GOD with us: Why? to what end? To ſave us from our ſinnes, and from periſhing by them. If there be any oddes, it is in Immanuel, which is, of larger compaſſe. GOD with us, to ſave us; though that be worth all, yet, not that way only, but, with us, other wayes, beſides; And all, in Immanuel. 1 How Immanuel, and not IESVS.

2. GOD with Vs; Why, was He not alſo with the Patriarkes, and Prophets, and Eſay himſelfe, as well, as with Vs? He was: but, not, as well. Some Prerogative wee muſt allow this Name, if be but for this Ecce. No Ecce belongs to theſe: Somewhat more, to Saint Matthew's Goſpell, than to Eſay's Prophecie. This name muſt needs imply a ſecret antitheſis to His former being with us. We ſay nothing, in ſaying, He is now with us, if He be not ſo with us now, as never before. With them, in types and figures of Himſelfe; His ſhadow was with them; but now, He Himſelfe. With them He was, even thus, in this very Immanu: but how? in the future tenſe, concipiet, pariet; as things to come are made preſent to hope. But now, conceptus eſt, partus eſt; Re, not in ſpe; all is paſt and done. So that, now, Ita nobiſcum, ut, de nobis; Nay, ut ipſi nos: So with us, as even of us now; of the ſame ſubſtance, Nature, fleſh, and bone, that we: With us, in concipiet; conceived, as we: With us, in pariet; borne, as we. Now true, as never till now: Now ſo, as never ſo before. 2 How with us, more than the Patriarkes.

And, now, to looke into the Name. It is compounded, and to be taken in peeces. Firſt, into Immanu, and El: Of which, El, (the latter) is the more principall by farre: for, El, is GOD. Now, for any thing yet ſaid in concipiet and pariet, all is but man with us: Not, GOD with us, till now. By the name, we take our firſt notice, that this Childe is GOD: And, this is a great addition, And here (loe) is the wonder: For, as for any childe of a woman, to eat butter and honey (the words that next follow) where is the Ecce? But, for El, for GOD, to doe it; that, is worth an Ecce indeed. The parts of that Name. 1 El, Deus. Verſe 15.

El, is GOD: And, not GOD, every way; but (as the force of the word is) GOD, in his full ſtrength and vertue: GOD, cum plenitudine poteſtatis (as we ſay) with all that ever He can doe: And that is enough, I am ſure.

For the other, Immanu: though El be the more principall, yet, I cannot tell, whether it, or Immanu, doe more concerne us. For, as, in El, is might: So, in Immanu, is our right, to His might, and to all He hath, or is worth: By that word, we hold; therefore, we to lay hold of it. The very ſtanding of it, thus before; thus, in the firſt place, toucheth us ſomewhat. The firſt thing ever, that we to looke for, is Nos, Nobis, and Noſter the Poſſeſſives: For, they doe mittere in poſſeſſionem, put us in poſſeſſion. We looke for it firſt; and loe, it ſtands here firſt: Nobiſcum, firſt; and then, Deus, after. 2 Immanu, Nobiſcum: wherein 1 Anu, Nobis.

I ſhall not need to tell you, that, in nobiſcum, there is mecum; In nobiſcum for us all, a mecum, for every one of us. Out of this generalitie, of with us, in groſſe, may every one deduce his owne particular; with me, and me, and me. For, all put together make but nobiſcum.

The Wiſe-man (Prov. 30.) out of Immanuel (that is, nobiſcum Deus) doth deduce Ittiel, (that is,) Mecum Deus, GOD with mee; his owne private intereſt. And Saint Paul, when hee had ſaid to the Epheſians, of CHRIST, Who loved us, and gave Himſelfe for us: might with good right, ſay to the Galatians, Who loved mee, and gave Himſelfe for mee. Prov 30.1. Epheſ. 5.2. Gal. 2.20.

This Immanu is a Compound againe: we may take it, in ſunder, into Nobis, and cum: And ſo then have we three peeces. 1 El, the mightie GOD: 2 and Anu, wee, poore we; (Poore indeed, if wee have all the world beſide, if wee have not Him to be with us:) 3 And Im, which is Cum, And that cum, in the middeſt betweene nobis and Deus, GOD and Vs; to couple GOD and us: thereby to conveigh the things of the one, to the other. (Ours, to GOD: Alas, they be not worth the ſpeaking of:) Chiefely then, to conveigh to us, the things of GOD. For, that is worth the while: they are (indeed) worth the conveighing.

2 Im, Cum. This Cum we ſhall never conceive to purpoſe, but carendo: the value of With, no way ſo well, as by Without: by ſtripping of Cum, from nobis. And ſo, let nobis, (us) ſtand by our ſelves, without Him, to ſee, what our caſe is, but for this Immanuel; what, if this Virgins Childe had not this day beene borne us: Nobiſcum (after) will be the better eſteemed. For, if this Childe be Immanuel, GOD with us; then, without this Childe, Epheſ.2.12. this Immanuel, we be without GOD. Without Him, in this world (ſaith the Apoſtle;) And, if without Him, in this, without Him, in the next: And, if without Him there, if it be not Immanu-el, it will be Immanu-hel; and that, and no other place, will fall (I feare me) to our ſhare. Without Him, this we are: What, with Him? Why, if we have Him; and GOD, by Him; we need no more: Immanu-el, and Immanu-all. All that we can deſire is, for us to be with Him, with GOD; and He to be with us: And we, from Him, or He, from us, never to be parted. We were, with Him, once before, and wee were well: and when we left Him, and He no longer with us, then began all our miſery: Whenſoever we goe from Him, ſo ſhall we be; in evill caſe: and never be well, till we be backe with Him againe.

CHRIST, that Cum. Then, if this be our caſe, that we cannot be without Him; No remedie then, but to get a Cum, by whoſe meanes, Nobis and Deus may come together againe. And, CHRIST is that Cum, to bring it to paſſe. The parties are, GOD, and We: And now, this day, He is both. GOD, before, eternally; and, now to day, Man: and ſo, both, and takes hold of both, and brings both together againe. For, two Natures here are in Him: If conceived and borne of a woman, then, a Man: If GOD with us, then, Verſe 11. GOD. So Eſay offered His ſigne, from the heighth above, or from the depth beneath: Here, it is. From above, El; From beneath, Anu; one of us, now: And ſo, His ſigne, from both. And, both theſe Natures in the Vnity of one Perſon, called by one Name, even this name Immanuel.

It is His Vocation, to be with us: 1 In Nature. Vocabit nomen: I told you, in His Name, is His Vocation or Office, to be cum, to come betweene, (that is) to be a Mediatour, to make Him, that was contra nos, nobiſcum againe. A Mediatour is not of one, but GOD is one. GOD and Man, are two; and Gal.3.20. they were two (as they ſay:) Were two, and two will be, till He make them one; recapitulate and caſt up both into one ſumme: to knit Anu, (that is, Wee) and, El (that is, GOD) with His Im, into one: One word, and one thing, univocè, againe.

So, upon the point, in theſe three peeces, there be three Perſons; ſo, a ſecond kinde of Trinitie: GOD, Wee, and CHRIST. El, is GOD: Anu, We: for CHRIST, nothing left but Im, that is Cum, or With. For it is He, that maketh the Vnitie in this Trinitie; maketh GOD with us, and us, with GOD: and both, in and by Him, to our eternall comfort and joy.

2 In Name. Thus is He with us: And yet, all this is but Nature ſtill. But, the nobiſcum of His Name, bodeth yet a further matter. For (indeed) the With us, of His Name, is more than the With us, of His Nature. If we make a great matter of that (as, great it is, and very great) behold, the Ecce of His Name, is farre beyond it. With us in His Nature, that is, with us, as Man; that is ſhort: We are more; ſinfull men: A wretched condition added to a Nature corrupt: Will He be with us, in that too? Elſe, this (of Nature,) will ſmally availe us.

In Sinne as Suretie. * Hebr.4.15. What, in Sinne? Nay, * in all things, ſinne only except. Yea, that is, in being like us; but not, in being with us. For, in being with us, except ſinne, and except all: The ridding us of our ſinne, is the only matter, (ſaith Eſay, after.) Therefore, to be with us, in all Ioh.1.14. things, ſinne it ſelfe not except. Saint IOHNS Caro factum eſt, will not ſerve: Saint PAVLS 1 Cor.5.21. Fuit peccatum, muſt come too. In, with us, there too. I ſay it over againe: Vnitie of Nature is not enough; He is to be with us, in Vnitie of Perſon, likewiſe. So, Hee was. The Debtor and Surety, make but one perſon, in Law. That, He was: and then, Hee was cum, with us throughly, as deepe in, as we.

And this is the proper Immanu, of His Name. And this, the Immanu indeed. And, till He was thus with us, no name He had; He was Chriſtus anonymus, CHRIST unchriſtened (as it were.) For, His Name came not, till He became one with us in perſon:

Not,

Not, till His Circumciſion: Not, till for us, and in our names, He became debtor of the whole Law; Principall, Forfeiture, and all. To the hand-writing He then ſigned, with the firſt fruits of His bloud. And then, name the child, and give Him this Name, Immanuel. For, thus He was a right Immanuel; truly, With us: With us, as men: With us, as ſinfull men: With us, in all things, ſinne it ſelfe not excepted. Col 2.14.

May I not adde this: It is ſaid in the Text, She ſhall call: She, that is, His Mother. Why, She? To let us underſtand, that ſhe might give Him the Name, while He undertook this for us. But, His father, till all was diſcharged, and the hand-writing cancelled; till then, He ſuſpended, He gave it Him not. His Mother, She did; when He dropped a little bloud, at the ſealing of the Bond. But, He was faine, not to drop bloud, but to ſweat bloud, and to ſhed His bloud, every drop of it, yer this With us were full anſwered. And then, His Father did it too; Dedit illi nomen ſuper omne nomen: Then, and not before. His Mother, now: His Father, not till then. But, then, He had proved himſelfe fully with us, per omnia, when neither Wombe nor Birth, Cratch nor Croſſe, Croſſe nor Curſe could plucke Him away from us, or make Him not to be with us. Then, vocabit illi nomen, both She and He: Mother, Father, and al. With us, to eat butter and honey, ſeemeth much: And it is ſo, for GOD. What ſay ye, to drinke vinegar and gall? That is much more, (I am ſure:) yet, that He did: I cannot (here) ſay with us, but for us. Even, drunke of the cup with the dreggs of the wrath of GOD: which paſſed not from Him, that it might paſſe from us, and we not drinke it. This Name given by his Mother. Phil.2.9. Verſe 15. Pſal.69.21. Mat.27.48.

This, this is the great With us: For, of this, follow all the reſt. With us, once thus, and then, with us in His oblation on the altar of the temple; With us in His ſacrifice, on the altar of the Croſſe: With us, in all the vertues and merits of His life; With us, in the ſatisfaction and ſatiſ-paßion (both) of His death: With us, in His Reſurrection, to raiſe us up from the earth; With us, in His aſcenſion, to exalt us to heaven: With us, even then, when He ſeemed to be taken from us: That day, by His ſpirit; as, this day, by His fleſh. Et ecce vobiscum, and lo, I am true Immanuel, With you, by the love of my Man-hood; With you, by the power of my God-head, ſtill to the end of the world. Mat.28.20.

One more yet. He wonne it, and He weares this name; and, in it, He weares us. And it is both a comfort to us, and a glorie, that ſo He weares us. That, He is not, cannot be named, without us: that when He is named, Et nos unà tecum Domine, we alſo are named with Him. In Immanu, is anu, and that is we. This is not it; but this: That He hath ſet us in the fore-part of it; Immanu before El, Nobiscum before Deus. This note is not out of place, in this place, where precedence is made a great matter of: That Immanu is before El: That is, We firſt, and GOD laſt. It is Immanuel and therein We, with him.

Good manners would, in a name compound of Him and us, that He ſhould have ſtood before us, and it have been Elimmanu, (at leaſt,) Deus nobiſcum, and Deus before nobiſcum; Not, Immanuel, Nobiſcum, before Deus. He, before us; He the prioritie of the place, in all reaſon: Booz, he placed them ſo (Ruth 2.) and ſo ſhould we (I dare ſay) if it had been of our impoſing, Elimmanu: It had been great arrogancie otherwiſe. But, He giving it Himſelfe, would have it ſtand thus; Vs ſet before Him. There is a meaning in it. And what can it be but this? That, in the very name we might read, that we are dearer to Him, than Himſelfe; that He ſo preferred us; and that His owne name doth præ ſe ferre no leſſe, but give out to all the world, the Ecce of Saint Iohns Goſpell, Ecce quomodo dilexit! the Ecce of his Epiſtle, Ecce quantam charitatem habuit! See, how He loved them! Behold, how great love He bare to them! See it, in His very name: We are a part of it; We are the forepart of it, and He the later; He behind, and we, before: Before Himſelfe, and that by order from Himſelfe: He would have it Immanuel. O, whether was greater, humilitie, or charitie in Him! Hard, to ſay whether, but both unſpeakable. Not Elimmanu; but we, before him. Reu.2.4. Ioh.11.36. 1 Ioh.3.1.

Let us examine this Sine nobis, a little. How came GOD from us? Nay, aske not that: but, how we came from Him? For, we went from Him; not He from us: We made it Sine nobis;

Ionas 2.8. We forſooke him, firſt. Ionas tells us, how: By following lying vanities, we forſook our owne mercie.

Nobiſcum from Deus. If we went from him firſt, then ſhould it be (in reaſon) nos cum Deo; Not, Nobiſcum Deus: We, to Him, not He to us. Did we ſo? No indeed: We ſought not Him, He was faine to ſeeke us. Nos cum Deo, that would not be: It muſt be nobiſcum Deus firſt, or Nos cum Deo will never be. This ſecond, then: That, we began the ſeparation; that, long of us: But, He begins the reconciliation.

Who hath the hurt, if GOD be without us? We, not He. Who gets by Nobiſcum? What gets GOD by nobiſcum? Nothing, He: What get we? Multum per omnem modum. Why then doth He beginne, doth He ſeeke to be with us? No reaſon, but Sic dilexit, And no reaſon of that.

Rom 3.2.

But, when He ſought, and offered to be with us, did we regard it? Nor that neither. You ſee, the Prophet (here) offers Ahaz a Signe; bids him, aske it: Ahaz would none. And, as he, to the Signe; So we, to the Signatum, the thing ſignified: Care as little for Him, or His being with us, as Ahaz did for His ſigne. We can be content, He in any ſort will ceaſe from us, come not at us ſo long as the world can be with us, or we with it: Care not for His being with us, till world and all forſake us. How he was faine even to force it on him.

Ver. 12.

Caſt up theſe then: That, He forſakes not, but being forſaken firſt. That, being forſaken, yet He forſakes not, though. That He, which ſhould be ſought to, ſeekes firſt: And ſeekes us, by whom He ſhall get nothing. Yea, when we neglect Him ſo ſeeking, when Ahaz will no ſigne, tells him, He will give him one, whether he aske or aske not: that is, will doe us good, not onely without our ſeeking, but even in a manner againſt our wills. And tell me, if there be not as much love in nobiſcum, as in all the reſt.

Ver. 14. initio.

With us; how, we ſee. Now, With us, why; or, to what end? To more, than I have now time, to tell you of. Two onely I name. 1 One that of the place; To ſave them from their enemies: As them, ſo us. Them, from Razin and Romelie's ſonne: Vs, from the ſonne of Romelie, or Romulus, or whomſoever. If He with us, on our ſide, then will He be againſt them, that are againſt us: and, that let us never feare: Neither our owne weakneſſe, nor the enemies ſtrength. For, though we be weake, and they be ſtrong, yet Immanuel (I am ſure) that is with us, is ſtronger than they.

Our feare moſt-what groweth, both in ſinne and in danger, that we looke upon our ſelves: As if it were onely nobis; as if, never a Cum; or, that Cum were not El, the mighty GOD. As if, with that great E L, all the inferior Els were not attendant, Micha-el, and Gabri-el; and (if he will) twelve legions of Angels. Or, as if He alone, with one word of his mouth, one Ego ſum, could not blow them all downe, could not make them all, as thoſe in the Text, as the tailes of a couple of fire-brands that have ſpent themſelves, ſmoke a little, and there is all. No: if He be with us, we need not feare, what theſe two, Nay, not what all the fire-brands in hell can doe againſt us.

Mat. 26.53. Ioh. 18.5.

And (ſure) ſtrange it is, The Saints of GOD, what courage and confidence they have taken, from this very name, Immanuel. Go to (ſaith Eſay, in the next Chapter Take your counſell, it ſhall be brought to nought; Pronounce a Decree, it ſhall not ſtand? Why? For, Immanuel, GOD is with us: Nothing but this Name. For, as it is a Name, ſo, it is a whole Propoſition, if you will. And after (in the 50. Chapter) he ſeekes for enemies; calls them out, Who will contend with me? where is my adverſarie? let him come neere: So little doth he feare them. And, theſe were ghoſtly enemies: And this was, in the point of Iuſtification. This, for the Prophet.

Eſay 8.10. Eſay. 50.8.

Now, for the Apoſtle. Never did Champion, in more couragious manner, caſt his glove, than doth he to his ghoſtly enemies, to heighth, to depth, to things preſent, to things to come, to all, that none of them ſhall be able, to ſever him, from this Cum, from His love. And all, in confidence of Si Deus nobiſcum: in whom hee makes full accompt, to conquer; Nay, conquer, will not ſerve: more than conquer, he, ὑπερνικῶμεν.

Rom. 8.39. Rom. 8.37.

The reaſon is ſet downe, Prov. 30. where, he betakes himſelfe to Ittiel firſt, (which is, but a ſlip of Immanuel) Deus mecum; And then, to Ittiel, ſtraight joines Vcal, I ſhall prevaile; not I, but El with me. Ittiel goeth never alone: Vcal attends it ſtill. Get Ittiel, if Ittiel be with us, Vcal will not be away: For, Ittiel and Vcal part not.

Is this all? No: there is another in the very body of the word it ſelfe: With us, to make us that to GOD, that He was (this day) made to man. And this (indeed) was the chiefe End of His being with us; To give us, a poſſe fieri, a capacitie, a power, to be made the Sonnes of GOD, by being borne againe of water, and of the Spirit: For, Originem, quam ſumpſit ex utero Virginis, poſuit in fonte Baptiſmatis, The ſame Originall, that Himſelfe tooke, in the wombe of the Virgin, to us-ward; the ſame hath he placed, for us, in the fountaine of Baptiſme, to GOD-ward. Well therefore called the womb of the Church συσοιχον to the Virgins womb, with a power given it of concipiet & pariet filios, to GOD. So, His being conceived, and borne the Sonne of man, doth conceive, and bring forth, (Filiatio, filiationem,) our being borne, our being the Sonnes of GOD. His participation of our humane, our participation of His divine Nature.

2 To make us the Sonnes of God.

Ioh.1.12.

And, ſhall He be with us, thus many waies; and ſhall not we be with Him, (as many, I ſay not, but) ſome, as many as we can? We, with Him; as, He with us? Specially, ſince upon this iſſue, the Prophet puts King Aſa, The Lord is with you, if you be with Him: With you to ſave you, if you with Him to ſerve Him. It holds reciprocè, in all duties of love (as, here, was love, if ever,) Immanuel, GOD with us, requires Immelanu, Vs with GOD, againe.

Our Duty: To be with him.

2 Chron.15.2.

He with, us, now (I hope,) For: where two or three are gathered together in His Name, there is He with them. But, that is in His God-head. And, we are with Him; our Prayers, our Praiſes are with Him: But, that is in our ſpirits, whence they come.

In prayer, &c. Mat.18.20.

Theſe are well: but theſe are not all we can: And, none of theſe, the proper with Him of the Day. That hath a ſpeciall Cum of it ſelfe, peculiar to it. Namely, that we be ſo with Him, as He (this day) was with us: that was, in fleſh; not in ſpirit onely. That fleſh that was conceived and this day borne, Corpus aptaſti mihi, that body, that was (this day,) fitted to Him. And, if we be not with Him, thus; If this His fleſh be not with us; If we partake it not; which way ſoever elſe we be with Him, we come ſhort of the Im, of this day. Im, otherwiſe it may be; but not that way, which is proper to this Feaſt. Thy Land ô Immanuel, (ſaith the Prophet, in the next Chapter:) And may not I ſay, This thy Feaſt, ô Immanuel? Sure, no being with Him, ſo kindly, ſo pleaſing to Him, ſo fitting this Feaſt, as, to grow into one, with Him; as, upon the ſame day, ſo, the very ſame way, He did with us.

Eſay.8.8.

This, as it is moſt proper; ſo, it is the moſt ſtreight and neere that can be: the ſureſt being withall, that can be: Nihil tam nobiſcum, tam noſtrum, quam alimentum noſtrum, Nothing ſo with us, ſo ours, as that we eat and drinke downe; which goeth, and groweth one with us. For, alimentum & alitum doe coaleſcere in unum, grow into an union; and that union is unſeparable ever after. This then, I commend to you: Even the being with Him, in the Sacrament of His Body: That body, that was conceived, and borne, (as for other ends, ſo) for this ſpecially, to be with you: And, this day, as for other intents, ſo even for this, for the Holy Euchariſt. This, as the kindlieſt, for the time; as, the ſureſt, for the manner, of being with.

In Heaven.

And, this is the furtheſt: And this is all, we can come to here; here upon earth. But, this is not all: there is a further to come ſtill. For, we are not together: we are parted, He and we. He, in heaven; and we, in earth. But, it ſhall not alway ſo be. Beſide this day, Immanuel hath another day: And, that day will come: And when it doth come, He will come, and take us to Himſelfe. That, as He hath been our Immanuel upon earth, So He may be our Immanuel in heaven; He with us, and we with him, there, for ever.

our

This (of the Sacrament) is a Preparative to that; will conceive and bring forth the other. For, immediately, after He had given them the holy Eucharist, He prayed ſtraight, that they that had ſo been with Him in the Bleſſed Sacrament, Father, my will is, my prayer, my laſt prayer, that where I am, they may be alſo. Ioh. 17. 24.

And He is in Heaven, in the joy and glorie there: and there He would have us. So, nobiſcum Deus in terris, brings us to nos cum Deo in cœlis, even thither. Thither may it bring us; and thither may we come, and there be; He with us, and we with Him for ever. Immanuel, is the end of the Verſe: The ſame be our end, that ſo we may be happie and bleſſed without end.

A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED

before the KINGS MAIESTIE, at White-hall, on Munday, the XXV. of December, A. D. MDCXV.
being CHRISTMAS Day.

MICA Chap. V. Ver. II.

Et tu BETHLEHEM EPHRATA, parvulus es in millibus IVDA: ex te mihi egredietur qui sit *Dominator in ISRAEL; & egressus Ejus ab initio a diebus æternitatis. *Η' ἡγούμενον.

And thou BETHLEHEM EPHRATA art little to be among the thousands of IVDA; yet, out of thee shall He come forth unto me, that shall be the Ruler in Israel: whose goings forth have been from the beginning, and from everlasting.

THE Prophet ESAY had the honor, to be the first, that is vouched, and whose words are enrolled, in the New Testament. The Prophet Mica hath the honour to be the Second. That of Esay; Ecce virgo, &c. in the end of the first Chapter. This of Mica; Et tu Bethlehem, &c. in the beginning of the second, of the first of all the Evangelists Saint Matthew. Esay 7. 14. Mat 1. 23. 2. 6.

They follow one the other: and they follow well, one on the other. That, of Esay, His Birth: This, of Mica, the place of His Birth. Behold a Virgin shall beare (saith Esay:) and, Bethlehem shall be the place, where she shall doe it (saith Mica:) His name (saith Esay) shall be GOD with us: With us (saith Mica) to be our Guide, and conduct us. He, with us in Bethlehem, in the beginning of the Verse; that we, with Him, in eternitie, in the end of it.

We have (first) a most Sure word and warrant of the Evangelist, that the testimonie of IESVS is the spirit of this Prophecie: that, this day, this Scripture was fulfilled, when He was borne at Bethlehem. In Saint Matthewes stepps we tread, when we so applie it: and, so treading alwayes, (sure we are) we tread safely. No ἰδίᾳ ἐπιλύσει, private interpretation of our owne head; but, Mica, by Matthew, the Prophet, by the Evangelist: ever the best. Apoc. 19. 10. Matt. 2. 1. 2 Pet. 1. 20.

To say truth, there is no applying it to any, but to CHRIST: None, to give it away to, from Him.

1. From David, to the SONNE of DAVID, (that is, to Him.) We read not of any other borne at Bethlehem. No Record to be shewed, but of them two.

2. But,

2. But, what ever become of that, this is ſure : None had ever His out-goings from everlaſting, but He. None, of whom thoſe words can be verified, but of Him onely : as, who onely is the Sonne of the ever-living GOD.

3. Theſe might ſerve : But, it is yet more cleare, (this :) For howſoever, about Eſay's Ecce virgo, the Iewes and we are not of one minde : yet, for this (here) of Mica, the coaſt is cleere : the Iewes will not quarrell us, touching it : there is, on all ſides, betweene them and us, good agreement.

Matt.2.4. For, upon the comming of the Wiſe men, from the Eaſt, there was a Synod of the High Prieſts and Scribes, called at Ieruſalem, (the very firſt, that we read of, in the New Teſtament :) and called, by the King; to reſolve the point, about the place of CHRISTS Matt.2.5. Birth. And, then and there, it was reſolved, Conciliariter, that, at Bethlehem; And reſolved, from this very place, for that, theſe words were a knowne Prophecie, of the Birth of CHRIST.

Vpon which ſo famous an occaſion, this reſolution grew ſo notorious, as it did manare in vulgus; the very people could tell this : They argue, in the ſeventh of Iohn, Ioh.7.42. againſt our Saviour, by it, that He could not be the CHRIST: for CHRIST was to come out of Bethlehem (that was taken, as granted :) and He came out of Galile (as they, in error, thought.) But, that was plaine ignoratio elenchi : For, though He were there brought up, He might be borne at Bethlehem : and ſo, He was. But ſo : Prieſt and People (both) knew, Bethlehem was CHRISTS natale ſolum; and that this Prophecie was the evidence for it.

4. Though theſe be enough : yet have we a greater Witneſſe, than all theſe, from heaven : even the Starre. For, whether this Scripture doth ſend us, thither, the Starre Mat.2.9. doth leade us : to Bethlehem, ſtraight. Never ſtood ſtill, till it came thither; and there, Pſal.87.4. it ſtood directly over the place (as much to ſay, as) * Lo, there He is borne. And, in this will we reſt : Since Mica and Matthew, Prophet and Apoſtle, Prieſt and People, Chriſtians and Iewes, Heaven and Earth are all with us; all teſtifie, this Text pertaines to CHRISTS Birth; and ſo, to this day, properly.

It is, of a place : And place and time are held weighty circumſtances. (Specially, in matter of fact, or ſtorie,) Vbi & Quando, materiall queſtions. The Apoſtles asked Luk.17.37. them both : Vbi Domine? Where Lord? (*Luk.*17.) Quando, & quod erit Signum? Mar 13.4. When and what ſhall be the Signe? (*Mark.*13.)

1 Of the time, when, ſome other time may give occaſion, if it ſo pleaſe GOD. Now, of Vbi Domine? the place where : There, we are to day; whereto, this is a direct anſwer, Bethlehem is the place. That, firſt.

2 But then ſecondly, this circumſtance leads us further, to matter of Subſtance : the place of the Birth, to the Birth it ſelfe; and the Birth, to the Partie borne : who is (here) ſet forth, as a perſon : He comes forth once and againe, He leads, He feeds; all, acts of a perſon entire.

3 Thirdly, this perſon is here ſaid to have two commings forth : [1] Egreditur ex te, one : [2] Egreſſus Ejus ab æterno, the other. In which two are expreſly ſet downe His two Natures. [1] Ex te, from Bethlehem, on earth; thence, He came according to His Man-hood. [2] A diebus æternitatis, from everlaſting, or, from eternitie; thence, He came, according to His God-head.

4 And laſt (to make it a full and complete Chriſtmas, in Text :) Beſides His Place, Perſon, and Natures (in theſe two commings forth :) Here is His Office alſo, to be Ἡγούμενος Mat 2.6. ὅστις ποιμανεῖ, (So doth S Matthew turne מושל the Prophets word; I follow no other; for, ſure I am, I cannot follow a better Tranſlator,) Dux, qui paſcet. One to [1] leade us, and to [2] feed us, and ſo, to conduct us, from Bethlehem (where, this day, we come firſt acquainted with Him) to the ſtate of eternitie, whence He came out, to bring us in; there, to live and reigne with Him, for ever.

The diviſion So : [1] of the Place : [2] Perſon : 3 Natures : and 4 Office of CHRIST. I The place
I. of His Birth, Bethlehem; with her two Epithets or twinnes (as it were) [1] Parvula, little;
II. III. and [2] Ephrata, fruitfull. 2. Then, of His Perſon, that did come forth. 3. After, of IIII. both His Natures : [1] As man, from Bethlehem : [2] As GOD, from everlaſting. 4. Laſt, of His Office. 1 To be our guide, to lead us (ſaith Mica:) [2] Dux, qui paſcet; Lead us, and feed us (ſaith Matthew) both. And, ſo leading and feeding us, to conduct and bring us, to the joyes and joyfull dayes of eternitie: whither, without Him, we can never come: and, whither till we come, we ſhall never be, as we would be, (that is) truly happie indeed. This is His Office. And, as His Office to lead, and to feed us: ſo, our Dutie, to be led and to be fed by Him. That, followes of it ſelfe. Matth. 2. 6.

Et tu Bethlehem. A word, of the Character, or manner of the ſpeech. For, this Verſe hath no dependance at all, on that, went before. The Prophet breakes off the diſcourſe, he was in, and breakes into this of Bethlehem (here,) all of a ſudden. This, we call an Apoſtrophe; and, it is one of the figures, that be ſtirrers of attention. The Manner of the ſpeech: Et tu Bethlehem.

For, this we finde; that, while one goes on ſtill with a tale in a continued tenour of ſpeech, attention growes dull; and, no readier way, to awake it, (as the Maſters of that Art tell us) than, ſuddenly to breake off the point, we were in hand with, and turne us to quite another matter; which with the ſtrangeneſſe, will affect the hearer, and make him liſten afreſh, whether he will or no.

The Prophet doth ſo, in this. He was (but the Verſe before,) muſtering garriſons and laying Siege to Ieruſalem: and, in the midſt of his tale, falls from that, and preſently is at Bethlehem: tells us, of a new matter; about a Childe to be borne, there. This muſt needs move attention. Any Apoſtrophe will doe it, more or leſſe. 1

But, of all, none to that, which is framed in the Second Perſon: as, this is. For, it is not a ſpeech of, or concerning Bethlehem, in the Third Perſon, (as that of ESAY, Behold a Virgin; ſo here, Behold, out of Bethlehem, ſhall come:) Not, Enuntiativè. But it is a ſpeech, to Bethlehem, in the Second perſon: Et tu, And thou Bethlehem, out of thee, ſhall there come: Annuntiativè; which hath more vigour in it. If Eſay had ſaid [And thou Virgin ſhalt conceive,] it had beene more effectuall, than [Behold a Virgin ſhall conceive;] More, a great deale. 2

But more ſpecially yet; if, in the ſecond perſon, we turne our ſpeech ad inanimata, to things that can neither heare, nor underſtand. Not, that we hold them capable of that which is ſpoken: but that, if in any degree they were ſo, it is ſuch, as ſurely would move them. Such is the Prophets here: turnes him to the Towne-walls of Bethlehem; makes a ſet ſpeech to them; tells them of all this matter: And thou Bethlehem, to thee be it ſpoken, out of thee, ſhall there come. And this is very forcible, and full of life: For, it intends, that, if the very walls and ſtones in them could heare, or could rejoyce, there is good cauſe, they ſhould doe both: in that there ſhould come, out of them, One, for whom, Ieruſalem and all the Cities of Iuda, Nay, all the world ſhould be the better. Weigh it well, and you ſhall finde, there is more in this [Et tu] than is, or can be, in any Ecce of them all. And this for Et tu, the Manner of the ſpeech. 3

For the Matter: It is an anſwer to the queſtion, (Vbi natus eſt,) of the Wiſe-men, Where is He that is borne? Borne He was, (that they knew:) Where borne, (that they knew not:) The Starre told them one; the Prophet, the other. Et claritas claritatem clarificat, and, a cleere Starre is made more cleere, by a Prophecie as cleere, or cleerer than it. For, very cleere it is (the prophecie) without all circuitie, noting, naming, and (in a manner) pointing to it: And thou Bethlehem. The Matter of it. I. The Place: Bethlehem.

And, becauſe there were two Bethlehems, One, in the Tribe of Zabulon, (Ioſ. 19. 13.) Another, in the Tribe of Iuda: Hee ſaith, it was Bethlehem Ephrata, which is that in the Tribe of Iuda, as Saint Matthew (rather giving the ſenſe, than ſtanding on the words) cites it. There can be no errour: Rachels Sepulcher was there by: Rachel was buried, by Ephrata; Ephrata, the ſame is Bethlehem, (Moſes tells us, more than a 1 Bethlehem Ephrata. Ioſ. 19. 13. Matth. 2. 6. Gen. 35. 19.

Gen. 48. 7. thouſand yeares before, Gen. 48. 7.) As plaine (this) as plaine may be: No Oracle of Delphos; without any equivocation at all.

2 Bethlehem, parva. We have the Place: Now, what manner place is it? Et tu Bethlehem, parvula. Parvula, This little, doth a little trouble us: Why, it is a ſorry poore Village, ſcarce worth an Apoſtrophe; Specially, to turne from Ieruſalem, to turne to it. And, as little likelihood, that ſo great a State as the Guide of the whole world ſhould come creeping out of ſuch a corner: Locus, & locatum (ever) are equall. That Birth is (ſure) too big for this place. The Prophet diſſembles it not; ſaw, what fleſh and bloud would except ſtraight: As, (ever) they carry a conceit, againſt ſome Places and Perſons. And, can any great matter

Iohn 7. 52. 1. 46. come from them? What, from Bethlehem? What, out of Galile? Nay, if ſo great a State, He would come from another manner place, than that. Et tu Ieruſalem, from Ieruſalem, Damaſcus, Cæſarea; from ſome ſtately Citie, much better beſeeming Him. Theſe are Dictata carnis.

Firſt, He denyes not, Little it was; and, not ὀλίγος, but ὀλιγιστὸς, not parva, but parvula; diminutively little. So little (ſaith the Prophet) that it was not to be reckoned una de millibus, not one of a thouſand, for the meanneſſe of it. And the Evangeliſt makes it rather Matth. 2. 6. worſe, than better: for, the Prophets word parvula, he turnes ἐλαχίστη, that is, minima, even the very leaſt of all.

This he confeſſes: but then, joynes this iſſue, that, though the Tu be little, the Ex te may be great. Ex te parvâ egredietur non parvus: As little as it is, no little Perſon ſhall come out of it. Though it be not una de millibus, for the meanneſſe, (as ſaith Mica:) Notwithſtanding, He that is to come out of it, may be, and is, electus unus de millibus, One of Cant. 5. 10. a thouſand, for his choice, for his excellencie. Though it, not worthy to be one of the Thouſands of Iuda, it ſhould ſend forth one, that ſhould rule the thouſands of Iuda, and the ten thouſands of Iſrael: And not of Iſrael only, after the fleſh, (but a handfull, in compariſon of them, He ſhould lead,) but, the Iſrael of GOD, His faithfull choſen people, all the world over. Indeed, He had anſwered the objection, before He made it, in Ephrata: that, little it was, but fruitfull, and not a little fruitfull.

Which two counterpoints make (in ſhew) a conflict, or contradiction, betweene the Matth. 2. 6. Prophet, and the Evangeliſt. The Prophet ſaith, Thou art the leaſt: The Evangeliſt (citing him) ſaith the cleane contrary, Thou art not the leaſt. Bethlehem, minima, & non minima; leaſt, and not leaſt; how may both be? well enough, both: So, both be not ſaid, regard had to one and the ſame thing.

Leaſt (ſaith Mica, and ſaith true,) for the compaſſe of the territory, leaſt; for the ſmall number of the Inhabitants, leaſt; for the thinneſſe and meanneſſe of the buildings, (as Luke 2. 7. was ſeene at CHRISTS Birth, not able to give Lodging to any number:) So, leaſt. But then againe, not leaſt (ſaith S. Matthew, and ſaith truly too:) Not, in regard of any of the three now mentioned; but, of another, able (of it ſelfe alone) to weigh them all downe: in that it ſhould yeeld Alumnum tam grandem, ſo great a Birth, as the great MESSIAS of the world: One, whoſe only comming forth of it was able to make it, not the leaſt, nay, the greateſt and moſt famous of all the dwellings of IACOB; of the whole Land; Nay, of the whole world, then. And thus, not the leaſt. Though minima, for the Tu: non minima, for the ex te: Non minima, if it were but for Him, and for nothing elſe.

What ſhall we make of this? Nothing, but what commeth from it of it ſelfe, without ſtrayning. That, with GOD, it is no new thing; (Nay, very familiar, as even the Heathen have obſerved; ſo familiar, as GOD ſeemes to take delight in it;) to bring maxima, de minimis; great, out of little; CHRIST, out of Bethlehem. Which is plaine, even in Nature. How huge an Oke, from how ſmall an acorne! (But, that askes great Matth. 13. 32. time:) From how little a graine of muſtard-ſeed (the very Bethlehem minima, the leaſt of all ſeeds) how large a plant! of how faire a ſpread! and that, in a little time, a moneth or two at moſt.

But, wee are not in Nature, now: In this very point (here) of Guides and Rulers, therein (too) it hath beene no unuſuall thing with Him, out of ſmall beginnings, to raiſe mighty States. Their firſt Guide (MOSES,) whence came hee? out of a basket of Exod 2. 3. bul-ruſhes, forlorne and floating among the flagges; taken up, even by chance. The great beginner of their Monarchie: and not of theirs alone, but the two beginners of the two mighty Monarchies of the Persians, and Romans, (Cyrus, and Romulus) from the Shepherds scrip, from the sheepcote, all three: Those great Magnalia, from parva mapalia. And, as the Kingdomes of the Earth from a sheepcote: So, His owne (of the Church) from a fisherbote. We may well turne to them, with this Apostrophe: And thou sheepcote, out of thee have come mighty Monarchs: And thou fisherbote, out of thee, foure of the chiefe and principall Apostles. Matth. 4. 18. 21.

Even so Lord, (saith our SAVIOVR) for, so is thy pleasure. And, since it is His pleasure so to deale, it is His further pleasure, (and it is our lesson, out of this Bethlehem minima, Even this,) Ne minima minimi, that we set not little by that which is little, unlesse we will so set by Bethlehem, and by CHRIST and all. He will not have little places vilified; little Zoar will save the body; little Bethlehem, the soule. Nor have (saith Zacharie) dies parvos, little times despised; unlesse we will despise this Day, the Feast of Humilitie: Nor have one of these little ones offended: Why? for, Ephrata may make amends for parvula; Ex te, for tu. Matth. 11. 26. Gen. 19. 20. Zach. 4. 10. Matth. 18. 6.

This is on GODS behalfe. On CHRISTS yet further, (to stay a little upon this little.) For though there want not divers other good congruences, why CHRIST should come from Bethlehem, rather than from another place: 1 For that, it was the Towne of DAVID; and He was the Sonne of DAVID; and so a place not unmeet for Him to come from, even in that respect, being sedes avita. Out of thee came David, and (well) therefore, out of thee shall come Davids Sonne; Davids Sonne, and Davids LORD; both. Ioh. 7. 42.

2 The Surname of Ephrata puts me in minde of another; Loe, we heard of it at Ephrata, (saith the Psalme) there, the first newes of the Temple: And, Loe we heard of Him, at Ephrata, (to day by the Angell,) there, the first word of the Lord of the Temple. The Temple was the Type of the Church; and that was heard of, at Ephrata first; and, no wayes incongruent, that, where the Church, there, the Head of the Church; CHRIST, and CHRISTS Church (both) at one place. Psal. 132. 6. Luke 2. 11.

3 There is a third, in the very name of Bethlehem (that is) the house of bread. For, Hee that was borne there, was bread. But, that will bee more proper anon at Qui pascet.

But these, though they agree well, yet none of them, so well, as this, that it was minima: the very minimine sse (as I may say) of it. For, in so being, it was a place well suting with His estate now, (at His egredietur ex te,) which was the state of Humilitie; eminent, in His (if ever, in any) Birth. Bethlehem was not so little, but Hee as little, as it. Looke, what Apostrophe Mica made to the Towne, may we make to Him; and that, with better reason: And thou Bethlehemite, thou wert as little, among the sonnes of men: as ever was Bethlehem, among the villages of Iuda. So, novissimum oppidorum (as Mica calls it) suits well with novissimus virorum, (as Esay calls Him.) Esay 53. 3.

And, it was not the Place alone, but, all were little, then. The time, in solstitio brumali, the deepe of Winter, when the dayes are at the shortest and least. And the people, (Hee came of) little: Amos saith, Who shall raise up Iacob for he is small? Small, ever: but, never so small, never so low brought, as, at his comming forth. Then, at the lowest, and the very least: as being (then) brought under the bondage of a stranger: and he, one of the children of Edom, that cried, Downe with them, downe to the ground. One, that made Rachel mourne in her grave (her grave was there hard by) for the slaughter of the poore innocents, within a while after. So, Place, and Time, and People, and all, little: and, He Himselfe lesse than all. Amos 7. 2, 5. Psal. 137. 7. Matt. 2. 18.

For, even in the place, Mica hath not said all: for, He is lesse yet. If little Bethlehem offend: what could have beene said, if he had gone further (and yet not further, than Saint Luke) And thou, the stable, in the Inne at Bethlehem, And thou the manger in the stable, Ex te egredietur, out of thee shall He come. These are beyond Bethlehem parva; lesse, yet: yet thence did He come too, at His entrance into the world. And, all these, nothing, to his going out: Another manner of diminution, there, than all these. Such was His Humilitie, on this Feast of Humilitie. Luke 2. 7.

And O thou little Bethlehem, And O thou little Bethlehemite, how doe you both (both Place, and Perſon) confound the haughtineſſe of many, that (yet) would be called Chriſtians, and even neere CHRIST Himſelfe. There is in both of you (if it were, well taken to heart) enough to pricke the ſwelling, and let out the apoſtumed matter of pride, from a many of us, whoſe looke, geſture, gate, and ſwelling words of vanitie are too bigge for Bethlehem: whoſe whole carriage and courſe is, as if they were to be ſaved, by one that came out of the great Citie Ninive or Grand Cayre, rather, than out of the little Hamlet of Bethlehem.

But, all this was done, to bring that vertue in credit. I finde no reaſon rendred of it, but this: That, by what manner place, Hee made choice of, to be borne at, He would teach us, what manner of ſpirits, He doth affect, to take up his reſidence, and to reſt in. Eſay 57.15. The High and Excellent (ſaith Eſay) that inhabits eternitie, Hee alſo will reſt with the lowly; with thoſe, that be no bigger than Bethlehem, in their owne eyes. [a] To them He lookes: [b] gives grace to them: [c] to them He reveales, what He keepes from the great ones of the world. And, when He ſhall ſit in all His glory, He ſhall ſay, Quod minimis hiis, & mihi. Say it forward, affirmativè: And ſay it backward, negativè, Quod non minimis hiis, nec mihi: What to theſe minims, to mee: What not to them, not to mee neither.

c Matt.11.25.
Matth.25.45.

To end this point then: For little Bethlehems ſake, to love the vertue that is like it: And for the vertues ſake, to honour it. Honour it, there is a Starre over it, there is a SAVIOVR in it: Honour it, for that which comes out of it; for the fruit it yeelds: More good comes forth out of that poore Towne, (mihi, ſaith the Prophet, to me: nobis, may we ſay, to us all) than from all the great and glorious Cities in the world. What good, Nazianzen tells us: Bethlehem honora parvam, quæ te inducit in Paradiſum, It gives us our introduction, to Paradiſe (Bethlehem:) it gives us a Guide, to day, if we will follow Him, will bring us thither, to our originall happineſſe: Nay, further than ſo, to the dayes of eternitie. And, Him we muſt follow, and it we muſt honour, (even this vertue,) if ever we meane, to come there.

II. The Perſon.

This for the Place. Now for the Perſon, that commeth from this Place. For, being in ſpeech of a place, He continues in locall termes fit for a place, Egredietur ex te. Egredi, is to come forth; and that is (properly) from, or out of a Place. And, the rather He doth it, becauſe withall, it is a terme that fitteth His Birth well: So, the Scripture ſaith, Naked came I forth (that is) was I borne. The childe that firſt comes forth (that is) the firſt is borne. This word is twice repeated: [1] Once, out of Bethlehem, Ex te: [2] Another, from everlaſting, Ab æterno. Theſe two ſet out to us His two commings forth (that is) His two Nativities: (Nativitie is nothing but a comming forth.) Thoſe two, His two Natures: ſince, Nativitas eſt ad naturam via, Nativitie is but the way that leads to Nature. [1] Egredietur ex te, as the Sonne of man, as DAVIDS Sonne: [2] Egreſſus Ejus ab æterno, as the Sonne of GOD, as Davids Lord.

Gen.38.28.

III. His Natures.
1 As Man from Bethlehem.
* Matth.2.1.

Egredietur ex te. Egredietur is the tenſe of the time to come: To come, when Micah wrote this, and in the Future: but come, when * Saint Matthew cited it, and in the Præter: When IESVS was borne at Bethlehem. But, future and præter (both) are in time: So, this, His Birth in time.

But, the other hath neither Future nor Præter, neither mood nor tenſe; nay, no Verbe, at all. It is expreſſed by a Subſtantive: to ſhew His ſubſiſtence before all time, from all eternitie.

1. Ex, is a Place; out of it Hee came; ſo, in it Hee was: and this Birth, locall, as (before) temporall. So was not His other; that hath no ex: that, is ab, ab æterno: For, as eternall, no place containes Him; He is every where; fills both Heaven and Earth.

3. Te; that place is Bethlehem; a place upon Earth. According to which it is ſaid, there ſhall ſhall come a Root out of Ieſſe (Eſai's terme, Chap. XI. Ver. 1.) and out of it, a Branch, (Ieremie's, Chap. XXIII. *v.*5.) Thence, Germen, a Flower or bloſſome, (Zacharie's, Chap. VI. *v.*12.) and from it this Fruit of Ephrata, the Fruit of the Virgins womb. Root, branch, bloſſome, and fruit, all of the earth, earthly. But there came forth, at the ſame time, a Starre, too: to ſhew, He had another more high and heavenly being. Eſay 11.1. Ier.23.5. Zach.6.12. Luke.1.42.

2 As GOD, from everlaſting Pſal.110.3.

For, this of Bethlehem was not His firſt flight (as we ſay:) the other, though it ſtand behind in the verſe, was before that, by farre: Ex utero, ante luciferum: Ante luciferum, before the Starre of His Birth; nay, before any morning ſtarre came forth, He was come forth. A principio (ſaith Mica) And it is Saint Iohn's In principio, (the two firſt words of his Goſpell,) long before Moſes In principio (the two firſt words of Geneſis.) But, to leave no place to doubt of his meaning, he gloſſeth his a principio, with, ab æterno, (that is) from everlaſting. By which very words, [from eternitie] Arius error (of erat, quando non erat) falls to the ground. For, nunquam erat, quando non erat æternitas: Never was there (call it, what you will) when eternity was not. For, as everlaſting, forwards, is, to quando tempus non erit amplius, there ſhall be no more time: So, everlaſting, backward, is, to quando tempus non erat adhuc, when there was yet no time at all.

1 Now, let it not trouble you, that this His eternall, is the plurall number (outgoings) as if they were more than one: It is but the Hebrew phraſe: They uſe, to expreſſe the Superlative, (ever) by the Subſtantive of the plurall number: to call that man אשרי bleſſings, whom they meane to be moſt bleſſed. So that, outgoings, which is but one; but, ſo high, after ſuch a manner, ſo paſt our reach, as Eſay askes, Generationem Ejus quis enarrabit, Who ſhall declare His generation? No one, no ſingular will reach it: and ſo, it is expreſſed plurally. Eſay 53.8.

2 So uſe they alſo, to note out continuance. And ſo, it ſets out to us, the continuall emanation, or proceeding of Him, from His Father, ὃς ἀπαύγασμα (the Apoſtles word) as a beame of brightneſſe ſtreaming from Him unceſſantly: Never paſt, (His generation;) but, (as the Schoolemen call it) actus commenſuratus æternitati. For, Hodiè genui te, is true of every day: yet, becauſe it hath co-exiſtence with many revolutions of time, (though it be indeed, in it ſelfe, but one drawen out along, yet) according to the many ages it laſteth, it ſeemeth to multiply it ſelfe into many: And ſo is expreſſed plurally. Heb 1.3. Pſal.2.7.

3 Though, (the principall ſenſe alwaies ſaved) we may referre this Plurall to both His outgoings; both, as Sonne of GOD, before all times, and as Sonne of man, in the fulneſſe of time. For, this later (though executed in time) had His outgoing (that is, the Decree for it went forth) ab æterno. Even, that out of Bethlehem He ſhould come; be the Sonne of man; the SAVIOVR of mankinde, and their Guide, to eternitie. Even that way alſo (in a ſenſe) it may be ſaid; As Man, He came forth A principio, A diebus æternitatis: A principio, for the efficacy; ab æterno, for the Decree. From the beginning there went vertue forth of Him, which wrought, even then, when He was but forth-comming (as wee ſay,) and not yet come forth. His life, His death, ab origine mundi. So, for the efficacie, a principio. As for the Decree; that was gone forth, from before the foundations of the world, from all eternitie. Apoc.13.8. Ephe.1.4.

III. His Offices.

So now have we this Partie, twice come forth; compound of Bethlehem, and eternitie. And, now we have Him, what ſhall we doe to Him? But firſt, what ſhall He doe to us? With GOD, Officium fundatur in beneficio: He firſt doth for us, before he require ought of us. This He ſhall doe for us: He ſhall be, to us, מושל is the word of the Text; Saint Matthew turnes it Ἡγούμενος. 1 Which, in the firſt and native ſenſe, is a Guide for the way, (Dux viæ) to lead us: 2 In a ſecond, is a Captaine, (Dux militiæ) to guard us. 3 And to theſe two, by way of paraphraſe, Saint Matthew adds, ὅστις ποιμανεῖ, qui paſcet, a Guide that ſhall feed us. 1 To lead us in the way. 2 To guard us in the way. 3 To feed us in the way. In theſe three, His Office.

1 A Guide to lead us.

From a place, He came to be our Guide, to a place: Still he holds on with his locall termes, he began with. For, a guide ſerves properly, to bring one to a place. There is, in that word, both the Office, He to performe to us; and the Benefit, we to receive, by Him, (guiding.) And it implieth alſo, our Duty to Him againe: for, if He to lead; we to be led by Him: He is become the Author of Heb.5.9. eternall ſalvation, (Heb. V. ſaith the Apoſtle) to them, as will obey him, and be guided by him, and, to none other.

Will ye ſee (firſt) the neceſſity of both thoſe His commings forth, for this Office, to be our Guide? Egredietur ex te, firſt; He was to be of us, being to guide us: for being of us, He would the better underſtand our wants, and have the more compaſſion on them:
Heb.4.15. (Heb. 4. 15.) Therefore, if a Prophet: A Prophet ſhall the LORD raiſe up unto you,
Deut.18.18. from among your brethren: (MOSES Egredietur ex te.) If a Prince: Your noble Ru-
Ier.30.21. ler ſhall be of your ſelves, even from the midſt of you: (Ieremie: So he, Egredietur ex te.)
Heb.5.1. If a Prieſt: then, to be taken from men, and be ordained for men, in things pertaining unto GOD: (the Apoſtles egredietur ex te) To every one of theſe: And theſe three be the three great Guides of mankinde.

And againe: As meet, He ſhould come forth from eternitie, if thither He to bring us. None can bring to a place, ſo well, as He, that hath been there. There He had been;
Eſay.57.15. had *inhabited eternitie (*ſaith Eſay:) thence He came; and comming thence, beſt knowes the way thither againe. So, neither of His outgoings more than needs.

Now, to our Guide. Where, the termes of way, and of walking, and leading, meet us ſo thicke, are ſo frequent, all along the Scripture; as, plaine it is, our very life is held as a Iourney; and we (as the Schoolemen terme us) viatores, in ſtate of wayfaring men, or travellers, all, from our comming into the world, to the going out of it againe, ſtill going on, in the way, or out of the way; t'one, or t'other. If ſo: in Ioh.14.5. a journey two things we have to looke to; 1 Our Quo, and 2 our Qua: 1 Quo, our end, whither; 2 Qua, our way, by which. Saint Thomas ſaid well; Lord, we know not whither thou goeſt; and how then can we know the way? Right: for, Ignoranti quem portum petat nullus ſecundus eſt ventus, No wind is good for him, that knowes not, for what port, he is bound: he that knowes not, whither he goes, wanders, and is never in his way; is never in it, for he hath none, to be in.

1 Firſt then, Quo; whither? Now, the end of the Verſe, is our journeyes end, Eternitie. Where, if we may arrive, happy we: that is agreed on preſently. So is not the way thither.

2 But yet, this (I take) is agreed; that, if it be a ready way, we care the leſſe for a guide: but if hard to it, then Dux nobis opus, we need one.

And ſure, the way is not readie to hit; not ſo eaſie, a foole may find it: It is but a fooliſh imagination ſo to ween of it. By-waies there be diverſe; many croſſe paths, and turnings in and out; and we like enough to miſſe it, if we venture on it, without a guide:
Eſay.30.21. If there be not one, to call to us, ever and anon, (as Eſay. 30. 21.) Hæc eſt via, ambulate in eâ, This the right way, keepe it: if not, you goe, you know not whither.

The firſt point then is, to find our owne want; to thinke, we are in caſe, to need a Guide. For, if we need none, this Text is ſuperfluous: And thou Bethlehem, and thou CHRIST, ye may both well be ſpared. If we be able to goe the way, without a guide; to be guides to our ſelves; Nay, to be guides to our guides, then: (the world is come to that, now.)

Acts 8.31. Well he was a wiſe man, and a great Counſeller, that ſaid, when time was, How can I,
Matt.2.2. without a guide? And the Wiſemen, at this feaſt, were not ſo well perſwaded of their owne skill, but they ſought and tooke directions. Let us follow them.

To get us one then. And, not any one, but one that is skilfull in the way: (no one thing need we ſo to be adviſed of, as this.) For, ſtrange it is, but true it is; even they,
Matt.15.14. that be blind themſelves, will take upon them to be guides to others. You know who ſaid, Si cæcus cæcum: that (Si) was no vaine (Si,) no idle Suppoſition: usque hodiè, it is done daily. But the end (there) is, in foveam, a place we would not come to; and GOD keepe us from it.

One then, that is skilfull: And where ſhall we have any ſo skilfull, as this; this of ours? He cannot but be ſo. It is ſure; there were no better guide, than the way it ſelfe, if the way could ſpeake to us, and tell us when we were right or wrong in it. Now, He,

He

He is the way: The Way and the End both. As GOD, He is the End: (the fruition of the God-head, the end of our journey.) As man, He is the Way: both Way, and Guide too. His Doctrine, our guide; His example, in the whole tract of His life, the very way thither. Ioh. 14.6.

Nothing remaineth, but that we now set forward in this way. For (as we daily sing in the Benedictus) He came, (not to whet our witts, or to file our tongues, but) to guide our feet, into the way. And, into what way? Not of questions and controversies, whereof there is no end, about which we languish all our life long: but, into the way of peace, even of those duties, about which there is no disagreement. Looke but to this Feast, (it is S. Augustines note) didicerunt Magi, et abierunt: docuerunt Scribæ & remanserunt, The Wise men, they learnt the way, and on they went: The Scribes, they taught the way, but they tarried still behinde. O doe, as did the Wise men, dimittunt Scribas inaniter lectitare, ipsi pergunt fideliter adorare, let the Scribes sit still, and scan and read lectures of the way; On went the Wise men on their way, and performed their worship, the end of their jorney: and so let us. This for Dux viæ. Luk. 1.79.

And, this would serve for the way; if there were nothing but the way: if that were all. But, if there be enemies beset the way, to stop our passage; then will not dux (a guide) serve our turne, we must have dux (a Captaine,) then: (the second sense of the word ἡγεμών:) one to guard us, and to make way for us. For, we are not onely to be led surely, without error: but safely, without danger also. Such a Guide we behove to have, as will see us safe, at the place, we would be at. And, Bethlehem breeds such. Out of little Bethlehem came he, that fetched downe great Golias. And againe, out of it, this day, He, that shall tread downe Satan under our feet: dux Messias; Captaine Messias, (as the Angell, in DAN. 9.25. calls him.) 2 A Captaine, to guard us. 1 Sam. 17.49. Rom. 16.20. Dan. 9.25.

And, for qui pascet, we may not misse that neither. For, say, we be guarded from enemies; yet shall we goe our journey but evill, if we faint by the way, for hunger or thirst, and have not to releeve us. He is not a good Guide, that, in that case, cannot lead us, where we may be purveyed of necessary food, for our releefe. It is all one, to perish, out of the way, by error; and to perish, in the way, by want of needfull refreshing. Saint Matthew therefore, to make Him a compleat Guide, by way of supply addes, Qui pascet: Such an one, as shall Lead, more Pastoritio, as a Shepheard doth his flock: not, lead them the way only: but lead them also to good greene pasture, besides the waters of comfort; see, they want nothing, Dux qui Pascet, or Pastor qui ducet, chuse you whether; for, He is both. 3 A Shepheard to feed us. Psal. 23. 2,

Of all the three, the name of the Place (He was borne in) seemes to favor this most; to be ominous toward qui pascet. Beth, is a house; lehem, bread; and Ephrata, is plentie: Bread, plentie. And, there was, in Bethlehem, a well of such water, as King David (we reade) longed for it, (the best, in all the Countrey.) Bethlehem then (sure) a fit place, for Qui pascet to be borne in: And, Qui pascet as fit a person, to be borne in Bethlehem. He is not meet to be Ruler (saith Esay) that saith, in domo mea non est panis: He can never say, that Bethlehem is his house: and that is domus panis: and in domo panis semper est panis. Never take Him without bread, His house is the house of bread, inasmuch as He Himselfe is bread: that, in the house, or out of it; whersoever He is, there is Bethlehem. There can no bread want. 1 Chro. 11.17. Esay 3.7.

These three abilities then, are in CHRIST our Leader: 1 Skill, to be a Guide: 2 Valour, to be a Captaine: 3 and for Qui pascet, Bethlehem, the house of bread, is his house. Of which, 1 Skill serves for direction; 2 Strength, for defence; 3 food, for refreshing.

1. Luce Sacerdotalis scientiæ, by the light of His Priestly knowledge; So, He guides us for the Priests lipps are to preserve knowledge. Mal. 2.7.

2. And, brachio Regalis potentiæ, by the arme of His Royall power; So, He guards us: for Power pertaines to the Prince Principally.

3. And, for qui pascet, He is Melchisedek, King and Priest; ready to bring forth (as He did) bread and wine. But in another manner farre, than he did. The bread and wine, Melchisedek brought forth, were not His body and bloud; CHRISTS are: Both qui pascet, and quo pascet. As before, Dux, & via, the guide and the way: So, now, here, pastor, et pabulum, the feeder and the food, both. Gen 14.18.

You may ſee all this repreſented, in the Shadowes of the Old Teſtament. There is a booke (there) called Exodus, of Iſraels egredietur out of Egypt: Therein, they had MOSES for their Guide; and he led them to the borders of the Holy land, and there he left Heb.7.19. them: To ſhew, the Law brought nothing to perfection. Then comes Ioſua (whom the Heb.4.8. Epiſtle to the Hebrewes calls IESVS,) the figure of ours here, and by his conduct, they were led, and put in poſſeſſion of the Land of promiſe.

Ier.31.31. All this but in type of another Teſtament, after to be made (ſaith Ieremie;) and upon bet-
Heb.8.6. ter promiſes (ſaith the Apoſtle:) Namely, our Spirituall leading, through this vale of Gal.4.26. vanitie, to the true land of promiſe, the heavenly Ieruſalem, that is from above; whither this our IESVS undertakes to bring all thoſe, that will be guided by Him.

1 Obſerve but the correſpondence, betweene the type and the truth. Moſes, when he Exod.5.12. came to lead the people, found them, how? ſcattered over all the land of Egypt, to ſeek ſtubble for bricke, to build him a City, that ſought the ruine of them all. Our caſe right: the very patterne of it: when our Guide findes us wandring in vanity, picking up ſtrawes, Sap.1.12. things that ſhall not profit us; ſeeking death in the error of our life, till we be ſo happy, as to light into His guiding.

2 Secondly, Moſes was to them, not alone Dux viæ, a Guide for the way; but, when enimies came forth againſt them, Dux militiæ, a Captaine for the warre. CHRIST was ſo too: and farre beyond MOSES; For, He made us way with the laying downe of His Eſa.53.12. life: So did neither MOSES, nor Ioſua. Would die for it, but He would open us a paſſage to the place, He undertooke to bring us to. Was Dux, a Guide, in His life: Dux, a Captaine, in His death.

3 Thirdly, MOSES, when they fainted by the way, obtained, in their hunger, manna
Ioh 6.32. from heaven; and, in their thirſt, water out of the rocke for them. CHRIST is (Himſelfe)
1 Cor.10.4. the true Manna; CHRIST, the ſpirituall rocke: whom He leads, He feeds: carries Bethlehem about Him.

Heb.13.9. Plaine, by the ordaining of His laſt Sacrament, as the meanes to re-eſtabliſh our hearts
Ioh.6.33.48. with grace, and to repaire the decaies of our Spirituall ſtrength: Even, His owne fleſh, Pſal.116.13. the bread of life; and His owne bloud, the cup of Salvation. Bread, made of Himſelfe

15.1. vine: Went under the Sickle, Flaile, Milſtone, and Oven, even to be made this bread:
Eſay 63.3. Trode (or was troden) in the winepreſſe alone, to Prepare this cup for us.

And in this reſpect, it may well be ſayd, Bethlehem was never Bethlehem right; had never the name truely, till this day, this birth, this Bread was borne, and brought forth there. Before it was the houſe of bread; but, of the bread that periſheth: but Ioh.6.27. then, of the bread, that endureth to everlaſting life. That, it might ſeeme (inter alia) to have been one of the ends of His being borne there, to make it Bethlehem, veri nominis, Bethlehem truely ſo called.

The manner of His leading. And this is His Office. Now, all the doubt will be, how He can performe this Office to us; goe before us and be our Guide; Seeing, He is now in Heaven, at His journies end; and we, in Earth, by the way, ſtill. No matter for that: He hath left us (firſt) the way traced by the ſteppes of His bleſſed life; which we keeping us to, ſure Pſal.77.20. we are, we cannot goe amiſſe. And then, as, before He came in the fleſh, He led them by the hand of MOSES and AARON, (Guides choſen, and ſent by Him;) So doth He, us, now, by the hands of thoſe, whom the Apoſtle, (three ſeverall times, in one Chap- Heb.13.7. ter, Heb. 13.) calleth, by this very name Ἡγουμένους, our Guides: by whom He leades us,
17. if He leade us at all: And other leading we are not to looke for any. Only to pray, they
24. may leade us right; and then all is well.

And, they cannot but leade us right, ſo long as they but teach us, to follow the Apoc.14.4. LAMBE whither He goeth. For, their Office is, but to lay forth before us, the way traced by the ſtepps that He went. Thoſe Steps, when all is done, are ever our beſt directions. And, I mean to doe but ſo now: as here (not to goe a ſtep out of the text) there are foure or five of theſe ſteps, as many as we ſhall well carry away at once. And theſe they be.

The

The maine point is: It is a place, and ſo to be gone to. Wee take this from the Shepherds, directed thither by the Angell, to reſolve of Tranſeamus uſque Bethlehem, that we get us to Bethlehem. There is the Rendez-vous, to day: there, He will be firſt ſeene, and ſaluted: there He begunne with us; there we to begin with Him: Where He ſet forth, there our ſetting forth to be alſo. Indeed, there is no finding Him but there, this Feaſt. There, the Shepherds found Him, this day, the firſt: There, the Wiſe-men, on Twelfth-day, the laſt. But, thither they came both; Both the Shepherds, directed by the Angell; and the Wiſe-men, guided by the Starre. The Shepherds; in them, the Iewes: The Wiſe-men; in them, the Gentiles. The Shepherds; in them unlettered perſons: The Wiſe-men; in them, the profoundeſt clerkes. The Shepherds; in them, meane men: The Wiſe-men; in them, great States. Be, what wee will be, at Bethlehem to begin, all. Thither to goe to Him; thence, to ſet out after Him. Tranſeamus uſque Bethlehem. Luke 2. 15.

How ſhall we doe that? What, ſhall we goe in pilgrimage to the place? We learne a ſhorter courſe of the Apoſtle, (Rom. 10.) The righteouſneſſe of faith (ſaith he) ſpeaketh on this wiſe: ſay not thou in thy heart, who ſhall goe over the ſea for me, that were to bring CHRIST againe into Earth. But, What ſaith it? The word is neare thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart. And, this it is: Bethlehem hath here two twins: an Epithete, a Vertue, or two. Get but them, get but your ſoules poſſeſſed of them, it will ſave you a journey: you ſhall never ſtirre hence, but be at Bethlehem, ſtanding where you doe. Rom. 10. 6. 8.

Parvula, is the firſt: you know, Bethlehem is little. And, looke what little, and low is in quantity: that, is little in our owne eyes, and lowly in quality. Get that firſt, (humility:) it is the Bethlehem of vertues; where, He, in great humility was found, this day. If we begin not there, we loſe our way, at the firſt ſetting out. For this is ſure: where Eternity is the terminus ad quem, there, Humility is the terminus à quo. Humility, in the firſt Comma of the ſentence, where Eternity is the period (as, in this Verſe, it is.) And even here now at the firſt, is CHRIST like to loſe a great part of His traine. The Phariſees are gone: all, too bigge, for Bethlehem, they: and with them, all that are τι μεγα, ſome great matter, in their owne ſight. Touching whom we may uſe the Apoſtrophe: And thou Bethlehem art too little, for theſe great conceits: None of them will come out of thee, or come at thee, by their will: Every one of them is a cunning Guide, himſelfe; and, no guide, they, but ſequuntur ſpiritum ſuum, their owne bold ſpirit: bid Bethlehem fare-well; At it, they come not. Well, parvula is the firſt. 1 By Humility: Parvula. Acts 8. 9. Ezek. 13. 3.

The next Station, is to the next vertue, and that is Ephrata, fruitfulneſſe; (ſo it ſignifies:) Little it is, but fruitfull. Fruitfull, firſt, that it brought forth Him: for, He hath brought forth, ſeene come of Himſelfe (ſaith Eſay) longævum ſemen, a laſting ſeed: the fruit whereof, to this day, ſhaketh like Libanus, and as the greene graſſe covereth all the earth. I meane, the Chriſtians, that were, are, or ever ſhall be: how great an Ephrata, of how little a beginning! It is not onely little, but Ephrata too; and, by that, know it. For indeed, good heed would be taken, that we goe not to the wrong Bethlehem: Not to Bethlehem Zabulon, that is, Bethlehem on the Sands (ſo lay Zabulon, by the Sea,) Bethlehem the barren: But, to Bethlehem Iuda, Bethlehem Ephrata, (that is) Bethlehem the fruitfull. That is, to Humilitie to adde Fruitfulneſſe, (I meane,) Plenteouſneſſe in all good workes. Elſe, it is not Ephrata; not right: Not right Repentance, unleſſe it be Ephrata, bring forth fruits of repentance: Nor Faith, without the Worke of faith: Nor, Love, without the Labour of love: Nor any other vertue, without her Ephrata. Ephrata is not the Surname of Humilitie onely, but even of the reſt too: Repentance Ephrata, and Faith Ephrata; Et ſic de cæteris, if they be true: Elſe be they but vites frondoſæ, leaves and nothing elſe: Simulachra virtutum, and not vertues indeed: Of Zabulon, not of Iuda; and ſo, not the right. 2 By fruitfulneſſe: Ephrata. Eſay 53. 10. Pſal. 72. 16. Luke 3. 8. 1 Theſſ. 1. 3. Hoſ. 10. 1.

Fruitfull then: and of what fruit? That is in the very name it ſelfe, [of Bethlehem.] Not the fruit of the lippes (a few good words) but the precious fruit of the earth (as Saint Iames calleth it) lehem, good bread: that fruit. Such fruit, as Saint Paul carried to the poore Saints at Ieruſalem, Almes and offerings; that, is the right fruit; Cum ſignavero fructum hunc; it hath the Seale on it, for right. Such, as the Philippians ſent 3 In good workes: Beth lehem. Iames 5. 7. Rom. 15. 28.

Phil 4.18. 10. ſent him, for ſupply of his want: whereby he knew, they were alive againe at the root; in that they thus fructified, yeelded this fruit, of a Sweet odour, and wherewith GOD was highly pleaſed (as, there, he tells them.)

Pſal.132.6. It was not (ſure) without myſterie, that the Temple was firſt heard of at Ephrata, at this fruitfull place. No more was it (that which the Fathers obſerve) of the trees, that were uſed about it: Not a poſt of the Temple, not a Spar, nay, not ſo much as a pin, but was made of the wood of a fruit-bearing tree: No barren wood at all, in it. No more
2 Sam.18.25. was it, that the very Altar of the Temple was founded upon a threſhing floore (Arauna's) where, good corne was threſhed. All, to ſhew, it would be plenteous in feeding, and clothing, and ſuch other pertaining to this of Ephrata. Which (how-ever they be with Matth.25.35, 36.42,43. us,) will be the firſt, and principall point of inquiry at the day of Doome; even about feeding, and clothing, and other workes of mercie.

4 By both joyned. Bethlehem parvula & Ephrata. Now, if we could bring theſe two together; make a conjunction of them in Gemini, it were worth all. For, (I know not how, but) if there be in us ought of Ephrata; if wee happen to be any thing fruitfull, but in any degree; away goes parvula, ſtraight: Straight, we ceaſe to be little: We begin to talke of Merit, and Worth, and I wote not what. Indeed, if we be all barren and bare, it may be, then, (and ſcarce then neither, but peradventure, then) we grow not high-minded. But ſo, we fall ſtill upon one extreme or other: if fertile, then proud: if humble, then barren. We cannot get, to be humble, yet not fruitleſſe; or to be fruitfull, yet keepe our humilitie ſtill: Not Ephrata, and parvula together:
Pſal.87.4. But, that is the true Bethlehem, and there was He borne. And thus farre, (I hope) we have beene led right, and are in our way.

His manner of feeding. By the Sacrament, Beth-lehem. Gen.3.6. Iohn 6.48. But, leading is not all: Here is qui paſcet too, and we may not paſſe it. For, to that He leads us, alſo: Dux, qui paſcet. We followed a falſe Guide, at firſt, that led us to the forbidden fruit, the end whereof was morte moriemini. This (now) will lead us to a food of the nature of the Tree of life, even the bread of life; by eating whereof, we ſhall have life in our ſelves, even life immortall. That, is His food, He leads us to. And, if we would forget this, both the Perſon and the Place (the Perſon, qui paſcet, that ſhall feed; and the Place, Bethlehem, the houſe of bread,) would ſerve to put us in remembrance of it. Even of the breaking of bread, which the Church, as this day, ever hath, and ſtill uſeth, as the Child-houſe feaſt.

We ſpeake of Tranſeamus uſque Bethlehem, going thither: that may we, even locally, Iohn 6.51. doe, and never goe out of this Roome: inaſmuch as, here is to be had the true bread of life, that came downe from Heaven. Which is, His fleſh, this day borne, which Hee gave Ioh.6.32 41.51. for the life of the world, (called by Him ſo, the true bread, the bread of Heaven, the bread of life:) And where that bread is, there is Bethlehem, ever. Even ſtrictè loquendo, it may be ſaid, and ſaid truly, the Church, in this ſenſe, is very Bethlehem, no leſſe than the Towne it ſelfe. For that, the Towne it ſelfe never had the name rightly, all the while there was but bread made there, bread (panis hominum) the bread of men: Not, till this Pſal.78.25. Bread was borne there, which is Panis Angelorum (as the Pſalme calleth it,) and man did eat Angels food. Then, and never till then, was it Bethlehem: and that is, in the Church, as truely as ever in it. And accordingly, the Church takes order, we ſhall never faile of it: There ſhall ever bee, this day, a Bethlehem, to goe to: a houſe, wherein there is bread, and this bread. And, ſhall there be Bethlehem, and ſo neare us, and ſhall we not goe to it? Or, ſhall we goe to it, to the Houſe of Bread, (this bread,) and come away without it? Shall we forſake our Guide leading us to a place ſo much for our benefit?

Luke 17.37. Vbi Domine, was the Apoſtles queſtion; and His anſwer, Vbi corpus, ibi aquilæ, where the bodie is, there the Eagles will bee. Let it appeare, we are ſo: For, here is the Bodie.

Elſe doe wee our dutie to Him, but by halves. For, as our dutie to Dux, is to bee led: So, our dutie to qui paſcet, is to bee fed by Him. To end: And thus, ducendo paſcit; and paſcendo ducit; leading Hee feeds us, and feeding Hee leads us, us, till He bring us, whither? Even to A principio, backe againe to where we were at the beginning: and at the beginning, we were in Paradiſe. That our beginning ſhall be our end. Thither He will bring us: Nay, to a better eſtate than ſo: to that whereunto, even from Paradiſe, wee ſhould have beene tranſlated, to the State of eternitie, to the joyes and joyfull dayes there: even, to glory, joy, and bliſſe eternall. To which He bring us, even our bleſſed Guide, that, this day, was in Bethlehem borne, to that end, IESVS CHRIST the Righteous.

A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED

before the KINGS MAIESTIE, at White-hall, on Wedneſday, the XXV. of December, A. D. MDCXVI.
being CHRISTMAS Day.

PSAL. LXXXV. Ver. X. XI.

Miſericordia & Veritas obviaverunt ſibi : Iuſtitia & Pax oſculatæ ſunt.
Veritas de terra orta eſt : & Iuſtitia de cœlo proſpexit.

Mercie and Truth ſhall meet : Righteouſneſſe and Peace ſhall kiſſe one another.
Truth ſhall budde out of the earth ; and Righteouſneſſe ſhall looke downe from Heaven.

I Have here read you two Verſes, out of this Pſalme, which is one of the Pſalmes ſelected of old, by the Primitive Church, and ſo ſtill retained by ours, as part of our Office, or Service of this day : As being proper and pertinent to the matter of the Feaſt, and ſo to the Feaſt it ſelfe. For, the meeting here ſpecified was to be, at the birth of the MESSIAS : So ſaith Rabbi MOSES, and other of the Iewes. Was, at the birth of our SAVIOVR : So ſay the Fathers with uniforme conſent, and eo nomine, have made this a CHRISTMAS day Pſalme.

As his manner is, the Pſalmiſt, in it, under one, compriſeth the type, and the truth, both. By thoſe things which befell the people of the Iewes, the Church typicall, ſhadowing out thoſe things, which were to befall the Antitype of it, CHRIST and His Church. For, primâ & propriâ intentione, it cannot be denied, but the Pſalme was firſt ſet, according to the letter, upon the turning backe of the captivitie of Babel. But, the Prophet knew well, that was not their worſt captivitie, nor ſhould be their beſt delivery : There was another yet behinde, concerned them more (if they underſtood their owne ſtate aright) which was reſerved, to the MESSIAS, to free them from. To that, he points. Even that, the Apoſtle complaines of (Rom. 7.) wherein the ſoule is led away captive under ſinne and Satan (the very true Babel, indeed, as which bringeth with it everlaſting confuſion :) From which, CHRIST (the true Zorobabel) is to ſet us free : us, and them both.

Rom. 7. 23.

There

There is a Meeting, here. A meeting at a Birth. A birth, that did them in Heaven (Righteouſneſſe by name) good to behold. The Meeting, in obviaverunt: The Birth, in orta eſt: The pleaſure to behold it, in proſpexit de cælo. Proſpexit is to ſee with delight, as, when we looke into ſome pleaſant proſpect. The Summe.

A meeting qualified, for the manner. For, they doe not meet, and paſſe by; but, meet, and Salute as friends, with an oſculatæ ſunt, a ſigne of love begun, or renewed.

This meeting is of foure. Foure, which of themſelves (propriè loquendo) are nothing but Attributes, or Properties, of the Divine nature. But, are (here) by the Pſalmiſt brought in, and repreſented to us, as ſo many Perſonages. Perſonages (I ſay) inaſmuch as they have here perſonall acts aſcribed to them. For, to meet, to kiſſe, to looke downe, are all of them acts perſonall. And, looke how the Pſalmiſt preſents them, ſo we treat of them; in the ſame termes, the Text doth.

At a Birth, at Orta eſt, theſe foure meet here: At orta eſt Veritas, the birth of Truth; de terrâ, from the earth. For, two Ortus there were: and this, not His anteſæcularis ortus de cælo, His Birth before all worlds from heaven; but, His ortus de terrâ, His temporall birth, from the earth.

Laſtly, the birth of this Birth (as I may ſay;) the effect it wrought. Of which, more there are in the neighboring verſes: Here, in theſe (beſides the meeting occaſioned by it) there is but one. That, ſuch a ſpectacle it was, as it drew Righteouſneſſe it ſelfe from Heaven, to looke at it. Time was, when Righteouſneſſe would not have done ſo much; not have vouchſafed a looke hitherward: Therefore reſpexit nos Iuſtitia, is good newes: That then, and ever ſince, She hath beheld the earth, and the dwellers in it, with a farre more favorable regard, than before. And all, for this Births ſake.

And when was all this? When He that ſaith of Himſelfe I am the Truth, when He was borne upon earth: For, orta eſt Veritas, and natus eſt CHRISTVS will fall out to be one Birth. What day ſoever that was, this meeting was upon it. And that was, this day, of all the dayes of the yeare. The Meeting, and the Day of this meeting, here all one: and the Birth of CHRIST, the cauſe of both. So, being this dayes worke; this day, to be dealt with moſt properly. Ioh. 14. 16.

Onward we have here foure Honors of this Day, Every one of the foure giving it a bleſſing. 1 It is the day of ortus Veritatis. Truths birth: 2 And the ſame, the day of occurſus Miſericordiæ, the Meeting here mentioned: 3 And, of oſculum Pacis, the Kiſſe here expreſſed: 4 And of proſpectus Iuſtitiæ, Righteouſneſſes gratious reſpect of us. Theſe, from each of them in ſeverall. And generally, the day of reconciling them all.

Holding us to theſe, we are to ſpeake of the 1 Meeting, the 2 Parties, the 3 Birth, and the 4 Effect here ſpecified to come of it. Of this Meeting, in CHRIST: Then, in Chriſtianitie, not to be broken of by us, but to be renewed, and ſpecially this day. The Diviſion I II.

I.

HEre is a Meeting: And that is no great matter, if it be no more. How many meet we, as wee paſſe to and fro daily, and how little doe we regard it? But that meeting is caſuall. 1 The Meeting. Not caſuall.

Somewhat more there is, in Set Meetings. It was not by hap: not obviaverunt, ſimply; but, obviaverunt ſibi. Sibi ſheweth, they had an intent; they came forth, on both ſides; Not to meet any fift perſon, but to meet one another. But of purpoſe.

But, not every Set Meeting is memorable: This, is. I find a Pſalme (here) made, in remembrance of it. And (lightly) Songs be not made, but de rarò contingentibus; not, of ordinary, but of ſome ſpeciall great Meetings. And that memorable.

The greatneſſe of a Meeting groweth three waies: 1 By the Parties, Who: 2 The Occaſion, Whereon: and 3 the End, Whereto they meet. All three are in this. The Parties, in the firſt Verſe: the Occaſion, and End, in the ſecond. The Occaſion, a birth; an occaſion oft, of making great Perſons meet: And the End that comes of it, that Righ- teouſneſſe, who is to be our Iudge, and to give the laſt ſentence upon us, beholds us with an aſpect, that promiſes favour.

2 The Parties.

The Occaſion, and the End, we ſhall touch anon: Now, of the Parties. If the Parties great, the Meeting great. The conjunction of the Great Lights in Heaven, The enterview of great States on earth, ever bodes ſome great matter. Who are the Parties here? Foure, as high, as excellent Attributes, as there be any in the God-head: Or (to keepe the ſtile of the text) foure, as great States, as any in the Court of Heaven.

The Manner of their meeting.

Theſe meet: and, in what manner? Great States meet otherwhile, in a pitched field: Not ſo here: This is an obviaverunt, with an oſculatæ ſunt, they runne not, one at another, as enemies: they run, one to another, and Kiſſe, as loving friends. And that which makes it memorable indeed, is, that theſe Parties, in this manner thus meet, who (if all were well knowne) were more like to turne taile, than to meet: one to run from another; Nay, one to run at another, to encounter: rather than run one to another, to embrace and kiſſe. Not meet at all: at leaſt, not meet thus, ſtanding in ſuch termes as they did.

Not, Mercy & Peace, or Truth and Righteouſneſſe;

Mercie and Peace, if they two had met; or Truth and Righteouſneſſe, they two, it had not beene ſtrange. But, for thoſe, that ſeeme to be in oppoſition, to doe it, that is it, that makes this Meeting marvellous in our eyes.

But Mercy and Truth, Righteouſneſſe and Peace.

Will yee ſtay a little, and take a view of the Parties. Foure they are: Theſe foure, 1 Mercie, and 2 Truth, 3 Righteouſneſſe, and 4 Peace. Which quaternion, at the firſt ſight, divides it ſelfe into two and two. Mercie and Peace, they two Paire well: they be collectaneæ (as Bernard ſaith of them in one place) bedfellowes, ſleepe together: collactaneæ (as, in another place) ſucked one milke, one breſt, both. And, as theſe two; ſo, the other two (truth, and righteouſneſſe) ſeeme to be of one complexion and diſpoſition, and commonly take part together. Of theſe, Mercie ſeemes to favour us; and Peace, no enemie to us, nor to any: (ſeeing we muſt ſpeake of them as of perſons) mild, and gentle perſons, both. For Righteouſneſſe, I know not well what to ſay: Geſtat gladium, and (I feare) non fruſtrà. Nor of Truth, who is vera, and ſevera; ſevere too, otherwhile. Theſe (I doubt) are not like affected. The reaſon of my doubt Of one of them (Righteouſneſſe) it is told, here, for great newes, that She (but) looked downe hitherwards, from Heaven. Before then, She would not have done that. A great ſigne it is, of heart-burning, when one will not doe ſo much as looke at another; not endure his ſight: We cannot promiſe our ſelves much of her. No, nor of Truth. One was ſo bold, in a place, to ſay, Omnis homo mendax, and feared no challenge for it. By that, it ſeemes, all ſtands not well with her, neither. So then; two, for us; two, againſt us.

Rom. 3. 4.

Their order, Mercie firſt, Peace laſt.

For their order: Mercie is firſt, and Peace laſt. With both ends, we ſhall doe well enough: GOD ſend us to doe but ſo with the midſt. Yet this is not amiſſe, that they, which favor us leſſe, are in the midſt; hemmed in on both ſides, cloſed about, with thoſe that wiſh us well; and, they betweene us and them. On the one ſide, Mercie, before: On the other, Peace, behinde.

Their ſorting, Mercie and Truth.

Another; that, in this double meeting, Mercie ſorts not her ſelfe, goes not to Righteouſneſſe: nor Righteouſneſſe, to her, but to Peace. A kind of croſſe meeting (as it were) there is: the better hope of accord. Mercie, and Righteouſneſſe have no Symbolizing qualitie at all; no hope of them: but, Truth with Mercie; hath. There is Truth as well, in the promiſe of Mercie; as, in the threat of Iuſtice.

Righteouſneſſe and Peace.

And it ſtands yet better, between the other two (Righteouſneſſe, and Peace.) Melchiſedek, which is by interpretation King of Righteouſneſſe, the ſame is King of Salem, (that is) of peace. He, that is after the order of Melchiſedek, King of both, like enough, to ſet accord between them two: both of them his lieges. This, for the view of the Parties.

Heb. 7. 2. 6. 20.

The Occaſion.

Theſe meet here: but, what is obviaverunt, without oſculatæ ſunt? Better, let them ſtand in ſunder ſtill, and never meet. There ſeemes to be two Meetings implyed. One obviaverunt, without: and another, with oſculatæ ſunt.

Before they met here, they were parted, the one from the other. For, they that meet, come from diverſe coaſts. Before this meeting, they have been in diverſe quarters, one from the other, and not come together thus a good while.

Their

Their diſtance, in place, grew from their diſtance, in affection eſtranged one from the other. That they meet not, I will not ſay: but, that they meet not thus, ever before. Elſe, what remarkable thing were there in this Meeting, or worth the compoſing of a Pſalme, if it had been familiar with them, thus to meet every other, nay, any other day?

How came they then aſunder, that it ſhould be a marvell to ſee them meet? Since (naturally) they are not ſtrangers; all foure, in the boſome of GOD from all eternitie; Attributes (all foure) of His undivided eſſence. So, not divided, of themſelves: Not, of themſelves, then. That they were divided, it was about us; the quarrell ours, that made them part company. Thus I gather it: If, at CHRISTS birth they met: at Adams fall, they parted, If, when Truth was borne on earth, they came together: when Truth periſhed from the earth, they fell in ſunder: That was, when the firſt lye was told, and beleeved, (and that was nequaquam moriemini, by Adam,) and thereby GOD much wronged. So that Adams cauſe it was, (and ſo, ours) that firſt divided heaven; yea, the very Attributes, in GOD (we ſee,) and ſo (in a ſort) GOD Himſelfe. So they parted firſt. It could not be ſayd (by the Apoſtle) that CHRIST pacified all things in heaven and in earth: if there had not, in heaven, been ſomewhat to be taken up.

Col. 1. 20.

So their firſt meeting was in oppoſition.

For all this yet, I deny not, but they might and did meet, once before, But, it was an obviaverunt, without an oſculatæ ſunt: Never, both theſe, till now. Out of CHRIST, and before His birth, they met in oppoſition: In CHRIST, and at his birth, did theſe foure Lights come to meet, and to be in conjunction, now. They met before, obviaverunt: but, in ſtead of oſculatæ, it was altercatæ ſunt. While Mercie and Peace would have Adams and our caſe releeved, Righteouſneſſe and Truth would by no meanes endure it. The plea is drawen up and reported at large, by Bernard, in his firſt Sermon upon the Annunciation. Mercie began: (for out of her readineſſe to doe good, ſhe is, here, ſhe is ever formoſt:) Her inclination is, or rather, ſhe herſelfe is an inclination, to pitie ſuch, as are in miſerie; and, if ſhe can, to releeve them: yea, though they deſerve it not. For (which is the comfort of the miſerable ſinner) ſhe lookes not to the partie, what he is, or what he hath done, or deſerved; but, what he ſuffers, in how woefull and wretched a caſe he is. And her plea is: Nunquid in vanum? What hath GOD made all men for nought? What profit is in their blood? It will make GODS enemies rejoice, Thither it will come, if GOD caſt them cleane off: What then, Will He caſt them off for ever, will He be no more intreated? Hath GOD forgotten to be gracious? With theſe and ſuch like pii ſuſurri (as he calls them) did ſhe enter into GODS bowels, and make them yerne, and melt into compaſſion. And certainely, if there were none to ſtand againſt us, there were hope, Mercie had prevailed.

Mercies Plea.

Pſal. 74. 18.

Pſal. 77. 7, 8

But, Truth muſt be heard too, and ſhe layes in juſt matter of exception: Pleads, Deus erat Verbum; What is God but His Word? and His word was, as to ADAM, morte morieris; So, to his ſonnes, anima quæ peccaverit, The ſoule that ſinneth, that ſoule ſhall dye. GOD may not falſifie His word: His word is the truth: falſifie the truth? that may not be.

Truths Reply.

Gen. 2. 17.

Ezek. 18. 20.

And then ſteppes up Righteouſneſſe, and ſeconds her: that GOD as He is true in His word, ſo is He righteous in all His workes: So, to reddere ſuum cuique, to render each his owne, to every one, that, is his due; and ſo to the ſinner, ſtipendium peccati, the wages of ſinne, (that is) death. God forbid, the Iudge of the world ſhould judge unjuſtly: that were, as (before) to make Truth falſe, ſo (here) to doe Right wrong.

Righteouſneſſe ſeconding her.

Pſal. 145. 17.

Rom. 6. 23.

Nay, it went further, and they made it their owne caſes. What ſhall become of me (ſaid Righteouſneſſe?) What uſe of Iuſtice, if GOD will doe no juſtice, if He ſpare ſinners? And what uſe of me (ſayth Mercie,) if He ſpare them not? Hard hold there was, inaſmuch as, Perii, niſi homo moriatur (ſaid Righteouſneſſe) I dye, if he dye not: And Perii, niſi Miſericordiam conſequatur (ſaid Mercie) if he dye, I dye too. To this it came: and in thoſe termes brake up the meeting, and away they went one from the other. Truth went into exile, as a ſtranger upon earth:——Terras Aſtræa reliquit, ſhe confined her ſelfe in Heaven: where, ſo alienated ſhe was, as ſhe would not ſo much as looke downe hither upon us.

The firſt meeting broken up.

Mercie, ſhee ſtaid below ſtill: ubi enim Miſericordia eſſet (ſayth Hugo well) ſi cum cum miſero, non eſſet ? Where ſhould Mercie be, if with miſerie ſhe ſhould not be ?

As for Peace, ſhe went betweene both, to ſee, if ſhe could make them meet againe in better termes. For, without ſuch a meeting, no good to be done for us.

For, meet they muſt, and that in other termes, or it will goe wrong with us; Our Salvation lies a bleeding, all this while. The Plea hangs, and we ſtand, as the priſoner at the barre, and know not what ſhall become of us. For, though two be for us, there are two againſt us, as ſtrong and more ſtiffe than they. So that, much depends upon this ſecond Meeting; upon the compoſing or taking up this difference. For, theſe muſt be at peace betweene themſelves, before thay at peace with us, or we with GOD. And this is ſure: we ſhall never meet in heaven, if they meet no more.

And many meanes were made for this meeting, many times; but, it would not be. Where ſtayed it ? It was not long of Mercie, ſhe would be eaſily intreated, to give a new meeting : (no queſtion of her.) Oft did ſhe looke up to heaven, but Righteouſneſſe would not looke downe : Not looke ? not that ? ſmall hope, ſhe would be got to meet, that would not look that way-ward.

Indeed, all the queſtion is of her. It is Truth, and ſhe, that holds off: but, ſpecially She. Vpon the Birth (you ſee) here is no mention of any in particular, but of Her; as much to ſay as, the reſt might be dealt with; ſhe only it was, that ſtood out. And yet, ſhe muſt be got to meet, or elſe no meeting.

No meeting, till Iuſtice ſatisfied.

All the hope is, that ſhe doth not refuſe ſimply, never to meet more : but ſtands upon ſatisfaction : Elſe, Righteouſneſſe ſhould not be righteous. Being ſatisfied; then, ſhe will: remaining unſatisfied; ſo, ſhe will not meet.

All ſtands then on her ſatisfying; how to deviſe, to give her ſatisfaction to her mind, that ſo ſhe may be content, once more (not to meet and argue, as yer-while, but) to meet, and kiſſe; meet in a joynt concurrence to ſave us, and ſet us free.

And (indeed) Hoc opus, there lies all: how to ſet a ſong of theſe foure parts, in good harmonie; how to make theſe meet, at a love-day; how to ſatisfie Iuſtice, upon whom all the ſtay is.

Nor in any, but the Chriſtian Religion.

And this (ſay I) no Religion in the world doth, or can doe, but the Chriſtian. No Queer ſing this Pſalme, but ours: None make Iuſtice meet, but it. Conſequently, None quiet the conſcience ſoundly, but it: Conſequently, no Religion but it. Withall religions elſe, at odds they be; and ſo, as they are faine to leave them ſo; For, meanes in the world have they none, how to make them meet : Not able for their lives to tender

Verſe 9. Iuſtice a ſatisfaction, that will make her come in. The words next before are, that glorie

Pſal. 16.6. may dwell in our land. This glorie doth dwell in our land indeed: And great cauſe have we al highly to bleſſe GOD, that hath made our lot to fall in ſo faire a ground : That we were not borne, to inherit a lie; that we were borne, to keepe this Feaſt of this Meeting. For, bid any of them all but ſhew you the way, how to ſatisfie Iuſtice ſoundly, and to make her come to this meeting; how GODS Word may be true, and His worke juſt, and

Luk. 10. 31, 32. the Sinner find mercie and be ſaved for all that: They cannot. The Chriſtian onely can doe it, and none elſe. All beſide, for lacke of this, paſſe by the wounded man, and let him lie ſtill and bleed to death.

Bid the Turke : All he can ſay, is, Mahomets prayer ſhall be upon you. Mahomets prayer, what is that ? Say he were (that, he was not) a juſt man, a true Prophet; What can his prayers doe, but move Mercie. But, GODS Iuſtice, how is that anſwered ? Who ſhall ſatisfie that ? Not prayers; Iuſtice is not moved with them; heares them not; goes on to ſentence, for all them. He can goe no further: he cannot make juſtice meet.

Bid the Heathen; he ſayes better yet, than the Turke. They ſaw, that without ſhedding of blood there was no ſatisfying Iuſtice; and ſo, no remiſſion of ſinne. To ſatisfie

Heb. 9.22. Heb. 10.4. her, ſacrifices they had, of beaſts. But, it is impoſſible (as the Apoſtle well notes) that the blood of bulls or goats ſhould ſatisfie for our ſinnes : A man Sinne, and a beaſt dye ? Iu-

Mic. 6.7. ſtice will none of that. What then, will ye goe as farre as ſome did, the fruit of my body, for the ſinne of my ſoule ? Nor that neither. For, if it were the firſt borne, the firſt borne was borne in Sinne; and Sinne, for Sinne, can never ſatisfie. This Meeting will not be there.

Bid

Bid the Iew, he can but tell you, of his Lambe, neither. And, while time was, that was not amiſſe; while it ſtood in reference, to Saint Iohn Baptiſts Lambe, the LAMBE of GOD, this day, yeaned: as having the operation, the working, in the vertue of that. That being now paſt, there is no more in the Iewes, than in the Gentiles ſacrifice. Beaſts, both: both, ſhort of ſatisfying. So, for all that theſe can doe, or ſay, no meeting will there be had. Ioh. 1.29.

Onely the Chriſtian Religion, that ſhewes the true way. There is One, there, thus ſpeaketh to Iuſtice: Sacrifice and ſinne-offerings thou wouldeſt not have; then ſaid I, Lo I come. He, of whom it was written, in the volume of the booke, that He ſhould doe that feat; Corpus autem aptaſti mihi, Make him a bodie to doe it in, and He will doe it. Give Him an ortus eſt, let Him be but borne, He will make them meet ſtraight; Iuſtice, and all. For, all the world ſees, if order could be taken, that He, that the Sonne of GOD, the Word and Truth eternall, would ſay Lo I come; would take our nature upon Him; and, in it, lay downe His ſoule, an offering for ſinne; there were good hope of contenting Iuſtice, and that the Meeting would goe forward. Deus ſanguine in ſuo, GOD with his bloud; What ſinne in the world would not that ſerve for? What Iuſtice, in heaven or earth, would not that ſatisfie? If ye ſpeake of an expiation, a ranſome, an ἀντάλλαγμα (CHRISTS owne word) a perfect commutation, there it is. This had, Iuſtice will meet, embrace, kiſſe Mercie, ſhake hands, joyne (now) friends; Inveni enim in quo repropitier, I have found that now, wherewith I hold my ſelfe fully content and pleaſed. This way, ye ſhall make them meet; or elſe, let it alone for ever. Pſal.40.6,&c. Epheſ.5.2. Matt.16.26. Iob 32.13.

Ver. XI.

Truth ſhall budde out of the earth; and Righteouſneſſe ſhall looke downe from Heaven.

AND this is it, the Chriſtian Religion ſets before us: how the Sonne of the moſt High GOD of heaven and earth tooke on Him our Nature, that, in our nature, for our nature, He might make to GOD (even ſtando in terminis juſtitiæ ſuæ, as the Schoolemen ſpeake, ſtanding on the termes of his moſt exact ſtrict juſtice) a compleat, full, every way ſufficient ſatisfaction. And this (lo) makes the meeting. This honour hath the Chriſtian Religion above all other; this glorie doth dwell in our land; that theſe foure, by CHRISTS Birth, in it, are brought, not onely to obviaverunt ſibi, but even to & oſculatæ ſunt. 3 The Birth. Veritas orta eſt de terra.

And, if this be the glorie, be not they the ſhame of Chriſtian profeſſion, that cheriſh in their boſomes, and entertaine with ſtipends ſuch, as are come to this (phrenſie, I will call it) to ſay; what needs any ſatisfaction? what care we, whether Iuſtice meet or no? that is (in effect) what needs CHRIST? Cannot GOD forgive offences to Him made, of His free goodneſſe, of His mercie, without putting his SONNE to all this paine? Fond men! If He would quit His Iuſtice, or waive His truth, He could: But, His juſtice and truth are to Him as eſſentiall, as intrinſecally eſſentiall, as His Mercy: of equall regard, every way as deare to Him. Iuſtice otherwiſe remaines unſatisfied: and, ſatisfied it muſt be, either on Him, or on us. For, with beaſts, or prayers, it will not be: And it will hold of, till it be. If Iuſtice be not ſo met with, it will meet with them: And, they had better meet a ſhee-beare robbed of her whelpes, than meet Iuſtice out of CHRISTS preſence. Prov.7.12.

To us, they meet, this day, at the Child-houſe. For theſe great Lights could not thus meet, but they muſt portend ſome great matter, as it might be ſome great Birth toward. The Aſtrologers make us beleeve, that in the Horoſcope of CHRISTS Nativitie there was a great Trigon of (I wote not what) Starrs met together. Whether a Trigon or no; this Tetragon (I am ſure) there was, theſe were all (then) in conjunction, all in the aſcendent, all above the horizon at once, At Orta eſt the Birth, of Veritas the truth, de terrâ from the earth; The Occaſion of drawing theſe foure together.

* Ioh.14.6.

Veritas will fit CHRIST well, who, of Himſelfe ſaid, * Ego ſum veritas, I am the truth. So is He: Not that of the former Verſe, which is but veritas ſecunda, the truth ſpoken or uttered forth: He, the veritas prima, the firſt truth, within. That depends upon this. Then are the words uttered true, when there is an adequation between them and the minde. So, the firſt Truth He is.

And Veritas ſecunda, too.

The firſt and laſt both. For now, by His comming, He is the adequation of the Word and the Worke, the Promiſe and the Performance. Thar way, He is truth too: The truth of all Types, the truth of all Prophecies: For, in Him, are all the promiſes Yea and Amen: Yea, in the firſt truth; Amen, in the laſt. That actuall verifying is the truth, when all is done: and, that He is, by His birth.

And, as the truth fits His Nature, ſo doth earth, Man. Of whom, GOD; [a] Earth thou art: To whom, the Prophet thrice over; [b] Earth heare the word of the LORD: By whom, the Wiſe man, [c] Quid ſuperbis? Why ſhould earth be proud? [d] Germinet terra Salvatorem, Let this earth bring forth a SAVIOVR, be the terra promiſsionis, the Bleſſed Virgin, who was, in this, the Land of promiſe. So was this very place applied by Irenæus in his time, who touched the Apoſtles times: So, by Lactantius. So, by Saint Hierom and Saint Auguſtine. Thoſe foure meet in this ſenſe, as doe the foure in the Text: Quid eſt veritas de terrâ orta? eſt CHRISTVS de fæminâ natus; Quid eſt Veritas? Filius Dei: Quid terra? Caro noſtra: What the truth? CHRIST: What the earth? Our fleſh. In thoſe words they find this Feaſt all.

Chriſts orta eſt double.
1 De Cœlo.
Luc.1.78.
a 2 De terra.
Zach.3.8.

For Orta eſt, it is double: Therefore, de terrâ is well added. Another Ortus he had, de cœlo: to wit, His heavenly Divine Nature, which, as the day, ſprung from on high; and He, in regard of it, called Oriens, by Zacharie, in the New Teſtament. But this (here) is de terrâ; for the word (properly) ſignifies, the ſhooting forth of a ſprig out of the ground: and He, in regard of this Ortus, called the Branch, by Zacharie in the Old.

b Orta de.
Eſa.11.1.

2. And, there is more in Orta. For, (it is Rabbi Moſes note,) that is (properly) when it ſpringeth forth of it ſelfe, as the field flowers doe, without any ſeed caſt in by the hand of man; ſo (ſaith he) ſhould the MESSIAS come: Take His nature not onely in, but de, of the earth. Not bring it with Him from Heaven (the error of the braineſick Anabaptiſt,) but take it of the earth: be the womans Seed, made of a woman, out of the loynes of DAVID: Virga de radice Ieſſe, the Root of Ieſſe: Nothing more plaine.

3. And yet more, from orta eſt. For that, the truth, while it is yet unaccompliſht, but in promiſe onely, it is but (as the Seed under ground) hid and covered with earth, as if no ſuch thing were: aſſoone as ever it is actually accompliſhed (as, this day) then doth it ſpring forth (as it were,) is to be ſeene above ground; then Orta eſt, de terrâ, in very deed.

4 The Effect.

Of the effect, now Births are, and have been, diverſe times, the ending of great diſſentions: As was this here: For, by this Birth, tooke end the two great Houſes: An union of them by it.

On Truth, ſhe is gained.

Firſt, by this, Truth is gained; Truth will meet now. That truth will come to this truth, tanquam minus dignum, ad magis dignum, as the Abſtract to the Archetype. And, Truth, being now borne of our Nature, it will never (we may be ſure) be againſt our Nature: being come of the earth, it will be true to his owne countrie; being made man, will be for man now, all He can.

By this meanes, one of the oppoſites is drawen away, from the other: Got to be on our ſide. It is three to one, now Righteouſneſſe is left all alone; and there is good hope, ſhe will not ſtand out long. For (lo) here is good newes; firſt, that reſpexit de cælo, ſhe yet lookes downe from heaven, now.

On Righteouſneſſe.

So as, this birth in earth (you ſee) workes in heaven; and by name, upon Righteouſneſſe, there. For, though there were none in heaven, but it wrought upon them; yet, the Pſalme mentions none, but Righteouſneſſe. For, (of all) ſhee the leaſt likely: and, if ſhee be wrought on, the reſt there is no doubt of. How can there? they are all won to us already.

With

With Righteouſneſſe, it workes two waies: Firſt, downe ſhe lookes. Whether it was, that ſhe miſſed Truth, to ſee what was become of her, and not finding her in heaven, caſt her eye to the earth. But there, when ſhe beheld Verbum caro factum, the Word fleſh, the Truth freſhly ſprung there, where it had been a ſtrange plant long time before, Aſpexit and Reſpexit, ſhe looked and looked againe at it. For, a Sight it was, to move, to draw the eye; yea, a ſight, for Heaven to be a Spectator of; for the Angels, to come downe and looke at; for Righteouſneſſe it ſelfe, to doe ſo too. Παρακύψαι is the Angels word (in Saint Peter:) Διακύψαι is the Septuagint's word here: both meane one thing. The Greeke word is to looke (as we ſay) wiſhly at it, as if we would looke διὰ, even through it; the Hebrew word, (that) is, as if Righteouſneſſe did beat out a window: So deſirous was ſhe, to behold this Sight.

1 She looked downe.

1 Pet. 1. 12

And no marvell; for, what could Righteouſneſſe deſire to ſee, and ſatisfie her ſelfe with, that, in Him, was not to be ſeene? A cleane birth, a holy life, an innocent death; a Spirit and a mouth without guile; a Soule and a bodie without Sinne. In Him, ſhe beheld them all. Them, and whatſoever elſe might yeeld her full ſatisfaction: Lay judgement to the rule and righteouſneſſe in the ballance, nothing oblique, will be found in Him, nothing, but ſtraight for the rule; nothing minus habens, but full weight for the ballance.

Thus, when Truth, from the earth; then, Righteouſneſſe, from heaven. Then: but not before. Before, Righteouſneſſe had no proſpect, no window open this way. She turned away her face; ſhut her eyes; clapt to the caſement; would not abide ſo much as to looke hither, at us, a ſort of forlone ſinners: not vouchſafe us once the caſt of her eye. The caſe is now altered. Vpon this ſight, ſhe is not onely content, in ſome ſort, to condeſcend to do it, but ſhe breaks a window through to do it. And then, and ever ſince this [Orta eſt,] ſhe lookes upon the earth with a good aſpect; and a good aſpect, in theſe celeſtiall lights, is never without ſome good influence withall.

But then (within a verſe after,) not onely downe ſhee lookes, but downe ſhee comes. Such a power attractive is there, in this Birth. And comming, ſhe doth two things: 1 Meets firſt; for, upon the view of this birth, they all ran firſt, and Kiſſed the Sonne: 2 And that done, Truth ran to Mercie, and embraced her; and Righteouſneſſe to Peace, and kiſſed her. They that had ſo long been parted, and ſtood out in difference, now meet, and are made friends: Howſoever (before) removed, in ortu veritatis, obviaverunt ſibi; howſoever (before) eſtranged, now, oſculatæ ſunt.

2 Downe ſhe comes. Verſe 13.
1 To meet.
2 To kiſſe.

And, at that birth of His well met they all, in whom they meet all: The Truth He is; and per viſcera Miſericordiæ He came, through the tender mercies of our GOD; and He is made to us Righteouſneſſe; and He is our Peace. All meet in Him; for indeed, all He is; that no marvell, they all foure meet, where He is, that is all foure.

Luk. 1. 7. 8.
1 Cor. 1. 30.
Ephel 2. 14.

And, at this meeting Righteouſneſſe, ſhe was not ſo off-ward before, but ſhe is now as forward; as forward, as any of the reſt. Marke theſe three.

1 Lets not Peace prevent her (as Mercie did Truth;) but, as Mercie to Truth, firſt; ſo, ſhe (firſt) to Peace: as forward as Mercie every way.

2 Nay, more forward than Mercie: for, Mercie doth but meet Truth, and there is all; but ſhe, (as more affectionate) not only meets Peace, but kiſſes her. And (indeed) Righteouſneſſe was to doe more, (even, to kiſſe,) that it might be a pledge of forgetting all former unkindneſſe; that we may be ſure ſhe is perfectly reconciled now.

3 And one more yet (to ſhew her the moſt forward of them all,) out of the laſt Verſe. At this meeting, ſhe followes not, drawes not behind, ſhe will not goe with them: She is before, leaves them to come after, and beare the traine: She (as David) is before the Arke: puts S. Iohn Baptiſt from his office, for the time; Righteouſneſſe is his forerunner: Righteouſneſſe ſhall goe before, tread the way before Him; the formoſt now of all the companie. By all which, ye may know, what a looke it was, ſhe looked with from Heaven.

Verſe 13.

Thus ye ſee, CHRIST, by His comming, hath pacified the things in Heaven. A peece of Hoſanna, is pax in cælis: There cannot be pax in terris, till there it bee, firſt. But, no ſooner there it is, but it is peace in earth ſtraight, which (accordingly) was,

Coloſ. 1. 20.

Luc.2.14. this day proclaimed by the Angells. So, by the vertue of this birth, Heaven is at peace with it ſelfe: and Heaven, with Earth, is now at peace. So is earth too, with it ſelfe, and a fulfilling of the Text by this meeting is, there, too.

Rom. 9.4. The Iewes, they repreſent truth; to them it belongeth properly. For, Truth was, where were Eloquia Dei, the Oracles of GOD: and they were with the Iew. The Gentiles they claime by Mercie, that is their vertue: Where was Mercie, but where was miſerie? and where was miſerie, but with them that lay in darkneſſe in the ſhadow of death? And, that was the Gentiles caſe, before this orta eſt. But, when the partition wall was broken downe, and the two met in one, then alſo (in a ſenſe) Mercie and Truth met together. So, theſe two.

Luc.1.79. And ſo, the other two likewiſe. For, Righteouſneſſe, ſhe was where the Law was, (for, that, the rule of righteouſneſſe,) where the Covenant of the Old Teſtament was, doe this and live (the very voice of Iuſtice:) But, Peace was, where CHRIST was, in the Goſpell; Ipſe eſt Pax noſtra, for He is our Peace: Peace, and Peace-maker both, Qui fecit utrunque unum, that hath made the Law and the Goſpell, the Old Teſtament and the New, to be bound together (now) both in one volume.

II.

Of this meeting in Chriſtianitie

Thus we have done with CHRIST. I would now apply this meeting to our ſelves another while. For, I aske; did this hold; did theſe meet only in CHRIST? Doe they not in Chriſtianity likewiſe? Yes; there too. With CHRIST came Chriſtianitie: looke, what in His birth, now; in the new birth of every one, that ſhall be the better by it; even the ſame meeting of the very ſame vertues, all.

1 Ioh.1.8. Mercie and Truth (firſt) to meet. Truth of confeſſion; confeſſion of our ſinnes; which if with figge-leaves we ſeeke to cover, and confeſſe not, there is no truth in us. And, ſome truth there is to be (at leaſt this truth) or, no meeting with Mercie. But, when this truth commeth forth, mercy meeteth it ſtraight. Will ye ſee the meeting? Peccavi (ſaid DAVID) there is truth: Tranſtulit Dominus peccatum (ſaith Nathan,)

2 Sam.12.13. there is mercie; Mercie and Truth met together. Homo in terris, per veritatem ſtimulatus, peccâſſe ſe confitebatur; & Deus in cœlis, per miſericordiam flexus, confitentis miſerebatur. Truth pricked man to confeſſe his ſinnes; and Mercy moved God to pitie him confeſſing, and ſend Mercie to meet Truth.

Will ye goe on to the other Verſe? It holds there too (this.) For, where a true confeſſion is by man made, Veritas de terrâ orta eſt, Truth is budded out of the Earth. And ſo it muſt, yet, Righteouſneſſe will give us a good looke from Heaven. But will, aſſoone as it is: for, when this truth ſprings freely from the earth, to our owne condemnation; immediately upon it, Righteouſneſſe ſhewes her ſelfe from Heaven, to our juſtification. Will ye ſee this too? Lord be mercifull to me a ſinner, (there is Truth from the earth;) deſcen-

Luc.18.14. dit domum ſuam juſtificatus, (there is Righteouſneſſe from Heaven.)

But, (will ye marke:) Here are two truths, and in either Verſe, one. This latter, is the truth of Veritas orta eſt, of CHRISTS Religion. And in this treaty, it was an article of Inprimis, mercy not to meet any, but them that profeſſe the truth of CHRISTS birth from the earth. Both theſe were borne together: By and by, upon the birth of CHRIST (the Truth,) the other birth alſo, of Chriſtian truth, did flouriſh and ſpread it ſelfe all over the earth. The whole world (before) given over, and even growne over, with Idolatry, quite covered with the miſt of error and ignorance, began then to entertaine the Chriſtian profeſſion, (and by it, to worſhip God in ſpirit and truth,) the true Religion, which is never true, if it have not this meeting: And this meeting it cannot have, if it have not the meanes of it, ortus veritatis de terrâ.

The ſame ſay wee likewiſe, for the Righteouſneſſe which looked downe, and ſhewed her ſelfe. It was not that of the Law, (which never came paſt the top of Mount Sinai,) but a new righteouſneſſe, caſt in a new mould; a heavenly one, which never ſaw the earth (nor the earth it) before, before this birth; which is, the righteouſneſſe of CHRIST revealed in His Goſpell, when that Truth ſprang, this Righteouſneſſe looked downe upon it.

Now,

Now, as this of Mercie and Truth enter us; ſo truth (not truth alone, but truth with truth's paire,) with righteouſneſſe, carrie us forward to God. Truth is not enough; not the truth of Religion, never ſo knowne, never ſo profeſſed; not without Righteouſneſſe. Truth is but the light, to guide us; Righteouſneſſe is the way, to bring us thither. A light is to ſee by: A way is to goe in: So is righteouſneſſe. It followes ſtraight, ponet greſſus in viâ, Righteouſneſſe ſhall ſet us in the way of His ſteppes: Stepps, that is, the courſe of life. For, ſcienti (by knowledge of the truth,) and not facienti, (by the practice of righteouſneſſe,) peccatum eſt illi (ſaith S. Iames;) and plagæ multæ, ſaith S. Iames his Maſter. Sinne, in that man that ſerves theſe two, is leſſe pardonable, and more puniſhable, than in any other. Verſe 13. Iam. 4. 17. Luc. 12. 44.

And then, turne Righteouſneſſe to Peace, and they will not meet barely, but (more than meet) Kiſſe, in ſigne, there is betweene them more than ordinarie affection. Fac juſtitiam, & habebis pacem, (Saint Auguſtine ſtands much on this.) Eſchew evill and doe good, ſaith he, (there is Righteouſneſſe:) and then, ſeeke Peace, and ye ſhall not bee long in ſeeking it; She will come forth, her ſelfe, to meet Righteouſneſſe and kiſſe her. And this he aſſures us, as a certaine ſigne, to know on the one ſide, true righteouſneſſe, (for, that tends to peace, not to queſtions and brabbles, wherof there never will be end:) So, on the other ſide, true peace; that kiſſes righteouſneſſe, comes not together (like Samſons foxes) by the tailes, by indirect meanes, but cleerely and fairely; Such meanes, as all the world will confeſſe, to be right and good. Pſal 34. 14. Iud. 15. 44.

Now marke the order, how they ſtand. Mercie leades to Truth, and the knowledge of it; and Truth to righteouſneſſe, and the practice of it; and Righteouſneſſe to Peace, and the waies of it, Guides our feet (firſt) into the way of Peace. And, ſuch a way ſhall there alwaies be (do all the Controverſie Writers what they can:) a faire way agreed upon of all ſides, queſtioned by none, in which, who ſo orders his ſtepps aright, may ſee the ſalvation of our God. Even the way here chalked out before us: To ſhew mercy, and ſpeake truth; doe righteouſneſſe, and follow peace. And by this rule proceeding in the points whereto we are come already, even thoſe truthes, wherein we are otherwiſe minded, would in due time be revealed unto us. Luc. 1. 79.

This is Zacharies peace; and this of his well followed, in the end will bring us Simeons peace, Nunc dimittis in pace; to be diſmiſſed, to depart hence in peace: and Pax in noviſſimo, Peace at the latter end, is worth all. Peace, in the end, is a bleſſed end; and the beginning of a Peace, which never ſhall have end. Mercy our beginning, and Peace our end. This for the meeting; as in CHRIST, ſo in Chriſtianitie, or the courſe of a Chriſtian mans life. Luc 2. 29.

Now a word, for the continuance of this meeting. For, I aske againe: Met they to part? By no meanes; but, as they be together (now,) ſo to continue ſtill. We had much adoe to get them together thus: Now we have them ſo, let us keepe them ſo in any wiſe. For, as this meeting made Chriſtianitie firſt: So, there is nothing marres it, but the breaking it off againe: No greater bane to it, than the parting of theſe. The continuance of this meeting.

Let me tell you this: Saint Auguſtine is very earneſt upon this point, of the keeping of righteouſneſſe and peace, (upon this Pſalme and this Verſe;) and of truth and mercie together, (in the next,) upon miſericors and verax, againſt them that would lay hold on mercie, and let goe truth. O (ſaith he) that will not be: they met together, they will not part now; Either, without either, will not be had. And ſo, of the two others. There be, that would have Peace, and paſſe by Righteouſneſſe: Tu fortè unam habere vis, & alteram non vis (ſayth he,) you would gladly have one (Peace;) and for Righteouſneſſe, you could be contented to ſpare it. Aske any, would you have Peace? With all my heart, he will anſwer. There is no having one without the other; Oſculantur hæ, amant hæ; why they kiſſe, they love together. Si amicam pacis non amaveris, non amabit te pax, if ye love not her friend (that is, Righteouſneſſe) ſhe will none of your love. Take that from Saint Auguſtine.

Set this downe then; Chriſtianitie is a meeting: One cannot meet: Two there muſt be, and they may. But it is not a meeting of two; but, of two with two: ſo, no leſſe leſſe tahn foure. As CHRIST Himſelfe was not one nature, So neither doth Chriſtianitie conſiſt of any one vertue : Not under foure. There is a quaternion in CHRIST, His [1] Eſſence, and His [2] Perſon, (ὑπόστασις, and hypoſtaſis,) in divinis: His [3] Fleſh, and His [4] reaſonable Soule, in humanis. Anſwerable to theſe foure, are theſe here : theſe foure, to His foure.

And, as it is a meeting, ſo a Croſſe meeting, of foure Vertues, that ſeeme to be in a kind of oppoſition, (as hath been noted.) No matter for that. They will make the better refraction; the coole of one, allay the heat; the moiſt of one, temper the drought of the other. The ſoft vertues need to be quickned; the more forward, to be kept from Altum ſapere. So are the elements, of which our bodie : So are the foure winds, of which our breath doth conſiſt, which gives us life. And theſe (in the Text) have an analogie, or correſpondence, with the elements, obſerved by the Ancients. [1] Truth as the earth, which is not moved at any time : [2] Quaſi fluvius Pax (ſaith Eſay,) Peace as a water-ſtreame, the quills whereof make glad the City of GOD. [3] Mercy, we breathe and live by, no leſſe than we doe by aire : and [4] Righteouſneſſe, ſhe ventura eſt judicare ſæculum per ignem, in that element.

You may happen find one of theſe, in Scripture, ſtood much upon, and of the other three nothing ſayd there, but all left out; Conceive of it, as a figure (Synecdoche they call it.) As, ye have (here) man called earth; yet is he not earth alone, but all the other three elements as well. No more is Chriſtianitie any one, but by Synecdoche : but in very deed, a meeting of them all foure.

It deceived the Gnoſtique, this place : This is eternall life to know thee. Knowledge (ſaith he) is it; As if, it were all : and ſo, he bade care for nothing elſe, but to know, and knowing, live as they liſt. The Encratite, he was as farre gone the other way; He lived ſtraightly, and his tenet was, non eſt curandum quid quiſque credat, Id curandum modò quod quiſque faciat : So that ye hold a ſtraight courſe of life, it skills not, what ye hold in points of faith. No meeting, with theſe : Single vertues all.

Yes, it skills. For, both theſe were wrong; both goe for Heretikes. Chriſtianitie is a meeting; and to this meeting, there goe Pia dogmata, as well as Bona opera; Righteouſneſſe, aſwell as truth. Erre not this error then, to ſingle any out, (as it were) in diſgrace of the reſt; Say not, one will ſerve the turne, what ſhould we doe with the reſt of the foure; Take not a figure, and make of it a plaine ſpeech; Seeke not to be ſaved by Synecdoche. Each of theſe is a quarter of Chriſtianity, you ſhall never while you live make it ſerve for the whole.

The truth is; ſever them, and farewell all; take any one from the reſt, and it is as much as the whole is worth. For (as Bernard well obſerved) non ſunt virtutes ſi ſeparentur, upon their ſeparation they ceaſe to be vertues. For, how looſe a thing is Mercie, if it be quite devoid of Iuſtice ? We call it fooliſh pitie. And how harſh a thing Iuſtice, if it be utterly without all temper of mercie ? Summa injuria then (that is) Iniuſtice at the higheſt. Mercie, take truth away, what hold is there of it, who will truſt it ? Truth, take Mercie from it, it is Severitie, rather than veritie : Then Righteouſneſſe, without Peace; certainly wrong is much better; better than perpetuall brabbling : And Peace, without Righteouſneſſe; better a ſword far. This, if you ſunder them. But, temper theſe together, and how bleſſed a mixture ! Set a ſong of all foure, and how heavenly a melodie !

Entertaine them then all foure; [1] Hope in mercie; [2] Faith in truth : [3] Feare of righteouſneſſe; [4] Love of peace : O quam præclara concordia ! O how loving a knot ! how by all meanes to be maintained ! how great pitie to part it !

The Time of his meeting.

A little of the Time (now,) when this meeting would be. No time amiſſe : no day in the yeare, but upon intreaty, they will be got to meet. Yet if any one day have a prerogative more than another, of all the dayes in the yeare, on this day moſt kindly; the day we hold holy to the memorie of this meeting; the day of orta eſt, the occaſion of it. In remembrance of the firſt meeting, then, they are apt and willing to meet upon it againe; forward (ever) to meet, the day, they firſt met of themſelves. But, CHRIST this day being borne, this day, to meet of courſe. One ſpeciall end, that He was borne, was that, at His birth, this meeting might be. If to day then they ſhould not meet, that were in a ſort to evacuate CHRISTS birth : if there ſhould be a Veritas orta, without an obviaverunt ſibi : So that if we procure it not, we had as good keepe no Feaſt at all.

that,

What is then the proper worke of this day, but ſtill to renew this meeting on it? For, CHRISTS birth we cannot entertaine, but all theſe we muſt too; Neceſſary attendants upon it, every one. They be the vertues of His Nativitie, theſe. At His birth, CHRIST bethought Himſelfe of all the vertues, which He would have to attend on Him, then; and theſe He made choice of, then, and for ever, to be the vertues of this Feaſt.

The ſooner and the better to procure this meeting, the Church meets us (as Melchiſedek did Abraham) with bread and wine; but, of a higher nature than his, farre: prepares (ever) this day a love-feaſt, whereat they may the rather meet. Where, Truth from the earth may looke up to heaven and confeſſe; and Righteouſneſſe from heaven, may looke downe to earth and pardon: where we may ſhew Mercie, in giving where need is; and offer Peace, in forgiving where cauſe is; that ſo, there may be an obviaverunt, a meeting, of all hands.

And even ſo then let there be. So, may our end be as the end of the Firſt Verſe, in peace; and as the end of the Second, in Heaven. So, may all the bleſſings that came to mankinde by this meeting, or by the birth of CHRIST (the cauſe of it) meet in us and remaine upon us, till, as we now meet together, at the Birth; So we may then meet Eph. 4. 13.
in a perfect man, in the meaſure of the fulneſſe of the age of CHRIST: As meet
(now) at the LAMBES yeaning; ſo meet then, at the LAMBES marriage; be caught up in the clouds (then) to meet Him, 1 Theſ. 4. 17. and there to reigne for ever with Him, in His Kingdome of GLORIE.

A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED

before the KINGS MAIESTIE, at White-hall, on Friday, the XXV. of December, A. D. MDCXVIII.
being CHRISTMAS Day.

LVK. II. Ver. XII, XIII.

Et hoc erit vobis Signum, &c.

And this ſhall be a Signe unto you: ye ſhall finde the Childe ſwadled, and layed in a cratch.

And ſtraightway there was, with the Angell, a multitude of heavenly ſouldiers, praiſing GOD, and ſaying, Glorie be to GOD on high, &c.

OF theſe three verſes, the points be two: 1 The Shepheards Signe; and 2 the Angels Song. The Signe is a remaine of Angelus ad paſtores, the Angels ſpeech to the Shepheards: We called it, as the Angell himſelfe called it, a Sermon: Evangelizo (the word, he uſeth) is, to preach.

Of which Sermon there are two parts: 1 His Birth (the verſe before,) 2 His Finding, (in this.) For, this is a double Feaſt: not onely, the Feaſt of His Nativitie; but the Feaſt of His Invention alſo. Therefore the Angell makes not an end, with [unto you is borne:] but, tells them further; It is not enough, CHRIST is borne; but, to take benefit by His Birth, we are to finde Him. Natus eſt, His part; Invenietis, ours.

Of natus eſt ſomewhat hath formerly bin ſaid: Invenietis (now) followes; and followes well. For, what is Natus eſt, without Invenietis? Such a one there is borne; what ſhall we be the better, if we find Him not. As good, not borne, as, not knowne: To us, all one. Nobis naſcitur, cum a nobis noſcitur. Borne He may be, before; but, nobis natus, to us He is borne, when to us He is knowne, when we find Him; and not before. CHRISTVS inventus is more than CHRISTVS natus. Set downe invenietis then firſt.

Invenietis leads us to Hoc erit Signum. For, how ſhall they finde Him without a Signe? So come we from CHRISTVS natus, to CHRISTVS ſignatus. Natus, borne borne, to be found; Signatus signed or marked, that He may be found. Borne He is, that they know: And, when, they know; (hodiè.) And, where, they know, in Bethlehem. To Bethlehem they will: but when they come there, how then? In such resort, the towne so full of strangers, as no roome in the Innes, whither should they turne them? What could they wish, but O quod erit Signum! Natus est, ô that He were Signatus! O that we had a signe to finde Him by!

Their wish is honest and good: And pitie, any that seeks CHRIST should want a signe, to finde Him by: the Angell will not suffer that; But, before he end his speech, he takes order for their Signe: and this it is. When ye come to Bethlehem, never search in any house, or chamber; In a stable, there, shall you finde a Babe swadled and laid in a manger; You would little thinke it, but that is He. And so, Signo dato, this Signe given, the Sermon ends. For, to find CHRIST is all: All, in all. The Division I.

A Sermon would have an Antheme of course; It hath so. And one suitable, if it might bee: An Angell preached it, and no man: It would be a Queer of Angels, and not of men, to sing it. So it is: Gloria in excelsis, all the Fathers call it Hymnum Angelicum, the Angels Hymne, or Antheme.

This is set downe in the two later verses: the 1 Queer that sing it, in the former: the 2 Song it selfe (the dittie of it so) in the later. 1. The Queer: in it five. 1. Who? That there were certaine heavenly Personages first. 2. In what habit? that in the habit of souldiers to see to. 3. What number? that a great multitude of them. 4. What they did: That they tooke up this Hymne and fell on praising GOD. 5. And fifthly, When? That they did it instantly, upon the speech ended. II. 1

The Song: That consists of three straines. There are in it 1 GOD, 2 Earth, and 3 Men, these three first. And then, three to these three: 1 Glorie, 2 Peace, 3 Good-will: Each sorted to other: 1 Glorie, to GOD; 2 Peace, to the Earth; 3 To Men, a Good-will.

So have you the Signe and the Song: the one to ballance or counterpoize the other; the Song, to sing away the signe; to make amends, for the manger. The Signe, very poore and meane; the Song, exceeding high and heavenly. Paupertas in imis, the Signe; povertie at the lowest: Gloria in excelsis, the Song, Glorie at the highest. That, well might Leo aske, Quis est iste puer, tam parvus, tam magnus? What Child is this so little, and so great withall? Tam parvus, ut in præsepi jaceat: Tam magnus, ut Ei concinant Angeli, So little, as He lyes in a cratch: So great though, as He hath Angels to sing to Him; the whole Queer of heaven, to make Him melodie. It is a course (this) the HOLY GHOST began it (here,) at His Birth, and after, observed it all along, Sociare ima summis, & insolita solitis temperare; to couple low and high together, and to temper things meane and usuall, with others as strange every way.

Out of these we shall learne, 1 First, what our dutie is, To finde CHRIST. The Angell presupposes this; that, being borne, we will not leave, till we have found Him; till we can say, (it was the first word of the first Apostle) εὑρήκαμεν, We have found, found the MESSIAS. Invenietis: by all meanes, to find CHRIST. 2 Then how to find Him, at what Signe. 3 And last, when we have found Him, how to salute Him, with what words to praise GOD, for Him. For Him: both for His Birth; and for His Invention. All considered, His invention, to us, no lesse behoofull, than His Nativitie. And, this day to be no lesse solemnized, for invenietis His finding, than for natus est His very Birth it selfe. It is more often found, in the first Fathers, by the name of Theophania, His appearance or being found; than by the name Genethlia, of being borne into the world The Angels Evangelizo reacheth to both: their Gloria in excelsis is sung for both. 3 Joh. 1. 41.

I. THe worke of the day is invenietis, to find CHRIST. We ſhall not be better for natus eſt, if we find Him not. Find Him we cannot, if (firſt) we find not a Signe to find Him by. Erit vobis Signum, and Hoc erit (ſaith the Angell) a Signe ye ſhall have; and this ſhall be it : Ye ſhall find Him ſwadled, and laid in a manger.

I. The Signe. Signes never come amiſſe; but, are (then) ſo neceſſarie, as we cannot miſſe them, when we ſhould miſſe without them : when, no Signe, no invenietis : As, here. For, if a Signe; if this Signe had not been given; no invenietis : CHRIST had not been found. Not been found; for, never had been ſought, in ſuch a place. Had not the Angell thither directed the Shepherds; Had not the Starre thither pointed the Magi, neither tone, nor tother would ever, there, have ſought Him. A Non eſt inventus had been returned by both.

And reaſon : For, ſome kinde of proportion there would be betweene Signum, and Signatum; And if the Signe bee a place (as here) betweene Locus, and Locatus. A chiefe Perſon, in a chiefe place; a LORD and SAVIOVR, ſomething Lord and Saviour-like. To Bethlehem they will. Set the Signe by, let them alone, ſay nothing to them : When they came thither, they would never goe to an Inne, or Oſtrie, but to the very beſt houſe in the Towne. Or, if to an Inne, to the faireſt Chamber in it : Or, to a Chamber, at leaſt : Never, to the ſtable; there to look, in the manger, for CHRISTVS DOMINVS. To the ſtable we goe to look for an horſe; To the Crib for bos cognovit & aſinus; for one of them : Never, thither, to ſeeke for the SAVIOVR of the world.

Eſay 1.3. Nay, if in their ſearch paſſing by, by hap, they had lighted upon ſuch a Birth; a Child ſo lying; it may be, they would have pitied the poore Babe, and the Mother; but have gone on their way, and ſought farther : Never (I dare ſay) taken Him, for CHRIST the LORD. And, if one ſhould have bid them, Stay, for this is the Child, the Angell ſpake of; they would have ſhaken him off, and ſaid, with as great skorne
1 Sam. 16.27. as they, 1 Sam. X. Nunquid poterit iſte ſalvare nos, what ſhall this be our SAVIOVR trow? For, invenietis is not all, to find Him : but, finding Him, to applie the Angels words unto Him; to beleeve, of this Child thus there lying, that He ſhould be CHRIST the SAVIOVR, Gaudium omni populo, the joy of the whole earth. It goes hard, this.

We ſaid (when time was) this meſſage was ſo high, as no man meet to bring it but an Angell of Heaven. We ſay now, ex alio capite, this ſighe was ſo unlikely, no man was meet to give it, but an Angell onely. And it was well, it was an Angell : if it had been any elſe, His Birth would have ſeemed (as his Reſurrection did) λῆρος, a fained tale : No mans Affidavit would have been taken for it.

What were the Shepherds like to thinke of this? Sure, thanke him for Natus eſt, the newes of His Birth; but, not for His Signe. Erit Signum, they like well : but not, Hoc erit. If He had given them no Signe, it would have troubled them : Now, the Signe given troubles them worſe. For, this Signe, they know not what to make of it; It is ſo poore a one, it is enough, to make them halfe in the mind to give over their journey, as not caring for invenietis, whether they find Him or no : If His Signe be no better, as good loſt, as found. Alwaies, this is out of the Evangelizo vobis; no part of it; for, no good newes, thus to find Him.

And we, if we admit a conference with fleſh and bloud, when we lay together the Signe, and of whom it is the Signe; we find, to our thinking, a great diſparagement, and (I know not how) thoughts ariſe in our hearts, as if ſome better Signe would have done better. The meaning is, we would find CHRIST (faine;) but we would find Him, in ſome better place. Halfe Iewes we are all, in this point; we would have a MESSIAS in ſtate. Hoc erit, this it ſhall be (ſaith the Angell.) Shall be : but ſhould it be this? No : how ſhould it be, let us ſee; Why, this ſhall be the Signe; Ye ſhall find the Child, not in theſe clouts or cratch, but in a crimſin mantle; in a cradle of ivorie : That (lo) were ſomewhat Saviour-like : Hoc erit Signum.

But,

But, in vaine take we upon us, to teach the Angell: We would have we know not what. We forget Saint Augustines, Distingue tempora: as the time is, the Angell is right; and a fitter Signe could not be assigned. Would we have had Him come in power, and great glorie? and so He will come; but not now. He, that commeth here in clouts, He will come in the clouds, one day: But (now) His comming was for another end; and so, to be in another manner. His comming (now) was, (as we say in the Collect) to visit us in great humilitie: and so, His Signe to be according.

Nay then, I say: First, goe to the nature of a Signe, if CHRIST had come in His excellencie, that had bene no Signe, no more than the Sunne in the Firmament shining in his full strength: Hoc non erit Signum. Contrarie to the course of Nature it would be, else it is no Signe. The Sunne eclipsed; the Sunne in Sackcloth: that is Signum in sole, the Signe indeed: And that is the Signe here, the Sunne of Righteousnesse entering into His eclipse, begins to be darkened, in His first point, the point of His Nativitie. This is the Signe (say I:) and, that had beene none. 1 Luke 21.25. Mal.4.2.

I say againe: It is not onely Signum; that is not all, it is Signum Vobis: We shall doe well to looke to Vobis. There is a matter, in that: For whom, this Signe was given: (Not the persons so much, as the condition.) For, if He had beene so gloriously borne, such, as these, should never have beene suffered to come neere Him. But, this is a Signe, for You: You, that keepe sheep, and such other poore people; you have a SAVIOVR too. He is not the Saviour of Great States onely; but, even of poore shepheards. The poorest of the earth may repaire to Him, being no other place but this; and by this Signe to finde Him: And so, hoc erit Signum Vobis. 2

I say thirdly, Vobis, and take in our selves too. So, Hoc erit Signum. For, what praise or thanks had it beene for us, to have beleeved in Him, borne in all glorious manner? But, being thus borne, with this Signe, if now we doe it, τοῦτο χάρις παρὰ θεῷ (to speake in S. Peters phrase) this hath thankes and praise with GOD: And so, Hoc erit Signum. 3 1 Pet.2.19.20.

Fourthly, without regard of them, or of us, I say, that even in regard of Himselfe, Hoc erit Signum. Would there be a proportion betweene the Signe and the Signatum? There is so. This, holds good proportion with the ensuing course of his life, and death. And, (all considered,) it is even Signum adæquatum. We may well beginne with CHRIST in the Cratch: We must end with CHRIST on the Crosse. The Cratch is a Signe of the Crosse. They that write, de re rusticâ, describe the forme of making a Cratch Crosse-wise. The Scandal of the Cratch is a good preparative, to the Scandal of the Crosse. To be swadled thus, as a child, doth that offend? What then, when ye shall see Him pinion'd and bound as a Malefactor? To lye in a manger, is that so much? how then, when ye shall see Him hang on the Crosse? But so, — primo ne discrepet imum; that His beginning and His end may suit well and not disagree, Sic oportuit Christum nasci; Thus ought CHRIST to be borne and this behoved to be His Signe. 4

But then, to remove this Scandal, I say fiftly: That the lesse glorious, the more glorious; the lesse glorious His Signe, the more glorious He. And even in this respect of His glorie, He was to be borne under this Signe. Had He come in the power and great glorie, wee spake of, what great matter had it bene for Him (then,) to have done things powerfull, and glorious? But, comming in this sort, these same panni and præsepe were an evident Signe, of the power of His might, in nothing so manifest as in this, that, from so poore a beginning, He was able to advance so glorious a worke. It was much from a babe floting in the flagges of Nilus, in a basket of bulrushes (MOSES) to gather himselfe a people, even the Nation and Kingdome of the Iewes, and to deliver His Law. It was infinitely much more, from this Babe (here) lying in the Cratch, to worke the bringing in of the Gentiles, and the turning about of the whole World, and to publish His Gospell, the power of GOD to salvation. Herein, is power: from His Cratch, to doe this. There to lay Him; and, there lying, to make so many Nations come, and adore Him, as since He hath. That if ever in His humilitie, His Iudgement were exalted; if His power were ever made perfect in weakenesse; if ever He shewed, that infirmum Dei fortius est hominibus, GOD at the weakest, is stronger than men in all their strength; Hoc erit Signum, in this Signe it was. 5 Exod. 2. 3. Acts 8.33. 2 Cor. 12.9. 1 Cor. 1.25.

A ſigne, cum externa rejicit, quòd ſibi ſufficit; in that, He caſts from him all outward ſignes and meanes, that He is, of Himſelfe, all-ſufficient; & nullo indiget niſi ſe; and needs no power but His owne. His Cratch and He will bring this worke to paſſe. His gloria in excelſis will be hoc ipſo excelſior; His glorie on high, ſo much the higher, for this. Ever; But, now, more than ever: And, in all His ſignes; but, in this, more glorious, than in any, nay than in all them. And ſo Hoc erit ſignum, this ſhall be the Signe: ſhall be, and ſhould be, both.

6 But, I waive all theſe, and ſay ſixthly: Make of the Signe, what ye will; It skils not what it be; never ſo meane: In the nature of a Signe, there is nothing, but it may be ſuch; All is, in the thing ſignified. So it carrie us to a rich Signatum, and worth the finding, what makes it a matter, how meane the Signe be? We are ſent to a Crib; Not, to an empty Crib; CHRIST is in it. Be the Signe never ſo ſimple, the Signatum it carries us to, makes amends. Any Signe with ſuch a Signatum.

And, I know not the man ſo ſquemiſh, but if, in His ſtable, and under His manger, there were a treaſure hid, and he were ſure of it; but, thither he would, and pluck up the planks, and digge and rake for it, and be never a whit offended with the homelineſſe of the place. If then CHRIST be a treaſure (as, in Him are all the treaſures Coloſ.2.3. of the wiſdome and bounty of GOD) what skills it, what be His Signe. With this, with any other, CHRIST is worth the finding. Though the Cratch be not worth the going to, CHRIST is worth the going for. He is not worthy of CHRIST, that will not goe any whither, to finde CHRIST.

7 Laſtly, I would faine know, why ſhould the ſhepheards, why ſhould any be aſhamed, of this Signe? the Angells are not: Non erubeſcit quis quod prædicat, No man proclaimes or preaches of that; makes a Hymne of that, he is aſhamed of. And (indeed,) why ſhould the Angells be aſhamed to report it, ſeeing CHRISTVS non eſt confuſus, CHRIST is not aſhamed to weare it. And if He be not, ſo to be found, never let us be, ſo to finde Him.

I conclude then: They that will have a SAVIOVR without ſuch a Signe, beſt ſtay for the Iewes MESSIAS, or get them, for their Signe, to ſome body elſe. The Angell hath none; The Goſpell knowes none, but this: We muſt take CHRIST as we find Him; Cratch and all. The invention of the cratch, and the invention of CHRIST fall both upon one Feaſt; this day, both: No ſevering of them. All which (I truſt) by this, ſhew plainely; the Signe was well aſſigned, by the Angell: and ſo (I hope) we will not let the ſhepheards goe alone, but goe along with them too, for companie, to finde CHRIST, in hoc Signo, by this Signe.

But the cratch is gone, many yeares agoe: What is our Signe now? Why, what was this Signe a ſigne of? There needs no ſtraining at all; of humilitie (cleere:) Signum humile, Signum humilis. Not alwaies ſo; not with us; where, the higheſt minds will vſe the loweſt ſignes: but, with CHRIST, with ſuch in whom is the mind of CHRIST there is no odds at all. Ye may ſtrike a tally between the Signe and the Signatum. Humilitie, then: We ſhall find Him, by that ſigne, where we finde Humilitie, and not faile: and where that is not, be ſure we ſhall never find Him. This day, it is not poſſible to keep off of this theme: we cannot but we muſt fall upon it; it is ſo woven into every Text, there is no avoyding it: But, of all, into the Signe, moſt of all. Such a Signe, of ſuch Humilitie, as never was.

Mat.12.38. Signes are taken for wonders: (Maſter wee would faine ſee a Signe, that is, a miracle.) And, in this ſenſe, it is a Signe, to wonder at. Indeed, every word (here) is a wonder: Τὸ ἄφατον an infant; Verbum infans, the Word without a word; the eternall Word not Iob 38.9. able to ſpeake a word; [1] A wonder ſure. [2] And the σπαργανισμὸς, Swadled; and that a wonder too. He, that (as in the 38. of Iob he ſaith) taketh the vaſt bodie of the maine Sea, turnes it to and fro, as a little child, and rolls it about with the ſwadling bands of darkneſſe; He, to come thus into clouts, Himſelfe! [3] But yet, all is well; All children are ſo: But, in præſepi, that is it, there is the wonder. Children lye not there; He doth: There lieth He; the LORD of glory, without all glory. In ſtead of a Palace, a poore ſtable; of a cradle of ſtate, a beaſts cratch; No pillow, but a lock of hay; No hangings, but duſt and and cobwebs; No attendants, but in medio animalium (as the Fathers read the third of Abacuk:) For, if the Inne were full, the ſtable was not empty, we may be ſure. A Signe this, (nay three, in one,) able to amaze any. Abac. 3.2.

And is it true, (ſaith SALOMON, and makes a wonder of it) will GOD accept a place in earth to receive Him? (When he had built Him a ſtately ſumptuous Temple, and meant it by that.) And is that a wonder, if in ſuch a Temple? What is it then, if in a corner of a ſtable, in a cratch there? Will He accept of that trow? If He will, Hoc erit Signum indeed. 1 Reg. 8.27. O LORD, O LORD (ſaith King DAVID (his Father) rapt with admiration) how wonderfull! What? why, minoraſti Eum ab Angels, Thou mad'ſt Him lower than the Angels (for, to CHRIST, doth the Apoſtle applie that verſe Heb. II.) Lower than the Angels? Nay, lower yet (ſaith Eſay in his LIII.) Noviſſimus virorum, the loweſt of men: Nay, lower yet (ſaith the Angell here,) lower than the loweſt of men. For, a ſtable, a cratch, is a place for beaſts, not for men. So low. Well may this be ſaid a Signe, in this ſenſe, to wonder at: If it be well looked into, it is able to ſtrike any man into an extaſie. Pſal. 8.4. Heb. 2.6. Eſay 53.3.

But, if we ſtand but gazing, and wondering at this Signe, the Angell will blame us at the Nativitie, As they did the Apoſtles, for the like, at his Aſcenſion. What learne we by it? Acts 1.11.

For, loquitur Signis; Signes have their ſpeech: And, this is no dumbe Signe. What ſaith it then to us? CHRIST (though as yet He cannot ſpeake, as a new borne babe, yet) by it, He ſpeakes, and out of His crib (as a pulpit) this day, preaches to us; and His theme is Diſcite à me; Learne of me, for I am humble: Humble, in my birth, yee all ſee. This, is the Præcipe of the Præſepe (as I may call it;) the leſſon of CHRISTS cratch. 2. Vobis, To you. Matt. 11.29.

A Signe it is; but, not a Signe at large, indefinitely: Nothing, but hoc erit Signum. But, Signum, Vobis (for you:) limited, to ſome; Not, to all. For, not to ſome others; But, to you, and ſuch as you are, a Signe it is: a Signe it is, how to find Him. A Signe, for whom He was borne, that thus was borne: To whom He, to whom His birth belongs. Sure, humilis naſcitur humilibus: So He was borne; and for them that are ſo, He was borne. Such He was found; and, of ſuch He will be found, and of none but ſuch.

But then, (as S. Auguſtine ſaith well) Signum Vobis, ſi Signum in Vobis: A Signe for you, if a Signe in you. For, in this ſenſe alſo, it is a Signe to ſigne us with; a Signature, to make a marke on us. Theirs, (in the IX. of Ezekiel) that were ſaved, they were marked with the Signe of Tau in their foreheads: That, is this very Signe, the marke of Humilitie, as being the laſt and loweſt letter of the whole Alphabet. Ezek. 9.4.

And, this Signe ſhall follow them that beleeve; and by this marke will Hee know them. By the Signe, we finde Him; by the ſame will He finde us: Invenietis and inveniemini, by one and the ſame ſigne both. For nunquam erit aliud Servatoris Signum, aliud Servati; Never, He that ſaves, one Signe; they, that ſaved, another. At leaſt, not a quite contrarie: but the ſame ſigne, both. By the ſame, that CHRIST found, by the ſame a Chriſtian: Or, to ſpeake more neerely to the day, by the ſame that CHRISTS Birth, by the ſame, the Chriſtians new birth. For, as Faith is the vertue appropriate to His Conception (by faith He was conceived, Beata quæ credidit:) So is Humilitie, as proper to His Nativitie: in great Humilitie, this day; was He borne, and brought into the world. Then, if the Signe of CHRISTS Birth be the proper Signe of a Chriſtians new birth, wherein CHRIST is faſhioned in us anew; Hoc erit Signum, that they, who to faith have not joyned Humilitie, are not yet come ſo farre, as to be babes in CHRIST; not yet (as Saint Baſil ſpeakes) come to their σπάργανα σωτηρίας, their ſwadling clouts, in the ſtate of ſalvation. And what time (trow ye) will theſe be come to the meaſure of the full age in CHRIST, that yet are no further forward? Many a μειρακιῶδες are there among us, if this Signe hold. Mark. 16.17. Luk. 1.45. 2.18. Gal. 4.19. 2 Pet. 1.5, 6. Matt. 18.3. Ephes. 4.13.

But then, if it be Signum vobis, to ſome; It is for ſome others, Signum contra vos: and that is the proud. For, the Word of GOD hath two edges: and, if it goe one way thus for Humilitie; it cutts as deepe the contrarie, againſt Pride. And withall, under one leads us to the cauſe ſtraight, and ſhewes us the malignitie of the diſeaſe of pride. for the cure whereof, this ſo profound humilitie was requiſite in CHRIST. There

Iſa. 14.14. was one, when time was, tooke the diſeaſe of Eroſi milis Altiſſimo: And He breathed
Gen.3.5. upon our firſt parents, with his Eritis ſicut Dii, and infected them with it. To make Phil 2.6. themſelves equall with GOD, is plaine robberie (ſaith the Apoſtle, Phil. 2.) For that Phil.2.7,8. robberie of theirs, was the SONNE of GOD robbed (as I may ſay) and quite ſpoyled of His glorie. For their puffing up, ἐκένωσε, He was made empty: For their lifting up, ἐταπείνωσε, was He brought thus low: For their comparing with GOD, came He to be com-
Pſal.49.12. pared to the beaſts that periſh: lay in their manger, we ſee.

Never blame the Angell, for giving this ſigne; he had no other to give. As CHRIST was borne, ſo was He to tender Him. Aske CHRIST, why He would be ſo borne. Of any other child, this could not be asked: They are borne, they neither know
Eſa. 53.7. where nor how. Of CHRIST it may: He knew both. For, as oblatus eſt, quia voluit: So, natus eſt, He was ſo borne, becauſe He would ſo be. And why would He ſo be? His Zach.2.10. Ecce venio, His comming was to recover man. Man was to be recovered by the contrarie of that, by which he periſhed. By pride he periſhed, that is confeſſed. Then, by humi-litie, to be recovered, according to the rule, Contraria curantur contrariis. So, He to Gen.3.5. come, in humilitie. The pride was high; Eritis ſicut Dii: the contrarie, as low, factus Pſal. 49 12. eſt ſicut jumenta, as low as they; lye in their cratch.

It is ſtrange, this point of CHRIST in the cratch, how tedious, how harſh it is to be ſtood on. Harſh; but, to none more, nay none ſo much, as to the proud: And they, of all other, have leaſt cauſe to be offended with it: It is they, that were the cauſe of it. They ſhould not (one would thinke) be offended with their owne doing: It is long of them, all this. If there they finde Him, It is they, and none but they, that there layd Him. If He be otherwiſe than He ſhould, their pride is to blame for it. But for it, we had found Him in a better place. And fie upon pride (ſay I,) if it were but for this only: Enough, to make us loath this vice, that layd this ſo great a diſgrace (as we count it) upon the Sonne of GOD.

But, marvell not, if this be ſignum contra, to them, a ſigne againſt them; they are againſt it. Well ſayd Bernard: In ſignum, poſitum eſt præſepe tuum domine, ſed in ſignum cui a multis contradicitur; Thy cratch ô LORD is ſet for a ſigne; but for a ſigne, which of many is ſpoken againſt (done againſt I am ſure:) alluding to that of Simeon (at the Cap.2.34. 34. Ver. after) that CHRIST ſhould be a ſigne (and, if CHRIST, His cratch ſure) to be Oſe.5.5. ſpoken againſt. By many, Whoſe pride (ſaith the Prophet) teſtifies to their faces; you may take up the edges of their garments, and ſhew it them; yea, that, even this day, come hither, to make a ſhew of it, as it were to affront this ſigne, and the Angell that gave it: come, to celebrate the Feaſt of Humilitie, in exceſſe of pride. Should the Angell ever have perſwaded one of theſe, to have gone into the ſtable, and have ſought their SAVIOVR there? Never: Doe but looke upon them; you would thinke they had ſome other SAVIOVR by themſelves, that lay in an ivory cradle; and never looked to be ſaved by Him, that this day lay in a manger.

Sure, it is no good ſigne, to be ad oppoſitum to this Signe. If ſignum vobis, to the one; ſignum contra vos, to the other. For, if humilitie be the ſigne of finding CHRIST; pride muſt needs be the ſigne of loſing Him; and who ſo loſeth Him, is (himſelfe) even the child of perdition: and therefore looke to this ſigne, well.

But, humilitie is not all, we finde in this ſigne. The Philoſopher ſaith, Signes are either indicant, or co-indicant. Indicant it is, of humilitie: Co-indicant of that which, in Him, and on His part, (as pride, on ours) was the cauſe that made Him ſtoope to this humilitie, and that was His Love. He left gloriam in excelſis, for δόξα ἐν ἀνθρώποις; His glorie on high, for His goodwill towards men. It was a ſigne of Love too (this.) A ſigne, Cant.2.4. nay an enſigne, His very colors as (in the 2. of Cant.) He termes it, love His banner, or enſigne over us. Signall love indeed; that for our ſakes, refuſed not firſt our nature, our mortalitie (that alone had beene love enough:) But, not the baſeſt eſtate of our nature, not povertie: Povertie, and ſuch povertie, as the like was never heard of, uſque ad ſqualoren & fœtorem ſtabuli, to be found, where He was found; there to lye.

Thou

Thou didst not abhorre the Virgins wombe (ſo we ſing:) Thou didſt not abhorre the beaſts manger, (ſo we may ſing too:) And is not this Hoc erit Signum, a very Enſigne of love? Hym. Ambroſ.

Two waies take we meaſure of Love: 1 Of quanti fecit nos (firſt) by quanta fecit pro nobis; how much He made of us, by how much He did for us, (the ordinary way of the worlds meaſuring.)

2 But there is another, and that is, quanti fecit nos, by quantillus factus eſt pro nobis, how much He made of us, by how little He was made for us. This later we hold to be the more, by how much it is eaſier for Him many times, to make great, than once to be made little.

3 But then, will yee take in (this in the Text) nobis (to make up a third) For us. Vs, that, even at that time, when He ſhewed ſo great love to us, ſhewed ſo little to Him; that if the beaſts had not been better to Him, than we, He had found no place to be borne in. For us He came, and we thruſt Him out from us, and from all place with us, into the place of beaſts. And, if He had not borrowed their ſtable, caruiſſet tecto, He had had no roofe to cover Him: if He had not borrowed their crib, caruiſſet lecto, He had lyen on the cold ground, at this time of the yeare. Nobis (ſure) is ſomewhat.

And now, to quanta fecit pro nobis. For, all this was not ſo much, to ſhew the love in Himſelfe, as to worke in GOD εὐδοκίαν ἐν ἀνθρώποις, Goodwill toward men, (the foot of the Angels ſong;) to regaine His Fathers love: to make Him well pleaſed toward men, by His humilitie, with whom, for their pride, He was iuſtly diſpleaſed. Thus unlovely He became, to make us beloved; thus poore, to make us rich in the grace and favour of GOD, more worth (when the time comes) than all the riches of the world.

This (lo) is the co-indicant ſigne of love, theſe the colors of it. The cratch is the cradle of His love, no leſſe than of His Humilitie, and able to provoke our love againe. The leſſe He made for us, the more we to make of Him: and that, not ſo much, for that He was made; as for the love, by which He was made it. And, theſe two Signatures made in us, This ſigne erit ſignum nobis, and nobis ſignum, in bonum: A ſigne it ſhalbe, and to us, and to us for our good. And this for the Signe.

II. The Song.

Will yee now, to this inglorious Signe, heare a glorious Song; to this cratch of humilitie, a hymne of celeſtiall harmonie? If the Signe miſlike you, ye cannot but like the Song, and the Queer that ſing it. The ſong I ſhall not be able to reach to, will yee but ſee the Queer? and that ſhall ſerve for this time: For, by all meanes, before I end, I would deale with ſome-what, that might ballance this Signe of His low eſtate.

This, the Evangeliſts, never faile to doe; Ever, they looke to this point carefully: If they mention ought, that may offend, to wipe it away ſtraight, and the Scandale of it, by ſome other high regard. See you a ſort of poore Shepherds? Stay, and ye ſhall ſee a troope of GODS Angels. Heare yee one ſay, layd in the cratch below? abide, and yee ſhall heare many ſing, Glorie on high, in honour of Him that lyeth in it.

Vidiſti vilia, (ſaith Saint Ambroſe) audi mirifica: Were the things meane, you have ſeene: Wonderfull ſhall they be, ye now ſhall heare, and ſee both. Vileſcit præſepe, & ecce Angelicis cantibus honoratur: Is the Cratch meane? Meane as it is, it is honoured with the muſike of Angels; it hath the whole Queer of Heaven, to ſing about it. This alſo will prove a ſigne, if it be well looked into; a counter-ſigne to the other: That, of His humilitie; this, of His glorie.

Surely, ſeeing the other three Evangeliſts omitted this ſigne, one would wonder, why S. Luke did not ſo too. In diſcretion, ſmall credit there was in it; better have concealed it, (one would thinke:) a great deale better. But, Saint Luke knew what he did; He would never have mentioned the ſigne, but that ſure he was, when he had laid Him ſo low, he was able to up with Him againe, and ſing away all the diſgrace of the ſigne with a ſtrange Carroll, and as ſtrange a Queer ſent from Heaven to ſing it.

1 The Quee: 1 Who?

To the Queer then. Who were they? Where, the first I pitch on, is the word Heavenly. For, thence they came, and thither they went againe, (15. Ver.) Quid præsepi & cælo? What hath Heaven or heavenly Personages to doe here, with the Cratch? It should seeme, some celestiall thing there is in it: as low as it seemes, it reacheth high, as high as Heaven; heavenly things, and heavenly Perfonages both. About it here comes divers from Heaven: For it, there goes Glorie up to Heaven. So that, the signe is also, signum de cælo sursum, from on high, by reason of the Queer: as well as a signe, from the earth beneath, in respect of the Cratch here.

2 In what habit.

How appeare they? These Personages were Angels. It is said expresly, (15. ver.) Yet are they here said to be Souldiers. What? shall we haye warre then? (for they are in the habit of warre:) True, of warre; but, it is warre (not, that now is, or hereafter should be, but of warre) that had been before, even to the day of this Birth; but now to cease (witnesse Pax in terris.) There had been no Peace with heaven, but plaine hostilitie, between earth and it; No goodwill toward men, but filii iræ, children of wrath all. Ever since the Cherubin first drew upon Adam, and with a shaken sword kept the entry of Paradise; Ever since, in armes, till this very day. Their habit shewes, what was before: Their song, what now should be. By vertue of CHRISTS nativitie, Peace to earth, from Heaven; Good-will to men, from GOD. So now, upon His Birth, they were to disarme: but, before they put their armor off, yet being in it, they would have a Pæan, and sing of the new world, that was now to ensue. A signe this, and a strange one, (this conjunction,) species præliantim, and voces cantantium, the habit of warre, and the song of peace. Souldiers make a campe, come to fight: These make a Queer, come to sing. They are not, in the habit of Queer-men, yet they sing: They are, in the habit of men of warre, yet sing of peace.

What number? A multitude there was of them. First, for the more authority: that, in the mouthes of many, this truth might be established: many, to witnesse it. 2 Then, for the better musike; if, a full Queer, many to sound it out. It was a matter of great weight; so, divers to testifie it: It was a matter of high praise; divers therefore, to celebrate and set it forth.

When we heare of a multitude, we feare a confusion. But (you will observe,) this multitude was multitudo Militiæ; No confused rout: No; but acies ordinata, a well ordered armie. There is order, in an armie: There is order, in a Queer: There is order among Angels: coordinate among themselves, subordinate to their head and leader. So a multitude without confusion.

And yet, there is a further matter in this same multitude. For, that there were not some few of them, but a great many; that was a signe, it was no pettie SAVIOVR, that was borne. To have Angels come, by one, and by two, as at the birth of SAMSON, or ISAAC, and others; But the grand SAVIOVR of all, by his troops of them; the LORD of hosts Himselfe, as attended by the whole Armie.

Iudg. 1.3.15. Gen.18.2.

Heb.1.6. For, at His Birth was fulfilled that, the Apostle speakes of (Heb. 1.6.) When He brings His only begotten SONNE into the world, He saith, Let all the Angels of GOD worship Him, Let the whole Host of Heaven doe Him honour: As, honour Him (here) they doe. Psal.50.23. For, they that offer Him praise, honour Him; and praise they offer Him, (the next word is laudantium.) And, even now they doe it: Even, here, is this honour done; Even to Him, in his cratch, is it done. And Heaven it selfe, for a while, left emptie, that it may be done. All which is but a signe, to shew, what a shew He could have made, if Mat.26.53. He had listed: that he might have had the Legions, he speakes of at his Death, that had them in such a multitude, to day, at his Birth. A signe, He was not weake (what ever he seemed) that had these militarie forces, if He would, to take armes for Him. That He was not to be despised, how ever He appeared, that had these consorts of Angels, to sing about His Cratch, and to praise GOD for Him.

What

What did they? Praiſed GOD. For Angels to praiſe GOD, is no new thing. From the beginning, it was their occupation, ſo to doe (Iob 38.7.) But, to praiſe Him for a Child in a Cratch, that (lo) is new; A new thing; A new ſong, and (if you will) a new ſigne, too. For, never the like ſeene before. Before (in Iob,) their praiſe was for the creating; they had that only, then, to praiſe Him for: now, for the reſtoring of all things. For the Birth of the world then; for the new birth of it now, by the birth of Him, by whom the world at firſt was made, and now (ne perderet quod cond dit,) made againe, created anew, and many a new creature in it. To Him, ſitting in the throne, ſing they their Sanctus, Eſai. 6. (For, to CHRIST was the Sanctus ſung, ſaith Saint Iohn directly in his 12. & 41.) Now, to Him, here lying in the manger; which is great odds: But indeed, to both; in imis puero, in excelſis Deo: For, He was both. And His being both, was an Ecce ſignum, if ever there were any upon earth.

4 What they did. Iob 38.7.

Eſay 6.3. *Ioh.*12.41.

And laſtly; all this Ἐξαίφνης, that inſtantly: No pauſe between, between Amen, and Halleluja. No ſooner the ſpeech ended, but ſtraight; as if the word cratch had been their reſt, immediately tooke they up the hymne, and begun it. A plaine ſigne, that one of theſe did depend on the other. This the antheme, that properly belongs to that Sermon: And backe againe, this the Sermon, that requireth this antheme: and both to the Child in the manger. The dittie meant by Him, and none but Him. For Him, this glorie: By Him, this peace; Through Him, this good-will. Glorie, peace, and good-will, from Him, all three. And marke, that the word Cratch is the laſt word, in the Sermon; and the word Glorie the firſt, in the Song; and nothing comes betweene, to part theſe two. Nothing, to part Humilitie below, from Glorie on high. Even as He drew light out of darkneſſe, ſo doth He Glorie on high, from Humilitie below, by a ſequence. Which when we heare, and heare it from the mouthes of Angels, ſure we are, all that before ſeemed to tend to His diſgrace, were but the Auſpicia of His Glorie: All that beneath appeare in Ignominia in imis, is pronounced gloria in excelſis, and for ſuch celebrated by the whole Queer of Heaven. And this for the Queer, and for this time.

2 Cor. 4 6.

But I aske; doe the Angels praiſe GOD for this Birth? Vt quid illis concio, vel cantio, What doe they preaching of Him, or praiſing GOD for Him? For them, all this is not: they put it not in the firſt, but in the ſecond perſon, Vobis. Here is now Vobis, the third time. 1 Evangelizo Vobis (ſaith the Angell firſt:) 2 Natus eſt Vobis (ſaith he ſecond:) And now Erit Vobis ſignum, third. 1 Vobis, the newes; 2 Vobis, the Birth; 3 and Vobis, the Signe; all three. And who are theſe Vobis? In the Song it is expreſly ſet downe, In hominibus, For men. What meane the Angels then, to make this adoe, with laudantium, and dicentium, and it concernes not them at all? What then; The bleſſed Angels, they rejoyce and ſing at the good of others, at the converſion but of one poore ſinner: Hoc Angelicum eſt, As, on the other ſide, the Devils manner is, to howle, and to grieve at others good; if CHRIST come to ſave men, to cry, He is come to torment them: Hoc eſt diabolicum.

Verſe 10 11.

Luc. 15.7.

Mar. 1.24.

But well; from this yet, that the Angels thus ſing (whom in their owne particular it concernes not,) I riſe to make this inference; that they, whom it concernes, are to do it, with farre greater reaſon: And that is, our ſelves, to whom ſolely and wholly this Birth, and the benefit of this Birth redounds. Shall they, for us, and not we, for us, for our ſelves? Shall we be in at the other three, 1 at the Newes, 2 at the Birth, and 3 at the Signe; and be out at this of laudantium Deum? No, I truſt. The Queer of Heaven did it, but to ſet us in; We, to beare a part? and it ſhould be a chiefe part, ſince the beſt part of it is ours. They but tooke it up; we to keepe it up; and never to let it goe downe, or dye on our hands, but from yeare to yeare, as we have occaſion, ſtill to renew it. The Angels began here; The Shepherds they follow, and praiſe GOD, for that they had heard and ſeene; the Sermon they had heard, the Signe they had ſeene. We, to come in at our turne, and to doe the like,

Verſe 20.

You

You ſay well, for that we have heard, we may; but, not for any Signe, (we.) Yes: For that too. The Sacrament we ſhall have beſides, and of the Sacrament we may well ſay, Hoc erit Signum. For a Signe it is; and by it, invenietis puerum, ye ſhall find this Childe. For finding His fleſh and bloud, ye cannot miſſe, but find Him too. And, a Signe, not much from this here. For CHRIST, in the Sacrament, is not altogether vnlike CHRIST in the cratch. To the cratch we may well liken the husk or outward Symboles of it. Outwardly, it ſeemes little worth, but it is rich of contents; as was the crib, this day, with CHRIST in it. For what are they, but infirma & egena elementa, weak and poore elements of themſelves: yet, in them find we CHRIST. Even as they did, this day, in præſepi jumentorum, panem Angelorum, in the beaſts crib the food of Angels: Which very food our ſignes both repreſent, and preſent unto us.

Let me ſay this further; It is the laſt word in the Sacrament, This is a Sacrifice of praiſe and thankſgiving: and the whole Text reſolves into laudantium DEVM, to praiſe GOD: And not to praiſe Him alone, but to praiſe Him with this Hymne of the Angels. Now being to praiſe Him with the Angels Hymne, it behoves, to be in, or as neere the State of Angels as wee can; of very congruitie, to bee in our very beſt ſtate, when they and we to make but one Queer. And when are we ſo? if at any time, at that time when we have newly taken the holy Sacrament of His bleſſed body and moſt precious bloud; when we come freſh from it. And, as if there were ſome neere alliance betweene this Song of the Angels, and theſe Signes; to ſhew that the Signes or Sacrament have a ſpeciall intereſt in this Hymne; therefore is it, that even then upon the adminiſtration of it, hath the Church ordered this very Hymne, ever to be ſung or ſaid, what ever day it fall, in the whole yeare. For then (ſure) of all other times, are we on earth moſt neere to Angelique perfection; then, meeteſt to give glorie unto GOD; then, at peace with the whole earth; then, a good will and purpoſe in us, if ever.

But, as the time falleth out, we have more inducements than one. The day it ſelfe is one moſt proper: For, it is the very day, this Hymne was firſt ſung on. And, the celebration of the Sacrament, that is another. But the Sacrament now falling on the day, a double. Either of theſe, of it ſelfe apart; but, together, much more. For, the Sacrament, that comes at other times; the day, but once a yeare, On this Day, they both meet; and never but on this: Not to ſlip it then; but then, when it is moſt proper, moſt kindly, then to do it. I would to GOD, we were as meet to do it, as the Sacrament is to doe it at, and as the Time is, to doe it on. But as we may, let us endeavour to doe it. So enuring our ſelves to record it, as oft as we may (eſpecially, when moſt meetly we may) here on earth among men; that, in His good time, wee may bee counted worthy to doe it on high, with the Angels in the Bliſſe of HEAVEN.

A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED

before the KINGS MAIESTIE, at White-hall, on Saturday, the XXV. of December, A. D. MDCXIX.
being CHRISTMAS Day.

LVK. II. Ver. XIIII.

Gloria in altiſsimis DEO, & in terra pax, hominibus bonæ voluntatis (vel, in homines bona voluntas.*) Glorie be to GOD *in the high Heavens, and peace upon earth, and towards men good will.

*Vel in hominibus.

* or, in men.

HE Antheme of the Quere of Heaven for this day. For, having heard the Angells Sermon at twice; 1 Of the Nativity, 2 Of the Invention of CHRIST: and ſeene the Quere of Angells ſet, with their nature and condition: there remaines nothing but the Antheme, to make up a full ſervice for the Day.

This is it. Saint Luke, beſides that he is an Evangeliſt, hath the honour further, that he is the Pſalmiſt of the New Teſtament: foure Hymnes more hath hee added to thoſe of the Old. Of which foure, this is ſo much the more excellent than the reſt, in that it is not of any mans ſetting, though never ſo skilfull: the Dittie and it are both Angelicall; from the Angells both. That, we praiſe GOD with the tongue of Angells, whenſoever we praiſe Him with this, with Gloria in excelſis.

The Summe of it is: that though, all dayes of the yeare, and for all benefits; yet, this day, and for this (now) above all, GOD is highly to be glorified: More highly than in others; Nay, moſt highly then; for, it is in altiſsimis, the higheſt of all. The Summe.

That Heaven and Earth, and men are to joine in one conſort: Heaven and Earth firſt; Heaven on high, Earth beneath to take up one hymne: both in honour of His birth, both are better by it; Heaven hath glorie, Earth peace, by meanes of it. Heaven hath glorie; lætentur cœli: Earth, peace; exultet terra, at thy Nativity, O LORD. Warranted by this Song, at thy Nativity, O LORD, let the Heavens rejoice for the glorie, let the Earth be glad for the peace, that come to them by it. Pſal. 96. 11.

And men, hominibus, though they reſt, and come in laſt after both, yet they to doe it as much; Nay, much more than both, for Gods good will toward them, which brought all all this to paſſe in Heaven and Earth both: reſtoring men to GODS favour and grace, and all by meanes of this Child, their Reconciler to GOD that hath beene; their Pacifier on earth, that is, their Glorifier in Heaven that ſhall be. They therefore, if any; nay, more than any: and now, if ever; nay, more than ever, to beare their part in this glorious hymne at the cratch ſide.

Ita, canunt in Nativitate, quæ per Nativitatem: Thus ſing they at His Nativitie, of thoſe things, that came by His Nativitie. Came to Heaven, to Earth, to Men: Glorie, to Heaven; Peace, to Earth; Grace and favour to men.

The Diviſion. To take a Song right, it behoveth to know the parts of it. And they are eaſily knowne; They divide themſelves into the number bleſſed above all numbers, becauſe it is the number of the Bleſſed Trinitie; and the myſterie of the TRINITIE doe the Fathers finde in the parts of it: 1 In GOD on high, the Father: 2 In peace, Ipſe eſt pax noſtra, the SONNE: 3 And in Good-will, the HOLY GHOST, the Eſſentiall Love and Love-knot of the God-head; and, this day, of the Man-hood and it.

Eph. 2. 14.

I. Being Ode natalitia, if we conſider it as a Nativitie, they that calculate or caſt Nativities, in their calculations ſtand much upon Triplicities, and Trigons, and Trine aſpects.

II. III. And here they be all: A triplicitie of things: 1 Glorie, 2 Peace, 3 and Good-will. A Trigon of Parties: 1 GOD, 2 Earth, and 3 Men. And a trine aſpect, referendo ſingula ſingulis; 1 To GOD, glorie; 2 to Earth, peace; 3 to Men, favour, grace, or goodwill.

But if (as it is moſt proper) we conſider the parts, as in a Song, The three will well agree with the Scale in Muſike: 1 In excelſis, on high, Hypate: 2 On earth, Nete: 3 And men, howſoever they come in laſt, they make Meſe, the Meane: Moſt fitly; for they (as in the midſt of both the other) partake of both: 1 Their ſoule, from on high; 2 Their body, from the earth. Not the heathen, but did confeſſe, the ſoule divinæ particulam auræ. And, for the body, there needs no proofe, that earth it is: Earth to earth we heare, we ſee before our eyes every day.

1 2 3 Of theſe three parts then, aſunder. And after, (as the nature of a Song requireth) of their 1 Conjunction, 2 Order, and 3 Diviſion. 1 Conjunction: Glorie on high, and in earth Peace. 2 Then, the order, or Sequence: But, firſt glorie; then Peace. 3 And laſt, the diviſion, ſorting them ſuum cuique, each to his owne: 1 To GOD, glorie; 2 Peace, to the earth; 3 εὐδοκία to men. 4 Laſt, of the ſinging of the Hymne, 1 When, the time: 2 and by Whom.

I. The ſeverall acception of the Text.

There are in this Hymne (as the Greekes read, and we with them) three Reſts. The ground of which three, are three Parties. 1 In excelſis Deo, GOD on high; 2 In terrâ, earth; 3 and Hominibus, men. To theſe three, other three; 1 Glorie, 2 Peace, 3 Good-will, as it were three ſtreames having their head or ſpring in CHRISTS cratch, and ſpreading themſelves thence, three ſundry wayes, having their influence into the three former; One of theſe into ſome one of them. Glorie upward, in excelſis: Peace, downward to the earth: Good-will, to men, in the middeſt between both, compound of both.

By the Greeks.

You will marke: The Child (here) is GOD and Man. GOD, from on high; Man, from the earth. To heaven, whence He is GOD, thither goeth Glorie: To earth, whence man, thither Peace. Then, as GOD and Man is one CHRIST; and as the reaſonable ſoule and fleſh is one man: So, CHRIST conſiſting of theſe two brings εὐδοκίαν the fulneſſe of GODS favour, the true and reall cauſe of both; yeelding them peace, while here one earth, and aſſuring them of glorie, when there on high; as thither on high, we truſt to be delivered, after our time here ſpent in procuring Heaven glorie, and earth peace. Thus, three Reſts.

2 By the Latines.

But, let me not keepe from you, that the Latine hath but two Reſts, and of the Greeke ſome likewiſe: To two they reduce all, and well. The Places are but two; 1 On high, 2 and in earth: The Perſons but two: 1 GOD, 2 and Men: So, the Parts to be but two; 1 Glorie on high, to GOD; 2 Peace, on earth, to Men. But then what

ſhall become of Good-will? Good-will is a good word; would not be loſt or left out.

No more it ſhall. And indeed, the diverſe reading of that one word makes the parts to be either two, or three. The Greekes read it in the Nominative, εὐδοκία, which referres to men: then there muſt needs be three; there are two beſides. The Latines ſeeme to have read it in the Genitive, εὐδοκίας; (but a Σ, but one letter more:) And ſo they make it of the nature of a limitation, Peace on earth to men: What, to men promiſcuè, good and bad, elect and reprobate? No: but to ſuch as pertaine to His εὐδοκία, GODS Beneplacitum, His good-will and purpoſe: to the children of it.

Εὐδοκία, or εὐδοκίας, Nominative or Genitive, let it not trouble you: To men, a good will; or, To men of good-will; no greater matter, whether; ſo long as εὐδοκία, referres to GOD, and to His good pleaſure; Not, to Men, or any will of theirs. And that ſo it is to be referred, I will uſe no other witneſſe but Cardinall Tolet himſelfe; who, in his Readings at Rome, and in the Popes owne Chappel, and upon this very place confeſſeth aſmuch, that ſo is the native ſignification of the word; and ſo, and no otherwiſe to be taken here, but in that ſenſe.

And in that ſenſe being taken, it goes well. Glory from us, to Him: Peace, from Him, to us: From men on earth, to God on high, Glory; From God on high, to men on earth, Peace. Men, I ſay, toward whom He is now appeaſed, and with whom (now) He is well pleaſed; and both, for this Childs ſake here in the cratch, ἐν ᾧ εὐδόκησα in whom He is ſo abſolutely well pleaſed, as, of the fulneſſe of His favour we all receive. GOD ſpake it once, and twice: Mat. 3. 17. 17. 5. 1 Once at His Baptiſme; 2 and againe in the Holy mount.

And Hoc erit ſignum, This may be a ſure ſigne, that He is well pleaſed with our Nature, that Hee hath in this Child taken it, and united it to His owne; which, if He had not been highly well pleaſed, He would never have done. What greater good will can there be than this? It paſſeth the greateſt, (even that of Marriage,) union of Nature, unitie of Perſon.

Then riſeth there another doubt, what Verbe to put to here? For, never a Verbe there is at all. Whether ſome Indicative, Glorie is or ſhall be: and then, it is an Hymne of Gratulation, and agreeth well with laudantium, a praiſe to GOD, that theſe (now) are. Now, hath GOD glorie: Now, earth peace: Men are now received to favour and grace. Thus: Or whether ſit or eſto, in the Optative: and then, it is Votum benè ominatum, a Vow or wiſh, that Glorie may be to GOD; and ſo to the reſt.

I ſay againe here (as before I ſaid: it skill'd not then, whether Nominative or Genitive;) it skills not now, whether Indicative or Optative. Tehilla (a Praiſe, it is) and Tephilla (a Wiſh it may be) doe commence. Either is well; But, both are beſt: For, both are moſt true.

I

By way of Gratulation: Glorie now is, or ſhall be to GOD, for this Birth. Before it was not: at leaſt, not ſo, as after. Before it was Gloria in excelſis, but DEO was left out. All Nations (in a manner) worſhipping the hoſt of Heaven, the ſuperior bodies; deifying the creature, paſſing by the CREATOR quite: Excelſa, they did; but DEVM in excelſis they did not. But, by this Birth now, downe ſhould all Idolatrie goe; as, downe it went, whereſoever Chriſtian Religion tooke place. From the creature, there, all to the CREATOR. To none on high, but GOD on high. The point of Glorie much mended; GOD more Glorie, than before.

By way of Gratulation. Glory is to God.

And the Earth more at peace, if you take peace in things ſpirituall, matte rs concerning the ſoule. One onely I will mention. There was (as out of Vrrro, S. Auguſtine reckons them) no leſſe than two hundred ſixty and odde ſeverall Opinions, and that of the wiſeſt then on the earth, touching mans Soveraigne good, or chiefe End. The verie higheſt point, and that did moſt concerne them; and, leaſt peace, moſt variance in it. This miſt alſo was ſcattered, and that point well cleered, by Him that was the Way and the Truth: That this εὐδοκία here is it; the favour of GOD it is, and the aſſurance of it, and nothing but it makes a man truely happy, when all is done. Ioh. 14. 6.

As for the point of GOD's goodwill, and favour, that was never in kind, till this

And Good will toward men.

Day. Many favours, much good will, before; Never ſo, as when GOD and Man, the God-head and Man-hood meet both in one. GOD never ſo pleaſed, as when He was pleaſed to aſſume it, into one perſon with Himſelfe, uniting both with the ſtreighteſt union that can be. Never that, till this day, when, for εὐδοκία ἐν ἀνθρώποις good will toward men, He forſooke gloriam in excelſis, to come into the cratch for them. So that, for GOD's favour, the gratulation is moſt juſt; more than both the reſt.

Biſhop Bradwardine did joyne a good iſſue: Let that be the Religion, let that prevaile, as beſt and moſt true of all other; that is Deo honorabilior, brings more honour to GOD; Paci amicabilior, beſt friend to the earths peace; and Homini favorabilior, moſt favourable to man, as, ſhewing GOD better affected to him, and making men better affected to GOD, better one to another. That Religion is Chriſtian Religion: None ſings this Hymne in time, in true note, but it; all other are out. So that, wee have a compendium of true Religion, and three notes of it, out of the three notes of the Song in this Antheme. And this, if it be the Indicative; or by way of Gratulation.

II. By way of wiſh

But I confeſſe, it is more uſuall, per modum voti, by way of wiſh; by ſit, than by eſt. (Sit doth better become the Church militant: Eſt is more fit for the Church triumphant.) Glorie be to GOD, Peace be to the earth, &c. Exoptando that theſe may be ſo; and, ſo being, continue ſtill, and be dayly more and more: And ſo taking it, to the triplicitie againe.

Glorie be to God on high.

Firſt, glorie we wiſh to GOD. On high ſtands in the midſt, you may either caſt it to the firſt word Glorie, Glorie on high, and then the point, (that is, high glorie:) Or, (with the point, after glorie,) and caſt [on high] to GOD. A third varietie, (but, eaſily reconciled) if we take in both: Glorie on high, to GOD on high. One [on high] may ſerve for the reaſon, why we wiſh glorie to GOD: for GOD being Altiſſimus, the moſt High (as Melchiſedek firſt ſtiled him;) and glorie being the altitude, or higheſt pitch, we can flie or performe; by good reaſon, we wiſh Him that is Higheſt, the higheſt thing we have.

Gen. 14. 18.

But, not every glorie do we wiſh, but wiſh it Him at the higheſt. All glorie is high:

1 Cor. 15. 41.

yet is there one glorie higher than another. If any be ſo, that, they wiſh to GOD, the very height of it, even glory in altiſſimis, as high as it can goe.

Now, the more He is glorified, the higher His glorie: Higher, if, by Heaven and Earth, on high and below, by Men and Angels; than by either alone.

Pſal. 148.

This then they wiſh, when they ſay, Glorie be in the higheſt; that high and low, Heaven and Earth, Men and Angels would doe their parts, to make His praiſe glorious, glorious at the higheſt. On earth, ſound it out farre and wide, all the world over, to the ends of the earth; and lift up our voices, and help them with inſtruments of all kinds, and make them to be heard up to the very Heavens, that ſo it may be in altiſſimis indeed. Yea, that all creatures, in both, raviſhed with the conſideration of the great favour and good will of GOD, in this daies Birth teſtified, would take occaſion to fill their mouthes with the praiſe of His goodneſſe, in reſolving; His wiſdome in contriving; His mercie in promiſing; His truth in performing the worke of this Day, the bleſſed birth of his Sonne.

For the worke of the Day, to make the day of the worke a glorious day: cauſing it to be attended with a number of daies, according to the number of the moneths of the yeare; as no Feaſt elſe. Glorious in all places, as well at home with Carolls, as in the Church with Anthemes. Glorious in all Ages; even this day, this yeare, as on the very day, on which He was borne. Glorious in habit, in fare: But ſpecially, (as we ſee the Angels here doe) with the ſervice of GOD, the moſt ſolemne ſervice, the higheſt, the moſt melodious Hymnes, we have: and namely, with this here of the Queere of Heaven. In a word: all the waies we can; all the waies, GOD can have any glory from us, to let Him have it; and have it even at the height, in altiſſimis.

And good reaſon, we ſhould ſo wiſh: CHRIST loſt His glorie, by being thus in the cratch. We tooke ſome from Him: to wiſh Him ſome for it againe. That was ignominia in infimis: to wiſh Him gloria in altiſſimis, in liew of it.

Againe,

Againe, we get glorie by It; our Nature, ſo. For the glorie, we get by GOD here below, to returne ſome glorie to GOD there on high. This is votum gloriæ; this wiſh we, when we wiſh gloria in altiſſimis.

The next is votum pacis; they wiſh, Peace may be upon earth. 1 Even Auguſtus his peace, firſt, (that is the firſt, commeth to our minds, when we here that word;) the ſhutting of IANVS: for, that alſo was a bleſſed fruit of this Birth. Eſay fore-told it; There ſhould then be a bridge from Aſhur to Egypt, and from Canaan to them both; that is, from every nation to other, to traffique, and to trade together. 2 Peace in Earth. Eſa.19.23.

That: but not only that, but the taking downe alſo of the partition wall, which formerly MOSES had ſet up, between the Iew and the Gentile; the making of them both one in the body of His fleſh: Saint Pauls peace. Eph.2.14.

And yet further. For, both theſe are peace upon earth, of earth with earth: Auguſtus can, the world can give that peace, though many times they will not. But he ſpeakes in a Place of the peace which the world cannot give, that is, peace with heaven. That there ſhould not be ESAIS bridge only, but IACOBS ladder ſet up from Bethel to heaven; a peace-able entercourſe with that place, by the Angels deſcending and aſcending between us and them. Gen.28.10.

And further yet, peace at home with our ſelves, and with our owne conſciences. Turne againe to thy reſt ô my Soule; for, in finding Him, we ſhall find reſt to our Soules. Pſal.116.7.

And laſt, (to anſwer Gloria in altiſſimis) Pax in noviſſimis, peace at the parting, which is worth all; Simeons peace, a good Nunc dimittis in pace, a departing hence in peace. And all, by meanes of viderunt oculi, the ſight of the ſalvation of this day. All theſe are in voto pacis. Ver.29.

The third is, there may be, in GOD, a good-will toward men. And, good-will is a kind of Peace, but, ſomewhat more, with an extent or prorogation; a kind of peace peculiar to men, which the other parts of the earth are not capable of. So, a further matter to men, than bare peace: Even δοκεῖν ἀ, to thinke well, to beare Good-will, to be well pleaſed with men. And, what greater wiſh can there be than In quo complacitum eſt: CHRIST hath no more, than ἐν ᾧ εὐδόκησα. It is His high glorie, that for His (and this His births ſake, which we now celebrate) that which is verified of His Perſon, is verified of both His Natures: of Him, not only as SONNE of GOD, but even as SONNE of man too. And, what is verified of Him, as SONNE of man, may be verified alſo of the ſonnes of men, of all Mankind. This wiſh is at the higheſt, and more cannot be wiſhed, than that this favour, to day begunne, may ſtill and ever continue to us all. So have you now the three parts of the Angels wiſh, Summa votorum, Glorie be to GOD, &c. 3 Good will toward men. Mat.3.17.

What is now to be done? Three things more: To ſee the 1 Connexion copulative, 2 the Sequence, 3 and the Diviſion. 1 The Connexion copulative, (a bleſſed couple) Glorie and Peace. 2 The Sequence: but, firſt glorie, and then Peace. 3 The Diviſion, which to which: 1 One to GOD; 2 The other, to earth; 3 The third, to man. 1 The Connexion copulative: Glory & Peace

Glorie and Peace are coupled together with an [and:] And in earth peace: That, Glorie would not be ſung alone, but Peace together with it. We will not, we may not skip the Copulative: that, couples together high and low, heaven and earth, and in them GOD and Man: But, (that which I reſpect ſpecially,) Glorie and Peace muſt be ſung together. If we ſing Glorie without Peace, we ſing but to halves. No Glorie on high will be admitted, without Peace upon earth. No gift on His altar (which is a ſpeciall part of His glorie,) but, lay downe your gift, and there leave it, and firſt goe your way and make peace on earth, and that done come againe, and you ſhall then be accepted, to give glorie to Heaven; and not before. And ô, that we would goe and doe the like, have like regard of His glorie, that He hath of our peace. But, this knot of Gloria et Pax, is againſt thoſe, that are ſtill (ever) wrangling with one thing or other; and all for the Mat.5.24.

Glorie of GOD (forsooth,) as if these two could not joyne; GOD could not have His glorie, if the Church were at peace: as if, (no remedie) the Angels Et must out.

2 The Sequence: Glorie before Peace.

Glorie, and Peace: but, Glorie first, and then Peace, There is much in the order. Glorie to be first, else you change the Cleff; the cleff is in Glorie; that, the key of the Song. That is to be first, and before all: Peace, to give place to her; Glorie is the elder Sister: And no Pax in terris, unlesse it be first considered, how it will stand with gloria in excelsis. To set Peace before Glorie, is to set earth above heaven. Keepe the order then; each in her place. So goeth the Song: The Child borne is GOD and Man; GOD, from on high; Man, from the earth; Cœlestem primo, dein & terrestrem celebrant: They keepe the right order in singing of Him; wee to doe the like: Heavens part ever to be first.

But then, next after His glorie, nothing more deare, more precious; nay nothing so deare, so precious to us then, as peace. Set Glorie safe, and then by all meanes Inquire Psal.34.15. pacem (saith the Psalmist,) Seeke peace; (If she hide her selfe, Seeke her out;) Et persequere eam, and pursue her; (if she flie away, follow her hard.) Peace is not sought; No man followes her, to make any pursuit; they know not the value of Peace, that lose her so easily, that follow her so faintly. Nay, instead of pursuit, persecute her, and drive her away, and make the chasing her away, the seeking of GOD's glorie. The second thing in the world is Peace: Onely one, One onely before it, the Glorie of GOD.

3 The Division of the song.

But, the Aire of the song is in the division, wherein each is sorted to his owne: GOD, to His; The earth, to hers; Men, to theirs. Iustices division (which makes peace in Heaven and Earth) skored here out so plainly, as it is easily seene, which pertaines to which. And we by all meanes so to distribute and deale them; and by all means to preserve and hold up this division. Else, we change the note, which is asmuch as the whole Harmonie is worth.

1 Glorie to God.

Now, in this partition, Glorie goes whither? Vp on high. To whom there? To GOD, and to none but GOD. The Place and the Person are both set forth. On high, there is the Place: To God, there is the Person. Earth is not the place of Glorie: It is in excelsis, on high: Earth is not on high. Here below it is, as it were the Celler or Vault of the world: Where though there be Excelsa and Excelsi, high places and high persons both, yet the Eccles.5.7. word is ἐν ὑψίστοις in altissimis; and Altissimi they be not; there be higher than they.

And, as Earth is not the place; So man is not the person: For, man is upon earth, and is earth. No glorie to man then; Especially, none this day, of all daies. Glorie to him, for what? For entertaining CHRIST, and lodging Him in a stable? Confusion rather; somewhat to be ashamed of, nothing to glorie of. Had men deserved it, some to them: Now, let GOD above have the glorie of this day.

Yet, conceive it aright: we wish it, as our duty; not as any longing of His. It were a silly conceit to imagine of GOD, as if he were avidior gloriæ, did hunger or thirst for our glorie. What is He the better for it? Onely, nothing we have but that; and so, either that or nothing: for, nothing but that can He receive from us. But, we have nothing to render Him for all His goodnesse, for His εὐδοκία, but δόξα. Give it Him then; but, 1 Tim.1.17. Iud. 25. Psal.115.1. give it entirely; give it none but Him. Soli Deo (saith Saint Paul:) Soli, (saith Saint Iude:) Soli, let us all say. Not unto us ô LORD, not unto us: (It is DAVID, as if he were afraid to touch any part of it:) No: But, as PAVL and BARNABAS, rend Act. 14.14. our clothes, if any Divine honour be forced upon us.

Yet, glorie, we may, (I grant;) but not this, here: gloria in altissimis, if we sing to any but Him, we sing a false note. Men doe so, now and then; but the Angels are never out: And thus sing they, and set out Glorie for GOD's part.

2 On earth, peace.

Let, earth be content with Peace: Peace is her portion; and a blessed portion, if she may well hold it: a faire portion, a rich wish. For, I would faine know, what could be said more, to the praise of this portion, than is here in this song? First, that in generall it reacheth to the whole earth: (Not, to men alone, though they have their share too, too, in whatſoever good commeth to the earth, but) it reacheth to all on earth. Omni animantium or vegetantium generi, to all the beaſts, all the greene things on the earth; All are the better for it.

Secondly, what more for the credit of peace, than that it is Votum militare, it comes from the mouthes of Souldiers that were there in their militare habit. Even they ſing of peace, and praiſe it, and wiſh it, where they wiſh any good; and know not what better thing to wiſh to the earth, than it. It is the earths happineſſe, Peace; it flouriſheth by it. Before, was the earth as the garden of Paradiſe, (ſaith the Prophet) behind, it was a waſt and barren wilderneſſe, all ſpoiled and burnt up. Ioel 2.3.

Thirdly, that it is Votum Angelicum, An Angels wiſh, Peace. They, being heavenly Spirits, wiſh not any thing at any time, but heavenly: So that, a heavenly thing is Peace. And ſo it is, as Nazianzene here well obſerved, Pugnas & diſſidia neſcire Deum & Angelos; No broiles no brabbles in heaven: nothing but peace, there. And, a kind of heaven there is upon earth, when there is peace upon earth: and juſtly are they bleſſed, and rightly are they called the children of GOD, the moſt bleſſed that are, or ſhall be at any time, that are the procurers of it. This (lo) is the Angels diviſion, they ſing. 3

But here we are like to have no little adoe to maintaine this: As we ſaid before, Huic ſigno à multis contradicitur; as the Signe, ſo the ſong is gainesaid of many. The divell doth all he can, to marre the Angels muſike, to bring in his, his owne blacke Sanctus, to procure contempt to GODS glorie on high, to bring GODS glorie as low as he can, to make garboiles upon earth, to worke men all evill will, miſchiefe, and malice that he can. Verſe 34.

And firſt, to make a confuſion in this diviſion, perſwades earth not to ſtand content with the Angels partition, but earth (forſooth) muſt have glorie, muſt be dealing with heavens part. It is well ſaid, to GOD on high: There bee certaine Gods, here below, aſpire to glorie. And, glorie we would allow, but no glorie will ſerve, unleſſe gloria in altiſſimis be ſung to it. Sicut Dii cannot be gotten out of us. We cannot yet get Dominus Deus noſtra Papa out of the Gloſſe, no, not now, after it is reformed. And King Herod would be content to be made more than a man, and to heare ---Nec vox hominem ſonat. And we beneath are too ready to ſing it, otherwhile; to defie thoſe, that are on high, and give that belongs to GOD on high, to Gods below. Now, that earth is thus willing to entitle her ſelfe to heavens part, this brings all out of tune. Gen.3.5. Acts 12.22.

But, in tune, or out of tune, to die for it, have it we will. What the Apoſtles rent their clothes to put from them, we would rend our skinnes to pluck to us. So greedy are we, to be held for Gods upon earth. Nay, earth is content to thruſt from her owne part, (that is, peace) to invade GODS part (that is, glorie;) Et dum gloriam uſurpant, pacem turbant, to uſurpe glorie, they loſe peace: we can diſpenſe with that. Shift GODS glorie how it can, rather than our owne ſhould ſuffer the leaſt diſgrace, away with peace, moveatur terra, let all the world be on a welter. Acts 14.14.

What comes of this? Pacem contemnentes & gloriam appetentes, & gloriam perdunt & pacem: Even this peace (their owne part) they ſet light by Glorie (GODS part) they gape after, and loſe glorie and peace (both) by the meanes; and when they have brought all to confuſion, ſet downe by their loſſes. For firſt, by ſeeking glorie, glorie is loſt. The heathen man well obſerved; Glorie is one of thoſe things, that to ſeeke them, is the very next way to loſe; and to neglect them, the way to gaine them: Quærendo amittitur, No readier way to miſſe it, than eagerly to ſeeke it. And againe, by ſeeking glorie, Peace is loſt cleere. Yeelding glorie to GOD doth bring with it pacem in terris: diverting it from Him doth take pacem de terris. In very deed, Peace upon earth, as it ſtands after it, ſo it hath a dependance upon GODS glorie; comes (as it were) in exchange for it. Da gloriam & accipe pacem (ſaith GOD:) Let men on earth ſend glorie up to GOD on high, and GOD on high will ſend down peace to men on earth, and will not faile: Heavens peace, for earths glorie. Whereby we ſee, if we miſſe peace on earth at any time, what it is long of. It is that, which makes the Angels here keepe on their armour ſtill: upon glorie detained from GOD or transferred whither it ſhould not, they are vp in ames ſtreight, have power to take peace from the earth, till the point of glorie be ſet right againe. The ſetting right of which point is the way to recover it. Let heaven, let GOD be well ſerved with their part, peace will not long be away. It is coupled to it (you ſee,) it followeth cloſe, Et pax in terris. So much for that diviſion.

God will toward men. 1 To men a good will. For, beſides Earths peace, wherein they entercommon, Men have a part by themſelves, which is their prerogative. And firſt, I would have you to note, that here it is entered firſt into the Muſique of heaven. In the Angels Hymne, in Eſay, in the Old Teſtament, Men are out there: No mention at all, not a word of them, in that. Heaven is in, and Earth; but, no Men, there. In the Angels Hymne, here, in the New Teſtament, here, Men are in: that, all may know, that for this Childs ſake now made man, Men are now come into the Angels ſong; to be a part, and a principall part there, who before were left out.

2 A principall part (I ſay:) for, marke againe: They have never an Et, they ſtand by themſelves. For, both thoſe former reſolve into this of Men; They, the Epitome of heaven and earth; The parties, from whom this glorie, to whom this peace is principally intended to come. Glorie to GOD; Glorie and peace: Why both? For, GOD hath received men to grace: Men are now in favour againe.

But heaven and earth and men and all reſolve into the free grace and goodwill of GOD. How ſhall they performe either peace or glorie, but if there be toward them firſt; and ſecondly, but if there be in them this third of good will. Thence iſſues GODS glorie; thence the Earths peace. The fountaine of both, that: Nay, of CHRIST and all. For Him, this glorie; for CHRIST: Through Him, this peace; through CHRIST: But, CHRIST Himſelfe whence? Whence, but from the good will of GOD toward men. From whence alſo, the good will in men, to GOD, and one to another, if any be in them. That if we goe higher yet, even of this Birth GODS good will was the cauſe; and, becauſe His will was, men ſhould be reſtored, therefore His will was, CHRIST ſhould be incarnate & borne. Can we goe any higher? are we not in altiſſimis? Verily as we ſaid, the humilitie of the Signe was ſo deepe, we could not ſound it; ſo may wee now, that the ſublimitie of this point is ſo high, we cannot reach it. There is a part of Divinitie that dazles: if we looke to long on it, we may well loſe our ſight.

Toward men, and in men. Then to ἐν ἀνθρώποις, laſt. It may be turned two waies, it will beare both: (and, for my part I wiſh no word ever narrowed by a tranſlation, but aſmuch as might be, left in the latitude of the Originall tongue.) 1 Ἐν ἀνθρώποις will beare εἰς ἀνθρώπους, in homines, to, or toward men. So we turne it, and we turne it well. 2 But ἐν ἀνθρώποις is alſo in hominibus, in, or among men; ἐν ἀνθρώποις, as well as ἐν υἱοῖς, and no leſſe properly. And, no hurt, if wee turne it ſo, in hominibus; prouided, in or erga homines goe firſt, be ſung before it. In hominibus ſo ever, as comming from in homines. For then, Donum magnum bonæ voluntatis Dei, bona voluntas in hominibus; it is Auguſtine: Of the good will of GOD towards men, a ſpeciall gift it is: this good will in men, to GOD and man both. The beſt way is, where there are two, to take in both: So we ſhall be ſure, to leave out neither.

1 But Toward men, firſt. Yet, in their ſequence. To, or toward men then firſt: But, to, or toward them for this Childs ſake. In whom He is ſo well pleaſed, as, for His ſake, He is pleaſed, firſt to receive men to pardon, though grievous ſinners, and ſo vtterly vnworthy of it.

Secondly, He is pleaſed to reward their workes alſo, otherwiſe (but for this good will in GOD, in accepting them) that might juſtly be excepted to, for their many imperfections: to take them well in worth, though they want worth; and to vouchſafe them a reward, and that a high reward; for, it is your heavenly Fathers good pleaſure to give you a Kingdome.

Chap. 12.32.

Thirdly, beyond both theſe, He is further pleaſed, in ſome caſe to accept even of this εὐδοκία, at our hands; and though skill and power both faile, and be wanting; yet a willing minde if there be, if there be but that, a man is accepted, according to that, hee hath, not according to that, he hath not. MARIE MAGDALEN'S quod potuit fecit; the poore widowe's quod habuit dedit (and GOD wot, it was but two mites) yet well taken though:

1.Cor. 8.12. Mar.14.8. Mar. 12.44.

though: One εὐδοκία by another. That He placeth not acceptance, neither in ἐυγνωσία deepe capacity of wit; nor in δυναστεία, great habilitie of power; but in εὐδοκία, readineſſe of good will, an honeſt true meaning, an vnfeigned hearty deſire: V ſi ſit actionis infirmitas, at ſi ſit voluntatis integritas, though there be weakneſſe in the act, yet if there be ſoundneſſe in the will, out of His good will toward men, He will accept this good will in men. [a] NEHEMIA'S deſire to feare Him; [b] EZEKIA'S ſetting his heart to ſeek; The [c] Servants but preparing to doe His Maſters will: And even in DAVIDS ſecundùm cor meum, his honeſt true heart was faireſt flower in his garland.

[a] Neh. 1. 11. [b] 2 Reg. 20. 3. [c] Luk. 11. 42. 47. 1 Sam. 13. 14.

And this, if it were well weighed & digeſted aright; If CHRIST, if al that comes by CHRIST (and that is all in all) be by His free grace and favour; If men were but rightly conceited in this point, it would ſoone bring them out of conceit with their owne I wote not what; It would make them truely humble: And it is the humble man that gives GOD the true glorie, that ſings this ſong right, when all is done. The glorie that comes to GOD, is δόξα ἐν ὑψίστοις, the firſt word, for the laſt. With glorie it begins, with good will it ends; and with good will it beginnes, and with glorie ends: As the firſt ſhall be laſt, and the laſt firſt. Mat. 19. 30.

But, when we have fixed bona voluntas in homines, what hurt will it doe, to wiſh bona voluntas in hominibus? Sure, none. Bona voluntas in homines is to worke this bonam voluntatem in hominibus, and that by very courſe of kind. For Suum Simile, grace to beget his owne like, is moſt naturall: Bene placitum Dei, to beget Bene placitum Deo; Who, out of His good pleaſure worketh in us both to will and to do; and whoſe only worke it is, Vt reſpondeat bonæ voluntati Dei, bona voluntas hominis. 2 Then, In men. Phil. 2. 13.

What harme then, if the Angell ſhould wiſh it or commend it to men, in whom if it be, it comes from that of GOD meerely, and from no other. Verily, what is praiſe-worthy in GOD, cannot but be ſo in men too. Summa Religionis eſt, aſſimilari Ei quem colis, To become like to Him, we worſhip, is the pitch of all Religion.

Now, an εὐδοκία at the ſecond hand there is in men. The word it ſelfe is aſcribed to them of Achaia, towards the poore Saints at Hieruſalem (Rom. 15.) To Saint Paul towards the Iewes (Rom. 10.) To the Philippians towards Saint Paul (Phil. 1.) and in other places. Rom. 15. 26. 10. 1. Phil 1. 15.

To wiſh then in men this εὐδοκία toward GOD; which, where it is, makes men to δοκεῖν εὖ, have a good conceit or opinion of GOD; which will bring forth a good affection to GOD. It is well obſerved, it is not ἀγαθὴ βούλησις (which is properly Greeke for good will) but εὐδοκία, which is rather a good thinking, if we go to the very nature of the word: But, it will come all to one. Onely, the affection that beginnes in the opinion, is noted for good; and the opinion, that is bred in the affection, not ſo. 1 In men towards GOD.

From that good conceit of GOD, accepting well whatſoever it pleaſeth Him to ſend: If good, receiving it thankfuly; if otherwiſe, taking it patiently; ever praiſing GOD for all. But, no waies entertaining, of Him, that opinion, for which they cannot but love him the worſe, if, as of a Tyrant ſentencing men to death, onely for His pleaſure, before they have offended Him at all. That would prove no εὐδοκία, as it may be handled. And the Apoſtle tels us, the εὐδοκία, that is in GOD, is εὐδοκία ἀγαθωσύνης; it is not, but regulate by His goodneſſe (2. Theſſ. 1,) for which ever may there be glorie aſcribed to Him. 2 Theſſ. 1. 11.

Then, to wiſh it in men towards men: An εὐδοκία, alſo, which, where it is, breeds an inclination to δοκεῖν εὖ, to take all in the better part; and if poſſibly we can, and as much as in us lieth, to have peace with all men. Which if it were on earth, would make heaven on earth. Peace is not ſaid (as glorie) to be ἐν, but ἐπὶ; and ἐπὶ is over: For, (indeed) it doth but hover aloft over the earth, would light, but cannot otherwhile. The Raven can, but the Dove cannot, for want of this Bona voluntas in hominibus, or theſe homines bonæ voluntatis. It finds them not well willing to peace, while every one ſtands more for his owne reputation, or other ends, then either for Churches or Countries peace. Baniſh the oppoſites of εὐδοκία, Envy (Rom. 10,) Malice (Phil. 1.) and peace wil be no ſtranger upon earth. It would then be ἐν γῇ where it is ἐπὶ γῆς; the ſame Præpoſition in both. All depends upon the cadence εὐδοκία: performe that well, and it will be Muſike for an Angell. 2 In men towards men, Rom. 12. 18. Rom. 10. 1. Phil. 1. 15.

And, now ye have heard all the parts, what ſhall we do with this ſong? Song it. But we have no Angels to ſing it, and it will be Muſike for an Angell. Angels it would be, as at firſt it was: But, when it is not, it will pleaſe them well, that men ſing it, whom it moſt concernes. But, if by men, of very congruitie, an Angels ſong would be, by men, when in ſome degree they drew ſomething neere to the Angels eſtate. At leaſt, when neerer than at other times.

And when is that, that men on earth come ſo? at what time? Sure, if ever men doe riſe above themſelves, and approach in any ſort neere to thoſe bleſſed Spirits; if ever they bee in ſtate with Angels and Arch-angels to lawd and magnifie His glorious name; if in all their lives they be in peace and charity, the bond of perfection, the bona voluntas we ſpeake of; if at any time it be in men, and they homines bonæ voluntatis; upon the taking of the Sacrament it is: At that time, then, or never, they lift up their hearts in true devotion. So, then in beſt caſe, that in all our lives, to ſing it: if CHRIST dwell in our hearts by faith; if we be temples of the HOLY GHOST.

And that we might be in that caſe, and ſo ſing it, the Church is never unprovided, this day, of this meanes of elevating our minds: And it is operæ pretium worth the while, if it were but for that; and there may be joy among the Angels in heaven, to heare their Hymne kept ſtill alive. Though, there is another congruitie for the Sacrament; That 1 Tim. 3 16. the great Myſterie of Godlineſſe, which is GOD manifeſted in the fleſh, might not be celebrated without the Myſterie of His fleſh: that, the day, He came among us to be partaker of fleſh and bloud, we alſo might be partakers of the fleſh and bloud which He tooke from us, to give them us againe.

But otherwiſe, this Day, in this Hymne, and this hymne, in this Day continually have a ſpeciall intereſt. Time in Muſike is much. And, if we will keepe time with the Angels, doe it when they doe it, this day they did it: And what fitter time to ſing it, then the day, it was firſt ſung, the day of the firſt ſinging of it, Canticum diei, in die cantici? When ſhould the hymne of CHRISTS birth be better ſung, than on CHRISTS birth day.

But, becauſe it is not Vox but Votum; the voice is not all, but the hearts deſire and wiſh it is that GOD chiefly reſpecteth; to add that. And, what ſhould we wiſh from our hearts, but, that the Angels may have their wiſh; Every one may have his due, as it is here ſet out.

And, for that Nihil æquius eſt, quam ut pro quo quis oret, pro eo laboret, what we wiſh for, we ſhould not ſtand wiſhing only, but endevour with-all, it may come to paſſe, that it be our labour too, with all our endevours, to procure the glorie of heaven, and the peace of the earth: To find peace in the goodwill of GOD, and to give Him all glorie for it, who hath appointed peace our portion here, and glorie our hope layd up there.

Aſſuring our ſelves, that the ſame δόξια that was able to bring the SONNE of GOD from heaven into earth, ſhall have the like power to lift up the Sonnes of men from earth to the glorie of heaven: There with the bleſſed Angels, to ſing this glorious Hymne eternally. No more, of wiſh than, but of fruition, and ſo of everlaſting Gratulation.

A SER-

before the KINGS MAIESTIE, at White-hall, on Munday, the XXV. of December, A. D. MDCXX. being CHRISTMAS day.

MATT. Chap. II. Verſ. I, II.

Cum ergo natus eſſet IESVS in Bethlehem Iudæ, in diebus Herodis Regis, Ecce Magi ab Oriente venerunt Ieroſolymam, dicentes, Vbi eſt qui natus eſt Rex Iudæorum? Vidimus enim ſtellam Ejus in Oriente, & venimus adorare Eum.

When IESVS then was borne at Bethlehem in Judæa, in the dayes of Herod the King, Behold, there came Wiſe men, from the Eaſt to Jeruſalem, ſaying, Where is the King of the Jewes that is borne? For we have ſeene His ſtarre in the Eaſt, and are come to worſhip Him.

WE paſſe now this yeare, from the Shepherds, and the Angels, to the Wiſe men, and their Starre. This Starre, and their comming no leſſe proper to this Day, than thoſe other were. For, though they came not to Hieruſalem, this day; yet, this day, venerunt ab Oriente, from the Eaſt they came: They ſet forth, this very day. For, they came when IESVS was borne; And, this day, was He borne. Howſoever the Star brought them not to their journeys end, till twelve dayes hence; yet, this day it firſt ſhewed it ſelfe: how ſoone IESVS was borne, vidimus ſtellam, it appeared ſtraight. For which very appearing, you ſhall find, the Fathers of the Eaſt Church doe call this firſt day τὰ ἐπιφάνια, aſwell as the laſt. This firſt, wherein His Starre appeared, and they began their journey. That laſt, wherin He appeared Himſelfe, and their journey was at an end. Firſt, and laſt, an Appearing there was. One beginnes, the other ends the Feaſt.

We paſſe from one of them, to the other; but, from the leſſe, to the greater: For,

For, of the twaine this is the Greater. Greater, in it ſelfe: Greater, to us. Two waies greater, in it ſelfe. Th'other (of the Shepherds) a poore one: poore and meane. This (of the Wiſe men) a Signe of ſome State: high and heavenly.

Eſay 7.11. GOD bade Ahaz aske a Signe; Aske one from here below, or one from the height above: He would aske neither, but GOD gave both. From below, Hoc erit Signum, you ſhall finde Luk.2.12. the Babe in a manger: Low enough: (That we have done withall.) Now, from above, Ecce vidimus ſtellam, The Signe from Heaven: His new Starre.

Beſides (to ſpeake uprightly) one might in ſome ſort complaine, of the privateneſſe of the Angels appearing: Somewhat obſcure it was; few privie to it: paſſed over in the night betweene the Angels and them. And, upon it, three or foure Shepherds got them into the ſtable; and, what there they did, no man could take notice of.

More famous, and more Manifeſtation-like was this here. A new Light kindled in heaven, A Starre, never ſeene before The world could not but looke up at it, and aske Pſal.19.4. what it meant. Nothing appeareth there, but, the Sound of it goeth out into all lands, and the newes of it to the utmoſt parts of the earth.

This made another manner venerunt: upon this came there to Hieruſalem (not a rout of Shepherds, but) a troope of Great Perſons. And not from a heath, or Sheep-common hard by; but, from afarre, from the Eaſt, twelve dayes journey off. All Hieruſalem rang of it. The King, Prieſts, and People buſied with it. To this day, remem-Acts 26.26. bred in all Stories. It cannot be forgotten: For this was not done in a corner. This was (indeed) a Manifeſtation. Better, in it ſelfe, thus.

And, for us, Better: For us all. For we (all) hold by this. It was a brack in the former; The Sermon was made, and the Antheme ſung, and none at it but the Ioh.4.6. Shepherds. And what were they? Iewes: What is that to us? This Scripture offereth more grace. Theſe (here) that came from the Eaſt, firſt, they were Gentiles. Gentiles; that concernes us, for ſo are we. We may then looke out, if we can ſee this Starre. It is ours, it is the Gentiles Starre. We may ſet our courſe by it, to ſeeke, and finde, and worſhip Him, as well as they.

This is for us all. But there is yet more grace offered to ſome in particular. The Shepherds were a ſort of poore ſimple men altogether unlearned; But, here come a troope of men of great Place, high account in their countrey: And withall, of great learned men (their name gives them for no leſſe.) This (lo) falls ſomewhat proper to this Place and Preſence, that will be glad to heare it. It is fauſtum & ſalutare Sydus to ſuch; that wealth, worth, or wiſedome ſhall hinder none, but they may have their parts in CHRISTS Birth, aſwell as thoſe of low degree. It is not only Stella Gentium, but Stella Magorum: The Great Mens, the Wiſe mens Starre, this.

So, quoad nos, for us, it fitteth well. And, quoad ſe, of it ſelfe, it is fit every way. Eſay 11.1. This Starre leads us to another Starre; even the Root and Generation of DAVID, the 2 Pet.1.19. bright morning Starre. He of whom * Zacharie ſaith, in the Old Teſtament, Ecce Vir, Pſal 110.3. Oriens nomen Ejus: Yea, Oriens ab alto (ſaith * Zacharie, in the New:) Viſits thoſe * Zach.6.12. of the Eaſt, whence the day ſpringeth; takes them that are neereſt Him; and His ri-* Luk.1.78. ſing works upon the place firſt, that beares His name. The Wiſedome of GOD the *begin-*Pro.8.22. ning of all His waies is found by Wiſe men, of all other (becauſe they be Wiſe) moſt fit to finde Him.

The Diviſion Two verſes I have read. In the former, after the Matter of the Feaſt firſt remem-I. bred, (When IESVS was borne,) accompanied with the two circumſtances of Place and Time, (The Place where, Bethlehem Iuda; The Time when, the dayes of Herod the King:) There is a memorable accident (that then happened) ſet downe: A Venerunt, A Comming or arrivall at Hieruſalem. And they, that ſo came, were a companie of Magi, from the Eaſt. And this (lo) hath the Ecce on the head of it, Ecce, venerunt Magi ab Oriente, Behold, there came, &c. As the ſpeciall point, in the Text: and ſo, we to make it.

II. In the later, is ſet downe their Errand. Both the 1 Occaſion, and the 2 End: beſt expreſſed by themſelves, out of their owne dicentes. 1. The Occaſion: Vidimus ſtellam, plam; They had ſeene His ſtarre. 2. The End, Venimus adorare, They are come to worſhip Him. Viderunt, venerunt, Adorârunt.

That they may come to their finis ultimus, they muſt have a medius finis: That is, to worſhip, they muſt finde Him where He is.

So they aske, Vbi eſt? Not, whether He be borne; but Where Hee is borne. For, borne He is, they are ſure, by the ſame token they have ſeene His Starre: His Starre is up; that is riſen; therefore He is riſen too.

So the Starre in heaven kindled another Starre in earth, (S. Peter calls it the Day-ſtarre which riſeth in the heart, that is, faith) which ſhined, and manifeſted it ſelfe, by their labour in comming, diligence in inquiring, duty in worſhipping. 2 Pet.1.19.

CHRISTS birth made manifeſt, to them, by the ſtarre in heaven: Their faith (the ſtarre in their hearts) made manifeſt to CHRIST, and to all, by the travell of it, which ſhewed it manifeſtly.

That (upon the matter) there falls a three-fold Manifeſtation, (you may call them three ſtarres, if you pleaſe:) 1 The ſtarre in heaven: 2 the day-ſtarre, in their hearts: 3 and, CHRIST Himſelfe, the bright morning ſtarre, whom both the other guide us to: the Starre of this morning, which makes the Day, the greateſt Day in the yeare.

The ſumme of all riſeth to this: That GOD hath opened a doore of faith to the Gentiles: And, among them, to Wiſe men and Great men, as well as to the ſimpler ſort. But with this condition; that they ſay with them, venite adoremus: And ſo, come, and ſeeke, and find, and worſhip Him; that is, doe as theſe did. Act.14.27.

When IESVS was borne: That (when) is now. His Birth is the ground of the Feaſt, and the cauſe of our Venimus, our comming together. Where, this we note firſt; It is the verie firſt time, the firſt (was borne) in the Bible: was borne, never till now. Here, the tide turnes; the ſenſe changes, from ſhall be to was. A bleſſed change; and, the day is bleſſed, on which it happened. The Matter.

Before He was borne, it was ſo ſure He ſhould be borne, as ESAY ſayd, Puer natus eſt nobis. But for all that, there is ſome oddes betweene ESAI's natus eſt, and Saint MATTHEVVE's. That was but virtually; as good as borne: This, actually borne indeed. Eſa.9.6.

IESVS CHRIST yeſterday, and to day, and the ſame for ever. The ſame, yet not altogether after the ſame manner. There is as much betweene IESVS CHRIST, yeſterday, not come; and IESVS CHRIST, to day, cum natus eſſet; as is betweene a ſtate in reverſion, and one in being. Hebr.13.8.

The Fathers aptly reſemble their caſe, that were the ante-nati before CHRIST, and ours that came after, to the two men (Numb. 13.) that carried the great cluſter of grapes, upon a ſtaffe betweene them. Both carried; but, he that came behind ſaw that he carried: So did not he that went before. The poſt-nati (ſure) are of the ſurer hand: And ſo, for cum natus eſſet (the day and time) to hold a Feaſt: for When IESVS was borne. Num.13.24.

Weighty circumſtances are ever matter of moment; in a ſtorie ſpecially. Three there are in the firſt Verſe: 1 The Place: 2 the Time: 3 the Perſons. 4 I add a fourth (out of the Second Verſe) the Occaſion. The place (Vbi,) Bethlehem Iuda. The time (Quando,) the dayes of Herod the King. The Perſons (Quibus,) Wiſe men from the Eaſt. The Occaſion, (whereupon) A new Starre appearing; Every one of the foure having a ſeverall Prophecie running of it; and every Prophecie, a filling of it, in theſe words. The Circumſtances.

The Place: He was borne, in Bethlehem Iuda: And thou Bethlehem Iuda (ſaith the Prophet Mica) out of thee ſhall He come. And now, come He is. Mica 5.2.

The Time: the dayes of Herod the King. The Scepter ſhall not quite depart from Iuda, till SILO come (ſayd old Father Iacob in his prophecie:) SILO then is (now) come. For, the Scepter is in Herods hand: His Father, an Edomite; His mother, an Iſmaelite: Iuda cleane gone. Gen.49.10.

The

Psal.72.10, Esa.60.6. The Persons : Magi ab oriente, Kings from the East. The Kings of Arabia and Saba shall come and bring gifts (saith David :) And Esai specifies them, Gold, myrrh, incense. These Kings are come: Here they are; they, and their Gifts, both.

Numb.24.17. The Occasion, whereupon : A starre risen. A starre shall rise of IACOB (saith Balaam, no very good man, yet a true Prophet, in this; and his prophecie true, and for such recorded in the Books of Moses.) This Starre is, this morning, up to be seene. Prophecies of all foure: and, all foure accomplished.

1 CHRISTS Vbi. Of the Place, of Bethlehem, (out of MICA) it hath formerly beene treated: I but touch it and passe it, now. It was the place, where DAVID himselfe was borne. And, what place more meet for the Sonne of DAVID, to be borne in? It was the place, where was heard the first newes of the Temple : And, where could the Ioh.6.51. Lord of the Temple more fitly be heard of? It interpreted Domus panis, the House of Bread : What place more proper for Him, who is the living bread, that came downe Mica.5.2. from heaven, to give life to the world? It is was the least, and the lowest, of all the thousands of Iuda : What little and low is, in things naturall; that lowlinesse, and humilitie is, in spirituall. This naturall birth-place, of His, sheweth His spirituall. Humilitie is His place; Humilitie (as I may call it) the Bethlehem of vertues : Where you find it, Lo, there is He borne. So borne in us, as borne for us. Passe we CHRISTS Vbi; And now, to His Quando.

2 CHRISTS Quando. Of the Time: the dayes of HEROD the King. And those were evill dayes; Dayes of great affliction, to that land. Iuda's scepter cleane broken: not a lawgiver left between his feet. Edom (that is HEROD the Edomite) cried, downe with them, downe to the Psal.137.7. ground. Not so much as a sort of silly babes, but barbarously slaine in their mothers Ier.31.15. armes: enough, to make Rachel mourne, as she lay in her grave. Dismall dayes, certainly: Why, then comes SILO: When mans help furthest off, then GODS neerest: When it is darke; then rises the Starre.

Gen.49.10. Num 24.17. What one prophecie of Him, but came even so; even, at such a time, when they were most out of heart, and needed comfort most. IACOBS, when they were in Egypt, the house of bondage. Balaam's, when in the wast and barren wildernesse, among firy Ser- Dan.9.25. pents. Esai's, when they were ready to be over-runne with the two Kings of Syria and Israel. Agg.2.9,10. Daniel's, when in Babylon, the land of their captivitie. Agge's, when they built the wall with the trowell in one hand, and the sword in the other. As His Prophecies came (still,) So 2 Pet.1.19. came He : His Prophecies (saith Peter,) as a candle : Himselfe, as a starre : in the darke, both. For all the world, like the time of the yeare His birth fell in; in the sharpest season, in the deepe of Winter. As humilitie, His place : So, affliction, His time. The time and place fit well. For, the time of affliction, makes the place; makes humilitie : Which place CHRIST is borne in, I passe this also, and come to the third; of the Persons.

3 CHRISTS Quibus. For, there stands the Ecce; upon it. Which Ecce points us to it, as to the chiefe point of all; As (indeed) it is. And our chiefe endevour, to include our selves, to have our parts, in this Venerunt, in comming to CHRIST.

Here is a comming, Venerunt : And they that come, Magi. In which Commers we consider foure points: they sustaine foure persons: 1 Of Gentiles; 2 Gentiles, from the East; 3 Great Persons, Great Princes, (for, so we may be bold to call them, as the Prophecie calls them, Kings :) 4 Of great Learning and wisdome; So [Magi] their name gives them.

3 Gentiles. To Bethlehem came the Shepherds. Nothing to us, they were Iewes. But, thither came Act.14.27. these too, and they were Gentiles : and, in this Gentiles, we; So come we in. Then hath GOD also, to the Gentiles set open a doore of faith. At which doore we enter; Wee with them, and they with us: For, they and we Gentiles both. The starre is stella gentium, the Gentiles starre : And so, ours; and we to direct our course by it. All, that ever write, call them Primitias Gentium, the first fruits; Antesignanos, the standard bearers.

bearers, to all the Gentiles, that came in after. Vpon this, I beg leave to ſtand a little, ſince it is our tenure, We hold by.

And, that GOD would thus doe, call the Gentiles in, there was ſome little Ecce (ſtill) ſome ſmall Star-light from the beginning.

By way of Promiſe. So much promiſed, by the Patriarchs. NOE; that Iaphet ſhould at the laſt dwell in the tents of Sem. ABRAHAM; that, in his Seed (not any one Nation, but) all the nations of the earth be bleſſed. IACOB; that SHILO's comming ſhould be expectatio (ſay ſome, and ſome, aggregatio) Gentium: All Nations looke for Him; all be gathered to Him. 1 Gen.9.27. 22.18. 49.10.

By way of Figure. Aſmuch was ſhadowed in the Law, the Tabernacle, and the Temple: all, figures of things to come. The Lawe: Where was it given? Was it not in Sinai, a mountaine in Arabia (ſaith the Apoſtle,) and ſo upon heathen ground? I truſt, wee may have leave to come upon our owne ground. And by whom? Was it not by MOSES? And we claime to Him by alliance: His wife was the daughter of the Prieſt of Madian: So, of a heathen woman; and his children, heathen of halfe bloud. 2 Heb.16.1. Gal.4.25. Exod.2.28.

The Tabernacle; Was not the ſilke, and gold, and riches, it was made of, the ſpoyles of Egypt, and ſo heathen ſtuffe? Exod.12.36. 25 2.&c

The Temple: Was it not founded upon the threſhing floore of ORNAN the Ieburite, a heathen man? So, on heathen ſoile; and, ædificium cedit ſolo. The timber and materialls of it, came they not from Hirams countrey, a Heathen King? And, the chiefe workman, in it (the ſonne of a man of Tyre) Heathen alſo. So, the Heathen were never wholly out. Venerunt, they came, they made their proffers. Some Ecce, ſome little ſtarre ſtill. 1 Chro.21 1 Reg.5.1 13

Now the Prophets, when they came, had we not hold there, too? At the ſame time, that GOD gave MOSES to the Iewes, who wrote of CHRIST, did he not likewiſe give BALAAM, to the Gentiles, who, in the mountaines of the Eaſt, propheſied of CHRISTS Starre, here? Great odds (I know) betweene the men; None betweene their Prophecies: Both, alike true: both their places alike, in the Librarie of the HOLY GHOST. After that, IONAS: howſoever his Book ſtand in the volume of the Prophets, yet (when time was) is was ſhewed, that, in time, he was the firſt of the ſixteene Prophets; before, and ancient to them all. And this was a faire Starre, that His firſt Prophet of all GOD ſent to Ninive, the great Citie of the Gentiles, then: And ſent him, before He ſent any of the other fifteene to his owne people (then) in ſhew, the People of the Iewes. 3 Num.24.17. Ion.1.2.

But, even of them He ſent to the Iewes, ſaith not Eſay directly, the Root of IESSE ſhould be as a Standard, all the Nations gather unto Him? Saith not GOD there, It was too poore a ſervice for CHRIST to doe to Him, to draw to Him a ſort of ſilly Shepheards; He would give Him, as a Light to lighten the Gentiles, to bring them, even the very beſt of them, from the ends of the earth. That Light to lighten the Gentiles was this Starre (here;) Simeon had it revealed to him, whereto this Starre referred, and what it meant; For, it lighted them indeed. And this, ſtanding the firſt Temple. And, ſaith not Aggee, (ſtanding the ſecond Temple) The deſire of all Nations ſhould come, (meaning CHRIST;) the deſire, not of one Nation alone, but even of all. So, the Prophets will not be againſt this venerunt: they are (all) for it. Eſay 11.10. Eſay 42.6. 43.5. Luk.2.32. Agg.2.8.

And was not alſo this venerunt dayly ſung in their Queer? The Pſalme of the Nativitie: I will thinke upon Rahab (that is Aegypt) and Babylon, among ſuch as ſhall know mee. Behold yee the Philiſtims alſo, and them of Tyre, with the Morians; Lo, there was Hee borne. Borne, in all thoſe places; that is, His birth concernes them all: all, their intereſt in it. In the Pſalme of His Paſſion: All the ends of the earth ſhall remember themſelves, and ſhall turne unto the LORD, And all the kindreds of Nations ſhall worſhip before Him. In the Pſalme of the Reſurrection: That, Hee ſhould then become the Head-ſtone of the corner, and joyne both Iewes and Gentiles in one coine, or angle. And, in the Pſalme of His Aſcenſion: That the Princes of the Nations ſhould bee joyned to the People of the GOD of ABRAHAM. 4 Pſal.87.4.5. Pſal.22.27. Pſal.118.22. Pſal.47.10.

Psal.72.11. And, in the Psalme of His Exaltation: That all Kings ſhould kneele before Him, all Nations doe Him ſervice.

That which (then) was thus promiſed, to, and by the Patriarchs; ſhadowed forth, in the figures of the Lawe, the Temple, and the Tabernacle; That which was foreſayd by the Prophets, and foreſung of in the Pſalmes; that, was this day fulfilled: Venerunt, here they are come: And Venimus, We, in them, and with them. Who, not onely in their owne names, but in ours, make heere their entrie; came, and ſought after, and found and worſhipped their SAVIOVR, and ours, the SAVIOVR of the whole World.

A little wicket there was left open before, whereat divers Gentiles did come in. Many a Venit there was: Venit [a] Iob, in the Patriarchs dayes. [b] Venit Iethro, in Moſes: [c] Rahab, in Ioſua's: [d] Ruth, in the Iudges time: [e] Ittai (the King of Gaths ſonne,) in Davids: [f] The Queene of Saba, in Salomons: The [g] Widow of Sarepta, in Elias: [h] Naaman (the Syrian) in Eliſa's time. Each of theſe, in their times, had the favour to be let in. This was but a Venit: a little wicket, for one or two. Now, a venerunt; the great Gate ſet wide open, this day, for all: For theſe heere, with their Camells and Dromedaries, to enter, and all their carriage.

In the ſetting downe His Genealogie (the Chapter before) That Salmon eſpouſed Rahab the Canaanite; that Booz likewiſe, Ruth the Moabite; it is plaine, that CHRIST deſcended (according to the fleſh) of Heathen. Deſcending of Heathen, He will never diſdaine them, of whom He is deſcended; never ſhut them out, but invite them to His Child-houſe; As (we ſee) this day by His Starre, He did.

Mat. 1.5.

And (if you marke it) of His firſt Sermon, the Widow of Sarepta, and Naaman the Syrian were the Theme; which made, His Sermon was not liked. Yet, that Theme He choſe purpoſely. And the Queen of the South, and the men of Ninive much in his mouth: He mentioned them willingly. And (to end this point;) Hee that, at His Birth (now) received theſe of the Eaſt; a little before His death, in like ſort, received Græcians from the Weſt, to See and to ſalute Him: And, ſtraight upon it (upon the receiving them) brake out and ſayd, The houre is come now, that the SONNE of man is glorified; when Eaſt and Weſt are come in, both.

I have a little ſtood on this, becauſe it is the Ecce point. I conclude; The Place, He was borne in, (an Inne, which is for all paſſengers of what country ſoever;) The Time, He was borne in, (of the Taxe, when all the world came up to be taxed;) The very Starre, which (as the nature of Starres is) is common to all Coaſts and Climates, peculiar to none; All ſhew, that from all coaſts they may now come; that, the Gentiles are now to be (as the Apoſtle in three pregnant termes delivers it) σύσσωμα, συμμέτοχα, συγκληρόνομα, fellow-members, fellow-partners, and fellow-heires of one body; Co-partners and Co-heires of CHRIST, and His birth. This, for Stella Gentium, the Gentiles Starre; So both theirs and ours.

2 Gentiles, from the Eaſt.

There came Gentiles: And they came from the Eaſt. This may ſeeme to ſet us, backe againe; for, we are of the Weſt, the contrary Climate. That is no matter. For, in that they came from the Eaſt, there lyeth yet further hope for us; even from that point of the compaſſe. For, that is not onely Gentiles, but ſinners of the Gentiles: Sinners, and that chiefe ſinners. For, ſo were they of the Eaſt; greater, far greater ſinners than the reſt. For tell me, what ſinne was there, that came not from thence? There was the Tower ſet in hand, that ſhould have confronted GOD: and of it came Babel, and from it, confuſion. [2] Thence came all tyrannie and oppreſſion among men, from Nimrod, that hunted and ranged over men, as over beaſts in a Forreſt, [3] Thence, all Idolatrie, and worſhip of falſe gods; both in earth, from Belus tombe, firſt: And, in Heaven, from the Starre of their god Rempham (which Saint Stephen ſpeakes of.) [4] Thence (from the Mountaines of the Eaſt) the poſteritie of Balaam, falſe Prophets, that love the wages of unrighteouſneſſe; and, from them, all that naught is. And, if in all theſe it did, It cannot bee denied, but that the whole World received their infection that way, from the Eaſt.

Gen. 11.2.
Gen. 10.9.
Act. 7.43.
Num. 23.7.
2 Pet. 2.15.

And

And herein appeared the grace of GOD, which bringeth ſalvation to all men, and to all ſinners, as faire and cleere, as the Starre it ſelfe; that, thence (out of the mountaines of the East) GOD calleth theſe to ſeeke, and guided them to find CHRIST: that, whence the poyſon firſt came, thence might come the Triacle: and that, as they were the firſt that went out, ſo they ſhould be the firſt that came in. Tit.2.11.

So the East ſets us not further backe, but brings us neerer. For if the East may come, which are the greater; much more may the Weſt, which are the leſſe: if the Seducers, the Seduced. From the East, to the Weſt, is a majore ad minus. That, if venerunt ab Oriente, venient ab Occidente: if the greater, much rather the leſſer. This, for the Starre of the Gentiles, firſt: And now, the Starre of Sinners, and chiefe Sinners of the Gentiles, even Orientall Sinners. Matt.8.11.

3 Great Perſons.

But, they ſuſtaine yet a third perſon, theſe: (to come neerer, and to make it come neerer us, even to this place.) For Great men they were in their Countries, of the higheſt place and account there, as all Stories teſtifie. The Pſalme calls them Kings of Sheba and Seba: and, ſo may wee. It may appeare, by Herods reſpect to them: His calling a Synode to reſolve them; his privy conference, with them. So may it, by their treaſures they opened, and by their preſents they offered (preſents, for a King,) which give them for no leſſe. So, this is (now) thirdly, Stella Magnatum, the Starre of Princes and Nobles alſo. Yea, Stella Regia, the Starre Royall: Kings themſelves have their hold and claime by it. Pſal.72.10. Ver.3.4.11.

CHRIST is not onely for ruſſet clokes, Shepherds and ſuch; ſhewes Himſelfe to none but ſuch. But, even the Grandez, Great States, ſuch as theſe; Venerunt, they came too: and, when they came, were welcome to Him. For they were ſent for, and invited by this Starre (their Starre properly.)

Theſe, at His Birth, at His welcome into the world; And others ſuch as theſe, at His death, at his going out of it. Then Ioſeph of Arimathea; an honourable Counſellor, beſtowed on him a faire new Tombe: and others came, with their hundred pound of ſweet odors. So that, comming and going, He was beholden to ſuch. The Tribe, CHRIST came of, was the Royall Tribe, to whom the Scepter belonged; And, in the Prophecie it followes, A ſtarre ſhall riſe out of IACOB, and a Scepter out of ISRAEL. To Kings, to Scepters CHRIST cannot but be well inclined. Matt.27.60. Ioh.19.39. Num.24.17.

Among his prophets, I find AMOS, an heardman: True: but, I find ESAY, and DANIEL, (both) nobly deſcended, and of the blood Royall. Amos 1.1. Dan.1.6.

In his deſcent, there are BOOZ, and IESSE, plaine countrie men; But there are DAVID, and SALOMON too, and a liſt of Kings withall: that ſo, there may bee a mixture of both. It is true, Saint PAVL ſaith: You ſee your calling; Not many mighty, not many noble after the fleſh: Not many, hee ſaith: Not any, hee ſaith not: hee ſhould (then) have ſpoken contrarie to his owne knowledge. Some pertained to this Starre, went by it. The [a] Lord Deputie of Cyprus; the great [b] Iudge in Areopago; divers of the [c] nobler ſort at Beræa; And divers of [d] CÆSARS houſhold came in, and had all their calling, by and from Him. Matt.2.6. 1 Cor.1.26.

As likewiſe, the great [e] Lord treaſurer, by Saint PHILIP; and the [f] Elect Ladie, by Saiut IOHN. Thoſe (all) were of this troope, here: Vnder this Starre, all of them, Stella Magnatum. To conclude, from our SAVIOVR CHRISTS owne mouth: As there is in Heaven, roome for poore Lazarus; So, that roome was in the boſome of one that was rich (that is) of ABRAHAM; a great Man, yea, a great Prince in his time.

4 Wiſe men.

1 Stella Gentium; 2 Stella Peccatorum de gentibus; 3 Stella Magnatum. But yet all this while, wee have not touched Stella Magorum: Not yet dealt with Magi, the very word of the Text, and the chiefe perſon they repreſent. For, beſide that they were great States, they were alſo great Learned men; And (being both) they are ſtiled rather by the name of the skill and Learning, than by that of their Greatneſſe; to point us, to the qualitie in them, wee are principally to regard.

You ſhall not need ſtartle, when you here the word Magi, as if they were ſuch as Simon Magus was. Of later times it ſounds not well (this name:) Of old, it was a name of great honour, as was the name of Tyrannus, and Sophiſtes, all, in the like caſe. Evill and unworthy men tooke them up after, and ſo, they loſt their firſt reputation. But, originally, Magus was a title of high knowledge.

I adde, of Heathen knowledge; and comprehend in it this very knowledge, that they were well ſeene in the courſe of heaven, in the Starres and bodies celeſtiall. Their Vidimus Stellam ſhewes as much. The Starres GOD hath given, for Signes (ſayth the Booke of Geneſis:) Even, the ordinarie. And, if them, the extraordinary (ſuch as this) much more. For, Signes they are, open the Signature who can.

This Learning of theirs made them never the further from CHRIST (we ſee;) It did them no hurt, in their comming to CHRIST: No more than it did Moſes, that he was well learned in all the Wiſedome of the Aegyptians (ſayth Saint STEPHEN, Acts 7.22.) Nor no more than it did Salomon, that he paſſed all the children of the Eaſt, in their owne learning, (I Reg. IIII. XXX.) No more than it did Daniel, that he was brought up and well ſeene, in the cunning of the Chaldeans (Dan. I. IV.) No more theſe; than the gold and ſpoyles of Aegypt, did the Tabernacle hurt, that was hung all over with them.

They, that are ſeene in theſe Learnings of Aegypt, of Chaldea, of the Eaſt, are not thereby barred at all. This is their Starre, their guide; a guide apt and proper for them, that knew the Starres; for them that were learned. CHRIST applyeth Himſelfe to all; diſpoſes all things: what every one is given to, even by that, CHRIST calleth them. Saint PETER, ANDREVV, IAMES and IOHN, Fiſhermen, by a draught of fiſh. Theſe, that were ſtudious in the Starres, by a Starre for the purpoſe.

And note that the apparition to the Shepheards was no ſooner over, but this Starre appeared preſently, if not the very ſame houre: (that is) both at once. In like manner, CHRIST, at firſt (to ſhew the glorie of His greatneſſe) tooke and imployed Fiſhermen, ſuch as had no bringing up in Schooles. But, it was not long after, but Learned men came in apace: Learned men of all ſorts; [a] Zenas, in Law; [b] Luke, in Phyſike; [c] Apollo, with his Eloquence; [d] Dionyſe, with his Philoſophie; [e] S. Paul, with his πολλὰ γράμματα much learning, (which he had at Tharſus, as famous an Vniverſitie for Aſia, as Athens was for Greece.) Which Learning (for all Feſtus phanſie) turned not his braines, nor did them any hurt at all.

[b] 1 Tim.4.11.
[c] Act.18.24.
[e] Act.26.24.

There is no Starre, or beame of it; There is no truth at all, in humane learning or Philoſophie, that thwarteth any truth in Divinitie; but ſorteth well with it, and ſerveth it, and all to honour Him, who ſaith of Himſelfe, Ego ſum Veritas, I am the Truth. None, that will hinder this Venerunt, keepe backe any Wiſe man, or make him leſſe fit for comming to CHRIST.

Ioh.14.6.

So, you ſee your calling; all foure. [1] Gentiles may come, [2] Sinners of the Gentiles may come, (yea, though they be peccatorum primi, of the primer ſort:) [3] Men of place, [4] Men of Gifts, Learned and Wiſe may come. In Magis inſunt omnes hii, all are in Venerunt Magi: The Starre goes before them, guides them (all) to CHRIST.

The Application.

It remaineth, that, what we may doe, we will doe; that is, come. (For, further than Venerunt, we are not like to come, at this time.) And, though we goe no further, it skills not, ſo we doe but that; come; Even that will ſerve. For, it is all in all. We ſhall goe in the companie of Wiſe men, that is once. And, if the Shepherds were too homely to ſort with, theſe are company for the beſt; they were company for CYRVS, and DARIVS, and all the great Monarchs of Perſia.

Ecce

Ecce Venerunt it is, in the Text: And (indeed,) not onely the Perſons, (Ecce Magi,) but their very comming deſerved an Ecce. It is an Ecce Venerunt, theirs (indeed) if wee weigh it well, Whence they came, and Whither. Whence; from the East, their owne countrie: Whither; to Hieruſalem, that was (to them) a ſtrange Land: That was ſomewhat. 2 They came a long journey, no leſſe than twelve dayes together. 3 They came an uneaſy journey, for their way lay through Arabia Petræa, and the craggy rockes of it. 4 And they came a dangerous journey, through Arabia Deſerta (too,) and the black tents of Kedar there, then famous for their robberies, and even to this day. 5 And they came, now, at the worſt ſeaſon of the yeare. And all, but to doe worſhip at CHRISTS birth. So great account they made; So highly did they eſteeme their being at it, as they tooke all this great travell, and came all this long journey, and came it, at this time. Stayed not their comming, till the opening of the yeare, till they might have better weather and way, and have longer dayes, and ſo more ſeaſonable and fit to travell in. So deſirous were they to come with the firſt, and to be there, as ſoone as poſſibly they might: broke through all theſe dificulties, Et ecce Venerunt, And, behold, come they did. Pſal.120.5.

And we, what excuſe ſhall we have, if we come not? if ſo ſhort and ſo eaſie a way we come not, as from our chambers hither, not to be called a way indeed? Shall not our owne Venerunt have an Ecce, Behold, it was but ſtepping ouer the threſhold, and yet they came not?

And theſe were Wiſe men; and never a whit the leſſe Wiſe, for ſo comming: Nay, never ſo truly Wiſe, in any thing they did, as in ſo comming. The HOLY GHOST recordeth them for Wiſe, in capite libri, even in the beginning of the New Teſtament. Of CHRIST, when He came into the world (that is, when He was borne) the Pſalme ſaith, In the beginning of the Booke it was writ of Him, He ſaid, Ecce venio, Lo I come: Of theſe, in the ſame words, when they came to meet Him (ſo borne,) it is ſaid here, in the beginning of the Goſpell, Ecce venerunt, Behold they came. Pſal.40.7.

And wee, if we beleeve this, that this was their wiſdome; if they and wee be Wiſe by one SPIRIT, by the ſame principles; wee will follow the ſame Starre, tread the ſame way, and ſo come (at laſt) whither they are happily gone before us.

Nay, not onely that [come;] but this withall; To thinke and ſet downe with our ſelves, That, to come to CHRIST, is one of the wiſeſt parts; that ever theſe Wiſe men did; or we, (or any elſe) can doe in all our lives.

And how ſhall wee that doe? I know not any more proper way left us, than to come to that, which Himſelfe by expreſſe order hath left us, as the moſt ſpeciall Remembrance of Himſelfe, to bee come to. When He came into the world (ſaith the Pſalme) that is, at His birth (now) He ſaid, Ecce venio, Lo I come: What then? Sacrifice and burnt offerings thou wouldſt not have, but a bodie haſt thou ordained mee: Marke (ſaith the Apoſtle) Hee takes away the firſt, to eſtabliſh the ſecond, (that is) to eſtabliſh His bodie, and the comming to it. By the offering, breaking, and partaking of which bodie, Wee are all ſanctified, ſo many as ſhall come to it. For, given it is, for the taking away of our ſinnes. Nothing is more fit, than at the time, His bodie was ordained Him (and that is, to day;) to come to the bodie ſo ordained. Ibid. ver.6. Heb.10.9. Heb.10.10. Matt.26.28.

And in the Old Rituall of the Church wee finde, that the cover of the Caniſter (wherein was the Sacrament of His Bodie,) there was a Starre ingraven; to ſhew us, that (now) the Starre leades us thither; to His Body, there. Apoc.22.17.

And what ſhall I ſay now, but (according, as Saint Iohn ſaith) and the Starre, and the Wiſe-men ſay, Come. And Hee, whoſe the Starre is, and to whom the Wiſe-men came, ſayth Come. And let them, that are diſpoſed, Come. And let, whoſoever will take of the Bread of Life, which came downe from Heaven, this day, into Bethlehem the Ioh.6.35.

houſe of bread. Of which bread, the Church is (this day) the Houſe; the true Bethlehem, and all the Bethlehem, wee have now left to come to, for the bread of life; of that life, which wee hope for in heaven. And this, our neereſt coming that (here) wee can come, till wee ſhall (by another Venite) come, unto Him, in His heavenly Kingdome. To which, He grant, we may come, that (this day) came to us in earth, that wee thereby might come to Him, and remaine with Him for ever, IESVS CHRIST the RIGHTEOVS.

A SER-

before the KINGS MAIESTIE, at White-hall, on Wedneſday, the XXV. of December, A. D. MDCXXII. being CHRISTMAS day.

MATT. Chap. II. Verſ. I, II.

Behold there came VVISE MEN, from the Eaſt to Hieruſalem;

Saying, Where is the KING OF THE IEVVES, that is borne? For, we have ſeene His ſtarre in the Eaſt, and are come to worſhip Him.

Here be, in theſe two Verſes, two principall Points, (as was obſerved, when time was,) 1 The Perſons, that arrived at Hieruſalem: 2 And their Errand. The Perſons, in the former Verſe: whereof hath been treated heretofore. Their Errand, in the latter: wherewith we are now to deale.

Their Errand we may beſt learne from themſelves, out of their Dicentes &c. Which (in a word) is, To worſhip Him. Their Errand, our Errand, and the Errand of this Day.

This TEXT may ſeeme to come a little too ſoone, before the time; and ſhould have ſtaied ſtill the day, it was ſpoken on, rather than one this day. But, if you marke them well, there are (in the Verſe) foure Words, that be Verba Diei hujus, proper and peculiar to this very Day. 1 For firſt, Natus eſt is moſt proper to this Day of all daies, the Day of His Nativitie. 2 Secondly, Vidimus Stellam: For, this Day, it was firſt ſeene; appeared firſt. 3 Thirdly, Venimus: For, this Day, they ſet forth, began their iourney. 4 And laſt, Adorare eum: For when He brought His onely begotten Sonne into the World, He gave in charge, Let all the Angels of GOD worſhip Him: And when the Angels to doe it, no time more proper for Vs to doe it, as then. So theſe foure appropriate it to this Day, and none but this. Heb. 1. 6.

The maine Heads of their Errand are 1 Vidimus ſtellam, the Occaſion: 2 And Venimus The Diviſion

mus adorare, the End of their Comming. But for the better conceiving it, I will take another courſe, to ſet forth theſe points to be handled.

I. Their Faith firſt: Faith; in that they never aske, Whether He be; but, Where He is borne: For, that Borne He is, that, they ſtedfaſtly beleeve.

II. Then, the Worke, or Service of this Faith, (as Saint Paul calleth it;) the Touch, or triall, δοκίμιον (as S. Peter;) the Oſtende mihi as (Saint Iames) of this their faith in theſe five: 1 Their Confeſſing of it, in venerunt dicentes. Venerunt, they were no ſooner come, but dicentes, they tell it out: Confeſſe Him and His Birth to be the cauſe of their comming. 2 Secondly, As confeſſe their Faith, So, the Ground of their Faith; Vidimus enim, For, they had ſeene His ſtarre: And, His ſtarre being riſen, by it they knew, He muſt be riſen too. 3 Thirdly, (as Saint Paul calls them, in Abraham's) Veſtigia fidei, the ſteps of their faith, in venimus, their comming; Comming, ſuch a journey; at ſuch a time; with ſuch ſpeed. 4 Fourthly, When they were come, their Diligent inquiring Him out by Vbi eſt? (For, here, is the place of it:) asking after Him, to find where He was. 5 And laſt, when they had found Him, the End of their ſeeing, comming, ſeeking; and all, for no other end, but to Worſhip Him. Here, they ſay it: At the XI. Verſe, they doe it, in theſe two Acts, 1 Procidentes, their Falling downe: 2 And, Obtulerunt, their offering to Him. Worſhip Him with their Bodies; Worſhip Him with their Goods: Their Worſhip, and ours; the true Worſhip of CHRIST.

The Text is of a ſtarre: And we may make all runne on a ſtarre; that ſo, the Text and Day may be ſuitable, and Heaven & Earth hold a correſpondence. S. Peter call faith, the Day-ſtarre riſing in our hearts: Which ſorts well with the Starre, in the Text, riſing in the Skie. That, in the skie, manifeſting it ſelfe from above, to them: This, in their hearts, manifeſting it ſelfe from below, to Him, to CHRIST. Manifeſting it ſelfe, by theſe five: 1 By [a] Ore fit confeſſio, the Confeſſing of it: 2 By [b] Fides eſt ſubſtantia, the Ground of it: 3 By [c] Veſtigia fidei, the Stepps of it, in their painefull comming: 4 By their Vbi eſt? Carefull Enquiring: 5 And laſt, by Adorare Eum, their devout Worſhipping. Theſe five, as ſo many beames of Faith, the day-ſtarre riſen in their hearts. To take notice of them. For, every one of them is of the nature of a Condition; So as, if we faile in them, non lucet nobis ſtella hæc, we have no part in the light, or conduct of this Starre. Neither, in Stellam, the Starre it ſelfe; Nor, in Ejus, in Him whoſe the ſtarre is; that is, not in CHRIST neither.

[a] Rom. 10.10. [b] Heb. 11.1. [c] Rom. 4.12.

We have now got us a ſtarre on earth, for that in heaven: And theſe (both) lead us to a third. So as, upon the matter, three ſtarrs we have; and each, his proper manifeſtation. 1. The firſt, in the firmament: That appeared unto them, and in them, to us: (A figure of Saint Pauls Επεφάνη χάρις, the Grace of GOD appearing, and bringing ſalvation to all men; Iewes, and Gentiles and all.) 2. The ſecond, here on earth, is Saint Peter's Lucifer in cordibus: And, this appeared in them, and ſo muſt, in us. Appeared, 1 in their Eyes, Vidimus: 2 in their Feet, Venimus: 3 in their Lipps, Dicentes: ubi eſt: 4 in their knees, Procidentes, Falling downe: 5 in their Hands, Obtulerunt, by Offering. Theſe five, every one a beame of this ſtarre. 3. The third in CHRIST Himſelfe (Saint Iohn's ſtarre,) The generation and root of DAVID, the bright morning ſtarre, CHRIST. And He, His double appearing: 1 One, at this time, now, when He appeared in great humilitie; and we ſee, and come to Him, by faith. 2 The other, which we waite for; even, the bleſſed hope, and appearing of the Great GOD, and our SAVIOVR, in the Majeſtie of His Glorie.

Tit. 2.11. 2 Pet. 1.9. Tit. 2.13.

Theſe three: 1 The firſt, that manifeſted CHRIST to them: 2 The ſecond, that manifeſted them to CHRIST: 3 The third, CHRIST Himſelfe, in whom, both theſe were (as it were) in conjunction. CHRIST the bright Morning ſtarre of that Day, which ſhall have no night; The Beatifica viſio, the bleſſed ſight of which Day, is the Conſummatum eſt of our Hope, and happineſſe for ever.

Of theſe three ſtarrs, the firſt is gone; the third yet to come; the ſecond only is preſent. We, to looke to that; and to the five beames of it. That is it, muſt doe us all the good, and bring us to the third.

Saint

SAint Luke calleth Faith, the * Doore of Faith : At this Doore let us enter. Here is a comming : And He that commeth to GOD (and ſo, Hee that, to CHRIST) muſt beleeve, that CHRIST is : ſo doe theſe. They never aske, An ſit ; but, Vbi ſit ? Not, Whether, but Where He is borne. They that aske Vbi, qui natus ? take natus for granted : preſuppoſe, that borne He is. Herein is faith : Faith, of CHRIST's being borne, the third Article of the Chriſtian Creed.

I. Their Faith. * Act. 14. 27.

And, what beleeve they of Him ? Out of their owne words here : 1 Firſt, that Natus, that Borne He is ; and ſo, Man He is : His Humane Nature. 2 And, a His Nature, ſo His Office, in natus eſt REX, Borne a King : They beleeve that too. 3 But, Iudæorum may ſeeme to be a Barre : For then, what have they to do with the King of the IEVVES ? They be Gentiles, none of His Lieges ; No relation to Him, at all ; What do they ſeeking, or worſhipping Him ? But, weigh it well, and it is no Barre. For, this they ſeeme to beleeve : He is ſo Rex Iudæorum, King of the Iewes, as He is adorandus a Gentibus, the Gentiles to adore Him. And, though borne in Iewry, yet, whoſe Birth concerned them, though Gentiles, though borne farre off in the Mountaines of the Eaſt : They, to have ſome benefit by Him and His Birth ; and for that, to doe Him worſhip, ſeeing officium fundatur in Beneficio ever. 4 As thus borne in earth, ſo a ſtarre He hath in heaven of His owne : ſtellam Ejus, His ſtarre ; He the owner of it. Now we know, the ſtarrs are the ſtarrs of Heaven ; and He, that Lord of them, Lord of Heaven too ; And ſo, to be adored of them, of us, and of all. Saint Iohn puts them together : The Root and Generation of DAVID, His Earthly ; and, The bright Morning ſtarre, His Heavenly or Divine generation. Hæc eſt fides Magorum, this is the Myſterie of their faith. In Natus eſt, Man ; In ſtellam Ejus, GOD : In Rex, a King, (though of the Iewes, yet) the good of whoſe Kingdome ſhould extend, and ſtretch it ſelfe far and wide, to Gentiles and all ; and He, of all to be adored. This, for Corde creditur, the day-ſtarre it ſelfe in their hearts. Now, to the Beames of this ſtarre.

Rev. 22. 16.

II. The Worke of their Faith. 1 Their Confeſſion, Dicentes.

Next to Corde creditur is Ore fit Confeßio, the Confeßion of this Faith. It is in venerunt dicentes, they came with it in their mouthes. Venerunt, they were no ſooner come, but they ſpake of it ſo freely, to ſo many, as it came to Herod's eare, and troubled him not a little that any King of the Iewes ſhould be worſhipped, beſide himſelfe. So then, their faith is no boſome-faith, kept to themſelves, without ever a dicentes, without ſaying any thing of it to any body. No : Credidi, propter quod locutus ſum ; They beleeved, and therefore they ſpake. The ſtarre in their hearts caſt one beame out at their mouthes. And though Herod, who was but Rex factus, could evill brooke to heare of Rex natus, muſt needs bee offended at it ; yet they were not afraid to ſay it. And, though they came from the Eaſt (thoſe parts, to whom and their King the Iewes had long time beene captives and underlings,) they were not aſhamed neither, to tell, that, One of the Iewes Race they came to ſeeke ; and to ſeeke Him to the end to worſhip Him. So, neither afraid of Herod, nor aſhamed of CHRIST : but profeſſed their Errand, and cared not who knew it. This for their confeßing Him boldly.

Pſal. 116. 10.

2 Their Ground: Vidimus enim. *Heb. 11. 1. Pro. 14. 15.

But, Faith is ſaid (by the * Apoſtle) to be ὑπόστασις, and ſo, their is a good Ground ; and ἔλεγχος and ſo, hath a good Reaſon for it. This, puts the difference between Fidelis, and Credulus, or (as Salomon termes him) fatuus, qui credit omni verbo : between Faith, and Lightneſſe of beleefe : Faith hath (ever) a Ground ; Vidimus enim, an Enim, a Reaſon for it ; and is ready to render it. How came you to beleeve ? Audivimus enim ; For, we have heard an Angell (ſay the Shepherds :) Vidimus enim, for we have ſeene a Starre, (ſay the Magi :) And this is a well-grounded Faith. We came not of our owne heads ; We came not, before we ſaw ſome reaſon for it ; ſaw that, which ſet us on comming ; Vidimus enim Stellam Ejus.

Luc. 2. 20.

Vidimus

Stellam Ejus. Vidimus ſtellam : We can well conceive that : Any, that will but looke up, may ſee a ſtarre. But, how could they ſee the [Ejus] of it, that it was His? Either, that it belonged to any; Or that, He it was, it belonged to. This paſſeth all Perſpective : No Aſtronomie could ſhew them this. What, by courſe of Nature, the ſtarrs can produce, that they, by courſe of Art or Obſervation, may diſcover. But, this Birth was above Nature. No Trigon, Triplicitie, Exaltation could bring it forth. They are but idle, that ſet figures for it. The ſtarre ſhould not have been His, but He, the ſtarr's, if it had gone that way. Some other light then, they ſaw this [Ejus] by.

Now (with us, in Divinitie) there be but two in all: [1] Veſpertina, and [2] Matutina lux. Veſpertina, the Owle-light of our Reaſon, or skill, is too dimme to ſee it by. No remedie then, but it muſt be (as ESAY cals it) Matutina lux : The Morning-light, the Light of GODS Law muſt certifie them of the Ejus of it. There, or not at all, to be had, whom this ſtarre did portend.

And in the Law, there we find it (in the XXIV. of Numbers.) One of their owne Prophets, that came (from whence they came) from the Mountaines of the Eaſt, was raviſhed in ſpirit, fell in a traunce, had his eyes opened, & ſaw the Ejus of it many an hundred yeares, before it roſe. Saw Orietur in IACOB, that there it ſhould riſe; Which is as much, as Natus eſt, here. Saw ſtella, that He ſhould be the bright Morning-ſtarre; and ſo, might well have a ſtarre to repreſent Him. Saw Sceptrum in ISRAEL (which is juſt as much as Rex IVDÆORVM,) that it ſhould portend a King there: Such a King, as ſhould not only ſmite the corners of Moab (that is) Balac their enemie, for the preſent; but, ſhould reduce and bring under Him all the ſonnes of SETH (that is) all the World: For, all are now SETH'S ſonnes; CAIN'S were all drowned in the Floud. Here now is the Ejus of it, cleer. A Prophets eye might diſcerne this: Never a Chaldean of them all could take it with his Aſtrolabe. BALAAM'S eyes were opened to ſee it: and he helped to open their eyes, by leaving behind him this Prophecie, to direct them how to apply it (when it ſhould ariſe) to the right Ejus of it.

But, theſe had not the LAVV: It is hard to ſay, that the Chaldee Paraphraſe was extant long before this. They might have had it. Say, they had it not: If MOSES were ſo carefull to record this Prophecie in his Booke, it may well be thought, that ſome memorie of this ſo memorable a Prediction was left remaining among them of the Eaſt, his owne Country where he was borne and brought up. And, ſome helpe they might have from DANIEL too, who lived all his time in Chaldæa, and Perſia, and propheſied among them of ſuch a KING, and ſet the juſt time of it.

And this (as it is conceived) put the difference between the Eaſt, and the Weſt. For I aske, Was it vidimus in Oriente, with them; Was it not vidimus in Occidente ? In the Weſt, ſuch a ſtarre, it or the fellow of it was ſeene, nigh about that time, or the Roman Stories deceive us. Toward the end of AVGVSTVS reigne, ſuch a ſtarre was ſeene, and much ſcanning there was about it. Plinie ſaith it was generally holden, that ſtarre to be Fauſtum Sydus, a Lucky Comet; and portended good to the World, which, few or no Comets doe. And Virgil (who then lived) would needs take upon him, to ſet downe the Ejus of it,----Ecce Dionæi, &c : Entitled Cæſar to it. And verily, there is no man, that can (without admiration) read his ſixth Eglogue, of a Birth, that time expected, that ſhould be the Offſpring of the Gods, and that ſhould take away their ſinnes. Where-upon it hath gone for current, the Eaſt and Weſt, Vidimus, both.

But, by the light of their Prophecie, the Eaſt, they went ſtraight to the right Ejus. And, for want of this Light, the Weſt wandered, and gave it a wrong Ejus : As Virgil, applying it to little Salonine; and (as evill hap was) while he was making his Verſes, the poore Child died; and ſo, his ſtarre ſhot, vaniſhed, and came to nothing. Their vidimus never came to a venimus : they neither went, nor worſhipped Him, as theſe (here) did.

But, by this we ſee, When all is done, hither we muſt come, for our Morning-light; to this Booke, to the Word of Prophecie. All our vidimus ſtellam is as good as nothing, without it. That ſtarre is paſt and gone, long ſince: Heaven and earth ſhall paſſe, but this this Word ſhall not paſſe. Here, on this, wee to fix our eye, and to ground our faith. Having this, though we neither heare Angell, nor ſee ſtarre, we may (by the Grace of GOD) doe full well. For, even they, that have had both thoſe, have been faine to reſolve into this, as their laſt, beſt, and chiefeſt point of all. Witneſſe Saint Peter : He ſaith, he (and they with him) ſaw CHRIST'S Glorie, and heard the voice from Heaven, in the Holy Mount : What then ? After both theſe, Audivimus and vidimus (both ſenſes) he comes to this, Habemus autem firmiorem; &c. We have a more ſure Word of Prophecie than both theſe : Firmiorem, a more ſure, a more cleere, than them both. And, Si hîc legimus (for, legimus is vidimus,) If here we read it written, it is enough to ground our faith, and let the ſtarre goe. 2 Pet. 1. 17. Verſe 19.

And yet (to end this point;) Both theſe, the ſtarre, and the Prophecie, they are but circumfuſa Lux : Without, both. Beſides theſe, there muſt be a Light Within, in the eye : Elſe, (we know) for all them, nothing will be ſeene. And, that muſt come from Him, and the enlightening of His Spirit. Take this for a Rule : No knowing of Ejus, abſque Eo; of His, without Him, whoſe it is. Neither, of the ſtarre, without Him, that created it; Nor, of the Prophecie, without Him, that inſpired it. But, this third comming too; He ſending the light of His Spirit, within, into their minds; they then ſaw cleerely, This, the ſtarre; now the Time; He the Child, that this day was borne.

He, that ſent theſe two without, ſent alſo this third within : and then, it was Vidimus indeed. The light of the ſtarre, in their eyes, the Word of Prophecie in their eares, the Beame of His Spirit in their hearts; theſe three made up a full vidimus. And, ſo much for vidimus ſtellam Ejus, the Occaſion of their Comming.

Now, to Venimus, their comming it ſelfe. And it followes well. For, it is not a ſtarre only, but a Load-ſtarre : And, whither ſhould ſtella Ejus ducere, but ad Eum? whither lead us, but to Him, whoſe the ſtarre is ? The ſtarre, to the Starr's Maſter. 3 Their Comming: Venimus

All this while we have beene at dicentes, ſaying and ſeeing : Now we ſhall come to Facientes, ſee them doe ſome-what upon it. It is not ſaying, nor ſeeing will ſerve Saint Iames : He will call, and be ſtill calling for Oſtende mihi, ſhew me thy Faith by ſome Worke. And, well may he be allowed to call for it; this Day : It is the day of Vidimus, Appearing, Being ſeene. You have ſeene His ſtarre; Let Him now ſee your ſtarre, another while. And, ſo they doe. Make your Faith to be ſeene : So it is : Their Faith, in the ſtepps of their Faith. And, ſo was Abraham's, firſt, by comming forth of his Countrey; As, theſe here doe, and ſo walke in the ſtepps of the faith of Abraham; doe his firſt worke. Iam. 2 18. Rom. 4 12.

It is not commended, to ſtand gazing up into Heaven too long, Not on CHRIST Himſelfe aſcending : Much leſſe on His ſtarre. For, they ſate not ſtill gazing on the ſtarre. Their Vidimus begat Venimus; their ſeeing made them come; come a great journey. Venimus is ſoone ſayd; but a ſhort Word : But, many a wide and weary ſteppe they made, before they could come to ſay Venimus, Lo, here we are come; Come, and at our journeys end. To looke a little on it. In this their Comming, we conſider, 1. Firſt, the diſtance of the Place, they came from. It was not hard by, as the ſhepherds (but a ſtep to Bethlehem, over the fields :) This was riding many a hundred miles, and coſt them many a dayes journey. 2. Secondly, we conſider the Way, that they came : If it be pleaſant, or plaine and eaſy : For, if it be, it is ſo much the better. 1 This was nothing pleaſant; for, through deſarts : all the way waſte and deſolate. 2 Nor (ſecondly) eaſy neither : For, over the Rocks & craggs of both Arabies (ſpecially Petræa) their journy lay. 3. Yet, if ſafe : But it was not; but exceeding dangerous, as lying through the middeſt of the Black Tents of Kedar, a Nation of Theeves and Cut-throats; To paſſe over the hills of Robbers; Infamous then, and infamous to this day. No paſſing, without great troop, or Convoy. 4. Laſt, we conſider the time of their comming, the ſeaſon of the yeare. It was no ſummer Progreſſe. A cold comming they had of it, at this time of the yeare; juſt the worſt time of the yeare, to take a journey, and ſpecially a long journey, in. The waies deep, the weather ſharp, the dayes ſhort, the ſun fartheſt off in ſolſtitio brumali, the very Acts 1. 11. Cant. 1. 4.

dead of Winter. Venimus, We are come, if that be one; Venimus, We are (now) come, come at this time, that (ſure) is another.

And theſe difficulties they overcame, of a wearisome, irkſome, troubleſome, dangerous, unſeaſonable journey: And for all this, they came. And, came it cheerefully, and quickly; As appeareth, by the ſpeed they made. It was but Vidimus, Venimus, with them; They ſaw, and they came: No ſooner ſaw, but they ſet out preſently. So, as upon the firſt appearing of the Starre (as it might be, laſt night) they knew, it was Balaam's ſtarre; it called them away, they made ready ſtraight to begin their journey this morning. A ſigne, they were highly conceited of His Birth, beleeved ſome great matter of it, that they tooke all theſe paines, made all this haſte, that they might be there to worſhip Him, with all the poſſible ſpeed they could. Sorrie for nothing ſo much, as that they could not be there ſoone enough, with the very firſt, to doe it even this day, the day of His Birth. All conſidered, there is more in Venimus than ſhewes at the firſt ſight. It was not for nothing, it was ſaid (in the firſt Verſe) Ecce Venerunt; their comming hath an Ecce on it: it well deſerves it.

And wee, what ſhould wee have done? Sure, theſe men of the Eaſt ſhall riſe in Mat. 8. 11. Iudgement againſt the men of the Weſt, that is, us: and their faith, againſt ours, in this point. With them, it was but Vidimus, Venimus: With us, it would have beene but Veniemus at moſt. Our faſhion is, to ſee and ſee againe, before we ſtirre a foot: Specially, if it be to the worſhip of CHRIST. Come ſuch a Iourney, at ſuch a time? No: but fairely have put it off to the Spring of the yeare, till the dayes longer, and the waies fairer, and the weather warmer; till better travelling to CHRIST. Our Epiphanie would (ſure) have fallen in Eaſter-weeke at the ſooneſt.

But then, for the diſtance, deſolateneſſe, tediouſneſſe, and the reſt, any of them were enough to marre our Venimus quite. It muſt be no great way (firſt) we muſt come: we love not that. Well fare the Shepherds yet, they came but hard by: Rather like them than the Magi. Nay, not like them neither. For, with us, the neerer (lightly) the further off: Our Proverbe is (you know) The neerer the Church the further from GOD.

Nor, it muſt not be through no Deſart, over no Petræa. If rugged, or uneven the way; if the weather ill diſpoſed; If any never ſo little danger, it is enough to ſtay us. To CHRIST we cannot travell, but weather and way and all muſt be faire. If not, no journey, but ſit ſtill and ſee further. As indeed, all our Religion is rather Vidimus, a Contemplation, than Venimus, a Motion, or ſtirring to doe ought.

But when we doe it, we muſt be allowed leaſure. Ever, Veniemus; never Venimus: Ever, comming; never, come. We love to make no very great haſte. To other things, perhaps: Not to Adorare, the Place of the worſhip of GOD. Why ſhould we? CHRIST, is no wild-cat. What talke you of twelve dayes? And it be fortie dayes hence, ye ſhall be ſure to finde His Mother and Him; She cannot be churched till then: What needs ſuch haſte? The truth is, wee conceipt Him and His Birth but ſlenderly, and our haſte is even thereafter. But, if we be at that point, we muſt be out of this Venimus: they like enough to leave us behind. Beſt, get us a new Chriſt-maſſe in September: we are not like to come to CHRIST at this Feaſt. Enough, for venimus.

4 Their Enquiry. Vbi eſt?

But, what is Venimus without Invenimus? And, when they come, they hit not on Him, at firſt. No more muſt we thinke, as ſoone as ever we be come, to find Him ſtraight. They are faigne to come to their Vbi eſt? We muſt now looke backe to that. For, though it ſtand before in the Verſe, here is the right place of it. They ſaw before they came; and came, before they asked: Asked, before they found; and found, before they worſhipped. Betweene Venimus (their comming) and Adorare (their worſhipping) there, is the true place of [Dicentes, Vbi eſt?]

Where (firſt) we note a double uſe of their Dicentes, theſe Wiſe men had: 1 As to manifeſt what they knew, Natus eſt, that He is borne; ſo, to confeſſe and aske what they knew not, the Place, Where. We, to have the like.

2 Secondly, ſet downe this: That, to find where He is, we muſt learne of theſe,

to

to aske Where He is: Which we full little ſet our ſelves to do. If we ſtumble on Him, ſo it is: But, for any asking we trouble not our ſelves: but ſit ſtill (as we ſay) and let Nature worke; And ſo let Grace too; and ſo, for us, it ſhall. I wote well, it is ſaid (in a place of Eſai) He was found à non quærentibus, of ſome that ſought Him not, never asked, Vbi eſt? But, it is no good holding by that place. It was their good hap that ſo did. But, truſt not to it: it is not every bodies caſe, that. It is better advice, you ſhall read in the Pſalme, Hæc eſt generatio querentium: There is a Generation of them that ſeeke Him. Of which, theſe were: And, of that Generation let us be. Regularly, there is no Promiſe of Invenietis, but to quærite; of Finding, but to ſuch as ſeek. It is not ſafe, to preſume, to find Him otherwiſe. Eſa.65.1. Pſal.10.6.

I thought there had been ſmall uſe (now) of [Vbi eſt?] Yet there is: Except wee hold the ubiquitie, That CHRIST is ubi non? any where. But, He is not ſo. CHRIST hath his ubi, His proper Place, where He is to bee found: And if you miſſe of that, you miſſe of Him. And well may we miſſe (ſaith CHRIST Himſelfe) there are ſo many will take upon them, to tell us Where: And tell us of ſo many ubi's: Ecce hîc, Look you Here He is; Ecce illîc, Nay then, there. In deſerto, in the deſart: Nay, In penetralibus, in ſuch a privie Conventicle, you ſhall be ſure of Him. And yet, He (ſaith He Himſelfe) in none of them all. There is then (yet) place for [ubi eſt?] I ſpeake not of His Naturall body, but of His Myſticall: That, is CHRIST too. Mat.24.23.

How ſhall we then do? Where ſhall we get this [Where] reſolved? Where theſe did. They ſaid it to many, and oft, but gat no anſwer, till they had got together a Convocation of Scribes; and they reſolved them of CHRIST's ubi. For, they (in the Eaſt) were nothing ſo wiſe, or well ſeen, as wee (in the Weſt) are now growen. Wee need call no Scribes together, and get them tell us, Where: Every Artiſan hath a whole Synode of Scribes in his braine, and can tell Where CHRIST is, better than any learned man of them all. Yet, theſe were Wiſe men: Beſt, learne, where they did.

And how did the Scribes reſolve it them? Out of Mica. As before; to the ſtar they joyne Balaam's Prophecie: So now againe, to His Orietur (that ſuch a one ſhould be borne) they had put Mica's [et tu Bethlehem,] the Place of His Birth. Still helping, and giving light (as it were) to the Light of Heaven, by a more cleere light, the Light of the Sanctuarie.

Thus then, to doe. And, to doe it our ſelves: and not ſeeke CHRIST, per alium; Set others about it (as Herod did theſe) and ſit ſtill our ſelves. For ſo, we may hap never find Him, no more than he did.

And now we have found Where, what then? It is neither in ſeeking nor finding, Venimus nor Invenimus: the End of all, the Cauſe of all is, in the laſt words, Adorare Eum, to Worſhip Him. That, is all in all: And without it, all our ſeeing, comming, ſeeking, and finding is to no purpoſe. The Scribes, they could tell, and did tell, Where Hee was; but, were never the neerer for it: For, they worſhipped Him not. For this End, to ſeeke Him.

This is acknowledged: Herod (in effect) ſaid as much. He would know, where He were (faine;) and, if they will bring him word where, he will come too and worſhip Him, that he will. None of that worſhip. If he find Him, his Worſhipping will prove Worrying: As did appeare, by a ſort of ſilly poore Lambes, that he worryed, when he could not have his will on CHRIST. Thus he, at His Birth. Ver.16.

And, at His death, the other Herod, he ſought Him too: but it was, that he and his Soldiers might make them-ſelves ſport with Him. Such ſeeking there is other while. And ſuch worſhipping; As they, in the Iudgment Hall, worſhipped Him, with Ave Rex, and then gave Him a bob blind-fold. The Worlds worſhip of Him, for the moſt part. Luc.23.11. Ioh.19.3.

But, we may be bold to ſay, Herod was a fox. Theſe meane as they ſay: To worſhip Him they come, and worſhip Him they will. Will they ſo? Be they well adviſed, what they promiſe, before they know, whether they ſhall find Him in a worſhipfull taking, or no? For, full little know they, Where, and in what caſe, they ſhall find Him. What if in a ſtable, layd there in a manger, and the reſt ſuitable to it; in as poore Luc.13.32.

and pitifull a plight as ever was any: More like to be abhorred than adored of ſuch Perſons? Will they be as good as their word(trow?) Will they not ſtep back at the ſight, repent themſelves of their journey, and wiſh themſelves at home againe? But, ſo find Him, and ſo finding Him, worſhip Him for all that? If they will, verily then, Great is their Faith. This, the cleereſt beame of all.

Mat. 12.42. The Queene of the South, (who was a figure of theſe Kings of the Eaſt) ſhe came as great a journey, as theſe. But when ſhe came, ſhe found a King indeed, King Salomon in all his Royaltie. Saw a Glorious King, and a Glorious Court about him. Saw him, and heard him: Tried him, with many hard queſtions, received ſatisfaction of them all. This, was worth her comming. Weigh, what ſhe found, and what theſe here: As poore and unlikely a birth, as could be, ever to prove a King, or any great matter. No ſight, to comfort them; Nor a word, for which they any whit the wiſer: Nothing worth their travell. Weigh theſe together, and great odds will be found betweene her faith, and theirs. Theirs, the greater farre.

Well, they will take Him, as they find Him: And, all this notwithſtanding, worſhip Him for all that. The ſtarre ſhall make amends for the Manger: And, for ſtella Ejus, they will diſpenſe with Eum.

And, what is it to Worſhip? Some great matter (ſure,) it is, that Heaven and Earth, the ſtarres and the Prophets (thus) do but ſerve to lead them, and conduct us to. For, all (we ſee) ends in Adorare: Scriptura & Mundus ad hoc ſunt, ut colatur qui creavit, & adoretur qui inſpiravit; The Scripture and World are but to this end, that He, that created the one, and inſpired the other, might be but worſhipped. Such reckoning did theſe ſeeme to make of it, here. Act. 8.27. And ſuch, the Great Treaſurer of the Queen Candace. Theſe came from the Mountaines in the Eaſt; He, from the uttermoſt part of Æthiopia came, and came for no other end, but only this, To worſhip: and, when they had done that, home againe. Tanti eſt Adorare. Worth the while, worth our comming, if (comming) we doe but that; but worſhip, and nothing elſe. And ſo I would have men accompt of it.

To tell you, what it is in particular, I muſt put you over to the XI. Verſe, where it is ſet downe, what they did, when they worſhipped. It is ſet downe in two acts πεσοκυνεῖν, and πεσοφέρειν; Falling downe, and Offering. Thus did they; thus wee to doe: Wee to doe the like, when wee will Worſhip. Theſe two are all: and more than theſe, we find not.

We can worſhip GOD but three wayes: We have but three things, to worſhip Him withall: 1 The Soule, He hath inſpired; 2 The Body, He hath ordained us; 3 And, the Worldly Goods, He hath vouchſafed to bleſſe us withall. We, to worſhip Him, with all, ſeeing there is but one reaſon for all.

If He breathed into us our Soule, but framed not our Body (but ſome other did that) Neither bow your knee, nor uncover your head, but keepe on your hatts, and ſit even as you doe hardly. But, if he have framed that Body of yours, and every member of it, let him have the honour both of head, and knee, and every member elſe.

Againe, if it be not He, that gave us our worldly goods, but ſome bodie elſe; what He gave not, that with-hold from Him, and ſpare not. But, if all come from Him, all to returne to Him: If He ſend all, to be worſhipped withall. And this (in good ſooth) is Rom 12.1, but Rationabile obſequium (as the Apoſtle calleth it.) No more, than Reaſon would, wee ſhould worſhip Him withall.

Elſe, if all our worſhip be inward onely; with our hearts, and not our hatts (as ſome fondly imagine;) wee give Him but one of three: Wee put Him to His Thirds; Bid Him, Be content with that, He gets no more but inward worſhip. That is out of the Text, quite. For, though (I doubt not, but) theſe here performed that alſo; yet, here it is not. Saint Matthew mentions it not: It is not to bee ſeene: No Vidimus on it. And the Text is a Vidimus; and, of a Starre; that is, of an Outward viſible worſhip, to bee ſeene of all. There is a Vidimus upon the worſhip of the Bodie, it may be ſeene: Procidentes. Let us ſee you fall downe. So is there, upon the worſhip with our worldly goods, that may bee ſeene and felt: Offerentes. Let us ſee, whether, and what you offer.

With both which (no leſſe, than with the ſoule) GOD is to be worſhipped. Glorifie GOD with your bodies, for they are GOD's (ſaith the Apoſtle.) Honour GOD with your ſubſtance, for He hath bleſſed your ſtore (ſaith SALOMON.) It is the Precept of a Wiſe King; of one, there: It is the Practice of more than one, of theſe three, here. Specially, now: For, CHRIST hath now a bodie; for which, to doe Him worſhip with our bodies. And, now, He was made poore, to make us rich: and ſo, offerentes will doe well, comes very fit. 1 Cor. 6. 20. Pro. 3. 9.

To enter further into theſe two, would be too long; (and indeed, they be not in our Verſe here;) And ſo, for ſome other treatiſe, at ſome other time.

There now remaines nothing, but to include our ſelves, and beare our part with them, and with the Angels, and all who this day adored Him.

This was the Load-ſtar of the Magi: And, what were they? Gentiles: So are we. But, if it muſt be ours, then we are to goe with them: Vade, & fac ſimiliter, Go, and do likewiſe. It is Stella Gentium; but idem agentium: The Gentiles ſtarre; but ſuch Gentiles, as overtake theſe and keep company with them. In their [Dicentes,] Confeſſing their faith freely: In their [Vidimus,] Grounding it throughly: in their [Venimus,] Haſting to come to Him ſpeedily: In their [Vbi eſt?] Enquiring Him out diligently: And in their [Adorare Eum] worſhipping Him devoutly. Per omnia doing as theſe did: Worſhipping, and thus worſhipping; Celebrating, and thus celebrating the Feaſt of His BIRTH. The Application. Luc. 10. 37.

We cannot ſay, Vidimus ſtellam: The ſtarre is gone long ſince; Not (now) to bee ſeene. Yet (I hope) for all that, that Venimus adorare, we be come thither to worſhip. It will be the more acceptable, if not ſeeing it, we worſhip (though.) It is enough, we read of it in the Text; wee ſee it, there. And indeed (as I ſaid;) It kills not for the ſtarre in the firmament, if the ſame Day-ſtarre be riſen in our hearts, that was in theirs; and the ſame beames of it to be ſeene, all five. For then, we have our part in it, no leſſe; nay, full out as much as they: And, it will bring us, whither it brought them, to CHRIST. Who, at His ſecond appearing in glorie, ſhall call forth theſe Wiſe men, and all that have enſued the ſteppes of their Faith; and that upon the reaſon ſpecified in the Text: For, I have ſeene their Starre ſhining and ſhewing forth it ſelfe by the like beames: And, as they came to worſhip me, ſo am I come to doe them worſhip. A Venite, then; for a Venimus, now. Their ſtarre I have ſeene, and give them a place above, among the ſtarres. They fell downe: I will lift them up, and exalt them. And, as they offered to me; ſo am I come to beſtow on them, and to reward them, with the endleſſe joy, and bliſſe, of my Heavenly Kingdome. To which, &c.

A SERMON PREACHED

before the KINGS MAIESTIE, at White-hall, on Thurſday, the XXV. of December, A. D. MDCXXIII. being CHRISTMAS day.

EPHES. I. Ver. X.

In diſpenſatione plenitudinis temporum, inſtaurare omnia, in CHRISTO, quæ in cœlis, & quæ in terra ſunt, in Ipſo.

That in the diſpenſation of the fulneſſe of the times, He might gather together into one all things, both which are in heaven, and which are in earth, even in CHRIST.

Ioh. 7. 6.

SEeing the Text is of Seaſons, it would not be out of ſeaſon it ſelfe. And though it be never out of ſeaſon to ſpeake of CHRIST, yet even CHRIST hath His ſeaſons. Your time is alwaies (ſaith He, Iohn VII.) So is not mine; I have my ſeaſons. One of which ſeaſons is this, the ſeaſon of His Birth, wherby all were recapitulate in heaven and earth: Which is the ſeaſon of the Text. And ſo, this, a Text of the ſeaſon.

There is (for the moſt part) in each Text ſome one Predominant word. That word (in this) is the word ἀνακεφαλαιώσασθαι, heere turned gathering together into one againe. To know the nature and full force of it, we may conſider it three waies: 1 As it is properly taken: 2 As it is extended: 3 As it is derived.

Pſal. 40. 7.

1. As it is taken properly. So, it ſignifies to make the foot of an account. Wee call it the foot, becauſe we write it below at the foot: They of old writ theirs above over the head, and ſo called it κεφάλαιον: In capite libri Scriptum eſt de me: the Summe in the top.

2. As it is extended. So, it is the ſhort recapitulation of a long Chapter; the compendium of a booke or of ſome diſcourſe. Theſe are all like the foot of an Account, and are uſually called, the Summe of all that hath beene ſaid.

3. As

3 As it is derived: So ſhall we have the native ſenſe of it. It comes of κεφαλαῖον, and that of κεφαλὴ (Greeke for a head.) Beſt expreſſed in the word recapitulate; that is, to reduce all to a head. Each of theſe is a gathering together into one (as, we read.) Which of the three, you take; nay, take them all three, you cannot doe amiſſe. They be all true: all tend to edifie. CHRIST is the 1 Summe of our account; 2 The Shutting up of our diſcourſe; 3 The Head of the body myſticall, whereto this gathering (here) is. We ſhall make no good audit without Him: no, nor good Apologie. Whatſoever be the premiſſes, with CHRIST we muſt conclude: As we doe the yeare with Chriſtmaſſe, ſo conclude all with in CHRISTO. Coloſ. 1. 28. Epheſ. 4. 15. 16

The old Diviſion is---- Vt res, ita tempora rerum. Here it holds: Here are both Seaſons, and Things: Things, for ſeaſons; and Seaſons, for things. The Diviſion

Two parts heere be: 1 Seaſons, firſt; Seaſons, more than one. 2 Heere is a fulneſſe of them: 3 Heere is a diſpenſation of that fulneſſe: 4 And that by GOD: That Hee (that is, GOD) That in the diſpenſation of the fulneſſe of times, He might. This is the firſt part. I.

The Things. For firſt, here are all things: Things in heaven, Things on earth; All, in both. 2. Of theſe, a Collection or gathering them all together: or rather a Recollection or gathering them together againe. 3. A gathering them all into one: All into one κεφαλαῖον, one Summe; Or all to one κεφαλὴ one head: And theſe two are one; and that one is CHRIST. II.

You obſerve, that as the things anſwer the ſeaſons, and the Seaſons them; So doth the fulneſſe anſwer the gathering, and the gathering, it. 1. To fill the ſeaſons, to make a fulneſſe of them, here is a gathering. 2. A gathering, whereof? Of all in heaven, and all on earth (a great gathering ſure, and able to fill the ſeaſons full up to the brimme.) 3. But, this is not a gathering at the firſt hand, but a gathering againe; that is, a new, at ſecond hand. 4. A gathering, whereto? To one: One, either one ſumme, or one head (both are in the body of the word:) and theſe two are one, and that one is CHRIST. 5. A gathering, how? (that is in the word too:) By way of contracting or recapitulation. 6. And when? When GOD diſpenſed it; and that is at CHRIST's Birth. 7. Now laſt, what we are the better by this gathering, what fruit we gather by or from it, what our ſhare is in this Summe, which is Summa dividenda. 8. And then how we may be the better for it: if we divide, as GOD, and when GOD did it. 9. As GOD; gather things in heaven, firſt: 10. When GOD; and that is, this ſeaſon of the yeare, the gathering time, with GOD, and with us. So ſhall we diſpenſe the ſeaſon well.

Find the things, they will bring you to the ſeaſon: find the fulneſſe of things, you ſhall find the fulneſſe of Seaſons. Find the gathering, you ſhall find the fulneſſe: find CHRIST, and you ſhall find the gathering (for, the gathering is full and whole, in CHRIST.) So, upon the point find CHRIST, and find all. And this is the firſt day, we can find Him; for this day, was He borne, and ſo firſt to be found by us.

I.

WE have heretofore dealt with the * fulneſſe of time: and now are we to deale with the fulneſſe of Seaſon. Time and ſeaſon are two, and have in all tongues, two different words to ſhew, they differ. In Hebrew: עת & זמן, In Greeke, χρόνος, and καιρός: In Latine, Tempus and tempeſtivum.

1 Tempora, the Seaſons.
* At Chriſtmaſſe. A.D. 1609.

And, differ they doe as much, as a time, and a good time. It is time alway; all the yeare long: So is it not Seaſon, but when the good time is. Time is taken at large, any time: Seaſon, not ſo; but is applied to that with which it ſuites, or for which it ſerves beſt. Here, it is applied to gathering: the Seaſon of gathering.

Theſe ſeaſons be καιρῶν in the plurall: for, --- Vt res, ita tempora rerum; as the things to be gathered are many, ſo are the Seaſons, wherein they are to be gathered, many likewiſe. Each, his ſeverall ſeaſon, to be gathered in.

2 Their fulneſſe.

Now, as the things (Res) have their Autumne of maturitie: So (tempora) the Seaſons have their fulneſſe: And, when the things are ripe, and ready to be gathered, then is the Seaſon full.

3 The Diſpenſation.

Now, of theſe ſeaſons and their fulneſſe, there is a diſpenſation, an Oeconomia (the word in the Text) which is a word of Husbandry; a great part wherof conſiſteth in the skill of Seaſons; of taking them, when they come, allotting the thing to the ſeaſon, and the ſeaſon to it.

4 The Diſpenſer, GOD.
Pſa.145.15,16

Which diſpenſation is here aſcribed to GOD: That He, (that is) that GOD in whoſe hands our times are (ſaith the Pſalme) and our ſeaſons, both. He that can make them full, by giving us kindly ſeaſons; or empty, by making them unſeaſonable: and having made them full, is to diſpoſe of them of very right. There is none of theſe but is ſenſible in the courſe of the yeare, in things upon earth.

But, are there ſeaſons for the things on earth and their fulneſſe, and are there not alſo ſeaſons for the things in heaven, and for the filling of them? All, for releefe of the bodily wants here below; none, for the ſupplie of Spirituall neceſſities above? All, for the body, and never a ſeaſon for the Soule? If we allow them to the World, ſhall we not to the Church, the ἀνακεφαλαίωσις or abridgement of the world? If it be ſenſible in the naturall things; (though not ſo eaſily diſcerned, yet) it is as certaine in the maine revolution of Annus magnus, the great periodicall yeare of the worlds endurance.

It can never enter into any man, to thinke, that the great Oeconomus or Steward of this great houſhold (the world) ſhould ſo farre forget Himſelfe, but, if for all matters He had appointed a ſeaſon, then for the greateſt matter: If, for every purpoſe under heaven; then, for the higheſt purpoſe of all, that (as we ſee) concerneth al the things in heaven, and earth, both. Above Salus populi (this) Salus mundi, the ſaving the whole world. Shall not theſe have their ſeaſons, and the ſeaſons their fulneſſe there, and that fulneſſe the due diſpenſation (of all other) moſt worthy of GOD, the greateſt worke, of the greateſt perſon? Set this downe then (to beginne with:) There are ſeaſons; as in our common yeare (of twelve moneths:)

2 Pet.3.8.

So, in the great yeare, whereof, every day is a yeare (by Daniel's) nay, a thouſand yeare (by Saint Peter's calculation.)

Mar.4.28.

And, which be the ſeaſons, and when, in the common yeare? Our SAVIOVR ſets them downe (Mar. IV.) 1. The ſeaſon, when the earth bringeth forth the blade; 2. When, the ſtalke; 3. When, the eare; 4. When, the full corne, in the eare. And, when the eare is full, and full ripe, the ſeaſon is full: then, is the ſeaſon of fulneſſe, the fulneſſe of Seaſon. Then, the reaper fills his hand, and he that bindeth up the ſheaves, his boſome: Then, are the Barnes filled with plenty; and the Preſſes run over with new wine. And, when all is full, then, to gathering we goe.

Such like ſeaſons doe we finde in Anno magno: 1 The time of Nature, all in the blade: 2 Of Moſes, in the Stalke: 3 Of the Prophets, in the eare: 4 And, when the full corne? When, but at this great gathering here mentioned. When all in heaven, and all in earth gathered, that (I thinke) was the fulneſſe of things (Plenitudo rerum;) and the fulneſſe of Seaſons (Plenitudo temporum) may be allowed for it.

II.

This ſets us over to the ſecond part, from the Seaſons to the things; from the fulneſſe of Seaſons, to the gathering of things. And firſt, whereof, of what things? Of τὰ πάντα, even all. All: And (to ſhew the extent of it) ſubdivided, into all in heaven, all in earth: and that (I trow) is All. It was not amiſſe, he ſhould thus ſever them, and expreſſe things in heaven by name: Elſe, we ſhould little have thought of gathering things there ſo high. No farther than earth, we: There, is all our gathering; and there onely.

1 Res: the things.

Coloſ.3.1,2.

The Apoſtle points up to Heaven (Surſum corda) to lift up our hearts, to ſet our affections on things there, above; to gather them. There is a gathering of them, alſo.

Of which gathering into one, I know not, what the things in heaven have; the things in earth (I am ſure) have good cauſe to be glad. In heaven is all good, and nothing but good. In earth, to ſay the leaſt, there is much evill. Yet, upon the reckoning,

Heaven

Heaven is like to come by the losse: we (on earth) are sensibly gainers by it. It is a good hearing for us, that both these shall be thus gathered together. For, if heaven and earth be so gathered, it is, that heaven may advance earth higher; and no meaning, that earth should draw it downe hither. Magis dignum semper ad se trahit minus dignum, is the old rule.

But well: betweene them both, here is a great gathering toward; well expressed by the Apostle, in the termes of a Summe. For, it is Summa Summarum, a summe indeed; Heaven and earth, and the fulnesse of them both. 2 The gathering

All these to be gathered: and well. Gathering, GOD favours: for it ends in Vnitie, To gather into one: And Vnitie GOD loves, Himselfe being principalis Vnitas. GOD favours it sure; Himselfe is the Gatherer. Scattering GOD favours not: that tends to division, and division upon division. Gathering is good for us: Vnitie preserves; division destroyes. Divisum est (be it house, or be it kingdome) ever ends in desolabitur. GOD delights not in destruction, would have none to perish. The kite, he scatters: The hen, how faine would she gather! Mat.12.25. Ezek.33.11. 2 Pet.3.9.

But stay a while, and take with us what kinde of gathering? It is not κεφαλαίωσις, a gathering; but ἀνακεφαλαίωσις, a gathering together againe: (We must not lose ἀνὰ, there is force in it.) It is not a Collection, but a Recollection. Re imports, it is a new Collection againe; the second time. You see it, in re-call, re-turne, re-duce; that is, to call, turne, bring back againe. 3 Gathering againe.

Now our Rule is: Ἀνὰ ever presupposeth ἀπὸ; ἀνακεφαλαίωσις presupposeth ἀποκεφαλαίωσις: that is, a returning to, implies a departing from: a gathering together againe, a scattering in sunder before: a dispensation, a dissipation. So, a dissipation, a departure, a scattering there had beene.

Yet one degree more, ἀπὸ (that is, from) ever implies σὺν, that is, a former being with. One cannot be said to be gone from, that was never with; or to fall out, that was never in: One cannot be said to be so againe, that was never so before. So then, together we were first, and in sunder wee fell after. Which falling in sunder required an ἀνὰ, to bring us together againe; to restore us to that the second time, that we had before lost, to our former estate. It is Saint Peter's word [restoring] the same with S. Paul's [gathering together againe] here. Act.3.21.

Now these three set forth unto us our threefold estate: 1 Together (σὺν) our first Originall, which we had in Adam, while he stood with GOD together. 2 In sunder (ἀπὸ) there came our miserie, by Adam's not keeping his first estate, but Scattering from GOD. 3 But then comes ἀνὰ about, and makes all well againe, by bringing us where we were at the first. There was a former Capitulation; The articles were broken: Then came this Recapitulation (here) anew: An account was cast, but it was mis-cast; and so it is here cast new over againe.

But, when all is done, Ἀνὰ is it, we must hold by. The first is gone: All perished, by being Scattered from. All must be recovered, by being gathered to againe. Our Separation, our ruine; Our Reparation, our Ἀνὰ, our gathering againe: And not ours alone, but Salus mundi, of all in heaven, all in earth.

But this we may see (by the way) 1 what case, all were in: 2 what case, all are in still, that lie loose and ungathered, and whom Ἀνὰ hath not recollected againe.

We see, what, and how gathered: Now (quo?) the next point is, whereto? Into one. Everie thing, that is gathered, is so. But, there is more ones, than one. One heape, as of stones: One flock, as of sheepe: One pile, as of the materials of a building. All are good: but to take the word in the native sense, the gathering, here, is either to one κεφαλαῖον, one Summe (as, many numbers:) Or (to go neerer) to one κεφαλὴ, one Head (as many members;) and, that is it, the Apostle pursueth to the Chapters end. Both these (Summe, and Head) are in the body of the word κεφαλαῖον; and they both serve, and suit well. The body: the Head is (as it were) the Summe of all; all 1 sense, 2 motion, 4 Into one.

tion, 3 ſpeech, 4 underſtanding, all recapitulate into the Head. This (of Head, or Summe) fitteth it beſt. For, (to ſpeake properly) many heapes, flockes, piles there may bee: Head there can be but one. De ratione capitis eſt, unum eſſe. And ſo, of a Summe: but one true Summe, were there never ſo many, ſo diverſe waies caſt.

So then, into one, that is not enough: It is not co-adunation will ſerve. It is recapitulation, and, in that word, there is caput: It is ἀνακεφαλαίωσις, and in that word there is κεφαλή, ſuch a reducing all to one, as that, one be the Head. A headleſſe gathering, the Apoſtle cannot skill of. And indeed, ſay there were an intire body, and every member in his right place, and all ſtrictly knit together; yet, if the head ſhould hap to bee away, as good the members all in ſunder, for, all were to no purpoſe. So; a Head, or nothing.

This gathering then (you ſee) is to the chiefe Member; to the Member, that weares the Crowne. Thither, upward, the true gathering goes. There is an Vnion downwards; (as, of Samſon's Foxes, that were together by the tailes;) That, is not the right: but, by the head. The oxen, that plough, are joyned together by the head: The foxes, that are tied by the tailes, they ſet all on fire. The Vnitie of the head GOD ſend us: That, is the true Vnitie.

Iud.15.4.

And yet are we not where we ſhould. We may gather upward too, and make a head, and not the right head. That, to a head, is not enough, if it fall out to be a wrong head (ſuppoſe Romelie's Sonne.) Humano capiti, &c. doe but paint (ſaith the Poet) any body, with a wrong head, it will but move laughter and ſcorne. The right, the owne head it would be. A ſtrange head will not ſuite, nor doe us any ſtead. The right head, then.

Eſay 7.9.

And, which is the right head? He adds: Recapitulati, in CHRISTO: It is CHRIST. There (lo) is the right head, now. To that, let all gather.

And now we are arrived at CHRIST, we are, where we ſhould; our gathering is at the beſt. All in heaven; All in earth: gathered together: together againe: Againe into one: One Summe, whereof CHRIST is the Foot: One bodie wherof CHRIST is the Head. Gather then, and be gathered to Him: Gather then, and be gathered with Him: He that gathereth not with Him, ſcattereth.

Luk.11.23.

And ſo were all, all ſcattered without CHRIST; till He came with his ἀνὰ, and got them againe together. The ſeaſons were (all) empty; The things, all on heapes.

Gen.3.24. Things in heaven, from things in earth; Angells, with drawne ſwords at men: Things on earth, from things in heaven; Men, at but the ſight of an Angell, ready to fall downe dead. The members, from the head; the head, from the members: The members one from another: Neither union with the head, nor among themſelves. Peccata veſtra, it was ſinne, that divided betweene GOD and them; and, divided once and divided ever, divided in ſemper diviſibilia, till they were quite paſt all diviſion: No longer divided (now) but even ſcattered. The caſe of the world, then.

Ier.5.25.

Scattered, in point of Religion: Gods ſcattered all over; as many Gods as Cities: All the hoſtes of heaven; all the beaſts and creeping things of the earth.

Ier.2.28.

Scattered, in point of moralitie, or morall Philoſophie: I know not, how many ſcattered opinions Auguſtine reckons, de Summo Bono, the chiefe poynt of all.

The Iewes ſcattered from the Gentiles, and the Gentiles from the Iewes: A maine Wall betweene.

Ephes.2.14.

The Gentiles ſcattered from themſelves groſſely; all, in fractions, they. Nothing of a body; Never a head: And yet many heads, but never a right one among them all.

No, not the Iewes themſelves: For, the Tabernacle of DAVID was then downe and the ruines of it ſcattered into many Sects (as the Prophet AMOS complaines.) And Saint IAMES alleageth it out of him, (*Act.*XV.) In a word: the whole world then was but a maſſe of errours, a Chaos of confuſion, Tohu, and Bohu: empty and voide of all ſaving grace or truth. Well likened, to them that were ſcattered at the tower of Babel, Amos 9.11.

Gen.11.8.

Babel, where no man understood another: Or to the people that were scatttered all over the Land of Egypt, to gather stubble, to pick up Strawes. All (then) wandering hither and thither, and seeking death, in the error of their life. By all which, you see, what need their was of this gathering, this ἀνακεφαλαίωσις. Exod. 5.12 Wisd. 1.12.

Now then, if, for the divisions of Reuben, there were great thoughts of heart (as it is in Debora's song) for but one Tribe scattered from the rest; shall there be no thought or course taken for these; such, so generall, so many (not divisions, but plaine dispersions) scatterings all abroad? Great pitie, that all these should lie thus loose and ungathered, as if they were not worth the taking up. He that (in Ioan. VI.) tooke order for the broken meat, for the fragments, willed them to be gathered, ἵνα μὴ τι ἀπόληται, that nothing might be lost, no not of them; He (certainely) were no good Oeconomus, if He would let all these be lost for lack of gathering. Iud. 5.15. Ioh. 6.12.

But could not this gathering be absque CHRISTO, in some other? It appeares, no. Seasons there were more than one, but all empty: proffers were made in them, but nothing full, nor any thing neere full. A season of the Law unwritten: Then came the Patriarchs. But, they had much adoe, to keepe themselves from scattering: they gathered none.

A season of the Law written. Then, the Priests and Levites: but, the gathering little the fuller, for them.

Then came all the Prophets: To no great purpose they neither: Some few Proselytes they made; that was all. But in the end, all these (as they in the Parable of the wounded man) passed by, looked on him, but let him lie: Little was done, till the good Samaritane came. The things in heaven and earth (the generalitie of them, so) in not much better case for all these, could not be recapitulate, in the Patriarchs, MOSES, the Prophets. So that, to this plunge it was come, that the Psalmist even asked GOD, Wherefore hast thou made all men for nought? It was time for Him to come, qui venturus erat. Luk. 10.31, 32. Psal. 89.47. Heb. 10.37.

It was time; More than time, when that which was the onely knowne way (when one was scattered from GOD; how to gather him to GOD againe, which was, Let him smell a sacrifice;) when that grew out of season, when that failed. And that it did. Sacrifice; burnt offering; burnt offerings for sinne (sinne, that made all the Scattering) noluisti (that is plaine) thou wouldst not; (It is CHRIST now speaketh) then said I, lo I come. I, of whom it is written, ἐν κεφαλίδι, in the top or front of the book, that I should fulfill thy will, and gather these together againe. Lo, I come to doe it. 1 Sam. 26.19. Psal. 40.6.

By this Ecce venio of His, a way was found, those that were thus distracted and scattered before, how to bring them together againe. What way was that? It followes in the same place, what He meant by Ecce venio. He goes it over againe; No sacrifice thou wouldst; No: Corpus autem aptasti, But, a body hast thou ordained mee. The incorporating CHRIST; the ordaining Him a body; that, is the new and living way, through the veile, that is His flesh. With that Hee comes this day, and gathers all againe. Psal 40.6. Heb. 10.20.

How, or in what manner, that? The manner is set downe in the word: by way of Recapitulation. We are not to conceive, there was such a great Sheet, as Saint Peter saw let downe from Heaven (Act. X.) and that all these were put into it, and so gathered. No: it was recapitulando, by reducing to lesse roome (as wee do many diffused matters, to a few heads) as wee contract great mapps to a small compasse; as great plots, to a small module: for, that is (properly) to recapitulate. There are two words in the verse, set it out well: 1 πλήρωμα, 2 and κεφαλαίων. Πλήρωμα, this fulnesse will come into a little κεφαλαίων, as the particulars of many leaves come into a Totall of not halfe a line. § The manner, Recapitulando. Act. 10.11.

If then we be to proceed by way of recapitulation, then are we to reduce all to heads. So let us reduce these things to these two heads: 1 First, Heaven, and all in it, to GOD; Earth, and all in it, to Man. Gather these two into one, and there is the ἀνακεφαλαίωσις in short. To conceive it the better, you shall understand, this was on on a good way onward, before. You have heard man cal'd the litle world, the ἀνακεφαλαίωσις, of the great one, a compendium of all the creatures. And ſo he is, of both. He participates with the Angels, and ſo with things in heaven, by His ſoule: He participates with the elements, and ſo with things on earth, by His body. The Poet had it by the end: Fertur Prometheus, &c. That to the making of mans body, there went a peece of every of the creatures. So, there was in man, a kind of recapitulation, before.

But, that was not full: yet lacked there one thing. All in heaven were not gathered into Man. Of GOD we ſay, Qui es in cœlis: He was one of the things in heaven, and He was out all the while. But, if He could be gathered in too, then were it a full gathering indeed. All, in heaven, recapitulate into one; that is, GOD: All, in earth recapitulate into one; that is, Man. Gather theſe two now, and all are gathered; all the things, in either. And now, at this laſt and great Recollection of GOD and Man; and in them, of heaven and earth; and in them, of all in heaven, and earth; are all recapitulate into the unitie of one intire Perſon. And how? Not ſo, as they were gathered at firſt; Not, as the κεφαλαίωσις (the firſt gathering) ſo the ἀνακεφαλαίωσις (the ſecond gathering.) When things were at the beſt, GOD and Man were two in number: Now, GOD and Man are but one CHRIST. So the gathering, neerer than before: So, ſurer than before: So, every way better than before.

In Man, there was onward an abridgement of all the reſt. Gather GOD and him into one, and ſo you have all. There is nothing, not any thing, in Heaven or earth, left out. Heaven is in, and earth: the creatures in heaven and earth; the Creator of heaven and earth. All are in now: All reconciled (as it were) in one maſſe, all caſt into one ſumme: Recapitulate (indeed) truly and properly.

Herein is the fulneſſe, that GOD Himſelfe comes into this κεφαλαίον. The Apoſtle
1 Cor. 15. 27. (I Cor. XV.) where the Pſalme ſaith [He hath put all things in ſubjection under His feet;] It is manifeſt (ſaith the Apoſtle) that He was excepted, that ſo put them under: But, here, it is manifeſt (ſay we) that He is not excepted, that did gather; but, He (the very collector) is, in this collection, Himſelfe and all.

2 Cor. 5. 19. Col. 2. 9. 1. 21. 22. For, GOD was, in CHRIST, reconciling the world: The world, that is, all things; All in heaven, all in earth. And, in CHRIST did dwell the fulneſſe of the God-head bodily, when He did ſo reconcile them; in the body of His fleſh. In a word: certaine it is, that, by vertue of this recapitulation, we are one with CHRIST; CHRIST as Man: GOD is one with CHRIST; CHRIST, as GOD. So, in CHRIST, GOD and Man are one. And, there is good hope, they that are one, will ſoone be at one: where unitie is, union will be had with no great adoe.

And even beſides this, there is yet another Recapitulation; that, well might it have that name. For (if you marke it) it is not Recapitation, but Recapitulation; and that comes of Capitulum; which is a Diminutive. So was it: verbum in principio; the eternall, mighty, great Word became verbum abbreviatum, as the Apoſtle ſaith (Rom. X.) to bring
Rom. 10. 28. Eſay 40. 12. this to paſſe. He, that the heavens are but His ſpanne, abbreviate into a child of a ſpanne long: He, that Caput the Head of men and Angels, principalities and powers, became capitulum: He, that κεφαλή, κεφαλαῖον, a little diminutive head. Head? Nay, became the foot, Pes computi (the Text is) the foot, the loweſt part of the accompt; and of the loweſt accompt.

6 The Seaſon when.

And now (becauſe we are in ſeaſons, we ſpeake of ſeaſons.) When was this, at what ſeaſon of the yeare? when was it, that He was ſo capite minutus? Sure, never leſſe, never ſo little, never ſo minorated, ſo minimated (I am ſure) as now. When was Ecce venio fullfilled? we may know that, by all the foure Sundayes in Advent now paſt, that, to day, Pſal. 40. 7. it is Ecce venio. His comming, the Pſalme expounds, by ordaining Him a body: A body there was ordained Him in the wombe: But, to us, things are, when they appeare. That,
Ioh. 1. 14. though the Word were made fleſh before, yet GOD was not manifeſted in the fleſh; came not and dwelt among us viſibly to bee ſeene, till this day. So that, if you aske [of In CHRISTO] what, or when? In CHRISTO nato, then, was this gathering of things in heaven, and earth.

And

And, in ſigne it was then, looke there comes a Queer of Angels downe, there comes a new Starre forth to repreſent the things in heaven : There comes together a ſort of Shepherds, and there is gathering to them a troope of great Princes from the Eaſt, to repreſent the things on earth, which conſiſt (as theſe do) of high and low, noble and baſe, wiſe and ſimple : All, to celebrate, and make ſhew of this gathering, of this great πλήρωμα into this ſmall κεφάλαιον. And, in their heavenly Hymne, there is mention of this gathering : In excelſis, and in terris ſet together ; as if, all (in both) were now in full and perfect harmonie. Luk.2.13. Mat.2.1. Luk.14.

Now, when the ſeaſons had travelled with, at laſt brought forth Him, that was the beſt thing, they had, or ſhould ever bring forth, then were they at the beſt. When Him, in whom it pleaſed the FATHER, all fulneſſe ſhould dwell, then were they at the full. The gathering of the things, ſo full, as it made plenitudo rerum : The gathering of the ſeaſons, ſo full, as it made plenitudo temporum. And ſo have we brought both parts (ſeaſons, and things) together.

The Summe is at the foot ; the Oration, at the periode ; the Building, at the head-ſtone ; the Tide, at the full : the fulneſſe of th Gentiles are come into His Church, which is His body, the fulneſſe of Him that filleth all in all. Rom.11.25. Verſe 23.

But, why GOD, in the diſpenſation of the ſeaſons, did ſo order, that at ſuch a yeare of the world, ſuch a moneth of the yeare, ſuch a day of the moneth, this ſhould fall out juſt, this is more, than I dare take upon me to define. But, this I may : that the Chriſtian world hath ever obſerved diverſe good congruities of this Feaſt, with this Text. The Application of the Text to the time, and to us.

The Text is of a Recapitulation : The feaſt is ſo. Twelve moneths recapitulate to twelve daies. Sixe, for the old ; In ſixe daies was the creation of the old. And, when the old things are paſt, as many for the new ; For, behold all things are new ; And, if any bee in CHRIST, he is a new creature. Both theſe recapitulate in one ſeaſon equally divided. Equally divided between both ; yet ſo, as the daies of the laſt are ſet before the firſt, that ſo erunt noviſſimi primi is verified even of the ſeaſon, and the laſt, firſt, there alſo. In earthly things. 1 2 Cor.5.17. Mat.19.30.

The Text is of a gathering : and that falls fit with the ſeaſon ; and giveth us great cauſe to admire the high wiſdome of GOD, in the diſpenſation of ſeaſons ; That, now at this ſeaſon, when wee gather nothing, when nothing groweth to bee gathered, there ſhould be a gathering (yet) and a great one : nay, the greateſt gathering, that ever was, or will bee : And ſo by that meanes, the pooreſt and emptieſt ſeaſon in natures, become the fulleſt and richeſt in grace. 2

Now we doe, our ſelves (in effect) expreſſe as much as this comes to. For, we alſo make it a ſeaſon of gathering together ; of neighbourly meetings, and invitations. Wherin we come together, and both (our ſelves) have, and we make each other partakers of what we have gathered, all the yeare before.

In which ſenſe alſo, wee may call it the ſeaſon of diſpenſation ; in that wee then diſpenſe the bleſsings, GOD hath ſent us ; and that is, in good houſe keeping, and hoſpitalitie.

And (if you will) of fulneſſe too. For, the moſt part do then uſe to be better filled, and with better fare, that are not ſo full againe, all the yeare beſide. That one may truly ſay, there is more fulneſſe in this ſeaſon, than any other. And ſo it is the ſeaſon of fulneſſe then ; For, the hungry are then filled with good things ; then, of all the ſeaſons of the yeare. 4 Pſal.107.9.

And laſt, there is in the Text (and it is the maine word in the Text) ἀνακεφαλαίωσις, which (in the Primitive ſenſe) is the making the foot of an accompt : which agreeth well with the foot of the yeare, for, at the foot of the leafe Summes uſe to be ſet. Set it at the head, or ſet it at the foot ; it is the foot of the Old, and the head of the New : and ſo, the fitteſt ſeaſon, to celebrate it in. For, be it head, or be it foot, CHRIST it is. So, recapitulation, or gathering, fulneſſe, or diſpenſation, or Summing all up, the Text is ſeaſonable. 5 would endevour to have ſome fruition, and to gather ſome fruit, for the heavenly part, from this gathering, this ſumming up of CHRIST's?

But, theſe (I have ſpoke of) are of things on earth. Were it not to bee wiſhed, wee would In heavenly things.

CHRIST is but κεφαλαῖον, a ſhort ſumme; but there is in Him πλήρωμα, a fulneſſe of all: CHRIST is but the Contents of a Chapter, ſome three or foure lines; but a great long Chapter followes, long and large. For, what ſhall you ſee in this Shulamite, but Choros caſtrorum, legions whole armies of good things, to gather. Such, ſo great a ſumme, as twelve daies will not ſerve to caſt them up. But yet, ſomewhat let us gather, that, the ſeaſons being full, we our ſelves be not ſent empty away.

Our Accompting.

The time failes: I will therefore name but one; and that (the maine word of the Text) ἀνακεφαλαίωσις, which referreth properly to the making up an ac compt. The Fathers, taking the Verſe into their conſiderations pitch upon it: (As Saint Ierome; who thinks it choſen of purpoſe to that end.) But, the word and thing both, we may have good uſe of, ſeeing we all are to be Accomptants (Redde rationem, ſaid to us all:) ſeeing, to an accompt we muſt all come.

Luc. 16. 2.

And thus he followeth it, goes no further than the Text, for the particulars of our accompt; makes them conſiſt of quæ in cœlis, and quæ in terris. Which two, as they are principally taken for the creatures in both; So may they alſo (and not amiſſe) bee taken, for the things done in them both: Specially, our gatherings in them referring to either.

1 For quæ in cœlis. Act. 10. 4.

Things in Heaven to ſtand for our good Deeds, our Almes, Faſts, and Prayers, that aſcend up thither, (the Angell tells Cornelius ſo,) and will receive us up thither into everlaſting Tabernacles. Of which, gather we as many as we can all our life long.

2 For quæ in terris.

As for theſe on earth, we gather but too faſt; meaning our evill deeds, which ſmell of the Earth, whence they are, and where they were done.

Now, when we come to give up our accompt, it ſhould ſeeme, by the word And we had caſt them once before, and caſt them falſe; that we muſt to it againe, and ſee, if we can find our ſummes right. There is no danger, but in caſting our quæ in cœlis (our good) leſt we caſt them over; and our quæ in terris (our bad) leſt them we caſt under. The other way, the error is nothing ſo perillous.

Our quæ in cœlis (our good) howſoever our new Auditors caſt them ſo, as they find GOD in their debt, for that we have layd out more than ever GOD required; I doubt, will not prove ſo at the Audit. But, of our quæ in terris, our evill, there is no great feare of overcaſting them; their ſumme will riſe but too high, if we deceive not our ſelves.

Both to be, in CHRISTO

But whether it bee of both; wee ſhall find our ſelves wrong in both, if they be not recapitulate in Chriſto. For our quæ in cœlis; Having done all we can, CHRIST bids us ſay, ſervi inutiles ſumus: and ſo wee muſt ſay then: (And what accompt can bee made of inutile?) Having ſuffered all we can, Non ſunt condignæ (ſaith Saint Paul:) So, both come not home. The good Centurion, he that built the Synagogue; Nay then, Saint Iohn Baptiſt himſelfe, both caſt themſelves to a Non ſum dignus; Even the beſt of our nature. That, when wee have done, wee muſt begin againe, and caſt and caſt till wee bee weary, unleſſe we caſt in CHRIST; faile ſtill, unleſſe our Totall of quæ in cœlis, be recapitulate in CHRISTO.

Luc. 17. 10.

74.

But then come to the other accompt of quæ in terris: to that, there is our fulneſſe, and the fulneſſe of our ſeaſons. Many a broken reckoning ſhall we find there ſuch ſurd numbers, ſuch fractions we ſhall meet with, wee ſhall not tell how or when to get through, we ſhall want compters. They are ſo infinite and intricate with-all, that (I feare) we ſhalbe found in a mighty arrear, a huge debt of thouſands and ten thouſands of talents: we ſhall not tell, which way to turne us, nor which way to ſatisfie it, though all we have were ſold, and wee our ſelves too. To ballance this accompt, CHRIST is moſt needfull; For, Summis conjunctis caſt both theſe together, and Iob being our auditor, hee finds, wee ſhall not be able to anſwer GOD one for a thouſand, that He can charge us with. Sine Me nihil poteſtis facere (if ever) we ſhall find, in this, moſt true. For gather heaven and earth, and all that is in them, all together, and leave Him out, they will never be able to make our diſcharge: Not the beſt Auditor of them all.

Ioh. 15. 5.

But

But He, out of the fulneſſe of His ſatisfactions, can releeve us that way, to take off (or ſtrike off) a great part of our Onus. And He can caſt in, of the fulneſſe of His merits, to make up that, is found minus habens, or defective, in ours that way. For, the ſhort is; He is both Pes, and Caput computi, the κεφαλὴ, and the κεφαλαῖων; He is called both, in the Text. His ἀνακεφαλαίωσις muſt helpe us, if ever we come to our Audit.

But foreſeene, that this be no hinderance to our gathering. No: gathering wee muſt be ſtill, thoſe of heaven (Spirituall;) and turne as much of our earthly as we can into them. And ſtill order the matter ſo, as while we have time, we be doing good. We ſhall but evill ſumme up all, in CHRIST, if we have no particulars to raiſe our ſumme of; if we have nothing, but what is out of CHRIST, to recapitulate, in CHRIST. To gather, I ſay; Elſe are we like to have but an empty ſeaſon of it. Yet not, to hinder our gathering. Gal. 6. 10.

And even to beginne, now: to imitate GOD, in His time, when; and in His order, how. His time: this is the time, GOD made His in; Now, we to take the ſame time, to fall on gathering. His order: this is the order, GOD made His by; He beganne with heavenly things; we to keepe the ſame order, follow His methode, beginne, where He beginnes: Beginne with the things, that have the prioritie of place in the Text; beginne with them: Make Regnum ejus, our primum quærite, and the things that pertaine to it. And not pervert GODS order, and be ſo wholy given to the fulneſſe of the things on earth, that we fall to them, firſt. Nay, I pray GOD, it be not firſt, and laſt, and all. We ſhall the better diſpenſe the ſeaſon, if we gather, to Prayers, to GODS Word: If we beginne with them: If with the diſpenſation of His holy myſteries: Gather to that, ſpecially. Mat. 9. 33.

For, there, wee doe not gather to CHRIST, or of CHRIST; but, wee gather CHRIST Himſelfe: and, gathering Him, we ſhall gather the tree, and fruit, and all upon it. For, as there is a recapitulation of all in heaven and earth, in CHRIST: So, there is a recapitulation of all in CHRIST, in the holy Sacrament. You may ſee it cleerely: There is in CHRIST, the Word eternall, for things in heaven; There is alſo Fleſh, for things on earth. Semblably, the Sacrament conſiſteth, of a Heavenly, and of a Terrene part; (It is Irenæus owne words:) the Heavenly, there the Word too (the abſtract of the other;) the Earthly, the Element. The application to the Euchariſt. 1

And in the Elements, you may obſerve, there is a fulneſſe of the Seaſons of the naturall yeare; Of the corne-floure (or harveſt) in the one, Bread: Of the wine-preſſe (or vintage) in the other, Wine. And, in the heavenly, of the wheate corne, whereto He compareth Himſelfe (Io. XII.) Bread, even the living bread (or bread of life) that came downe from heaven; the true Manna, whereof we may gather each his Gomer. And againe, of Him, the true Vine (as He calls Himſelfe;) the bloud of the grapes of that Vine. Both theſe iſſuing out of this daies recapitulation; Both, in corpus autem aptaſti mihi, of this day. 2 Ioh. 12. 24. 6. 51. 49. Ioh. 15. 1. Pſal. 40. 6.

And the gathering or Vintage of theſe two, in the bleſſed Euchariſt, is (as I may ſay) a kind of hypoſtaticall union of the Signe, and the thing ſignified, ſo united together, as are the two natures of CHRIST. And, even from this ſacramentall union, do the Fathers borrow their reſemblance, to illuſtrate, by it, the perſonall union in CHRIST: I name Theodoret for the Greeke, and Gelaſius for the Latine Church, that inſiſt upon it (both) and preſſe it againſt Eutyches. That even as, in the Euchariſt, neither part is evacuate or turned into the other, but abide each ſtill in his former nature and ſubſtance; No more is either of CHRISTS natures annulled, or one them converted into the other (as Eutyches held;) but, each nature remaineth (ſtill) full and whole, in his owne kind. And backwards: As the two Natures in CHRIST, ſo the Signum and Signatum in the Sacrament, è converſo. And this later device, of the ſubſtance of the bread and wine, to be flowen away and gone, and in the roome of it, a remainder of nothing elſe but Accidents to ſtay behind, was to them not knowen; And (had it beene true) had made for Eutyches, and againſt them. And this for the likeneſſe of Vnion in both. 3

Now, for the word gathering together in one. It is well knowne, the holy Euchariſt it ſelfe is called Synaxis (by no name more uſuall, in all Antiquitie) that is, a Collection 4 or gathering. For ſo it is, in it ſelfe: For, at the celebration of it (though we gather to Prayer, and to Preaching, yet) that is the principall gathering, the Church hath, which is (it ſelfe) called a Collection too (Heb. X.) by the ſame name, from the Chiefe: For, where the body is, there the Eagles will be gathered: And ſo, one Synaxis begets another.

Heb.10.25. Luk.17.37.

5 And laſt, there is a Diſpenſation: that word, in it, too: That, moſt cleerely. For, it is our Office, we are ſtyled (by the Apoſtle) Diſpenſers of the myſteries of GOD; and, in and by them, of all the benefits that came to mankind, by this diſpenſation in the fulneſſe of ſeaſon, of all that are recapitulate in CHRIST.

1 Cor.4.1.

1 Which benefits are too many to deale with. One ſhall ſerve, as the Summe of all: That the very end of the Sacrament is, to gather againe to GOD and His, favour if it happen (as oft it doth) we ſcatter, and ſtray from Him. And to gather us, as cloſe and neere, as alimentum alito, (that is) as neere, as neere may be.

2 And as, to gather us to GOD; ſo likewiſe, each to other mutually: Expreſſed lively, in the Symboles, of many graines into the one, and many grapes into the other. The Apoſtle is plaine, that we are all one bread, and one body, ſo many as are partakers of one bread: So, molding us (as it were) into one loafe all together. The gathering to GOD referrs ſtill to things in heaven: This other, to men, to the things in earth here. All under one Head, by the common faith: All into one Bodie myſticall, by mutuall charitie. So ſhall we well enter into the diſpenſing of this ſeaſon, to beginne with.

1 Cor.10.17.

And, even thus to be recollected at this Feaſt, by the holy Communion, into that bleſſed Vnion, is the higheſt perfection, we can in this life aſpire unto. We (then) are at the higheſt pitch; at the very beſt we ſhall ever attaine to on earth; what time we newly come from it: Gathered to CHRIST; and, by CHRIST, to GOD; ſtated in all whatſoever He hath gathered, and layd up againſt His next comming. With which gathering here in this world we muſt content and ſtay our ſelves, and wait for the conſummation of all, at His comming againe. For, there is an Ecce venio, yet to come.

Apoc.22.12.

This gathering thus here begun, it is to take end and to have the full accompliſhment, at the laſt and great gathering of all, which ſhall be of the quick and of the dead. When He ſhall ſend His Angels, and they ſhall gather His Electt from all the corners of the earth: ſhall gather the wheat into the barne, and the tares to the fire. And then (and never till then) ſhall be the fulneſſe indeed, when GOD ſhall be, not (as now He is) ſomewhat in every one, but all in all. Et tempus non erit amplius, and there ſhall be neither time, nor ſeaſon any more. No fulneſſe then, but the fulneſſe of eternitie, and in it the fulneſſe of all joy. To which, in the ſeverall ſeaſons of our being gathered to our fathers, He vouchſafe to bring us; that (as the yeare, ſo) the fulneſſe of our lives may end in a Chriſtmaſſe, a merry joyfull Feaſt, as that is.

A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED

before the KINGS MAIESTIE, at White-hall, on Saturday, the XXV. of December, A. D. MDCXXIIII.
being CHRISTMAS day.

PSAL. II. Ver. VII.

Prædicabo Legem, de qua dixit ad me DOMINVS: Filius meus tu, hodie genui te.

I will preach the Law, whereof the LORD said to mee: Thou art my Sonne, this day have I begotten thee.

THIS Text, the firſt word of it is Prædicabo, I will preach. So, here is a Sermon toward. And it is of Filius; Filius meus genui te; of the begetting, or bringing forth a child. And that, Hodiè, this verie day.

And let not this trouble you, that it is (begotten) in the Text, and (borne) on the day. In all the three Tongues, one word ſerves for both. In Latine, Alma Venus genuit: Venus did but beare AEneas; yet it is ſaid, genuit. In Greeke, γεννηθέντα ἐκ Μαρίας: Hee was but borne of the Virgin; yet Hee was ſaid γεννηθῆς, genitus. And I report me to the Maſters of the Hebrew tongue, whether the originall word in the Text, beare not, be not as full, nay doe not more properly import His Birth, than His begetting. It is ſure, it doth. So, it may be uſed; and ſo, we will uſe it indifferently. And let this ſerve once for all. Wee returne to our Sermon. ילדתיך

Prædicabo. Here is one ſaith, he will preach. Hath he a licence? Yes: Dixit ad me, he was ſpoken to, or (indeed) he was commanded. (Amar is to command.) Commanded: by whom? By him, that hath lawfull authoritie ſo to doe, Dixit dominus. He ſtept not up of his owne head; He came to it orderly: made no ſuite for the place; was appointed for it. 1 אמר

What will he preach of? Whence will he take his Text? Out of Dixit Dominus, out of the Word of GOD. And that is right. So doe we take, ours; for, ſo did he take his. To Dixit Dominus he held him; preached not voluntarie: but, as he preached the law, ſo, he had a law to preach by (the Word of GOD.) Dixit Dominus. 2

3 And what was His Text? Filius meus tu, hodiè genui te. This Text He preached on: As it might be, at the bringing forth of a Sonne. And that (as it ſhould ſeeme by the word, Hodiè) this very day. This day, the Birth; this day, the Sermon. And, if ſo: by the ſame equitie, the ſame Text may well be preached on againe, whenſoever that day comes about, by the circling of the yeare.

4 It uſeth to be the firſt queſtion (I kept it laſt) Who preacheth? (For, if we like him we will heare him, elſe not.) Sure, He, to whom this is ſpoken, Filius meus tu, He it is, that ſaith, Prædicabo. And Hee to whom it is ſaid, Filius meus tu, is CHRIST. CHRIST then preacheth. And CHRIST is worth the hearing. There will lie no exception to the Preacher, that, I am ſure of.

And indeed, ſo it was moſt meet, that Hee ſhould. He, that was the Law-giver, moſt meet to reade upon his owne law; He, that the Sonne, moſt meet to preach upon Filius meus tu; He, that was borne, upon his owne Birth.

Vpon His owne Birth. And if upon it, any day, that day eſpecially, whereon He was borne. So is the Text. The day He preach't on, He was borne: The day He was borne, He preach't on. No time ſo kindly to preach de Filio hodiè genito, as Hodiè. So ſhall you have CHRIST preach; of CHRISTS Nativitie; and that, upon the very day of his Nativitie; (which, according to the Chriſtian account, is this day of all the dayes of the yeare.)

The applying to this Birth. And, firſt I muſt tell you, this ſame Hodiè (here) is ſaid Signanter, that CHRIST was begotten to day. For, He was begotten beſides this: had more Begettings, than one. Two natures He had, and ſo, two Nativities. One eternall, as the Sonne of GOD: the other temporall, as the Sonne of Man. And, as it falls out, this very place (here) I find vouched for both. Vouched for His begetting, as the Sonne of GOD, by the Apoſtle (*Heb.*1.5.) For to which of the Angells ſaid He at any time, thou art my SONNE, This day have I begotten thee? Alleaging this place to prove His Deitie: as one, whoſe nature was farre above, farre more excellent, than the Angels.

But, of the twaine, more properly we apply it to this daies birth: (His Birth, as the Sonne of Man.) And for our ſo applying it, we have the waraant, not of one, but of all the Apoſtles at once; and, even of the whole Church aſſembled in prayer (Acts IV. 27.) Where, to GOD Himſelfe they ſay, that the Prophecie of this Pſalme was fulfilled, when Herod, the High Prieſts, and the reſt tooke counſell againſt His Holy Child IESVS: And, that (we know) was at this Birth. So, applying it to this Birth, ſure wee are, we apply it aright.

And indeed, it cannot be otherwiſe. For, in the very next words, GOD bidds Him, Aske, and Hee will give Him the Heathen, and the uttermoſt parts of the earth. This muſt needs be ſaid to Him, as the Sonne of Man; and can no waies be ſaid to Him, as the Sonne of GOD. As the Sonne of GOD, He asked not; He needed not aske; Hee had Phil.2.6. all: All æquo jure with His father, as being in forme of GOD. Nothing was; nothing could be given to Him: Hee was not a perſon capable of any gift: All was His owne. So, it was ſpoken, as to the Sonne of Man, this day borne. And ſo, to the Sonne of Man, this day borne we apply it.

The Diviſion Of this Sermon, theſe bee the parts. The matter of it at large, or in generall:
I. That it is a Law firſt Then, what manner of Law, or how qualified: 1. A Law to be preached, as other lawes uſe not to be. 2. A Law de quâ dixit DEVS, where other lawes are, de quâ dixit homo: Which is the reaſon, why it is to be preached. 3. And then (out of the very bodie of the word in the Text) that it is not a Law at large, but a pri-vate Statute Law (for ſo is Elchok) which, but by publiſhing, none can take notice of. A ſecond reaſon, why it is to be preached. And this is the firſt part.

II. The ſecond, is the very Text it ſelfe, or the bodie of the Law in theſe words, Thou art my Sonne, this day have I begotten thee. The points in it are five: 1 Of a Sonne. 2 Of my Sonne (that is) the Sonne of GOD. 3 Genui, the Sonne of GOD begotten. 4 Hodiè, the Sonne of GOD, this day begotten. 5 And Dixit genui (that is)

is) dicendo genuit, begotten onely by ſaying; onely ſaid the word, and it was done, and the Word became fleſh. This is the ſecond part.

The third is the hardeſt. For it would make one ſtudie (Filius meus tu) how this ſhould bee a Law, as heere it is called. It lookes not like one. But, Said it muſt bee, which CHRIST hath ſaid: A Law He calls it, and a Law wee muſt find it. Now, there be but two Lawes (as the Apoſtle tells us, Rom. III. 27.) Lex fidei, and Lex factorum: if, both theſe waies, a Law it be, a Law we ſhall find it. And both theſe waies a Law it is. Ioh.1.14. III.

1 Lex fidei. A Law limiting what to beleeve of Him. Of Him (that is) of His Perſon: His Natures: and His Offices. His Perſon, out of the words, Ego, and Tu. His Natures, out of Hodiè, and Genui. His Offices, out of Prædicabo, and Legem.

2 Then Lex factorum. Setting out firſt, what He doth for us; and then what we are to doe for Him. What Hee doth for us (Filius meus tu) to us Hee conveyeth all Filiall rights. What we to doe for Him (Filius meus tu) we to returne to Him all Filiall duties. Which duties are compriſed in Prædicabo legem. And legem, that law is no more, than Filius meus tu: for, Filius meus tu goes through all, and is all in all. Theſe are the parts. Of theſe, &c.

PRædicabo Legem (ſaith CHRIST.) And we like it well, that He will preach. But He hath not choſen ſo good a Text: Legem were a fitter Text for MOSES to preach on. Wee had well hoped, CHRIST would have preached no law; all Goſpell, He. That He would have preach't downe the old law, but not have preach't up any new. We ſee, it is otherwiſe. A law He hath to preach, and preach it He will: He ſaith it Himſelfe; Prædicabo Legem. I. Legem. 1

So, if we will be His Auditors, He tells us plainely, we muſt receive a Law from His mouth. If we love not to heare of a law, we muſt goe to ſome other Church: For in CHRISTS Church (there) a law is preached. CHRIST began, we muſt follow, and ſay, every one of us (as He ſaith) Prædicabo Legem.

Nay, there is another point yet more ſtrange. Theſe very words here [Filius meus tu, &c.] are as good Goſpell as any in the New Teſtament; yet are here (as we ſee) delivered by Him under the terme of a Law. And we may not change His word: we may not learne CHRIST how to uſe His termes. The words are plaine, there is no avoiding them: a law He calls it, and a law it is. 2

Firſt then, to take notice of both theſe. 1. That CHRIST will preach a law; and that they that are not for the law, are not for CHRIST. It was their quarrell above (at the third verſe) they would none of CHRIST, for this very cauſe, that Chriſt comes preaching the law, and they would live lawleſſe: they would endure no yoke: that were the Sonnes of Belial; Belial (that is) no yoke: But what agreement hath Chriſt with Belial? 1 1 Cor.6.15.

And then: that theſe words Filius meus tu, are a law; and ſo as a law by Chriſt preached. So as in the very Goſpell it ſelfe, all is not Goſpell: ſome law among it. The very Goſpell hath her law. A law Evangelicall there is, which Chriſt preached: and, as he did, we to doe the like. (Whereof, more is to be ſaid by and by.) 2

In the meane time, it is not without danger to let any ſuch conceit take head, as though Chriſtian Religion had no law-points in it, conſiſted onely of pure narratives: beleeve them, and all is well: Had but certaine Theſes to be held, dogmaticall points, matters of opinion. And true it is, ſuch points there be; but they be not all. There is a law beſides, and it hath precepts, and they to be preached, learned, and (as a law) to be obeyed of all.

Looke but into the Grand Commiſſion (by which we all preach) which Chriſt gave at this going out of the world: Go, (ſaith He) preach the Goſpell to all nations teaching them; Mat.28.19.

them, What? to obſerve the things that I have commanded you. Lo, here is commanding, and here is obſerving. So, the Goſpell conſiſts, not only of certaine Articles to be beleeved: But of certaine Commandements alſo, and they to be obſerved. And what is that, but Prædicabo legem?

Now (I know not how, but) we are fallen cleane from the terme, Law; nay, we are even fallen out with it. Nothing but Goſpell now. The name of Law we looke ſtrangely at: we ſhun it in our common talke. To this it is come, while men ſeeke to live, as they liſt. Preach them Goſpell as much as you will: but (heare ye) no Prædicabo legem, no law, to be preached, to hold or keepe them in. And, we have goſpelled it ſo long, that the Chriſtian Law is cleane gone with us; we have loſt it; if Prædicabo Legem (here) get it us not againe. But, got it muſt be: for as CHRIST preacheth, ſo muſt we; and Law it is, that CHRIST preacheth.

I ſhall tell you, what is come by the drowning of the terme, Law. Religion is even come to be counted res precaria; No law, no, no: but a matter of faire entreaty, gentle, perſwaſion, neither jura, nor leges, but onely Conſulta Patrum, good fatherly counſell, and nothing, elſe. Conſilia Evangelica were a while laid aſide: now there be none elſe. All are Evangelicall counſells, now. The reverend regard, the legall vigor, and power, the penalties of it are not ſet by. The rules, no reckoning made of them, as of Law writs, none; but onely, as of Phyſike bills, if you like them, you may uſe them: if not, lay them by. And this comes of drowning the terme, Law. And all, for lack of Prædicabo Legem.

I ſpeake it to this end: to have the one terme retained, as well as the other, to have neither terme aboliſhed; but with equall regard, both kept on foot. They are not ſo well adviſed, that ſeeke to ſuppreſſe either name. If the name once be loſt, the thing it ſelfe will not long ſtay; but goe after it, and be loſt too.

They that take them to the one terme onely, are confuted once a moneth. For, every moneth, every firſt day of every moneth, this verſe failes not, but is read in our eares. And here, a law it is. And ſo was the Chriſtian Religion called in the very beſt times of it, Chriſtiana lex, the Chriſtian law; and the Biſhops, Chriſtianæ legis Epiſcopi, the Biſhops of the Chriſtian law. And all the ancient Fathers liked the terme well; and tooke it upon them.

To conclude. Goſpell it how wee will: if the Goſpell hath not the legalia of it acknowledged, allowed, and preſerved to it: if once it loſe the force, and vigor of a law; it is a Signe it declines, it growes weake and unprofitable: and, that is a ſigne, it will not long laſte. Wee muſt goe look our ſalvation by ſome other way, than by Filius meus tu: if Filius meus tu. (I ſay not, be not preached, but) be not ſo preached, as CHRIST preached it; and CHRIST preach't it, as a Law. And ſo much for Legem.

Heb. 8. 13. 7. 18.

Now, of this law, three things are here ſaid: Firſt, Legem turnes back upon Prædicabo. And this priviledge it hath, that it is materia predicabilis, a law which may; nay, a law which is to be preached. And that, Lawes uſe not to be: Not to be preached. To be read upon at times privately: but, to be preached, not any law, but this. But, this is: and it ſerves for a ſpeciall difference, to ſever it from other lawes, and make it a kind by it ſelfe. Even this, that it is to be preached.

1 Prædicabo Legem.

To be preached: and that even to Kings themſelves, that make lawes: to Iudges themſelves, that are preſumed to be beſt ſeene in the law: yet they to learne, they to be learned, in this law. Erudimini (is the word) qui judicatis terram, in the X. verſe after.

And the reaſon is: for this is a law, de quâ dixit Deus. And ſo is none elſe. And that is a ſecond difference. There is a law de quâ dixit homo, quam ſanxerunt homines, which men among themſelves make for themſelves (as by-lawes are made.) This is of a higher nature. This, GOD Himſelfe made; is a Law of His owne making. De quâ dixit, or rather edixit, for ſo is (אמר Amar;) which GOD enacted firſt, and then gave commandement, it ſhould be preached.

2 De qua dixit Dominus.

And to whom? Dixit ad me, Who is that? CHRIST. Firſt, and before all others others to be preached by his Sonne. His preaching, He thought it worth, and gave it Him in charge, and accordingly (we ſee) He performed it, and profeſſed Prædicabo, that He will preach it.

But, the third is a reaſon, why it could not be otherwiſe; why it could not, but be preached. Becauſe (as I told you, out of the very bodie of the word) it is not a law at large: but a Statute law. And the nature of that law is, without publiſhing, it cannot be knowne. 3. Dixit or edixit.

GOD hath His Law in the ſame diviſion that man hath his: His Statute, and his Common Law. The Law of Nature, which is written in the hearts of all men, that, is the Common law of the world. Of that, every man is to take notice at his perill. But this law, here, is no part of that law: Filius meus tu, is not written in the heart; it muſt be preached to the eare. No light of Nature could reveale it, from within; Preached from without, it muſt be. And ſo, and no otherwiſe, come we to the knowledge of it. The very words gives it for ſuch, which is properly a Statute (as this is) enacted, and decreed in the high Court of GODS Counſell above, and reſerved to be revealed in the latter times; And of that wee cannot heare without a Preacher: and the preaching thereof was committed to CHRIST. He began, and we follow. And ſo much for Prædicabo Legem, de quâ dixit Dominus ad me. (The matter at large.) And now to His Text, wherein is the letter of the Law it ſelfe. Rom. 2 14. Ephes. 3.5. Rom. 10. 14.

II. I reckoned up to you five particulars in this Law. 1. Filius, a Sonne. 2. Filius meus, my Sonne (that is) the Sonne of GOD. 3. Filius meus genui; the Sonne of GOD begotten. 4. Hodiè genui, the Sonne of GOD begotten this day. 5. And fifthly, Dixit genui, (that is) dicendo genuit, begotten by ſaying, as the WORD ſhould be.

1. Filius. Of a Sonne, firſt. Which plainly ſheweth, it is not the old; it is a new law (this.) The old runs, Ego ſum Dominus, which muſt needs imply, Servus meus tu. This is, Filius meus tu (in another ſtyle) which neceſſarily doth imply, Ego ſum Pater tuus. A FATHER to be the giver of it. According to the former, He ſaith, Ego ſum Dominus, and we ſay, Dominus meus tu. According to this latter, He ſaith, Filius meus tu, and wee ſay, Pater meus tu. This, the better by farre: as farre as the condition of a Sonne is better, than that of a ſervant. And indeed, the maine difference betweene the two lawes, is but this: Doe it (ſaith the one) Servus meus tu, the unperfect law of feare, and ſervitude. Doe it (ſaith the other) Filius meus tu, the perfect law of love and libertie. 1. Ioh. 4. 18. Heb. 7 9. Iam. 1. 15.

2. Filius meus. Of a Sonne. Whoſe Sonne? Filius meus. And He that ſpeakes it, that ſaith meus, is GOD; and ſo, He, to whom it is ſpoken, the Sonne of GOD. And the Sonne of GOD is a high title, and of a ſpeciall accompt. Salomon, before his Crowne or Scepter prized that ſpeech of GOD; I will be His Father, and He ſhall be my Sonne. 2. Sam. 7. 14.

But nothing makes it more cleare, than this place. The laſt verſe, He ſaith, Poſui te Regem, I have ſet thee a King: that, He ſpeakes not of, thinks it not fit. But here, now, Filius meus tu, this (loe) preach Hee will; this Hee thinks worth the preaching. Filius meus tu, rather than Poſui te Regem, to be the Sonne of GOD, than to be a Prince in Sion.

3. Genui. The Sonne of GOD: and the Sonne of GOD begotten. For, Sonnes of GOD there bee, that are not begotten; that come in another way, that come by adoption. To beget, is an act of nature, and is ever determined, in the identitie of the ſame nature with him, that did beget. And this putteth the difference.

Otherwiſe, GOD ſpeakes of Angels, as of His Sonnes: When all the Sonnes of GOD praiſed Him. Speakes it of Iſrael, his people: Out of AEgypt have I called my Sonne. Speakes it of Rulers and Governors: Yee are all the Sonnes of the moſt High. To every of theſe, as much in effect is ſaid, as Filius meus tu. But to which of them all, to which of the Angels ſaid Hee at any time, Genui te, I have begotten thee? Not to any. Filii they were, but not geniti, none of them all. So, Filius meus tu is communicated to others; but Genui te, to no creature, either in heaven or earth. Of none, is Iob. 38 7. Hoſ. 11. 1. Pſal. 82. 6

Genui to bee verified in proper termes, but of CHRIST, and of CHRIST only.

Hodie Genui. Begotten; and this day begotten: Genui, and Hodiè genui: for, begotten Hee had beene before. Another begetting beſides this, Two Genui's. A Genui before Hodiè: Ex utero ante Luciferum genui te, ſaid the LORD to my LORD, in the CX. Pſalme. Twice

Pſal.9.11.3. begotten He was. This day begotten, and begotten ante Luciferum, before there was any morning ſtarre; and ſo, before there was any day at all; and ſo, before any, quod cognominatur Hodiè, any time, that is called, To day.

We are to take notice of both theſe generations, 1 Of CHRISTVS ante Luciferum, and of 2 Lucifer ante CHRISTVM. To take notice of both: but, to take hold of this latter. For, that, ante Luciferum was not for us, His ſecond begetting, His Hodiè genui, Mic.5.2. His this dayes begetting is for us, is it we hold by. Not, by His going out from everlaſting: not by His olim, ante Luciferum, ante ſecula genitus: None of theſe. Hodiè genitus is the law, that we are to preach: (that is) not His eternall, but His hodiernall generation, Not as GOD, of the ſubſtance of his Father, begotten before all worlds: but as Gal.4.4. Man, of the ſubſtance of his Mother, borne in the world: when in the fulneſſe of time GOD ſent His SONNE, made of a woman. And that, was the Hodiè genui of this day.

5 Now the ſpeculative Divine pierceth yet deeper, he finds a further myſterie in theſe

Dixit genui. two words, Dixit genui (that is, ſaith he) dicendo genuit. He ſayd He begat (that is) by His very ſaying, He begat. Wherin the very manner of His begetting, is ſet forth unto us.

There is a very neere reſemblance betwixt Dixit, and Genui; betwixt begetting, and ſpeaking. To beget, is to bring forth: ſo, is to ſpeake, to bring forth alſo. To bring forth a word, and CHRIST (you know) is called the Word. Now, when we ſpeake, either we doe it within, to our ſelves, or without, to others. Either of which two,

1 may well be compared to a like ſeverall begetting.

When we thinke a word in our thought, and ſpeake it there, within, to our ſelves (as it were in ſilence) and never utter it: this (if you marke it well) is a kind of conceiving or generation: the mind, within of it ſelfe ingendring a word, while (yet) it is but in notion, kept in, and knowne to none, but to our ſelves. And ſuch was the generation of the Eternall Word, the SONNE of GOD, in the mind of His Father before all

H.b.5.1. worlds; and even to that doth the Apoſtle apply the Genui of this verſe. And this is the firſt begetting, or ſpeaking.

2 Now, as the word, yet within us in our thought, when time comes that we will utter it, doth take to it ſelfe an aierie body (our breath by the vocall inſtruments being framed into a voice) and becommeth audible to the outward ſenſe: (And this we call the ſecond begetting, or ſpeaking.) Right ſo, the eternall WORD of GOD, by DOMINVS dixit, by the very breath of GOD, the Holy Spirit (which hath His name of Spiro, to Ier.31.5. breath) corpus autem aptaſti mihi, had a body framed Him, and with that body was brought forth, and came into the world. And ſo, theſe words Genui te, this very day, the ſecond time, verified of Him. Genui, and Dixit genui; ſayd, and by ſaying, begot Him: For, how ſoone the Angells voice ſounded in the bleſſed Virgins eare, inſtantly was He incarnate

1 in the wombe of His Mother.

Of both which words, Dixit and Genui, we can ſpare neither. There is good uſe of both. Of Genui: to ſhew the truth of the identitie of His nature and ſubſtance, with His FATHER that begat Him, and with His mother that bare Him. For, to beget, is when one living thing bringeth forth another living thing, of the ſame nature, and kind, it ſelfe is.

2 But (I know not how) the terme of begetting, the very mention of that word, carryeth our conceit to a matter of carnalitie: therefore, is the word [Dixit] well ſet before it, to ſhew, this Genui, was not by any fleſhly way; to abſtract it from any mixture of carnall uncleaneſſe. That the manner of it was, onely, as the word is purely and ſpiritually conceived in the mind. The one word [Genui] noting the truth: The other word [Dixit] the, no way carnall, but pure, and inconcrete manner of His generation. And ſo I have gone over, the five termes of this Law, or (if you pleaſe) the five points of His Text.

III.

The hardeſt is yet behinde : For it will not ſinke into our heads, how this ſhould he called a Law. It ſeemes nothing leſſe: rather a Dialogue between a Father and his Sonne. But a law (ſure) it cannot be. A law runnes in the Imperative; this is meerly Narrative : declares ſome-what, injoynes nothing; gives not any thing in charge, as lawes uſe to doe.

Sed non poteſt ſalvi Scriptura, GOD muſt be true in all His ſayings, CHRIST may not preach falſe doctrine. A law Hee hath called it; and wee may not give it any other name. Ioh. 10.35. Ro. 3.4.

There be that thinke, this verſe is but the preamble, and that the body of the law doth follow, and reacheth to the end of the Pſalme.

But, the better ſort are of mind, that even this verſe, taken by it ſelfe, containes in it a law full and whole. Let us ſee then, whether we can find it ſo.

We pich't upon the Apoſtle's diviſion of the law, into Lex fidei, and Lex factorum. If both theſe be found in it, we may well allow it for a law.

We will begin with Lex fidei : what wee are to beleeve of Him. Of Him (that is) of theſe three : 1 Of His Perſon. 2 His Natures. 3 and His Offices.

And then come to Lex factorum. 1 Firſt, what He doth for us, the benefit of this law. 2 And then, what we are to doe for Him againe, our dutie out of this law. The former of which (the benefit) is the Goſpell of this law. The latter (the dutie) is the law of this Goſpell.

1 Of His perſon.

Of His perſon firſt. That He is, of Himſelfe, a perſon ſubſiſting. Plaine, by the two perſons that are in the Text, Ego and Tu; the firſt, and ſecond perſon in Grammar : and the ſame, the firſt and ſecond perſon in Trinitie. Here is, Ego genui, the perſon of the Father; and Filius meus tu, the perſon of the Sonne. Here is one begets : And (ſure it is) nemo generat Seipſum, none begets himſelfe; but he, whom he begets, is a perſon actually diſtinguiſhed from him, that begets Him.

But, of theſe two perſons, this you will marke. That, the firſt that is named, is Filius meus tu. He ſtands firſt in the verſe before Genui te. We heare of Filius, before ever we heare of Genui : For, that is the Perſon we hold by. By Nature; Genuite ſhould goe before Filius meus but quoad Nos, Filius meus is before Genui : To ſhew, there is no comming to the FATHER, but by Him; no intereſt in the Father, but from, and through Him. This for His perſon. Ioh. 14.6.

And, in His perſon, we beleeve two Natures, ſet downe here in the two words, Hodiè and Genui. If you doe obſerve, there is ſome-what a ſtrange conjunction of theſe two words. One is preſent, Hodiè : the other is perfectly paſt, Genui. In proprietie of ſpeech it would be a preſent act, for a preſent time: or it would be an act paſt with an adverbe of the time paſt : and not joyne a time in being (Hodie) with an action ended and done (Genui.)

The joyning of theſe two together, the verifying them both, of one and the ſame perſon, muſt needs ſeeme ſtrange. And indeed, could not bee made good, but that in that one partie, there are two diſtinct Natures. To either of which, in a different reſpect, both may agree, and be true, both: Some little difference there wilbe about the ſorting of the two words : which to referre to which. But, that will eaſily be accorded, for they will both meet in the end.

There be, that, becauſe Hodiè (the preſent) is yet in Fieri, and ſo not come to be perfect; underſtand by it, His temporall generation (as Man) which is the leſſe perfect, as ſubject to the manifold imperfections of our humane nature, and condition. And then, by Genui, which is in factum eſſe (and ſo, done and perfect) underſtand His eternall generation (as the SONNE of GOD) in whom are abſolutely all the perfections of the Deitie.

There bee other, and they fly a higher pitch, and are of a contrary mind : For; whatſoever is paſt, is in time (ſay they) and ſo Genui is temporall : and, that Hodiè (that) doth beſt expreſſe His eternall generation : For that, nothing is ſo properly affirmed of eternitie it ſelfe, as is Hodiè. Why? For, there, all is Hodiè: there, is neither Heri, nor Cras; no yeſterday, nor to morrow. All is, To day, there. Nothing paſt; nothing to come: all preſent. Preſent (as it were) in one inſtant, or center; ſo in the Hodiè of Eternitie. Paſt, and to come, argue time; But, if it be eternall, it is neither: All there is Preſent. To day then, ſets forth eternitie beſt (ſay they) which is ſtill preſent, and in being. But, Genui (that, being paſt) cannot be His eternall at any hand, but muſt needs ſtand for His temporall.

But whether of theſe it be; Genui, His eternall (as perfect) and Hodiè (as not yet perfect) His temporall; Or, vice verſa, Hodiè repreſent eternitie beſt, and Genui, time, as being ſpent and gone: Betweene them both, one way or other, they will ſhew His begettings. You may weave Hodiè with Genui, or Genui with Hodiè, and betweene them both, they will make up the two Natures of Him, that was the Hodiè genitus of this day. Concerning whom, wee beleeve; as firſt, that He is one intire perſon, and ſubſiſts by Himſelfe; So, ſecond, that He conſiſts of two diſtinct Natures, eternall, and temporall. The one, as perfect GOD: the other, as perfect man.

3. Of His Offices. Now, for His Offices. Them, we have likewiſe in the two words, Prædicabo, and Legem. Prædicabo: By that, it is plaine, He doth preach. And that ſeemes ſtrange: for the laſt newes we heard of Him (in the verſe before) was, that He was ſet a King in Sion. And the word legem imports as much: For, lawes (with us) are the Kings lawes.

A King to preach? Let that alone for the Prieſts. That, is their Office; they ſhall teach Iacob His judgements, and preach to Iſrael His law. But, preach He will (as he ſaith.) So, meus Filius will prove a Prieſt (as it ſeemes:) A Prieſt, indeed. And, which is yet more ſtrange, by vertue of theſe very words: Filius meus tu. No words (one would thinke) to prove Him a Prieſt by; and we ſhould hardly beleeve it, but that (in Heb.5.4.) the Apoſtle deduceth His Prieſt-hood from theſe very words: No man (ſaith he) taketh unto him this honour, (that is, the honour of the Prieſt-hood) but he, that was called of GOD, as was Aaron. And then he adds, No more did CHRIST, He tooke not this honour upon Him, to be our high Prieſt: but He, that ſaid to Him [Filius meus tu, hodiè genui te] He gave it Him. So, that by vertue of theſe words, CHRIST was conſecrate a Prieſt; as by vertue of the other [Poſui te Regem] He was ſet a King in Sion.

And the place (Sion) ſuits well with both. For Mount Sion had two topps. On the one was the Temple built: on the other was the Kings Palace ſituate. The one for Prædicabo: the other for Legem. In the one (as King) he makes a law: in the other (as Prieſt) preacheth it. Firſt, Poſui Regem; and then Prædicabo Legem.

And indeed, the Kings, that were his types, were mixt of both. Melchiſedek; him, the Apoſtle ſtands on at large, in Heb.7. And, if this Pſalme be David's (as queſtionleſſe it is, for, his it is avowed to be Acts.4.25.) why then, he preach't too. And for Salomon, it is too evident; we have his booke of the Preacher. The like, may be ſaid of Ezekias, and the reſt, by whom, this King (here) was in any ſort repreſented. And, by vertue thereof, they all had a greater care of publiſhing this law, here, than of any of their owne lawes: as, on the contrarie, Ahab, and his race had more care of the keeping the Statutes of Omri, than they had of the lawes of GOD.

Mic.6.16.

We beleeve then, for His Offices; that, He is both King, and Prieſt. Hath a Kingdome to rule: Hath a Diœceſe to preach in. His Kingdome, the Heathen, to the uttermoſt parts of the earth: His Diœceſe, as large. His Auditorie, all States, even the higheſt, Kings, and Iudges: for Prædicabo Legem concernes them all. And this, for lex fidei: what it binds us to beleeve of Him.

2 Lex factorum. 1 What he do h for us. The benefit.

Now, for Lex factorum. Firſt, what ſhall be done to them, that live by and under this law. They ſpeake of lawes of grace: This is indeed, a law of grace; nay, it is, The Law of grace: not onely as it is oppoſite to the law of nature; but even, becauſe it offereth grace, the greateſt grace, that ever was. For, what greater grace, or favour can be done to any, than to have theſe words [Filius meus tu] ſayd unto him? This law doth it: for, to them, that receive it, it giveth power to be made the Sonnes of GOD.

Ioh.1.12.

The

The words ſeeme to be ſpoken to one perſon onely: but (as lawes of grace uſe to be) are to receive ampliation, and to be extended, to the moſt benefit.

Dixit ad me. Said He it to Him, and ſaid He it, to Him alone, and ſaid He it to no other, but to Him? No: for, He gave it Him in charge to preach it; and to preach it, is to ſay it to others. Therefore it is, Dixit ad me, vt ad alios, per me: it was ſo ſaid to Him, as that by Him, it might be ſaid to others. Prædicabo makes it plaine. 1

Prædicabo. When CHRIST doth preach, He is not to be underſtood to preach to Himſelfe: no man doth ſo at any time; but to others more or leſſe, that may be, or ſhould be the better for His preaching. For, what needed it be preached, if it concerne none, but Him? if none to have benefit, but He? if they, that heare it preached ſhall receive no benefit by it? 2

So ſay we, of Legem. This law was not made for CHRIST: it needed not for Him (any law.) He was Filius meus tu φύσει, καὶ οὐ νόμῳ; needed no law to make Him that, which by nature He was. The law was for others, which, by this law, were to be made that, which, by nature, they were not (that is) the Sonnes of GOD. 3

Take the very words. You ſee, His Text is not in the firſt perſon, Filius tuus ego: His Text is, Filius meus tu. And, who is that, Tu? It cannot be CHRIST Himſelfe by common intendment. The Father ſaith to Him, Thou art my Sonne: But, to whom is it, that CHRIST ſaith, Thou art my Sonne? For Filius meus tu, is His Text; that, He muſt preach on: He may not goe from the words, or change the tenour of His Text. Who is then, that Sonne? To whom applieth Hee His Text? To ſome other certainely. 4

The Apoſtle ſaith, He was ſet and ſent, that He might bring many Sonnes unto GOD, to whom GOD alſo might ſay, Filius meus tu. And Himſelfe likewiſe ſaith of Himſelfe in the Prophet: Behold, here am I, and the children which GOD hath given me. Heb. 2. 10. Eſay 8. 18.

And who be thoſe Children? Thoſe, whom He ſhall regenerate, and beget anew by His Prædicabo Legem, the immortall Seed: For, of His owne good will begat He us, by the Word of truth, that We might be the firſt fruits of His creatures. Theſe are the children, that are here meant. Of whom it ſhall be ſaid, quòd, per filium, filii, that in and by this Sonne, they ſhall be His Sonnes, all. And, what was ſaid to CHRIST, ſhall be ſaid to them, and every of them, Filius meus tu. The Birth. 1 Pet. 1. 23 Iam. 1. 18.

Of Sion ſaith the LXXXVII. Pſalme, It ſhall be ſaid, He was borne in her. And that is true, for ſo He was. But he goes on further, and ſaith, He did remember Himſelfe of Rahab, and Babylon, the Philiſtims, and the Morians land, for, loe, there He was borne. Borne there? How can that be? Yes, borne there, and here, and every where; where, by this Prædicabo Legem, He begets children to GOD. The power, and vertue of His Birth reacheth even thither. Every place that receiveth His law (where ever it bee) even there He is borne. This for His Birth. Pſal. 87. 4.

To this Birth there belongs a Birth-right. They talke much of the law, as of a Birth-right: but (loe) this here, is a Birth-right, indeed; and that, veri nominis; and amounts to more, than a Childs part. And it growes out of the double title, or intereſt, which He hath to all that is given Him. For, as He is twice a Sonne, twice begotten, 1 Ante luciferum, and 2 Hodiè: ſo hath He a double right growes to Him, expreſſed in two diſtinct words (in the next verſe) 1 one of inheritance, 2 the other of poſſeſſion, or purchaſe; for, Ahuzza is true Hebrew for a purchaſe. Of which two, One contents Him: His title, as Heire. The other He tranſcribes and ſets over to us, which is that of His purchaſe, as Hodiè genitus. The Birth-right

But we need not ſo much as to goe to the next verſe for it. Filius meus tu will ſerve; Which was ſaid twice to Him. 1 Once at His Baptiſme, Hic eſt Filius meus. And ſo it is likewiſe at ours, to us; for, therein we are made members of CHRIST, and the children of GOD. 2 And againe, Hic eſt Filius meus, at His Transfiguration in the Mount. And we keeping the law of our Baptiſme, the ſame ſhall be ſaid to us likewiſe, the ſecond time; and when time comes, we ſhall alſo be transfigured into the glorious Image of the Sonne of GOD. And this is, Lex factorum on His part: this ſhall be done for us by Him. This we called the Goſpell of this Law. Matt. 3. 17. Matt. 17. 5. Phil. 3. 21.

What we to do for Him: The dutie.

And what ſhall be done for us by Him? Which is the law of dutie on our part required; and which we called the law of this Goſpell: implyed in the two firſt words, Prædicabo, and legem. Either word hath his condition. Firſt, if he preach, that we beſtow the hearing of Him. And then Legem, that we know it is a law He preacheth: and therefore ſo, and no otherwiſe than ſo, to heare it.

1 Prædicabo.

Heare Him preach? That we will be intreated to, eaſily. If that be all, we will never ſtick with Him for that. Nay, Gods bleſſing on his heart, for (as the world goes) we are now, all, for preaching.

2 Legem.

But take Legem with you too. It is ſo Prædicabo, as it is Legem. Preached, and ſo preached, as it is Law, His Sermons are ſo many Law-lectures: His preaching is our law to live by; And law binds, and leaves us not to live, as we liſt. And, if that which is preached be law, it is to be heard, as a law; kept, as a law; to be made our Lex factorum, as well as Lex fidei. If we heare it otherwiſe, if we heare it not ſo, if we loſe Legem; we may let goe Prædicabo too, and all.

And here now, we breake. As a law? Nay, none of that. The hearing we will give Him: but ſoft, no law (by your leave.) Our caſe is this; So long as it is but Prædicabo, but Preaching, we care not greatly, though we heare it: but, if it once come to Legem, to be preſſed upon us, as a law; farewell our parts: we give Him over: for law binds, and we will not be bound. Vpon the point, we are faſt at Prædicabo, and looſe at Legem. Leave CHRIST His booke to preach by; but keepe the law in our owne hands. But (to be ſhort) if we heare it, not as a law; heare it not, but as newes; if we bring our Sermons to an end, as a tale, that is told; if that be all: we forfeit all that followes, all our part and portion in Filius meus, and Hodiè genui and all.

By Legem, what law is meant.

Now, if you aske, what law it is, is here meant? No other, but the law, of theſe words, Filius meus tu: For, Filius meus tu, in the body of it, carrieth the law; That containes all filiall duties, which is the perfecteſt law, when all is done.

For, the law of a Sonne is more, than all lawes beſides. For, beſides that it is lex factorum, that a Sonne will doe any thing that is to be done; he will further doe it, out of filiall love and affection, which is worth all. And this law (indeed) is worth the preaching. It is Exibit de Sion lex, the law that came from Sion.

Gal 4. 24.

The law of Sinai, that begins with Ego ſum Dominus; it is a law of ſervitude; a law for the bond-woman, and her brood. Never preach it: at leaſt, not to children. That law is to give place, and in place thereof, is to come the law of Sion, which we preach; the law of the free-woman, and the children of promiſe: the law of love, of filiall love, proceeding, not from the Spirit of bondage, but from the Spirit of adoption.

Gal. 4. 28. Rom. 8. 15.

There is lex factorum in both: But, as Gregorie well expreſſeth it, Si ſervus es, metue plagas, if thou be bond (as Iſmael) doe it, out of ſervile feare, for feare of the whip. Si mercenarius, expecta mercedem: if thou be an hireling (as Balaam) doe it, out of mercenarie reſpect. Sed, ſi filius meus tu; then doe it, out of true, naturall affection; performe all duties of a kind Sonne to Him, that ſaid, genui te, as did Iſaac the Sonne of the free-woman, to ABRAHAM, that begot him, even to the laying downe of his life. None to Timothie, (ſaith Saint Paul) none like minded to him: for, as a Sonne with his Father, So hath he laboured with me in the Goſpell. So, (that is) ſo freely, ſo ſincerely, ſo reſpectfully, as a loving, kind, naturall Sonne could doe no more. And that is lex factorum, indeed. And ſo much for lex factorum on our part: what we doe for him: the filiall duties: the law of this Goſpell.

Gen. 22. 9. Phil. 2 20. 22.

3 The time. Hodiè.

We lack nothing now, but the time. And as legem, is the condition; ſo, Hodiè, is the time. We are willed by the Apoſtle to inſiſt upon this word, Hodiè, to call upon men for this dutie, while it is called, To day. Not to defer, or to put off, or make a morrow matter of it. We are all inclined to be Craſtini, or Perendini, for to morrow, or next day, or, I know not when; but, not to be Hodierni. Hodiè is no adverb with us: for, where ſhall we find one, but will take daies for any matter of dutie? To looke to this Hodiè, and not deceive our ſelves: for, no time, but Hodiè, hath any promiſe: Witneſſe, Hodiè, ſi vocem; To day if you will heare his voice; which every day ſounds in our eares.

Heb. 3. 13. 15.

Pſal. 95. 7, 8.

But,

But, Hodiè genui, is more than Hodiè: for every day in the yeare, while it laſts, is Hodiè, To day: but every day is not Hodiè genui. There is but one of them in the whole yeare; and that, is this day. This day then to take: of all other Hodie's, not to let ſlip the Hodiè of this day. A day, whereon this Scripture was fulfilled: whereon, Dixit, & factum eſt, He ſaid it, and did it; whereon, this Sonne was borne, and given us: A day, whereon as it is moſt kindly preached; ſo, it will be moſt kindly practiſed of all others. And ſo, I hold you no longer; but end. 2 Hodiè genui.

Praying to Him, that was the Hodiè genitus of this day, Him, that was begotten, and Him, by whom He was begotten; that we may have our parts, as in Prædicabo, preaching; ſo likewiſe in legem, the law: in both, legem fidei, to beleeve aright, and legem factorum, to live according: That wee performing the filiall duties required, may attaine the filiall rights promiſed, and may be in the number of thoſe, to whom firſt, and laſt, Filius meus tu ſhall be ſaid, to our everlaſting comfort, and to the praiſe of the glorie of His grace, through CHRIST our LORD. Epheſ. 1. 6.

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE QVEENE ELIZABETH,

AT WHITE-HALL, ON THE IV. of March, Anno Domini, MDXCVIII. being ASHWEDNESDAY.

PSAL. LXXVIII. Ver. XXXIV.

Cum occideret eos, quærebant Eum : & revertebantur, & diluculò veniebant ad Eum.

When He ſlew them, then they ſought Him : and they returned, and inquired early after GOD.

THIS Pſalme is a Calender, or Roll of reports, how, from MOSES to DAVID, the Iewes carried themſelves to GOD, in matter of Religion. And this verſe, a report, how in the matter of repentance (expreſſed here, under the termes of ſeeking and turning to GOD.) Wherein, this they did, this was their faſhion : While He ſpared them, they ſought Him not; When he ſlew them, then they ſought Him. Cum, &c. Theſe words then are a report.

A report : but ſuch an one, as when Saint Paul heard of the Corinthians, he could not commend it : What ſhall I ſay ? Shall I praiſe you in this ? No : I praiſe you not. Neither he them, for that: Nor I theſe, for this. Rather, as old Father Eli ſaid to his ſonnes: Non eſt bonus Sermo hic, quem audio de vobis; This is no good report I heare, Cum occîderet, &c. 1 Cor. 11. 17. 1 Sam. 2. 24.

Whether good or whether evill, it pertaineth to us. For, to us of the Gentiles hath 1 Cor. 10. 11. Saint Paul entailed whatsoever well or ill befell the diſſolved Church of the Iewes: Theſe, all theſe came unto them for examples, and are enrolled, to warne us that grow neerer and neerer to the ends of the world.

Both pertaine unto us; the Scripture hath both: And, in it, draweth out our duty to us, in both, in good and evill Reports; as it were, in white worke, and blackworke. And we to have uſe of both: Yet, not of both reports alike, but diverſly, as our inſtructions upon them are diverſe. For we are not ſo much to regard the bare Report, as the inſtruction of it. For which cauſe, Aſaph hath entitled this Pſalme, not Aſaph's report, but Aſaph's inſtruction.

Now, we have here our report: May wee find, what our inſtruction is touching it? We may. Aſaph expreſſely hath ſet it downe at the VIII. verſe before. That this, and other errors of theirs are here upon the File, Ne fiant ſicut Patres eorum, That we ſhould not be like our foreſathers, a croſſe and crooked generation. Not like them, in other indignities: and among other in this Cum occîderet, &c. Never to ſeeke GOD but when Hee kills us.

In which foule indignitie, our Age is (certainly) as deepe, as ever was that: And we need Aſaph's inſtruction, no leſſe than they.

For, as if there were no uſe of Religion, but onely Cum occîderet, ſo ſpend we all our whole time, in the ſearch of other things. Not caring to aske, or ſeek, or conferre about the ſtate of our ſoules, even til occîderet come. And then (peradventure) ſending for Aſaph, and hearing him ſpeake a few words about it, which we would faine have called ſeeking of GOD. I can ſay little to it: I pray GOD, it prove ſo: but ſure (I feare) it will be found
Dan. 5. 27. Minus habens, farre ſhort of it.

Which is ſo uſually received, that, take a ſurvey, not one of an hundred ever thinke of it, before. So ſecurely practiſed, as if we had ſome Superſedeas lying by us, not to doe it till then: As if there were no ſuch Scripture as this upon record; which turned to their deſtruction, and muſt needs lye heavy upon us, when we ſhall remember it. Cum occîderet, &c.

Now ſure, this courſe muſt needs be prejudiciall to our ſoules: and a number periſh in it daily before our eyes. Yet we ſit ſtill, and ſuffer this cuſtome to grow and gather head. Neither delivering their ſoules, or (at leaſt) our owne, by telling them ſeriouſly, this is not the time: and, then, to ſeeke, is not the ſeeking, GOD will allow. That this is a Ne fiant, ſuch a thing, as ſhould not bee done in Iſrael. That it is upon record ὠφ ἐνδειγμὼ, to their diſgrace and deſtruction: And it cannot be to our comfort or commendation, to doe the like. Out of which their deſtruction, Aſaph frameth an inſtruction for us: and (as it is well ſaid, and fitly to this day) ex cinere Iudæorum lixivium Chriſtianorum, of the Iewes aſhes maketh a lie for Chriſtians, to cleanſe us from this foule indignity. Vt, videntes cadentes, videant ne cadant, that, heeding their fall, we take heed we fall not: that is, ſeeke, not as they ſought, leſt we periſh, by like example of ſeeking too late.

Therefore, that we ſet our ſelves to ſeeke, before this Cum come: that is (in a word) ſeeke GOD, as by repentance and the fruits; ſo by undelayed repentance, and the timely Iude 12. fruits of it: and be not like the Apoſtle IUDE's δένδρα φθινοπωρινὰ, our ſeeking, all ſummer, withered and drie, and beginning to ſhoot out a little, about Michael-maſſe ſpring: Of which kind of ſhooting, fruit can never come. This is the ſumme.

The Diviſion The words conſiſt of two parts. Two parts: but, theſe two evill matched, or (as Saint 2 Cor. 6. 4. Paul) unequally yoked together. For, where our chiefe actions (of which I take it, our ſeeking of GOD is one) ſhould have the chiefeſt time; Here, is the firſt and beſt of our actions ſorted, with the laſt and worſt part of our time: Quærebant Eum, with Cum occîderet.

And, not onely miſſe-ſorted, but miſſe-placed. For, cum occîderet, His killing ſtandeth before our ſeeking: whereas our ſeeking ſhould be firſt, and His killing come after. This was never GOD's Fiant: they muſt have a Ne fiant.

Of

Of theſe two, then. Firſt by way of Report, joyntly: that, de facto thus it is: thus, they; and thus, we ſeeke. I.

Then if we take them in ſunder, and (as Ieremie ſaith) * Separate the precious from the vile: Quærebant eum the flower of our actions, from cum occîderet, the droſſe, dreggs, and very refuſe of our time. Conſider them apart, and ſhew 1. That this time is not the time: 2. And that this ſeeking, thus ſorted and thus placed, is no ſeeking, nor ever ſhall find. Therefore, with Aſaph's inſtruction, to ſettle our ſeeking upon ſome other time; and to reſolve, to beginne it before. II. * Ier. 15. 19.

I.

TWo powers there are in Cum: 1. A Privative, of all times before: 2. A Poſitive, of that inſtant time, then. No time, before, we ſeeke: At that inſtant time, then, wee doe. On which two conſiſteth Theatrum vitæ, the very theater of our life. Our caſe, before that time, is lively expreſſed in the words immediately precedent: They ſpend their dayes in vanitie, and their yeares in turmoile in the world. Our caſe, then, at that time, in theſe words, cum occîderet eos. Yea, by implication, they are both in this verſe: By what they doe now, is implied what they did before. 1 Now, they ſought Him: So that, before, they loſt Him. 2 Againe, Then, they turned to: So that, before, they turned away, and not once looked toward Him. 3 Now they roſe up early: ſo that, before, they put it of till twilight. 4 Now they remembred: ſo that, before, they forgat Him cleane; No ſpeech, no queſtion; nay, no thought about Him.

Of both de facto joyntly; 1 Cum occideret

Verſe 33.

Thus it was (ſaith Aſaph) under Moſes. While His hand was not upon them, they regarded Him not, as not worth the ſeeking: Perdebant Eum, it was their loſing time. But, when He ſlew them, they fell to ſeeke; and well was He that might find: Quærebant Eum, it was their ſeeking time. 1

Before, Quærebant alia, they found themſelves other matters more meet to ſeeke: Then, Quærebant Eum, they gave over all, to ſeeke Him, only. 2

Before, He ſought them; and they gave Him good leave, ſo to doe. Then all is turned out and in: As He, them, before; So they, Him, now. 3

And is it not thus with us, that are now in theatro upon the ſtage? Yes indeed: and more, if more may be. This, is but vetus fabula, per novos hiſtriones, the ſame Play againe by other Actors. For, in Publike: when, in the daies of ſafety, plenty, and peace, we are in the VI. of Amos, and are beſt at eaſe when Quærebant is fartheſt from us; but, if Warre, Famine, or Contagion come, then wee runne to the II. of Ioel, but Cum occîderet? And, in Private: When while youth, and ſtrength, and health doth laſt, while the evill day is farre off, we are even at, ceſſare fac Sanctum Iſrael à nobis, Cauſe the Holy one of Iſraël to ceaſe from us; But, when diſtreſſe, danger, or death come, when Rabſaketh is before the walls, then wee crie, Now is the day of tribulation and anguiſh; now the children are come to the birth, and their is no ſtrength to be delivered; Now, Send to Eſay; Now, lift up thy prayer for the remnant that is left: What is this, but Cum occîderet? Surely, this is our caſe: Our ſeeking goeth wholy by our killing: waxeth and waineth: is out and in, as that is need at hand or farther off. I need not tell it, your eares and eyes are daily witneſſes, that this is a true ſaying, Cum occîderet eos, &c. No killing, no ſeeking.

Eſay. 37. 3. 1.

II.

This is a true ſaying: but, all true ſayings are not by all meanes (Nay ſome, not by any meanes) to be receved. The report (indeed) is, Thus it was. But, the inſtruction, is Ne fiant, That it ſhould not be. To the end then, we may know, what to receive and what to refuſe, we will take it in peeces, and melt the droſſe from the ſilver metall. Quærebant Eum, by it ſelfe is good: Put occîderet to it, it is baſe. Of theſe then in order.

Of each ſeverally.

1 Quærebant Eum, our fiat.

Of quærebant Eum, we ſhall ſoone agree (if it be quærebant Eum) that it is a Fiat, a thing to be done. Which, many other waies might be made to appeare, but by none better than this, here: That, at laſt, all come to it: Sooner or latter, all ſeeke it: all men, if not before, yet cum occîderet, then, certainly.

quærebant, They ſought: they, and all.

All ſeeke: And among all, They ſought: which word is not without his weight here. For, what are theſe, that Aſaph here meaneth, by they? Not Saints: Not, generatio quærentium, the generation of them that ſeeke GOD. But they, that (in the verſe before) waſted all their dayes in vanitie, and their yeares in turmoyling in the world. They, idle, riotous perſons: They ſought.

2.

Ver.35.

They, that (in a verſe after) flattered Him with their lipps, and gave Him all the good words that might be, and meant no ſuch thing. The Hypocrites: They ſought.

Ver.19.

They, that (a little before) grievouſly provoked the moſt HIGH GOD, with ſpeeches little better than blaſphemie: Can GOD doe this? Is there a GOD amongſt us, or is there none? And ſo, in ſtead of quærebant Deum, quærebant; An Deus, made a queſtion, whether there were any to ſeeke: That is, even the very wicked, and (of all wicked, the worſt) the prophane Atheiſts, They ſought: Even, at laſt, They ſought. This, is the triumph of Religion: The Riotous perſon, The Hypocrite, The Atheiſt, all ſhall ſeeke.

And herein is folly condemned even of her owne children, and wiſdome juſtified of her very enemies: That they, that greedily ſeeke ſinne, at laſt would be glad to be rid of it: and they, that merrily ſcorne Religion, at laſt, are glad to ſeeke to it.

They ſhall ſeeke: And, the time is ſet downe, when they ſhall ſeeke; and when you ſhall not faile, but ſee them ſeeke, that never ſought before. In diebus juventutis, not then: Sanus factus eſt, nor then, neither: But, cum occîderet, then, certainly. Cum occîderet, Marke this Cum, when it commeth, and you ſhall ſee them, that ſtood out all their life long, then come in.

The heathen man ſaw it with his eyes. O (ſaith the Perſian Meſſenger in Æſchylus) when the Græcian forces hotly purſued our Hoſt, and wee muſt needs venter over the great water Strymon, frozen then, but beginning to thaw, when an hundred to one, we had all died for it (that is cum occîderet;) with mine eies, I ſaw (ſaith he) when Θέος ὄ τις, &c. of thoſe Gallants whom I had heard (before) ſo boldly maintaine, There was no GOD to ſeek κατ' ἰϋχέλο λίπεσι, then every one of them on their knees, and full devoutly praying, the Ice might hold till they got over. Moſes ſaw it, with his eyes. Pharao (who was at high termes, Who is the LORD you talke of? (and anſwered himſelfe, he knew none ſuch, nor nothing would doe for him:) When Cum occîderet came, he tooke notice, there was a LORD higher than hee: that, that LORD was righteous, and he a wretched ſinner, that ſought for grace at His hands. Marke but the ſhutting up of dixit inſipiens (their owne Pſalme.) When (ſaith David) they have in heart ſought to perſwade themſelves, Non eſt: ſeeke none, None there is: and thereupon corrupted themſelves, and became moſt loathſome in their lives, eat up their tenants, as they would doe ſo many morſells of bread; made a mocke of ſuch holy men, as ſet themſelves ſeriouſly to ſeeke GOD: When all is done, and occîderet come, trepidabunt timore, ubi non erat timor, they ſhall beginne to be afrayd, where (they held before) no feare needed: And here ſhall be the laſt verſe of their Pſalme; Quis dabit è Sion ſalutem, to wiſh for the ſalvation of Sion, which they have ſo oft derided. They ſhall ſeeke; and, then they ſhall ſeeke. Till then (poſſibly) you ſhall, loſe your labour, if you tell them of ſeeking of GOD but and how good it is. They are (ſaith Ieremie) like the Dromedarie of the wildcrneſſe, a beaſt of exceeding ſwiftneſſe, (the female ſpecially:) Over hill and dale ſhee goeth (ſaith the Prophet,) and ſnuffeth up the aire at her pleaſure, and who can over-take her? They, that ſeeke her, will not weary themſelves, till her moneth: And in her moneth, when ſhee is bagged, then they will finde her, and deale with her well enough. The caſe is like. Age, ſickneſſe, death are farre off: Youth, health, and ſtrength poſſeſſe them: there is no comming to them, then. The moneth, cum occîderet, is not yet come: But, come that once (as, once it will, to all) you ſhall finde, quærebant will have his place, Fiat. It is therefore GOD's owne reſolution; Thus he reſolveth:

veth : I will goe (ſaith He) and returne to my place, till they acknowledge their faults, and ſeeke me : And when will that be ? He addeth : In noviſſimo quærent me diligenter, An end will come : and when that commeth, they will ſeeke me diligently, even the beſt of them. And, even ſo we are faine to reſolve : For, our lot, is GODS lot, and when He ſought to them, we goe to our place, and there ſtand, till their moneth, Expectantes aquæ motum, waiting till the deſtroying Angell come and ſtirre the water, and then quærent Eum wilbe worth the ſeeking after. Hoſ.5.15. Ioh.5.4.

Then, according to Saint Paul's disjunctive, we, that all other times mente excedimus Deo, at that time ſobrii ſumus vobis. Divinitie, which (in our ruffe) is ſophiſme and ſchoole-points, and (at the beſt) a kind of extaſie about GOD, is and ſhall be, then, the words of truth and ſoberneſſe. For, GOD, and His ſeeking will have their time; Before, if it may be: but if not before, then, at the fartheſt. Firſt or laſt; all ſhall confeſſe, by ſeeking, GOD is to be ſought. Some, before He kill; and happy are they: But, when He killeth, all: Hypocrites, Heathens, Atheiſts and all. 2 Co.5.13.

And I would pray you (in a word) but to note, in ſeeking then, how many things they confeſſe. For, there be (I take it) foure potentiall Confeſſions in it:

That ſuch an one there is to be ſought. A Power above us, whoſe being and ſoveraignety, all, firſt or laſt ſhall ſeeke. 1

That ſomewhat there is to be found: ſome good to be done, in ſeeking (as Eſay ſaith) Non fruſtra dixit, Hee hath not in vaine ſayd to the ſeed of Iacob, ſeeke ye me. For were it to no purpoſe, they would not then doe it; but, as at other times they did, ſo let it alone then, too. 2 Eſa.45.19.

That, whatſoever that good is, hit upon it, or ſtumble on it: we ſhall not: It will not be had in parergo, but ſeeke it we muſt. For, without ſeeking, it will not be had. If it would they might ſit ſtill, and let it drop into their lappes. 3

That, ſeeking at this time when He ſlayeth them, they that ſhew what that good is, they ſeeke: Even that, the Pſalmiſt ſaith, ſeeke the LORD, and your ſoule ſhall live: that whatſoever become of their body, at leaſt their ſoule may live: that we loſe not both; that He kill not both, and caſt both into hell fire. And this, even when we come within the hemiſphere of the other life, the ſenſe we then have of ſomewhat that ſhould have been ſought before; the miſ-giving of our hearts, they ſhall come to a reckoning, for not ſeeking ſooner: And this, that not one of us would dye ſuddenly by our good-wills, but have a time to ſeeke GOD, before wee loſe our ſelves: This, that we deſire to dye ſeeking, howſoever we live; all ſhew certainly, it is a Fiat, a thing to be done; a good thing to ſeeke GOD, even the enimies of it, being Iudges of it. 4 Pſal.69.32.

So then: quærebant Eum is as it ſhould be. But, I adde: [1] If it be quærebant, ſeeking indeed. [2] And, if it be quærebant Eum, and not aliud in Eo: Seeking, not Him, but ſomewhat elſe by Him.

If it be ſeeking indeed. For they, to whom the Prophet Eſai ſaid, * Si quæritis, quærite, If ye ſeeke, why then doe it; ſought ſo, as (it ſeemeth) their ſeeking deſerved not the name of ſeeking. So looſely, ſo ſlightly, ſo ſlenderly they did it; as if, that, they ſought, were as good loſt as found. So ſought the party that ſaid, In lectulo quæſivi quem diligit anima, that lay in bed and ſought. So hee that asked our SAVIOVR quid eſt veritas? (a very good queſtion:) and when he had asked it, another thing tooke him in the head, and up he roſe, and went his way, before CHRIST could tell him, what it was. Such is our ſeeking, for the moſt part. Some idle queſtion caſt: Some table-talke moved: Some quid eſt veritas, and goe our way: All by the way, In tranſcurſu: and never, as if it were about ſome matter of ſpeciall moment, ſit about it and ſeeke it out indeed.

1 It muſt be quærebant, ſeeking indeed.
* Eſa.21.12. Cant.3.1. Ioh.18.30.

1. They turned them (ſaith the Text:) as if, before, they ſought, without ſo much as turning them about.

2. They roſe up: as though, before, they ſate ſtill and ſought.

3. They did it early, and did not tarry till Cum occîderet, the ſunne were ſet, and no light to ſeeke by, but their feet ſtumbled in the darke mountaines.

4. They

4 They enquired : So that before, if you had ought to ſay to them, you might ; they had nothing to ſay to you. To ſeeke then, is To Turne, To riſe, To riſe early, To enquire after it. O Si quæritis, quærite (ſaith Eſay) the morning commeth, and ſo doth the night : that is : our daies ſpend apace ; and wee ſay, wee will ſeeke : If wee will ſeeke, let us once doe it indeed.

Eſa. 21, 12.

2 It muſt be Eum Him.

Secondly, if it be quærebant, and if it be Eum : Another point to be rectified. * Non veſtra, ſed vos (ſaith the Apoſtle) is the right ſeeking. Not, ſeeke Him, for ſome-what we would have of Him : but to ſeeke Himſelfe, for Himſelfe. It is one thing (ſay the Schooles) to ſeeke GOD, for fruition : another, to ſeeke Him, to make uſe of Him. One thing (ſaith CHRIST) to ſeeke for the miracle ; another, for the loaves. One thing, to ſeeke His face ; another, to ſeeke his fingers ends. One thing to conſult with Him only for conſcience, to know and doe ; another, to conſult with Him, if it hit our humor to make our advantage of it ; if it goe againſt us, to ſet light by it. Such is our ſeeking for the moſt part : Cum occîderet, to have our turne ſerved ; to have our health reſtored, that we may ſeeke Him no longer, but to our former riot againe, and to morrow may bee as yeſterday, and much more.

*2 Cor. 12. 14.

Ioh. 6. 26.

Pſal. 105. 4.

Eſay 56. 12.

Seeke Him, indeed : Seeke Him, for Himſelfe. Theſe two points being agreed of, wee ſhall throughly agree of quærebant Eum. And, ſo much for it, and for our fiat. Now, to our Ne fiat.

2 Our Ne fiat : cum occideret, the time.

For, when wee have agreed of our ſeeking, wee have not done. With [a] diligence, it would be, and due reſpect. Our ſeeking (as all things, the beſt things under the Sunne) muſt have τὸν ποσὸν καὶ τὸν χρόνον, their due time and place. Wherein appeareth the abating power of Circumſtances : that they are able to bring down the ſubſtances. Namely, of the time : And that, miſſe-timing marreth not onely Muſike, but all things elſe. The thing is right ; The Cum is wrong ; and ſo, all is wrong.

[a] Hoſ. 5. 6. Ioh. 8. 21.

1 Gods ſeeking to have a time.

To find out the time, we agree firſt, that as every weighty thing hath, ſo the ſeeking of GOD is to be allowed a time, too.

Pſal. 105. 4.

What time is that ? Verily, wee ſhould doe it abſolutely, all our life long : Quærite faciem Ejus ſemper. Not, When ? But, when not ? without limitation, continually.

2 A ſet time, Cum.

And, in this ſenſe we grant Cum occîderet : then, and at other times too. But, not (as Aſaph) then, and never till then : So, we denie it.

GOD (indeed) is ſo to be ſought : but we cannot ſo ſeeke Him : Other our affaires crave allowance out of our time, and we are well content to yeeld it largely. Only that GOD have a ſet time left, when to ſeeke Him. That is but reaſon : all will yeeld to it. All grant a Cum.

Act. 14. 26.

But, come to know, when that when ſhall be ; here, we varie, firſt. We cannot bee brought to ſet downe any certainty, but love to be left at large. Doe it we will ; but (indeed) we cannot ſhew when ; but even Felix his when, ὅταν μετακαλέσωμαι, when we have leaſure. I cannot now ſtand to ſeeke (ſaith he ;) I hope one day to be at leaſure to doe it : but, that day never came.

Vrge them, preſſe them, When ? No other reſolution, but, omnis peccator dicit, Aliquando Deum ſequar, Sed non modò : Sometime ſtill ; but, not this time. Never, in the preſent ; but, ſometime hereafter.

Follow them all along their life, they find not this Cum, but put it from one Cum to another, till there be none left, but only Cum occîderet, Even that very time, againſt which GOD layeth His exceptions. Every time before, wee ſay, Nondum tempus, it is not time yet : Every houre before, Nondum venit hora, the houre is not yet come.

Not to leave GOD's ſeeking thus at randome : But to grow to ſome certainty. I demand, Will any time ſerve ? Is GOD at all times to bee found ? It is certaine, Not. The very limitation (of dum invenire poteſt) ſheweth plainely that other times there bee, wherein, Seeke Him you may, but find Him you ſhall not.

Eſa. 55. 6.

Then

Then, if, at all times, He is not to be found, we are to make choice of a certaine Cum, Cum inveniri poteſt, when He may be found, and then ſeeke Him.

Many returnes there be, in the terme of our life; Many Cum's: All are reduced to two: [1] Cum Servaret; and [2] Cum occîderet. Or (if we will needs be wedded, to a Cum occîderet) [1] Cum occîderet hoſtes eorum; [2] not, eos: When He ſcattereth and ſlayeth our enemies, and ſaveth us. One of theſe two it muſt needs be.

Cum occîderet, it is not. CHRIST Himſelfe expreſly limiteth it, before: * Dedi ei tempus ad pœnitendum, (ſaith he) I gave her a time to repent. What time is that? Leſt wee might miſtake it, to bee cum occîderet, He adds; If we doe it not, in that time, ſo by Him given, He will caſt us downe on our beds, the beds of affliction and ſickneſſe, and there kill us with death. So that, the time, he alloweth us to repent, is before we come thither. For, thither we come, becauſe we did it not in the time, he gave us to do it in. Indeed, our bed is not the place: In lectulo quæſivi, I ſought Him in my bed: quæſivi, ſed non inveni: I ſought Him, but I found Him not. The place of ſlaughter is not the place: Nor, the time of killing is not the time. We may take that time: but it is not dedi illis, none of His giving. The time, He giveth us, is, before we come there.

It would be 1. Cum ſervaret.
* Apoc. 2. 21. Ver. 22. 23.
Cant. 3. 1.

Then, if when He kills us, is not it, when he ſaveth us? it is. It is indeed: and a cluſter of it, an houre of cum ſervaret, then, is better than a vintage, a whole day of Cum occîderet.

Vpon theſe two the whole Pſalme ſtandeth: and the part (before) ſheweth, when it ſhould have been. When He overwhelmed the Aegyptians in the Sea: When the Pillar of the cloud was over: When, He not only ſaved them, but ſerved them, raining downe Manna, for their need, and giving them Quailes for their luſt: then, was the time with them: and then, is the time with us.

Ver. 13. 14. 24. 27.

For (ſure) as we ſeeke GOD, to ſave us: ſo, He ſaveth us to ſeeke Him. If, when we ſeeke Him, we are ſaved; when we are ſaved, we ſhould ſeeke Him. The time of His ſaving is the time of our ſeeking: And, one houre, then, is better than foure and twentie.

All that while, what ſeeke we? Why (as Ieremie ſaith) wee doe then quærere grandia. Other greater matters we have in hand: Matters of more weight than the ſeeking of GOD. As if His ſeeking were ſome petie buſineſſe: Slightly to be ſought, and lightly to be found. Any time good enough for it.

Ier. 45. 5.

Nay, not that: but, ſo evill are we affected to ſeeke Him, then, that querebant is occîderet: wee indite Him of our death; it is death to doe it: as leeſe die, as ſeeke: It maketh us old; it killeth us before our time. Wee digeſt not them, that call on us for it, but ſeeke our ſelves (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) Magiſtros ſecundum deſideria, that may entertaine us with Speculations, of what may bee done by miracle, at the houre of death: that may give us dayes and elbow-roome enough, to ſeeke other things, and to ſhrinke up His ſeeking into a narrow time, at our end; and tell us, time enough then. For, thus (then) we reckon: all the time wee ſpend in it, we loſe the fruit of our life, and the joy of our hearts ſhall be taken from us. As if the fruit of life were not to finde GOD; Or, as if any true hearts joy, GOD being not found. Call wee this our fruit and joy, not to ſeeke GOD? Call it not ſo: Lætetur cor quærentium Deum (ſaith the HOLY GHOST) Let the heart of them rejoyce, that ſeeke the Lord. Yea, in lachrymis peccatorum, in the very teares of a penitent, there is (ſaith S. Auguſtine) more ſound joy, than in riſu theatrorum, in all the games, the theater can affoord: Da Chriſtianum, & ſcit quid dico. But, our taſte is turned, and wee reliſh not this Seeking. By our fleſh-pots wee have lived, and by them we will dye, and ſo wee doe. Luſt hath been our life, and we will be buried in the graves of Luſt: And ſo we ſhall, and never know, what that joy meaneth, Lætetur cor quærentium Deum.

2 Tim. 4. 3.
Pſal. 105. 3.

Cum Servaret then, will not ſerve. Nay, cum occîderet will ſcarce ſerve, it hath much adoe: Let Him draw His ſword, and come amongſt us. For if (as, of His goodneſſe, Hee doth not) Hee ruſh not on us at firſt, but begin with others: If it bee cum occîderet alios: we ſeeke not. See ye the XXXI. Verſe: He took away others, before their faces; faces; and thoſe, not weake or ſickly perſons, but the goodlieſt and ſtrongeſt of all Iſrael, and leaſt likely to die. Here is occîderet. Now, did this move? No: (See the XXXII. verſe:) for, at this they ſinned yet more, and went about their ſeeking never the ſooner. It muſt be cum occîderet eos, themſelves, their owne ſelves, or it will not doe it.

2. Cum occîderet alios.

4 3 Cum cæderet eos. Come then to themſelves and ſmite them with the edge, not with the poynt: with the edge, to wound; not with the point, to diſpatch out-right: will that ſerve? Cum cæderet eos, when He wounded them, with ſome mortall ſickneſſe the meſſenger of death, would they ſeeke Him then? No: not then, not for all that, would they frame to it. 2 Chr. 16. 12. For, Quærebant medicum, then. I ſay, as Aſa ſought medicos, & non Deum: Not, GOD and them; but them firſt, and let GOD ſtay till they be gone. And, till they give us over, and tell us plainely, occîderet is now come indeed: no ſmiting or wounding will ſend us to ſeeke. So that, it is not either 1 Cum Servaret eos, or 2 Cum Serviret eis, His ſaving, or ſerving us: Nay it is not, 3 Cum occîderet alios, or 4 Cum cæderet, His killing others, or wounding us with any but our deaths-wound, will doe it.

It is Cum occîderet, which is a Ne fiat. Tandem then, when we are come to the very laſt caſt, our ſtrength is gone, our ſpirit cleane ſpent, our ſenſes appalled, and the powers of our ſoule as numme as our ſenſes: when a generall proſtration of all our powers, and the ſhadow of death upon our eyes: Then, ſomething we would ſay or doe, which ſhould ſtand for our ſeeking: but (I doubt) it will not ſerve. This, is the time, we allow GOD, to ſeeke Him in.

It this it? would we then ſeeke Him, when we are not in caſe, to ſeeke any thing elſe? Would wee turne to Him then, when wee are not able to turne our ſelves in our bed? Or, riſe early to ſeeke Him, when wee are not able to riſe at all: Or inquire after Him, when our breath faileth us, and we are not able to ſpeake three words together? Neither before, nor with, but even at the end of occîderet? No houre, but the houre of death? No time, but when He taketh time from us, and us from it, Apoc. 10 7. & tempus non erit amplius? What ſhall I ſay? Shall I commend this ſeeking, turning, riſing, inquiring? No: I cannot commend it, either in it ſelfe, or to any. I commend it not.

That that may be ſaid is this, and it is nothing. True: ſome one or two of a thouſand and ten thouſand, that have. How then? Shall we not therefore follow our inſtruction and ſeeke Him before? Nay then, Eſay 65. 1. Some have found and never ſought: Let us not ſeeke Him at all, if that will hold. Thus it is: Some, going a journey, have found a purſe by the way: It were madde counſell, to adviſe us to leave our money behind, upon hope of like hap in ours. No: this is ſafe and good: Though ſome one or two have found and not ſought; yet let us ſeeke for all that. Though ſome one or two have, then, ſought, and found, yet let us ſeeke before. Though ſome have found a purſe in their way, Eſay 30. 21. let us not truſt to like hap, but carry money with us. This is a privy doore, on ſpeciall favour open to ſome few. There lieth no way by them. This is the way, (you have heard) Walke in it, and you ſhall find reſt to your ſoules.

1 As not CHRISTS time of ſeeking. To ſpeake then of ſafe ſeeking, and ſure finding, I ſay (as Aſaph ſaith) it is a Ne fiant. This time is not the time CHRIST giveth us: he aſſigneth us another. Yea, we condemne our ſelves, in that we would ſeeme to allow it our ſelves. If we were put to it, to ſay plainely; Mat. 6. 33. Not, till He kill me: it would choke us. We neither have heart nor face, we would not dare to anſwer ſo; we dare not avow it. And if it be a ne dicant, it is a Ne fiant. The time of GODS quærite is Primum quærite. This Cum is the laſt of all our Cum's; all other before it. Firſt, and laſt are flat ad oppoſitum. This is not it.

2 Not the acceptable time. The time of ſeeking GOD muſt bee δεκτὸς, ſuch as is meet to be received. This, is not: Therefore (I hope) we will not offer it GOD. If we doe, take heed He ſcorne not this time, as He doth their price, in Zach. 11. 13. Zacharie: A goodly time, that I have aſſigned me. Take heed He ſtand not upon His reputation (as in Mal. 2. 8. Malachi) and bid us Offer our ſervice, at this houre, to any Great man and ſee, whether he will be content with it, and not reject both us and our ſeeking, then. This, is not; cannot be but a great Ne fiant; To offer GOD that, no man is ſo meane, but would take in evill part.

This

This time, is the time, when all Hypocrites, Athieſts, tag and rag, come in, and ſeeke Him in a ſort: And ſhall not we be confounded, to ſee our ſelves in their number? Nay, to ſay that muſt be ſaid (for, true it is) It is paſt the Divel's time. They be his words [Cur, ante tempus?] and hee ſeeketh to make them ours, that it is ever too ſoone to ſeeke GOD. At the hardeſt (I truſt) we will not keepe time with him. Matt.8.29.

And, to ſeeke Him then, is not to ſeeke Him: Not quærebant Eum. No: they ſeeke Him not, they diſſemble with Him (ſaith Aſaph, in the next verſe.) For, when GOD to trie them, reprieved them never ſo little time, they fell to their old byas; and when as He ceaſed killing, their ſeeking was at an end. So are all forced Seekings: like to a bow-ſtring brought to his full bent, but remitte you never ſo little, it ſtarteth backe againe. 3 No time of ſeeking, but of diſſembling Verſe.25.

Nay it is not quærebant, no kindly ſeeking, but a baſe ignoble creeping to, without all ingenuitie, when wee muſt either die or doe it. Neither χάεις, nor κλεὸς, to doe it then.

But, in very deed, it is no ſeeking at all, as before we defined quærebant to ſeeke indeed. There is a diameter betweene occîderent and quærebant, and therefore, betweene it and quærebant Eum. Men cannot then ſeeke: If they muſt riſe up, and turne them that muſt doe it; they are not able for their lives, to turne or ſtirr themſelves to doe it. Nay, nor to enquire. For, what is our ſeeking, then? Is it not, to lie ſtill on our bed, and ſuffer a few words to be ſpoken in our eares? Have a little opiate Divinitie miniſtred to our ſoules, and ſo ſent away? Sure, this is rather to be ſought, than to ſeeke. There goeth more to Quærebant, then thus. We muſt then ſeeke, when we are in caſe, to give ſentence and to doe judgement on our ſelves: When we are able to take up our croſſe, before it be laid on us. Quærebant Eum muſt ſtand before cum occîderet. 4 No ſeeking at all.

Laſtly, it would be knowne, What became of this Quærebant? What they found that ſought thus; and then, and not before? They found not Him, the Prophet ſaith plainely: They goe then, with ſheepe and bullocks, and all manner of ſacrifice, to ſeeke the Lord, but find Him not; for, He hath withdrawne Himſelfe before. The ill ſucceſſe of it. Hoſ.5.6.

And juſtly they find Him not, ex lege talionis. GOD Himſelfe anſwers them; nay, their owne hearts anſwer themſelves: Go, whom you have ſpent your life in ſeeking, ſeek to them now. Let them ſave you, at this, whom ye ſought, at all other times. As for me, it ſhall come to paſſe, as I cryed and you would not heare; So, you ſhall crie and ſeeke, and ſhall not find, or be heard (ſaith the LORD.)

Yes: they found Him; but, with a doore ſhut betweene Him and them. But, what found they? The Parable of the ten virgins tell us (which is the Goſpell for this Pſalme:) they found (that, which we, I hope, ſhall never find) a Neſcio vos. Where (that we may ſee, that this courſe is folly, and therefore indeed a ne fiant ſicut) that which putteth the difference of thoſe that be wiſe and goe in, is, that they had ſought and looked to their oyle, yer the Bridegroome came: And thoſe that were fooliſh and ſhut out, when the Bride-groome was even comming (that is, cum occîderet) were to ſeeke their oyle then; had not looked to it, till then. Neſcio vos is their anſwer, He knoweth them not: they tooke too ſhort a time, to breed acquaintance in. Neſcio vos they find, that ſo ſeeke. Profectò ad hoc tonitru, &c. At this clappe, he that waketh not, is not aſleepe, but dead. Matt.25.12. Mat.25.4.

To conclude then, with our Inſtruction. If this time, and this ſeeking have ſo many evill marks: the time ſo unſeaſonnable; the Seeking ſo many waies to ſeeke; If the ſucceſſe to this ſeeking bee no better, but Neſcio vos: Why then Ne fiat. If theſe here were not well adviſed: If thoſe Virgins were fooliſh: why then, Ne fiant ſicut, not to be like. Our Inſtruction

Secondly, To ſever the ſilver from the droſſe; The ſeeking is good, keepe it: the time is wrong, change it; Either into Antequam occîderet, or into Cum ſervaret. Fiat, to the action: Ne fiat, to the time. 2

Thirdly, As we confeſſe, that there is one to be ſought: And that, with the turning of a ginne we cannot have Him, when we liſt, but ſeeke Him we muſt: That His ſeeking is worth the while: And that it is not diſpatched in a minute, but muſt have time: So, 3 to thinke His ſeeking worthy a better, and to allow it a better time than this, to doe it in.

4 Fourthly, ſeeing yet is the acceptable time; Yet, He may bee found; Yet, it is cum ſervaret; occîderet is not yet come; (How neere it is, it is hard to ſay: Our SAVIOVR Luk. 12.46. CHRIST ſaith, it is quâ horâ neſcis, it may be neerer than we are aware:) Leſt it come upon us before wee ſeeke, let us ſeeke, before it come upon us. So ſeeking, we ſhall ſafely ſeeke: Safely ſeeke, and ſurely finde GOD; and with GOD, whatſoever is worth the finding. But (that which wee ſeeke) we ſhall, after occîderet is paſt, find our ſelves in His Pſal. 16. 11. preſence, and at His right hand, In whoſe preſence, is the fulneſſe of joy; (Not as ours here, joyes halfe empty:) and, at whoſe right hand, there are pleaſures for evermore; (Not as ours here, for a time, and a ſhort time, GOD knoweth.) That, which here we ſeeke and cannot finde, with Him, wee ſhall; if wee ſhall here, indeed, and in due time ſeeke Him, by the timely fruits of an undelayed repentance. Almighty GOD lighten our minds, kindle our affections, ſettle our hearts ſo to ſeeke, &c.

A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE QVEEN ELIZABETH, AT RICHMOND, ON THE XXI. of February, Anno Domini, MDXCIX. being ASH-WEDNESDAY:

At what time the Earle of ESSEX was going forth, upon the Expedition for IRELAND.

DEVT. Chap. XXIII. Ver. IX.

Quando egreſſus fueris adverſus hoſtes tuos in pugnam, cuſtodies te ab omni re mala.

When thou goeſt out, with the Hoſt againſt thine enemies, keepe thee then from all wickedneſſe.

TO entitle this time to this Text, or to ſhew it pertinent to the preſent occaſion, will aske no long Preface. When thou goeſt forth, &c. This When, is Now. There be enemies: and we have an Hoſt: It is going forth. CHRIST's owne application (which is the beſt) may well be applyed here: This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your eares. Luc.4.21. This our Hoſt ſo going forth, our hearts deſire and prayer unto GOD is, that they may happily goe, and thrice happily come againe; with joy and triumph, to Her Sacred Majeſtie; honour to themſelves; and generall contentment to the whole Land. So ſhall they goe, and ſo come, if we can procure the Lord of Hoſts to goe forth with, and to take charge of our Hoſts. It is He that giveth victorie to Kings (ſaith DAVID:) It is He, that is Triumphator Iſraël (ſaith Samuel.) Victorie and triumph never faile, if He faile not. Pſal.144.10. 1 Sam.15.29.

Now then, that GOD may not faile them, but goe in and out before them, and bring them backe with victorie and triumph, and that, we all deſire and pray for, may ſo come to paſſe; Moſes doth here, out of his owne experience, beſtow an advice upon us: (And Moſes could skill what belonged to warre, as one that forty yeares together was never out of campe.) Which advice is: that among our militare points wee would reckon the abatement of ſinne for one: That now, this time of our going forth, we would goe forth againſt ſinne too; and keepe us, from it, as we would keepe us from our enemie. If we could be but perſwaded to reforme our former cuſtome of ſinne, it would (certainly) doe the journey good. That therefore, with other courſes, ſome remembrance, ſome regard be had of this; that, at this time, ſinne doe not ſo over-flow among us, be not ſo very fruitfull as before time it hath.

And this is an uſe of Divinitie in warre. And, as this an uſe of Divinitie, in warre: So have we withall an uſe of warre, in Divinitie. For, MOSES telling us, that when our forces goe forth againſt the enemie, that we, Then, at that time, are in any wiſe to keepe us from wickedneſſe: by ſorting theſe thus together, doth plainly intimate, that, when the time of warre is, then is a fit time, a very good opportunitie, to draw from ſinne, and to returne to GOD. Theſe former yeares, this time of the faſt, and this day, the firſt day of it (both) miniſtred an occaſion to call for an abſtinence from ſinne: This day, and this time being ſet out by the Churches appointment to that end. Now, beſides that ordinarie, of other yeares, GOD, this yeare, hath ſent us another, the time of Warre: and that, a very ſeaſonable time too, wherein to repent and retire from ſinne. As if he ſhould ſay: If you would forſake ſinne, now you may doe it: For behold, now is an acceptable time, and a fit ſeaſon. This time to concurre with that time; and both to cooperate to the amendment of our lives.

And what ſhall I ſay? O that one of them, the former or the latter, or both might prevaile ſo much with us, that as the forepart, this day is fulfilled in our eares, ſo the latter part might be fulfilled in our lives: that it might not be ſingly regarded, that is thus doubly commended: That the faſt at hand might keepe us; or the warre at hand might keepe us; or both might keepe us; that we might be kept from ſinne. That either Ioel's trumpe proclaiming a faſt; or Amos trumpe proclaiming warre, might ſerve to ſound this retraite, might ſerve to awake us from that (now) more than ſleepe, even almoſt that Lethargie of ſinne, which the ſecuritie of our ſo long peace hath caſt us in.

This is the Summe. Theſe, the double uſe: 1 Of warre, in Divinitie: That our going forth might procure the giving over ſinne. 2 Of Divinitie, in warre: that our giving over ſinne might procure good ſpeed to our going forth; even an honorable and happy returne.

The Diviſion

I. II.

The parts are two: (For the verſe parteth it ſelfe by when, and then.) Theſe two: 1 the Going forth, of the Hoſt. 2 The keeping from ſinne. To expreſſe them in the termes of the preſent buſineſſe: 1 The former, the Commiſſion authorizing to goe. 2 The latter, the Inſtruction directing, ſo to goe, that we may proſper and prevaile. In which latter will come to be conſidered theſe three points: 1. The Conjunction and Coherence of theſe two. 2. The Conſequence. 3. The Contents of the latter; How to keepe us from ſinne.

I.

The Commiſſion.

WHen thou goeſt forth &c. In the firſt is the Commiſſion, which is ever the corner-ſtone of all proceedings. If wee take the verſe intire, both parts together, it riſeth thus: If they which goe to warre muſt keepe themſelves from ſinne, then is warre no ſinne, but lawfull; and, without ſinne, to bee undertaken. Or, if wee take the firſt part by it ſelfe; in ſaying, when thou goeſt, hee implieth, a time will come, when they may goe forth. For, vaine were the ſuppoſall and farre unworthy the wiſdome of GOD's Spirit to ſay, when; if never any ſuch time would come: if there were no time for warre, of GOD's allowance. Wee cannot better patterne it, than by the Goſpell of this day [When ye faſt, be not like hypocrites] by all Divines reſolved this. Faſt ye may ſometimes: and then faſting, looke you fall not into hypocriſie. And as in that, ſo in this: Goe ye may, ſometimes: Only, When ye goe, ſee ye refraine from ſinne, and then goe and ſpare not. Out of which match of theſe two, Faſt, and warre, we may riſe higher.

It is no leſſe uſuall with the prophets, to ſay Sanctificate prælium (as Ioel. 3.) than to ſay, Sanctificabo jejunium. (Ioel. 2.) Sanctifie a warre, as well as a faſt. And in another, Conſecrate manus veſtras hodiè Domino, conſecrate your hands, this day unto the LORD. Which ſheweth, war is not ſo ſecular a matter, but that it hath both his lawfulneſſe & his holineſſe: and that the very hands may be ſacred or hallowed, by fighting ſome battells. And therefore, in the Calendar of Saints, we have nominated, not Abel, Enoch, and Noë alone, men of peace and devotion, who ſpent their time in prayer and ſervice of GOD: But Gedeon, Iepthe, Samſon, worthies & men of war, who (ſaith the Apoſtle) through faith were valiant in battell, and through faith put to flight the armies of Aliens. Warre therefore hath his time and commiſſion from GOD.

Ioel 3.9. Ioel 2.15. Exo. 32.29. Heb. 11. Verſe. 4.5.7. Verſe. 32.34.

Secondly, I adde that this kind of war; Not only defenſive warr, but offenſive too, hath his when. And that, out of this very text: which is (if we marke well) not when they come forth againſt thee, but when thou goeſt forth againſt them, παρεμβάλλειν (ſay the Seventy) to invade, or annoy them. Both theſe have their time: The former to maintaine our right: the latter, to avenge our wrong. By both theſe wayes, doth GOD ſend His people forth: Both have warrant. Before Moſes: Abraham's war, to reſcue Lot his allie, was Defenſive and Lawfull: Iacob's war, to winne from the Amorite by his ſword and bow, Offenſive and Lawfull too. Vnder Moſes: The war againſt Amalek, who came out againſt them: and the warre againſt Madian, againſt whom they went forth, to wreake themſelves for the ſinne of Peor; both lawfull. After Moſes: King David, in the battell of Paſ-dammim keeping the enemie from their gates; In the battell of Gath, ſeeking the enemie at his owne gates, and giving him battell in his owne territorie. And this, as good Law; ſo Egredere, & compelle eos intrare; Goe forth, and compell them to come in, is good Goſpell too. So that, war, and this kind of war hath his commiſſion.

Gen. 14.14. Gen. 48.22. Exo. 17.8. Num. 31.2. 1 Chro. 11.15. 2 Chro. 20.6. Luc. 14.23.

Thirdly: And to ſtrengthen the hands of our men of war yet further. As war, and To goe forth to war; Againſt our enemies, any enemies, whether forreigne foes, or rebellious ſubjects: So, of all enemies, againſt the latter, againſt them to goe forth, hath ever been counted moſt juſt & lawfull. Many Commiſſions are upon record in the law, of journeys in this kind. Againſt the tribe of Reuben; for erecting them an Altar, beſide that of Moſes: And, that have theſe of ours done too. Againſt the tribe of Benjamin, for a barbarous, and brutiſh outrage committed at Gibea: And, that, have theſe too; And not one, but many. Againſt Seba, for blowing a trumpet and crying, No part have we in David, no inheritance in the ſonne of Iſai: And, ſo far hath their madneſſe proceeded. And the Goſpell is not behind neither. Againſt them that ſend word, Nolumus hunc regnare ſuper nos, producite & occîdite (ſaith our SAVIOVR CHRIST Himſelfe.) In effect, theſe ſay as much as Nolumus: and as much may be ſaid and done to them. Nay, if once he ſay no part in David; if he were Abſalom, or Adoniah (of the bloud royall) he hath ſpoken that word againſt his own life; Much more, if but ſuch a one as Seba the ſonne of Bichri. And yet, even he was nothing ſo deep as this. For, neither had King David vouchſafed him any favour, any time before; neither offered him peace, or to receive him to grace, after he had lift up his heele againſt him. But here, here have been divers Princely favours vouchſafed, and moſt unkindly rejected: meanes of Clemencie many times moſt graciouſly offered, and moſt ungraciouſly refuſed: yea, faith falſified, and expectation deluded; contempt upon contempt heaped up, that the meaſure is full. Theſe then are the enemies againſt, and, This the time when. When, not only we may, but muſt, and that, not with GOD's leave only, but with His liking and full commiſſion, Goe forth in this cauſe. So that, war is lawfull: and this kind, to goe forth: and againſt theſe enemies, moſt juſt and moſt lawfull. At this time againſt theſe enemies, it is a warre ſanctified, they ſhall conſecrate their hands, they ſhall præliari prælia Domini, that fight againſt them. So much for the Commiſſion.

II The Inſtruction

The Commiſsion being had, we are not to depart, but ſtay and take our Inſtructions alſo with us: Which is the latter part, of keeping from wickedneſſe. IOSVA had his Commiſsion from GOD, to goe up againſt AI: Yet, for leaving out this latter, and not looking to Achan better, had not ſo good ſpeed. This therefore muſt accompanie, and keepe time with the former, as a Then to that When.

I The Conjunction; that it is needfull.

1. Wherein firſt, of the joyning theſe two, [1] that they muſt goe together; [2] and (of the reaſon) why they muſt goe together.

2. And after, of the manner; how we may and muſt keepe our ſelves from this wickedneſſe.

The meeting of theſe two within the compaſſe of one verſe, [1] Going forth with an armie, and [2] Forbearing of ſinne, is worth the ſtaying on.

Leading an armie, pertaineth to Militare policie: Forbearing of ſinne, is flat divinitie.

For, what hath the leading an armie, to doe with forbearing of ſinne? Yet, GOD hath thus ſorted them, as we ſee. Therefore Policie of Warre, whereto the former; and Divinitie, whereto the latter belongeth, are not ſuch ſtrangers one to the other, as that, the one muſt avoid while the other is in place. But that, as loving neighbours and good friends (heere) they meet together, they ſtand together, they keepe time, conſequence, and correſpondence, the one with the other. GOD Himſelfe, in whoſe imperiall ſtyle (ſo oft proclaimed in the Prophets) they both meet, The LORD of Hoſts, The holy one of Iſraël: GOD (I ſay) Himſelfe in the great Chapter of Warre (the twentieth of this book) aſſigneth an imployment to the Prieſts, as well as to the Officers of the Campe. even to doe that (which yer while was aſſayed) to animate the Companies in the LORD, and the power of His might; letting them ſee the right of their cauſe, and how ready GOD is to receive the right, under the banner and power of His protection. And, from GOD Himſelfe (no doubt) was that happie and bleſſed combination, which in moſt Warres of happie ſucceſſe, we find, of a Captaine and a Prophet ſorted together: [a] Ioſua, with Moſes a Prophet; [b] Baruk, with Debora a Propheteſſe: [c] Ezekias, with Eſay: [d] Ioſaphat, with Iaaziël: [e] Ioas with Eliſha: And one of theſe doing the other no manner of hurt, but good. Ioſua lifting up his hand, againſt Amalek: Moſes lifting up his hand, for Ioſua. The one leading againſt the enemie and annoying him; the other leading againſt ſinne and annoying it; Againſt ſinne (what ſome reckon of it, it skills not, but) certainely the moſt dangerous enemie both of private perſons and of publike States.

Theſe two then, [1] Going forth with the Hoſt, and [2] Departing from ſinne, being thus linked by GOD, our ſuit is, Breake not this linke: GOD hath joyned them, that wee ſhould joyne them. And this is a needfull ſuit. For, it is one of the diſeaſes under the ſunne; in Warre, all our thoughts run upon the Hoſt; Looking to the Hoſt onely, and nothing but the Hoſt: and letting ſinne runne whether it will without any keeper. I know well; I both know and acknowledge, that the Armies going forth is mainly to be regarded: It hath the firſt place in the Verſe; and it hath it not for nought. IOSVA muſt chooſe out men firſt: Victualls muſt be ſupplied (Iudg. 20). And nemo militat ſtipendiis ſuis, Pay muſt bee thought of. We muſt goe forth with our Hoſt; (They bee the words of the Text:) Goe; not ſit ſtill: And, With an Hoſt; not a heape of naked, or ſtarved men. Wee muſt helpe, and not tempt GOD. To helpe GOD, is a ſtrange ſpeech; yet, ſaid it may bee, ſeeing an Angell hath ſaid it: Curſe ye Meroz (ſaith the Angell of the LORD) curſe the inhabitants thereof; Why? becauſe they came not to helpe the LORD, to helpe the LORD againſt the mighty. This muſt firſt bee done. But, when this is done, all is not done: We are not at a full point; Wee are but in the middeſt of the ſentence yet. As that part (of the Hoſt) is to be regarded: ſo, this (of ſinnes reſtraint) is not to be neglected. As, that hath the firſt place: ſo muſt this have the ſecond, and ſecond the former, or we ſhall have but a broken ſentence without it. There is not, there cannot be a more prejudiciall conceipt, than to ſay in our hearts: If the firſt be well, all is well; then, ſinne on and ſpare not; it kills not greatly, for the later. Si putas, in robore exercitus bella conſiſtere, faciet te Dominus cadere coram inimicis tuis (ſaith the Prophet to Amazia.) If this be our conceipt, ſo the Hoſt be well, all is well: GOD will teach you another leſſon (ſaith he) which I liſt not engliſh. A proofe whereof wee have, before Gibea. Where the whole power of Iſrael (400000 ſtrong) truſting, in their going out ſo ſtrong, fell before a few Benjamites, a ſmall handfull in compariſon; and ſhewed plainely to all ages to come, that it is but a part, it is not all, to goe forth with an Hoſt, though never ſo well appointed.

2 Cor. 25. 7, 8.

Iud. 20. 17.

Let us then (as advice leadeth us) make up our period with taking a courſe for reſtraint of ſinne. For, what ſinne un-reſtreined can worke, the valley of Achor may teach us; where, the inhabitants of the poore towne of AI, put to flight IOSVA with all his forces; and all, becauſe this ſecond point was not well looked to.

Iud. 7. 5.

Now, this ſecond point being within the compaſſe of our profeſſion, and yet having ſo neceſſary an uſe in Warre, as the ſentence is not perfect without it, may ſerve to anſwer the queſtion (more uſually than adviſedly oft caſt out) What good doe theſe Churchmen? What uſe is there of them (now) at ſuch times as this? Yes, there is an uſe of them; and that in Warre, we ſee. The Campe hath uſe of this place; and they that ſerve there, of them that ſerve here. Which GOD ſhewed plainely in the firſt field that ever His people fought: and, when He had ſhewed it, cauſed it to be recorded ad perpetuam rei memoriam (they be GOD's owne words) that the ſame courſe might be ever after holden in all. Where it is thus written (and, if we beleeve not, we ſhall not be eſtabliſhed) that IOSVA's having the better, or going to the worſe, depended not a little on the ſteddineſſe of MOSES's hands: and, that MOSES, ſtaying behind and ſtriking never a ſtroke, did his part toward the attaining of the victory, not much leſſe than Ioſua, that went forth and fought manfully. Prayer then is of uſe: and though we be (ſaith Saint PAVL) armed at all points from hand to foot, yet muſt we ſuper omnia, over all, draw this; and arme even our very armour with prayer and ſupplications.

Exod. 17. 14.

Ephes. 6. 18.

But what availeth prayer, without keeping from ſinne? Therefore, to that armor of Saint PAVL's, we muſt adde Saint PETER's too, To arme our ſelves with this mind of ceaſing from ſinne, that our prayers may be effectuall. Therefore MOSES himſelfe joyneth not to our going forth, his exerciſe of keeping up our hands at prayer; but, this rather of keeping our feet from ſinne. The King of Moab (Balak) When hee obſerved what prayer had wrought in the battaile of Amalek, thought to take the very like courſe, and ſent for Balaam into his Campe; to match Prophet with Prophet, and to oppoſe Prayer unto Prayer. But, when all his altars and rammes would doe no good; Balaam knowing well, there is, in ſinne, a power to defeat any prayer, he commeth to the dangerous counſell of cauſing Iſrael to ſinne with the daughters of Moab: Which was found too true. For, it turned to their ruine, and all their prayers would then doe no good. Heere is then another uſe. For, the chariots and horſes of ELISHA, the weapons of our warfare (as the Apoſtle termeth them) though not carnall (if GOD enable them, to caſt downe ſuch ſinfull thoughts and wicked deſires, as exalt themſelves daily, and to captivate them to the obedience of CHRIST) have (certainely) their uſe to ſecond the former: and we, in our turnes, ſerviceable, as by crying unto GOD by prayer, and drawing Him to the Hoſt, who is our chiefeſt and beſt friend; ſo, by crying alſo againſt ſinne, and chaſing it away, which is our chiefeſt and worſt enemie. Since then theſe two have this mutuall uſe either of other, let this be our petition (and withall, the concluſion of this part) That we ſingle them not, or leane to either alone, but ſuffer them, as they ſtand together in the verſe, ſo, in our care and regard, joyntly to keepe time and goe together. So much for them.

III.

2 The Reaſon of the conjunction.

And now to enquire into the reaſon of this coupling. Why now? Why, at this time (in Warre) a giving over ſinne. For that (indeed) they bee not barely joyned; but, ſo joyned, as one is made the antecedent, the other the conſequent. One, the time, and (as it were) the reaſon to infer the other. Truly MOSES's word [is] will bare both, either either Quando or Quia : When thou goeſt, then keepe ; or Becauſe thou goeſt, therefore, keepe thy ſelfe from ſinne. With the ſame word ſpeaketh the vertuous Ladie to King DAVID, Quia prœliaris prœlia Domini, ideo non invenietur in te iniquitas, Becauſe thou fighteſt the LORD's Battailes, therefore let there not any iniquity be found in thee, all thy dayes.

Sinne (certainely) at all times is to be forborne. When it is Warre ; and not onely when it is Warre, but when it is peace too. Take ye heed, leſt at any time (ſaith CHRIST) Your hearts be overlayd with ſurfetting, with drinke, &c. Not allowing us any time, to bee wicked in. But, though at all times we be to refraine ſinne : Yet, not at all times alike (ſaith MOSES) here. For it is, as if he ſhould ſay : Be it at other times, ſinne may better be borne with ; It is leſſe perillous : But when thou goeſt forth with an Hoſt : Then, then, with an high accent, with an Emphaſis, (that is) then eſpecially ; then, above all other times, then, if ever, it importeth you to have leaſt to doe with it. Good LORD, how croſſe and oppoſite is mans conceit to GOD's, and how contrarie our thoughts unto his ! For even ad oppoſitum, to this poſition of His, We ſee (for the moſt part) that even they, that are the Goers forth, ſeeme to perſwade themſelves, that, Then, they may doe what they liſt ; that at that time, any ſinne is lawfull : that, Warre is rather a Placard, than an Inhibition to ſinne. A thing ſo common, that it made the Heathen man hold, that betweene Militia and Malitia, there was as little difference in ſenſe, as in ſound : And the Prophet DAVID, to call Saul's Companies in his daies, Torrentes Belial, the Land-flouds of wickedneſſe. Which being well conſidered, we may ceaſe to murmure or to marvell, if our going forth have not beene ever with ſuch ſucceſſe, as we wiſhed. GOD, who ſhould give the ſucceſſe, commanding then a reſtraint ; and man, that ſhould need it, then, taking moſt liberty. Verily, if we will learne of GOD, if He ſhall teach us, Sinne is never ſo untimely, as in the time of Warre : never ſo out of ſeaſon, as then : for, that is the time of all times, we ſhould have leaſt to doe with it. To inſiſt then a little upon this point, becauſe it is the maine point, and to ſhew the vigor of this conſequent.

1 From the very nature of Warre, firſt : Which is an act of Iuſtice, and of Iuſtice corrective, whoſe office is to puniſh ſinne. Now then, conſider and judge, even in reaſon ; What a thing this is, how great, groſſe, and foule an incongruitie it is to powre out our ſelves into ſinne, at the very time, when we goe forth to correct ſinne : To ſet forth, to puniſh rebells, when we our ſelves are in rebellion againſt GOD, His Word, and Spirit. Which, what is it but to caſt out devils by the power of Belzebub ? Sure our hearts muſt needs ſtrike us in the middeſt of our ſinne, and tell us, we are in a great and grievous prevarication ; allowing that in our ſelves, that we goe to condemne and to ſtone to death, in others. Therefore, ſince to goe to Warre, is to goe to puniſh ſinne : Certainely, the time of puniſhing ſinne is not a time to ſinne in.

Mat. 12.24.

2 Secondly, from Warre in reſpect of GOD, I know not, what we reckon of Warre : Peace is His bleſſing (we are ſure,) and a ſpeciall favour it is from Him (as the Prophets account it ;) for a land to ſpend more iron in ſcithes, and plough-ſhares, than in ſword-blades or ſpeare-heads. And, if peace bee a bleſſing, and a chiefe of His bleſſings, wee may reduce from thence what Warre is. To make no otherwiſe of it than it is, the rod of GOD's wrath (as Eſay termeth it :) his iron flaile (as Amos :) the hammer of the earth (as Ieremie :) whereby He daſheth two Nations together ; One of them muſt in peeces ; both, the worſe for it. Warre is no matter of ſport. Indeed, I ſee Abner eſteeme of it as of a ſport ; Let the young men riſe (ſaith hee to Ioab) and ſhew us ſome ſport. But I ſee the ſame Abner, before the end of the ſame Chapter, weary of his ſport, and treating with Ioab for an end of it : How long ſhall the ſword devoure, (ſaith he) ſhall it not be bitterneſſe in the end ? So, it may be ſport in the beginning : it will be bitterneſſe in the end, if it hold long. Warre then being GOD's rod, His fearefull rod, and that ſo fearefull that King David (though a Warriour too) when both were in his choice, preferred the Plague before it, and deſired it of the twaine : When GOD's hand, with this rod, this His fearefull rod, is over us, to be ſo farre from feare, and all due regard, as then, not to ſhunne ſinne any whit the more, but to fall to it as faſt as ever : it cannot bee, but but a high contempt; yea a kind of defiance and deſpite, then, to doe it: Doe we provoke the LORD to anger, are we ſtronger than Hee? Then, ſince Warre is GOD's rod, chooſe ſome other time: under the rod, ſinne not; then, forbeare it. Certainely, that time is no time to ſinne. 1 Cor. 10. 22.

3 The rather, for that, ſinne it is, and the not keeping from ſinne, but our keeping to it and with it, that hath made this rod, and put it into His hand. For, ſure it is, that for the tranſgreſſion of a people, GOD ſuffereth theſe diviſions of Reuben within; GOD ſtirreth up the ſpirit of Princes abroad, to take peace from the earth: thereby to chaſten men, by paring the growth of their wealth, with this His hired razor; by waſting their ſtrong men (the hand of the enemies eating them up;) by making widdowes and fatherleſſe children; by other like conſequents of Warre. If then our ſinnes (common unto us, with other nations) and that Our Vnthankfulneſſe (peculiar to us alone) have brought all this upon us; if this enemie have ſtirred up theſe enemies; if Warre be the ſickneſſe, and ſinne the ſurfeit; ſhould we not (at leaſt-wiſe now, while the ſhivering fit of our ſinnes is upon us) diet our ſelves a little and keepe ſome order? but drinke iniquitie as water, and diſtemper our ſelves as though we were in perfect ſtate of health? Shall we make our diſeaſe deſperate, and haſten our ruine by not containing from ſinne, that hath caſt us in it? Know we, what time this is? Is this a a time of ſinne? Certainely, we cannot deviſe a worſe. In the time of Warre, it is high time, to keepe us from ſinne.

4 But, above all (which will touch us neereſt, and therefore againe and againe muſt bee told us over,) that the ſafe and ſpeedie comming againe of them that now goe forth (whoſe proſperitie we are to ſeeke with all our poſſible endevours) that their good ſpeed dependeth upon GOD's going forth with them: And GOD's going, or ſtaying dependeth very much upon this point. Moſt certaine it is, the event of Warre is moſt uncertaine. When Benhadad went forth with an armie, that the duſt of Samaria was not enough to give every one in his campe a handfull, it was told him (and hee found it true) Ne glorietur accinctus, &c. He that buckleth on his armour muſt not boaſt, as he that puts it off. They that fight can hardly ſet downe, what name the place ſhall have that they fight in: It may be the valley of Achor (that is, ſorrow) by reaſon of a foyle, as that of Ioſua; It may bee the valley of Beracha (that is, bleſſing) by meanes of a victory, as that of Ioſaphat. All is, as GOD is, and as Hee will have it. [a] Once, [b] twice, and [c] thrice, by David, by Salomon, by Ioſaphat, wee are told it, that, It is neither ſword nor bowe; It is neither Chariot nor horſe; It is neither multitude nor valour of an Hoſt will ſerve: But that the battaile is GOD's, and He giveth the upper hand. Wee need not be perſwaded of this; we all are perſwaded (I hope;) and we ſay, with Moſes, If thy Preſence goe not with us, carrie us not hence. Then, if wee ſhall need GOD's favour and helpe in proſpering our journey, and to make that ſure which is ſo uncertaine; itwill ſtand us in hand, to make ſure of Him, in this, this needfull time; and to keepe Him ſure, if it may be. For, if He keepe with the Hoſt, and take their parts, Rebelles tui erunt quaſi nihil (ſaith Eſay;) and theſe ſmoking tayles of firebrands ſhall quickly be quenched. But, if GOD either goe not with them, or retire from them; If there were among them but naked or wounded men; (what ſpeake I of men? If but froggs or flies) they ſhall bee ſufficient to trouble them. 1 Kin. 20. 11. Ioſ. 7. 26. 2 Chr. 20. 26. [a] Pſal. 44. 6. 20. 7. [b] Pro. 21. 31. [c] 2 Chr. 20. 15. Eſay 41. 11. Eſay 7. 4.

Now then, we are at the point. For, if we will have hold of GOD, make Him ſure, be certaine of Him; we muſt breake with ſinne, needs. Sinne and Satan are His enemies, and no fellowſhip, nor communion, no concord, no agreement, no part, no portion between them. If we will draw Him into league, we muſt profeſſe our ſelves enemies unto His enemies, that He may doe the like to ours. At one and the ſame time enter, as an outward warre with wicked rebells, ſo an inward hoſtilitie with our wicked rebellious luſts. For that if we keepe our ſelves from the one, He will keepe us from the other; and theſe being ſuppreſſed, thoſe ſhall not be able to ſtand. Thus doing, the ſword of the LORD ſhalbe with the ſword of Gedeon: GOD ſhalbe with us, Ittiel; and we ſhall prevaile, Vcal. For where Ittiel is, Vcal will not be away. But if we will needs hold on our 2 Cor. 6. 15. Iud. 7. 20. Pro. 30. 1.

league with hell, and continue our wonted entercourſe with wickednes ſtill, and go forth unto it when it beckens or calls, and be ſo farre from keeping from it, that we keepe it as the apple of our eye, and cheriſh it between our breaſts: if we retaine the marke of it in our very fore-heads, and the price of it in the skirts of our garment: for not keeping from it, He will keepe from us, and with-draw His helpe from us, and put us cleane out of His protection.

Therefore, without keeping from ſinne, there is no keeping GOD; out of whoſe keeping, there is no ſafety.

3 The Contents of the Inſtruction, to keepe from ſinne.

This advice being ſo full of behoofe, ſo agreeable to reaſon and religion both, ſo everie way for their and for our good; it remaineth, we ſet our ſelves to thinke of it and keepe it. * Every one returning to his owne heart, to know there (as Salomon ſaith) his owne plague, even the ſinnes wherewith he hath grieved GOD, and to make a covenant with Him-ſelfe, from henceforth more carefully to ſtand upon his guard; and not to goe forth to ſinne, or entertayne it as a friend, but to repute it as an enemie, and to keepe him from it.

* 1 King. 8. 38.

Firſt, for the terme of keeping. When thou goeſt forth againſt thy enemie, goe forth againſt ſinne. We ſhould indeed goe forth againſt ſinne; and practiſe thoſe militare impreſſions, that are done in campe againſt the enemie: Give it the aſſault, annoy it, purſue it, never leave it till we have driven it away. Theſe we ſhould doe againſt it. But, the Scripture offereth more grace; and bidds us (if we liſt not goe forth againſt it, only not to goe forth to it) but keepe our ſelves (that is) ſtand upon our defence, to keep good watch, that it ſurpriſe us not, that it get not dominion over us: doe but this againſt ſin, and it ſhall ſuffice.

Rom. 6. 12.

But, this muſt extend to all wickedneſſe. Wherein yet, we doe humanum dicere, propter infirmitatem noſtram, ſpeake after the manner of men, becauſe of our infirmitie: retching this [All] no further, than humane infirmitie, than the frailty of our nature will beare; than this corruptible fleſh wherewith we are compaſſed, and this corrupt world in the middeſt whereof we live, will ſuffer and give us leave. In the bodie, we put a difference betweene the ſoyle, which, by inſenſible evacuations goeth from our bodies, keepe we our ſelves never ſo carefully; and that, which is drawne forth by chafing or ſweat, or otherwiſe gotten by touching ſuch things wherewith we may bee defiled. That, cannot be refrained; This, falleth within reſtraint. And even ſo, there is a ſoyle of ſinne, that of it ſelfe vaporeth from our nature (let the beſt doe his beſt;) I ſay not, we ſhould keepe our ſelves from this: But, from provoking it, by ſuffering our minds to wander in it; by not keeping our eares from ſuch company, and our eyes from ſuch occaſions, as will procure it (as the Prophet ſpeaketh) by putting the ſtumbling block of iniquitie before our faces. From that, by the helpe of GOD, we may keepe our ſelves well enough. From ſinne's lighting upon our thoughts, it is impoſſible; it cannot bee: but from making there a neſt, or hatching ought; that, we are willed to looke to, and that (by GOD's grace) we may. And the word that Moſes uſeth here דבר is not without a Dixit (at leaſt) in corde; not without a ſaying within us, This, or that, I will doe. It muſt be dictum, or conditum, ſayd to; and ſayd yea to; or elſe it is not דבר. The heart not reſolving or ſaying, content; but keeping it ſelfe, from going forth to any act: though wickedneſſe be not kept from us, becauſe of the temptation; yet we are kept from it, becauſe of the repulſe: and with that, will Moſes be content at our hands, as our eſtate now is.

Ezek. 14. 3.

But, with theſe proviſoes. We ſay generally, They that goe forth, keepe from all: from all ſuch, both deeds, and words, as juſtly may be cenſured to be wickedly, eyther ſpoken, or done. Words (I ſay) as well as deeds. For the word דבר beares both. And indeed, if in good words (as in prayers) there be force to help: I make no queſtion, but in wicked words (as blaſphemies, irreligious ſayings, Iocis fulmine dignis) there is force alſo, to doe miſchiefe. Therefore keepe from all: All thoſe eſpecially (as very reaſon will lead us) which have beene the ruine of armies in former times: a view whereof wee may may take, when we will, out of Liber Bellorum Domini, the booke of GOD's battailes.

Wicked Words firſt. Preſumptuous termes of truſt in our owne ſtrength: I will goe: I will purſue and overtake: I will divide the ſpoile: Pharao's words, the cauſe of his periſhing & all his hoſt (Exo. 15.) To keepe them from that. Rabſakeh's blacke mouthed blaſphemie: Let not Hezekiah cauſe you to truſt in God over much: the eminent cauſe of the overthrow of the hoſt of Aſſhur (Eſai. 36.) To keepe them from that. Exo.15 9. Eſa.36.15.

And, if from words; from wicked workes much rather. Achan's ſinne, that is, Sacrilege: Anathema in medio tui, non poteris ſtare coram hoſtibus tuis (GOD's owne words to Ioſua) The cauſe of the armies miſcarrying, before Ai. To keepe them, from that wickedneſſe. Such ſhamefull abuſes as was that at Gibea: the expreſſed cauſe of the deſtruction of a whole Tribe. To keepe them from that. Prophaning holy veſſells or holy places, with unholy uſage: the ruine of Balthaſar, and with him of the whole Chaldean Monarchie. To keepe themſelves from that. Corrupting our compaßion, and caſting off pitie quite, and ſpilling bloud like water: the ſinne of Edom, and the cauſe hee tooke ſuch a foile, as he was never a people ſince. To keepe them from that wickednes. From theſe and from the reſt; you ſhall have a time to read them, I have not, to ſpeake them. Arming themſelves with a mind to ceaſe from ſinne, keeping their veſſels holy: having pay wherewith they may bee content, aud being content with their pay: Et neminem concutientes (ſaith Saint Iohn Baptiſt:) not being Torrentes Belial, land-flouds of wickedneſſe. Or, if this will not be, that private conformity will not keepe them; at leaſt, that publique authoritie doe it: that kept they may be, one way or other from it. If Achan will ſo farre forget himſelfe, as to ſinne in the execrable thing: Or Zimri, to play the wretch, and abuſe himſelfe in the campe: Let Ioſua find out Achan, and ſee him have his due; and Phinees follow Zimri and reward him for his deſert. That the ravine of the one, and the villanie of the other be removed, as it is committed; and ſo kept from polluting and pulling downe GOD's wrath upon the whole hoſt. For, ſure it is, Phinee's ſtanding up and executing judgement, hath the force of a prayer, no leſſe than Moſe's ſtanding in the gappe, to make interceſſion: and both alike forcible, to turne away GOD's anger, and to remove evill from the midſt of Iſraël. Iud.19. Dan.5.2. Amo.1.11. Luk.3.14. Pſal.106.30. 106.23.

This advice is to take place, as in them that goe (as before hath been touched) ſo, in us likewiſe that ſtay at home: that what the one build, the other deſtroy not. Not, by Moſe's exerciſe of prayer, and unceſſant prayer; or Ioſaphat's exerciſe of faſting and abſtinence, 2 Chro. 20. (both, are out of the compaſſe of the text:) but (that which is in it) by turning from ſinne to GOD, and that, with a ſerious, not ſhallow; and an inward, not hollow repentance. Not confeſſing our ſinnes to day, and committing them to morrow: But every one ſaying, Dixi Cuſtodiam, I have ſayd, I will henceforth more narrowly looke to my wayes; at leaſt, while the ſound of warre is in our eares. Thinking with our ſelves, it is now warre, it is now no time to offend GOD; and ſeparate between Him and us, in this needfull time of His helpe and protection: By entring into that good and vertuous conſideration of VRIA's: The Arke of the LORD and all Iſrael and Iuda dwell in Tents, Ioab and the ſervants of our Sovereigne abide in the open fields, and ſhall wee permit our ſelves as much as wee would, in the time of peace, and not conforme our ſelves, in abridging ſome part of our wonted libertie, and forbearing to enjoy the pleaſures of ſinne for a ſeaſon? To conclude, if we ſhall, or when we ſhall be tempted to any of our former ſinnes, to thinke upon GOD's owne counſell, even GOD's owne counſell from GOD's owne mouth, Memento belli & ne feceris: To remember the Camp, and not to doe it: To thinke upon them in the fields, and their danger; and for their ſakes, and for their ſafeties to forbeare it. 2 Chro.20.3. Pſal.39 1. 2 Sam.11.11. Iob 40.27.

Thus, if we ſhall endevour our ſelves, and eſchew our owne wickedneſſe, our hoſts ſhall goe forth in the ſtrength of the Lord, and the LORD ſhall go with them and order their attempts to an happie iſſue.

He that made our forreine enemies like a wheele, to goe round about us, and not to come neere us; ſhall make theſe as ſtubble before the wind: cauſing feare and faintneſſe of heart to fall upon them as upon Madian: ſending an evill ſpirit of diſſenſion among them as upon Abimelech, and the men of Sichem: cauſing their owne woods to devoure Pſal.83.13. Ibid. Num.22.3. A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE QVEENE ELIZABETH, AT VVHITEHALL, ON THE XVII. of February, Anno Domini, MDCII. being ASH-WEDNESDAY.

IEREM. CHAP. VIII. &c.

4. Thus ſaith the LORD: Shall they fall and not ariſe? ſhall he turne away, and not turne againe?
5. Wherefore is this people of Jeruſalem turned back by a perpetual rebellion? they gave themſelves to deceit, and would not returne.
6. I hearkened and heard, but none ſpake aright: no man repented him of his wickedneſſe, ſaying, What have I done? Every one turned to their race, as the horſe ruſheth into the battell.
7. Even the Storke in the aire knoweth her appointed times; and the Turtle, and the Crane, and the Swallow obſerve the time of their comming; but my people knoweth not the judgement of the LORD.

THE Apoſtle's counſaile is, Qui ſtat, videat ne cadat, He that ſtands, let him take heed leſt hee fall. And, there is (ſaith Eſay) a voice behinde us that crieth, Hec eſt via, this is the right way, keepe it, turne not from it. Good counſailes, both; to thoſe, Quorum vita, via vitæ, whoſe life is a journey, and a journey to another, a better life: To looke to their feet, they fall not; to looke to their way, they erre not. Good counſailes indeed; but, of which, we muſt ſay (with CHRIST) Qui poteſt capere capiat; Follow them that may. 1 Cor. 10. 12. Eſay. 30. 21. Matt. 19. 12.

For, true it is, that, Not to fall nor erre, nor doe amiſſe at all, is an higher perfection, than our nature (in ſtate it is) can attaine to. Being men (ſaith Chryſoſtome) ἀνθρωποί ὄντες, and ταῖς τοῦ σώματος σαρκὰ φερόντες bearing about us this bodie of fleſh, the ſteppes whereof are ſo unſtayed; Καὶ τοῦτον κοσμὸν οἰκοῦντες, and walking in this World, the wayes whereof are ſo ſlipperie.

Iam.3.2. It is an Apoſtle that ſayth it, In multis, omnes, &c. In many things we offend, all: and, it

1 Ioh.1.8. is another that ſayth, that, whoſoever ſayth otherwiſe (not, hee is proud, and there is no humbleneſſe; but) he is a lyar, and there is no truth in him.

Iam.4.6. Our eſtate then (as it is) needeth ſome Scripture, that offereth more grace: And ſuch there be (ſaith S. Iames) and, This, is ſuch. That they which have not heard the Apoſtle and his counſell, Qui ſtat, &c. may yet heare the Prophet heere and his Qui cecidit, let him up againe. That they, which have not heard Eſaie's voice, Ambulate; You are in the way, turne not from it; May yet heare Ieremie's voice, Qui averſus eſt, &c. He that is out, let him get into it againe.

The Summe. So that, this is the ſumme of that I have read. If we have not been ſo happie, as to ſtand and keepe our way; let us not be ſo unhappie, as not to riſe, and turne to it againe. Beſt it were, before we ſinne, to ſay to our ſelves, Quid facio, What am I now about to doe? If we have not that, yet it will not be amiſſe, after to ſay: What have I done? GOD will not be diſpleaſed, to heare us ſo ſay. We ſhould not follow thoſe fowles; we ſhould have no wings, to fly from GOD: but if in flying away, we have followed them; then, that we follow them too, in the retrive or ſecond flight. In a word: Yeſterday, if Pſal.95.7.8. we have not heard His voice, To day if wee will heare His voice, not to harden our heaats, when He calleth us to Repentance.

2 This is the ſumme. The manner of the delivery is not common, but ſomewhat un-uſuall and full of paſſion. For ſeeing, plaine pœnitentiam agite doth but coldly affect

1 us, It pleaſeth GOD, hâc vice, to take unto Him the termes, the ſtyle, the accents of paſſion; thereby to give it an edge, that ſo it may make the ſpeedier and deeper impreſſion.

2 And, the Paſſion, He chooſeth, is that of Sorrow: For, all theſe verſes are to be pronounced, with a ſorrowfull key. Sorrow (many times) worketh us to that, by a melting compaſſion, which the more rough and violent paſſions cannot get at our hands.

3 This ſorrow He expreſſeth, by way of complaint: (For, all the ſpeech is ſo.) Which kind of ſpeech maketh the better nature to relent; as mooved, that by His meanes any ſhould have cauſe to complaine, and not find redreſſe for it.

4 That, He complaines of is (not that we fall and erre, but) that we riſe not, and returne not; that is, ſtill delay, ſtill put off our Repentance. And that 1. Contrarie to our owne

Verſe.4. courſe and cuſtome in other things: We doe it every where elſe; yet here we doe it not. 2. Contrary to GOD's expreſſe pleaſure. For, glad and faine He would heare, we do Verſe.8. it, yet we doe it not. 3. Contrarie to the very light of nature. For, the fowles heere fly before us, and ſhew us the way to doe it, yet we doe it not for all that.

Which three He uttereth by three ſundry wayes of treatie: 1. The firſt, by a gentle yet forcible expoſtulation (Ver. 4) Will you not? Why will ye not? 2. The ſecond, by an earneſt proteſtation (Ver. 5.) How greatly He doth hearken after it. 3. The third, by a paſſionate Apoſtrophe (Ver. 7.) by turning Him away to the fowles of the ayre, that doe that naturally every yeare, which we cannot be got to, all our life long.

3 Of which Paſſions, to ſay a word: It is certaine, the immutable conſtancy of the Divine nature is not ſubject to them, howſoever heere or elſewhere He preſenteth himſelfe in them. I adde, that as it is not proper, ſo neither it is not fitting for GOD, thus to expreſſe himſelfe. But that He (not reſpecting what beſt may become Him, but what may beſt ſeeme to move us and doe us moſt good) chooſeth of purpoſe that dialect, that Character, thoſe termes, which are moſt meet and moſt likely to affect us.

And becauſe good morall counſell plainly delivered enters but faintly, and of paſſionate ſpeeches we have a more quicke apprehenſion, He attireth His ſpeech in the habit, uttereth it in the phraſe, figure, and accent of anger, or ſorrow, or ſuch like, as may ſeeme moſt fit and forcible to prevaile with us.

2 Act. mar. 1. Tertullian ſayth, the reaſon (this courſe is uſed) is ad exaggerandum malitiæ vim, to make the haynouſneſſe of our contempt appeare the more. GOD (indeed) cannot comcomplaine: it falleth not into His nature to doe it. But, if He could; if it were poſſible by any meanes in the world, He might; ſuch are our contempts, ſo many, and ſo mighty, that we would force Him to it.

2. But, Saint Auguſtine's reaſon is more praiſed: Exprimit in Se, vt exprimat de te, In Himſelfe He expreſſeth them, that from us He may bring them: Sheweth Himſelfe in paſſion, that He may move us; and even in that paſſion whereto He would move us. As here now: As in griefe, He complaineth of us, that we might be grieved and complaine of our ſelves, that ever we gave Him ſuch cauſe: And ſo conſequently, that we might bethink our ſelves to give redreſſe to it; that ſo, His complaining might ceaſe.

And from the complaint, it is no hard matter to extract the redreſſe. 1. To yeeld to but even as much, for Him (for Him? Nay for our ſelves) as, every where elſe, we uſe to doe. 2. To ſpeake that, which GOD ſo gladly would heare. 3. To learne that, which the poore fowles know, the ſeaſon of our returne; and to take it, as they doe. Three waies to give redreſſe to the three former grievances: (Theſe three:) and the ſame the three parts of this Text, orderly to be treated of. The Diviſion

TO make His motion the more reaſonable, and His complaint the more juſt, He makes them Chancellors in their owne cauſe: And, from their owne practice otherwhere, GOD frameth and putteth a Caſe; and putteth it in queſtion-wiſe: and therefore queſtion-wiſe, that they may anſwer it, and anſwering it condemne themſelves by a verdict from their owne mouth. Will they (this people) themſelves fall, &c? Is there any, that if he turne, &c.? In effect, as if He ſhould ſay: Goe whither you will, farre or neere, was it ever heard or ſeene, that any man, if his foote ſlipped and he tooke a fall; that he would lie ſtill like a beaſt and not up againe ſtraight? Or if he loſt his way, that he would wittingly goe on, and not with all ſpeede get into it againe? 1

I proceed then. Men riſe, if they fall: and ſinne is a fall. We have taken up the terme our ſelves, calling Adam's ſinne, Adam's fall. A fall, indeed; for it foules as a fall; for it bruiſes as a fall; for it bringeth downe as a fall; downe, from the ſtate of Paradiſe, downe to the duſt of death; downe to the barre of judgment, downe to the pit of hell. 2

Againe: Men turne, when they erre; And, ſinne is an error. Nonne errant omnes, &c. (ſaith Solomon) make you any doubt of it? I doe not: No ſure, an error it is. What can bee greater, than to goe in the wayes (of wickedneſſe) they ſhould not, and come to the end (of miſerie) they would not. It is then a fall and an error. Prov. 14. 22.

Vpon which he joyneth iſſue, and inferreth the fifth verſe, Quare ergo? and why then? If there be no people ſo ſottiſh, that when they fall will lie ſtill, or when they erre, goe on ſtill, why doe this people that, which no people elſe will doe? Nay, ſeeing they themſelves, if they be downe, get up; and, if aſtray, turne backe; how commeth it to paſſe, it holds not here too? That (here) they fall, and riſe not? ſtray, and returne not? Fall and ſtray (peccando) and not riſe and returne (pœnitendo?) Will every people, and not they? Nay, will they, every where elſe, and not here? Every where elſe, will they riſe, if they fall; and turne againe, if they turne away; and here, onely here, will they fall, and not riſe, turne away and not turne againe? In every fall, in every error of the feet, to doe it, and to doe it of our ſelves; and in that fall, and that error, which toucheth GOD and our ſoules, by no meanes, by no entreatie to be got to doe it? What dealing call you this? Yet this is their ſtrange dealing (ſaith the LORD.) Both theirs and ours: Which GOD wonders at and complaineth of; and who can complaine of His wondering, or wonder at His complaining? 3

But what ſpeake we of a fall, or an error? There is a word, in the fifth verſe, (the word of rebellion) maketh it more grievous. For it is (as if he ſhould ſay) I would it were nothing but a fall, or turning away: I would it were not a fall, or turning away into a rebellion. Nay, I would it were but that; but rebellion; and not a perpetuall rebellion: But, it is both: and that is it which I complaine of.

There is Sinne, a fall: men fall againſt their wills: that, is ſinne of infirmitie. There is Sinne, an Error: men erre from the way, of ignorance: that, is ſinne of ignorance. The one, for want of power; The other, for lacke of skill. But rebellion, the third kind (that hatefull ſinne of rebellion) can neither pretend ignorance, nor plead infirmitie; for, wittingly they revolt from their knowne allegiance, and wilfully ſet themſelves againſt their lawfull Soveraigne: That is the ſinne of malice.

Take all together. Sinne, a fall, an error, a rebellion: (We ſee, ſinne aboundeth: will you ſee, how grace over-aboundeth?) Yet, not ſuch a fall, but we may be raiſed; not ſuch a departure, but there is place left to returne; no, nor ſuch a rebellion, but (if it ſue for) may hope for a pardon. For behold: He, even He, that GOD, from whom we thus fall, depart, revolt, reacheth His hand to them that fall; turneth not away from them, that turne to Him; is readie to receive, to grace them; even them, that rebelled againſt Him. It is ſo: for He ſpeaketh to them, treateth with them, asketh of them, why they will not riſe, retire, ſubmit themſelves.

Which is more yet. If ye marke, Hee doth not complaine and challenge them, for any of all thoſe three; for falling, ſtraying, or for rebelling: The point hee preſſeth, is not, our falling, but, our lying ſtill: not our departing, but our not returning; nor our breaking off, but our holding out. It is not: why fall, or ſtray, or revolt? But, why riſe yee not? Returne yee not? Submit yee not your ſelves? Thus might Hee have framed His interrogatories: Shall they fall and not ſtand? Hee doth not; but, thus: ſhall they fall and not riſe? Shall they turne from the right and not keepe it? No: But, ſhall they turne from it, and not turne to it? As much to ſay as; Bee it you have fallen, yet lie not ſtill; erred, yet goe not on; Sinned, yet continue not in ſinne, and neither your fall, error, nor ſinne, erunt vobis in ſcandalum, ſhall be your deſtruction or doe you hurt.

Nay, which is farther, and that beyond all. It is not theſe, neither; (though this be wrong enough, yet upon the point, this is not the verie matter.) Neither our lying ſtill, nor our going on, nor ſtanding out, ſo they have an end, they all, and every of them may have hope. Perpetuall is the word, and Perpetuall is the thing. Not, why theſe, any of theſe, or all of theſe; but, why theſe perpetuall? To doe thus; to do it and never leave doing it; To make no end of ſinne, but our owne end; To make a perpetuitie of ſinne; Never to riſe, returne, repent (for Repentance is oppoſite, not to ſinne, but to the continuance of it:) that is the point.

In ſinne are theſe: 1 The fall, 2 The relapſe, 3 The wallow: it is none of theſe. It is not falling; not, though it bee recidiva peccati, often relapſing. It is not lying ſtill; not, though it be Volutabrum peccati, the wallow: It is none of all theſe: It is τὸ ἀκαλαπαυστὸν, the never ceaſing, the perpetuitie, the impenitencie of ſinne. To ſpeake of ſinne, that is the ſinne out of meaſure ſinnefull; that, is the offence, that not onely maketh culpable, but leaveth inexcuſable. That fall, is not ADAM'S, but LVCIFERS fall; not to erre, but to periſh from the right way; not SHEMEI'S rebellion, but the very Apoſtaſie and gainſaying of COREH.

This then, to adde ſinne to ſinne, to multiplie ſinne by ſinne, to make it infinite, to eternize it as much as in us lyeth; that, is it, to which GOD crieth, O quare? Why doe you ſo? Why perpetuall?

Why perpetuall? Indeed, why? For, it would poſe the beſt of us to finde out the Quare? a true cauſe or reaſon for our doing?

Before, ſhew but an example: Now here, ſhew but a reaſon, and carie it. But, they can ſhew no reaſon, why they will not. It were to be wiſhed, we would repent or ſhew good cauſe to the contrarie.

But as (before) wee violate our owne cuſtome, ſo (here) we abandon reaſon; wee throw them both to the ground (order, and reaſon) and ſtampe upon them both, when wee make perpetuities. Verily, true cauſe, or good reaſon there is none. Being called to ſhew cauſe why? They tell not: we ſee, they ſtand mute; they cannot tell, why: GOD Himſelfe is faine to tell them. Why, all the cauſe that is, is in the latter part of the verſe Apprehenderunt, &c. that is, ſome Non cauſa pro cauſâ, ſome lye or other they lay hold of, or elſe they would returne, and not thus continue in it. To flatter it ſelfe that it may not repent, Mentita eſt iniquitas ſibi, ſaith the Pſalmiſt. Sinne doth even cooſen it ſelfe, telling a faire tale to it ſelfe, which is (in the XI. Verſe) Pax, Pax; Peace, well enough; and that is a lye: for, there is no peace for all that. It is (ſaith the Apoſtle) the deceitfulneſſe of ſinne, that hardeneth men in it; that is, if there were not ſome groſſe error, ſtrong iluſion; not able faſcinatio mentis, it could not be, that ſinne ſhould prove to a perpetuitie. There is ſome error ſure. Pſal.26.12. Heb.3.13.

But why is not that error removed? GOD anſwereth that, too. But, the error hath not taken hold of them, for then it might be cured; but, they have taken hold of it; faſt hold; and will not let it goe. That is: it is not in the weakeneſſe of their wits, but in the ſtubborneneſſe of their will. For, ſo is His concluſion. Not, Non potuerunt, they could not: but, Noluerunt, they would not returne. So ſaith David: It is a people that doe erre, in their hearts: Their error is not in their heads, but in their hearts; and if it be there, fourtie yeares teaching will do them no good. If they had a heart to underſtand, they might, ſoon: but, they aſſot themſelves; they will not conceive aright of their eſtates. If they did, they could not chooſe but returne: But now, returne they will not: that, is reſolved: therefore they get them ſome lewd, irreligious, lying poſitions, and with them cloſe up their owne eyes; even hood-winke themſelves. Is it not thus? Yes ſure: Rather than returne, to apprehend a lye. This is a woefull caſe: but let it be examined, and thus it is. It is a lye, they apprehend, that maketh, they lye ſtill. Peradventure, That error, inter alias, may be ſuch an illuſion as this: that if they ſhould make meanes, it would be to no purpoſe; GOD would ſtop His eares, He would not heare of it. May it not be this? Deſpaire of pardon hath made many a man deſperate. Yes ſure. And if that were it; if they would, and GOD would not, they had ſome ſhew of reaſon, to abandon themſelves to all looſeneſſe of life. But it is contrarie: they would not returne. For, I for my part faine would (ſaith GOD:) It is their Not: and not mine. My Nolo is, Nolo ut moriatur: My Volo is, Volo ut convertatur, I will not their death; I will their converſions: This is my Volo. Nay, quoties volui? How often would I? Et noluiſtis, and ye would not. Verſe.6. Ezek.18.32. 33.11. Mat.23 37.

My outward calling by my word, inward movings by my Spirit, my often exhortations in your eares, my no leſſe often inſpirations in your hearts; Tactus mei & tractus, my touches and my twitches; my benefits not to be diſſembled, my gentle chaſtiſements, my deliverances more than ordinary, my patience while I held my peace; ſuch periods, as this, when I ſpeake; my putting you to it by Quid debui facere? to ſet downe, what I ſhould have done and have not: theſe ſhew, Quoties volui, that many times I would, when you would not. The two verſes paſt, His compaſſionate complaint in them: And, Is there no hope? Will you not? O why will you not? Other where you will, and not here; why not here? You have no reaſon, why you will not. Why will you not? If not, why fall, or erre, or revolt, yet onely, why perpetuall? Theſe are evidences enough, He is willing enough therewithall. But (to put it out of all doubt) we ſee. He breaketh out into a proteſtation, that if this be the lye, we lay hold of, we may let it goe when we will. And ſure, how earneſtly GOD affecteth the ſinner's converſion, we might be thought to miſ-informe, and to blow abroad our owne conceits, if this and ſuch places were not our warrant. I not heare? Why, I ſtand wiſhing, and waiting, and longing, and liſtening to heare of it. Wiſhing, O that my people! Waiting; Expectat Dominus ut miſereatur; Longing, even as a woman, that is great, after greene fruit (Mic. 7.1.) Liſtening, that I might but heare two good words from them, that might ſhew, that they were but thus forward as to thinke of this point. It is not all one; it is not neither here nor there with me, whether you doe it; it is a ſpeciall thing, I hearken after: No merchant, for his commoditie; no Athenian, for his newes, more oft or more earneſt. Eſay.4.5. Eſay.30 18. Mic.7.1.

Then, lay not hold on that lie, that I would not heare. Bee your error what it will be, let it not be, that; let not the charge be mine, but yours, if you will needs caſt away that, I would have ſaved.

Should not this move us? Now truly, if all other regards failed, and men for them would not returne; yet, for this, and this onely, we ought to yeeld to it, that GOD ſhould be liſtening ſo long for it, and in the end be deluded.

2 GOD hearkeneth and liſteneth: and (after) there is a kind of pauſe, to ſee what will come of it. And loe, this commeth of it, this unkinde, unnaturall effect: After all this, not ſo much as locuti ſunt rectè, a good honeſt confeſſion. Nay, not ſo little as this, Quid feci? What have I done? He expecteth no great matter; no long proceſſe; but two words, but three Syllables: and thoſe, with no loud voice, to ſpend their ſpirit or breath; but, even ſoftly ſaid, for He layeth his eare and liſteneth for it.

Thus ſaith the LORD. But, what ſay they? None of them, either audibly (for, I hearkened;) or ſoftly (for, I liſtened,) ſaid (no long ſolemne confeſſion, but not this) Quid feci? GOD wot, this is not repentance: erre not, this is farre from it.

From whence yet, this we gaine: What GOD would heare from us, and what we Mica.7.1. ſaying, may give Him ſome kind of contentment. This, is but Mica's fruit (wee ſpake of:) which yet, Hee ſo much deſired, that Hee will take it, greene and unripe as it is. This is but a ſteppe unto a proffer; but yet beginne with this. Say it; Dic, dic (ſaith Saint Auguſtine) ſed, intus dic: ſay it, and ſay it from within; ſay it as it ſhould be ſaid: not for forme, or with affectation, but, in truth and with affection. Doe but this onward, and more will follow. Indeed as (before) we ſaid of the Quare; ſo (here) wee may ſay, of the Quid: If either of them; If but this latter were well weighed, rightly thought on, or rightly ſpoken, there is much more in it than one would thinke. What have I done? 1 What, in reſpect of it ſelfe: What a foule, deformed, baſe, ignominious act! which we ſhame to have knowne, which we chill upon, alone and no bodie but our ſelves. 2 What, in regard of GOD, ſo fearfull in power, ſo glorious in Majeſty! 3 What, in regard of the object: for what a trifling profit; for what a tranſitorie pleaſure! 4 What, in reſpect of the conſequent: To what prejudice of the ſtate of our ſoules and bodies, both here and for ever! O what have we done? How did we it? Sure, when we thus ſinned, we did wee knew not what.

Sure, to ſayit with the right touch; with the right accent, is worth the while. Say it then: ſay this, at leaſt. Leſt, if you will not ſay, quid feci? what have I done? when He hearkens; you may come into the caſe, you know not what to doe; and ſay to Him, What ſhall I doe? And, if you heare not, when He complaines; one day, when you complaine, He refuſe to bow downe His eare and hearken to you, at all.

3 Yet one ſtep further. Nothing they ſayd: Is that all? have we done? Nay: He heares and ſees (both) a worſe matter. For, in ſtead of this, He ſees and heares, that forth they runne to their careleſſe courſe of life, tanquam equus ad prælium. Wee ſaw (before) their ſlowneſſe, in that: Now ſee we their vigour, in this. Wherein obſerve: Here, they goe not; It is no ſoft pace; they runne: Not, as men; but, as horſes: And, not every kind of them neither; but, as the barbed horſe for ſervice: and he, not every way conſidered; but when he is enraged by noiſe and other accidents of warre, rather ruſheth, like a violent breach of waters (from whence it is taken) than runneth: ὡς ἵππος καθιδὲν (ſayth the Seventy) as a horſe all of a white ſome, into the battell, where a thouſand to one, he never commeth out againe. That is, with as great furie, and as little conſideration, as a warre horſe runneth upon his owne deſtruction. And all this, when GOD hearkeneth and liſteneth to heare and receive them; even then, and at no other Prou.26.11. time; then, ſo fling they from Him. All returne to ſin is brutiſh: Recidiva peccati, 2 Pet.2.22. that, is tanquam canis ad vomitum: Volutabrum peccati; that, is tanquam ſus ad lutum: But, this furie and fierceneſſe of ſinne is tanquam equus ad prælium. Should there be no Ve ſc.7. more regard in the rider, than, in the beaſt, he rides on? Should ſuch a mind as this, be in men?

No, verily, we be now gone from men: We be come among beaſts. And, thither, doth GOD follow us. And, even among them (if we will but looke to the leſſe brutiſh ſort) Hee hopes to doe it: even among them, to point us to thoſe, that, if wee will will learne, it will teach us as much as this commeth to. This is His Apoſtrophe of the laſt verſe. Where breaking off (occaſioned by their abrupt breaking off) He even ſets downe Himſelfe upon the light of nature, Well yet, the Storke, &c.

Two kinds of forcible reaſons (or Apoſtrophe's) there are to move us. 1. One, To ſend the people of GOD, to heathen men, that would ſhame to deale with their Idols, as we do dayly with the GOD of heaven: Get you to Chittim and to the Iſles, (ſaith Ieremie 2. chap.) See, if the like meaſure bee offered by them, to their Gods. Then, the Concluſion is, Quis audivit talia? GOD's people, worſe than the heathen? This is ſuch a thing, as the like was never heard. This was done in the firſt verſe, If any fall, &c. Ier.2.10.

2 Yet, more effectuall is it, when He goeth yet further; thus far. That, not finding, among men, with whom to ſort them, becauſe they keepe no rules of men, He is forced, to a ſecond Apoſtrophe, to ſeeke among beaſts, with whom to ſuite them.

3 But then, if it come to this, that the beaſts be not only compared with us (as in the laſt, tanquam equus;) but preferred before, as better adviſed or diſpoſed, than we (as in this, the Swallow doth know, my people doth not:) that we, in the compariſon, goe not even with them, but are caſt behind them; that, is οὐκ ἐνθέτως (indeed) a foule check to our nature. And, to that the Prophet crieth, Audite cœli, Heare ye heavens, and be aſtoniſhed at it. O the damp and miſt of our ſinnes! ſo great, that it darkeneth not only the light of religion, which GOD teacheth; but even the light of nature, which her inſtinct teacheth, even the reaſonleſſe creature it ſelfe. With a very patheticall concluſion doth the Pſalmiſt breake off the XLIX. Pſalme: Man being in honor, &c. but becommeth meet to be compared to the beaſts that periſh. Which is no ſmall diſgrace to our Nature, ſo to be matched. Profectò (ſaith Chryſoſtome) pejus eſt comparari jumento, quam naſci jumentum, Now (ſure) it is farre worſer to be matched with a beaſt; than to be borne a beaſt. To be borne, is no fault: we, nor they, make our ſelves. But, to be borne a man, and to become matchable with beaſts, that is our fault; our great fault: and therefore, the worſe certainely. Ier.2.12. Pſal 49.

Well; this Interrogate Iumenta, in the Old; this Reſpicite Volatilia, in the New; this Apoſtrophe, thus ſending us to beaſts, and fowles to ſchoole; ſetting them before us, as patternes; ſetting them over us, as Tutors, to learne of them how to carry our ſelves, is (certainely) a bitter Apoſtrophe, a great upbraiding, to us; a great aggrieving our ſinne, or our folly, or both. Iob 12.7. Mat.6.26.

Eſpecially in them, who (as, in the next verſe he ſaith) would hold it great ſcorne, to be reputed of, otherwiſe than as deep wiſe men; that they, ſhould paſſe their lives, with as little conſideration (not, as Heathen men, for they be men; but, with as little) yea leſſe, than the beaſts in the field, or the fowles in the ayre. Thus ſpeaketh GOD, often, and with diverſe. The ſlothfull body He ſetteth to ſchoole, to the Ant (Pro. 6.) The unthankfull perſon, to the Oxe: the diſtruſtfull man, to the young Ravens: the covetous wretch, to that beaſt which reproved the madneſſe of the Prophet, who for the wages of unrighteouſneſſe, was ready to make ſale of his ſoule (that is) Balaam's beaſt, the Aſſe (2 Pet. 2.16.) And, here now in this place, the wilfull impenitent ſinner, one ſo farre gone, as He appointeth him not one (as to all the former) but, no leſſe than foure at once. Belike, either the number is great, that ſo many Vſhers need (and ſo, it is:) Or, their capacity very dull and hard to take, that no fewer will ſerve them (and ſo, it is too:) Or, He ſorteth them thus, that every country may bee provided for, of one to teach in it. For though, in ſome places, all are not; yet, in all places, ſome of them are to bee found. Verſe 8. Pro.6.6. Eſay 1.3. Luk.12.24. 2 Pet.2.15.16.

The leſſon, with theſe foure (all of them, from the Storke in the toppe of the firre tree, to the Swallow that buildeth under every pent-houſe) would take us forth, is, that which they themſelves are ſo perfect in, that they may be profeſſors of it. And, it is of foure ſorts: 1. They have a time, to returne in. 2. That time, is certaine and certainely knowne. 3. They know it. 4. They obſerve it.

They have a time. The place, the Climate, which the cold of the weather maketh them to leave, they faile not but find a time to turne backe thither againe. This they teach us, firſt: Who, in this reſpect leſſe carefull, and more ſenſeleſſe than they, find a time and times many, oft and long, to take our flight from GOD; occaſioned, by no cold or evill weather (for commonly, we doe it when times are beſt and faireſt:) But we can find no time, not ſo much as halfe a time, to make our returne in. This muſt be learned. Sure, wee muſt (ſaith Saint Paul) σχολάζειν τῇ νηστείᾳ, take ſome time of vacancie and leaſure: wee muſt (ſaith Saint Peter) χωρῆσαι εἰς μετανόιαν, take ſome ſeverall retiring place, where and when to doe it to purpoſe; and intend it not as a ſlight matter, but as one of the chiefeſt and moſt important affaires of our life. Sure, this doe that GOD keepes about it, theſe paſſions, complaints, proteſtations, apoſtrophes give it for no leſſe.

2 Cor. 7. 5.
2 Pet. 3. 9.

2 They have a time certaine: When if you waite for them, you ſhall be ſure to ſee them come; and come at their appointed ſeaſon: they will not miſſe. It will not be long, but you ſhall ſee the Swallow here againe. This they teach us, ſecond: Vs, who have ſometime, ſome little perſwaſions, In modico (like Agrippa's) to doe as Chriſtian men ſhould doe, but (as Felix) we can never εὐκαιρῆσαι find a convenient ſet time for it. Returne we will, that we will; but, are ſtill to ſeeke for our ſeaſon: and ever, wee will doe, and never we doe it. Verily though no time be amiſſe (but [a] at what time ſoever we repent, that is the acceptable time, that the day of Salvation:) yet, Eſau's [b] teares when the time was paſt; and the [c] five Virgins that came too ſhort, and but a little too ſhort; and that very word of GOD to Saul, [d] Now was the time, Now, if thou hadſt taken it: theſe plainely ſhew, that (as, for [e] all things under the ſunne, ſo) for this great and weighty buſineſſe, there is not only זמן but מועד; not only χειμὼν but καιρὸς; not only a time, but a ſet ſeaſon. Which ſeaſon is in time, as the joynt, in a member: If you hit on the joynt, you may eaſily divide; if on this ſide or beyond, you ſhall not doe it, or not doe it ſo well; therefore, to diſcerne it, when it is.

3 They have their certaine time, and they know it. What time of the yeare the time of their returne is, is commonly knowen: who knowes not, when Swallowes time is? And our ignorance, in not diſcerning this point, doth GOD juſtly upbrayd us withall; and bids us, if we know not what time to take, to get us to theſe fowles, and to take their time, the time they returne at; (that is) now, even this time, this ſeaſon of the yeare; to returne with the Swallowes, and to take our flight back, when they doe theirs. Rather doe thus, than waſte our lives (as we doe) and take none at all; neither faire nor foule, neither hot nor cold, neither Fall nor Spring, to doe it in. This is the third they teach us.

4 The laſt leſſon is, to obſerve it. Opportunity (it ſelfe) is a great favour, even to have it; but a ſecond grace it is, to diſcerne it when we have it: and, a third (better than both) when we diſcerne it, to obſerve and take it. And many are the errors of our life, but all the errors of our repentance come from one of theſe: either, our ignorance; that while we have it, diſcerne it not: or our negligence, that when we diſcerne it, obſerve it not. The one (our ignorance) CHRIST with bitter teares lamenteth: the other (our negligence) doth GOD (here) complaine of. This is the laſt leſſon.

Luc. 19. 41, 42.

There want not, that ſtretch it farther: that by theſe foure fowles, there is not only taught the time, but even the manner alſo, how to performe our Repentance.

1 That vox turturis, which is gemebam, a mournefull note: 2. That the very name and nature of the ſtorke חסידה of חסד full of mercy and compaſſion: 3. That the Swallowe's neſt, ſo neere the Altar of GOD, (Pſal. 84.) 4. That the painfull watching, and abſtinence of the Crane, ſpecially when they take their flight, ſo credibly recorded in the Naturall Hiſtories: That theſe (Embleme-wiſe) teach us the [1] mournefull bewailing of our life paſt; [2] the breaking of our former ſins, by workes of mercy; [3] the keeping neere this place, the houſe, and Altar of GOD; [4] the abſtinence and watching to be performed, during this time of our returne: That is, that all theſe are allyed to the exerciſe of our Repentance, and are meet vertues to accompanie and attend the practice of it.

Pſal. 84 3.
Dan. 4. 24.

This, the Turtle Dove mourneth; the Swallow chattereth: this, all of them ſound as well as they can: This, if they ſerve not (as Maſters) to teach us, they ſhall ſerve (as a

(as a Queſt) to condemne us, whom neither our owne cuſtome, reaſon, religion, before, nor (now) the light of nature can bring to know ſo much as they: either to learne it our ſelves, or to be taught it by others. This we ſhould learne, but this we doe not; therefore He taketh up His laſt complaint, But my people, &c.

The word judgement receiveth two conſtructions: For, either by Iudicium Domini is meant that within us, which is anſwerable to that ſecret inſtinct, whereby the fowles are inclined to doe this, which is, the prick and dictamen of our conſcience τὸ ἔνδον δικαστήριον (the impreſſion whereof is apparant in the moſt miſcreant on earth; in whom Nature it ſelfe ſhrinketh and ſigheth, when it hath done amiſſe; and joyeth and lifteth up it ſelfe, when it hath well done: and by which we are moved inwardly, as they by their inſtinct, to returne, but that the motion (with us) paſſeth, and with them, not:) And then, the complaint is, that their parva naturalia carrie them further, than our great judicialls doe us in this point. 1

Or elſe, by Iudicium Domini, is meant His viſitation hanging over our heads; (called therefore judgement, becauſe it commeth not caſually, but judicially proceedeth from GOD; (that is) when GOD calleth to judgement by invaſion, by ſcarcitie, by gentle, generall diſeaſes, and ſuch like: and then the complaint is, that where we ſhould imitate theſe fowles, and returne againſt the ſweet ſpring, and faire time of the yeare (that is, while the daies of peace and proſperitie laſt) we are ſo farre behind them, as, not againſt faire, nay, not againſt foule (againſt neither) we can be brought to it: Not in the dayes of adverſitie, no, not againſt the winter of our life. 2

That they regard Natures inclination, ſo as, every ſpring, ſure to come: We have loſt our regard ſo even of judgment and all, as neither vernall nor hibernall repentance we bring forth. Nay, not the everlaſting judgement of the LORD doe we regard; to which, ſooner or later, we muſt all come, and there receive the ſentence (under execution whereof we ſhall lye eternally.

Πάντα δέχομαι (ſaith Saint Chryſoſtome) I embrace both ſenſes: Both be good and profitable to men: Take whether you will, or both, if you will, you ſhall not take amiſſe: and if both, you ſhalbe ſure to take right. Regard judgement, when, either it awaketh from within, or when it threatneth, from without. And when any of theſe ſummons us before the great Iudge, know (for a certainty) that, the time of returning is come: the Angell is deſcended, the water is mooved, let us have grace to goe in; Even then, ad aquæ motum: We know not how long it will be, or whether ever it will be ſtirred againe. Ioh. 5. 3.

And thus wee be come to an anchor, at this laſt word judgement. A word, which if with judgement we would but pauſe on, and rowle it a while up & down in our thoughts, duely weighing it and the force of it, it would bring us about, and cauſe this whole Scripture to be fulfilled; make us fly as faſt backe, as any fowle of them all.

For indeed, the not judiciall apprehending of this one word; the ſhallow conceiving and ſleight regard of it is the cauſe, we foreſlow the time. The foreſlowing the time, the cauſe, we come not to quid feci? the not comming to that, the cauſe, why we runne on ſtill tanquam equus; why we riſe not, returne not, yeeld not, but ſtand out in perpetuall rebellion. Did we heare this word; heare it and regard it aright; and ſcire terrorem hunc, know the terror of it; that GOD hath fearefull judgements in ſtore, even here, to meet with us: Or (howſoever, here, we ſcape) He hath (there) a perpetuall judgement behind; and that, ſo ſtraight, as the righteous ſhall ſcarce eſcape it; ſo heavie, as the mightieſt ſhal not endure it: Did we regard this one Point, we would find a with-drawing time, for this ſo ſerious a worke; we woud ſay, and ſay that GOD ſhould heare it, what have I done? We would riſe, returne, repent; and ſo, His whole complaint ſhould ceaſe. O Iudgement! of the very mention of this word Iudgement, if a perfect view were taken of it, that only were enough. But without judgement or regard, we heare it; and therefore the complaint continueth ſtill. 1 Pet. 4. 18.

To conclude: we ſaid at the beginning, GOD therefore ſheweth Himſelfe in paſſion, that He might moove us; and in that paſſion, whereto He would moove us: Thus complayneth GOD, that wee might thus inferre, and ſay: And doth GOD thus complaine?

complaine? Why it toucheth not GOD, it toucheth mee; Hee needeth not our repentance, and our unrighteouſneſſe hurteth Him not. It is I, that ſhall winne or loſe by it, even the beſt thing I have to loſe, my ſoule: He is in no danger; it is I, the hazard of whoſe eternall weale, or woe, lyeth upon it. And yet doth GOD ſhew Himſelfe ſorrie for me, and ſhall not I be ſorrie, for my ſelfe? Doth GOD thus complaine of my ſinne, and ſhall not I be moved, to doe as much for mine owne ſinne? From this meditation to proceed, to propound the ſame queſtions, which GOD here doth, and to aske them of our ſelves. What then, ſhall I continually fall and never riſe? turne away and not once turne againe? Shall my rebellions be perpetuall? Do I this any where elſe? can I ſhew any reaſon why not to doe it, here? Shall theſe Swallowes flie over me and put me in mind, of my returne; and ſhall not I heed them? Shall GOD ſtill, in vaine, hearken for quid feci? and ſhall I never ſpeake that, He ſo faine would heare? Shall I never once ſeriouſly ſet before me, the Iudgements of the Lord? Aske theſe: aske them and anſwer them, and upon them, come to a reſolution, ſaying: I will riſe, and returne, and ſubmit my ſelfe, and from my heart ſay, quid feci? I will conſider volatilia cæli; I will not ſee them flye, but I will thinke of the ſeaſon of my returning: but, above all, I will not bee without regard of GOD's judgement, than which, nothing (in this world) is more to be regarded.

Becauſe the time; the time is the maine matter, and (ever) more adoe about it, than the thing it ſelfe; to have ſpeciall care of that: knowing, that it was not but upon great cauſe, that our SAVIOVR complaining of this point cried: ô if thou hadſt but knowne, that this day had beene the day of thy viſitation! and ſo was faine to breake off, the teares comming ſo faſt, that Hee was not able to ſpeake out, but forced to weepe out the reſt of his ſentence. O thoſe teares ſhew, what time is; ſhew that opportunitie it ſelfe is a grace, even to have it; that it is a ſecond grace, to know it; and a third better than them both, to lay hold of it, and uſe it. That the greateſt errours in this matter of repentance come from our ignorance, in not diſcerning of the time, when we may have it; or our negligence, in not uſing it, when we diſcerne it. Therefore, rather than faile, (or rather, that wee may not faile) to take the time of the text. And that time, is at this time, now: Now, doe theſe fowles returne: Who knoweth whether he ſhall live to ſee them returne any more? It may be the laſt ſpring, the laſt Swallow-time, the laſt wedneſday, of this name or nature, wee ſhall ever live, to heare this point preached. Why doe we not covenant then with our ſelves, not to let this time ſlip? Surely, leſt no time ſhould be taken, the Prophet pointeth us at this; and (enſuing the Prophet's mind) the Church hath fixed her ſeaſon at it. And nature it ſelfe ſeemeth to favour it, that at the riſing of the yeare, we ſhould riſe; and returne, when the Zodiake returneth to the firſt ſigne.

Luke 19. 41, 42

Let the Prophet, let the Church, let nature, let ſomething prevaile with us. Et Dominus qui ſic inſtat præcepto, præcurrat auxilio, and ALMIGHTY GOD, the upholder of them that ſtand, the lifter up of thoſe that be downe; that GOD, who is thus inſtant upon this point by His complaint, prevent us with His gracious helpe, that we may redreſſe it. Following, with his Spirit, where his word hath gone before, and making it effectuall to our ſpeedie converſion.

ASER-

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE KING JAMES, AT WHITEHALL, On the X. of February, A.D. MDCXIX. being ASHWEDNESDAY.

IOEL Chap. II. Ver. XII, XIII.

Nunc ergo dicit DOMINVS: Convertimini ad Me in toto corde veſtro, in jejunio, & in fletu, & in planctu.
Et ſcindite corda veſtra, & non veſtimenta veſtra, & convertimini ad DEVM veſtrum.

Therefore alſo, now (ſaith the LORD; ) Turne you unto Me, with all your heart, and with Faſting, and with Weeping, and with Mourning.

And rend your heart, and not your clothes, and turne unto the LORD your GOD.

FOR this time hath the Church made choice of this Text. The time, wherein, howſoever wee have diſpenſed with it all the yeare beſide, ſhe ſhould have us ſeriouſly to entend, and make it our time of turning to the LORD. And that, Now (the firſt word of the Text.)

For, ſhee holds it not ſafe, to leave us wholly to our ſelves, to take any time, it skils not when; leſt wee take none at all. Not how (ſaith Felix) but when I ſhall find a convenient time; and he never found any: and many (with him) periſh, upon this not now. Take heed of ὅταν δὲ καιρὸν λάβω, when I ſhall finde a convenient time: It undid Felix, that. Acts 24.25.

She hath found, this ſame keeping of continuall Sabboths and Faſts, this keeping the memorie of CHRIST's Birth and Reſurrection all the yeare long, hath done no good: hurt, rather. So, it hath ſeemed good, to the HOLY GHOST, and to Her, to order, there ſhall be a ſolemne ſet returne, once in the yeare at leaſt. And reaſon: for, once a yeare, all things Acts 15.28.

things turne. And, that once is now at this time: For, now at this time, is the turning of the yeare. In Heaven, the Sunne in his Equinoctiall line, the Zodiaque, and all the Conſtellations in it, doe now turne about to the firſt point. The earth and all her plants, after a dead Winter, returne to the firſt and beſt ſeaſon of the yeare. The creatures, the Fowles of the Aire, the Swallow and the Turtle, and the Crane and the Storke know their ſeaſons, and make their juſt returne at this time, every yeare. Every thing now turning, that we alſo would make it our time to turne to GOD in.

Ier.8.7.

Then, becauſe we are to turne cum jejunio, with faſting; and this day is knowen by the name of Caput jejunii, the firſt day of Lent; it fits well, as a welcome into this time: a time lent us (as it were) by GOD, ſet us by the Church, to make our turning in.

And, beſides the time, Now; the manner (How) is here alſo ſet downe. For, as it is true, that repentance is the gift of GOD, (Si quo modo det Deus pœnitentiam, ſaith the Apoſtle) and we by prayer to ſeeke it of Him, that it would pleaſe Him to grant us true repentance; So, it is true withall, there is a Doctrine of Repentance from dead works (as ſaith the ſame Apoſtle) and that is here taught us.

Heb.6.1.

The Church turnes us to theſe words here of the Prophet Ioël; Which, though they bee a part of the Old Teſtament, yet, for ſome ſpeciall vertue in them (as wee are to beleeve) She hath cauſed them to be read, for the Epiſtle of this day.

And ſurely, had there been a plainer than this, wherin the nature of true repentance had been more fully ſet forth, it behooveth us to thinke, the Church inſpired by the wiſedome of GOD, would have looked it out for us, againſt this time, the time ſacred by her to our turning.

Againe, that the Church carying to her children the tender heart of a mother, if there were a more eaſy or gentle repentance than this of Ioël, She would have choſen that rather. For, this we are all bound to thinke, She takes no pleaſure to make us ſad, or to put upon us more, than needs She muſt. Which in that She hath not, we may well preſume, this of Ioël is it, She would have us hold our ſelves to: and that this is, and is to be, the mold of our Repentance.

Mat.5.13. 13.31. Io.6.60. Verſe 11.

I wote well, there is in this text, ſome-what of Sal terræ, ſomething of the graine of muſtard-ſeed in the Goſpell: The points be ſuch as we liſt not heare of. Faſting is durus Sermo, an unwelcome point to fleſh and bloud: but, as for weeping and mourning, and renting the heart, who can abide it? The Prophet (it ſeemes) foreſaw, we would ſay as much; and therefore he takes up the word before us. They be the words next before theſe, Who can abide it? Abide what? Theſe dayes, the abſtinence in them? No, but the great and fearefull Day of the LORD. If you ſpeake of not abiding, who can abide that? As if he ſhould ſay, If you could abide that Day when it comes, I would trouble you with none of theſe. But, no abiding of that. Turne it away you may: turne it into a joyfull day, by this turning to the LORD. Thus you may: and, but thus, you cannot. Now therefore you ſee, how therefore comes in. Here is our choice: One of them we muſt take. And, better thus turne unto GOD in ſome of theſe little dayes, than be turned off by Him in that great Day, to another manner weeping than this of Ioël: Even to weeping, and wailing, and gnaſhing of teeth. Scientes igitur terrorem hunc, knowing therefore this feare, and that upon this turning, Cardo vertitur, the hinge turnes of our well or evill doing for ever; to be content to come to it, and to turne the Heathen mans Non emam, into emam tanti pœnitere. To this turning then. Our charge is to preach to men, non quæ volunt audire, ſed quæ volunt audiſſe, not, what for the preſent they would heare; but, what another day, they would wiſh they had heard.

Mat.8.12.

2 Cor.10.11.

Repentance it ſelfe is nothing elſe, but redire ad principia, a kind of circling; to returne to Him by repentance, from whom, by ſinne, we have turned away. And much after a circle is this text: beginnes with the word turne, and returnes about to the ſame word againe. Which circle conſiſts (to uſe the Prophet's owne word) of two turnings; (for, twice he repeates this word;) which two muſt needs be two different motions. 1 One, is to be done with the whole heart: 2 The other with it broken and rent: So as one and the ſame it cannot be.

First,

First, a turne, wherein we looke forward to GOD, and with our whole heart resolve to turne to Him. Then, a turne againe, wherein wee looke backward to our sinnes, wherein we have turned from GOD; and with beholding them, our very heart breaketh. These two, are two distinct, both in nature and names: One, Conversion from sinne; the other, Contrition for sinne. One, resolving to amend that which is to come: the other, reflecting and sorrowing for that which is past. One, declining from evill to be done hereafter: the other, sentencing it selfe for evill done heretofore. These two betweene them, make up a compleat repentance, or (to keepe the word of the Text) a perfect revolution.

And this and none other, doth Ioël teach the Iewes: and this, and none other doth Ionas teach the Gentiles. None other, the Prophets; nor none other the Apostles: For Saint Iames comes just to this of Ioël, Enjoyning sinners to cleanse their hands, and to purge their hearts; which is the former: and then withall, to change their laughter into mourning, and their joy into heavinesse: Where πενθὸς & κατήφεια, are as full for the New, as Planctus and Fletus are for the Old. These two: both these, and neither to spare: and we have not learned, we hold not, we teach not any other repentance. I speake it for this. There is a false imputation cast on us, that we should teach, there goeth nothing to repentance but amendment of life: that these of fasting and the rest, wee let runne by, as the waste of repentance: Nay, that (for fasting) we doe indicere jejunium jejunio, wee proclaime a fast from it; and teach a penitence with no penall thing in it. That therefore, this Text by name, and such other, we shun and shift, and dare not come neere them. Not come neere them? As neere as wee can, by the grace of GOD, that the world may know, and all here beare witnesse, we teach and we presse both. Iames 4 8,9.

Indeed (as Augustine well saith) Aliud est quod docemus, aliud quod sustinemus. What we are faine to beare with, is one thing; What we preach, and faine would perswade, is another. Et væ tibi flumen moris humani (saith hee, and wee both) Woe to the strong current of a corrupt Custome, that hath taken such a head, as doe what we can, it carries all head-long before it. But, whatsoever we beare, this we teach, though.

I forget my selfe. I intend to proceed as the words lye. 1 To turne, first: 2 and to GOD; 3 To GOD, with the heart; 4 and with the whole heart. Then the Manner, with these foure: 1 Fasting, 2 Weeping, 3 Mourning, 4 and a Rent heart. Of which, the two former are the bodies taske; Fasting and weeping: the two later, the soules; mourning, and renting the heart. The former (mourning) the affection of sorrow: the later (renting) from anger, or indignation: Of both which affections, Repentance is compound, and not of either alone. This for the manner, how. The Division
I.
II.
Then last, for the time, when: Now to doe it; Now therefore. III.

DIversly, and in sundry termes doth the Scripture set forth unto us the nature of repentance. Of renewing, as from a decay (Heb. 6.6.) Of refining, as from drosse (Ier. 6.29.) Of recovering, as from a maladie (*Dan.*4.24.) Of cleansing, as from soile; Of rising, as from a fall (*Ierem.*8.4.) In no one, either for sense more full; or for use more ofter, than in this of turning. I.
Repentance a Turning.
1 Turne.

To turne is a counsell properly to them that are out of their right way. For, going on still, and turning, are motions opposite. Both of them with reference to a way. For, if the way bee good, wee are to hold on: if otherwise, to turne and take another.

Whether a way be good or no, we principally pronounce, by the end. If (saith Chrysostome) it be to a Feast, good; though it be thorow a blinde lane: if to execution, not good, though thorow the faire st street in the Citie. Saint Chrysostome was bidden to a marriage dinner; was to goe to it thorow divers lanes, and alleyes; croſſing the high ſtreet, he met with one led thorow it to be executed: he told it his Auditory, that Non quà, ſed quò was it.

If then our life be a way (as a way it is termed, in all Writers both holy and humane, via morum no leſſe, than via pedum;) the end of this way is to bring us to our end, to our ſovereigne good, which we call Happineſſe. Which happineſſe, not finding here, but full of flawes, and of no laſting neither, we are ſet to ſeeke it, and put in hope to finde it Pſal.16.11. with GOD, in whoſe preſence, is the fulneſſe of Ioy, and at whoſe right hand, pleaſures for evermore.

From GOD then, as from the journeyes end of our life, our way, we are never to turne
Gen.5.22. our ſteps, or our eyes, but with Enoch (as of him it is ſaid) ſtill to walke with GOD, all our life long. Then ſhould we never need to heare this convertite.

We are not ſo happy. There is one that maligneth, we ſhould goe this way, or come to this end: and therefore, to divert us, holdeth out to us ſome Pleaſure, Profit, or Preferment; which to purſue, we muſt ſtep out of the way, and ſo doe, full many times; even turne from GOD, to ſerve our owne turnes.

And this is the way of ſinne, which is a turning from GOD. When having in chaſe ſome trifling tranſitory I wot not what; to follow it, wee even turne our backes upon GOD, and forſake the way of His Commandements. And here now wee firſt need His counſell of Convertite.

For, being entred into this way, yer we goe too farre in it, wiſdome would, we ſtayed and were adviſed, whither this way will carry us, and where we ſhall finde our ſelves at our journeyes end. And, reaſon we have to doubt: For, after we once left our firſt way,
1 Sam.25.31. which was right, there takes us ſometimes that ſame Singultus Cordis (as Abigail well Rom.1.15. calls it) a throbbing of the heart; or (as the Apoſtle) certaine accuſing thoughts preſent themſelves unto us, which will not ſuffer us to goe on quietly: our mindes ſtill miſ-giving us, that we are wrong.

Beſides, when any danger of death is neere: Nay, if we doe but ſadly thinke on it, a certaine chilneſſe takes us, and we cannot (with any comfort) thinke on our journeyes
Eſay 30.21. end: And heare (as it were) a voyce of one crying behinde us, Hæc eſt via; that, is not the way, you have taken; this, that you have loſt, is your way, walke in it. Which voice if we heare not, it is long of the noiſe about us. If we would ſometimes goe aſide into ſome retired place, or in the ſtill of the night hearken after it, we might peradventure heare it.

A great bleſſing of GOD it is; for, without it, thouſands would periſh in the error
Eſay 46.8. of their life, and never returne to their right way againe. Redite prævaricatores ad cor, that ſinners would turne to their owne hearts. And this is the firſt degree, to helpe us a little forward to this turning.

Being thus turned to our hearts, we turne againe, and behold the τροχὸς γενέσεως (as Saint Iames 3.6. Iames termeth it) the wheele of our nature, that it turneth apace, and turnes off daily ſome, and them younger than wee; and that within a while, our turne will come, that our breath alſo muſt goe forth, and we turne againe to our duſt.

Pſal.94.15. And when that is paſt, another of the Prophet, That Righteouſneſſe ſhall turne againe to judgement: Mercy that now ſits in the Throne, ſhall riſe up and give place: Iuſtice alſo Pſal.9.18. ſhall have her turne. And then comes the laſt turne, Convertentur peccatores in infernum, the ſinners ſhall be turned into hell, and all the people that forget, in time, to turne unto GOD. There was wont to be a ceremony of giving aſhes this day, to put us in minde of this converteris. I feare with the ceremonie, the ſubſtance is gone too. If that converſion into aſhes, be well thought on, it will helpe forward our turning.

This returning to our heart, the ſad and ſerious bethinking us there, of Natures converſion into duſt; of ſinnes into aſhes (for, aſhes ever preſuppoſe fire:) that the wheele turnes apace, and if we turne not the rather, theſe turnings may overtake us: GODS Spirit aſſiſting, may ſo worke with us, as we ſhall thinke Ioels counſell good; that, if we have not beene ſo happie, as to keepe the way; yet wee be not ſo unhappie, as not to turne againe from a way, the iſſues whereof ſurely will not be good.

And

And would GOD, theſe would ſerve to worke it. If they will not, then muſt Converſus ſum in ærumnâ, dum configitur ſpina; ſome thorne in our ſides, ſome bodily or worldly griefe muſt come and procure it. But, that is not to runne, but, to be turned: And, there is great odds betweene theſe two. As, one thing it is, to take up the croſſe; another, to have it laid upon us. Pſal. 32. 4.

To be turned I call, when, by ſome croſſe of body or mind (as it were, with a ring in our noſe) we are brought about, whether we will or no, to looke how we have gone aſtray.

To turne I call, when the world miniſtreth unto us no cauſe of heavineſſe; all is ex ſententiâ: yet, even then, the grace of GOD moving us, we ſet our ſelves about; and repreſenting thoſe former converſions before us, we worke it out, having from without, no heavy accident to force us to it.

We condemne not Converſus ſum in ærumnâ: Many are ſo turned; and GOD is gracious and rejects them not. But, we commend this latter, when (without wrench or skrew) we turne, of our ſelves. And that man, who being under no arreſt, no bridle in his jawes, ſhall in the daies of his peace, reſolve of a time to turne in, and take it; that man hath great cauſe to rejoice, and to rejoice before GOD. And thus much for Convertite, or (if it may not be had) for Convertimini.

2 To Me, that is, GOD.

Turne, and turne to Me: and He that ſaith it, is GOD. Why, whither ſhould we turne from ſinne, but to GOD? Yes, we may be ſure, it is not for nothing, GOD ſetteth downe this. In Ieremie, it is more plaine: If ye returne, returne to Me, ſaith the LORD: Which had beene needleſſe, if we could turne to nothing elſe; were it not poſſible, to find divers turnings; leaving one by-way to take another; from this extreme, turne to that, and never to GOD at all. They that have beene fleſhly given, if they ceaſe to be ſo, they turne: but, if they become as worldly now, as they were fleſhly before, they turne not to GOD. They, that from the dotage of ſuperſtition, runne into the phrenſie of prophaneſſe: They, that from abhorring Idols, fall to commit ſacriledge; howſoever they turne, to GOD they turne not. Ierem. 4. 1. Rom. 2. 22.

And this is even the motus diurnus, the common turning of the world (as Moſes expreſſeth it) to adde drunkenneſſe to thirſt: from too little to too much; from one extreme to runne into another. Would GOD it were not needfull for mee to make this note. But, the true turne is ad Me: So from ſinne, as to GOD. Elſe, in very deed, wee turne from this ſinne, to that ſinne; but, not from ſinne: Or (to ſpeake more properly) we turne ſinne, we turne not from ſinne, if we give over one evill way, to take another. Deut. 29. 19.

3 With the heart.

To Mee then: and with the heart. And, this alſo is needfull. For (I know not how, but) by ſome, our converſion is conceived to be a turning of the braine only (by doting too much on the word reſipiſcere) as a matter meerly mentall. Where before, thus and thus we thought, ſuch and ſuch poſitions we held; now, we are of another mind than before; and there is our turning. This of Ioël's is a matter of the heart, ſure. This? Nay (to ſay truth) where is converſion mentioned, but it is in a manner attended with in corde? And ſo requireth not only an alteration of the mind, but of the will: a change, not, of certaine notions only in the head, but of the affections of the heart too. Elſe, it is vertigo capitis, but not converſio cordis.

Neither doth this [in corde] ſtand only againſt the braine; but is commonly in oppoſition to the whole outward man. Elſe, the heart may be fixed like a Pole, and the body (like a ſphære) turn round about it. Nay, heart and all muſt turne. Not the face, for ſhame, or the feet, for feare; but the heart, for very hatred of ſinne alſo. Hypocriſie is a ſinne: being to turne from ſinne, we are to turne from it alſo; and not have our body in the right way, and our heart ſtill wandering in the by-pathes of ſinne. But, if we forbeare the act, which the eye of man beholdeth, to make a conſcience of the thoughts too; for unto them alſo, the eye of GOD pierceth. Thus it ſhould be: Elſe, Converſion it may be, but heart it hath none.

4 With the whole heart.

With the heart; and with the whole heart. As, not to divide the heart from the body; So, neither to divide the heart in it ſelfe. The divell, to hinder us from true turning, turnes himſelfe (like Proteus) into all ſhapes. Firſt, turne not at all, you are well enough. If you will needs turne, turne whither you will, but not to GOD. If to GOD, leave your heart behind you, and turne and ſpare not. If with the heart, be it in corde, but not in toto; with ſome ends or fractions, with ſome few broken affections, but, not entirely. In modico (ſaith Agrippa) ſomewhat; there is a peece of the heart. In modico & in toto (ſaith S. PAVL) ſomewhat and altogether; there is the whole heart. For which cauſe, as if ſome converted with the brimme, or upper part only, doth the Pſalme call for it, de profundis; and the Prophet, from the bottome of the heart.

Act.26.28,29.

To rend the heart in this part, is a fault; which is a vertue in the next. For, it makes us have two hearts, hovering (as it were) and in motu trepidationis: and faine we would let goe ſinne, but not all that belongs to it: And turne we would, from our evill way; but not from that which will bring us backe to it againe, the Occaſion, the Object, the Companie: from which, except we turne too, wee are in continuall danger, to leave our way againe, and to turne backe to our former folly; the ſecond ever worſe than the firſt.

When the heart is thus parcell'd out, it is eaſily ſeene. See you one would play with fire, and not be burned; touch pitch and not be defiled with it; love perill, and not periſh in it; dallying with his converſion; turning, like a doore upon the hinges, open and ſhut, and ſhut and open againe; with vult & non vult, he would, and yet he would not? Be bold to ſay of that man, he is out of the compaſſe of converſion: backe againe he will ad volutabrum luti.

Eccl.3.27.

And as eaſily it is ſeene, when one goes to his turning with his whole heart. Hee will come to His Quid faciemus? Set him downe, what he ſhould doe, and he will do it. Not come neere the place where ſinne dwelleth: Refraine the wandering of his ſenſe, whereby ſinne is awaked; fulneſſe and idleneſſe, whereof ſinne breedeth: but chiefly, corrupt companie, whither ſinne reſorteth. For, converſion hath no greater enemy, than converſing with ſuch, of whom our heart telleth us, there is neither faith nor feare of GOD in them. To all theſe he will come. Draw that mans apologie, pronounce of him, he is turned, and with his whole heart turned to GOD. And ſo may we turne: and, ſuch may all our converſion be: 1 Voluntary, without compulſion: 2 To God, without declining: 3 With the heart, not in Speculation: 4 With the whole heart entire, no purpoſe of recidivation.

Luc.3.10.

II The manner of it.

All this ſhall be done: we will turne, with the heart, with the whole heart. Is this all? No; heere is a Cum, wee muſt take with us; Cum jejunio, With faſting. Take heed of turning Cum into ſine: To ſay, with it, or without it, wee may turne well enough: Since, it is GOD Himſelfe, that to our turning joineth jejunium, wee may not turne without it. Indeed (as I told you) this is but the halfe-turne. Hitherto, wee have but looked forward, wee muſt alſo turne backe our eye, and reflect upon our ſinnes paſt, be ſorrie for them, before our turning be, as it ſhould. The Hemiſphere of our ſinnes (not to be under the Horizon, cleane out of our ſight) muſt aſcend up, and we ſet them before us; and we teſtifie by theſe foure that follow, how we like our ſelves for committing of them.

I know, we would have the ſentence end here, the other ſtripped off; have the matter betweene our hearts and us, that there we may end it, within, and no more adoe: and there, we ſhould doe well enough. But the Prophet tells us farther (or GOD Himſelfe rather; for, He it is, that heere ſpeaketh) that our repentance is to be incorporate into the bodie, no leſſe than the ſinne was. Her's hath been the delight of ſinne, and, ſhee to beare a part of the penaltie: that the heart within, and the body without may both turne, ſince both have gone aſtray. It is a taxe, a tribute, it hath pleaſed GOD to lay upon our ſinnes, and we muſt beare it.

I ſpeake it for this. It is a World, what ſtrange conceits there are abroad, touching this this point. To the animalis homo, fleſh and bloud reveales a farre more eaſie way, not encombred with any of theſe. To turne, and yet not loſe a meale all the yeare long; and not ſhed a teare; and not rent, either heart or garment: and yet doe full well. And with this conceipt, they paſſe their lives; and with this they paſſe out of their lives; as it ſeemes, reſolved to put their ſoules in a venture, and to come to heaven after their owne faſhion, or not come there at all: Change Ioël into Iaël; take a draught of milke out of her bottle, and wrappe them warme, and lay them downe, and never riſe more. Iudg.4.17.

And (that which is worſe) they would not, by their good-will, have any other ſpoken of. For, this is a diſeaſe of our nature: Looke how much we are (of our ſelves) diſpoſed to doe, juſt ſo much, and no more, muſt be preached to us. For, more than we have a liking to performe, we cannot at any hand abide, ſhould be urged as needfull. But theſe conceipts muſt be left, or elſe we muſt tell IOEL, we can turne to GOD, without any of theſe. But, it is not IOEL; GOD it is, that ſpeaketh, who beſt knoweth, what turning it is, that pleaſeth Him beſt: and whom we muſt needs leave to preſcribe the manner, how He would have us to turne unto Him.

To ſpeake after the manner of men, in very congruitie, when after a long averſion, we are to turne and preſent our ſelves before GOD; there would be a form ſet downe, how to behave our ſelves, in what ſort to performe it. This is it; how for our cheare, our countenance, how for our carriage every way. Very duty will teach us, if we will not breake all the rules of Decorum, we ſhould doe it ſuitably to ſuch as have ſtood out in a long rebellion, and being in juſt diſgrace for it, are to approch the higheſt MAIESTY upon earth. Now, would they (being to returne) make a feaſt the ſame day they are to doe it, with light merry hearts, with cheereſull lookes? and not rather, with ſhame in their countenance, feare in their hearts, griefe in their eyes? As they would, ſo let us. Still and ever remembring what the Prophet ſaith, Magnus Rex IEHOVA, GOD is a more High and mighty Prince than any on earth: ſtands on His State, will not be thus turned to, thus ſlightly; with, or without, it skills not. But, wee in our turning, to come before Him, all abaſhed and confounded in our ſelves; that, for a trifle, a matter of nothing, certaine caracts of gaine, a few minutes of delight (baſe creatures that we bee) ſo and ſo often, Sic & ſic faciendo, by ſuch and ſuch ſinnes, have offended ſo preſumptuouſly againſt ſo Glorious a MAIESTY; ſo deſperately againſt ſo Omnipotent a POVVER; ſo unkindly againſt ſo Sovereigne a BOVNTY of ſo gracious a GOD and ſo kind and loving a SAVIOVR.

To take them as they ſtand. Faſting: Which, were there nothing elſe but this, that the Church maketh this time of our returne a time of faſt, it ſhewes plainely, in her opinion, how neere theſe two are allyed, how well they ſort together. Which Faſt, the Church preſcribeth, not onely by way of regiment to keepe the body low, that it may be a leſſe mellow ſoile for the ſinnes of the fleſh, (for, this pertaineth to the former part) ſo to prevent ſinne to come; but awards it, as a chaſtiſement for ſinne already paſt. For, to be abridged, whether by others or by our ſelves, of that which otherwiſe we might freely uſe, hath in it the nature of a puniſhment. They be the words of the Pſalme, I wept and chaſtned my ſelfe with faſting: Chaſtened himſelfe; So, a chaſtiſement it is. With Faſting. Pſal.69.10.

And thus preach we Faſting: 1 Neither as the Phyſitians enjoyne it in their Aphoriſmes, to digeſt ſome former ſurfet. 2 Nor, as the Philoſophers in their Moralls, to keepe the ſenſe ſubtile. 3 Nor, as the States politike in their Proclamations, to preſerve the breed of Cattell, or increaſe of ſtrength by Sea. But as the holy prophets of GOD, as Ioël ſtraight after, we doe Sanctificare Ieiunium, preſcribe it, and that to a religious end: Even to chaſten our ſelves for ſinne by this forbearance. So, no Phyſicall, Philoſophicall, Politicall; but a Propheticall, yea an Evangelicall faſt. For, if in very ſorrow, we are to faſt, when the bridegrome is taken away; Much more, when we our ſelves by our ſinnes committed, have been the cauſe of His taking, nay, of His very driving away from us. Verſe 15. Matt.9.15.

And must we then fast? Indeed we must, or get us a new Epistle for the day, and a new Matt.6.16. Gospell too. For, as GOD here (in the Epistle) commands it; So CHRIST (in the Gospell) presupposeth it with His Cum jejunatis, taking it as granted, We will fast. That sure, fast we must, or else wipe out this cum jejunio, and that Cum jejunatis, and tell GOD and CHRIST they are not well advised; we have found out a way beyond them, to turne unto GOD without any fasting at all.

But, how fast? To relieve all we may: When we speake of Fasting, Humanum dicimus propter infirmitatem vestram; we intend not, mens knees should grow weake with Rom.6 19. Psal 109.24. fasting. Two kinds of fasting we find in Scripture: 1 David's, who fasted, tasting
2 Sam.3.35. neither bread nor ought else, till the Sunne was downe: No meat at all: That is too
Dan.10.3. hard. 2. What say you to Daniel's fast? He did eate and drinke, but not cibos desiderij, no meates of delight, and (namely) eat no flesh. The Church (as an indulgent mother)
Matt.19.12. mitigates all shee may: Enjoynes not for fast, that of David (and yet, qui potest capere capiat, for all that:) She onely requires of us that other of Daniel, to forbeare cibos desiderii (and flesh is there expressely named) Meates and drinkes provoking the appetite, full Rom.13.14. of nourishment, kindling the blood: Content to sustaine Nature, and not purvey for the flesh, to satisfie the lusts thereof. And thus (by the grace of GOD) we may: if not David's, yet Daniel's. For, if David's we cannot, and Daniel's we list not, I know not what fast we will leave: for, a third I find not.

And yet, even this also doth the Church release to such as are in Timothe's case; have 1 Tim.5.23. crebras infirmitates. It is not the decay of nature, but the chastisement of sinne she seeketh. But, at this doore, all scape through: we are all weake and crasie, when wee would re-
Matt.16.22. pent; but lusty and strong, when to commit sinne. Our Physitians are easy to tell us, and we easy to beleeve any that will tell us, Propitius esto tibi, favour your selfe, for it is not for you.

Take heed, GOD is not mocked, who would have sinne chastened. Who sees (I feare) the pleasing of our appetite is the true cause; the not endangering our health is but a pretence. And He will not have His Ordinance thus dallyed with, fast or loose. Said it must bee, that Joël here saith: Turne to GOD with fasting, or be ready to shew a good cause why: And to shew it to GOD. It is He (here) calls for it (the pen is but Joël's:) Hee best knowes, what turning it is will serve our turne, will turne away Ira ventura, which Quis poterit sustinere, who is able to abide? And, take this with you: when fasting Verse 14. and all is in, if it be, Quis scit, si convertatur Deus? If we leave, what we please out, then it will be Quis scit? indeed.

2 With Weeping

The next point (and GOD send us well to discharge it) is Weeping. Can we not be dispensed with that neither, but we must weepe too? Truly, even in this point, somewhat would be done too: Else Joël will not be satisfied, but call on us still. There Psal.56.8. is (saith the Psalme) a flagon provided by GOD of purpose for them: Therefore, some would come; some few droppes at least. Not, as the Saints of old: No; humanum dicimus here too. [a] Iob's eyes powred forth teares to GOD: [b] David's
[a] Iob 16.20. [b] Psal.119.136. eye gushed out with water, Hee all to wet his pillow, with them: [c] Marie Magda-
[c] Luk. 7.38. len wept enough to have made a bath. Wee urge not these. But if not powre out, Ier.13.17. not gush forth, Nonne stillabit oculus noster (saith Ieremie) shall not our eye afford a droppe or twaine?

Stay a little, turne and looke backe upon our sinnes past: it may bee, if wee could get our selves to doe it in kind, if set them before us and looke sadly, and not glance
Esay 38.15. over them apace: Thinke of them not once; but (as EZEKIA did) recogitare, thinke them over and over; consider the motives, the base motives, and weigh the circumstances, the grievous circumstances; and tell over our many flittings, our often relapsing, our wretched continuing in them: It would set our sorrow in passion, it would bring downe some; Some would come: Our bowells would turne, our repentings rowle together; and lament we would the death of our soule, as we doe otherwhile the death of a friend; and for the unkindnesse, we have shewed to GOD, as, for the unkindnesse we doe, that man sheweth us.

But,

But, this will aske time. It would not be posted through, as our manner is: wee have done straight. It is not a busineſſe of a few minutes: It will aske Saint Peter's χωρῆσαι, retired place, and Saint Pauls σχολάζειν, vacant time. It would aske a Nazarites vow, to doe it as it ſhould be done: Even a ſequeſtring our ſelves for a time, as they did: In other reſpects (I grant;) but, among others, for this alſo, even to performe to GOD, a Votive repentance. This (I wiſh) we would trie. But, we ſeeke no place; we allow no time for it. Our other affaires take up ſo much, as we can ſpare little or none for this; which, the time will come, when we ſhall thinke it the weightieſt affaire of all.

2 Pet.2.9. 1 Cor.7.5.

And yet it may be, when all is done, none will come though. For, who hath teares at command? Who can weepe when he liſts? I know it well, they be the overflowings of ſorrow; not of every ſorrow, but of the ſenſuall parts: and being an act of the inferiour parts, reaſon cannot command them at all times, they will not bee had.

3 With mourning.

But, if they will not, the Prophet hath here put an ἀντιφθόμενον in ſtead of it (for, ſo doe the Fathers all take it:) Mourne. If weepe we cannot, mourne we can: and mourne we muſt. Et vos non luxiſtis (ſaith the Apoſtle:) He ſaith not, Et vos non fleviſtis, and you have not wept; But, and you have not mourned; as if he ſhould ſay, that you ſhould have done at the leaſt. Mourning they call, the ſorrow which reaſon it ſelfe can yeeld. In Schooles, they terme it Dolorem appretiativum, valuing what ſhould be; rating what the ſinnes deſerve, though we have it not to lay downe: yet what they deſerve, we ſhould; and, that we can. Theſe, and theſe ſinnes I have committed, ſo many, ſo heynous, ſo oft iterate, ſo long lyen in: theſe deſerve to be bewailed even with teares of bloud.

1 Cor.5.2.

2 This we can: and this too, wiſh with the Prophet (and ſo let us wiſh) O that my head were full of water, and my eyes fountaines of teares, to doe it as it ſhould be done! This we can.

Ier.9.1.

3 And pray we can, that He which turneth the flint ſtone into a ſpringing well, would vouchafe us (even as dry as flints) gratiam lachrymarum (as the Fathers call it) ſome ſmall portion of that grace to that end. Though weepe we cannot, yet wiſh for it, and pray for it we can.

Pſal.114.8.

4 And complaine we can, and bemone our ſelves (as doth the Prophet) with a very little variation from him: My leanneſſe, my leanneſſe (ſaith he) woe is me: My drineſſe, my drineſſe (may each of us ſay) woe is me. The tranſgreſſors have offended, the tranſgreſſors have grievouſly offended. Grievouſly offend we can; grievouſly lament we cannot; My drineſſe, my drineſſe, woe is me. Nay, we need not varie, we may even let leanneſſe alone, his owne word. For, drie and leane both is our ſorrow (GOD wot) GOD helpe us, This mourne we can.

Eſay 24.16.

5 And laſtly, this we can: even humbly beſeech our mercifull GOD and Father, in default of ours, to accept of the ſtrong crying and bitter teares, which in the dayes of His fleſh, His bleſſed SONNE, in great agonie ſhed for us: for us (I ſay) that ſhould, but are not able to doe the like for our ſelves: that what is wanting in ours, may be ſupplied from thence. Theſe (by the grace of GOD) we may doe, in diſcharge of this point. Theſe let us doe, and it will be accepted.

4 With renting your hearts.

And ſo now to the laſt: Rent your hearts, You ſee, firſt and laſt, to the heart we come. For indeed, a meale may be miſſed, a teare or two let fall, and the heart not affected, for all that. [a] Eſau wept; [b] Ahab gave over his meat; their hearts (both) ſwelling and apoſtumate ſtill. To ſhew, that though theſe be requiſite (all;) yet that the paſſion of the heart is caput pœnitentiæ: to the heart He commeth againe alwaies, to verifie, that, in both and in all, quod cor non facit non fit; if it be not done with the heart, if the heart doe it not, nothing is done. As in converſion, the purpoſe of amendment muſt proceed from the heart: So in our contrition, the ſorrow, the anger, for our turning away muſt pierce to the heart: Some cardiaque paſſion to be; the heart to ſuffer.

a Gen.27.38. b 1 King.21.27.

And, what muſt it ſuffer? Contrition: It ſhould even conteri, be grownd to powder. A contrite heart, it ſhould be: If not that, not contritum, yet cor confractum, a broken heart, broken in peeces, though not ſo ſmall. If neither of theſe; yet with this qualifying here, cor con-ſciſſum, with ſome rent, or cleft. Solutio continui, ſomewhat there is to be opened; Not onely that the apoſtumate matter may breathe forth, but much more (which is the proper of this part) that feeling the ſmart there, wee may ſay, and ſay it with feeling, Quod malum, & amarum, that an evill thing it is, and a bitter, to have turned away and forſaken the LORD. Some ſuch thing is the heart to feeling or elſe nothing is done.

Pſal. 51. 17.

Ier. 2. 19.

Now, this renting (if we marke it well) doth not ſo properly pertaine to the paſſion of ſorrow: but rather to another; even, to that of anger. [a] Their hearts rent for anger (it is ſaid Act. 7.) And, it eaſily appeareth; For we uſe violence to that we rend. [b] Ephraim's ſmiting his thigh, [c] the Publican's his breſt: both, the acts of anger, rather than heavineſſe. The Apoſtle puts into his repentance, indignation and revenge, no leſſe than he doth ſorrow.

[a] Acts 7. 54.
[b] Ier. 31. 19.
[c] Luke 18. 13.
2 Cor. 7. 11.

To ſay truth, they are to goe together. Sorrow, if it have no power to revenge, growes to be but a heavy dull paſſion: But, if it have power, indignation and it go together. One cannot truly be ſaid to be grieved with the thing done, but he muſt be angry with the doer, And we, if we be ſory indeed for our ſinne, will be angry with the ſinner. So was Iob: Therefore I abhorre my ſelfe. My ſelfe (ſaith he:) Not ſo much the ſinne, which was done and paſt, and ſo uncapable of anger; as my ſelfe, for the ſinne. Which if it be indignation indeed in us (and not a gentle word) will ſeeke revenge ſome way or other: Grind to powder, breake in peeces, at leaſt make a rent. Contritio, Confractio, Conſciſsio, Compunctio, Somewhat it will be.

Iob 42. 6.

But, when we returne to enquire, whether and which of theſe two acts hath in it the very true eſſence of Repentance? In Converſion I find it not: Why? For, after I converted, I repented (ſaith Ieremie;) and Nihil prius aut poſterius ſeipſo, Nothing is after it ſelfe. Converſion then, is not it. And, when we ſeeke for it in this latter: Firſt, in Sorrow it is not: Why? for triſtitia operatur pœnitentiam (ſaith the Apoſtle) Marke that [operatur;] workes it, therefore is not it: For, nihil ſui cauſa. It remaines then, of force, that it is in this now of indignation. So that now, (and not before) are we come to the eſſence of it indeed. And, ſet downe this: that ἀγανάκτησις, indignation is the eſſentiall paſſion; and ἐκδίκησις, revenged (or this renting here) the principall and moſt proper act of a true turning unto GOD.

Ier. 31. 19.

2 Cor. 7. 10.

Now, if you aske, how or which way we can come to make a rent in the heart, ſince no hand may touch it and we live? the meaning is not literall: but that, the heart by reflecting on it ſelfe, is able to make ſuch an impreſſion on it, as the Prophet may well call a rent in the heart. As firſt, even by good morall reſpects, wherewith the very heathen ſet themſelves in paſſion againſt vice. That it is a brutiſh thing; So againſt the nobleneſſe of reaſon: that a ſhamefull; So, againſt publike honeſtie: that, ignominious; So, againſt our credite and good name: That pernicious, as ſhutting us out of heaven (whither we would come) the greateſt loſſe, and pœna damni; and preſſing us downe to hell (which we faineſt would flie) the greateſt torment, and pœna ſenſus: (For, even the heathen beleeved the joyes and paines of another world:) And yet we for all this, ſo evill adviſed as to commit it.

But, theſe are but κατ' ἄνθρωπον, drawen from man: the Chriſtian man's is to be εἰς θεόν; his eye to GOD. Who, with great indignation, cannot but abhorre himſelfe, for the manifold indignities offered to GOD thereby. To the Law of His Iuſtice, to the aw of His Majeſtie, the reverend regard of His Preſence, the dread of His Power, the Long-ſuffering of his Love: That (being a creature of ſo vile and brittle conſiſtence) he hath not ſticked, for ſome lying vanitie, ſome trifling pleaſure or pelting profit, to offend ſo many wayes at once; all, odious in themſelves and able to make a rent in any heart, that ſhall weigh them aright.

Sure, if wee take the impreſſion right, So GOD may worke with us, as theſe may worke in us, a juſt indignation: which, if once it be in fervor, what the hand can come to,

to, it will ſmite; and would the heart alſo, if it could reach it. And, if it be in kind, it will award the body to faſt, and the mind to ſpend ſome time, in theſe meditations. And, this is the Act of renting (as the Prophet;) of revenge (as the Apoſtle:) And, theſe two, betweene them both, in Ioël and in Paul, make up the full power and conſummatum eſt of our Converſion and Contrition both.

It remaines, that we ſet not the Church to teach us that, which we never meane to learne: but, that we intend and endevour to doe, as we have beene taught.

III. The Time, Now therefore.

And, to doe it now. For (as in a circle) I returne to the firſt word [Now] which giveth us our time, when we ſhould enter our firſt degree: Now therefore. And, when all is done, we ſhall have ſomewhat to doe, to bring this to a Nunc, to a time preſent. But beſides that, now at this time, it is the time that all things turne; Now, is the onely ſure part of our time. That which is paſt, is come and gone. That which is to come, may peradventure never come. Till to morrow, till this Evening, till an houre hence, we have no aſſurance. Now therefore. Or, if not now, as neere now, with as little diſtance from it, as may be; If not this day, this time now enſuing.

For, though no time be amiſſe, to turne in; yet ſeeing many times goe over our heads, and ſtill we cannot find a time to do it in, the Church (as I ſaid) willing to reduce the diffuſedneſſe of our repentance at large, to the certainty of ſome one ſet time, hath placed this [now] upon the time now begun, and commends it to us for the time of our turning to GOD.

And we, by a kinde of forme which we performe, by the altering of our diet to a leſſe deſirefull; by oftener reſort hither to Sermons, than at other times (every weeke twice;) theſe make, as if we did agree; ſeeme in a manner to promiſe, as if we would performe ſomewhat now, that we have not all the yeare before.

Sure, the Chriſtian Church ever looked otherwiſe, had another manner face: going in the ſtreet, you ſhould have ſeen by mens countenances, what time of the yeare it was: more grave, more compoſed, than at other times.

Performe it then: And when our turne is done, GOD ſhall begin His, Et pœnitentiam ſuam gratificabitur noſtræ, Our Repentance ſhall beget His. If we turne from the evill we have done, He will turne from us the evill that ſhould have been done to us. Where there was Commination read, with many curſes; He ſhall turne them away, and in ſtead of them, ſhall leave a bleſſing behind Him. We ſhall turne His very ſtile, which at firſt was, ad Me, and in the end is, ad Dominum Deum veſtrum: and ſo make a change in Him.

In nullo detrimentum patiemini (ſaith the Apoſtle) we ſhall be no loſers by it. A leſſe ſorrow ſhall turne away a greater, by a great deale. Weigh the endleſſe ſorrow wee ſhall eſcape by it; it admits no compariſon. The Contriſtation is but ὡρίον πρὸς ὡρίον (ſaith he) for an houre; the Conſolation is, for ever and ever. 2 Cor. 7. 9. 2 Cor. 7. 8.

To this lugentes there belongeth a Beati; Bleſſed they that thus mourne. To this hunger and thirſt, a ſaturabimini. It is ſo ſet by the Church (the time of it) that our Lent ſhall end with an Eaſter, the higheſt and moſt ſolemne Feaſt in the yeare; the memorie of CHRIST's riſing, and the pledge of our bleſſed and joyfull Reſurrection. Mat. 5. 4, 6.

To which, &c.

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE KING JAMES, AT WHITEHALL, On the XIIII. of February, A.D. MDCXXI. being ASH-WEDNESDAY.

MATTH. Chap. VI. Ver. XVI.

Cum autem jejunatis, nolite fieri ſicut hypocritæ triſtes; exterminant enim facies ſuas, ut appareant hominibus jejunantes: Amen dico vbis, oquia receperunt mercedem ſuam.

Moreover, when you faſt, * looke not ſowre as the hypocrites; for they diſfigure their faces, that they might ſeeme unto men to faſt: Verily I ſay unto you, that they have their reward.

* Or be not like ſowre hypocrites.

THE Leſſons, which this day have beene, and yearely, as upon this day, are read in our eares, doe all ſpeake to us of Faſting. The Leſſon of the Old Teſtament: Turne to me with faſting. The Leſſon of the New, as you have heard: When you faſt, &c. All, either (as the Epiſtle) telling us, what wee ſhould doe (Faſt:) Or (as the Goſpell) taking it for granted, that we will faſt, and teaching us, how to faſt, ſo as we may receive a reward for it at GOD'S hands.

Ioel 2 12.

Theſe being the Leſſons, this the tenor of them; by them there is intimation given us, that the matter of theſe Leſſons, that a Faſt is at hand: that, this When is now. How in our practice it will fall out I know not; but certainely, in the Churches meaning, now. Who would not (we may be ſure) looke out an Epiſtle for us beginning with Turne to me, Cum jejunio, with faſting; and a Goſpell beginning with Cum jejunatis, When ye faſt, &c. but when She preſumeth, we meane to faſt, to diſpoſe our ſelves ſelves that way. It were all out of ſeaſon to ſeeke and ſelect Scriptures, what to avoyd, how to behave our ſelves in our faſting, if we meane no ſuch matter; if it ſhall be with us, as yeſterday and the day before it was, and no otherwiſe.

This being the Churches intent; this, her Time; and this her Text; What She commends to us, we commend to you, that you would take notice of it, and prepare your ſelves, for it accordingly: that the Epiſtle be not ſent, and the Goſpell brought you, and both, in vaine.

The Church thus reaching it forth, I tooke this Text: And I tooke it the rather (if it might bee) to ſtoppe the mouthes of them that maligne it; at leaſt to remove from it the ſlander of an untrue imputation. They preach it, they print it, and (no remedie) ſo they will have it, that the Locuſts (Apoc. 9.) muſt needs meane us here. Why? The Locuſt is all bellie, and we all for the bellie; hoſtes jejuniorum, the profeſt enemies of faſting and of all abſtinence. That wee (the Preachers) entertaine you with nothing but with diſcourſe about the myſterie of godlineſſe: but never with exhortation to the exerciſe of it. That, you (the Hearers) fall ſadde, and (as the hypocrites here in the Text) looke ſowre, not at the act, but at the very name and mention of faſting, at the reading of a Text that tends but that way, as it might be, of this, now.

Sure, for Faſting, how we practiſe it, every one is to anſwer for himſelfe: But, that we preach it, I take, this day, you all to witneſſe. Ioël ſhall beare record with his Cum jejunio; And now CHRIST, with his Cum jejunatis, that we call for it. If it come not, it is not our fault, it is not for want of calling for. We ſpeake to a thing that hath no eares; but, we ſpeake though: Liberamus animas noſtras, we deliver our owne ſoules, and we deliver our Church from that falſe ſlander of theirs. Ezek. 3. 19.

The Summe.

To follow then, whether the Scripture leads us, we are to underſtand, that as the Morall Law of GOD (in the Chapter before;) and as Almes and Prayers (in this Chapter) going through the Phariſe's hands, had gathered much droſſe; So had the exerciſe of faſting, likewiſe. It is the manner of the world, and ſo it is of the Prince of the world, to ſophiſticate ever the beſt things with hypocriſie, with ſuperſtition, with a thouſand devices more. Our SAVIOVR then, as He had done to the other of the Law, to Almes and Prayer; So, here now He comes to faſting: and comes with his fan in his hand, to doe to it, as He had done to them before: to ſever the precious from the vile; the corne in his floore, from the chaffe. Cum jejunatis, is his floore; nolite, his fanne; hypocriſie, the chaffe to be blowen away. Cha. 3. ver. 12.

His purpoſe is, He would have all ſtand and continue in force; as the Law it ſelfe, ſo the lawfull and laudable practice of almes, prayer, and faſting, all three. And it is, as if He ſhould ſay: That you give almes, pray and faſt, I like it well: doe ſo ſtill. Onely, take this Caveat from me, When ye faſt, beware of the ſowre leven of hypocriſie in your lookes, and of the love of videamini ab hominibus, to be ſeene of men, in your hearts, and all is well: Faſt on and ſpare not. To GOD it is, you faſt; and GOD your heavenly Father ſhall ſee it in ſecret, and ſhall reward you for it openly. Luk. 12. 1. Verſe 5.

The Diviſion two.

The parts ariſe of their owne accord; and, at the firſt view, give forth themſelves, 1 For faſting, one: 2 Againſt hypocriſie, the other. As it were a blaſt of the trumpet of Sion, to the former: A retreit, from the later. Cum jejunatis is ſet downe, to be kept: Nolite eſſe ſicut is fanned away, to be left; the leven of the Phariſes (which is hypocriſie) is caſt out.

In the former, we are to doe two things, to ſettle the duty in both words, 1. In jejunatis (firſt) faſting it ſelfe: 2. After, in Cum, the time when. I.

In the latter, two things more: 1. The act of ſeparation and caſting out the old leven, firſt. 2. And then the danger, if we doe it not. The Separation: that we be not like hypocrites, or, not like ſowre hypocrites. Not like them in two things. 1 Not in making it out labour to compoſe our outſide or countenance. 2 Not, in making it our end, Vt videamini, To be ſeene of men. II. 1

But,

But, what if we doe? Then followeth the puniſhment: You have received your reward. A gentle puniſhment (one would thinke) to receive a reward: but a Puniſhment, and a grievous one, when we ſhall weigh, how ſilly a thing it is, they receive, Men's breath: and how great a one they loſe by it, GOD's reward.

Thus ſtand the parts. Of which, the former (I feare) will take up this time, Cum jejunatis onely, and no more.

I. Jejunatis, The ducty of faſting.

CVm jejunatis. Two queſtions there be: 1 One, about jejunatis; whether we will faſt at all: 2 The other, about Cum, When we will doe it. Beſt get us a faſt firſt; and get us a time, after. If the thing, if faſting it ſelfe be looſe, the time willbe to ſeek: GOD knowes, when. The firſt thing then we are to doe, is to poſſeſſe mens mindes with a true conceit touching it. Men ſeeme but faintly perſwaded of it, as it were no needfull part of a Chriſtian mans dutie. When yee faſt: yea when wee faſt: What make you of this? This leaves us to our ſelves: When, is no precept, to enjoyne it. Take it right: Here is Cum jejunio, in the Epiſtle: Cum jejunatis, in the Goſpell. The Precept is in Ioël, Turne to Me with faſting: And (within a verſe after) Sanctifie a Mea faſt: That, is a Precept (I am ſure.) Here, it ſtands thus: What Ioël impoſeth, CHRIST ſuppoſeth; implies the thing out of the Prophet, and ſupplyeth the manner how, from himſelfe.

1 By the Lawe. Eſa. 8. 20.

But, if wee ſtand upon a Precept, wee may goe higher than Ioël: Even ad Legem (ſaith Eſay) Goe to the Law it ſelfe, and there is one. Nay, there are more than one. One, for a ſtanding faſt every yeare, enjoyned with a ſevere paine: he that faſted it not was to be cut off from the people of GOD (Numb. 29.) One, for a voluntarie faſt (Num. 30.) For, whatſoever is votive, is voluntarie of it ſelfe, but who ſo tooke it on him by vow, was bound to performe it. One for (both) Integrale, an entire faſt from all, upon the Kipparim day (a Levitic. 16.) And another for Portionale, Iejunium, the Nazarites faſt, from ſome and not from other (b Numb. 6.) c The Law wilbe for it: The Law it ſelfe was given at a faſt to Moſes; a faſt of forty dayes.

1 By the Prophets.

The Prophets are for it too: Vnder them, and by their direction, to the ſtanding faſts in the Law, you have five more added. One, in d Eſter: foure in e Zacharie: all enjoyned.

e Zac. 7. 5. 8 19, &c.

It went then, as now it does; The common ſort (by their good wills) would neither have holy day nor faſting day. In Amos they complaine of the Sabboth, Quando tranſibit? When will it bee over? They thought it as long as any two dayes, that they might be at vendamus merces, opening their ſhops and ſelling their wares. In Zacharie, they ſtrugge at their faſts, What and muſt we faſt ſtill? Yet more faſting? have wee not faſted enough, and nave done it thus and thus long? A ſigne, they would have been ridde of their faſting. Willingly, had the ſhambles open, as well as the ſhops. But it would not be, they could not obtaine it: The Prophet held them to it, and would not releaſe them.

Amo. 8. 11.

3 By CHRIST himſelfe.

But, this is Old Teſtament: When the New came, what then? I had rather you heard Saint Auguſtine than my ſelfe: Ego (ſaith he) animo revolvens, &c. I going over in my mind, the writings of the Evangeliſts and Apoſtles in the New Teſtament [video jejunium eſſe præceptum,] ſee faſting is commanded, there is a precept for faſting. So, faſting is in precept there, if we will truſt Saint Auguſtine's eyes. And we may: He that (in this place) ſaith [Cum jejunatis] when ye faſt: ſaith, in another, Tum jejunabunt, Then they ſhall faſt: and that amounts to a Precept (I trow.)

Mark. 2. 20.

Here you ſee Cum jejunatis a part of the Goſpell, a head in CHRIST's firſt and moſt famous ſermon, His ſermon in the mount.

So that, if there ſhould be a meeting about it (ſuch as happened in the holy mount at the tranſfiguration of CHRIST) of Moſes for the Law, Elias for the Prophets, CHRIST for the Goſpell, famous all three for their faſts, and for one kind of faſt, all (the faſt wee now begin) all would be for it: at no time to be left, but, in all three estates to be retained; to have the force of a precept in all.

But lawes and their precepts doe often sleepe and grow into disuse. How is jejunatis for practice? Hath it beene used, and when hath it? The fast of [a] Ai, under Iosua; [b] At Gibea, under the Iudges; At [c] Mizpa, under Samuel; [d] At Hebron, under David; [e] Of Ieremie, before the Captivity; [f] Of Daniel, under it; Of [g] Zachary, after it: [h] At Ierusalem, of the Iewes, at the preaching of Ioel; [i] At Ninive, of the Gentiles, at the preaching of Ionas: All of these shew when, and that it was no stranger with GODS people, so long as the Law and Prophets were in force.

And what was it, when the Gospell came in? At [k] Antioch (where the Disciples were first called Christians) we finde them at their fast: the Prophets of the New Testament there, as well as the Prophets of the Old. Our SAVIOVR said to them, [l] When Hee was gone they should fast. So, they did. Saint Paul for one; [m] he did it oft (2 Cor. 11.) And for the rest, they approved themselves for CHRISTS Ministers (inter alia, by this proofe for one) [n] by their fasting (2 Cor. 6.) And, what themselves did, they advised others to doe: even to [o] σχολαζειν, to make them a vacant time to fast in. So that, where the Church for this day (otherwise than her custome is, on other dayes) hath sorted us an Epistle out of the Old Testament, and a Gospell out of the New (both use to be out of the New) Shee did it for this end, to shew, that fasting hath the wings of both Cherubins to cover it: both Testaments, Old and New; Ioel, for the one; CHRIST, for the other. So at all hands to commend it to us.

Sure, in the prime of Christianitie, it cannot be denied, it was in high esteeme (fasting) in frequent practice, of admirable performance. Which of the Fathers have not Homilies yet extant in the praise of it? What Story of their lives, but reports strange things of them, in this kinde? That, either wee must cancell all Antiquitie, or we must acknowledge the constant use and observation of it in the Church of CHRIST. That CHRIST said not here [Cum jejunatis] for nothing. They that were under Grace, went farre beyond them under the Law, in their Cum, and in their jejunatis, both.

Precept then, or Practice it wanted not. Neither did they want a ground. It was then holden (and so may yet, for ought that I know) that, when we fast, we exercise the act of more vertues than one. First, an act of that branch of the vertue of Temperance that consists (not in the moderate using, but) in abstaining wholly. Abstinence is a vertue. Sure I am, the primordiale peccatum, the primordiall sinne was * not abstaining. Secondly, an act or fruit of repentance: there is pœna in pœnitentia, in the very body of the word; something penall in penitence: And of that penall part is fasting: And so an act of Iustice corrective, reduced to Saint Pauls * vindicta, or his * Castigo corpus meum. Thirdly, An act of humiliation, to humble the soule, which is both the first and the most usuall terme for fasting, in the Law and Prophets. For sure, keepe the bodie up, you shall but evill, you shall have much adoe to bring or keepe the soule downe, to humble it. Fourthly, They that are CHRISTS (saith the Apostle) have and doe crucifie the flesh with the lusts of it. Fasting, is one of the nailes of the Crosse, to which the flesh is fastened, that it rise not, lust not against the spirit: At least, fasting, wee fulfill not the lusts of the flesh. Fifthly, Nay, they goe further, and out of Ioel's Sanctificate jejunium, and out of Luke 2. 37. where the good old Widow is said to have served GOD (and the word is λατρευω) by fasting and prayer (not by prayer only, but by fasting and prayer) they have not doubted, but that there is Sanctitie in it, nor to entitle it an act of the service of GOD: that wee serve GOD by it. Sixthly, And serve Him with the chiefe service of all; even of Sacrifice. For sure, they are all of one assay (these three) Almes, Prayer, and Fasting. If the other two, if Almes bee a Sacrifice ([a] with such Sacrifices GOD is pleased;) If Prayer be one (one; and therefore called [b] the calves of our lips;) no reason, to deny Fasting to be one too. If [c] a troubled spirit be a Sacrifice to GOD, why not a troubled body likewise? (And it troubles us to fast, that is too plaine:)

d Rom.12.1. Since we are to d offer our bodies as well as our ſoules, both a Sacrifice to GOD: As our ſoule by devotion, So our body by mortification. And theſe three, to offer to GOD our 1 ſoule by prayer, 2 our body by abſtinence, 3 our goods by almes-deeds, hath beene ever counted tergemina hoſtia, the triple or threefold Chriſtian Holocauſt or whole burnt offering. Seventhly, and laſt, the exerciſe of it, by enuring our ſelves to this part of true Chriſtian Diſcipline, ſerves to enable us to have ventrem moratum, the maſtery of our belly againſt needbe: The Fathers call it ἄσκησις and thoſe that uſed it ἀσκήτας Saint Paul gave it the word firſt (Act.24.16.) and ſaith, he tooke it himſelfe, (1 Cor.9.27.)

Vſe is much; for, if before we need, we be not uſed in ſome ſort, at times, to abridge our ſelves, but ſtill fill and farce our bodies, weekes, moneths, yeares together; habituate our ſelves in it; what need ſoever there ſhould be, what occaſion though never ſo preſſing (ſuppoſe GOD ſhould call us to faſt, as Eſay 22.12. Say, the dayes ſhould Chap.9.14. come, of the loſſe of the Bridegroome) we ſhould not be able for our lives, to breake our ſelves of that, which all our lives long we have beene accuſtomed unto. But, as it is ſaid of DIONYSIVS lying at a ſiege and forced to keepe order, hee fell ſicke becauſe he kept order and ſurfetted not ſtill (that, having beene the corrupt cuſtome of his former life) So ſhould we. Or, for lacke of it, grow as impatient as Eſau, rather than loſe
Gen.25.30. our broth, ſell our birth-right. Or, as they in Numb. 11.5. not part with our fleſh-pots to die for it, but ſit by them, and die by them, and ſo with them alſo be buried in the graves of luſt.

The want of which enuring, you ſee what it hath brought us to. We are ſo evill able to doe it, as we are ſcarce able to heare of it. Our SAVIOVR, when Hee ſpeakes of Chap.9.17. faſting, points at this: Having beene ſo long at our old wine, we cannot away, not reliſh new. We ſee the experience, in our preaching it. Our bottles are ſo uſed to the old, that they leake with the new; as faſt as we powre it in, it runnes out againe. We muſt provide us new veſſels: Elſe, all we ſpeake of this theme, will be ſpoken into the aire. But, I forget my ſelfe.

1 To come to the Text: Cum jejunatis, When ye faſt: To worke out of it a little. I ſay firſt, this very when ſhewes CHRIST'S liking of it; that there is a time allowed. Elſe, Luke 21.34. would He allow it no Cum, no When, no time at all. For, videte ne quando, not a moment for ryot, or for any thing, GOD hath not required. And, if for no idle word, for no idle act (we may be ſure) is there any Cum allowed.

2 Againe, When ye faſt: This when, is a preſuppoſing at leaſt: and qui ſupponit, ponit. For, can any man phanſie, that CHRIST would preſuppoſe ought that were not required
Eſay 1.12. of us by GOD? to be asked by the Prophet (or rather by GOD Himſelfe) Quis iſta quæſivit de manibus veſtris? Who ever required of you to doe any ſuch thing?

3 Nay, His manner of the delivery, thus breaking into it with a Cum autem, But when you faſt (as, faſt you will, I make no doubt;) here, But when, is plaine poſitive: Nay, it is of the nature of a Poſtulatum; takes it as granted, layes it for a ground. This (ſay I) is a precept, and more than a precept; more binding. Ever more forcible is that which is preſumed, than that which is enjoyned. One, we are confident, will be yeelded to ſtraight; needs no injunction. The other, we muſt uſe our authoritie, and well if we ſo get it.

4 The very things he conſorts it with (to wit) Almes and Prayer (for, them and this He marſhals in one and the ſame ranke, cares for them all alike, rewards them all alike:) and they (I truſt) are in precept: Yet, they are no otherwiſe but preſuppoſed, even as this is, When yee give Almes, When yee Pray.

5 Then, the paines He takes with it, to fanne it, to purge the old leven from it, to rectifie and reduce it to the right manner and end: He would never have taken theſe paines, but that He held it worth His paines; but that Hee would have us uſe it, and uſe it not ſeldome. For, things ſeldome to happen the Law takes no order for.

6 The Parties to whom He ſpeakes this; they be his Diſciples. Whereby it will fall out to be, not a dutie onely, but a Chriſtian dutie; becauſe they were Chriſtians, the firſt Chriſtians of all, to whom this Cum jejunatis here is ſpoken. It is for them too; they are not exempted from it.

Nay,

Nay, He likes it ſo well, as he goes about to prepare even hypocrites, and to frame them fit for it. A ſigne, it was not their double faſt, but their double face (that is) their diſſembling firſt, and then their diſdaine of other, He found fault with. 7

And (to conclude) the double promiſe He annexeth: Firſt, to anſwer their complaint (*Eſa.*58.3.) Why doe we faſt and Thou ſeeſt it not, puniſh our ſelves and Thou regardeſt it not? that they ſhall never need to feare, their faſting ſhall be begged for concealed; though it were never ſo ſecret done, though not a man on earth ſee them, He from heaven will caſt His eye on them and regard them. 8

And ſecond, as He ſhall not want an eye to ſee, ſo neither ſhall He a hand to reward them for it: They ſhall not faſt for nothing. His heavenly Father that ſees them in ſecret, ſhall reward them openly: the upſhot of all. 9

All theſe, 1 The manner, He delivers it in, 2 The Parties, He delivers it to, 3 The things, He matches it with, 4 The honour, He doth it, 5 The Care, He ſhewes of it, 6 That He frames his Diſciples, 7 That He frames even hypocrites for it, 8, 9 The double promiſe, He aſſureth upon it: All theſe are as ſo many paſſings thorow the furnace. Would He doe all this and not hold it a dutie required by GOD, and acceptable to Him? Have we a Precept, a Practice, a Promiſe; a flat precept, conſtant Practice, and an ample Promiſe, and doubt we yet, whether we ſhould doe it or no? No ſure. As long as theſe words ſhall ſtand in Saint Matthew, Iejunatis muſt ſtand, and have a Cum, a time when allowed for it. And now to that Cum let us come.

II. Cum, The time for faſting.

Allowing jejunatis, the thing, we cannot but allow it a time, when. For, * there is a time when, for every thing under the Sunne. Only, when that when ſhall be, we ſhall not ſo eaſily agree. We would faine have our faſt, looſe; be left to our ſelves for the time: This when to be, when our ſelves pleaſe. And, when will it be? Indeed, the practice of the world would make one thinke, this when to be without a then; a time (as they ſay) in nubibus. A caſe but put; When (that is) when we liſt, and if we liſt, and not elſe. As if CHRIST had ſaid; If ever you doe, if at any time you feele your ſelfe diſpoſed, then to obſerve this caution. Otherwiſe, left to our owne liberty, when that ſhall be, and whether it ſhall be, or no. * Eccleſ.3.1.

If this ſhould be ſo, I have hit upon a very happy Text. For, if this be all, It is no ſooner ſaid than done; done every where all this Land over. Nay; wee may ſay with the Young-man in the Goſpell, All this have we done from our youth up. For, when we faſt, we looke not ſowre, we diſfigure not our faces, we never ſeeke to be ſeene of men. I ſay, when we faſt: for, the truth is, we faſt not at all: But, when we faſt, all this is kept. That, if this ſhould be the meaning, we have done, before we begin. Luke 18.21.

To deſtroy a Text, is not ſo evill, as to make a Text deſtroy it ſelfe; which, by this ſenſe, will come to paſſe. But, if this ſenſe be ſenſeleſſe, this gloſſe (as a viper) eats out the bowels of the Text. We muſt then reſolve, this is no caſe put; it is a ground laid. No Hypotheticall faſt, If you ſhall; but Categoricall, When you doe. For, except it be, all that followes is to no purpoſe. To what purpoſe is it, to direct what not to doe, what to doe in our faſt, if we never meane to faſt? for CHRIST to ſet us downe inſtructions how to carry our ſelves, in that, wee never meane to goe about? Plaine dealing were, to tell Him, we will uſe His counſell in ſome other matter: as for faſting, wee finde our ſelves no wayes diſpoſed to it. But, by the grace of GOD, we are not ſo farre gone yet. We ſee, His will is, wee ſhould doe it; and take a time to doe it wee will, and when is that? When yee faſt; when faſt ye? A time (we ſaid) there is, if for all things under the Sunne, then for that.

Let us ſpeake but after the manner of men, goe to it but naturâ tenus (as ſaith Tertullian) and Nature it ſelfe will teach us when. Marke but when Nature will yeeld to it; when and in what caſe, the naturall man will faſt, without eye to GOD, or CHRIST, or Religion at all. So ſhall we be within the Apoſtle's, Doth not Nature it ſelfe teach you? 1 Cor.11.14.

I Natures time. 1 When in feare.

The time of feare, is a time of faſting with the naturall man, Nec eſt cibi tempus in pe- riculo, for in time of danger men have no minde of meat. They in the ſhip with Saint Paul, when they looked every houre to be caſt away (the tempeſt was ſuch) there was Act.27.21.33. (ſaith Saint Luke) πολλὴ ἀσιτία, no ſpending of victuals, all that while. Will we naturally faſt for feare of the wracke of our ſhip, and not be afraid as much of the wracke of our ſoules by ſinne, and faſt for that? Doth not Nature teach us this? There is one when.

2 When in griefe.

When the naturall man is in any inward griefe of heart, it will take away his ſtomack, he will faſt; Semper mœroris ſequela jejunium, ut lætitiæ acceſſio ſagina (ſaith Tertullian) faſting followeth mourning, as feaſting doth mirth. The [a] time of mourning is one of Salomons times: Why that is our time of faſting. [b] Faſting and mourning, Ioel joynes them both. The afflicted ſoule, in his prayer (*Pſal.*102.4.) My heart was ſmitten with heavineſſe, how then? So that I forgat to eat my bread. Our SAVIOVR CHRIST ſhewes it beſt: He was asked, Why faſt not your Diſciples? He anſwers not, How can they faſt? (as He ſhould, for that was their queſtion:) but, how * can they mourne, while the Bridegroome is with them? As much to ſay as, if they could mourne, they would not faile but faſt certainly. So (we ſee) did Anna, [c] Flebat, & non capiebat cibos. So (we ſee) did [d] David, for the death of Ionathan: and againe when his childe lay a dying; mourned and faſted for both. Vpon ſorrow for the death of a friend, or a childe, can we faſt then, dictante naturâ; and can we not doe as much for our ſinnes, the death of our ſoules? Doth not Nature teach us that? Nor, for the death of CHRIST neither, which our ſinnes were the cauſe of? There is another, a ſecond when.

3 When in Anger.

Thirdly, Anger him throughly, the naturall will to his faſt: * Ahab, for curſt heart, that he could not have his will, Naboth would not let him have his Vineyard: to bed hee goes, and no meat would downe with him. Could he, out of his pure naturals, for curſt heart, leave his meat and faſt, and cannot we doe the like for juſt indignation at our ſelves; for provoking GODS anger, with the curſed thoughts of our heart, and words of our mouth, and deeds of our whole body? cannot we be got to it? Will not Nature teach us this? A third when.

* 1 King.21.4.

4 When in a longing Deſire.

Fourthly, The naturall man, when he is in the fervour of his deſire (if it be an earneſt deſire) he will purſue that he deſires ſo hard, as he will forget his meat quite. Not a man ſo hardy as to eat any thing till Sunne ſet, ſaith Saul, when hee had his enemies in chaſe: Such was his deſire of victory.

1 Sam.14.24.

What ſpeake we of victory? we ſee, Eſau ſo eager in following his ſport, that he came home at night ſo faint, and he paid deare for his Supper; yet felt it not all day, while hee was hot on his game.

Did we hunger and thirſt for the recovery of GODS favour (as did Saul for his victory, or Eſau for his ſport) we would not thinke it much to faſt, as they did. Will not Nature teach us this neither? A fourth when. Put the naturall man into any of theſe paſſions kindly, you ſhall need proclaime no faſt for him, he will doe it of himſelfe.

Now, marke theſe foure well: 1 feare, 2 ſorrow, 3 anger, and 4 deſire, and looke into 2 *Cor.*7.11. if they be not there made (as it were) the foure elements of repentance, the conſtitutive cauſes of it. 1 Feare, the middle point, the center of it. 2 Sorrow, that workes it. And if ſory for ſin, then of neceſſitie. 3 Angry with the ſinner (that is our ſelves) for committing it. It is there called indignation, and no ſleight one, but proceeding ad vindictam, to be wreaked on our ſelves for it. 4 And Deſire is there too, and Zeale joyned with it to give it an edge. Theſe foure, the proper paſſions all of repentance, and theſe foure carry every one (as we ſay) his faſt on his backe. Much more, where they all meet, as, in true earneſt repentance, they all ſhould.

It is ſure, GOD planted theſe paſſions in our nature, to be beſtowed chiefly upon their chiefe objects. And their chiefe objects are: 1 Of feare, that which is moſt fearfull, the wrath of GOD. 2 Of Anger, that which moſt certainly procureth it (that is) our ſinne. 3 Of Deſire, that, than which nothing is more to be deſired, GODS favour. 4 Of Sorrow, that we have moſt cauſe to be ſory for, the loſſe of it. There then to ſhew them, there to beſtow them: which if we did in kinde, we need never take thought for a Cum to our jejunatis.

For griefe of hart, for worldly loſſe, for bodily feare of drowning, for bitter anger we can doe it: why not, for the griefe of our grievous offences? for feare of being drowned in perdition dition eternall? Why not, for indignation of our many indignities offered GOD? Alas, it but ſhewes our affections of ſorrow, anger, feare, deſire, are quicke, have life, are very affections (indeed) in ſecular matters: but, dead and dull, and indeed, no affections at all, but plaine counterfeits, in things pertaining to GOD, or that concerne the eſtate and hazard of our ſoules.

To take downe a peccant humour (as we call it) in our body, whereby we feare impaire of our health, we can and doe enter into a ſtrict and tedious diet, and hold out well: We can forbeare this and that, as we are bidden (though we love it well) if we be but told, it will doe us hurt. If for the health of our body, we will doe that, which, for our ſoules health, we will not, I cannot tell what to ſay to us.

What ſpeake I of health? To win but a prize, at a running, or a wreſtling, Abſtinet ſe ab omnibus (ſaith the Apoſtle, 1 Cor.9.) they will abſtaine from all things, and undergoe a ſtrict regiment for a long time before: and all is but for a poore Silver game. What ſhall I ſay then, if we cannot be got to endure ſo much, to obtaine the heavenly prize, which is in part done (as there hee ſaith) by caſtigo corpus meum? This for the naturall mans Cum, when he will faſt. 1 Cor.9.25. Ibid. verſ.27.

Will yee now ſee the Scriptures When, when that ſets us out our time? They be in a manner the very ſame: Scripture and Nature varie not, dictate to us the ſame time, both. The Scriptures When.

Our firſt When: What time any great danger hangs and hovers over our heads; that, is GODS time (ſaith Eſay 22.12.) GOD Himſelfe doth then call us to faſting. No time then, to kill oxen, or dreſſe ſheepe, eat fleſh and drinke wine: A great paine is there ſet upon it. GOD muſt needs take it ill, if when He bids us faſt, we fall to feaſt. And this when, is of greateſt example: None ſo frequent in all the Bible, as faſts of this nature. Never came there danger toward them, [a] of plague, but David: [b] of famine, but Ioel: [c] of warre, but Ioſaphat: [d] of any deſtruction threatened, but not onely good Queene Heſter, but wicked [e] Ahab; nay, even the heathen King of [f] Ninive, to their faſts ſtraight; flying to it, as to a forcible meanes (and ſo they ever found it) to turne away GODS wrath, and ſo the danger, the matter of their feare. This is a time When: and we (then) to doe it. When in danger.

Now, if for the effect we faſt; for the cauſe, much more. Of theſe, of all other our miſeries, the cauſe is within our ſelves. Our ſinne, whereby GODS anger is kindled, and theſe ever follow upon it. When therefore we would proceed againſt our ſelves for ſinne, [a] humble our ſelves (the phraſe of the Law) [b] chaſten our ſelves (of the Pſalme) [c] puniſh our ſelves (of the Prophets) [d] take revenge of our ſelves (the Apoſtles phraſe) tum jejunabunt in die illo: this, is a way; then, is a time to doe it. Faſting is a puniſhment to the fleſh; * Modicum panis & pauxillum aquæ was a part of Michea's puniſhment. By it, as to amerce our ſelves (as it were) for abuſing our liberty before, and making it an occaſion to the fleſh, and thereby to prevent His judgement by judging our ſelves: Do de me pœnas, ut ille parcat (it is Auguſtine.) This ſo proceeding of ours to take puniſhment on our ſelves, it is illex miſericordiæ (ſaith Tertullian) it allures, inclines GOD to mercie; when He ſees us angry with our ſelves in good earneſt, and doe ſomewhat, His anger ceaſes: Nam, qui culpâ offenditur, pœnâ placatur, whom the fault offends, the puniſhment appeaſes; whether His puniſhment, or ours. But, He had rather, ours than His: that we ſhould doe it, than He. 2 When in ſinne. 1. To puniſh it.

And this to extend to the body alſo, and to the chaſtening of it. For, doth the ſoule only ſinne? Doth not the body alſo? And ſhall the ſoule ſuffer ſorrow for ſinne, and ſhall the body ſuffer nothing, and yet was in the ſame tranſgreſſion? If it ſhall, then at leaſt pœna damni (for, pœna ſenſus I am ſure, we would be more loth to come to.) And what pœna damni but abſtinere à licitis quia illicita concupivit, To deny our ſelves, that we might, for doing that, we might not? There is another Cum.

Secondly, As it is a chaſtiſement for ſinne, when it is done; So hath it alwayes beene held to have in it a medicinable force, a ſpeciall good remedie to prevent ſinne, when it is not yet fallen on us, or wee into it; but, grudges us onely (as it were) and whereinto 3 2. To prevent it.

we are like to fall, for that we are now leading, even entring into tentation. This alſo, is a time When. And this time we ground upon CHRIST's time of faſting: His faſting went immediately before His tentation.

Matth.4.1,2.

No wayes needfull for Himſelfe was CHRIST's faſt. None is ſo ſimple as to thinke, the Tempter would have prevailed againſt Him, though Hee had taken His meales; eat, and drunke the fortie dayes before. It was not for Himſelfe, it was for us His faſt: Exemplarily to teach us, it will be a great vantage, if (prepared by this exercise) wee ſhall encounter the evill Spirit. Specially, if it be ſome kinde of them, if an uncleane ſpirit: For, that kinde is not caſt out (no nor kept out) but, either by jejunatis, or not at all. CHRIST's faſting then, before His tentation, is to ſhew us, it is good faſting againſt tentation. At leaſt, this way we ſhall weaken his forces, by keeping downe our fleſhly luſts, which (ſaith Saint PETER) fight againſt the ſoule, and lying in our owne boſome, oft betray us to the Fiend. For, when all is ſaid that can be, Bernard's ſaying will be found true; that Nutriuntur cum carne & vitia carnis. And, if Religion did not, Experience teacheth us, that. Ply the body apace, let it be kept high, how mellow a ſoile it proves for the ſinnes of the fleſh! And that, if by abſtinence we crop not the buds of Senſualitie, they will ripen and ſeed to the ruine of our ſoules. So, there is uſe both wayes of it. 1 Vſe of caſtigo corpus, for the time paſt: Vſe 2 of in ſervitutem redigo, for the time to come. Iejuna, quia peccaſti; Iejuna, ut ne pecces, both (ſaith Chryſoſtome.) One, as a puniſhment, with reference to ſinne alreadie committed: The other, as a preſervative for noli amplius peccare, that we commit it not againe. Two cauſes more, and two times, When.

4 When in want of ſome good.

But, hath faſting his uſe in evill things only, and repelling them? hath it not alſo in good things, and procuring them? Yes ſure. I demand, doth there never happen us, that we have ſome cauſe more than ordinary, the procuring of GODS favour whereto, and the ſucceſſe whereof, with more than ordinary prayer wee would commend to GOD? Why there then, is another Cum. As, when Heſter would move the King, for the ſafety of her people: or Nehemias, for the new building of the wall of Hieruſalem; Both found good of this, that when there is uſe of earneſt and hearty prayer, it will be the more earneſt and hearty, if cum jejunatis doe alſo goe with it. We have other-while extraordinary occaſions in our worldly affaires, and then, wee make no account of a meales loſſe: have we none ſuch in ſpiritualibus to GOD-ward? None but vulgar, there? Never any, but ſuch as we can entertaine with our common dull devotion? Need none other, but as if the buſineſſe, betweene GOD and our ſoule, were the ſillieſt and pooreſt buſineſſe we had to goe about?

Heſter 4.16.

5 When a ſpirituall exerciſe.

But, ſay we have none; ſhall we at no time ſequeſter our ſelves, and, for ſome ſmall time χωρῆσαι, (it is [a] Saint Peters word) get us a withdrawing place; σχολάζειν (it is [b] Saint Pauls) make us a vacant time, of purpoſe, to entend devout and ghoſtly meditation throughly? A caſe, which Saint Paul preſumes, at one time or other, every good Chriſtian man and woman will not faile but doe. Then, hath faſting a time too; and one vacancie to ſerve for both.

a 2 Pet.3.7.
b 1 Cor 7.5.

It is a ſpeciall friend to prayer; to feather it, to put a vigour or fervour into it. Therefore, where (almoſt) ſhall you finde them, but coupled, faſt and pray, one following ſtraight in the necke of another? Even here, preſently before, was CHRIST in a treatie of prayer: and here now, immediately after it, He fals to ſpeake of faſting. This was not for nothing: But, as if Hee ſhould give thereby a ſpeciall Item, that there is a mutuall reciprocall correſpondence; nay, an alliance betweene them, to ſanctifie and ſupport either the other. And namely, a ſpeciall vertue in faſting, to awake up and quicken our devotion, thereby the better to elevate our mindes unto GOD. Wee feele this, or we feele nothing; that dull is our devotion, and our prayers full of yawning, when the braine is thicke with the vapour, and the heart preſſed downe with the charge of the ſtomacke: And that our devotion and all elſe, is performed (as Tertullian ſaith) pollentiore mente, and vivaciore corde, our wits more freſh, our ſpirits more about us, while wee are in virgine ſalivâ, yet in our faſting ſpettle; when faſting and prayer are not aſunder, but wee ſerve GOD in both. Our Morning Prayer, that, that is the Incenſe (ſaith the Pſalme:)

Pſalme :) Our Evening, is but the ſtretching out of our hands, in compariſon of it, faint and heavie. Pſal. 141. 2.

Theſe then: the time, 1 Of feare of the danger ſinne will draw upon us: 2 Of indignation at our ſinne, the cauſe of it: 3 Of Sorrow for that we have done: 4 Of care, that we doe ſo no more: 5 Of taking downe the fleſh: 6 Of lifting up the ſpirit: 7 Of averting evill: 8 Of procuring good: 9 Of giving our ſelves wholly to Spirituall exerciſe: Theſe are all cauſes, Why: Theſe are all times, When; all, of the Scriptures limiting; all, of the Saints practice, there.

And indeed, all, of CHRIST's owne aſſigning. For, venient dies, there will come dayes (ſaith CHRIST.) Do thoſe dayes never come? When come they? Verily when evill daies come upon us, we may hang up our harpes then, the marriage feaſt is at an end with us, and we then to faſt (ſaith CHRIST) according to the letter. 1 Chap. 9. 15. Pſal. 137. 2.

But, goes He from us onely corporally by adverſity? Goes he not ſpiritually alſo? Yes: and whenſoever we fall into any grievous ſinne, though the piping may continue (perhaps) yet the Bridegroome is gone; aſſure your ſelfe, gone He is; Et tum jejunabunt, and then faſt wee muſt: Why? even for very griefe, that by our wretched folly, wee have ſet Him gone. For, if when He is taken from us, faſt we muſt: muſt wee not much more, when we our ſelves, by our lewd carriage have been the cauſe (I ſay not, of His taking, but) even of His very chaſing and driving away from us? 2

Thirdly, againſt tentation, we need to faſt; for, againſt His tentation CHRIST faſted, that needed it not. 3

And laſt, His cloſe ſo joyning, and ſo oft, of theſe two (1 faſting and 2 prayer) ſo together ſtill, makes that the time of fervent prayer is a time of CHRIST's appointing too; and that ſo intimated, even in this very place here. 4

But, all this while we have been ſpeaking of When we are to faſt at large; or when, upon ſome occaſion: In the meane time, wee ſay nothing of this time now at hand. This is not upon any occaſion: it is a yearely recurrent faſt: Will this alſo come within the liſts of Cum jejunatis? I take it, it will. For ſhall our faſting be altogether when wee will our ſelves? ſhall it not alſo bee ſome time when the Church will? May we bind our ſelves, and may not ſhee alſo bind us? Hath ſhee no intereſt in us, no power over us? The Synagogue of the Iewes (wee ſee) had power to preſcribe faſts, and did: Hath the Church of CHRIST none? Is ſhee in worſe caſe than the Synagogue? No indeed. If Recab might enjoyne his ſonnes; She may Her's. She is our Mother, She hath the power of a Mother over us; and a Mother hath power to give lawes to her children. And ſo, Cum jejunatis is, When you faſt by the Churches appointment, alſo: the Churches Cum. This is ſure: No man hath GOD to his FATHER, that hath not the CHVRCH for his Mother: and that, once and twice in the Proverbs, order is taken, as to keepe the precepts of our Father; ſo not to ſet light by the lawes of our Mother. Ira Patris, and dolor Matris, are together in one verſe: Hee that grieves her, angers Him. And he cannot but grieve her, that little ſets by her wholeſome Orders. The Apoſtles (we ſee) Saint Paul by name, though he had been in the third heaven, yet he deferred to talem conſuetudinem, the Churches Cuſtome, and reſts in it. We muſt learne to doe the like, and not ſet light by them, as our manner is. Pro. 1. 8. 17. 25. 1 Cor. 11. 16.

This I may ſay for this Cum, It is no Cuſtome lately taken up: No Law of the Church our Mother that now is. She is growen old, and her ſenſes faile her: She errs, or at leaſt is ſaid to erre, at every bodies pleaſure. It is a cuſtome (this) of the Church, while it was a Chriſto recens, yet freſh and warme from CHRIST, The Church, which was the Mother of the Apoſtles themſelves, at all times kept; every where obſerved; then, and ever ſince. Some, to ſhift it, frame to themſelves a feare of (I wote not what) ſuperſtition, where no feare is. Before any ſuperſtition was ſtirring, any Popery hatched, it was this faſt was. Lex abſtinendi in Quadrageſimâ ſemper fuit in Eccleſiâ (ſaith the Oracle of Antiquitie, Theophilus Alexandrinus) Lent was ever in the Church. Nos unam Quadrageſimam, The Application to the time of Lent. 2 geſimam, ſecundùm traditionem Apoſtolorum, wee have but one Lent (the Montaniſts had three) but, that one was delivered us by the Apoſtles (ſaith S. Hierome.) Why ſhould I weary you with reckoning them up? What one more ancient Writer than other is there, but you ſhall finde it in him expreſly, even up to Ignatius, who lived with the Apoſtles themſelves. Apoſtolike then, it is; and for ſuch Saint Hierome avowes it; and when that is ſaid, enough is ſaid for it, I thinke. Yet (it is good you know it) the faſt ſo delivered, and by the Church ever and every where ſo kept, the Councell of Gangra hath layd an Anathema on them that keepe it not, avoyd it how they can that keepe it not.

And ſure in generall, that this power ſhould remaine in the Church, to preſcribe us ſet times, was moſt behoofull. Every man (ſo we would have it) to be left to himſelfe, for prayer, faſting, ſacrament, Nay for Religion too (now) and all? For GOD's ſake, let it not bee ſo: let us not bee left altogether to our ſelves; No, not in Prayer. Private Prayer doth well; but let us be ordered to come to Church, and to doe it there, Phariſee's, Publican's, Peter and Iohn and all: Let us have our dayes appointed and our houres ſet for it. If all were left to us, GOD knowes, I durſt not promiſe, what ſhould become of Prayer it ſelfe. The like ſay I for the Sacrament: Let us have a cum when to come to that, too. And ſo for Faſting: Faſt privately in GOD's name: But heare you, let not the Church truſt to that. Nor She hath not held it wiſedome ſo to doe: but, as in both them, (Prayer, and the Sacrament) So in this, holds us to our order of dayes and times eſtabliſhed. Them if wee keepe, So it is: Otherwiſe, were it not for the Churches times, I doubt, there would be taken ſcarce any time at all. Now yet, ſomewhat is done: but, leave us once at libertie, libertie hath loſt us ſome already, and will loſe us the reſt, if it be not looked to in time.

The reſt, are matters of Diſcipline, rather than Doctrine: 1 The number of fourty: 2 The ſeaſon of the yeare: 3 The manner of abſtinence. Somewhat may be ſayd to content us: But remember, it came from the Apoſtles: that is it that binds us; that is it, that ſets it faſt.

The cauſe of it.

That which hath been ſaid, is for ſome ſet time at large, for a Cum: but, why this Cum, at this time, now? Why forty dayes? Why before Eaſter? Why this faſt? It is of all hands confeſt, that ordained it was, as a part of the Diſcipline of Repentance: And much was done in it, about Publike Penitents. Yet, not for them onely. But, even with them, out of the bowels of a Mother, the Church her ſelfe would become a Penitent, and have all her Children doe the like. Her ſelfe become one; For, the whole body of the Church hath her faults (beſide the private offences of everie particular member) for which there was a ſeverall ſet ſacrifice in the Law. For us: to become penitents likewiſe: For, who knowes whether we be not as faulty in private, as they (the open Penitents) in publike? As great ſinners as they, though not knowne for ſuch?

So, the cauſe is generall, that ſhe with them, and we with her and with them: with them and for them: For them, and for our ſelves, in whole and in part, all in one, uniformely might performe a ſolemne annuall Repentance to GOD.

1 The number of 40. daies.

As to the number of dayes: GOD ſaith (in the Revelation) [a] Dedi ei tempus ad pœnitendum. Hee gave a time for to repent in: What time was that He gave? The time that GOD gave was [b] fortie dayes, in the famous Repentance of Ninive: Happie for the iſſue; recommended by CHRIST's owne mouth, and propounded to us as a patterne. Other ſet time (ſave this) ſhee found not: Shee tooke the ſame then: Shee could not tell how, or when to take a better, than that of GOD's owne giving. The rather, that MOSES, ELIAS, and CHRIST himſelfe had hit upon the ſame number in their faſt. It is not nothing that it containeth, though it be but an imperfect expreſſing of the patterne of ſo worthy authors; of CHRIST's ſpecially. Ignatius hath ſayd it before me: I dare ſay it after him.

For

For the ſeaſon: The Prophet hath ſaid it, if we know not when to lay our faſt, our returning to GOD, lay it with the * Storke and the Swallow; take their time, doe it cum hirundinibus, rather than faile. 2 The Seaſon: In the ſpring. * Ier. 8. 7.

But beſides that, the Church hath layd it moſt conveniently to end with the feaſt of CHRIST's riſing, and ſo to goe immediatly before it: that againſt that time (as the Fathers in the firſt great Councell of Nice wiſh it) all being reſtored, and all prepared by it, we may of all hands celebrate that high Day, and bring to GOD a pure offering (the very words of the Councell.) Then, to end with that high feaſt, that the ſaying of ZACHARIE may be fullfilled, that our faſt ſhall be to us turned into high feaſts: as that is the higheſt and greateſt of our Religion; for which cauſe this faſt is called, jejunium Paſchale, with reference to it: For EASTER and LENT ſtand upon one baſe; both ſtand and fall together. Againſt Eaſter. Zach 8. 19.

As to the manner of our abſtinence. It is ſure, the faſt in kinde was in theſe three, 1 Panem non comedit, 2 potum non bibit, 3 ad veſperam: neither eat nor drink at all till night. But, non omnes capiunt ſermonem hunc, all are not capable of this ſaying: Yet, he that can, let him. But for them that cannot, the Church (as a tender indulgent Mother unto all) that ſhe may winne ſomewhat, is content to remit of the rigor of this; turnes her on all ſides, to lay no more on us than we can endure, if ſhe can find ought in Scriptures to releeve us. And that doth ſhe three waies: 3 The Manner.

1 Non panem, No manner meat: None at all: Nay, not no manner meat at all (too hard that.) What ſay you to non talem, not altogether none, but not ſuch or ſuch meat? Non panem deſiderabilem, no dainty alluring meates, and namely, no fleſh (Dan. 10.) Now we doe alter the quality yet. Daniel's faſt we termed it, on which the Church did ground her ξηροφαγία, and ours may ground her eating of fiſh (ſay what we will) a leſſe pleaſing diet, and leſſe deſired by us. 1 Daniel's faſt. Dan. 10. 3.

2 Againe, Non comedit, Not eat at all not altogether any? That were too ſtrict. What ſay you to Non tantum? To ſome, but not ſo much? Before, altered the qualitie: here, abates of the quantitie. Not in that quantitie, not ſo much, not ſo oft as at other times. To cut off one meale, if both you cannot. They call it Tobie's faſt, Quando derelinquebatur prandium, he left his dinner: (Dinner or ſupper, all is one, ſo one be left;) nec ventrem cibo oneres duplicato (It is S. Hierome, and we doe not double ballaſt our bellies.) And theſe two wee call portionale jejunium: Takes not away all, takes ſome and leaves ſome; leaves us an honeſt portion, leaves us a meale. Some kind and ſome meaſure (only) abridged. 2 Tobies faſt. Tobi. 2. 4.

3 Not uſque ad veſperam, Not till night, forbeare: (too long that.) What ſay you to (as before not ſo oft, ſo here) not ſo ſoone, as at other times? Put off the time of our repaſt: Make our moleſtus cliens breake his houres a little: if not ad veſperam, as neer veſperam as we may. Cornelius faſt they call it: hee was faſting at the ninth houre (that is) our three at afternoone: till then. Peter's faſt they find, and that is the loweſt; he was faſting till paſt the ſixth houre: till then. Thus indulgent ſhe is: for theſe are not without example in Scripture (we ſee) nor unknowne to Antiquitie. But, for Antiquitie, then, they preſſed forward as much as they could; and we draw backward all that ever we can. Theſe then, or as many, or as much of theſe as wee can; ſo to make ſome manner ſhew, ſome countenance toward it: that, if not keepe pace with the ancient Church, yet not to give them over cleane; not to fall behind them ſo far, till we loſe the ſight of them quite, and ſo fall to abandon Cum jejunatis altogether. And thus much for this Cum, this very time, and the manner of jejunatis, our faſting in it. 3 Cornelius and Peters faſt. Act. 10. 13. 10. 9.

And, now we have found us a time for our faſt, GOD ſend us to get a faſt for our time, a jejunatis for our Cum. For, this Cum is now come. Here then is the place and time to anſwer CHRIST's when ye faſt; to aske, When faſt we? Every one to enter into his owne heart and convent himſelfe about the taking of theſe times, how oft we have taken them. How oft? I would it were come to that. I feare, it muſt be, whether we have taken taken them at all or no? Whether any of them? And, if this queſtion ſhould be put us, I report me to our conſciences (a many of us) whether it would not appoſe us to tell, when this when laſt was.

But if (as I doubt) we have not taken them; then I aske, Why have we not? Have we no ſinnes to be cenſured? are we in no feare of wrath to come? Our caſe (ſure) is fearefull, if we feare not.

Are our ſoules ſo very humble, our bodies ſo in ſubjection, we need it not? I marvell, it ſhould be ſo: it ſhould be needfull for S. Paul; his body ſhould need chaſtening; ours none. What, is the Bridegroome alway with us? He with us, and we with Him alwayes? doe we never part? doth that time never come? Never, all our life long? Yes, yes: we want no times, nor we want no cauſes: we want wills. Whereof ſure we ſhould doe well to bethink our ſelves better, leſt we be out of the Goſpell quite. CHRIST cannot ſay to us, when ye faſt, if we faſt not at all. Somewhat would be done (ſure) if it were but to make CHRIST ſpeake to ſome purpoſe: Somewhat; or all that hath beene ſaid, and all that ſhalbe is to no purpoſe. No uſe of it, of a caution, how to doe that, we have no meaning ever once to doe at all.

I ſhould now come to the Cautions: and (if GOD will) ſo I will: but at ſome other time. But as our times are inclined to leave ſenſuality to our owne (which wee would faine have called Chriſtian) libertie; wee had need to bend, and to ſpend our whole exhortation, not ſo much againſt hypocriſie, as for faſting, to keepe life in it. As our Age falls out, that is not ſo neceſſary. Time was, when faſting was in credit: And when a thing is in requeſt, then is counterfeiting to be feared, then take heed of hypocriſie. But now, when little is attributed to the true, then (ſhould I thinke) there needs little feare of the falſe. So that, it were not altogether without reaſon, as the world goes, not to ſtand on the latter ſo much, but even let it goe; and, ſo men would faſt, let their countenances bee as pleaſed them; let them looke as ſowre as they liſt.

Should I ſay ſo, I might well enough, for any feare, faſting will now bee made matter of vaine-glorie. But, that were to extend my Commiſſion: I dare not; but leave it as CHRIST hath left it, and ſay with the Apoſtle, Quod accepi à DOMINO, What I have received of the LORD, that, and no other thing; and, as I have received it of the LORD, ſo, and no otherwiſe, deliver I it unto you; And perſwade, exhort, entreat, and even beſeech you to doe it; but not as hypocrites: and backe againe, not as hypocrites to doe it; not ſo; yet in any wiſe to doe it; to fulfill, to make good CHRIST's Cum jejunatis.

Iejunatis, you know what tenſe it is. In the preſent tenſe He hath put it, for at the preſent time He requireth it. It is not, Cum jejunabitis, or cum jejunaturi eſtis, when you ſhall faſt, but when you doe. He ſpeakes, as if He would have us fall in hand with it preſently, and make no future faſt of it. The Cum, is already come; and we to doe it, now it is come: to make anſwer to CHRIST's When you faſt, with, Now we faſt, now we are at it, this day, commonly called Caput jejunii, the head of it: to which head (I truſt) we will allow a body, and ſo make a faſt of it.

And even ſo then, let us doe. And He that ſaith it, will ſee it, and ſeeing it will ſee, it ſhall not goe without a reward at His hands; See, that, any hunger or thirſt, for Him and upon His word ſuffered, ſhall be ſatisfied at His heavenly table, at the great EASTER-Day, the Day of the laſt Reſurrection; where there ſhall be no faſting any more, but a Feaſt with all joy and jubilee for ever.

A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE KING JAMES, AT WHITEHALL, On the VI. of March, A. D. MDCXXII. being ASH-WEDNESDAY.

MATTH. Chap. VI. Ver. XVI.

Cum autem jejunatis, nolite fieri ſicut hypocritæ triſtes; Exterminant enim facies ſuas, ut appareant hominibus jejunantes: Amen dico vobis, quia receperunt mercedem ſuam.

Moreover, when you faſt, * looke not ſowre as the hypocrites; for they disfigure their faces, that they might ſeeme unto men to faſt: Verily I ſay unto you, that they have their reward.

* Or be not like ſowre hypocrites

OVR laſt yeares endevours were out of the two firſt words, Cum jejunatis, When ye faſt; to ſettle a true conceipt, what every good Chriſtian man is to hold, both of Jejunatis, faſting it ſelfe; and of Cum, the time when. And that not without great need; the moſt part ſeeme ſo faintly perſwaded of faſting, as if it were no needfull part of a Chriſtian mans duty: And, of the time, as if CHRIST's Cum did never come.

And this we did, as for liberâſti animam tuam, to deliver our owne ſoules; ſo to deliver the Doctrine of our Church, from a malicious ſlander caſt on it, as if it favoured any way the filling or farcing our ſelves, at this no leſſe than at other times; and did not require and enjoyne a more ſtrict and penitentiall kind of life, at this time, than all the yeare beſide.

Wherein, if GOD have ſo bleſſed our endevours, that theſe two points be ſettled, wee may then goe forward to the reſt; that is, Be not like hypocrites. If we reſolve, that CHRIST's when ſhall have a then; and then, faſt we will.

The next point is a Caveat, what we are to take heed of, when we faſt: That we faſt in ſecret, make no ſhew of it: Our faſt bee to GOD and not to men: that we faſt not for vaine-glorie, as Hypocrites doe.

I confeſſe, I proceed to this ſecond part, as to that, whereof there is not ſo much need; And, but that I take my ſelfe bound to proſecute the text, I have begun, I would chooſe chooſe rather to ſpend the houre in ſpeaking againe for the duty, to have it done; than to deale with the Caution, what to eſchew in the doing. We cannot get men to it (to faſt:) what need we then ſpend any ſpeech, how they ſhould not doe it, when they doe it not?

We divided the Text into two parts: One, for faſting; the other, againſt hypocriſie. As our times are, there is more need, to ſpeake for faſting, than againſt hypocriſie. And yet againſt that too: (GOD forbid, that, or any vice ſhould be favoured:) but, not againſt hypocriſie, in faſting. There is little feare of that. Men faſt not like hypocrites, when they faſt not at all.

But you will be pleaſed to call to mind how we then left, and wherewith we concluded the laſt yeare. That we muſt not thinke any thing more than needs, in any ſpeech of CHRISTS. That, what we have received of the LORD, that, and no other thing; And as we have received it of the LORD, ſo and no otherwiſe are we to deliver it unto you. And, from Him we have received both Cum jejunatis, and Ne Sitis; the one, as well as the other. And ſo, we ſet forward, to Ne Sitis ſicut, the Caution. Yet ſo, as our firſt caution ever be, we omit not to faſt. Not, at other times: but not at this ſpecially, when the Church, or rather, GOD, by the Church her ancient order and cuſtome calls us to it.

For when are we to looke to all this, what time? Why, When we faſt: That when is ſtill to be kept in mind: to that we muſt come. That, the ground of all; thither we muſt returne againe in the end.

The Summe, & Diviſion. Ier.23.28.

Wee ſay then, Cum jejunatis is the good ſeed-corne which CHRIST Himſelfe hath ſowen. All beſides, is but chaffe to be blowen away. And, now He takes His fan in His hand, to fan away this chaffe. For, quid paleæ ad triticum (ſaith GOD, in Ieremie) wheat and chaffe, what ſhould they doe together? Theſe muſt be ſevered: One to be layd up in the Garner, the other to be burnt with unquenchable fire.

I. 1 The fanne in theſe words, Nolite fieri ſicut, Be not like. The chaffe, is in the word Hypocrites. Firſt then, hypocriſie in generall to be avoyded.

II. 2 But, here is a ſpeciall kind, ſicut hypocritæ triſtes, Not ſowre, like hypocrites: Or, not like ſowre hypocrites. Not like them.

3 Not like them, wherein? In two points upon which the fanne goes. 1 Not like them, in their Sicut: 2 Not like them, in their Vt. Not, in their manner how: Not, in their end, why. 1 Not in their manner How: Why, what doe they? they are all for the countenance; and, that, they diſfigure. In making it their labour, to have it appeare in their countenance. 2 And, why doe they ſo? that ſo, men may know them for faſters. In making it their end, to be ſeene of men. Theſe two He fannes away.

III. 4 But, what if one could find in his heart to faſt, and yet would have men ſee it, and commend him for it, Ad quod damnum, what hurt will come of it? One would thinke, none: CHRIST ſayes Amen to it. They make it their reward, to be ſeen of men: Why, it ſhalbe their reward, they ſhalbe ſeen of men: that is all, they would have to come. Why, this, one would never thinke a puniſhment: But, it is one. And, thinke it not a ſmall one, For, though it ſeeme no great harme to receive a reward of prayſe: yet when wee ſhall lay together, how poore a thing it is they receive, Man's prayſe: And, how great an one they loſe by the meanes, GOD's reward: they had better bee without it. For, when they have that, there is all; all that ſhall come of their faſting: Acceperunt ſuam, amiſerunt meam, They have received their reward, they have loſt mine; and CHRIST to ſay Amen to it; This, ſay I, is ſure a heavy puniſhment. Therefore, looke to it.

Luc.12.1. And, when the chaffe is blowen away, and the floore purged: when the old leven which is hypocriſie, is caſt out; of the reſt, we are to make our ſweet-bread, now againſt the great Feaſt of our Paſſeover, we make ready for.

When

I.
The Fanne.
Be not like.

WHen we have got paſt the two firſt words; when the thing is won, and the time; and we reſolved, that faſt we will; and when we will; and we ſet our ſelves ſeriouſly to it: What, is all ſafe? Will the Devill be gone his way? Shall wee heare no more of him, as ſoone as he ſees us ſo ſet? No, indeed: but, hovers about us ſtill, as if there were yet ſomewhat for him to doe. Our Bleſſed SAVIOVR when the Spirit led Him into the wilderneſſe, and He fell to His faſt, it is ſaid, that then, the Tempter came to Him: So, we muſt make reckoning, he will to us. It is exceeding behoovefull for us, to take notice of this: as they ſay, to know the length of the Devils chaine: That, neither full nor faſting, weare out of his reach, but he will be buſie with us in them both. Attends our Feaſts, to make [a] our table a ſnare: Attends our Faſts, to turne them (as well as our prayers) [b] into ſinne. Eating, he is buſie with us, to make us eat like [c] Eſau. Faſting, no leſſe buſie, to make us faſt like the [d] Phariſee. And looke what in this, in the reſt: Both Almes and Prayer too, are ſubject to it. Therefore, in and through all, whether we give Almes, pray, or faſt, to have an eye to him, in all. Praying, Faſting, giving Almes, he leaves us not; gives us not over, till he have corrupted the manner; perverted the end: till, one way or other, he have ſet them awry. His firſt aſſay is, Ne bonum, we doe not that which is good, we faſt not at all: His ſecond is, Ne bonum benè, we doe it not, as we ſhould; by putting to it a wrong ſicut, an undue manner; or a wrong Vt, an undue end; that ſo, we may doe what GOD commands us, for the Devils end. Sure, it is not enough to be exerciſed in doing good; we muſt looke to both the Sicut, the manner how we doe it; and to the Vt, the end, why we doe it; or he may hap goe beyond us; and both ſpoile them, and ſpoile us of our reward for them.

d Luke 18.12.

But then againe, take heed, yee be not caught here; and, for doubt yee may doe it amiſſe, be brought, not to doe it at all, but let all alone. That is another of his tricks: For his method or manner of proceeding, in this point, is well worth our obſerving: Noſſe hæc Salus eſt. It is one of the Profunda Satanæ (as the Revelation cals them) the deepe fetches, or policies of Satan. For, would any man thinke, he would uſe this Text, theſe very words of our SAVIOVR, [Be not like hypocrites] to draw men from faſting? Hee doth. For, finding here, faſting and hypocrites thus cloſe together; and ſo, that hypocrites uſe to faſt; he perſwades ſome (and ſuch, as weene themſelves no fooles) to thinke, they cannot faſt, but they muſt ipſo facto prove hypocrites. Sets up this for a ſcar-crow, to raiſe up a vaine feare in them, and ſo to chaſe them from it. Will yee faſt? Gods Lord take heed what you doe; doe it not: why? Ne ſitis ſicut hypocritæ; for, and you doe, you will be taken for an hypocrite.

Rev.2.24.

And marke the double taking of Ne ſitis: Ne ſitis, Be not like (ſaith CHRIST:) Ne ſitis, Leſt you be like (ſaith He.) Now, the belly is apt and eaſie enough to apprehend any feare in this kinde; any oppoſition, or expoſition, any thing that makes for it.

Nay, hereby he prevailes with them, not onely to give over faſting themſelves; but drawes them further to grow jealous, leſt every one that faſts, be not tainted that way: and, leſt every one that preaches for it, be not juſtly to be ſuſpected, as that way given; as having in him ſome ſparkes of a Phariſee. Thus doth he.

And, will you ſee how compendious a way he deviſeth, to rid us cleane of all hypocriſie? Thus: to keepe no Lent; not to faſt at all: and ſo, hee will warrant us, we ſhall be ſure, to be cleere from being any hypocrites. So, to avoid hypocriſie, hee voids faſting quite.

But, what is this, but to caſt out devils by the power of Beelzebub, one devill with another? To caſt out hypocriſie by gluttonie? To caſt out ſuperſtition, with the prophaneneſſe of Eſau? Who, rather than offend his belly, cared not what became of his birthright.

Hebr.12.16.

right. To bring in Ne jejunetis, Faſt not; under colour of Ne ſitis hypocritæ, not Being like hypocrites. To caſt out Ne ſitis hypocritæ, Be no hypocrites, with ſitis Epicuri, Die not in debt to your bellies. The devils onely way, to rid hypocriſie, by engroſſing Epicuriſme.

But (alas) what will this availe us? what is gotten by this? Small eaſe will it bee (GOD knowes) for any, not to be condemned as an hypocrite, Seeing he that fell to eat and drinke with good fellowes (in the XXIIII. Chapter after) had his portion given him with hypocrites, as good a trencher-man as he had beene, all his life-time. So that, both come into one roome, both lye together, and fry together in one place of torments. And, thither it is he would bring us, he cares not, whether way. This is his firſt aſſay: and much hurt he hath done this way.

I know not how, but faſting is laid aſide: In a manner cleane gone: Few, or none keepe it. How is it gone? What is pretended, or given out for it? But for feare of doing that, which perſons doe that are ſuperſtitiouſly given; feare, of being like them. For, no feare of hypocriſie, now: Sicut hypocritæ is now gone. But, by this one precedent, this one ne ſitis ſicut, he can make more. As now, in place of Be not like hypocrites, is come a feare of, Be not like Papiſts: we ſhall be like Papiſts, if we doe. And, not to faſt, is made a Superſedeas to all Popery; as if that alone were enough, to make vs truly reformed. This is all our feare now.

Pſal. 14.5.

But, ibi trepidaverunt timore, ubi non erat timor, There were they afraid where no feare was. This is but a ſcar-crow neither. 1 Firſt ſet downe this: we muſt doe ſomething, that hypocrites and ſuperſtitious perſons doe, or we muſt give over Almes too, and Prayer as well as faſting; for, they have a like Ne ſitis upon them. You ſhall finde Hypocritæ in, at all three.

2 Then the ſecond: we may doe what hypocrites doe, and yet not doe it, as they doe it. And it is the ſicut, the manner (not the thing it ſelfe) that CHRIST here excepts too. So, that feare is at an end.

3 Laſtly, theſe words being directed by CHRIST, and by Him ſpoken to His Diſciples, by the grace of GOD, all be not hypocrites, or ſuperſtitious, that faſt; For, CHRISTS Diſciples were neither. We may faſt then like CHRISTS Diſciples; we may be of their number. And indeed the truth is; CHRISTS Diſciples are onely truly ſeiſed of it. Hypocrites doe but encroch upon it, or rather on the outſide of it, as doth the Wolfe upon the ſheepes clothing. But, neither is the ſheepe to leave or lay downe his fleece; nor the Chriſtian man, his faſt; becauſe other-while, the Wolfe is found in the one, or the hypocrite, at the other.

In three ſhort words CHRIST teacheth us a way to anſwer both. His ne ſitis ſicut, will make both fly away, as chaffe before the fan, and Cum jejunatis never be ſtirred, but lye ſtill. Doe the Hypocrites faſt, to be ſeene, doe they? And doe the Papiſts faſt, with opinion of merit? Why, Be not like Hypocrites, but yet faſt: Nor, be not like Papiſts, no more than like hypocrites, yet faſt though. CHRISTS ne ſitis will ſerve for theſe, and for as many as the Devill can deviſe. Faſt not like them; faſt like CHRISTS Diſciples, and all is well. And this, for his firſt way of turning CHRISTS Cum jejunatis into Ne jejunetis, upon feare of being like Hypocrites, if we ſo doe.

But if, this way, he ſucceed not, to keepe us from it, but faſt wee will; then comes he about, with a new ſtratageme. And that by way of good wholeſome counſell; that, if we will needs faſt, we would doe it, to ſome purpoſe: (that is) doe it ſo, as we may be knowne to doe it, in any wiſe. For, to what purpoſe will it be to doe it in tenebris? It is no worke of darkneſſe; or, as good in a blinde corner, where no man can take notice of it; as if we were aſhamed to be ſeene about ſo good a worke. Nay, in any wiſe; take heed of concelement of your faſt, of hiding it under a buſhell. And, good reaſon; they be workes of light (all three) Almes, Prayer, and Faſting; and ſo love to be brought to light, to be ſet on a Candleſticke, and to be ſeene. Therefore, as before, in our Almes, hee had deviſed we ſhould call our Almeſ-folke about us with a [c] Trumpet: and, as in Prayer, that we ſhould doe it in [d] choice places, where folke may come by, and ſee us at it; and to be a good deale longer than ordinarie, that ſo, we may ſeeme ſomewhat ſomewhat ſingular, and to have more in us, than our fellowes: So, here now, when it is Faſting-day with us, to get us a faſting-day face, at any hand. For that, except we bee ſomewhat altered in countenance, no man will looke at us, or marke us; there will bee no notice taken of it; and ſo as good not faſt at all: But if it appeare in our faces, wee ſhall both get reputation to our ſelves, and our Profeſſion ſhall receive credit beſides. Thus doth hee medle his chaffe; mold in his ſowre leven into CHRIST'S nova conſperſio; to make us doe, what GOD would have us, for his owne; to doe GOD'S worke for the divel's end. Sanctifie me a faſt (as I told) ſhewes, there is ſanctitie in it; a holy duty it is, and he ſeekes to breed mothes in it. For, ſo the Fathers call hypocriſie (tineam ſanctitatis) the moth that frets in ſunder all, that holy or good is; and ſo by that meanes, make it a meere moth-eaten faſt.

Ioel 1. 14. 2. 15.

Thus, whither-ſoever we turne our ſelves, hee meets with us ſtill. Theſe are his deſignes: this doth hee, diverſis itineribus, by contrary wayes, ſeeke to circumvent us. Firſt, downe he ſits in his Court, and offers us a licence, not to keepe Lent, to keepe what diet wee will: And if we refuſe it, threatens us, he will get us preſented for hypocrites. But, if that move us not, but we ſtand out reſolute for all his ſcarr-crow, then, out hee comes in a new ſtyle; falls to commend us, as good orderly men: but (withall) to adviſe us friendly, to doe all ſo, as may be for our beſt behoofe: which is, to have it ſeen in any wiſe. And (that which is ſtrange) ſcarrs us with that, in the beginning, which hee brings us to, in the end: Even, to doe that in hypocriſie, that (before) he wiſhed us, in no wiſe to doe, for feare of hypocriſie. So as, upon the matter, now it is come to ſitis hypocritæ, though not, in ſo broad termes; but, ſo is his meaning, doe it like hypocrites, to bee ſeene.

II. The Chaffe. 1 Not like Hypocrites, in generall.

This, is the proper place: here now comes CHRIST with his fanne, and ſevers the precious from the vile, with Ne ſitis ſicut. And thinke it never a whit the worſe for this Ne ſitis. Almes hath the ſame before; and ſo hath Prayer the very ſame: And many a Ne ſitis belong to theſe, and to every good duty. They are not the worſe; the better rather, for the fanning: they are ridde by it of much refuſe ſtuffe. And, even to this of faſting, there belongs more Be not like's than one. Not like the Manichee's that thought the creatures uncleane. Not like them, whoſe faſt is a Commutation of Gluttonie. Not like them, that faſt to ſave charges. Not like them, that make it an opus operatum: and, ſo it be done, it skills not how with them; it skills not for any Sicut. Not like any of theſe. One ne ſitis ſerves them all, ſends them all going one after another, as many as come. Ne ſitis to them all, and to every, or any of them all. And ſo, you ſhall not need give over your faſting for any of them all. I would faſt, but for being like one of theſe: why, be not like any one of theſe, and yet faſt notwithſtanding.

Not like any one of theſe. But ſpecially (ſaith CHRIST here) not like Hypocrites. Why, not like them? For, then, the Phariſees faſted, and their diſciples: and Iohn faſted, and his diſciples: there was, then, faſting on all hands. And then is the time of hypocriſie: Then, doth it abound moſt, when things are in requeſt, when moſt uſed; then, is moſt danger of counterfeiting. And hypocriſie is but a kind of counterfeiting (as I ſhall ſhew you.) Therefore, as thoſe times were, Bee not like Hypocrites.

Mar. 7. 18.

Not like them? and them, of all other, one would chooſe to be like; they of all others are moſt like to faſt; they looke as if they faſted; they carry their faſt, in their face, they. Why, that, CHRIST likes not; the carrying it in their face: tells us plainly, they be not the men, we take them for: no true faſters, they; they be but hypocrites.

Hypocrites? What is that? Wee muſt needs ſtay a little, to ſearch out the true ſenſe of that word: They be ſo baited, all the Goſpell through; there be ſo many Woes cried againſt them. The word Hypocrite is neither Engliſh nor Latine, but as a Deniſon. Originally, it is a knowen Greeke word; and is (in that tongue) the ordinary and proper name for thoſe, whom the Latine terme Hiſtriones, and we in Engliſh, Stage-players: Such as in diſguiſed attire and haire preſent themſelves on a ſtage, and there oft repreſent thoſe, whom (GOD knowes) they are farre from; but yet, outwardly take upon them their perſons, as if they were.

And the ground of the word is, they are therefore called Hypocritæ, for that, to give a true judgement of them, you muſt ὑποκρίνειν judge them (not by their Player's coat above, but) by that, they are underneath in their owne, when their gorgeous and gay attire is off. That, may be gallant and brave: they themſelves are, it skills not what; Peradventure, he that plaid the Souldan, but a Sowter.

The word (in the tongue CHRIST ſpake) is as much to ſay, as one in a vizour, Aſſumens vultum, a face-taker; one that hath got him a taken-on-face, which is none of his owne, nor nothing like it; as in Playes and Shewes, the manner is. But, we hold us to the word Hypocritæ. The native ſenſe of the word you ſee: and it is, as if he had ſaid in plaine Engliſh; When ye faſt, be not like theſe ſame Stage-players. So, it ſignifies at the firſt. And at the ſecond hand, all others, which doe off of the ſtage, that which they doe upon it; and in Court, Citie, or Country, carrie themſelves with other faces than their owne, as theſe doe on the Stage, at Play-houſes.

The Heathen man long ſince obſerved, that Mundus, ſcena; that, in his conceipt, the world, for all the world, was like a ſtage, or theater; ſcarce a true face in it: all in a manner perſonate. And the actions in the world, not much unlike to their acting of their parts in the Acts and Scenes of a Stage-play. But our SAVIOVR CHRIST, hee goes further: he tells us here, of a ſtranger matter. That, there want not, that make His Church a very Stage; and play with Religion, and play Religion and every part of it: So carrying themſelves in things pertayning to GOD, as if they had ſome Play or Pageant in hand. It is but too true, this. If you will ſet up a ſtage, I will find you Actors for it enow.

a Mat.26.8. Joh.11.5. Will you ſee Almes playd? Out comes Iudas ſagely, with a ſentence in his mouth, a Vt quid perditio hæc? Alas, it would have beene better beſtowed, upon a many of poore people: why ſhould there be ſuch waſt upon CHRIST's head? right, the Supplication of beggers.

b Mat.23.14. Will you ſee Prayer playd? Looke upon the Players in the XXIII. Chapter after, that, under colour of b a long prayer, now and then prey upon the houſes and goods of a ſort of ſeduced widdowes: and make as good gaine of their Prayers, as Iudas would have done of his Almes.

But, Sermons goe away with it now: The Church is, then, full: and (GOD knowes) a few true hearers: the reſt are but a ſort of Sermon-Hypocrites. The Scene is in the Ezek.33.30. 33. of Ezekiel: O let us goe heare the Word: and the Prophet addes, So was the faſhion then, 31. and for faſhion, it was. And thither they come, and when they are come, here ſit they, but their heart is elſe-where, wandring where it will. Either they attend not: Verſe 32. or, if they doe, it is to make jeſts. Or, at the beſt, it is but, as they heare a ſong of one that hath a pleaſing voice; and no more comes of the Sermon than of the ſong. Or, if a Mat.6.20. you love the New Teſtament better, there have you (in the 6. of Marke) a Herod ſending for IOHN BAPTIST oft, and hearing him full devoutly, till (for a b Non licet b Verſe 18. tibi, in one of his Sermons) he made his Head flye off his ſhoulders. And in verie deed, the Marriage at c Sichem, and the Circumciſion for it; d Abſaloms vow; e Iehu's c Gen.34.13. ſacrifice, what were they but very playes, meere maskes, imitations of him that is Roſcius d 2 Sam.13 7. in ſcenâ, the Maſter Hypocrite of all, who (in the Old Teſtament) got him on a man- e 2 Kin.10.18. tle, and played f Samuel at Endor: and (in the New) got him wings, and bright ray- f 1 Sam.28.14. ment, and came forth g transformed into an Angell of light. To whoſe companie they g 2 Cor.11.14. belong, and whoſe they are, that get them h Saint Paul's μόρφωσις εὐσεβείας, the vizor, or h 2 Tim.3 5. maske of godlineſſe; and make of it i Saint PETER's πρόκαλυμμα κακίας, a cloke or cover, i 1 Pet 2.16. for every bad intent. They doe no better, but even play religion. And of this Scenicall, theatricall hiſtrionicall godlineſſe, there is good ſtore abroad in the world: GOD grant it be not found in Iſraël. Be not then like ſtage players, when about any religious act; Not, when about any.

But,

But, of all parts of Religion, our SAVIOVR (here) may ſeeme to have made choiſe of the worſt. To ſay, when ye faſt, be not like players, not then, of all times. For, a Play and a Faſt ſuit not. A Play is lightly had at feaſts. Men, when they faſt are in heavineſſe: theſe agree not well. Well, as evill as they agree, for all that, faſts have beene played too. There was a Faſt played, to get [k] Naboth's vineyard: It coſt him his vineyard, and his life too. There was another played ([l] Act. 23.) to have got Saint Paul made away. And they ſay, there was one played againſt the fifth of November; and a Proceſſion too; and all, to have made us all away. From ſuch faſts playing the LORD deliver us. But ſo, you may have a faſt played too, for a need.

Not like them in faſting.

That we may not marvell, theſe hypocrites that play in Faſts (CHRIST tells us) are a ſpeciall ſort by themſelves. Be not like hypocrites at all: but, of all other, not like them. Why? the common ſort of Hypocrites abroad, ſeeke to put on a better face than their owne: but, here have you a Monſter, exterminans vultum, out-lawing (as it were) and baniſhing his owne naturall countenance ἀφανίζω is CHRISTS word, defacing his face, as you can hardly know, it is he: taking to himſelfe a worſe face farre, than ever GOD made him. To lay on a little (I wot not what) to the end, to looke the more faire, the better coloured, of a cleerer complexion; that, is not ſtrange: But, to affect a looke more dimme, more hollow, more evill favoured; and to be-levin his face to that end, that paſſes; that, is a new kinde of hypocriſie per ſe; a kinde by it ſelfe, that. Yet, ſuch there be. There were, that wore a courſe garment to deceive (ſaith Zachary:) So, there is not only gay, but ragged hypocriſie. And, there were (ſaith CHRIST here) that rough-caſt their countenance, and that, to deceive too. That, there is not onely fucus, but fermentum pietatis; Not onely fleering, but lowring; Not onely well complexioned, but pale-coloured hypocriſie. Such are they, that play in CHRISTS faſt, here; triſtes, torvi, auſteri, the word is σκυθρωποι; which is (properly) the looke of a wilde-beaſt (a Lion, or a Beare robbed of their whelpes) grimme and ghaſt; one would be affraid to looke on them. Theſe, would CHRIST have us, not be like; As indeed who would be like them, but ſuch hypocrites as they?

Not like ſowre Hypocrites.

Zach. 13. 4.

Not like them? Why, how doe they? Exterminant vultum: vultum. The hypocrites whole labour is but his looke. Blame him not; for he is nothing but looke. Nothing but face, and caſe; but a very out-ſide onely. As for any inward matter, he never lookes after.

1 Not like them in their Sicut, their manner.

In which point, they ſuite well with Players, whoſe names they beare. It is a very fit reſemblance for them, that are nothing but reſemblance. In the very true and lively perſon of a Prince, the outward pompe or ſhew is the leſſe part, by farre. The Regall qualities, the Princely vertues are they, we chiefly admire; A religious heart, high wiſdome, heroicall courage, Clemencie, like that of GOD, without meaſure or end. In him that playes the King, it is quite otherwiſe. No Royall qualitie is required at all; No Princely vertue needs, he never cares for them. But, geſture and gate, the carriage of his countenance, to ſay his part, to pronounce and to act it well; that is all that is cared for by him, or that is looked for at his hands. And even ſo it fares here: Contrition of ſpirit, a broken heart, unfained humilitie, truth in the inward parts; theſe are moſt requiſite in the true faſt. It skils not a whit for any of theſe, in the ſtage-faſt; So he can ſet his countenance well, have the clouds in his forehead, his eyes ſomewhat hollow, certaine wrinckles in his cheeke, carry his head like a bulruſh, and looke like levin; all is well. As for any inward accompliſhment, he never takes thought for any. Vultum onely is it; He goes no further. Onely to be like, to be ſicut; as one, though (indeed) none.

Pſal. 51. 6.

But, why doe they take all theſe paines to disfigure themſelves? That doe they, Ut videantur; that they might be ſeene of men, and ſeeme to men, appeare to them in the likeneſſe of ſuch as faſt indeed. The levin of hypocriſie, in their lookes, is from the love of a Videantur in their hearts. Vaine-glory, the ground of hypocriſie, ever. And, here now, they match againe. The Hypocrites end, is as the Players end; Both, to be ſeene.

2 Not like them in their Ut, their end.

You never ſee the Play begin, till the Spectators be come, ſo many as they can get: Nor, no more ſhall you ſee this faſt acted, unleſſe there be ſome, to eye and to note it. He will not faſt on the ground; there muſt be a Stage ſet up for him; where I dare ſay, they wiſh the ſcaffolds full to ſee them: the more, the better.

Both match in videantur; and it muſt be ab hominibus, of men. Angels eyes, GODS eyes will not ſerve the Hypocrites turne. Other eyes then, there muſt be entreated, to gaze on them, or yee get no faſt.

Why, is there any harme in mens eyes, that they may not ſee, nor wee may not be ſeene of them? Verè oculi hominum (ſaith Bernard) baſiliſci ſunt bonorum operum: Now truly there is in mens eyes venome, like that of the Cockatrice, to infect our well-doing, with a well-weening of our ſelves. O now, I am ſeene! O ego quantus ſum, mundo cenſore! O what a holy mortified man, am I taken for! It troubled Almes before (this:) it troubled Prayer; and now, faſting: It troubles all. In all, this, is the point, this is the Vt, to be ſeene of men. Not, that it is unlawfull to be ſeene well-doing: You will eaſily put a difference, betweene, to be ſeene to doe well: and, to doe well, to be ſeene: betweene facere & videri; and facere, ut videare. Doe, and be ſeene, may be caſuall, never thought on by us. Doe, to be ſeene; that is the Vt (and that Vt is it) the very end, we doe it for, and otherwiſe we ſhould not doe it. It happens otherwhile, many good people doe well, and are ſeene ſo doing as it falls out; but, beſide their purpoſe quite. But, none, ſave this maſked crew, ſacrifice themſelves and their faſts to the eyes of men; and doe, what they doe, for no other end but that.

Matth. 4. 1. Luke 5. 16. You ſhall eaſily diſcerne them. You ſhall not get one of them, to doe as CHRIST did, get Him aſide out of the way into the wilderneſſe; faſt there: NO: CHRIST was not ſo well adviſed, to doe it there, in a deſart deſolate place, where there was no bodie to meet him, or ſee him at it. They be all for the eye (theſe:) a perſpective faſt, or not at all. Nothing out of ſight; never, by their good-will, where no body to looke on. Iejunium oculare, ὀφθαλμονηστεία, this. The Heathen man ſaid well: Ergo iſte, in tenebris, non ſervaret hominem; Such a one would not be entreated to ſave a mans life in the darke (if he might:) Not, but by torch-light. For, all is loſt, he is cleane undone, if no body ſee or looke upon him.

Luke 4. 1. Well, if it were the SPIRIT of GOD led CHRIST into the wilderneſſe to faſt there, like an Hermite; you may well know, what Spirit it is, that ſets one up a ſtage, there, to faſt like an Hypocrite. To be ſeene then, is their Vt, the very butt they ayme at.

And, wherefore to be ſeene? In the Play, that they may have a plaudite: So plaine, as they even crave it in their laſt words. So, in this eye-ſerving faſt, ſeene they muſt be: And why muſt they be ſeene? To be given out, for Such an one is a great Faſter. And why that? That men ſeeing that good worke of theirs, might glorifie GOD? No indeed; but, them: the earthly childe; not, the heavenly FATHER. And, marke it, when you will: There is no animal ſo ambitious, no Chameleon ſo pants after aire, as doth the hypocrite after popular praiſe. For it, hee faſts; and ſo hungry and thirſtie he is after it, as you ſhall heare him even begge for it: Honora me coram populo hoc, ſaith one of them (It is SAVL:) O grace me, for the love of GOD; ſeeme to honour me in the peoples eyes. Loquimini in auribus populi hujus, ſaith another (It is ABIMELECH:) O give it out in the peoples eares, I am thus and thus. Marke: the Peoples eyes, and the Peoples eares; for, hypocriſie is ever popular: for their, for mens applauſe, all in all.

Matth. 16. 1 Sam 15. 30. Iud. 9. 2.

Nay then, will yee heare them expoſtulate for it, and that, even with GOD Himſelfe? Wherefore (ſay they, in the LVIII. of Eſay) faſt we, and thou ſeeſt it not? So, they would be ſeene. And, why doe we pinch and puniſh our ſelves, and thou regardeſt it not? So, they muſt be regarded, or they will not take it well. To be ſhort: the putting forth of the finger (as Eſay there cals it) or (as the Poët) Digito monſtrari, to be pointed at, and dicier Hic eſt, and ſaid Looke yee, there he goes: To have it whiſpered, That is He: To be magnified up and downe the Peoples mouth, that, is even the conſummatum eſt of all this Stage-devotion.

Eſay 58. 3. Verſe 9.

Which

Which very point makes the faſt looſe; and indeed, makes it to be no faſt at all: They extermine their countenances ſo long, that they extermine faſt and all. This very Vt videantur makes, that it ſeemes to bee, but is (indeed) none. For, in the true faſt, it is as DAVID ſaith of his; I ſorrowed, and my ſoule faſted: It is an humbling of the ſoule. Elſe, if it goe no further than the body, it is a faſt without a ſoule. But, theſe, though their ſtomacks be empty, yet their ſoules doe feed and feaſt all the while. Nam eſt quædam ſagina laudis (ſaith the Heathen man:) Praiſe will feed and fill both. And, it is our meate and drinke (and ſo we call it) that we take delight in. And ſure, if Eſay bee right, that one may bee drunke, and no cup come at his head; it is like poſſible, one may ſurfet, and yet no meat come in his belly: And, with pride both. As for meat and drinke the divell never takes any; keeps a perpetuall faſt for that matter: but, feeds on pride, as one doth on his meale; and ſurfetts that way, as much as any Epicure. And even ſo (for ought I know) one may eat and drinke no more than the divell, and yet bee as proud as the divell; why not? So as upon the matter, their faſt is but even the divels faſt, and no better. Pſal. 69. 10. Eſay 51. 21.

Faſting then, being an act of humilitie, if the divell can make it matter of pride, habetur propoſitum, he hath what hee would; hee will give you good leave to faſt and ſpare not. And, even matter of pride, he makes it. The Phariſees, whom CHRIST would have us Non ſicut, they were, in their owne conceits, the Non ſicuts of the world. They tell it GOD, Non ſicut alii, Not like other men. Others did but faſt once a weeke; if that: they twice, and never miſſed. And, in the Eccleſiaſticall ſtorie, there is a rare example of it. He, that ſame IOHN the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, that firſt tooke upon him the proud title of Vniverſall Biſhop, that every man was called and knowne by the name of Ἰωάννης ὁ νηστευτής, Ioannes Ieiunator, John the great Faſter. So, pride will grow of faſting. Being then ordained to take downe the ſoule, if he can bring it to puffe it up, and ſo, turne our faſt into ſinne; that, is even a Faſt of the divells owne chooſing. One, which (he is ſure) GOD will never looke at. The Prophet gives the reaſon: If wee faſt for mens eyes, we faſt for men, not for GOD. If we faſt for our owne praiſe, wee faſt for our ſelves, not for GOD neither. Now, what GOD ſhould reward, ſhould be done for GOD. And, with GOD, a righteous thing it is, to put men over to receive their rewards, at their hands, for whom they faſted: that they pay them their wages, that ſet them on worke: For, at His hands, they are like to receive none, ſeeing, for Him they did it not: He was not the Vt of their faſting. And this is the laſt point. As before, not like them in their Sicut; So, not here in their Vt neither: Neither in their manner nor in their end. Luk. 18. 12. Zach. 7. 5, 6.

III. The Danger of it. Verily they have &c.

Suppoſe now, one may be ſo in love with the praiſe of men, as he is altogether out of love with an inviſible faſt, and muſt needs looke a little that way; what harme will come of it? Amen dico vobis, quia receperunt mercedem ſuam: This muſt needs be their puniſhment; for, there is none other but this. And ſure, as ſtrange a puniſhment, as you ſhall read of: To ſay Amen to that, one deſires; to ſay, one ſhall receive a reward. Can it be a puniſhment to receive, to receive a reward, and a reward of our owne deſiring? It is ſurely none. You doe it, to be ſeene; you ſhall be ſeene to be praiſed; why, you ſhall be praiſed: This is your end; your end be it. You hunger and thirſt for mens praiſe, faine you would have it; you ſhall have it; There it is, take it to you, much good doe it you with it. Call you this a puniſhment, to receive a reward, to have ones deſire? Surely, it ſeemes but an eaſy one, if it be one.

True, if the reward be worth the while, firſt. And ſecondly, if by receiving it, we forfeit not one incomparably greater. But, in theſe two caſes, 1 If the reward be but ſome ſleight thing, little worth: 2 And then, if by getting it, we loſe another above all worth, then have wee no great cauſe to rejoyce at our receiving: then, in ſtead of a reward, it is a puniſhment, ſay I; and that an heavy one, whenſoever both theſe caſes meet.

1 Their Reward (popular praise) is slight.

Now, both these cases meet here. First, it is but a poore thing, they receive. Shall we value it, as it is? I meane this goodly reward of popular praise, which they so itch after. What is the popularitie, but a sort of men nothing judiciall? Not one among a hundred. Not praising, but out of passion (lightly) if that: and not constant in that passion neither.

2 As not judiciall.

Luk. 6. 26.

Praise if it be judiciall, is somewhat worth; and so worth the desiring. The popular is not so. CHRIST saith; they have alwaies spoken all good of the false Prophets: as for the true, they have ever followed them with all disgrace: And, then, what judgement is there in them? CHRIST himselfe will ye heare their verdict of Him? Some there was said, Hee was a good man; but some other (and the greater summe) said, No, but a very seducer, a coosener of the people: And then, who can thinke, there is any judgement in them? In the XIX. of the Acts, the whole multitude was together, and when Demetrius had set them in for two houres together they never left crying, Great is Diana: and the most part of them never knew why they were come together, nor why they cried so: And then, what judgement is there in them? No sure: out of lightnesse of mind; out of passion it is, they praise or dispraise, magnifie or vilifie a man, for the most part.

Ioh 7. 12.

Act. 19. 28. 32.

2 Not durable.

But is this (be it passion, or what it will) of any endurance? will it hold? No indeed: Sicut luna mutatur, Every new moone, a new mind; nay every quarter. No better witnesse of this, than our SAVIOVR himselfe, who heard Hosanna in the highest, and Not him but Barabbas, both, within the space of a sevennight. Saint Pauls was yet shorter; for he was first a murtherer, and sodainly, a God and no lesse, in a manner with one breath. There is their constancie; this, the hold you can have of it. No lock nor key, to shut up our reward in: No tenendum to our habendum, to hold it when we have it. And who then would much esteeme it?

But, say there were both lock and key; yet, what is praise but words? and words but wind? what is speech but breath? breath but aire? tenuissimus fructus, a thin reward (GOD wot.) For, what is more thin, than aire? This is sure, no great reward: Mihi pro minimo est: So, Paul makes but a minim of it, we make so much of.

1 Cor. 4. 3.

2 It is their finall Reward.

And yet even this, sleight as it is, were it onely to receive it, and that were all, there were no great hurt in it. But, now comes the hurt, For, when it shall come to this, that we are so to receive it, as in full payment: (for, so it is; not ἔχειν, have it; but ἀπέχειν, have it for all, that ever they shall have:) So to receive it; tanquam mercedem, as it shall be our last pay, our finall and full recompense and satisfaction, for all that ever wee have done; then it goes hard.

And that is it, CHRIST meaneth: And that is it, every good mind feareth: That here shall bee all; a few good words, a little warme breath, a blast of vaine praise, of a sort of vaine men. And when we have this, we have no more for ever to receive or looke for besides this. That, as CHRIST tels us (in the first Verse of the Chapter) this acceperunt inferrs an amiserunt: Acceperunt suum here, an Amiserunt meum elsewhere. And that, where (of all) we would least be without it. That the receiving of this, cuts us off from another, infinitely above and more worth than this. The reward we receive; nothing lesse to be regarded: the reward we lose, the damage we incur; nothing more to be feared. Lay these together, mercedem juxta mercedem, we shall find it a punishment; such a punishment, as no man would ever wish his very enemie more.

Of this Amen here, of these words [they have received their reward] you shall read in Saint Gregorie, that never did any saying so sound in his eares, so ruwne in his head, reigne in his heart, worke upon his conscience (as he deeply protests) as did these. This, he tooke for one of the most fearefull sayings in the whole Bible: that what he did here receive (were it praise, or preferment, or what other earthly thing) it should be his last receipt, his finall reward, his portion for ever, his Amen: for, Amen is the last word (wee know) that, ends all. For, so are we in a manner proceeded against, and deprived of all hope of further reward, at the last great receipt of all.

The

The praiſe of men, which we here ſought and found, ſhall deprive us of hearing Euge Serve bone; One ſyllable whereof is more worth, than all the Panegyricks that ever were. And not onely of that, but of Intra in gaudium Domini beſides, much more to be eſteemed than all the Evge's in the world, nay, than the world it ſelfe. That the winning of one ſhall be the loſing of the other. Matth. 21.23.

And now judge, whether this receiving be not a loſſe unvaluable; this reward a puniſhment unſufferable; this Amen, to be prayed againſt of all. Nay, whether there be any ſo penall a puniſhment, ſo heavie a cenſure: This ſhall be your puniſhment, that this ſhall be your reward; and, never more but this.

For, doe but aske: why doe they this wrong to their faces? To ſeeme to men to faſt. And what then? Then they ſhall be commended of men. And what then? Nay, there is all. And GOD comes to a point with them: ſaith, Let them be commended for it: And they have no wrong, they making it their end, if GOD make it ſo too.

To puniſh one by his owne deſires; to ſay (as GOD doth in Oſee) Becauſe Ephraim will have altars to Sinne, they ſhall be to Sinne; becauſe you make this your reward, it ſhall be your reward, take it for your reward: To ſay, So be it, to have our faſt conclude with the Hypocrites Amen: No more fearefull puniſhment in the world. Oſee 8.17.

* Knowing then this feare, wee perſwade, exhort, intreat men (and no otherwiſe, than CHRIST here doth) to faſt. And the Cum is now come: Now then to doe it. Not to doe it as theſe, yet in any wiſe to doe it. To faſt to GOD; not to the world: to our owne hearts, not to other mens eyes: to conſcience, not to forme. Not, to ſet us up a ſtage to doe it; but (with CHRIST) to doe it apart, in ſecret. And thinke not, if men ſee it not, it ſhall not be ſeene (be it never ſo ſecret:) that you ſhall doe it without witneſſe. Beſide the witneſſe, Teſtis in corde (ſet by the Heathen man at a thouſand witneſſes) there is (as Iob cals Him) Teſtis in cælo, One in heaven who ſees it; needs no light to ſee it by: whoſe theater is the darke, and beholds us as cleerely when the candle is put out, as when it burnes. Faſt then, doe it to be ſeene of Him: and being done not for men, but for Him, Him ſhall you be ſure of, to caſt His eyes to looke on it, to like it; to regard it and reward it, both. The Application. * 1 Cor. 5. 11. Iob 16. 19.

So much doth CHRIST undertake in the verſe following; and that, in His Fathers name: and ſeales it with His Verily, that moſt certaine it ſhall be ſo. Our ſecret faſt ſhall have His open reward. It may be, even here upon earth, He will make our light breake forth as the Morning. If here, He doe not; there, He will. The leſſe earth anſwereth, the more heaven reſerveth. [b] Euge Serve bone, in that day, is another manner praiſe; if praiſe be it: [c] Intra in gaudium Domini, another manner reward, than earth hath any. Both together [d] Merces magna nimis, ABRAHAMS reward, an exceeding great reward: [e] ſed non aſcendit in cor hominis, it exceedeth the heart of man, to thinke, how exceeding great. Eſay 58.8. [b] Matth. 25. 21. [c] Matth. 21. 23. [d] Gen. 15. 1. [e] 1 Cor. 2. 9.

Which reward Almightie GOD grant we may ſet before us, and ſeeke it in all our doings: So ſeeke it here on earth, in this life, as we may there finde it in heaven, in the life to come, to our endleſſe comfort and content, through CHRIST our LORD.

A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE KING IAMES, AT VVHITE-HALL, On the XXVI. of February, A.D. MDCXXIII. being ASH-WEDNESDAY.

MATTH. Chap. III. Ver. VIII.

---Progenies viperarum, quis demonſtravit vobis fugere a ventura ira?

Facite ergo fructum dignum pœnitentiæ (Vel, Proferte igitur fructus dignos pœnitentia.)

---O generations of vipers, who hath fore-warned you to flee from the anger to come?

* Or Repentance. Bring forth therefore fruits worthy * amendment of life.

I Speake of repentance, at the time of faſting, or of faſting, at the time of repentance, is no way out of ſeaſon: As tree and fruit, they ſtand. Of theſe fruits, faſting is one. And this, we now begin, a worthy fruit, ever from yeare to yeare, religiouſly brought forth in the Church of CHRIST. That, wee goe not from one, when we fall upon the other. The time of repentance will fall out to be a Cum jejunatis.

Repentance is here brought in, and preſented to us, as a tree with fruit upon it. The tree of GODS planting; The fruit medicinable; of the nature of a counter-poiſon, againſt our bane taken by the fruit of another tree. The fruit of the forbidden tree had envenomed our Nature: the fruit of this tree, to expell it, to recover and cure us of it. Gen. 3. 6.

Now, this Metaphore (of trees and fruit) puts us in minde, that the manner of fruit-trees is, once a yeare, they beare fruit. All doe ſo; once at leaſt: And if all, this tree likewiſe, within the ſame compaſſe, to bring forth hers.

And, though at no time repentance comes amiſſe; good all the yeare long; it may be be taken every day (for, repentance would be as familiar to us; as ſinne it ſelfe; and, as the one, ſo the other, daily:) Yet at ſome time, more then other; and at this time, moſt proper, for then we have ſpeciall uſe of it. That the body and the ſoule may keepe time: and, when we take phyſicke for the body, we may doe it likewiſe for the other. If all were well knowne, of the twaine, the ſoule hath more need.

This medicine it to be taken faſting; as the rules of Phyſicke are, and as medicines uſe to be. Men come neither eating nor drinking to take phyſicke: when we will take that wee take nothing elſe. Thus, faſting is a friend to Phyſicke both of ſoule and body. When we repent, no man will adviſe us to doe it upon a full ſtomacke, but Cum jejunatis.

Of this tree and fruit, GOD (knowing the great need we have) hath a ſpeciall care, wee bee not without it: that it be planted and growing ſtill in our gardens; and that it beare us fruit, whereof we have ſo continuall uſe. As that in Paradiſe, was termed the forbidden fruit; So may this (as truely) the fruit bidden, it is ſo enjoyned, ſo called for of us.

And that, firſt called for, and before all other, as the firſt fruits of the Spirit returning to GOD. There was a firſt Commandement in the Law: This, I may juſtly ſay, was the firſt Commandement of the Goſpell. Mat. 22.36.37.

Goe no further, but even where we are, where the Booke opens: Saint Iohn is at it, at firſt. It is his very firſt word [Repent] Sermo in apertione oris, the opening of his mouth. So beginns He: And ſo begins CHRIST; takes it up after him, word for word the ſame: Repent, for the Kingdome of heaven is at hand: neither more nor leſſe. It is the firſt fruit of their lips both. And as our SAVIOVR CHRIST begun with it himſelfe; So gives he it in charge to his Apoſtles; they with it, to beginne likewiſe. Both, when he ſent them to preach to the Iewes firſt; And againe after when, at His Aſcenſion, he renewed and enlarged their Commiſſion, and ſent them to all Nations. That, repentance firſt; (firſt that;) and then, remiſſion af ſinnes (after) ſhould be preached in His name. Verſe 2. Chap. 11.4. Chap. 10.7. Luk. 10.9.

Which was accordingly by them purſued. Ever, they ſtood on it, as the groundworke, the fundamentall point of all the reſt. So, it is expreſſely termed, Heb. VI. the foundation of repentance from dead workes. On which foundation, would GOD, more coſt were beſtowed: that, while we are buſy aloft on the Scaffolds, in our high points, the groundſills of Religion decay not for want of looking to. To lay them ſurely: Which S. Iohn doth here, and we may all learne of him. Heb. 6.1.

For, having begun (above at the II. ver.) with his pœnitentiam agite: when he ſaw, in the throng of his Auditorie, diverſe Scribes and Phariſees hypocrites, he knew where they would be ſtraight: (we ſhould have an Agite; a repentance with a pœnitentiall face, and all acted:) Repent? Yes, in any wiſe, that they would, and could doe it full well, and never trovble themſelves with any ſuch matter as fruit. This made him lay it a new; to his Agite, to put a Facite; to Agite pœnitentiam, a Facite fructus. Elſe, he diſclaimes fruitleſſe repentance. It is none of his: it will doe them no good: it will never quit them of the wrath to come. Verſe 3.

Where, we ſee the good of repentance, what it is: To free us from ira ventura propter peccata præterita: Which, theirs will never doe: Which none will ever doe, unleſſe, beſide pœnitentiam agite (that is, the Act) there bee alſo fructum facite, matter of fact beſides; ſome reall fruits. And S. Iohn askes, Who did it? and marvailes much that any ſhould doe it: teach them any other way, how to eſcape wrath to come. Tells them directly, there is no other way: but, that they doe but beguile themſelves, while they vainely imagine, to ſlip through GODS wrath with this fruitleſſe, formall, ſleight kind of repentance. Verſe 7.

If they will goe to it indeed, and doe it, and ſo doe it, as it may bee available to rid them of wrath to come, then muſt it not be barren, but bring forth: and that, fruit: and that, not ſuch ſleight and ſlender fruit, as they commonly poſt it over with, but worthy fruits, and ſuch as may well be ſeeme repentance indeed.

The

The Summe. The points, wee are to take into our conſideration, are: 1 That there is wrath to come; 2 but, it is yet but to come. That it will come. There is no falling into it when it comes: nor no abiding, till it comes. Fly from it we muſt, and flye from it we may. It may be fled from, is in the text: we may be ſhewen a way, how. Who ſhall ſhew it us? That will Saint Iohn here; who well can: He was ſent to prepare it. But (it ſeemes) we may be ſhewed a wrong way too; the Phariſee's way: But Saint Iohns is the right. He that takes any other, the wrath of GOD will come on him, which is to come upon all impenitent ſinners.

The Diviſion All which may be reduced to theſe two heads, which Saint Iohn would have imprinted in them and us: 1. There is no flying GODS wrath, but by a true repentance. 2. There is no true repentance, without fruits, and thoſe worthy, and well becomming it. Bring forth fruits therefore.

Of which words there is not any one waſt or to ſpare. Every one of them is verbum vigilans (as Saint Auguſtine ſpeakes) awake all; never an one aſleepe among them. Pro. 25. 11. Each hath his weight. Nor, never an one out of his place, but (as Salomon ſpeakes) upon his right wheele, ſtanding juſt where it ſhould. Wee will take them as they lie. I. II. III 1. Bring forth. 2. Bring forth fruit. 3. Bring forth fruit therefore: wherefore? That you may flie the wrath to come: There, will that fall in. It is the IV. onely true way: Let no man teach you any other way to flye it. 4. Then, fruits of repentance. And, if repentance beare fruits, then it is a tree. 1 Of the tree then firſt, V. that beares them. 2 Then, of the fruits it beares: Repentance's fruits. 5. And laſt, that they be worthy fruits of repentance. Bring forth fruits therefore, &c. So fall they in order, of themſelves. To order them otherwiſe, were but to diſ-array them and doe them wrong.

I. Bring forth: carrie not in. Bring forth. At which, at the very firſt, we ſhall have ſome ſticking, as the world goes. All, in carrying in: little in bringing forth. For, to take our Age at the beſt, and our ordinary Profeſſors in the prime of their profeſſion, and this is our vertue; we carry well in; we are ſtill carrying in: but nothing, or as good as nothing comes from us, bring we forth. So, this word comes very oppoſite to our times. All our time, is ſpent in hearing; in carrying in Repentance ſeeds, and other good ſeeds many. All, in hearing in a manner; none, in doing what we heare: None, in bringing forth repentance, or any other good fruit.

Act. 17. 20. At Athens they ſayd to Saint Paul: Nova quædam infers auribus noſtris. It is our caſe right, infers auribus: but, it is an infers without a profers; any profers at all. In, at our eares, there goes I know not how many ſermons: and every day more and more, if we might have our wills. Infers auribus, into the eares they goe; the eare and all filled, and even farced with them: but there, the eare is all.

1 Cor. 12. 17. It puts me in mind of the great abſurdity, as Saint Paul reckons it. What, is all hearing? (ſaith he) All hearing? Yes: all is hearing with us. But, that all ſhould be hearing is as much as if all one's body ſhould be nothing but an eare, and that were a ſtrange body. But, that abſurdity are we fallen into. The corps, the whole body of ſome mens profeſſion; all godlineſſe with ſome, what is it, but hearing a ſermon? The eare is all, the eare doth all that is done: and but by our eare-marke, no man ſhould know us to be Chriſtians. They were wont to talke much of Auricular Confeſſion: I cannot tell, but now, all is turned to an auricular Profeſſion. And (to keepe us to Proferte) Our Profeſſion is an inning Profeſſion. In it goes, but brings nothing out; nothing comes from it againe.

Chap. 13. 3. But, Proferte, bring forth (ſaith Saint Iohn;) bee not alwaies loding in. And there is reaſon for it. As, there is a time for Exiit qui ſeminat ſeminare ſemen ſuum (in the Parable Parable) wherein the Sower goeth forth and carrieth with him good ſeed, and caſts it in. So is there a time too (ſaith the Pſalme:) for Rediit meſſor ferens manipulos ſecum, that the Reaper comes backe and brings his ſheaves with him; the ſheaves, which the ſeed (he carried in) brought forth. But, with us, it is otherwiſe. For, a wonderfull thing it is, how many Sermons, and Sermons upon Sermons (as it were, ſo many meaſures of ſeed) are throwen in daily; and what becomes of them, no man can tell. Turne they all to wind? or runne they all thorow? for, fruit there comes none. Omnia te adverſum, all in: Nulla retrorſum, None out. It went hard (ſaith Aggee) when, for twenty meaſures of ſeed, there came but ten of graine; but halfe in halfe: Why, wee would thinke our ſelves happie, if that were our caſe. Nay, it was worſe with Eſay; an Homer of ſeed yeelded but an Epha of corne; that, was but one in ten. It were well with us, might one but ſay that: for, that were ſomewhat yet. To be wiſhed, we might ſee more: but, till more come, ſee but even that. Pſal.126.6. Agge 2.16. Eſay 5.10.

Now, that ground (ſaith the Apoſtle) that receives ſuch a quantitie of Seed, and returnes no more for it, is neere a curſe. And that tree (ſaith the Goſpell) that was well leaved, and no fruit found on it, was ſo neere, that it had a curſe. And thoſe eares that have (I know not how many) Sermons and Lectures, and all in a manner ſine fructu, without any fruit that can be ſeene, are not farre from it, from a curſe. Hebr.6.8. Chap.21.19.

Which I would not have drawne to be ſpoken any way againſt hearing; but againſt our evill proportioned hearing: Not to ſlake our devotion in receiving good Seed; but, to make a conſcience, in ſome degree to proportion our fruit to our ſeed: To reduce our inferte and our proferte to ſome analogie. For, if there be an analogie of faith; So is there of hearing alſo. Sure, if the body thrive not with it, and yet be alwayes hungry, it is no good ſigne. It is a diſeaſe, which they call Βουλιμία, or Canina appetentia; and would be looked to.

Well; there hath beene old carrying in, and little elſe: let us have ſome bringing forth another while. Be not alwayes lading in: Bring forth ſomewhat: Elſe, we ſtumble at the very threſhold of the Text; and are not come to the firſt word of it, Proferte, Bring forth.

II. Bring forth fruit, not leaves

Bring forth fruit. With much adoe, at laſt ſomewhat there comes. Forth they bring; but what is it? It is well knowne, trees bring forth ſomewhat elſe, before fruit. And, ſomewhat brought forth there is, but it is but leaves. Fruit it ſhould be, leaves it is: there is all our product. So that here, wee ſhall be ſtaid againe. Leaves come of the kernell, as well as the fruit: So doth chaffe, of the Seed, as well as good graine. What of that? Wee plant not for leaves; nor wee ſow not for chaffe. Wee count that no bringing forth. Quid palea ad triticum? (ſaith the Prophet:) And, Quid foliis ad fructum, may wee ſay? It is not chaffe, or leaves; fruit it is, wee are willed to bring forth. Ierem.13.28.

Vitis frondoſa Iſraël we finde in HOSEE, and Ficus frondoſa, we have in the Goſpell. A Vine and a Fig-tree, that brought forth, both; and ſo paſſed the firſt; but ſtumble at this ſecond: For, fruit it was not: But, as for leaves, well taken both; ſtore of them. And ſo, to many a tree ſhall CHRIST come among us, and finde leaves poſſibly; but, that will not ſerve. It is Bring forth fruit. What became of HOSEA's Vine, we may there reade: what, of the Fig-tree, we all know. Hoſ.10.1. Chap.21.19. Verſ.6,7.

Will you know, what theſe leaves be? Saint Auguſtine tells us (No man can doe it better:) It is, to heare a Sermon, and to praiſe the Preacher: There comes ſomewhat; ſome leaves. His words are: Audiſtis, laudâſtis, Deo gratias; Semen accepiſtis, verba reddidiſtis. Laudes veſtræ gravant nos potius, & in periculum mittunt. Toleramus illas, & tremimus inter illas. Tamen fratres mei, laudes veſtræ folia ſunt: modò fructus quæritur. You heare, and you commend (ſaith Auguſtine:) well, thankes bee to GOD. Good ſeed you receive, good words you give backe. Theſe good words profit us not; peradventure, doe us hurt other-while. Beare with them wee muſt; tremble at them wee ſhould. Yet, when all is done (good Brethren) good words are but leaves; and it is fruit, fruit is What the leaves be.

it, we preach for. Not the fruits of your lippes; they be but leaves: but, fructus operis, that fruit.

Now, if you marke, what it is our beſt Sermons bring forth, we ſhall eaſily obſerve, the moſt is a few good words of ſome point or other in the Sermon, handled (peradventure) not amiſſe: and (heare you) well, if that: but, if that, looke for no more; there's all. And this leafe, it laſts not long neither; fades quickly, as did the leaves of IONA'S gourd: One day greene, the next drie.

Ion. 4.7.

And, is this the fruit of our labours? Is not this the Phariſees Accepiſtis mercedem veſtram? If the fruit of our labours be but the fruit of mens lips, we are like to make but a cold reckoning of it, to inherit the wind. As if we came hither to bring forth a leafe of praiſe; to preach art, and not Spirit: Art, to draw from men a vaine applauſe; And not Spirit, to bring forth the fruits of the Spirit, fructifying to newneſſe of life, by fructus facite; fruit, that may abound to your account and ours: Yours, that did; Ours, that preached to have them done.

Prov. 11.29.

The onely true praiſe of a Sermon is, ſome evill left, or ſome good done, upon the hearing of it. One ſuch fruit, ſo brought forth, were a more ample commendation, than many mouthes full of good words ſpent, and copies taken, and printing, and I wot not what. And ſure it is, On whom a Sermon workes aright, it leaves him not leaſure to ſay much, to uſe many words, but makes him rather full of thoughts. And when all comes to all, fructus factus, the deed done, is it. And, it is no good ſigne in a tree, when all the ſap goes up into leaves; is ſpent that way: Nor, in an auditor, when all is verball that comes, and nothing elſe: No reality at all.

Act. 2. 37.

Saint Iohn himſelfe (in the next words following) tells us, the fruit hee meanes, it is not Dicentes: And begin not (ſaith hee) to Say: For, it is no matter of ſaying, either to your ſelves, or to others. This is but a greene leafe; and, with the fruit, doth not amiſſe; without it, is little worth. It is not repentance in the leaves, but with the fruit, he calleth for.

Verſ. 9.

I will ſhut up this point with Saint Auguſtines prayer, before one of his Sermons: That GOD would vouchſafe, quod utiliter meditatum eſt cor meum, what my heart hath profitably thought on, to bring it thence into my tongue, and from thence into your eares, and from thence into your hearts, and from thence into your deeds; that ſo, all may end in Proferte fructus, Bring forth fruits.

III.

Bring forth fruit, therefore. The Root or reaſon.

Proferte fructus igitur. Igitur, every where you finde, ſlippe it you muſt not: the whole weight of the ſentence lyeth upon it. There is in it the ground and reaſon, wherefore; And ſo is indeed the root, all theſe fruits muſt grow from. And the Prophet's Rule is, To looke to the root downward, before to the fruit upward. Firſt then, to finde a wherefore for this therefore. Therefore, is the knowne note of a concluſion: Then muſt there be a Syllogiſme: and here it is, Quicunque vult, Whoſoever of you will fly from the wrath to come, hee is to bring forth fruit worthy of repentance: But you are all of this minde, that you would fly from the wrath to come; Bring forth fruit therefore.

Eſay 37.31.

Flying from the wrath to come.

We muſt then caſt our eye backe to this flying from the wrath to come, which is the medius terminus, or cardo, whereupon all the argument runnes, and the very life of the whole inducement. There is wrath to come: That muſt you fly from: Fly from it you cannot, but by this igitur: Proferte fructus igitur.

Many are the Therefore's, why we ſhould repent, and of divers natures. The goodneſſe of GOD (ſaith the Apoſtle) doth (even) lead us to repentance: And well is him that will be led. But, theſe (here) would not lead. Saint Iohn had uſed that before (Verſ. 2.) Doe it; Repent, and the Kingdome of Heaven is at hand, hard by you. One would thinke, this would have done it; have even led them to it. It ſtirred them not: He is faine to lay Heaven by, and the life, joy, glory to come; And to take him to hell, to the anguiſh, tribulation, torments there (for, all theſe are in the wrath to come.) So, to drive them (if it may be) to it, ſince leading will not ſerve.

Rom. 2.4.

Verſ. 2.

Strange:

Strange: but ſuch is our indoles. The Kingdome of Heaven workes not with us, as doth Wrath to come: So doth ſinne bewitch us. For the loſſe of Heaven, if that were all, we would never abſtaine from it: if no ira ventura, never care for the loſſe of Heaven. Repent, or you loſe Heaven, will not: Repent, or you muſt to Hell (the place of wrath to come) that bites ſoone; that makes an Igitur; that will move us: And, to fly from it, make us fly to Repentance.

Saint Iohn takes the courſe to ſhew us ſomewhat to come: Hee chooſeth ventura: For, the things preſent carry us and keepe us from repentance. Preſent good cheere, preſent ſport and mirth, preſent good company, preſent twentie things elſe, they make us no fit ſoile, for theſe fruits to grow in. But then (as GOD would have it) beſides theſe preſent things, there are ventura, ſome other to come, that would be thought on. For, in all our jollitie, before wee venture too farre, it will not bee amiſſe, to looke to thoſe ventura, and what will come of it. There is an ira ventura for peccata præterita. Ventura, It is ſomething to come.

Knowing the vertue of this peece of perſpective, Moſes doth wiſh but this, ô Si, O that men would but looke לאחריתה, looke but that way, to the hindmoſt dayes, to the latter end! There is ſomewhat, there, worth our ſight. The Prophets doe the like: Populus meus dilexit talia (it is Ieremie:) My People, this ſinne they like; and that ſinne they love, Sed quid fiet in noviſſimo, but what will be the End of this? What will become of it, at the laſt? Yea, our Bleſſed SAVIOVR Himſelfe (and He ſhould move us) moſt earneſtly with teares in His eyes: O that thou hadſt knowne in this thy day! and could not ſpeake out the reſt for weeping: His meaning was, the ventura, what was to come upon them. So much doth it import us, ſometime to open a window that way. The clapping it to, and the putting them from us out of our ſight, makes us, we care not, never looke after the tree, or the fruit. Ventura would much helpe forward this Proferte fructus igitur. Deut. 32.29. Ier. 5 31. Luk. 19.41, 42.

Theſe Ventura (three of them) follow here cloſe in the tenth and twelfth verſes: 1 the Axe, 2 the Fanne, 3 and the Fire: I will onely touch them. The Axe firſt: For ſure, our dayes be numbred: there is a line ſtretched upon every one of our lives, and it is no long line neither, quia velox eſt depoſitio tabernaculi hujus, the taking downe of this tabernacle is not farre hence: death will come with his axe and downe we goe. For, it is not (ſaith Saint Iohn) laid to the branches, but, to the root; and then, we are paſt fruit-bearing for ever. Proferte fructus igitur. What that ventura is. 1 The Axe. 2 Pet. 1.14. Verſe 10.

After the Axe, comes the Fanne, to ſhew whether our bringing forth be corne or chaffe; which is our doome after death. So long agoe told of by old Enoch in his Maranatha, that the LORD will come, come to Iudgement: Et omnes ſtabimus, and we ſhall all ſtand before His Iudgement Seat, and the fan goe over us: And there, by theſe fruits here; and by theſe fruits onely, all ſhall goe: for, none is in Heaven, but by it. Sinners, both they in Heaven, and they in Hell: Onely, this difference; they in Heaven had theſe fruits, they in Hell had them not. And then, ſeeing they will be all in all, Proferte fructus igitur. 2 The Fanne. Verſ. 12. Iude 14.

Theſe two ventura, come they will to all, and to all alike: we heare not of wrath yet? But, here it comes. I goe further and aske, Ventura, to come: to come, what? Ira ventura, wrath to come. Whoſe wrath? His, who when He hath killed the body, can caſt both bodie and ſoule into hell fire. Luke 12.5.

For, after the Fanne comes the Fire. The fanne divides the corne and the chaffe, ſends each to his owne place, the Corne to the Garner, the chaffe to the fire; and every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit, thither too. Proferte fructus igitur: Elſe, how will you ſcape the wrath to come (ſaith Saint Iohn?) How will you ſcape the damnation of hell (ſaith CHRIST?) and meane the ſame thing. That of CHRIST is but a Commentary of this of Saint Iohn. Ire and fire are but one thing. 3 The Fire. Verſ. 12. Chap. 22.33.

Now the noiſe of fire will ſtartle any of us even at midnight, out of his dead ſleepe. Of any fire: but, much more, of this: Non eſt iſte ignis ſicut qui ardet in foco tuo (ſaith Auguſtine). This fire is another manner fire, than that on our harthes. Why? ours may bee quenched: that, is (ſaith the twelfth verſe) unquenchable fire. A worme ever Matth.9.44.46. gnawing, and never dying: So doth our SAVIOVR deſcribe it: a flame ever burning and never going out.

Eſay 33.14. Now will I but aske the Prophet Eſay's queſtion, (Chap. 33.) Who of us can dwell in conſuming fire? That, is our fire, which as it conſumes, ſo will it be conſumed it ſelfe: But then, he comes over againe, But who is able to abide in everlaſting burnings? That can none doe: Proferte fructus igitur. This (loe) is the wrath, the very dregs of the wrath to come. But who regardeth the power of this wrath? They (I feare me) leaſt, that ſhall feele it moſt.

I have purpoſely ſtood upon this a little, For that, as upon this day they were wont, by the ceremonie of giving aſhes, to put men in minde of this fire. For, aſhes were not given to put men in minde of their mortalitie: duſt had beene more proper to have done that. Our mortalitie is grounded upon Pulvis es & in pulverem. But, aſhes, they come not without fire: where they are, fire muſt have beene firſt. And ſo, they muſt meet to repreſent fire and make us thinke of it. The aſhes, they be blowen away; but, not the memorie of them (I hope.) Whatſoever becomes of the ceremony, the ſubſtance would not be blowen away after it. Sure, theſe aſhes laid well to the root of the tree, it hath beene thought, will make it beare the ſooner. The preſent feare of future wrath for ſinnes paſt, will put ſome force into this Igitur: If this will not, nothing will. This, or nothing make the ſap to aſcend: This, or nothing bring them forth.

The comfort of ventura, it may bee fled from.

[a] Scientes igitur terrorem hunc: you have ſeene the terror: Shall I open you a [b] doore of hope in the valley of Achor? All is not terror in ventura: there is ſome comfort, that it is but to come (this wrath;) it is yet to come. So, while it is yet to come, there is time given us to take order for it, before it come: That the fruit may come before the wrath, and not the wrath before the fruit: for then we are gone for ever.

a 2 Cor. 5. 11.
b Hoſea 2. 15.

There is another comfort: That though the axe and the fanne ſhall come upon all; and none fly from either of them, ſo ſhall not wrath. That ſhall not come upon all; but all may, and ſome ſhall fly from it. Fly from it (I ſay) for, there is no meeting it, no abiding of it when it comes: No ſtanding it out, but fly from it we muſt (ſaith the Text;) and fly from it we may. There is a right way, if we may be ſhewed it; and there is no right way, but one, and who will ſhew us that? That will Saint Iohn teach us. He prepares it, and he is beſt able; and he knowes no way but by Proferte igitur.

By proferte.

But if there be a flight, there is no flying it, not with the wings of an Eagle; not with the ſix wings of a Seraphin: Only the wings of repentance will fly from it. But, there is no flight entended: Proferte igitur will ſerve: Only ſtand and beare this fruit, and it ſhall be a Superſedeas to all wrath to come. You need not fly; you need not ſtirre, no more than a tree; but keepe your ſtanding, and beare your fruit, and it ſhall not come neere you, but fly over you, as did the deſtroying Angell, their houſes in Ægypt. To come it is (this wrath:) fly from it we may: This, the way to doe it.

Exod.12.23.

Yea, this is one Way: but, is there no way but this? It ſeemes, there was ſome bodie ſhewing ſome other way beſides, that Saint Iohn was a little ſtirred, and asked, Who hath ſhewed you it, who? Whoſoever he was, he had ſhewed them a wrong way. So that, even then, even in CHRIST'S time and Saint Iohns, ſome there were that tooke a phanſie, they had found a neerer way to cut betweene, to fly this wrath, and yet let tree and fruit alone, and care for neither. And (as it followes) by a dicentes intra ſe, ſaid within themſelves (ſomewhat ſtrange things men will ſay there) Fruits are for them, that have not Abraham for their Father, but we have him for our Father: and ſo tooke themſelves privileged from fruit-bearing, by that. CHRIST ſhewes them their folly: Have you ſo, have you Abraham to your Father, then doe the works of Abraham: that is, Bring forth the fruits that he did. For, Abraham himſelfe brought forth theſe fruits; went no other way but this, by Proferte igitur.

Iohn 8. 39.

The ſame may be ſaid to another Dicentes intra ſe of ſome of us. We have ABRAHAM to our Father, So they: We have CHRIST to our SAVIOVR, ſo wee: and make a ſhort cut and ſteppe to CHRIST ſtraight, and lay hold on Him by faith, without any more adoe: Thruſt by Saint IOHN BAPTIST; him, and his repentance, both. Indeed, ſo ſome goe (but, with more haſte than good ſpeed) that vainly ly imagine to come to remiſsion of ſinnes, per ſaltum, over repentance head. But, it will not be: Eſay's qui crediderit, ne feſtinet, is good counſell in this ſenſe; Not to caſt away all, with making too much haſte, but take Saint Iohn in their way. To him it is ſaid, Thou ſhalt goe before His face to prepare His way: And, but by that way he prepares, CHRIST will not be come to. If he prepare one way, and you goe another, you will never come at CHRIST. Therefore he wonders Quis oſtendit? who had ſhewed them any other way. Saint Iohn knew it not; CHRIST knew it not: And I cannot tell what to ſay, but, they that goe it, I pray GOD, it deceive them not. Luke 1.76.

But, for this [of no other way] CHRIST Himſelfe is more peremptory than Saint Iohn. See you any, Heare you of any that periſh? Niſi, &c. unleſſe you repent, and ſcape that way, ſo ſhall you too: that is flat. There is no Iron, no Adamant bindes ſo hard, as CHRISTS Niſi. If any but CHRIST had ſaid it, we might have ſought ſome evaſion: Now when it is He that tells us, there are but two wayes, 1 Repent, or 2 Periſh, chooſe you whether; Repent here, for a time; or periſh there under GODS wrath for ever; Not to repent, and not to periſh, is not poſſible. Luke 13.3.5.

Which Dilemma of CHRISTS (no way to be avoided) makes, of the twaine to chooſe this fruit of Repentance, rather than to fall into the Wrath to come: To fly to the one, to fly from the other: which otherwiſe wee are of our ſelves but coldly affected to. For, though it be ſomewhat bitter (this fruit) yet (ſure wee are) if it were ten times more, the bitter paines of ira ventura, are farre beyond it. Now, the Phyſicke of the bodie and ſoule ſtand upon one Maxime both, Melior eſt modica amaritudo in faucibus, quàm æternum tormentum in viſceribus: Better the bitter Electuarie than a burning Ague: Better a ſhort diſtaſte in the mouth, than a perpetuall torment in the bowels. Better Repent NINIVE for fortie, than no NINIVE at fortie dayes end. Ion. 3 4.

Shall we conclude then with the Pſalmiſt, What man is he that would deliver his Soule from the wrath to come? And they all began at once to ſay; that would I: Yea, even they that ſhall not eſcape it, will yet ſay, That would I. Why, by the bringing or not bringing forth of this fruit all goes; depends the comming, or not comming of this wrath: Comming if you doe not; Not comming if you doe bring them forth. Proferte fructus igitur. Pſal. 34.12.

And, now we have beene at the root downward, to come upward to 1 the tree, 2 the fruits, 3 the worth of the fruits, (three points yet behinde) which will aske more time than is left; Nay, more than hath beene already ſpent; and ſo, the worke of ſome other time. A word or two, of Proferte, and I have done.

Firſt, take it not (this Proferte) by way of advice, or as the wiſh of a well-willing friend. No: Saint Iohn delivers it, quaſi authoritatem habens, as a Precept, or Injunction: the word will warrant it. To ſay, Doe this, belongs to authoritie; (the Centurion will tell you ſo:) and requireth obedience; Doe this, and He doth it.

1 proferte, a Precept. Marke 1.21. Chap. 8.9.

Then, beſide authority to enjoyne us, there is reaſon, to conclude us. It is not made a Propoſition barely, Doe; It is (beſide) a binding Concluſion, Bring forth therefore; whereto we in reaſon, to conforme our ſelves, and conclude, we will ſo bring them.

2 proferte igitur, a Concluſion.

Laſt, beſides both theſe, it bindes the harder by the penaltie annexed to it, As you will avoid the wrath to come: And falling into it, you fall from the fruition of Heaven to the damnation of hell. Which is pœna pœnarum, the penalty of all penalties moſt penall. This is the three-fold cord that bindes it about: Let ſome, or all of them prevaile with us, to bring them forth.

3 proferte, an injunction with a penaltie.

But oft it fals out, when we are agreed of the thing, we are not ſo, for the time. Will we at all bring them forth? If we will, we will take ſome time to doe it in. Some time: yes; that we all agree to. At what time then? It is not proponite, or promittite, purpoſe or promiſe to doe it, hereafter to bring them forth; but Proferte. What Tenſe is proferte? The Preſent: Do it then in preſent. It requires an act inſtantly to be done, Bring them forth out of hand. This is a ſmall note: but, it is no ſmall matter, to get this ſmall note borne well away; to get our Repentance into the Preſent Tenſe.

4 The Time: now, Proferte, in the Preſent Tenſe.

In the Aoriſt, ποιήσατε. Nay, then it ſits neerer: For, to tell you the truth as it is, The word, is not Bring forth, at this time, now; then, it ſhould bee ποιεῖτε, in the Preſent: But, it is not: It is ποιήσατε, in the Aoriſt; (a tenſe the Latine hath not, nor our Tongue neither.) It ſignifies rather, Have done bringing forth; rather, than Bring forth preſently. And I would to GOD we had even done ſo; had done bringing them forth; for then, all feare were paſt. Ventura is to come, but come it will; and, when we know not. Both, are yet to come (for ought I ſee) wrath, and our fruit. If the fruit come before the wrath come, it is well: But, if the wrath come, before the fruit come, where are we then? Wee are paſt recovery.

But, what ſpeakes hee to us, of having done? We have ſcarſe yet begunne, ſcarſe ſet the root that ſhould beare this fruit. Well yet, this ſhewes us, it is time wee were about it, ſeeing Saint Iohn ſaith, it is more than time, wee had done bringing them forth.

But well, to take no advantage of that tenſe, wee will be content with the preſent, if wee may obtaine that. And ſo would hee have it, now: For, now (ſaith he) is the axe laid to the root: Now then, or not at all. Nay, not now: this is not a time; we have appointed other buſineſſe which we cannot put off. Well, one queſtion more will make an end; if not at this time, at what time? If not now, when? But then, this muſt be ſet downe, now before we ſtirre hence; And ſo ſet downe, as if it be not now, it be as neere now, as may be, for feare ventura come not too ſoone, and take tree and all. This is ſure; the ſooner the better, becauſe the more likely; the later, the worſe, becauſe the leſſe certaine.

That time more than a moment. But, when wee ſpeake of the preſent, wee ſhut it not up in ipſo nunc, in a day or two, or three. Fruits require a time to bring them forth: who ever heard of fruits brought forth on a ſudden? Saw ever any man ſuch a thing? (It is Eſay) Shall the tree bring, or the fruit be brought forth at once? A Gourd or a Muſhrome may ſhoot up in a night; So cannot fruit: It askes time. I take it to be an errour, and that of dangerous conſequence; teaching repentance, to thinke it a matter of no more moment, than to be diſpatched in a moment. Commonly, our repentance is too ſoone done.

Eſay 66.8.

Application to Lent. Apoc. 2 21. Ion. 3.4. GOD knew it well; and therefore Hee allowes a time for it: Ecce dedi ei tempus (ſaith Hee to the Church of Thyatira) Hee gave a time to repent, to bring forth theſe fruits. What time might that bee? Hee never gave certaine time, but to Ninive; and that was fortie dayes. You know, where wee are now, and what that meanes.

Act. 24.25. We are not againſt allowance of time, ſo it be not to ſlip the collar, to be ſtill uncertaine. But, I like not his ſaying ὅταν εὐκαιρήσω, yea, when I finde a convenient time, then. He that ſaid it, never found it: had it then, never found it after.

But, if wee meane, as we ſay, would doe it at a convenient time, we cannot finde ſo convenient a time as this. Take it firſt, as the time of the Faſt; that time may ſeeme to claime a propertie in it. They goe alwayes together; In the Law, their ſolemne repentance was ever at the time of their generall Faſt. In the Prophets, Ioel tells us, the beſt turning to GOD (that is, repentance) is cum jejunio. They that had not the Law (as Ninive) Nature it ſelfe taught them to doe it faſting; when they tooke this fruit, to taſte nothing. In the Goſpell, Iohn Baptiſt the Preacher of repentance, came neither eating nor drinking. And our SAVIOVR though He did both, yet this faſt He kept, though not for any need Hee had of it Himſelfe, but (as in other) for Exemplum dedi vobis, to give us an example, and to point us that had need, what time to doe it in. Which hath ever ſince, from yeare to yeare beene religiouſly obſerved; both, as a time of publike penance, and as a time of Generall abſtinence in the Church of CHRIST, Convenient, for the time of Faſt.

Levit. 16.29. Ioel 2.12. Ion. 3.5. Chap. 11.18. Ioh. 13.15.

Pſalme 1.3. And, convenient, for the time of the yeare. For, if it will be the tree in the I. Pſalme, to bring forth fruit in due ſeaſon, this way it fits our turne: that ſeaſon is at this ſeaſon. It is now tempus proferendi: when can we better ſay Proferte fructus igitur? You can never bring forth at a better time. The ſeaſon is now come; and bringing forth will ſhortly be in ſeaſon, of which the Poet ſaith——Nunc omnis ager, nunc omnis parturit arbos, when the trees will fall in trauaile, and they and the earth (both) make proffer toward, and give pledges in their budds and bloſſomes, of fruit that is comming, and will follow in due time.

We are made theſe offers, chooſe which we will; If we will keepe time with the heavens, Now the heavens returne againe to their firſt degree: It is turning time in heaven. If with the foules of heaven (and them CHRIST bidds us looke to) they know their times juſt, and juſt at this time make their returne; the poore ſwallowes and all: And ſo let us; that the prophet Ieremie upbrayd us not with them. So, whether we will goe by heauen and the fowles of heaven; or, by earth and the fruits of the earth, they all invite us to the diſpenſation of this ſeaſon. Yea, if we will give our ſoules leave to keepe time with our bodies, the time we take phyſicke for one, may be (if we will) allowed in like ſort for the other: The opening of the yeare for both. Equall need is of both: if any odds, on the ſoules ſide.

Chap.8.16.

Ier.8.7.

Nay, it hath ſo fallen out, that Repentance, Faſting, and the very ſeaſon of the yeare (for the moſt part) hit together. That of Ninive the moſt famous: by the ſpringing up of Iona's gourd, we may gheſſe, what time it was: we know what time it is, when gourds ſpring. And, for our SAVIOVR CHRISTS, if we will take up His time, it is ſuppoſed, He layd His alſo much about this time. For, when the people were baptized, then was CHRIST alſo with them, as Saint Luke ſaith: And immediately after His Baptiſme, He was carried away into the wilderneſſe, and there began His fourty dayes faſt. Exemplum dedi vobis, A paterne for us; both for our faſt, and for our time of it.

Luc.3.22. 4.1.

It is true, the ſolemne faſt in the Law, was in Tiſri, which anſwers our September: But then, take this withall; when it was ſo in Tiſri, Tiſri was with them their firſt moneth. So they alſo began their repentance with the beginning of the yeare.

And, take this beſides, that, in that firſt month, the trumpetts firſt blaſt of all, was to aſſemble them to their Kipher, their great Repentance-day. That, was their firſt worke of all.

Now I ſhall tell you, how it was. Between the FAST and the Sabboth, it is well knowen, there was neer allyance, inſomuch as the Faſt is called a Sabboth, and both are ſaid to be ſanctified. Sanctifie a faſt, as well as Sanctifie the Sabboth. Their Sabboth was the ſeventh day; their Faſt was the ſeventh month. And it may well be thought, by whom and when the Sabboth was removed from the ſeventh day to the firſt; by the ſame perſons, and at the ſame time, was the Faſt removed from the ſeventh month to the firſt, from Tiſri to Niſan the firſt moneth of all. Now Niſan is alſo called Abib of the firſt bringing forth fruits in it.

Ioel.2.15.

Now, in Nisan, was the time when their Paſchall Lambe was ſlaine and eaten. The ſame is alſo the time of the killing of ours; of Saint Iohn Baptiſts Lambe, the Lamb of GOD; when CHRIST our Paſſeover was offered; Offered for us in Sacrifice; Offered to us in Sacrament; to whom Saint Iohn Baptiſt will point us to take ſpeciall notice of Him, and of His time both.

Ioh.1.29. 1 Cor.5.7.

And we, now at this time, to ſet thoſe ſowre herbes and ſee them come up, wherewith the Paſſeover is to be eaten; which are nothing elſe but theſe fruits of Repentance. Now, to ſet them; that, then, we may gather them to ſerve us for ſawſe to the Paſchall Lambe. Thus every way, we may ſay (with the Apoſtle) Ecce, &c. Behold this is the due ſeaſon, Behold, now is the convenient time. Now then, Bring them forth.

Exod.12.8. 2 Cor.6.2.

And, now all that hath beene ſpoken would GOD, it might bring forth but this; that, ſeeing the time ſerveth ſo well, we can no way except to it, we would not ſlippe it. If we did but truly apprehend the words ira ventura, our eyes would not ſleepe, nor our eye-lidds ſlumber, nor the temples of our heads take any reſt, till we had taken ſtraight order with our ſelves, for the when, when it ſhould be; At what time we ſhould not faile but to doe it; and nothing ſhould let us, but performe it once to purpoſe, and ſeale to our ſelves this fruit; that, yet once we may aſſure our ſelves, we are in good earneſt, and that done it is, and ſuch and ſuch were the fruits, we had of it.

Pſal.132.3. 4.

A time, whensoever it shall happen, which will be to us no lesse memorable, than the day of our birth, or the day of our comming to any place or dignitie. And as much joy and comfort shall we take in the remembrance of it, as of any of them. The rest and repose, our spirits shall find upon the accomplishment of it, wlll be worth our paines, and abundantly recompense our going through with it.

And, when you come backe againe to Saint Iohn Baptist, and to bring him word, you have brought forth this fruit, he will then shew you AGNVS DEI: And, then is (indeed) the shewing of Him in kind, and the right time of Seeing Him. And, that sight shall be worth all: we will thinke, we never saw Him before.

Wee shall bee sure to fly the wrath to come. Nay, it shall fly from us; By us, or over us, but, from us sure Wrath shall fly; and in stead of it, the Kingdome of heaven shall come neere to us, and we to it. For, Repent, and it is at hand, say Saint IOHN and CHRIST, both. It is our daily prayer, it may come; and, this is the way to make it come. What shall I say? we shall sanctifie therby this time of fast; and as it hath ever beene counted, make it an holy time: And we in it, shall have our fruit in holinesse, and the end everlasting life.

A SERMON PREPARED TO BE PREACHED, on the Xth of February, A. D. MDCXXIV. being ASH-WEDNESDAY.

MATTH. Chap. III. Ver. VIII.

Proferte Fructus igitur dignos Pœnitentiæ.

Bring forth Fruits, therefore, worthy amendment of life (or, Repentance.)

OF this Text, three Points we have gone through; theſe three, 1 Proferte, Bring forth, be not alwaies carrying in: 2 Proferte fructus, Bring forth fruit; Leaves will not ſerve: 3 Proferte fructus igitur, Bring forth fruits therefore: Wherefore? That ſo you may eſcape the wrath to come. There is no way to eſcape it, but that. Now we goe on.

Bring forth fruits therefore. What fruits? Fruits of repentance; fruits growing on a tree called Repentance: For, the fruits ever carrie us to the tree that carries them. If we be to have fruit, it muſt be brought forth: If brought forth it muſt be, there muſt be a tree to bring it forth. That tree is Repentance.

The reaſon, that Saint IOHN in his whole Sermon runnes all upon this metaphor of tree and fruits, and axe, and root; that he, brings in Repentance as a tree, I have touched formerly. It ſeemes to referre us (this tree) to another, the forbidden tree. That tree had fruit: This tree to have ſo too. Tree for tree, fruit for fruit. The worthy fruits of Repentance, for the unworthy fruits of diſobedience. The fruit of that tree was our bane; the fruit of this to be our medicine. The fruit of that made ira ventura to come; The fruit of this will turne it away. Gen. 3. 17.

It is true; the fruits of this tree of Repentance, they were not primæ intentionis, firſt or principally intended. There was another a more excellent plant, called the tree of Innocence; the fruit whereof was, Ne peccetis, not to ſinne at all. There were no fruit to that, if it were to bee had. But, where ſhall wee find that? Where growes the tree that beares that fruit? Who is there that ſinneth not? The forbidden fruit was no ſooner taken, but, that tree withered and dyed; could never be got to grow in our nature ſince. No talking of that. Rom. 3. 23.

That

That tree failing, it pleaſed GOD, of His great Goodneſſe, to graft upon a new ſtocke, this ſecond plant, the Plant of Repentance: To the end it might ſerve for a Counterpoyſon: the fruit of it againſt the venome of the forbidden fruit. To the end alſo that it might ſerve Iob 33.26. to ſupply that other of Innocencie (they be Elihu's words in Iob) to reſtore unto man his innocencie. For, quem pœnitet peccâſſe pœne eſt innocens, (could the Heathen man ſay) the next degree to Innocencie, is Penitencie. That if wee cannot preſent GOD with the fruit of innocencie, at the ſeat of His Iuſtice, yet, with the fruit of Repentance, we may, at the throne of His grace.

And this Tree will grow in our ſoile; our ſoile will beare it, and with good tending, bring forth fruits, worthy fruits, which we may offer unto GOD, and Hee will take it in good worth. And this is the tree we muſt truſt to, now: and bleſſed be GOD, that ſo we may.

The Diviſion

I. To keepe us cloſe to our metaphore. We ſay firſt, that Repentance, if it be right, is no logge, no dry peece of wood: A tree it is; hath life in it; vegetable life at the leaſt.

II. 2 A tree, and that no barren tree: Such there bee, that for all their root, bring forth no fruit at all. This tree is a bearing tree, you may ſay Proferte to it. It will bring forth.

III. 3 Bring forth, and what? That, it was ſet for. It was not ſet for ſhadow, nor for fewell. It was planted for fruit, and fruit it is to bring.

IV. 4 But, will any fruit ſerve? No: trees there be that carry fruit, but fruit of no worth; porcis comedenda, for ſwine (perhaps) not for men. Neither for meat nor medicine. Neither meet to be preſented to GOD nor uſefull for the ſervice of men. So 1 a tree: 2 a bearing tree: 3 a fruit-bearing tree; and 4 the fruit it beares worthy the tree that beares it. 1 If it bee a dead ſtocke, and no live tree. 2 If it be a tree, but bare and barren; No proferte; Bring not forth. 3 If it bring forth, bee it what it will, if it be not fruit. 4 If it bee fructus and not dignos, fruit, but ſuch as is nothing worth, it comes not hence: Saint Iohn acknowledges it not. None of his tree, ſome baſtard ſlippe it is: None of his ſetting. His, lies faire before us. Bring forth therefore, &c. Of theſe foure we are to proceed. 1 Of the tree, 2 The bearing of the tree, 3 The fruit it beares, 4 The worth of
V. the fruit: and a word (if you will) of the fruit time, the time of all this; which will fall out to be at this very time.

I. Of the Tree. WE are to treat of Repentance, as a tree, firſt. To ſpeake properly, Repentance is a Vertue, a morall Vertue, a branch of Iuſtice, of Iuſtice corrective; and ſo ſhould be delivered in morall termes, as (in the Ethikes) other Vertues uſe to be. It is not, though: you ſhall ſeldome find it ſo: but moſt what ſet out in the termes of ſome one paſſion of the mind or other. And why ſo? For no other cauſe, but that wee are ſo dead and dull, when wee are about it (this buſineſſe) as if Repentance were a very logge, and no quicke or live tree. Which cannot be; Repentance being from
Heb. 6.1. dead workes, and therefore cannot be a dead thing it ſelfe, but have life in it. Marke it when you will, the HOLY GHOST (as it were of purpoſe) ſtill chooſeth to expreſſe it, under ſome terme of paſſion (as ſorrow, feare, anger, and the like) rather than the other way: Rather in Patheticall than in Ethicall termes. And this he doth in a manner continually. For, Paſſions be quicke; there is life in them. Therefore, their termes He chooſeth, to put life in us. To ſhew He would have us affectionate, when we are about this worke: and not ſo cold and ſo caſme, as we uſe to be. And indeed, theſe affections be the very radicall humour or ſap: If they goe up, there is hope of ſome fruit: If downe, and riſe not, no proferte to be looked for.

Now, if affections give life, the quicker the affection, the more life it gives. And there there is none quicker than that of Anger. For which cauſe, when time was, you may remember, we made it the chiefe Ingredient into Repentance. Even, Anger at our ſelves, we were ſo evill adviſed as to bring our ſelves into the anger of GOD. Whoſe anger when it comes, Quis poterit, who can, who is able? (that is, none can, none is able) to abide. And why found we it ſo? Becauſe moſt life and ſpirit appeares in that: Feare and Sorrow and the reſt, are but dull and heavy, in compariſon of it. Pſal. 129. 3.

And this, I now mention the rather, becauſe the paſsion of Anger (if you mark it) ſtrikes upon ira ventura in the Text: doth even in a manner leade us by the hand unto it. One anger, to another: GOD's anger, to ours: GOD's to come, to ours for the preſent. For by our anger for the preſent, we turne away His to come. Our anger is a ſuperſedeas to His. Or, if you will have it in termes of Iuſtice, or judging our ſelves we ſhall not be judged of the LORD.

But our anger, and (generally) all our affections are well compared to lime. Out of the water, where they ſhould bee hot, no heate appeares in them: in water where they ſhould bee cold, there they boile and take on. Vſed there moſt, where they ſhould bee leaſt: and againe leaſt, where they ſhould bee moſt. For, take mee a worldly man, and let him but over-reach himſelfe, in ſome good bargaine, in matter of profit, you ſhall ſee him ſo angry, ſo out of patience with himſelfe, as oft it caſts him into ſome diſeaſe. There (lo) is repentance in kind: there, is that which makes it a tree, the Spirit of life. Ours (for the moſt part) towards GOD is dull and blockiſh; neither life nor ſoule in it.

II. The Bearing of the Tree.

But we may not ſtand thus about the tree: Weare called on for Proferte, to bring ſomewhat forth: Elſe, how ſhall we know, it is a tree, and no logge? Small odds or none at all, betweene a dead ſtocke and a barren tree; one brings forth as much as the other. It is the bringing forth, that makes the difference.

Bringing forth is oppoſite to keeping in, wee muſt have no kept-in repentance. Forth it muſt come, forth it muſt be brought. From whence? from within. Carying in (before;) Keeping in (now:) all within's are againſt, utterly againſt Proferte.

Saint Iohn ſaw well, which way the world would goe. Men would have their repentance prove res intus peragenda, a matter to be ſpedde, diſpatched, ſhuffled up within, betweene their conſcience and them (forſooth.) And then they would tell you great matters, what they are within. There, within, they have it, that they have; where no body can ſee what they have. Vnder the buſhell much, but nothing on the candleſticke, that any man can ſee. So, in ſtead of Proferte, we ſhould have Præferte, nothing but pretending. Nay, no Præferte: Proferte (ſaith Saint Iohn:) No boſome repentance: Bring it out, ſhew it. For, upon Saint Iohn's Proferte is grounded Saint Iame's Oſtende mihi, Shew me thy faith: And it holds, in repentance too. Tell them not of a repentance under the ground; downe in the root; within, in the hollow of the barke; They will not heare of it, Vt in pœnitentiâ, ſola conſcientia præferatur, ſed ut aliquo etiam externo actu adminiſtretur: Not onely a pretence or faire ſhew to be made of our conſcience within, but ſome outward thing to be done and executed upon it: Somewhat to be brought forth. Take heed of this errour, as if repentance were a matter meerely mentall or intentionall. It is not, good notions in the braine, nor good motions in the minde will ſerve, theſe are but the ſap within: Look to the branches, what ſee you there? Looke to Proferte, what is brought forth. Mat. 5. 15. Iam. 2. 18.

III. The fruit it beares.

Bring forth then: And what? Many things doth a tree bring forth, and divers of them as fore-runners to the fruit, as boughs, and leaves, and budds, and bloſſomes. Saint Iohn mentions none of them; paſſeth by them all: ſtayes at none, till he come to the fruits. That is it, the tree was planted for. Not to make materialls, not to give ſhadow: Not for the greene boughs, nor the gay bloſſomes, nor for any thing but for the fruit. The tree is for the fruit; and, but for the fruit, there had beene no tree. Fruit it was, for which it was firſt ſet, and for which it is let grow: and when there is no longer hope

Luc. 13 7. of bringing forth fruit, downe with it (ſaith the LORD of the ſoile) why troubles it the ground any longer ? And then comes Ira ventura with his axe, layes it to the root, and downe it goes, and into the fire it is caſt: and ſeeing it will not ſerve for fruit, makes it ſerve for fewell; the end of all unfruitfull trees. Marke it well, this. It is the fruit of repentance; not repentance it ſelfe, but the fruit it is, is ſought for. That, is all in all. So, not only a bearing, but a fruit-bearing repentance.

And, good reaſon. For, if the one tree (ſinne) if that have brought forth fruit, ſo muſt repentance (the other tree) doe likewiſe. It is true, in ſinne, the ſenſe (and ſo, the ſoule) is firſt in fault. In at that gate it firſt comes, and out at that, it muſt firſt goe. But, ſinne hath her fruit in the body : So, is repentance to have hers too. Repentance is to bee incorporate, and bring forth her fruits in the body. The ſoule alone, not to bee put to penance; all layd upon it : The body to ſhare, as in the pleaſure, ſo in the paine.

Perhaps, in the ſinne, that lyes ſmoothering in the thought within, never comes in actum, there may be ſome queſtion, whether repentance alone may not ſerve. But, if it have brought forth the forbidden fruit (the body;) the body muſt have her fruit in repentance alſo. To both, ſayd it is, ſayd it muſt bee, Proferte igitur fructus.

That fruit is workes.

And what bee theſe fruits ? To let goe the metaphore, if you would know in plaine termes what fruits meane, Saint Paul will tell you without any figure. Hee ſaith (Act. 26. 20.) he preached; Men ſhould turne to GOD and doe works worthy of repentance. Looke yee : Saint Iohn's fruits (Saint Paul being his Commenter) are nothing but workes. Both meane the ſame thing : Saint Paul's workes are Saint Iohn's fruits : fruits and workes are all one. In omni opere bono fructificantes (It is the Apoſtles, Col. 1. 10.) Every good worke is a good fruit. To doe a worke then of repentance, is to bring forth the fruits of repentance.

There is no vertue at all but hath her proper act or worke : but not any vertue of them all, ſo proper as repentance. For, of repentance it is ſaid, agere pœnitentiam : So, it is not, of any beſides. That in a worke, it may ſeeme to claime a propertie, above and before all the reſt. And that it ſo requires an Act, as, no Act, no Repentance. Now becauſe we have taken up a diſtinction, that an Act is but a thing tranſient, but a fact, that is permanent. Therefore (to make all ſure) beſides pœnitentiam agere, you have quæ fructum non fecerit. So, both agere and facere, Act and Fact both. And the fact, that is the fruit, that, hath ſome reality in it. So ſome fruit is to come; Something to be done : Not, thought or ſayd; but done, actually done. Otherwiſe, fingitur non agitur pœnitentia (It is Auguſtine) we doe but dally, all is but counterfeit. No ſerious repentance, if ſomewhat be not done.

For, that ſomewhat is to bee done, is ſo ſure, as yee ſhall not find any man in the mind or way to repent, but (ever) his firſt queſtion is, What muſt I doe ? And that, even by the very inſtinct of reaſon. LORD what wilt thou have me to doe ? (Saint Paul's firſt words, when he began:) Quid oportet me facere ? The Gaolors firſt words (being now a Convert) to Saint Paul, when hee beganne. As much as to ſay : Somewhat I am to doe, if I knew what. Thrice together you have this queſtion here immediately after. Quid faciemus ? Say the Publicans r What ſhall we doe ? Say the Souldiers : What ſhall we doe ? Say all the People to Saint Iohn, when they came to the baptiſme of repentance. All agreeing in this, all implying, ſomewhat there was to be done, whatſoever it was : that the fruit of repentance is in the worke.

Act 16 30.
Luc. 3. 10. 12. 14.

And, what is that worke ? I will anſwer firſt in generall. In morall Divinitie (if wee goe that way) the proper worke of Iuſtice, is to give to each his due. Of corrective Iuſtice, to doe juſtice, to inflict correction, where it is due: And to ſinne it is due. The difference onely is: Correction (for the moſt part) is done upon others : in repentance, it reflects, and is done upon our ſelves.

If you will put more life into it, and utter it more pathetically, goe by the way of affections affections Anger is the predominant affection (we ſaid.) The proper worke of anger is to be avenged. What, ſhall I not viſit ? ſhall not my ſoule be avenged on ſuch an indignitie ? ſaith Indignation. As anger then the chiefe Paſſion; ſo, that, the chiefe action. The Apoſtle therefore leaves not off, till he have asked, Yea, but quæ vindicta ? what revenge ? what puniſhment ? That, is his laſt queſtion: Comes not to his period till hee have ſhut up all with that. For, till that be done, all is not done. That is the very Conſummatum eſt of all true repentance. Ier. 5. 6. 2 Cor. 7. 10.

To grow to more particulars. We ſort the workes of repentance, as they may beſt anſwer and ſuite with the workes of ſinne. Now, all ſinnes grow out of theſe three heads, and may be reduced to one of them, the 1 Spirit, the 2 Fleſh, 3 and the World: and are corrected each of them, by his contrarie. In Phyſicke it holds, Every thing is cured: In Iuſtice it holds, Every thing is beſt corrected by his contrarie. Now, it is contrarie, much againſt each of theſe, to bee deprived of that, it loves and delights in. What theſe workes are. a In particular 1 Ioh. 2. 16.

The Spirit loves to bee at libertie, to range and to ſcatter it ſelfe in many manner thoughts: Or, if it fix, to doe it, upon ſome pleaſing object. Confine the Spirit, make it undertake ſome taske of devotion, ſet it to pray, to read, to meditate, which is a drie object and nothing pleaſing to it: fix it ſo, and you puniſh it. For, nothing is more irkeſome. It is vexatio ſpiritus. 1 Prayer, &c.

The Fleſh, that loves to fare well; put it to faſt: loves to ſleepe and take her eaſe; put it to watch, or to lie hard: loves veſtiri mollibus; gird it with ſackcloth: loves mirth and good companie; make it retire and ſit penſive: abridge it of theſe all or any, and you puniſh it more or leſſe, I warrant you. 2 Faſting, &c.

The World and the worldling, they love to part with as little as they can. Charge them with any thing that ſhall be to them chargeable, it puniſheth them ſhrewdly, and is to them a puniſhment. 3 Almes.

Thus then theſe three, they may bee met with, each of them if they have made a fault. For neglect of ſerving of GOD, with ſome taske of devotion more than ordinarie. For fulneſſe of bread, with that truely ſacra fames, the exerciſe of faſting. For looſeneſſe of life, with workes tending to the taking downe of the fleſh, and making it leſſe fleſhly. For taking that which was others, to depart with that which is our owne. For want of bowells, with workes of mercie. In a word, with ſuffering what wee would not, for doing what we ſhould not. So, puniſhing our evill concupiſcence, in that it is ſo bent to; and making it leave that, for which it left GOD. So the triplicitie ſtands thus: for ſpirituall ſinnes; Prayer, and workes of devotion: for fleſhly; workes pertaining to caſtigo corpus meum: for worldly; Almes, and workes of charity and compaſſion. Let me ſhew you them briefly. 1 Cor. 9. 27.

For the firſt. Simon Magus went not through with his bargaine; did but thinke the HOLY GHOST had beene ware for his money; all was but thinking; went no further than the Spirit. Saint Peter preſcribes him what to doe, To fall to Prayer: Pray (ſaith he) if it be poſſible, this thought of thy heart may be forgiven thee. Prayer ſerves, where it goes no further than thought. 1 Act. 8. 22.

For the ſecond. The King of Ninive and his people, they fell to faſting on all hands. What was their ſinne ? Nahum will beſt tell us that: He wrote the burden of Ninive. This it was: Becauſe of the fornications of the harlot. For that kinde of fleſhly ſinne, that was the proper fruit. 2 Ion. 3. 5. Nahum 1. 1. 3 4.

For the third. Our example ſhall be the King of Babylon. He had beene a mighty oppreſſor of his people. There have ye now a worldly ſinne. Breake off thine iniquity with mercie to the poore, is Daniels preſcript to him. That is the right fruit for ſinnes of that nature. All may bee compriſed under theſe three: 1. Workes of devotion, as Prayer: 2. Workes of chaſtiſement of the body, as Faſting: 3. Workes of mercie, as Almes. Theſe three, betweene them, make up the corrective or penall part of repentance. 3 Dan. 4. 7.

Prayer is a fruit of Repentance. For this cauſe (ſaith the Penitentiall Pſalme) even for this and for no other cauſe, ſhall every one that is ſo diſpoſed make his prayer unto thee. 1 Pſal. 32. 7.

Luk. 18.10.13. The penitent Publican's firſt moving was, he went up to the Temple to pray. Let them
Ier.2.17. pray and ſay: Spare thy people ô LORD, and give not over thine inheritance to bee a re-
Ion.3.8. proch unto the heathen: (ſaith IOEL, in his repentance.) Let them crie mightily unto the LORD, (ſay they of Ninive, in theirs.) And the prayers of DAVID, IONAS, MANASSES, for their owne ſinnes: of DANIEL, EZRA, NEHEMIAS, for the ſinnes of the Land; and in a word, the Penitentiall Pſalmes ſhew this, that were choſen for no other end but to bee a taske for penitentiall perſons. There is one fruit.

2 Almes is another. A fruit, and ſo (by the name of fruit) expreſſely called Rom.
Pro.11.17. 15. 28. For, by mercie ſhewed, ſinnes are forgiven (ſaith SALOMON:) Hee that ſeekes mercie is to ſhew mercie, Pro. 16. 6. DANIEL (you heard) did preſcribe it to no leſſe perſon than the King himſelfe at Babylon. And the ſame at Ieruſalem was a fruit too: wit-
Eſay 58.7. neſſe Eſay 58. Break thy bread to the hungry, made by him, there, a part of true repentance. And Zachee ſhewed as much in his owne happy practice upon himſelfe, of our SAVIOVR CHRIST's Luk.19.8. high approbation. There is another fruit.

3 Faſting is a third fruit: and that a ſpeciall one, and ſo hath alwaies been reputed. It
1 Sam.12.16. appeareth by the three Kings. King DAVID who was a religious Prince: Not one-
1 Reg.21.27. ly by him, but by King AHAB who was ſcarce ſound in religion. Nor by them only, Ion.3.6. but by the King of NINIVE a heathen man, who, even by the light of Nature, brought forth this fruit.

We name it laſt, but it is (indeed) firſt: Firſt in Nature: firſt, quoad nos. Firſt, in Gen.3.6. nature, as oppoſite to the firſt tranſgreſſion, which was by eating. Firſt (I am ſure) quoad nos, ſpeaking of us and our country. Exceſſe that way, in fare and feeding, hath beene and is counted our Gentile vitium, our Nationall fault. So, no fruit, that our Nation is more bound to bring forth, than it. For Eſca ventri, and venter eſcis, meat for the belly, and the belly for meat, it nowhere reigneth ſo much. This is a third fruit.

A fruit, which if we would frame our ſelves to bring forth in kind, there would come with it both the other fruits beſides. For if we could ſo faſt as we ſhould, it would abate luſt certainely; which otherwiſe, keepe the body high, you ſhall hardly bring low: (that fruit.) And if we could ſo faſt, it would mend our devotion much; our Prayers would not be ſo full of yawning as we find them: (that fruit.) And if we could ſo faſt, there would be the more left to enable us to be ſo much the more plentifull in Almes than we be: (that fruit.) So as a good encreaſe or yeeld would come of this third fruit well brought forth.

Theſe three in ſpeciall are choſen out; but in generall, any as well as theſe. There is a way, how it is poſſible, there is not a vertue of them all, but you may make the worke of it a fruit of repentance. In morall matters it holds ever: Finis dat formam, the end (that) gives the forme, and ſo the true eſſence to every worke: Inſomuch as the worke is reckoned a fruit, not of that vertue from whence it proceeds, by which it is done; but of that vertue to which it referres, for whoſe end it is done.

Nay, it falls out often ſo, as an act of vertue (as Prayer, Faſting, Almes) done for a vitious end (ſuppoſe, for vaine-glorie) loſeth his owne kind, and becomes the proper act of that vice, it is done for. So powerfull a thing is the End, in moralibus. Whereby it comes to paſſe, the worke of any vertue, be it what it will, undertaken with a mind and intent (or, as we ſay) animo corrigendi, enjoyned eo nomine, referred to that, alters the nature, and becomes a worke of Iuſtice corrective, and ſo a fruit of repentance.

For, even in theſe three before remembred, ſo it goes. Almes, of it ſelfe, is a worke of charity: Faſting (properly) an act of the vertue ἐγκράτεια, abſtinence: Prayer of his owne nature, a worke of religious worſhip. But, Almes done ſome way to amerce our ſelves: Faſting done animo caſtigandi corpus: Prayer impoſed as a task-worke, to ſpend ſo much time, to ſtand ſo long bent at it: all theſe thus referred ſtill with an eye to that, change their nature and become acts penall, and ſo fruits of Repentance.

Of

Of fruits, wee ſaid at firſt, two Vſes there are: Firſt, to bee offered as a preſent: So, IACOB ſent them to the * Governour of Ægypt. For the firſt: wee have (in all) but three things to offer unto GOD, to preſent, to honour Him with; The 1 Spirit (or Soule) 2 the body, and 3 our worldly goods. 1 The offering of the ſoule is, the powring it out in prayer, and other workes of that kinde. 2 Of the body, the chaſtening it by exerciſes that way tending. 3 Of our goods, by diſtributing and doing good with them in Almes and offerings. The 1ſt of this fruit. 1. As an offering. * Gen. 43. 11.

Suppoſing the ſinne-offering in the Law beſt to ſuite with repentance (as it doth.) 1 A ſorrowfull ſpirit is a ſacrifice to GOD (that we know;) 2 and no reaſon but a chaſtened body ſhould be ſo likewiſe; 3 and why the price and charges of the Sacrifice ſhould not come into the reckoning, I ſee not, which was part of their worldly State; which being diſtributed and done good withall, in meat and drinke offerings, this the Apoſtle calleth a ſacrifice wherewith GOD is well pleaſed. The firſt Vſe of theſe fruits brought forth. Pſal. 51. 17. Phil. 4. 18.

The ſecond Vſe we ſpake of was, as they are medicinable. This difference there is betweene the puniſhment of Iuſtice, and repentance. Iuſtice otherwhiles deſtroyes the delinquent; ſo doth repentance never, but ſaves alwayes. So, it is more like the puniſhment of Phyſicke than of Law. For, Phyſicke, though it be a cure, yet a penance it is to the body, if wee deale with it throughly, and goe through with it. And repentance is the Phyſicke of the ſoule and bodie both. Sit obſecro ſanatio (ſaith DANIEL) Let there be a cure done, when hee exhorted him to repent. Both are a cure: as Corrective of what is paſt, ſo preſervative (or if you will, you may call it corrective too) of what is to come. When the ſinner is corrected, hath correction given him, for the former, he correcteth his wayes, amends his life for ever after. Caſtigo corpus ſerves for what hath beene done: In ſervitutem redigo ſerves, that he doe it no more. Both to wreake our ſelves for ſo often offering ſo foule indignities to heaven and the GOD of heaven, in our former bad courſe of life: And to keepe under the fleſh, and hold the concupiſcence in awe, that it runne not againe into the former ryot. This latter, we call amendment of life; which is not Repentance, for it pertaines rather to μετάνοια than to μεταμέλεια (being yet to come) but it never failes to follow it infallibly, in ſomuch as if it doe not, nothing is done. 2 As a Medicine. Dan. 4. 27. 1 Cor. 9. 27.

For I report me to you: Let it be but knowen to the fleſh that this ſame light or ſleight repentance, ſhall not ſerve the turne, but to a round reckoning it ſhall come and make full accompt to taſte of theſe fruits throughly, without hope of being diſpenſed with; whether it will not take off the edge of our appetite, and make it more dull and fearefull to offend? On the other ſide, let it be conſidered, whether this be not to lay the bridle on the neck of concupiſcence to powre it ſelfe into all riot, if (ſinning) it know, it ſhall bee diſpatched with any repentance, never ſo ſhort and ſhallow, as doe no more ſo, and all is well?. Whether (I ſay) this will not make all the ſappe goe downe, as wee ſhall never ſee fruit come: Nay, whether it bee not to deſtroy fruit and tree and all?

Verily, they that for pure zeale and indignation at themſelves for their ſinnes, never ſhed a teare, nor miſſe a meale, nor breake a ſleepe, nor doe, nor ſuffer, nor part with ought; it may ſeeme a queſtion, whether they thinke not Saint IOHN here overſeene in preſſing that for ſo needfull, which they can ſo eaſily diſpenſe with.

But if when we come to Caſtigo Corpus, there we leave Saint PAVL; when to neither eating nor drinking, there we leave Saint IOHN; and when to flevit amarè, there we leave Saint PETER, and when to πένθος and κλαυθμὸν, changing our mirth into penſiveneſſe, there we leave Saint IAMES, I marvell, what manner repentance we will leave before we have done, or what ſhall become of our fruits here? 1 Cor. 9. 27. Matth. 16. 18. 26. 75.

IIII.

The Worth of this fruit.

In our repenting (commonly) we make ſuch haſte, as wee take away before the fruits come. But if there happen to come any, is not this even our caſe? Our Teares, if any, drie ſtraight: Our Prayers, if any, quickly tedious: Our Almes, indeed pitifull: Our Faſts, faſt or looſe upon any the leaſt occaſion: And ſo our Repentance (if any) pœnitentia pœnitenda, a repentance needing another, a new, a ſecond repentance, to repent us of it. To repent us, of our repentance, no leſſe than of our ſinne it ſelfe. So that, if any fruit, fruit of no worth. And if the fruit be of no worth, no more is the tree: unworthy one, unworthy both. Thus we are not yet where we ſhould be, till unto fructus wee have added dignos.

1 Cor.7 10.

Nay then, if you fall to talke of worthineſſe, we ſhall have ſatisfaction up againe. And had we not beſt then to aske firſt, are there any worthy? For, if there be none ſuch, bid Saint IOHN beware how he talke of worthy fruits: bid Saint PAVL beware how he ſpeake of worthy workes of repentance. If none ſuch be, they did ill to clogge the bill with any ſuch word. But they knew well, what they ſaid: therefore, ſuch there be (ſure) get them where we can.

Act.26.20.

How it is worthie.

Onely, when we ſay worthy, it would be underſtood cum grano ſalis. How worthy? in what ſenſe? whither referred? that we miſtake not. I demand then firſt, ſhall we put them into the balance, to weigh the worthineſſe of our fruits, with the unworthineſſe of our ſinnes, and the conſequent of our ſinnes the wrath of GOD? the dignitie of the one, with the indignitie of the other, and thinke by their dignitie to ſatisfie GODS juſt indignation? I trow not. At this beame, no fruits of ours will hold weight: None, ſo, found worthy: No, not if we could (I ſay not, ſhed, or powre out, but) even melt into teares, and every teare a drop of bloud. No: Non ſunt condignæ paſſiones (ſaith the Apoſtle) we can ſuffer nothing worthy our ſinnes, but (that, we cannot ſuffer) ira ventura, the wrath of GOD. The infinite incomparable high worth of Him, that in our ſinne is wronged; the foule contempt that is therein offered, are farre above the worth of any our fruits; weigh them downe as any fether. Why, all Lebanon (ſaith the Prophet) is not ſufficient to find wood; nor, all the [a] beaſts upon a thouſand hills not enough for a Sacrifice, [b] Tekel, tekel, too light all. Take them out of the ſcales, away with them, Non ſunt digni, in that ſenſe. In which ſenſe, not the wicked [c] prodigall child only, but even the good [d] Centurion; nay then, even Saint Iohn Baptiſt here himſelfe, cry all, [e] Non ſum dignus; neither their fruits, nor they. The honor of dignos (in this ſenſe) belongs to the fruits of no tree, but the tree of the Croſſe of CHRIST; to His ſufferings, and to none but His.

[a] Pſal.50.10.
[b] Dan.5.27.
[c] Luk.15.21.
[d] Mat.8.8.
[e] Ver.11.

Yet (I wote well) there hath been another manner eſtimate by ſome men of their owne fruits; but they weighed them with their owne falſe weights, and made them a diſcharge both from pœna and from culpa, and that toties quoties. Nay then, inventus eſt plus habens, they found a further ſurpluſſage too of I know not what beſides. What of that? CHRIST's Caveat is here to take place: that weeding out the tares, we take heed, we plück not up together good corne and all. That to avoyd certaine wormes, that may happe breed in the fruit, if it be not the better looked to, we beat not all the fruit off the tree, and leave it all naked and bare; no fruits at all: and, for feare of teaching a proud, teach a fruit-leſſe repentance. Well: though not ſo compared, not this way, yet muſt we have fructus dignos.

How, worthy then? referred whither? As worthy, as the poſſibility of our Nature will reach to; as our ſoile will beare, or hath ever yeelded; as the Saints and Servants of GOD are reported to have brought forth in former ages: what ſay you to that dignos? That (indeed) were ſomewhat worth, if it might be had. They? they have become [a] like bottels in the ſmoke, [b] their knees have growen weake through faſting, they have [c] all-to-wet their pillowes with their teares; they have [d] reſtored bribes, and that fourfold; given in almes at once, halfe of all that ever they had. This were (indeed) ſomewhat worth: But, of this (I doubt) our worthineſſe will be found ſhort: or rather I doubt not: I dare not put it upon this dignos neither.

[c] 6.7.
[d] Luk.19.8.

And yet, were there in us any portion of that heroïcall free ſpirit, of that Chriſtian magna- magnanimitie that was in the Fathers of our faith; (The Apoſtle beares them witneſſe, that to their powers, nay, and beyond their powers they ſhewed themſelves willing;) any never ſo poore fruit would not content vs. But wee, neither to our power, nor a great deale ſhort of it, endevour our ſelves: any never ſo ſleight, and ſlender will ſerve us well enough. 2 Cor. 8. 3.

I wonder what we thinke? Doe we thinke to poſt GOD off with any, it skils not what fruit? with wind-fals, with worme-eaten ſtuffe? ESAYES ſowre grapes? IEREMIES rotten figges? Nothing comes amiſſe. Hold wee Him in ſo vile account, as any is good enough for Him; it is well with Him, if He get any? Malachi tells us otherwiſe, That he holds it in great ſcorne: bids us goe offer ſuch fruit to our Prince: and ſee if He will take it well. Zachary tels us ſo likewiſe: A goodly price (ſaith he) they value mee at. Goodly fruit, is it not, they preſent me with? Nay (ſure) wee muſt have dignos too: Some worth there would be. Eſay. 5. 2. Ierem 24. 2. Mal. 1. 8. Zac. 11. 13.

Is there any other way to take our dignos by? Compared with the Iuſtice of GOD, Not ſo: Nor with the great Heroës of our nature; Not ſo neither. Nor (indeed) are they ſaid worthy, of either of theſe; but how? Only, fruits worthy of repentance: that is, ſuch as may well beſeeme perſons, as be truly penitent. Referred, not to ought, but to repentance it ſelfe. Laying by ſinne, as it is an averſion from an infinite good: (For, ſo it is infinite; admits no meaſure or degree;) but, conſidering it, as it is a converſion to the creature, and that more or leſſe: ſo, it fals within compaſſe of more or leſſe worthy.

Say I this of my ſelfe? Saith not GODS Law the ſame ſecundùm menſuram æſtimationemque delicti, and pro menſurâ peccati? Is it not a clauſe there, repeated more than once? If there be a meaſure of the one, ſo is there of the other: If an analogie of faith, of repentance too, why not? And, to that, wee to apply our ſelves, in the magis or minùs dignos of our fruits. This is once: Repentance may bee too much, one may goe too farre in it: That, will be granted (I know.) And, if too much, then too little; and we may fall too ſhort the other way (that, I am ſure of.) Which part we ſhould offend on (to chooſe) ἀγαν in ἀγαναϰτησις will ſoone teach us, that it would be home: rather, with the more then with the leſſe. In the Corinthian's caſe there it was too much; hee was in danger to be ſwallowed up with ſorrow. In Miriam's caſe againe, it was too little: For, though ſhe were right penitent for her folly committed, yet becauſe the qualitie of her offence required a larger and more worthie repentance, ſhe was ſhut out of the hoſt yet ſeven daies longer, and then, and not before, received to pardon. If there be an ultra and a citra, then is there a tenus: If too much and too little, then is there a ſufficit, enough And, that, is the dignos we ſeeke for. Levit. 5. 18. Deut. 25. 2. Rom. 12. 6. 2 Cor. 2. 7. Num. 12. 15.

But who ſhall tell us, this tenus what it is? Who ſhall ſay Sufficit? I thinke it is not beſt to ſay it to our ſelves; It is not ſafe, that. Wee are like enough to give eare to propitius eſto tibi, to ſpare and favour our ſelves, and to thinke that worthy, that is not: to diſmiſſe the matter with a doe no more ſo, never to follow it to ſentence. Or, if we doe, to reprive our ſelves, and ſtay the execution. It hath been held no way ſafe for us, to make our owne aſſeſſment: and as ſafe a way as could bee, would ever bee taken for the ſoule. Better, ſome other body doe it: and, who ſhall that other body be? Mat. 16. 23.

In the Law, every man was not left to himſelfe. The offering for ſinne (which was to them a fruit of repentance) it was rated ever, ever taxed כערכך by the Prieſt. According to his ordering, ſo it went: he made the eſtimate, how much was enough, what would ſerve. And here now, in Saint Iohn's time (which was the intervall or paſſage, as it were, between the Law and the Goſpell;) at the baptiſme of Iohn, they knew not what to doe, they were not ſo well skilled; to Saint Iohn, they come, with their quid faciemus? What ſhall we do? And what ſhall we do? All three one after another, the Publicans, the Souldiers, the Common ſort; and they had all their anſwers ſeverally: One anſwere ſerved not all: Severall kinds of ſinne require ſeverall ſorts of fruit. And, under the Goſpell, there (we ſee) for the Corinthian, Saint Paul ſaid, Sufficit viro huic: Thus much is enough, this ſhall ſerve: his conſcience may be quiet, I reſtore him to Levit. 5. 18. Luk. 3. 10. 12. 14. 2 Cor. 2. 6.

the Churches peace. And the Canons penitentiall which were made in the times under perſecution, the very beſt times of the Church, lay forth plainly, what is to be followed and obſerved in this kinde.

And (ſure) I take it to be an errour to be added to the former, to thinke, the fruits of repentance and the worth of them to be a matter, any common man can skill of well enough, needs never aske Saint Iohn, or Saint Paul, what he ſhould doe; knowes what he ſhould doe, as well as Saint Paul, or Saint Iohn either: And that it is not (rather) a matter, wherein we need the counſell and direction of ſuch, as are profeſſed that way. Truly, it is neither the leaſt nor the laſt part of our learning, to be able to give anſwer, and direction in this point. But, therefore laid aſide, and neglected by us, becauſe not ſought after by you. Therefore not ſtudied, but by very few, quia nemo nos interrogat, becauſe it is growen out of requeſt quite.

We have learned (I know not where) a new, a ſhorter courſe, which fleſh and bloud better likes of; to paſſe the whole courſe of our life, and, in the whole courſe of our life, not to be able to ſet downe, where, or when, or what wee did, when wee did that, which wee call repenting: what fruits there came of it; what thoſe fruits might be worth. And, but even a little before our death (and, as little as may be) not, till the world have given us over, then (loe) to come to our quid faciemus? to ask, what we ſhould doe, when we are able to doe nothing. And then muſt one come, and (as we call it) ſpeake comfortably to us, that is, miniſter to us a little Divinitie Ladanum, rather ſtupefactive for the preſent, than doing any ſound good: and ſo, take our leaves to goe meet with ira ventura.

This way, this faſhion of repenting, Saint Iohn knew it not: it is farre from his fructus dignos: Saint Paul knew it not; it is farre from his opera digna: And I can ſay little to it, but I pray GOD it deceive us not. It is not good trying concluſions about our ſoules. Here is the plaine way, this is the ſtraight path laid out before us, by him that was ſent to prepare the wayes of the LORD, and to make His paths ſtreight: and goe we which way we will, we ſhall heare the voyce behinde us, crying to us; Hæc eſt via, ambulate in eâ. Set your tree; bring forth your fruits; ſee to them: altogether unworthy they would not be; Somewhat worth; raiſed to ſome degree of worthineſſe.

Eſay 40.3. 30.11.

Mark.14.8. Mark.12.44. Quod potuit fecit, did CHRIST accept in Mary Magdalens caſe; and quod habuit dedit, in the poore Widowes caſe, with her (but) two mites. Wee doing our endevours to raiſe them, to what degree we can, He for His part, will not be behinde, but releeve and helpe us out. For, expectat DOMINVS, ut miſereatur noſtri; GOD (even) watts that He may have mercy on us. And therefore, laying away His rigour, will not goe exactly to worke, but be ready to releeve, and repute that worthy, that is not all out ſo. So, in the Church of Sardi, we finde, He ſaith, Non invenio opera tua plena, their workes were not found to have the full poiſe, yet notwithſtanding He ſaith, digni enim ſunt, the Parties found worthy for all that.

Eſay 30,18. Revel.3.2. 4.

All the worth is not intrinſecall, to the thing it ſelfe: When all is ſaid that can be ſaid, that which makes all full, the chiefe part of their worth lyeth in digni habebuntur. It is therefore CHRISTS counſell, Orate, ut digni habeamini, Pray, they may be found in ſo good a degree towards it, as GOD may count them, and ſo accounting make them: Quanquam ſat digni ſi quos dignatur (ſaith the Chriſtian Poet.) In one Chapter, we have them both (in the II *Theſſ.*1.) counted worthy at the 5. verſe, made worthy at the 11. verſe. Both come to one. Two words there are in the Greeke ἀξιόλης and ἀξίωσις: Two, in Latine, dignitas, and dignatio: And, as there is dignatio ex dignitate; So is there dignitas ex dignatione. And, that is it: Worthy is the fruit, He ſo eſteemeth: But, upon the point, rather dignatione Ejus, than dignitate ſuâ, rather by His deigning or dignifying them; than, by the intrinſecall, by their owne dignitie, they have in themſelves.

Luke 20.35. 21.36.

Yet, let us never thinke, be ſo baſe as to conceive, He will hold for ſuch, any at all, let them be what they will, it skils not how worthleſſe, how farre from all degrees toward it. No: But ſuch, as wherein, Hee ſeeth ſome conſcience made, ſome care taken, ſome zealous deſire, ſome earneſt endevour appeare. Some proffers (at leaſt) toward thoſe ſeven degrees, in 2 Corinth. 7. which may ſerve to aſſure our ſelves and to ſhew the world,

2 Cor.7.11.

we dally not with repentance, but make a ſerious matter of it, and go to it in good earneſt; In witneſſe whereof this and this fruit we have brought forth. Somewhat like yet, ſomewhat beſeeming perſons truely penitent, whereto He would ſay, ſufficit tibi gratia mea, My grace is ſufficient for thee. And, in that we may reſt. 2 Cor. 12. 9.

It remaines, we examine our ſelves, touching theſe points: 1 Our repentance, is it like a live tree, and not a dull heavy mood, neither life nor ſoule in it? 2 Have we ſet it on growing, brings it forth at all? 3 Is it fruit, it brings forth? For, whatſoever elſe it is, it is not for Saint Iohn's turne. 4 The fruit it brings, is it ought worth, for the quantitie, the qualitie, the well laſting of it? GOD grant it be ſo: and thankes be to GOD, if it bee ſo.

V.

The fruit-time. Ion. 4. 6.

But this Proferte will aske ſome time. Iona's repentance was not like Iona's gourd. His gourd was up in a night, ſuddenly: Trees come not up ſo quickly: they require more time than ſo. Never truſt a repentance repentine; no ſudden flaſh or brunt. It is altogether an error, to thinke; Repentance is a matter of no more moment, than to be diſpatched in a moment.

There be two words (words of weight:) One is Saint Peter's, and that is χωρῆσαι ἐκ μετανοίαν, to withdraw, goe aſide, to retire and be private, to ſequeſter our ſelves to our repentance: The other is Saint Paul's σχολάζειν πρὸς τὴν νηστείαν, to take us a time, nay to make us a time, a vacant time, a time of leaſure to intend faſting and prayer, two fruits of repentance. I aske then, did we never χωρῆσαι, withdraw our ſelves to that end? what was the place, where wee ſo did? did we at any time σχολάζειν, take any ſuch vacant time? what was the time and when, when we ſo did? I doubt, ours hath been rather a flaſh, a qualme, a brunt, than otherwiſe; rather, a gourd of repentance, than any growing tree. A time there muſt needs be taken for this Proferte. 2 Pet. 3. 9. 1 Cor. 7. 5.

Now the time, S. IOHN gives, is, but while Ira ventura, the wrath to come is in comming. Ira, ventura, are two words: In that it is wrath, and GOD's wrath, there is juſt matter of feare: In that it is ventura, to come, but to come, and not yet come; there is hope yet, ſome good may bee done, before venit quæ ventura, that come that is to come.

If theſe fruits come, the wrath (when it comes) ſhall not come upon us, but paſſe by us, and not touch any fruit-bearing tree. To take a time then.

Now, there cannot be a fitter time than that the Church hath ſet us forth; that is, (now) at this time of the yeare. For, now, is the time of the yeare to plant in. In the picture of the moneths, in this next moneth at hand, you ſhall ſee nothing but men grafting and ſetting trees: It is the Husbandrie and buſineſſe of the moneth: wonderfull fitly choſen therefore, that this tree may keepe time with the reſt. And, now is the time that the ſappe goes up: So as there could not be a fitter time for S. IOHN to call upon us. Looke abroad, they begin now to bring forth: now beſt ſpeaking for Proferte. To which Proferte, Differte is cleane contrarie. Defer it not then, but take the time while it is in ſeaſon.

And with high wiſedome is this time ſo ſet, that the time of our Repentance, the fortie daies of it end in the Paſſeover, in the paſſing of Ira ventura over us, as did the deſtroying Angell over the houſes in Egypt. That the mortifying of ſinne might end in the riſing of CHRIST in us. The uſe of fruit is fruition: And this is the fruition in this life, even the fruits of the Spirit, feare and love and joy in the HOLY GHOST. And in the life to come, the fruit of the Tree of Life in the middeſt of Paradiſe: In ſtead of Ira ventura, vita ventura, gaudia ventura, the glorie and joyes eternall of the life to come. To which LIFE, GLORY and IOY, bring us ALMIGHTY GOD. Exo. 12. 12.

A SERMON

PREACHED BEFORE QVEENE ELIZABETH, AT Greenwich, on VVednesday the XI. of March, A. D. MDLXXXIX.

PSALME LXXV. VER. III.

Liquefacta est terra, & omnes qui habitant in ea: Ego confirmavi Columnas ejus.

The earth, and all the Inhabitants thereof are dissolved: but I will establish the Pillars of it.

IT was MOSES the Man of GOD, that, by speciall direction from GOD, first began, and brought up this order, to make Musicke the conveigher of mens duties into their mindes (Deut. 31. 19.) And DAVID sithence hath continued it, and brought it to perfection, in this Booke, as having a speciall grace and felicitie in this kinde: Hee, for Songs; and his Sonne SALOMON for Proverbs. By which two (that is) by the unhappie Adage, and by a wanton song, Satan hath ever breathed most of his infection and poison into the minde of man. Deut. 31. 19.

In which holy and heavenly use of his Harpe, he doth, by his tunes of Musicke, teach men how to set themselves in tune (Psal. 15.) How not onely to tune themselves, but how to tune their housholds (Psal. 101.)

And

And not onely there, but (here) in this Pſalme, how to preſerve harmony, or (as he termeth it) how to ſing Ne perdas, to a Common-wealth. So ſaith the Inſcription, which Saint Auguſtine very fitly calleth the key of every Pſalme.

For, the time of ſetting this ſong (by generall conſent of all Expoſitors) being the latter end of the long diſſenſion, betweene the Houſes of David and Saul; evident it is, the eſtate of the Land was very neere to a Perdas, and needed Ne Perdas to be ſung unto it.

For, beſides the great overthrow in the Mountaines of Gilboa, given by the enemie, wherein the King and three of his ſonnes were ſlaine, and a great part of the Countrey
1 Sam. 31. 7. ſurpriſed by the Philiſtin; the Deſolation of a divided kingdome, was come upon them too. For, within themſelves, they were at Cujus eſt terra? (2 Sam. 3. 12.) even at civill wars: At the beginning, but a play; (So Abner termeth it, 2 Sam. 2. 14.) but bitterneſſe at the end, as the ſame Abner confeſſeth, verſ. 26. Surely, it was a weake State and low brought: So much doth David imply (in the fore-part of the verſe) that he found the Land a weake Land, by meanes, the ſtrength and Pillars of it, were all out of courſe, by the miſ-government of Saul. But then withall (in the latter part of the verſe) he profeſſeth, he will leave it a Land of ſtrength, by re-eſtabliſhing the Pillars, and re-edifying the State new againe. The earth, &c.

The ſtile whereof runneth in the termes of Architecture: very aptly reſembling the government, to a frame of building; the ſame ſet upon and borne up by certaine Baſes and Pillars (the ſtrength whereof aſſureth, or the weakneſſe endangereth the whole:) and David himſelfe to a skilfull Builder, ſurveying the pillars, and ſearching into the decayes; repairing their ruines, and ſetting them into courſe againe.

Whereout ariſeth naturally the entreatie of theſe foure points:

1 That the weakeneſſe, or ſtrength of a Land, is a point of important conſideration.

2 That the ſtrength of a Land is, in the Pillars: And, what they are.

3 That the upholding of thoſe Pillars appertaineth to David.

4 How, and in what ſort Saul weakened them in his time; and David, in his, made them faſt.

I. FIrſt, David had read, that, among the inſtructions delivered by Moſes to the ſpies (Numb. 13. 19.) the very firſt and chiefe of all was, Whether the Land were weake or ſtrong. So hee had read; and ſo hee beleeved it to bee: and, ſo it is. For ſure, in ſuch Lands, where this is their ſong, The earth is weake; their Muſicke is all out of tune. For, the note is ſuch, as affecteth the Inhabitants with Pſal. 22. 14, 15. feare. 1. Feare, in the inhabitant, for theſe two, [1] Virtus teſtacea, and [2] Cor cereum, ſtrength like a potſheard; and a heart like wax: A weake Land, and a fearfull inhabitant goe together. 2. Courage, in the enemie: For, where RABSAKETH knoweth but ſo much, that the Land is weake, you ſhall not entreat him to ſpeake any thing but Hebrew (Eſa. 36. 12.)

This Muſicke is heavie: and therefore David ſaw, the ſong muſt bee new ſet. And ſo, hee doth ſet it new, changing it into a more pleaſant note, But I will ſtrengthen it. And, when the note is ſo changed, in that day ſhall this Song be ſung in the Land
Eſay 26. 1. of Iuda, Wee have a ſtrong Citie; Salvation hath GOD ſet, for the walls and bulwarkes of it.

This Muſicke hath life in it, and hearteneth the inhabitant afreſh; quaileth the enemie and reſolveth the neighbour to ſay, (1 Sam. 12. 18.) Thine are wee, ô DAVID, and on thy ſide, thou ſonne of IESSE. When a Prince may ſay of his Land, as Moſes did of Iuda (*Deut.*33.7.) His owne hands are ſufficient for him (if the LORD helpe him) againſt all his enemies: And the Land may ſay of the Prince, that which Salomon ſetteth downe, as the high commendation of a Prince, that he is Rex Alkum (that is) Ne ſurgito, Riſe not; No riſing, againſt him; for that, they which have riſen, had better have ſate ſtill. And they both may ſend word to the enemie (if he threaten to come and viſit them) the word that Ioas ſent (2 Reg. 14. 10.) Tarry at home, and provoke not evill againſt thy ſelfe. This Muſicke is bleſſed; and ſuch hath hitherto beene the ſong of our Nation. Prov.30.31.

What Samuel ſaid, when hee pitched the Stone of Helpe (1 *Sam.*7. 12.) wee cannot deny, but wee may ſay the ſame, Thus farre hath GOD holpen us: whoſe arme is not ſhortned, though Pharaoh's heart bee hardned. Hitherto, Salvation hath GOD ſet for our walls and Bulwarkes, and our Prince, Prince Alkum; and our enemie hath not boaſted himſelfe at the putting off his armour, as at the buckling it on: and our Neighbours glad to lay hold of our skirts and ſay, We will bee yours, for wee ſee, GOD is with you; (*Zach.*8.10.) The great bleſſing of GOD having beene upon us (*Deut.*28. 12.) Thou ſhalt lend to many Nations, but ſhalt borrow of none. Such hath hitherto beene our ſong: and, ſuch may it long bee; yea, ever, O LORD. And, that it may ſo bee, David teacheth the way of keeping it ſo ſtill; Namely, by Setting faſt the Pillars of it. Which is the ſecond principall point: What this ſtrength is; and what the Pillars are that beare it up. 1 Reg.20.11.

II. The HOLY GHOST ſpeaking of ſtrength, nameth two (*Gen.*32.28.) as (indeed) the Scripture knoweth no more: 1 The ſtrength of Iacob; and 2 the ſtrength of Iſrael: 1 Of Iacob, ſupplanting, or prevailing over men: 2 and of Iſrael, prevailing with GOD.

1 IACOB's ſtrength I call, whatſoever the counſell or might of man affoordeth; His prudent fore-caſt, whereby hee over-reached ESAV (*Gen.*27. 36.) and LABAN (30.37.) And his bow and ſword, whereby hee wanne from the Amorite (*Geneſ.*48.10.) Vnder theſe two, I comprehend all humane ſtrength, the ſtrength of IACOB.

2 But, when all is done, we muſt reſerve and keepe a ſtrength for GOD, ſaith David (*Pſal.*59.9.) Who, if he forſake Alexandria, though it have the Sea for his ditch, it ſhall be carried captive: who if he forſake Ephraim, though they be well harneſſed and carrie bowes, they ſhall turne themſelves backe in the day of battell. Therefore, ever DOMINVS commeth in: (*Deut.*33.7.) Iuda's owne hands are ſufficient to helpe, Si tu DOMINE, If thou LORD helpe him againſt the enemie: And Niſi Dominus, If that the LORD doe not keepe the houſe, and watch the houſe, and make faſt the Pillars, all is in vaine (*Pſal.*127.1.) Ioyne (ſaith the Wiſeman) Ittiel (that is, Dominus mecum;) and then, Vcal (that is, Prævalebo) will not tarry from you: Vcal and He goe ever together. Sever (ſaith David) Hii in carribus, Hii in equis, from In nomine Domini, the next newes, you ſhall heare of them, is, * Ibi ceciderunt, &c. There they are brought downe and fallen. Therefore we muſt allow Iſrael a ſtrength, alſo; without which, Iacobs forecaſt ſhall faile: (for, *Hee caſteth out the counſels of Princes, Pſal.*33.10.) and his ſword too: For, He can *rebate the edge of the ſword, Pſal.*89. 43. Nahum 3.8. Pſal.77.9. Prov.30.1. * Pſal.20.8.

Two ſtrengths then there are: and theſe two DAVID (here) termeth two Pillars (that wee may know what be the Pillars of the Land.) For, ſuch was the manner of the Iewiſh building: arch-wiſe, upon two maine Pillars to ſet it. Wee may ſee it by Samſons deſire, *Iudg.*16. 29. ſo to be placed, as the two Supporters of the Temple might be in his two hands, that bowing them, all the Church might come downe upon their heads. Such an arch of government doth DAVID here deviſe, and two Pillars bearing it up. He telleth us, they be two: and he telleth us what they be; for, hee hath alreadie named them, in the two former Vſes: 1 Celebrabimus te IEHOVA in the firſt: And, 2 Iuſtitias judicabo, in the ſecond. GOD, and Right, the Pillars.

The worshippe of GOD; and the execution of Iustice or right. With these two, hee beginneth; and with these two againe hee taketh his farewell; the regard of Religion (in the ninth:) and the care of Iustice (in the last.) These two hee teacheth us: For, these two (hee saith) GOD taught him (2 Sam. 23. 3.) GOD (saith hee) the strength of Israel, spake to me and said, thou shalt beare rule over men, 1 Doing Iustice, and 2 guiding them in the feare of GOD. So that, these two are the Pillars: 1 GOD and 2 Right; Iustice, and the Feare of GOD. These two give strength, to that, and to all Lands: 1 Celebrabimus te IEHOVA; and 2 Iustitias judicabo. These two decay all, and weaken the Land, 1 Negligimus te IEHOVA; and 2 Injurias judicabo.

1 GOD is a Pillar; So, is His most common name, in the Hebrew ADONAI, My Pillar: and, His Sonne, a Rocke; Not onely Peters Rocke (Matth. 16.19.) but, Davids Rocke too (2 Sam. 22. 2.) the Rocke both of Church, and Kingdome: And His Spirit, a Spirit, not of Holinesse onely and Truth; but, a Spirit of Iudgement, to them that sit on the Throne; and a Spirit of Strength for them that keepe the battell, from the gate (Esay 28. 6.) And his favour, a Shield (Psal. 5. 10.) and His NAME, turris fortissima (Prov. 18. 10.) And therefore Celebrabimus te IEHOVA, wee will praise thy name: For, the neerer thy Name is to us and we to it, the more wonderous workes wilt thou declare towards us. Arise O GOD into thy Resting place, Thou and the Arke of thy Strength (Psal. 132. 8.) therefore the Arke sendeth forth a Strength. And Salomon, when hee called the two Pillars (which hee set at the Temple gate) Strength and Steddinesse, meant, that, out of that Gate, there proceeded Strength and Stablishing to the whole Realme (1 Reg. 7. 21.)

Iachin and Boaz.

Even the Strength and Stablishing of Si crediderit is Stabiliemini (Esay 7. 6.) By which, not onely the Devils darts are repelled in the Spirituall (Ephes. 6. 16.) but the armes of the aliens are put to flight in the earthly warfare (Hebr. 11. 34.) Therefore Moses made such reckoning of Celebrabimus, that having recounted (as the strength of Cain's progenie) their inventing of the Tent, making of the Flute of brasse, and iron-workes (Gen. 4. 20.) he opposeth to them all, as able to match them all (in the posterity of the Sonnes of GOD) the Invocation of His Name, begun and set on foot, first, by Enoch (verse 26.) as the maine Pillar of strength which the People of GOD trust to. And Saint Paul is bold (1 Tim. 2. 1.) Where, laying (as it were) the Chamber-beames and stories of each Christian Government; (Princes, first, by whose meanes Peace, and Quietnesse; from thence knowledge of the truth; from it, godly and honest life; and from them, Salvation;) As the base or Pillar of all, and that which beareth up, and giveth Strength to all, setteth Prayer: Prayer to be made, that so, Princes preserved; that so, peace maintained; that so, knowledge intended; that so, a godly and honest life practised; that so, Salvation attained. Reckoning invocation as a speciall Pillar of each estate; And as a Prerogative Royall, prayer for all men, but above all men, for Princes. Thus doth Religion strengthen us, and is Israel with GOD: And not with GOD onely, but is Iacob also, and prevaileth with men too.

Hebr. 11. 34.

Indeed, nothing prevaileth so much, nor worketh so deepe, with man, as doth it: And, no men more fast and faithfull, than quorum DEVS corda tetigit (1 Sam 10. 26.) DAVID therefore, undertaking, in this verse, to Stablish the Pillars; sheweth, how he will doe it, in the next: Dicam, by telling them their duty out of Divinitie; by laying before them Deus est Iudex, GODS judgement, and the dregges of the cup which Hee holdeth in His hand. To make so many men so many Pillars, well and wisely said the Heathen man, Odium oportet peccandi, non metum facias: To hate sinne, is the Pillar; to feare it, is not: for, feare will fall away, if his understanding be removed, and where the duty is not grounded on Deus est Iudex, it is no Pillar to be built on. Certaine it is, that (except GODS Law) all Lawes, feare of sinne they breed; but a kinde hatred or conscience of sinne, they breed not. Well may they binde the hand, fetter the foot, and impriſon the bodie; there is nothing can impriſon the heart or thought, save

Arm

Arma militiæ noſtræ. And thus is Religion, a Pillar among them alſo. 2 Cor. 10. 4.

For ſure, the Chriſtian duty of bearing wrong (where it is well perſwaded) doth mainely ſtrengthen the Civill of doing no wrong: And, the Chriſtian, of departing with our owne charitably, doth ſtrengthen the Civill of not taking other mens injuriouſly: And ſo, of the reſt. That he called it not amiſſe, that called Divinitie the Back-bone of the Princes Law; and conſequently, Religion of the Common-wealth. So that, not onely Moſes and Paul, by calling on the name of GOD; but, Elias and Ieremie, by teaching the will of GOD (Not, by Prayer onely, but by Preaching) are the one, an Iron Pillar (Ier. 1. 48.) the other, the chariot and horſemen of Iſraël, in his time. 2 King. 12.

Now, if all men had faith, Dicam would have ſerved, and this one Pillar have beene enough: But, becauſe all men have not Religion, but there bee in the world evill and abſurd men (2 Theſ. 3. 2.) therefore needed the ſecond, therefore needed Iuſtitias Iudicabo. Indeed, meliores ſunt, the better part be they quos dirigit amor, whom love leadeth: but plures ſunt, quos corrigit timor, the greater by farre, that feare driveth: Even ſuch as will not bee ledde with the cords of a man (that is, inducements of Religion and reaſon, Hoſ. 11. 4.) but they muſt be held with bit and bridle (that is, the curb of Iuſtice, Pſalme 32. 9.)

Which kind of men are of two ſorts (therefore is it Iuſtitias.) 1. The Enemie or Aegyptian ſmiting Iſraël, from without. 2. The Injurious Iſraëlite wronging his brother, from within. Why then, Sit nobis Rex, ſay the people, 1 Sam. 8. 20. (which is a perfect comprehenſion of this Pillar of Iuſtice) to doe them right: And to defend them by Warre, when need is, againſt the forreine enemie; By Iuſtice, when cauſe is, againſt the domeſticall oppreſſor. Againſt the one Iehoſaphat placeth garriſons (2 Chron. 17. 2.) that is, againſt outward hoſtilitie: Againſt the other, he ordaineth Iudges (2 Chron. 19. 5.) that is, inward injurie. Exod. 2. 11. 13.

Dicens Cyro, (ſaith GOD) Paſtor meus, &c. (Eſay 44. 28.) which ſay to Cyrus (the mighty Monarch) thou art my Shepheard. A Shepheard, by paſtorall Iuſtice, To ſee the flock ſafe from without, and quiet from within. From without, To keepe the wild bore of the foreſt from ſpoiling our lives and goods (Pſalme. 80. 13.) and from within, the ravenous Wolfe from making havock of our ſoules (Act. 20. 29.) Will you know, what theſe two meane? O my people, (ſaith GOD) Remember what Balack the King hath deviſed againſt you (ſpeaking of a forreine Prince, of the Bore.) And what Balaam hath anſwered him (ſpeaking of a falſe Prophet, of the Wolfe.) The caſe is very like ours, and GOD grant us a thankfull remembrance and meditation of it: Of the long intelligence betweene Balack and Balaam, for our overthrow; and how graciouſly and mervellouſly GOD hath delivered us. Mic. 6. 5.

Now, as without the fold, theſe beaſts be buſy, and GOD therefore hath girt the Prince with a ſword: So, within, alſo, there are certaine fed Rammes (ſaith Ezekiel) that with their hornes, puſh; and with their heels, lay out againſt the poore weake ſheepe (that with vis and fraus, deceit and violence, keepe evill rule within;) againſt whom Hee hath given into their right hand a Scepter, That, by the arreſt of the Scepter, they might bee quiet from within; and by the edge of the ſword, ſafe from without: So intending the myſterie of godlineſſe, and the knowledge thereof, and after it, the exerciſe of godlineſſe, and the practice thereof; that ſo after Stabiliatur Regnum meum in this life, by Iuſtice, wee may come to Adveniat Regnum tuum in the life to come, by Religion. And this, is the ſecond Pillar yeelding us Iacob's ſtrength, who (as we ſaid) was furniſhed both with his Staffe, to ſee good order in his flock, and with his ſword and bow againſt the Amorite. Verſe 45. 3. Ezek. 34. 20. Pſal. 45. 6. 1 Tim. 3. 9. 4. 7. Gen. 32. 10. 48. 22.

Thus have we the two Pillars of the earth, each ſtrengthening other: Religion rooting Iuſtice within; Iuſtice fencing Religion without, and they both making an arch of goverment irremovable.

III. Yet, theſe two Pillars, as ſtrong and as ſteady as they are, except they be looked to, and upheld; except they have an Vpholder; and that a good one, Religion will cleave, and Iuſtice bend, and they both ſinke, and the whole frame with them. Therefore mention is made here of a perſon, put in truſt, with the bearing them up; which is the third point.

Which Perſon is here, Ego autem, the firſt; that is, DAVID: the firſt and the 2 Sam.15.17. chiefe Perſon in any governement. He it is, upon whom both theſe leane: He is the Lam.4.20. Head, that guideth theſe two armes: He the breath of life in both theſe noſtrills: Yea, of all the body (ſaith Ieremie, of Ioſias.) Even Chriſtus Domini, the Annointed of the LORD, is the breath of all our noſtrills.

Familiar it is, and but meane, but very full and forceable, the Simile of Eſay:
Eſa.22.23. wherein he compareth the Prince to a naile driven into a wall, whereon are hanged all, both the veſſels of ſervice, and the Inſtruments of Muſike; (that is) Hee beares them up all. And great cauſe to deſire GOD, faſt may it ſticke and never ſtirre (this naile:) for, if it ſhould, all our Cuppes would batter with the fall, and all the Muſike of our Quire be marred: (that is) both Church and Country be put in danger. Which GOD willing to ſhew (ſaith Philo Iudæus) Hee did place the fifth Commandement (which is the Crowne-commandement) ὡς ἐν μεσῳ, as it were, in the middle, and confines of both Tables; Thoſe touching Religion, and thoſe touching Iuſtice; that, with one arme He might ſtay Religion, and with the other ſtay Iuſtice, and ſo uphold both.

And, where ſuch ſupport hath wanted, both have lyen on the ground. For, both of Mica's Idolatrie (that is, corrupt Religion) and of the villanie offered at Gibeah, and of the outrage committed by them of Dan, both in rifling houſes, and ſacking whole townes (that is) of open injuſtice, GOD rendereth no cauſe but this, Non erat Rex: the Pillars went downe: Ego wanted. Without which (that is, an eſtabliſhed go-Gen.10.9. vernement) wee ſhould have no Common-wealth, but a wild forreſt, where Nimrod
Abac.1.15. and his crew would hunt and chaſe all others: No Common-wealth, but a Pond, where the great fiſh would devoure the ſmall: Nothing but a ſort of ſheepe ſcattered without a

Pſal.44.22. People, but a Rout; No building, nor Pillars, but a heape of ſtones. Therefore a joyfull
Num.23.21. noiſe is the ſhoot of a King among them.

Ioyfull indeed, every way; but joyfull eſpecially, is this Ego, bee not Saul, but David. David, which giveth ſtrength unto the Pillars, and not Saul, an empairer or weakner of them. It is David's complaint, in the forepart, hee found the land weake when hee came to it. So, Saul had left it. It is his promiſe that, as Saul by his ſlackneſſe, had brought the eſtate low; So hee, by his vigilancie, would raiſe it up againe. And this is the laſt point, how Saul decayed, and David reſtored the Pillars againe.

IIII. The Wiſe man ſaith, that evill looking to, will decay the principalls of any building:
Eccl.10.18. and that was Saul's defect (as the Scripture recordeth.) Religion firſt: In ſtead of 1 Chr.13.3. Celebrabimus, Negligimus IEHOVAM. King David, in his oration to the States of his Realme before his firſt Parliament, teſtifieth, the Arke was not ſought to in the dayes of Saul: That Pillar, was not looked to. Sought to it was, after a ſort (Religi-
1 Sam.14.18, 19. on:) but nothing ſo as it ſhould. Come let us have the Arke (ſaith hee) And then, Goe to, it skills not greatly, carry it backe againe: which, what was it, but to play faſt Act.24.25. and looſe with Religion? To intend Paul (as Felix ſaith) at our idle time; and not to redeeme time, to that end? Iudge of Religion's caſe, by the reverence of the 2 Sam.6.20. Ephod: A daughter of his owne bringing up (Mical) ſaw David, for honour of the Arke, weare it, and deſpiſed him in her heart. Iudge of it, by the regard of the Prieſt, Prieſt, the keeper of the Arke: For very love to it, that calling was kept ſo low and bare, that they were tyed to the allowance of their Shew-bread, the High Prieſt had not a loafe in his houſe beſides. This was the firſt root of his kingdome: The Arke not ſought to; The Ephod in contempt; The Prieſt-hood impoveriſhed: Et Saulo nihil horum curæ, and Saul regarded not any of theſe things. 1 Sam. 21. 4. Acts 18. 17.

Such another indifferencie for Church matters, we finde in Ieroboam. Tuſh (ſaith he jeſtingly) let them kiſſe the calves and ſpare not. Let it goe which way it will. But, therefore GOD ſends him word by Ahijah, that Iſrael ſhould be as a reed in the water, bowing to and fro, at the devotion of every wave, and every winde, without any ſteadineſſe. And was it not ſo? Search the Chronicles. So, GOD ſaw this minde in Saul to His Arke, and was wroth; withdrew from him His religious and good Spirit, and ſent upon him a prophane and furious Spirit; which carried him on, firſt to a ſinfull life, and never left him, till it had brought him to a ſhamefull death. And GOD was even ſaying his Diſperdas, to the Kingdome, but David (here) entreated for a Ne perdas, and promiſed a better care of Celebrabimus Iehovam. Hoſ. 13. 2. 1 Reg 14. 15. Deut. 33. 27.

Now where Religion thrives not, the other (of Iuſtice) will not hold long: when one ſtaffe is broken, the other holdeth not whole, long after. And ſurely his Iuſtice was ſutable to the former, to his weake regard of Religion; That alſo was weake too. Zach. 11. 4.

1. Weake toward the enemie. It is ſaid, there was want of neceſſary furniture of armour and munition, in his dayes. And there had beene defect, in teaching them to ſhoot: which David ſupplied at his entrance. 2. Weake at home too: where, he did not juſtitias, but injurias judicare. 1 Sam. 13. 22. 2 Sam. 1. 18.

The parts of Iuſtice are two (as we finde in the tenth verſe) 1 To exalt the hornes of the righteous; 2 and to breake the hornes of the wicked.

1. For the firſt. Reaſon was, and ſo was promiſe too, that David ſhould have beene rewarded with Meroë his eldeſt daughters marriage. I know not how, one Adriel (an obſcure fellow, never to have been nam'd, but to ſhew, ſuch an one put David by) had his horne exalted above him. This for reward. 1 Sam. 18. 17. 19.

2 And his Puniſhment was no better. Mercifull to Agag (whoſe hornes ſhould have beene broken) and in Abimelechs caſe, too rigorous, putting him, and eightie foure more, to the ſword for a dozen of bread. 1 Sam. 15. 9.

And whereas, in kindly Iuſtice, the rigour of frangam cornua commeth not at firſt, but Clemencie giveth gracious warning, with Dicam imprudentibus (verſe 4.) So without regard hereof, as upon any diſpleaſure, without any word at all, his Iavelin went ſtraight, to naile men to the wall, they knew not, wherefore. Thus did Iuſtice decay after Religion, and one Pillar fall upon another, whereof enſued his overthrow, and the Land dangerouſly ſicke of the Palſey. Whereof David complaineth, and prayeth, Heale the ſores thereof, for it ſhaketh. 2 Sam. 22. 17. 1 Sam. 18. 11. 19 10. 20. 33. Pſal. 60. 2.

Now, David, as when he read Abimelechs miſ-hap in the Booke of the Iudges, hee made his uſe of it, as appeareth 2 Sam. 11. 21. So here, when he ſaw, what had turned Saul to domage, tooke warning by it (Ruina præcedentium, admonitio ſequentium) and, to make the Land ſtrong, falleth to underſet the Pillars.

And firſt, of the firſt (that is) the ſtone which Saul and his builders caſt aſide. For, comming to the Kingdome, he conſecrates all his Lawes, with his Act De Arcâreducendâ: whereat, hee would needs be preſent in his owne perſon, becauſe it touched Celebrabimus Iehovam; and that with ſome diſgrace, as Mical imagined: but he was reſolute in that point, He could receive no diſhonor, by doing honor to God's Arke. And, when it was brought backe, ſet ſuch an order for the Service of it, by the Levites; for maintenance ſo bountifull; ſo reverend for regard; ſo decent for order; ſo every way ſufficient, as the care of the Temple might ſeeme to reigne in his heart. As indeed it did; and as he profeſſeth, he could not ſleepe, till he had ſet a full order for Gods matters, and brought this Pillar to perfection. Which his care was ſecundum cor Dei, and God would ſignifie ſo much, by the ceremonie in the Coronati- 1 Chron. 13. 3. 1 Chron. 16. Pſal. 132. 3.

2 Reg.11.12. Booke of the Law alſo, upon the Kings head; it was intended, that Book ſhould be as deare to them as their Crowne, and they equally ſtudie to advance it. And in putting the Scëpter

Thus was ſtrengthened the firſt Pillar: and for the ſecond, the HOLY GHOST giveth him an honourable teſtimony (I ſpeake not of his Militarie Iuſtice, I need

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE QVEENE ELIZABETH, AT GREENVVICH, On the XXIIII. of February, A.D. MDXC. being S. MATTHIA'S day.

PSALME LXXVII. Ver. XX.

Thou diddest lead thy People like Sheepe, by the hand of MOSES and AARON.

SOme, either preſent or imminent danger, and that no ſmall one, had more than uſually diſtreſſed the Prophet at the writing of this Pſalme: wherewith his ſpirit, for a while, being toſſed to and fro in great anguiſh (as may appeare by thoſe three great billowes, in the 7,8,9. verſes) yet at laſt he commeth to an Anchor (in the tenth verſe) upon the remembrance of the right hand of the moſt High. Which right hand, in one even tenour, throughout all Ages, not only to that of Davids, but even to this of ours, hath ever ſhewed it ſelfe a right hand of pre-eminence and power, in the two points in the latter part of the Pſalme ſpecified, the eſpeciall matter of his and all our comfort. 1. The finall confuſion of his enemies, though for a while exalted (untill this verſe.) 2. The finall deliverance of His people, though for a while (diſtreſſed in this verſe.) Which twaine, of many Pſalmes are the ſubſtance, and of this now before us; and indeed, all the whole ſtory in a manner is nothing elſe but a Calendar of theſe two. That the LORD of Hoſts, the GOD of Iſrael, is El Nekamoth, a GOD of vengeance againſt His enemies; and but a letter changed, is El Nechamoth, a GOD of comfort unto His people. That His Cherubims hold a flaming ſword to repreſſe the one, and have their wings ſpread to ſhadow and ſuccour the other. That His creatures; the cloud from above, is a miſt of darkneſſe to confound the Ægyptians; and the ſame cloud a pillar of light to conduct the Iſraelites. That the water from beneath, to the Ægyptian is a gulfe to devoure them, but to the Iſraelite, a wall of defence on their right hand and on their left. We need not to ſeeke farre; in the Pſalme next before, and againe in the Pſalme next after this, you ſhall finde theſe two coupled; as (indeed) for the moſt part they goe ſtill together.

Exod. 14. 21.

And

And as they goe ſtill together, ſo ſtill they end in the ſafeguard of the Church. Of all prophecies, of all judgements, of all miracles, paſt or preſent, new or old, that is the key and concluſion. The laſt verſe (if I may ſo ſay) of the Deluge was the Rainbow; of the Ægyptian bondage was the feaſt of Paſſeover; and even here in this Pſalme, after it hath, in the foure verſes next before, rayned and powred downe, and lightened and thundered, and heaven and earth gone together, there doth in this verſe enſue a calme to GODS people. This is the bleſſed period, that ſhutteth up the Pſalme: Them that hated thy people, or dealt unkindly with thy ſervants, them thou drowneds̄t and deſtroyeds̄t. But Thy people thou leades̄t like ſheepe by the hands of MOSES and AARON.

And in theſe two, may all Kingdomes and Countries reade their owne deſtinies, what they are to hope for, or to feare, at the hands of GOD. If they be Lo-ammi, not His people, they may looke backe, what they finde in the verſes before, and that is ſtorme and tempeſt. If they be His (and wee I truſt are His; and more and more His, He daily make us) this verſe is for us, that is, ſafe and quiet conduct: Thou diddeſt lead thy, &c.

The Summe. In which verſe there is mention of three perſons: 1. GOD. 2. GODS hand. 3. GODS people. 4. And of a bleſſing or benefit iſſuing from the firſt (that is) GOD: conveighed by the ſecond (that is) GODS hands, Moſes and Aaron: and received by the third (that is) GODS people: And it is the benefit of good guiding or government. This is the ſumme of the verſe.

The Diviſion As for order, I will ſeeke no other, than as the HOLY GHOST hath marſhalled the words in the Text it ſelfe. Which of it ſelfe is right exact: every word, in the bodie of it, containing matter worth the pauſing on.

1 Firſt, in the foremoſt word. Tu, GOD, who vouchſafed this benefit.

2 And ſecondly, in Duxiſti: The benefit it ſelfe of guiding from Him derived.

3 And thirdly, derived to His people, the parties that receive it.

4 And fourthly, derived to His people by His hands, which hands are Moſes and Aaron, the meanes that conveigh it.

I. Thou leades̄t thy people, &c.

The firſt part. Thou. TO begin with GOD; who beginneth the verſe, by whom and to whom wee lead, and are led, and in whom all right leading both beginneth and endeth.

It is Thou (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) that leades̄t Thy people, and (in the next Pſalme) it is He that carried His people in the wilderneſſe like a flocke, who is that He, or this Thou? It is GOD, ſaith the Prophet in the ſixteenth verſe.

That is: whoſoever be the hands, GOD is the Perſon, He is the Tu. Whoſe names ſoever we heare; whoſe hands ſoever we feele; whoſe countenance ſoever we behold, we muſt yet looke up higher, and ſee GOD in every Government. To Him we muſt make our Apoſtrophe, and ſay, Thou leades̄t, &c. For He it is leadeth properly: and, in ſtrict proprietie of ſpeech, Moſes and Aaron lead not; but GOD, by the hands of Moſes and Aaron. And that thus it is, that GOD is the Perſon that leadeth, and all other but hands under Him and unto Him, the Prophet giveth us in this ſame verſe, matter of three markes of difference, betweene Him, and them.

I. The firſt is in Duxiſti. Thou diddeſt lead (ſaith the Prophet:) diddeſt and doeſt lead; lead; diddeſt then and doeſt ſtill : But, Thou diddeſt leade by Moſes and Aaron, ſo doeſt Thou not now. The hands are changed. Then, Moſes and Aaron; after, Ioſue and Eleazar; after Othoniel and Phineës; after, others : Sed Tu idem es, But Thou art the ſame ſtill and thy yeares ſhall not faile : As if hee ſhould ſay; Their yeares (indeed) faile, and come to an end; within ſo many yeares they were not ſo ledde, and within ſo many more they ſhall not bee. But GOD hath a prerogative, that Hee is Rex a Sæculo, and Rex in Sæculum, was our King of old, and ſhalbe our King for ever and ever. Pſal.102.27. Pſal.74.12 146.10.

The ſecond is in populum tuum, Thy people : another limitation For, this people are (in the 15. verſe before) ſaid to be the ſonnes of Iacob and Ioſeph : ſo farre ſtretcheth Moſes line, and no further. But, Tu duxiſti, GOD's line ivit in omnem terram, goeth over all nations, even to the uttermoſt parts of the world. GOD's leading hath no marches. This people and all people are His : and He by ſpeciall prerogative is Rex univerſæ terræ, King (not of one people, or of one countrie or climate, but) of all the people of the whole earth. 2 Pſal.19.4. Pſal 47.7.

The third is, Per manus, By the hands. For as He guideth the people by the hands, ſo Hee guideth the hands themſelves, by whom He guideth; Ruleth by them, and ruleth them; ruleth by their hands, and ruleth in their hearts : Is both the ſhepheard of Iſraël, leading them like ſheepe, and further leadeth Ioſeph alſo (their leader) tanquam ovem, like a ſheepe. That is, they bee Reges gentium, kings of the nations, but He is Rex Regum, King over Kings themſelves. Moſes and they with him be ἡγεμόνοι, Guides (as Saint Paul calleth them;) but IESVS CHRIST is ἀρχηγὸς, the Archguide. Aaron and his familie bee ποιμένες, Shepherds (as Saint Peter termeth them :) but IESVS CHRIST is ἀρχιποίμην, the high and ſovereigne Shepherd over all. Why then Dicite in Gentibus, Tell it out among the Nations (ſaith the Prophet) that GOD is King; that He is the Tu, the Leader, the perpetuall, the univerſall, principall Leader of His people. 3 Pſal.80.1. 1 Tim.6.15. Heb.13.14. Heb.12.2. 1 Pet.5.4. Pſal.69.10.

From which plaine note (that the LORD is Ruler) the Pſalmiſt himſelfe draweth a double uſe, containing matter both of comfort and feare.

1 Of Comfort; (in the 97. Pſalme :) Dominus regnavit, exultet terra; The LORD is Ruler (or Leader) let the earth rejoyce. Pſal.97.91.

2 Of feare; (in the 99. Pſalme :) Dominus regnavit, contremiſcat populus; The LORD is Ruler (or Leader) let the people tremble. Pſal 99.1.

1 First, from GODS ruling, matter of joy. For if we wilbe ruled by Him, He will appoint over us, a Ruler according to His owne heart, He will prevent her with the bleſſings of goodneſſe : He will deliver the power of Siſera into her hands : He will cloath her enemies with ſhame, and make her crowne flouriſh on her head, and ſet the dayes of her life, as the dayes of heaven. 1 Sam 13.14. Pſal 21.4. Pſal.132 18. Pſal.89.29.

2 Secondly, matter of feare too. The Lord is Ruler, let the people tremble. For if they fall to bee un-ruly, Hee can vindemiare ſpiritum principum, as eaſily gather to Him the breath of a Prince, as we can ſlippe of a cluſter from the vine. He can ſend them a Rehoboam without wiſedome; or a Ieroboam without religion; or Aſſhur (a ſtranger) to be their King; or (which is worſt of all) Nullum Regem, a diſ-ordered Anarchie, quia non timuimus Iehovam. Therefore exultantes & trementes, in joy and trembling let us acknowledge GOD and His ſupreme leading, that our parts may bee long in DOMINVS regnavit, exultet terra, The LORD doth lead us; let the Land rejoyce. Pſal.97.1. Pſal.76.13. Hoſ.10.3.

Yet one point more, out of this Tu. By comparing it with the verſes before, on which it dependeth : that as it is the Perſon, and Power of GOD that is chiefe in every Rule : So, not everie power, but even that very power of His, whereby Hee worketh wonders. For the Prophet (in the fourteenth verſe) having ſaid of GOD, Thou art the GOD that doeſt wonders, and ſo particularizing, Thou thundereſt from heaven, Thou ſhakeſt the earth, Thou divideſt the Sea; at laſt commeth to this Thou, Thou leddeſt the people. Very ſtrange it is, that Hee ſhould ſort the leading of the people with GODS wonders, and that not onely among them all, but after them all, as chiefe Verſe.14. 18. 19.

of all. Recount the Government of the people, as if it were some speciall miracle. And indeed, a miracle it is; and whosoever shall looke into the nature and weight of a Monarchie, will so acknowledge it. The Rod of Government is a miraculous rod:
Exod.4.3. Numb.17.8. both that of Moses, for it would turne into a serpent, and backe againe: and Aaron's rod too, for, of a dry and seare sticke, it came to blossome againe and to beare ripe almonds: To shew, that every Government is miraculous, and containeth in it matter of wonder, and that in two respects.

1 Ezek.1.3. Gen.49. For, whereas there is naturally in every man a seeking his owne ease; to lye soking in his broth (as Ezekiel speaketh;) not to be custos fratris, nor to afflict and vexe his soule with the care of others: it is surely supernaturall, to endure that carke and care, which the Governours continually doe (a matter that we inferiours can little skill of;) but to Ester.6.1. Dan 6.18. read Eâ nocte dormire non potuit rex, Such a night the King could not sleepe; And againe, Such a night no meat would downe with the King, and he listed not to heare any Musike: To endure this (I say) is supernarurall, and it is GOD, which above all nature, by His mighty spirit worketh it in them.

2 Num.16.12. Againe whereas there is, in every inferiour, a naturall wildnesse or unwillingnesse to brooke any Ruler, or Iudge over them (as was told Moses flatly to his face;) For, by nature, the people are not like sheepe: It is not (certainely) any power of man, but a meere supernaturall thing, to keepe the nations of the earth in such awe and order, as

Num.11. 12. Wherefore when wee see that carefull mind in a Prince (I will use Moses owne words) to carrie a people in her armes, as if shee had conceived them in her wombe, as no nurse, no mother more tender: and againe, when wee see this tumultuous and tempestuous bodie, this same Sea of popularity kept in a quiet calme, and infinite millions ebbing and flowing (as it were) that is, stirring and standing still, arming and disarming themselves, killing and being killed, and all at the monosyllables of one person,
Mat.8.9. Goe and they goe, Come and they come, Doe and they doe it: Let us see God sensibly in it, and the power of God, yea, the miraculous power of God; and say with the Prophet, Thou art the God, that doest wonders, Thou leddest thy people like Sheepe by the hands of MOSES and AARON. And so much for the first part, first word, and person.

II. The second Part. Duxisti. Exod.17.15. Esa 9.6. Psal.82.1. The second word compriseth the benefit issuing from God, which is a leading or conduct, the second part. A word of great compasse, and includeth many leadings under it. For, to be our Iehovah-Nissi, our standard-bearer, and to leade our Forces in field; To be our wonderfull Counseller, and to lead that honourable Boord. To sit in the middest of our Iudges, and to lead them in giving sentence; All these and more than these are all in duxisti. And all these are especiall favours: but the chiefe of all, and that whereof all these are but the traine, is the leading us in His heavenly truth, and in the way of His Commandements, to the land of the living. All the rest attend upon this: this is chiefe, and therefore the leading of principall entendment.

And,

And in this leading there be theſe foure points. For that it be a leading, it muſt be orderly without ſtraying, skilfully without erring, gently without forcing, and certainly without miſſing our journeyes end. Firſt, orderly, without ſtraying: led and not wander. Second, skilfully without erring: led and not miſſed. Third, gently without forcing: led, and not drawen. Fourth, certainly without miſſing: led, and not led about, ever going, but never comming to our place of repoſe.

In the firſt whereof, we are but let ſee, the wandring and ſtay-leſſe eſtate we were in, till GOD vouchſafed to ſend us this gracious conduct: ſicut oves, like Ezekiels ſtray ſheep, ſtragling upon every Valley and upon every Hill. The very caſe, theſe people here were in, when GOD in mercy ſent them theſe two Guides, ſcattered all over the Land to ſeeke ſtubble. Which eſtate of theirs, is the expreſſe patterne of the world, wandring in vanitie, picking up ſtrawes, and things that ſhall not profit them, ſeeking death in the errour of their life, till GOD looke mercifully upon them, and from this wilde wandring, reduce them into the right way. 1 — Ezek. 34. 5, 6 — Exod. 5. 12. — Sap 1. 12.

Which right way is the ſecond point; For elſe, it is not Duxiſti; but Seduxiſti; and as good no leading at all, as miſ-leading. Now this right way, if we aske where it lyeth, the Prophet will tell us, Thy way O GOD is in the Sanctuary: (that is) it is the word of GOD which is the Load-ſtarre, when GOD is the Leadſ-man. Sicut oves it muſt be, and this is the voice of the true Shepherd, to be liſtened to of all his flocke, that will not rove and runne head-long into the Wolfes den. This is the Pillar of the cloud in regard of this people here, to be kept in view of all thoſe that will not periſh in the wilderneſſe, wherein is no path. Indeed it is both: 1 the Pillar of the cloud before, directing us in the way; 2 and the voice of the Shepherd behind us (as Eſay ſaith) telling us when we miſſe, and crying, Hæc eſt via, ambulate in eâ, This is the way, the right way, walke in it. 2 — Verſ. 13. — Exod. 14. — Eſay 30. 21.

And in this way, our guiding muſt be milde and gentle: Elſe it is not Duxiſti, but traxiſti; drawing and driving, and no leading. Leni ſpiritu non durâ manu, rather by an inward ſweet influence to be led, than by an outward extreme violence to be forced forward. So did GOD lead this people here. Not the greateſt pace (I wis) for they were a yeare marching that; they might have poſted in eleven dayes (as Moſes ſaith.) No nor yet the neereſt way neither, as Moſes telleth us. For, He fetched a compaſſe divers times; as all wiſe Governours by His example muſt doe, that deſire rather ſafely to lead, than haſtily to drive forward. The Spirit of GOD leadeth this people (ſaith Eſay) as an horſe is ridden downe the hill into a valley; which muſt not be a gallop, leſt horſe and ruler both come downe one over another; but warily and eaſily. And ſicut oves ſtill giveth us light, ſeeing the Text compareth it to a ſheepe gate. Touching which kinde of Cattell to very good purpoſe, Iacob (a skilfull ſhepherd) anſwereth Eſau (who would have had Iacob and his flocks have kept company with him in his hunting pace.) Nay not ſo Sir (ſaid Iacob) it is a tender cattell, that is under my hands, and muſt be ſoftly driven, as they may endure; if one ſhould over-drive them but one day, they would all dye, or be laid up for many dayes after. Indeed, Rehoboam left ten parts of his flocke behinde, onely for ignorance of this very point in Duxiſti. For, when in boiſterous manner he chaſed them before him, telling them what yokes he would make for them (a farre unmeet occupation for a Prince to be a yoke-maker) they all ſhrunke from him preſently, and falſified his prophecie cleane. For whereas he told them ſadly, His little finger ſhould be as big as his Fathers whole body, it fell out cleane contrary; for, his whole body proved not ſo big as his Fathers little finger. A gentle leading it muſt be; and in the beginning, ſuch was the courſe. Therefore yee have the Kings of Canaan in Geneſis, for the moſt part called by the name of Abimelech (that is) Pater Rex, a King in place, a Father in affection. Such was Moſes our leader here, a meeke man above all the men on the earth. Such was David himſelfe, who full bitterly complaineth, Ah theſe ſonnes of Zervia are too hard, too full of execution for mee. And (to end this point) thus deſcribeth he his good Prince (in the 72 Pſalme) He ſhall come downe (not like haile-ſtones on a houſe top, but) like the dew into a fleece of wooll (that is) ſweetly and mildly, without any noyſe or violence at all. 3 — Deut. 1. 2. — Exod. 13. 18. — Eſay 63. 14. — Gen 33. 13. — 1 Reg. 10. 11. — Numb. 12. 3. — 2 Sam. 3. 39. — Pſal. 72 6.

Laſt of all. All this reducing and right leading and gentle leading, muſt end in an end; they muſt not goe and goe ſtill in infinitum; that, is no leading but tyring our-Pſal.23.2. right. It muſt be ſicut oves, whom the good Shepherd (in the three and twentieth Pſalme) leadeth to a place, and to a place meet for them, where there is greene paſture by the waters of comfort. So was it in this people here. They were led out of Ægypt to ſacrifice to GOD, and to learne His Law in the Mount of GOD, Sinai; and from thence alſo to Sion it ſelfe, His owne reſt, and holy habitation. And even ſo our peo-Pſal.73.24. ple are led from the wandrings of this world, unto the folds of GODS Church, where (as the Prophet ſaith in the 73. Pſalme) firſt GOD will a while guide them with His counſell, and after will receive them into His glory. And this is the end of all leading. To bring us all from the vaine proffers of the world, which we ſhall all finde (as Salomon found Eccleſ.1.2. it) vanitas vanitatum & omnia vanitas, to the ſound comfort of His Word in this Booke, which is indeed veritas veritatum & omnia veritas: in the knowledge and practice whereof when they ſhall have fulfilled their courſe here, GOD will bring them to His owne reſt, to His heavenly Ieruſalem, where is and ever ſhall be felicitas felicitatum & omnia felicitas.

But in this life here, wee come no further than the borders of His Sanctuary, (as he Pſal.78.54. telleth us in the next Pſalme) in the way whereof if GOD lead us conſtanter, conſtantly, not after our wanton manner, out and in when wee liſt, all the other inferiour leadings ſhall accompany this one. For, this leading leadeth them all. He ſhall lead our Counſellours, that they ſhall adviſe the counſels of his owne heart: Hee ſhall lead our Iudges, that they ſhall pronounce the judgements of His owne mouth: Hee ſhall lead our forces into Edom, the ſtrong Cities and holds of the enemie: Hee ſhall lead our Navie in the Sea, by unknowne pathes, to the place it would goe; and I can ſay no more. Thorow all the dreads and dangers of the world, thorow the perils of the Red-ſea, thorow the perils of the Deſart, thorow the malice of all our enemies, Hee ſhall ſafely lead us, and ſurely bring us to His promiſed Kingdome, where wee ſhall ſee

Act.19.32. Will you ſee the folly and giddineſſe of this multitude? yee may, Act.19. there, they be at the Towne-houſe, ſome crying one thing, ſome another; and the more part knew not why they were come together. Therefore Moſes truly ſaid, it was a fond and giddy-headed people.

Act.22.23. Will yee ſee the brutiſhneſſe of the people? In the 22. Acts, you ſhall ſee them taking up a crie, upon a word ſpoken by Saint Paul, and caſting off their cloths and throwing duſt into the ayre, as if they were quite decayed of reaſon; that David truly might ſay, inter belluas populorum.

Num.16.41. Will yee ſee the ſpight and malice of the people. In the ſixteenth of Numbers, for Coreh's death they challenge Moſes and Aaron, yee have perſecuted and killed the people of the LORD. Yet neither did Moſes once touch them, but GOD Himſelfe from heaven, by viſible judgement, ſhewed them to be as they were. Neither were Coreh and his crew the people of GOD, but the ſonnes of Belial. But that is their manner, in deſpight of Moſes, if for ought they like him not, preſently to canonize Coreh and his complices, and make them the Saints of GOD. That Aaron ſaid truly of them, This people is even ſet on miſchiefe.

Laſtly

Laſtly, if yee will ſee their head-ſtrongneſſe, looke upon them in the eighth of the firſt of Samuel, where having phanſied to themſelves an alteration of eſtate, though they were ſhewed plainly by Samuel, the ſundrie inconveniences of the government, they ſo affected, they anſwer him with, No (for that is their Logicke, to deny the concluſion) but wee will bee like other countries about us, and bee guided as wee thinke good our owne ſelves. That (of all other) GODS ſaying is moſt true, It is a ſtiffe-necked and head-ſtrong generation. 1 Sam.8.19,20

And yet, for all theſe wants, ſo well weening of themſelves, as they need no leading, they: every one among them is meet to be a leader, to preſcribe Moſes and controll Aaron in their proceedings. So that, where GOD ſetteth the ſentence thus, Thou leddeſt thy people like ſheepe by the hands of Moſes and Aaron; might they have their wils, they would take the ſentence by the end, and turne it thus, Thou leddeſt Moſes and Aaron like ſheepe by the hands of thy people.

And this is the people, Populus. And ſurely, no evill can bee ſaid too much of this word people, if yee take it apart by it ſelfe, Populus without Tuus, The people and not Thy people. But then, here is amends for all the evill before, in this word Tuus; Which qualifieth the former, and maketh them capable of any bleſſing or benefit. Tuum.

A common thing in Scripture it is, thus to delay one word with another. Si peccaverit in te frater tuus: Peccaverit ſtirres our choler ſtraight; but then, Frater makes us hold our hand againe. Tolle feſtucam ex oculo: Feſtucam, a mote? our zeale is kindled preſently to remove it: but then Ex oculo, the tenderneſſe of the part tempers us, and teacheth us to deale with it in great diſcretion. And ſo it is here: Populus ſo un-ruly a rout, as Moſes and Aaron would diſdaine once to touch them; but when Tuus is added, it will make any of them, not onely to touch them, but to take them by the hand. For, it is much that lyeth upon this pronoune Tuus; indeed, all lyeth upon it: and put mee Tuus out of the verſe, and neither GOD reſpecteth them, nor vouchſafeth them either Moſes to governe, or Aaron to teach, or any heavenly benefit elſe. For, Populus is unworthy of them all: But, for Tuus, nothing is too good. Matth.18.15. Luke 6.41,42.

For there is, in Tuus, Not onely that they be men, and not beaſts; Free-men, and not Villaines; Athenians or Engliſhmen (that is, a civill) not a barbarous people (the three conſiderations of the heathen Ruler:) but, that they be GODS owne people and flocke; and that is all in all. His people, becauſe He made them; and ſo, the lot of His inheritance. Pſal. 100.3. His people againe, becauſe Hee redeemed them from Ægypt with His mightie arme; and ſo His peculiar people. His people the third time, becauſe He redeemed their ſoules by His ſufferings; and ſo, a people purchaſed moſt dearely, purchaſed even with the invaluable high price of His moſt precious bloud. This is that, that ſets the price on them. For, over ſuch a flocke, ſo highly prized, ſo dearely beloved, and ſo dearely bought, it may well beſeeme any, to be a Guide. Moſes, with all his learning; Aaron, with all his eloquence; yea, even Kings to be their foſter-Fathers; and Queenes to be their Nurſes. No leading, No leader too good for them. I conclude (with Saint Auguſtine upon theſe words) Quamdiù minimis iſtis feciſtis fratribus meis, feciſtis & mihi: Audis minimis (ſaith he) & contemnis, Thou heareſt they be the baſe people, the minims of the world, and thou ſetteſt thy foot on them; Audi & fratribus, Take this with thee too, that they be CHRISTS brethren, thou leadeſt: Et mihi crede, non eſt minima gloria horum minimorum ſalus, And truſt mee, it is no poore praiſe to protect this poore flocke, but a high ſervice it is, and ſhall be highly rewarded. CHRIST will take and reward it, as done to Himſelfe in perſon. Verſe 15. 1 Pet.1.9. Eſay 49.23.

Sicut Oves ſtandeth doubtfull in the Verſe; and may be referred, either to the manner of leading, thus; Thou leadeſt like ſheepe: Or, to the perſons led, thus; Thy people, like ſheepe. There wee touched it before, in Duxiſti, in every of the foure manners of leading; and here now wee take it in againe, with the people, to whom it may have reference. And indeed, there is no terme, that the HOLY GHOST more Sicut Oves.

often ſendeth for (than this of His flocke) to expreſſe His people by, for, in the eſtate of a flocke they may beſt ſee themſelves. As here it is added reſpectively to Duxiſti, to let them ſee, both what intereſt they have in it, and what need they have of it. I meane of Government.

1 Lo-ammi. Firſt, as a note of difference betweene Ammi and Lo-ammi: Thy People, and the People: GODS People, and ſtrange children: Every People is not Sicut Oves; Pſal.32.9. nor every one among the People. There is a People (as the Pſalmiſt ſpeakes) Sicut Equus & Mulus, like the untamed Horſe or Mule, in whom is no underſtanding: And among the people, there be too many ſuch. Surely, by nature wee are all ſo: Iob 11.12. wilde and unbroken, as the Aſſe-colt (ſaith Iob.) Which wildeneſſe of nature when they are untaught, and taught to ſubmit themſelves to government; to become gentle and eaſie to bee led, Sicut Oves, led to feeding, led to ſhearing, to feed thoſe that feed them; tractable of nature, and profitable of yeeld: It is a good degree and a great worke is performed on them. For, by it, as by the firſt ſteppe, they become GODS people. For, His people are populus ſicut Oves, and they that are not His, are populus ſicut Hirci, a people like Hee-Goats, in nature intractable, in uſe unſerviceable.

Now, being His people, they come to have an intereſt in Duxiſti, the benefit. For, populus ſicut oves muſt bee led gently; but populus ſicut hirci muſt bee driven forcibly. Duxiſti is not for both: It is a privilege. And if there bee any retaine their wilde nature, or degenerate from ſheepe into goats (as divers doe daily:) for them, Aaron hath a rod to ſever them from the fold, by cenſure of the Church. And if that will not ſerve, Moſes hath another, which hee can turne into a Serpent and ſting them: Yea, if need ſo require, ſting them to death, by the power ſecular. For Nachah is leading, and (the ſound remaining) Nacah is ſmiting; and a neceſſary uſe of both. The one, for thy people, like ſheepe, who will bee led; the other for the ſtrange children like goats, who will not ſtirre a foot, further than they be forced. And this is the intereſt.

2 But now againe, when they be brought thus farre, to be like ſheepe; they are but like ſheepe, though: that is, a weake and unwiſe cattell, far unable to guide themſelves. Which ſheweth them their need of good government, and though they be the people of GOD, yet that Moſes and Aaron be not ſuperfluous. For, a feeble poore beaſt (we all know) a ſheepe is; of little or no ſtrength for reſiſtance in the world, and therefore in danger to be preyed on by every Wolfe. And, as of little ſtrength, ſo of little reach. None ſo eaſily ſtrayeth of it ſelfe; None is ſo eaſily led awry by others. Every ſtrange whiſtle Mat 24.23 24. maketh the ſheepe; Every Ecce hîc maketh the people caſt up their heads, as if ſome great matter were in hand.

Theſe two defects doe mainly enforce the neceſſitie of a Leader. For, they that want ſight (as blinde-men) and they that want ſtrength (as little children) ſtirre not without great perill, except they have one to lead them. And both theſe wants are in ſheepe, and in the people too.

If then they bee ſicut Oves, like ſheepe: What is both their wiſdome? Sure to be in the unitie of a flocke; and what is their ſtrength? Truly, to bee under the conduct of a Shepherd; In theſe two is their ſafetie. For, if either they ſingle themſelves and ſtray from the fold; or if they bee a fold, and yet want a ſhepherd; none more miſerable than they. And indeed, in the HOLY GHOST's phraſe, it is the ordi- Eſay 53.6. nary note of a private mans miſerie, to bee Tanquam ovis erratica, as a ſtray ſheepe Matth.9 36. from the flocke; and of the miſerie of every Eſtate politike, to bee Tanquam grex abſque Paſtore, as a flocke without a Shepherd. Therefore, guiding they need: both Zach 11.7. the ſtaffe of unitie (Bands) to reduce them from ſtraying, and the ſtaffe of order (Beautie) to lead them ſo reduced. And would GOD they would ſee their owne feebleneſſe and ſhallowneſſe, and learne to acknowledge the abſolute neceſſitie of this Duxiſti ſicut Oves. benefit; in all dutie receiving it, in all humilitie praying for the continuance of it, Ductiſumus ſicut Oves. that GOD breake not the fold, and ſmite not the Shepherd, for the flockes unthankfulneſſe.

But

By the hands of Moſes and Aaron.] This part of the verſe that is behinde, and containeth the Meanes by whom GOD conveigheth this benefit to His people, had had no uſe, but might well have beene left out, and the verſe ended at populum tuum, if [Author alienæ potentiæ perdit ſuam] had beene GODS rule. For, He needed no meanes, but immediately from Himſelfe, ſine manibus, could have conveighed it, without any hands (ſave thoſe that made us; that is, His almightie power, but) without any arme or hand of fleſh; without Moſes or Aaron, without men or Angels, Hee was able (Himſelfe) to have led us. And à principio fuit ſic; for a time, Hee did ſo; Of Himſelfe immediately, and of His owne abſolute ſoveraigntie, held Hee court in the beginning, and proceeded againſt Adam, Eve, Cain, the old World; and there was none joyned in commiſſion with Him. He onely was our King of old (ſaith the Pſalmiſt:) and for a ſpace, the juſtice that was done on earth, Hee did it Himſelfe. And as He held court before all, ſo will He alſo hold one after all. Veniet, Veniet qui malè judicata rejudicabit dies: There will come a day, there is a day comming, wherein all evill judged caſes ſhall be judged over againe. To which all Appeales lye, even from the dayes of affliction in this world (as ſometimes they be) to the day of Iudgement in the world to come. The fourth Part. Per manus Moſis & Aaronis. Pſal. 74. 12.

This eſtate of guiding being wholly inveſted in Him, there being but one GOD and one Guide, He would not keepe it unto Himſelfe alone, as He might, but it pleaſed Him to ſend Moſes His ſervant, and Aaron, whom He had choſen, to aſſociate them to Himſelfe, in the Commiſſion of leading, and to make hominem homini Deum, One man a Guide and god to another. Pſal. 105. 26.

And thoſe, whom Hee thus honoureth, [1] Firſt, the Prophet calleth GODS hands, by whom Hee leadeth us: [2] and ſecondly telleth us, who they be; MOSES and AARON. Per manum.

GODS hands they be: For that, by them He reacheth unto us Duxiſti, and in it, Religion, and counſell, and juſtice, and victory, and whatſoever elſe is good. Hee ſendeth His Word to Moſes firſt, and by him (as it were, thorow his hand) His ſtatutes and ordinances unto all Iſrael. Pſal. 103 7.

And not good things onely, but (if they ſo deſerve) ſometimes evill alſo. For as, if they be vertuous (ſuch as Moſes and Aaron) they be the good hand of GOD for our benefit, ſuch as was upon Ezra: ſo, if they be evill (ſuch as Balaac and Balaam) they be the heavie hand of GOD for our chaſtiſement, ſuch as was upon Iob. But the hand of GOD they be both. And a certaine reſemblance there is betweene this government and the hand: For, as we ſee the hand it ſelfe parted into divers fingers, and thoſe againe into ſundry joynts, for the more convenient and ſpeedie ſervice thereof; ſo is the eſtate of government, for eaſe and expedition, branched into the middle Offices, and they againe (as fingers) into others under them. But the very meaneſt of them all, is a joynt of ſome finger of this hand of GOD. Nazianzen (ſpeaking of Rulers, as of the Images of GOD) compareth the Higheſt, to pictures drawne cleane thorow, even to the feet: the middle ſort, to halfe pictures drawne but to the girdle: the meaneſt, to the leſſer ſort of pictures drawne but to the necke or ſhoulders. But all, in ſome degree, carry the Image of GOD.

Out of which terme (of the hands of GOD) the people firſt are taught their dutie; ſo to eſteeme of them, as of GODS owne hands: That as GOD ruleth them by the hands of Moſes and Aaron (that is) by their miniſtery; ſo Moſes and Aaron rule them by the hands of GOD (that is) by His authoritie. It is His name, they weare; it is His ſeat, they ſit in; it is the rod of God, that is in Moſes and Aarons hands. If we fall downe before them, it is He that is honoured, if we riſe up againſt them, it is He that is injuried: and that Peccavi in cœlum, & in te muſt be our confeſſion, againſt heaven, and them; but firſt, againſt Heaven and GOD Himſelfe, when wee commit any contempt againſt Moſes or Aaron. Luke 15. 21.

1. And the Rulers have their leſſon too. Firſt, That if they be GODS hands, then His Spirit is to open and ſhut them, ſtretch them out, and draw them in, wholly to guide and governe them; as the hand of man is guided and governed by the ſpirit that is in man. 1 man. Heavenly and divine had thoſe hands need be, which are to bee the hands, and to worke the worke of GOD.

2 Againe, they be not onely hands, but manus per quam (that is) hands in actu. Not to be wrapped up in ſoft furre, but by which an actuall dutie of leading is to be performed. Moſes owne hand (in the fourth of Exodus) when he had lodged it in his warme
Exod.4.6. boſome, became leprous; but being ſtretched out, recovered againe. Hands in actu then they muſt be: not looſely hanging downe, or folded together in idleneſſe; but ſtretched out: not only to point others, but themſelves to bee formoſt in the execution of every good worke.

3 Thirdly, Manus per quam ducuntur: That is, as not the leprous hand of
1 Reg.13.4. MOSES, ſo neither the withered hand of IEROBOAM ſtretching it ſelfe out againſt GOD, by miſ-leading His people, and making them to ſinne. Leading backe againe
Deut.17.16. into Ægypt (a thing expreſſely forbidden) either to the oppreſſion and bondage of Ægypt; or to the ignorance and falſe worſhippe of Ægypt, from whence MOSES had led them. For as they be not entire bodies of themſelves, but hands, and that not their owne, but GODS: ſo, the People they led, are not their owne, but His, and by Him, and to Him to bee led and directed. So much for GODS hands.

Moſes and Aaron. This Honourable title (of the hand of GOD) is here given to two parties, MOSES and AARON, in regard of two diſtinct duties performed by them. Yee heard, how wee ſaid before, The people of GOD were like ſheepe, in reſpect of a double want: 1 want of ſtrength by meanes of their feebleneſſe, 2 and want of skill by meanes of their ſimpleneſſe. For this double want here commeth a double ſupply, from the hand, 1 of ſtrength, and 2 of cunning: For, both theſe are in the hand.

1 It is, of all members, the chiefe in might; as appeareth by the diverſitie of uſes
Pſal.20.6. and ſervices, it is put to. In Potentatibus dextræ (ſaith the Prophet.)

2 And ſecondly, it is alſo the part of greateſt cunning; as appeareth by the varietie
Pſal.78.72. Pſal.137.5. of the workes, which it yeeldeth, by the pen, the pencill, the needle, and inſtruments of muſicke. In intellectu manuum (ſaith the Pſalmiſt, in the end of the next Pſalme: and let my right hand forget her cunning.)

This hand of GOD then, by his ſtrength affordeth protection to the feebleneſſe of the flocke: and againe by his skill affordeth direction to the ſimpleneſſe of the flocke. And theſe are the two ſubſtantiall parts of all leading.

Theſe twaine (as two armes) did GOD appoint in the wilderneſſe, to lead His people by. Afterward, over theſe twaine did Hee yet ſet another, even the power and
1 Sam.15.17. authoritie Regall, in place of the Head (as Himſelfe termeth it;) and to it, as ſupreme, united the regiment of both. The conſideration of which Power, I meddle not with (as being not within the compaſſe of this verſe) but onely with the hands of regiments Eccleſiaſticall and Civill. Which (as the two Cherubims did the Arke) over-
2 Chron.19.6. ſpread and preſerve every eſtate. One (ſaith Iehoſaphat) diſpenſing Res Iehovæ, the LORDS buſineſſe; the other dealing in Negotio regis, the affaires of Eſtate. One (ſaith
2 Chro.19.11. Pſal.122.4,5. David) intending the worſhip of the Tribes; the other, the Thrones for juſtice. One (ſaith Paul) being for us in τὰ πρὸς Θεὸν, things pertaining to GOD; the other in τὰ Ciωτικὰ, Rom.15.17. 1 Cor.6.3. matters of this preſent life. The one Pro aris, the other Pro focis, as the very Heathen acknowledge.

1 Theſe two are the hands, neceſſary to the body, and neceſſary each to other. Firſt, they be (both) hands: and the hands (we know) are paires. Not Moſes the hand, and Aaron the foot; but either, and each the hand. And as they be a payre of hands, ſo be they Eſay 22. alſo a payre of brethren. Not Moſes de primis, and Aaron de noviſſimis populi; Not Moſes the Head, and Aaron the taile: Not Moſes a Quis (as Saint Hierome ſpeaketh, out of the twentie two of Eſay) and Aaron a quaſi quis; but, both of one parentage, both one mans children.

2 Secondly, being (both) hands, neither of them is ſuperfluous; no more to be bee ſpared, then may the hands : but both are abſolutely neceſſarie; and a maymed and lame eſtate it is, where either is wanting. The Eſtate of Iſrael (in the ſeventeenth of the Iudges) without a Civill Governour prooved a very maſſe of confuſion. The very ſame Eſtate (in the ſecond of Chron. Chap. XV.) Sine ſacerdote docente, no leſſe out of frame. Miſerable firſt, if they lacke Ioſua, and bee as ſheepe wanting that Shepheard. And miſerable againe, if they lacke IESVS, and bee as ſheepe wanting that Shepheard. Moſes is needfull, in the want of water, to ſtrike the rocke for us, and to procure us ſupplie of bodily releefe. Aaron is no leſſe: For hee in like manner reacheth to every one food of another kinde (which wee may worſe bee without) even the bread of life, and water out of the ſpirituall Rocke, which is CHRIST IESVS. Moſes wee need, to ſee our forces ledde againſt Amaleck, for ſafeguard of that little we hold here in this life : and Aaron no leſſe, to preſerve our free-hold in the everlaſting life : For the great and mightie Κοσμοκράτορες, the legions of our ſinnes, the very forces of the Prince of darkneſſe are overthrowne by the ſpirituall weapons of Aaron's warfare. Moſes may not bee ſpared from ſitting and deciding the cauſes which are brought before him. No more may Aaron, whoſe Vrim giveth anſwer, in doubts no leſſe important; and who not onely with his Vrim and Thummim, giveth counſaile, but by his incenſe and ſacrifice obraineth good ſucceſſe for all our counſailes. In a word : If Moſes rodde be requiſite to ſting and devoure the wicked; Aaron's is alſo, to receive the good, and to make them to fructifie. If Moſes hand want, with the ſword to make us a way : Aaron's hand wants too, with the key to give us an entrance. And thus much will I ſay for Aaron (for the Divell hath now left to diſpute about Moſes bodie, and bendeth all againſt him) that, the very firſt note of difference in all the Bible, to know GODS people by, is, that as Cain and his race begun at the City-walls firſt, and let Religion (as it might) come after, any it skilled not what : So the poſterity of Seth (the people of GOD) begun at the Church (Et cæptum eſt invocari) at the worſhip of GOD and His Tabernacle; as the point of principall neceſſity in their accompt, and (as CHRIST reckoned it) Vnum neceſſarium. And truely, if wee bee not Populus, a people, but Populus Tuus, GODS people, wee will ſo eſteeme it too. For, as for juſtice and law and execution of them both, Taliter fecit omni populo, it is everie where to be had, even among the verie Heathen and Turkes themſelves. So is not GODS truth and Religion and the way of righteouſneſſe. No : Notus in Iudæâ Deus (ſaith the Prophet in the laſt Pſalme) that is onely to be had in the Church, and Non taliter fecit omni populo, hee hath not dealt ſo with every people. Every people have not knowledge of His lawes. So that, if the Governor bee not meerely Paſtor agreſtis, a rurall ſhepheard, ſuch as are in the fields, and the people of GOD, in his eyes, no better than Pecora campi; ſo that, if hee keepe them one from goring another with their hornes, and one from eating up the others locke of hey, all is well and no more to bee cared for of Gallio : but, that hee bee like the great Shepheard, the good Shepheard, the Prince of Shepheards, who was Paſtor animarum (as Saint Peter calleth him) a Shepheard of ſoules; to ſee alſo that they be in good plight, that they be ledde in the way of truth. It will eaſily be yeelded to, that per manum Moſis, is no full point, but needeth [and Aaron] to be joyned to it. Moſes himſelfe ſaw this, and therefore (in the fourth of Exodus) when he had divers times ſhifted off this ſole leading, while GOD ſtood ſtill upon Ecce mittam te; At laſt, when GOD came further and ſaid, Ecce Aaron frater tuus, mittam eum tecum, that contented him, and then hee undertooke it; as knowing, theſe were like hands, maimed, the one without the other; but that, Moſes and Aaron make a compleat Government.

3 And what ſhould I ſay more? They bee hands and the bodie needeth them both: They bee hands and they need each other. Moſes needeth Aaron : For, Moſes hands are heavy and need a ſtay : and Aaron it is, that keepeth them ſteddy, by continuall putting the people in remembrance, that they bee ſubject to principalities; by winning that at their hands by his continuall dropping his word upon them, which Moſes, for the hardneſſe of their hearts, is faine to yeeld to. By ſtrengthening mainely Moſes ſes Debita legalia, duties of Parliament and common law, by his Debita moralia, duties of conſcience and Divinitie. And whatſoever action Moſes doth impriſon, Aaron impriſoneth all the thoughts any waies acceſſarie to the action. Which thoughts if they may run at libertie, the action will ſurely be bayled, or make an eſcape, and not be long kept in durance. And ſo many waies doth Aaron ſupport and make both more eaſie, and more ſteadie, the hands of Moſes.

And Moſes (for his part) is not behind, but a moſt jealous preſerver of Aaron's honour and right every where. Every where mild, ſave in Aaron's quarrell, and with thoſe only, that murmured againſt Aaron, and ſaid hee tooke too much upon him. Take but his prayer for all (becauſe I would end;) his prayer made for Aaron by name (in the 33. Deut.) and theſe three points in it: Bleſſe, O Lord, his ſubſtance: there-
Deut. 33. 11. fore hee would never have heard, Vt quid perditio hæc? that all is loſt that is ſpent on Aaron's head. Then, Accept the worke of his hands: therefore he would never eaſily have excepted to, or with a hard conſtruction skanned all the doings of Aaron. Laſt of

To conclude, Moſes and Aaron (both) have enemies: as Aaron hath Coreh
2 Tim. 3. 8. and Dathan, that repine at him; ſo hath Moſes (too) Iannes and Iambres, that would withſtand him. And he that at one time diſputes about the bodie of Aaron, may Iude 9. alſo hereafter (for hee hath done it heretofore) diſpute about the bodie of Moſes. It is good therefore, they bee reſpective each to other: Aaron helpe Moſes in his lot; and Moſes, Aaron in his; that they ſtand in the gap one for another; that ſo, their unitie may bee hand in hand, as the unity of brethren, ſtrong and hard to breake, as the barres of a palace.

The LORD, by whoſe Almighty power all governments do ſtand; thoſe eſpecially wherein the people are led in the way of his Sanctuarie; as He hath graciouſly begun to lead us in that way, ſo leave us not, till we have finiſhed our courſe with joy. Knit the hearts of Moſes and Aaron, that they may joyne lovingly: Teach their hands, and fingers of their hands, that they lead skilfully: Touch the hearts of the people, that they may bee ledwillingly: that, by meanes of this happy conduct, ſurely without error, and ſafely without danger we may lead and be ledde forward, till wee come to the fruition of His promiſe, the expectation of our bleſſed hope even the eternall joyes of His celeſtiall Kingdome, through IESVS CHRIST our LORD. To Whom, &c.

A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE QVEENE ELIZABETH, AT Saint IAMES'S, On VVednesday, being the XXX. of March, A. D. MDXCIII.

MARKE Chap. XIV. Ver. IV. V. VI.

Erant autem quidam indigne ferentes intra ſemet-ipſos, & dicentes, Vt quid perditio iſta unguenti facta eſt? &c.

Therefore ſome diſdeigned among themſelves, and ſaid: To what end is this waſte of ointment?
For, it might have beene ſold for more than three hundred pence, and been given to the poore: And they grudged againſt her.
But IESVS ſaid: Let her alone; why trouble ye her? She hath wrought a good worke on Me.

THIS action of waſte, (which by ſome is brought, and, by CHRIST our SAVIOVR, traverſed) was againſt a woman (ſaith Saint MARKE, the verſe before:) which woman (as Saint IOHN hath it, Chap. XI. Ver. 2.) was MARIE MAGDALEN; now a glorious Saint in heaven, ſometime, a grievous ſinner upon earth.

Saint AVGVSTINE noteth; Of all thoſe that ſought to CHRIST, She was the only ſinner, that for ſinne only, and for no bodily griefe or maladie at all, ſued and ſought to Him. Of whom being received to grace, and obtaining a quietus eſt for her many ſinnes (a benefit in-eſtimable, Et quod nemo ſcit, niſi acceperit, which they onely know, and none but they, that have received it) as,

as, much was forgiven her, ſo, much ſhe loved. And ſeeking by all meanes to expreſſe her multam dilectionem propter multam remiſſionem (as CHRIST ſaith, Verſe 8.) ὁ ἔσχεν ἐποίησεν; nothing ſhe had, was too deare. And having a pretions confection or ointment, of Nardus, the chiefe of all ointments; and, in it of πίστικὴ, the chiefe of all Nardi; and in it too, not of the leafe, but (of the very choice part thereof, of) the Spike, or flower; both, for the making, true; and for the value, coſtly; that did ſhe beſtow. And that frankly: For, ſhe did not drop, but powre; not a dramme or two, but, a whole pound; not reſerving any, but breaking boxe and all: And that, not now alone, but three ſeverall times, one after another.

Luk.7.47.

This ſhee did: and (as it may ſeeme) the coherence fell out not amiſſe. This outward ointment and ſweet odour, ſhee beſtowed on CHRIST, for the oile of gladneſſe; for the Spirituall annointing (as Saint Iohn;) and the comfortable ſavour of His knowledge (as Saint Paul calls it) He beſtowed on her.

Pſal.45.7. 1 Ioh.2.20. 2 Cor.2.25.

This, as it was well done, ſo, was it well taken of CHRIST: and ſo ſhould have beene, of all preſent, but for Iudas, (ſaith Saint Iohn.) Who, liking better odorem lucri ex re qualibet, than any ſent in the Apothecarie's ſhop, ſeeing that ſpent on CHRIST's head, that hee wiſhed ſhould have come into his purſe; repined at it. But that, ſo cunningly, in ſo good words, with ſo colourable a motion (1. That it was a needleſſe expenſe, indeed a waſte: 2. That it might have beene beſtowed much better, to the reliefe of many poore people:) as that he drew the Diſciples (ſome of them) to favour the motion, and to diſlike of Marie Magdalen and her doing. So that, both they and he joyned in one Bill: but he, of a wretched covetous minde; they, of a ſimple plaine intent and purpoſe, thinking, all that was well ſpoken, had beene well meant.

Which Action of theirs, for that it was brought, Not onely againſt her that beſtowed it; but even, againſt CHRIST alſo that admitted it, though not ſo directly; (as it were, againſt her with Vt quid perditio? againſt Him, with Vt quid permiſſio?) for that alſo, it might bee a dangerous preſident in ages to come, if nothing were ſaid to it; and ſhut all boxes and barre all ointments for ever: Our SAVIOVR Himſelfe taketh on Him, to plead her cauſe. Not onely excuſing it (in Sinite illam) as no waſte; but alſo commending it (in bonum opus) as a good worke: That the ointment was not ſo pleaſant to His ſenſe, as her thankfulneſſe acceptable to His Spirit: That the ointment, which then filled the houſe with the ſent, ſhould fill the whole world with the report of it; and as farre and wide as the Goſpell was preached, ſo farre and wide ſhould this act be remembred, as well for her commendation that did it, as for our imitation that ſhould heare of it.

Wee ſee, both the occaſion, and ſumme of theſe words read. Which may aptly bee ſaid, to containe in them a diſputation or Plea, about Marie Magdalen's act, whether it were well done, or no. Whereof there are two principall parts: Iudas, with Some other ad oppoſitum againſt it; to have Marie Magdalen reformed, and her box converted to better uſes: CHRIST for it, and againſt them: Sinite, that He would have it ſtand; yea, that He would have it acknowledged for that, it was, Bonum opus.

The Diviſion

I. In the intreating whereof, theſe three points I purpoſe: 1. Firſt of Iudas his Motion: and in it 1 The ſpeech it ſelfe, Vt quid perditio, &c? 2 The Speaker, Some of them: 3 The Minde, or affection; thought much.

II. 2 Secondly, of CHRIST's Apologie: and in it 1 That it is ſufferable: 2 That it is commendable: 3 The reaſon of both, In Me; for that on Him.

III. 3 Laſt of all, laying both together: (The former, That it is a good worke; The latter, That yet grudged at:) that good actions oft times meet with evill conſtructions; therefore, 1 though wee doe well, yet we ſhall bee evill ſpoken of: and againe, 2 though wee bee evill ſpoken of, yet we muſt proceed to doe well. The uſe, wee ſhall make, is (briefly) Ex factis facienda diſcere, by report of that which hath been done heretofore, to learne, what to doe in like caſe, hereafter. Whereof, that I may ſo ſpeake, &c.

Of

OF the tongue, the Pſalmiſt ſayth, it is the beſt member we have (Pſal. 108. 1.) and Saint Iames (Chap. 3. 6.) it is the worſt, and that it marreth all the reſt. The nature of the tongue (thus being both good and bad) maketh, that our ſpeech is of the ſame complexion, Good and bad likewiſe. Whereof this ſpeech, (here) is a pregnant example. Good in ſubſtance, as I ſhall ſhew preſently: Evill, in circumſtance (as wee ſhall afterward ſee) as neither well meant, nor well applied. I. Iudas Motion. 1 The ſpeech. Vt quid Perditio?

In the ſpeech, I commend two good things: 1 The Abuſe noted, Vt quid, &c. 2 The Vſe ſet downe, Potuit, &c. Not onely the Defect; Not thus waſted: but, the Proviſion how; Turned into money, and diſtributed to the poore.

Wee beginne with the firſt: Vt quid perditio, &c? Surely a good ſpeech, and of good uſe, and to be retained. Religion and Reaſon (both) teach us, In all things, to regard both Quid, and Vt Quid: No leſſe to what end, wee doe, than what we doe: And both of them cenſure, Not onely what is done to an evill end, wickedly; but, what is done to no end, vainely. Quem fructum, What fruit (ſaith Saint Paul) A good queſtion: and, if it have none, Vt quid terram occupat, Why troubleth it the ground? (ſaith CHRIST.) So that Religion alloweth not waſte; cenſureth idleneſſe; and in all things calleth us to our Vt quid hæc? Rom. 6. 21. Luke 13. 8.

And this, as in all things (in waſt of time, waſt words, addle queſtions:) ſo yet chiefly, in that which wee call Bonum utile. The very goodneſſe of which things is, in their uſe; and they, no longer good, than they have an uſe, which if they loſe, they ceaſe to be good. So that in them, not only thoſe things that are miſ-ſpent upon wicked uſes; but, even thoſe alſo that are idlely ſpent to no uſe, they are loſt, laviſhed, and no good commeth of them. And therefore in them, Vt quid perditio, indeed? is well ſaid. This they learned of CHRIST Himſelfe: who in the gathering of the broken meate, gave charge, ut ne quid perdatur, that no waſte ſhould be made. Indeed, Vt quid perditio ulla? whereto, either this or any waſte at all? So that, Religion is an enemie to riot; and good husbandry is good divinitie. Ioh. 6. 12.

It is GODS will, that, of our goods Iuſtitia condus ſit, Iuſtice ſhould bee Purveyor; and they rightly gotten: Temperantia promus; Temperance the Steward; and they, not waſtfully ſpent. Conſequently, Neither waſte, in buying: but (as CHRIST) τῶν χρείαν ἔχουδι: (Not τῶν χρῆσι, but τῶν χρείαν; Not, whereof we may have uſe, but, whereof we have need, and cannot be without it.) 1 Ioh. 13. 29.

Neither waſte in ſpending: Οἰκονομία, a diſpenſation, not a diſſipation; a laying forth, not διασκορπισμὸς, a caſting away; a wary ſowing, not a heedleſſe ſcattering; and a ſowing χείρα, ἀ δυλαχῆ by handfulls, not by basket fulls (as the Heathen man well ſaid.) 2

Neither waſte in giving; Not, making χάριτας, πορνὰς, the Graces (which be Virgins) not proſtituting them and making them common; but (as the Apoſtles rule is) καθότι τὶς χρείαν ἔχε, as need ſhall require. So that, to all, to needleſſe laying out, to ſuperfluous expence, to unneceſſarie largeſſe, Vt quid perditio? may bee ſaid. The reaſon whereof is well ſet downe: That, if wee waſte it in needleſſe expences, wee ſhall not have enough for neceſſarie charges: If wee laviſh out in waſting, wee ſhall leave but little for well doing. Whereof, our times doe yeeld plenteous teſtimonie: In which, Nabals waſte; which being a ſubject, makes a feaſt like a King; the Aſſyrians waſte, every meane perſon, in apparell, like a yong Prince; Eſaus waſte, in carrying a retinue of foure hundred at his heeles; Shallums waſte, in incloſing our ſelves in cedar, and lifting up our gate on high: (Once for all, I proteſt, and deſire it may bee graciouſly received, I doe not, ſo much as in thought, once ayme at the eſtate of the Higheſt, whoſe glorie I wiſh to match, yea, to ſurpaſſe Salomon in all his royalty: but) This riotous miſ-ſpending, where no need is, hath eaten up our 3 Act. 2. 45. 1 Sam. 25. 36. Gen. 34. 1. Ier. 22. 15.

Chriſtian

Christian beſtowing, where need is. Leſſe waſte we muſt have, if we will have more good workes. It is truely called perditio : It is the loſſe and deſtruction of all our good deeds; and I pray GOD, it be not alſo, of our reward for them.

Vt quid perditio, is a fault : But, ut quid perditio hæc, is a greater. For [hæc] wanteth not his emphaſis; but is, as if he ſhould ſay : If the ſumme had beene little, or the value ſmall, it might have beene borne : if twenty or thirty pence, it might have beene winked at : But, if it come once into the hundreds; ſo great a ſumme, ſo much; verily, it may not, it ought not to be ſuffered.

Thus much for Perditio, the idle waſte, the abuſe. Now followeth Iudas plot, the uſe hee wiſheth it put too. For firſt, he maketh a perfect valuation and eſtimate of what it would riſe too; (and it may ſeeme ſtrange how he ſhould be ſo skilfull an Auditor of the price of rich ointments; But, he hit it well; for, ſo (ſaith Plinie) the beſt Nardus was ſo worth:) And that is a materiall point. For, the greater the ſumme, the more colour of complaint; Vt quid perditio ulla; but ſpecially, ut quid perditio hæc unguenti, of ſo rich an ointment? Then, from his audit, he commeth to his Motion, Potuit vendi, &c. Sale to bee made the mony to bee divided, and the poore to bee releeved. This is his Supplication : and, this ſecond is better than the former. Indeed, ut quid perditio, may bee the ſpeech of a Niggard : But this ſecond that followeth, cannot but proceed from a liberall mind, Potuit vendi, &c. In that Hee ſpeaketh not, to have it ſpared; but to have it converted to better uſes. And, this is a bleſſed conjunction, when honeſt, ſparing and charitable releeving; when frugalitie and liberalitie goe together. Such is this Motion : whereto no man can take exception. Naturally, our bowells yerne, and wee have an inward compaſſion, at the miſery of our brethren : and, GODS Law willeth not to hide our ſelves from our owne fleſh, but, when we have ſerved our need, to give to the poore.

The motion then, is both frugall and charitable : and beſides, if we looke more narrowly into it, there appeareth great zeale in it. All waſte things, hee wiſheth, the poore had. Yea, it ſeemeth, he reckoneth it waſte, that the poore is not the better for: that, to bee miſ-pent, that might be better ſpent, and is not. And very exactly driveth to this point : That our goods may go, not, to ſome end; nor to ſome good end; but, to the very beſt end of all, The reliefe of the poore. Sure, when I conſider the ſobrietie, bounty, zeale of the ſpeech, I thinke, many wiſe heads could not in ſo few words, have contrived a better or more pithy motion : That that which is otherwiſe laviſhed upon one, may be imployed to the benefit of many : that theſe ſo many hundreds may be beſtowed rather in nouriſhment, than in ointment; rather on neceſſarie reliefe, than upon needleſſe delight : rather on a continuall good, than on a tranſitorie ſmell : rather, that many hungry bellies filled, than that one head annointed. Sure, howſoever it was meant, or applied, the ſpeech (in it ſelfe conſidered) is to very good purpoſe : even IVDAS ſpeech, without IVDAS application.

2 The Perſons that ſpeak. Some of them.

We be now to enquire, of the perſon, by whom; and after, of the intent, wherewith it was ſpoken.

We are naturally carried, of a good ſpeech to enquire the author : partly, in an honeſt inclination (as Salomon ſaith) to kiſſe the lippes of him that anſwereth upright words : Partly, becauſe it is a matter of importance, not onely to weigh quid dicatur, but alſo quis dicat. Τέχπῳ ἐδὺ ὁ πείθων τῷ λέγονῖῳ, ἢ λόγῳ : Many times, we be more perſwaded with the minde of the ſpeaker, than with the body of the ſpeech; and their Poſitions move not ſo much, as doe their Diſpoſitions. It is very materiall, in all (and ſo, in this) to aske, quis hic loquitur ? For, who can chooſe, but ſpeake all good of the ſpeech ? Surely, if we had not been told otherwiſe, Zelotæ vocem, wee muſt needs have thought it, to have beene Simon Zelotes. Zelotæ vocem put as, Iſcariotæ eſt : One would imagine, it was Simon the Zelous : It is not ſo, it was Iudas the covetous. Some of them (ſaith Saint Marke :) Of His Diſciples (ſaith Saint Matthew :) and namely

namely Iudas (ſaith Saint Iohn) who firſt ſtood up, and tooke this exception; and, after him, ſome others. So that, it was Iudas; and, by his perſwaſion, Some beſides: For, if he had not ſtirred, they would have taken it well enough: Such is the danger of ſiniſter ſpeeches. Let us begin with Iudas. Iohn 12. 4.

And here firſt, we begin ſomewhat to ſuſpect, that it commeth from Iudas. Iudas, it is well knowne what he was. At that very inſtant, that this Vt quid was in his mouth, his fingers were in CHRISTS coffers, and one might have ſaid it to him, Vt quid, &c. And, for all he ſpake againſt waſte, he waſted and made havocke of his Maſters goods: And a little after, he might have beene charged, with a worſe matter: And yet, he preferres motions. CHRIST telleth us, what he was (Iohn 17. 12.) Filius perditionis: and this terme marreth all; that the childe of perdition ſhould finde fault with perdition. The caſe is like, when they, that have waſted many pounds, complaine of that peny waſte which is done on CHRISTS body, the Church. Or, when they, that in their whole dealings (all the world ſees) are un-reformed, ſeriouſly conſult, how to reforme the Church. When they, that doe no good with their owne, deviſe what good may be done with Mary Magdalens: they, that have ſpent and ſold and conſumed themſelves, and never in their whole lives ſhewed any regard of the poore; when they talke of charitable uſes, O dolor! (ſaith Auguſtine) Quis tulerit? (ſaith the Poët.) Vt quid perditio? doth but evill fit their mouthes. GOD helpe us, when Iudas muſt reforme Mary Magdalen.

This, is a griefe: would, this alone. But, a greater griefe it is to ſee, how he is matched in this complaint: That, in this murmuring, ſome other; divers well diſpoſed and of the better ſort of CHRISTS Diſciples joyne with him, and take part againſt Mary Magdalen. Who, rather carried with the ſpeech, than heeding the Speaker, were drawen into the ſocietie of the ſame repining. And this (ſure) is Scandalum magnum, when evill counſell meeteth with eaſie beleefe, and ſubtiltie findeth credulitie. When the Phariſees can perſwade IOHNS Diſciples to muſter with them, and ſay, Why doe wee and IOHNS Diſciples faſt? whom you cannot but ſay, are good men, whatſoever you thinke of us. When Iudas can ſay: Why doe I, and CHRISTS owne Diſciples reprove this? So is it with us; Not, to ſee homines perditos queri de perditione, them ſpeake of waſte, that have waſted themſelves; (for, that might be digeſted:) but, to ſee grave and good men erre the ſame errour, and draw in the ſame line with them. But (no doubt) that which carried theſe here, leadeth them too, Pretences: that, which was able to deceive CHRISTS Diſciples, deceiveth them too. And, this is the difference: That the Diſciples, in a good meaning, went with him, becauſe they ſaw, hee ſaid well: But Iudas, upon a greedie covetous minde, to have his owne turne ſerved. For, cui bono? if it had come to the poore, who ſhould have had the diſtribution? It was his office: ſo that it may be, he ſpake for himſelfe. Which did plainly appeare by the iſſue. For, upon better information given by CHRIST, the Diſciples were anſwered, and remained content. But Iudas grew enraged, and fell from evill to worſe; from covetiſe, to malice; from ſacrilege, to treaſon: Even to this dangerous reſolution, Vendere nardum, or (if not) Vendere Chriſtum; and to ſubvert Him, that he might not ſpoile. For all the world, as ſome in our time, that ſought helpe of authoritie, while they had hope, that way to prevaile: but, when that came not; ſince, begin to hold, they will and may doe it, without ſtay for authoritie; and ſeeke to ſubvert the State, they cannot forme to their phanſie. My hope is, and ſo is my prayer; That thoſe which have hitherto beene carried with their plots and pretences, now they be enformed and ſee what the truth is; may doe (as the Diſciples) leave Iudas in his murmuring, and let Mary Magdalen be quiet. Marke 2. 18.

That which wee learne of this part, is: 1. From Iudas; That a good ſpeech may droppe out of an evill mouth. As (ſure) ſetting aſide that the hands bee Eſau's, the voice might become Iacob well enough. This inſtruction we have from Iudas: It was GODS will, that even hee ſhould preach, and wee learne ſome good leſſons by him. And, this we may learne: That, No waſte is to be made: And if wee learne it, even Gen. 27. 22.

he ſhall co-operate to our good. And, as from him we have this ſpeech for our Oeconomie; ſo, from Caiphas (as bad as he) wee have another full as good, for our Policie. That ſpeech (which Saint Bernard can never enough commend:) Melius eſt ut pereat unus quàm unitas. Both, evill meant (I grant:) but, both well ſpoken, where their place is. So, it pleaſeth GOD, that wee ſhould heare His wiſdome juſtified (not onely out of the mouth of her owne children, but) even out of the mouthes of the children of folly. That Hee might condemne evill things, even by evill men: and evill men, non ex ore ſuo, not from His owne, but from their owne mouthes; and ſo their condemnation be juſt.

Ioh 11. 50.
Matth. 11. 19.
Luke 19. 22.

From the Diſciples too eaſie beleefe, wee learne Credit omni verbo, not to truſt phraſes and oyled ſpeeches too faſt: Never, by the liſt, to conclude of the cloth. Seeing, not onely Vaſa electionis, but filii perditionis, ſay well. But, if we heare much adoe about Vt quid perditio, to ſtay and thinke; May not this bee Iudas that ſpeaketh now, as once it was? And if it bee, to ſuſpect, when hee ſpeakes well. Of this aſſuring our ſelves (what Saint PAVL telleth us of ſadly;) that, not onely Mary Magdalen ſhall be reformed, and her Ointment maligned, and the poore oppoſed, but even CHRIST Himſelfe preached, obtentu, under pretence. Therefore, it ſtandeth us in hand, to looke to the Diſpoſition, as well as the Poſition: and not to runne head-long, to ſay ſtraight Vt quid, as faſt as they. So much for the Speaker.

Prov. 14. 15.
Phil. 1. 18.

3 The affection wherewith it was ſpoken. Indignè ferentes, & intra ſe dicentes.

With the Perſon by whom, wee propound the affection, wherewith it is ſpoken. For, as the Perſon is a preſumption: So, if this can bee had, it maketh a full evidence. And that is, in theſe words, ἀγανάκτησις ἐν ἑαυτῷ, that hee thought much with himſelfe.

The ſpeech, for the poore (if it be kindly) doth naturally come from the compaſſion of charitie, and not from the grudging of a greedie deſire; as this is ſaid to doe. And ſo ſhould wee have conceived of this; that, from the care of the poore (no doubt:) but that, the Spirit of GOD maketh a window in his breſt, and lets us ſee the ſecrets of his heart, and telleth us, it was not the care of the poore; Non, quia pertinebat ad eum de pauperibus, but, quia fur erat, becauſe he bare the bagge, and tooke order, it ſhould never be over heavie, but that hee might well beare it; and thought all too much that went beſide it.

Iohn 12. 6.

Which, is a point of great uſe to be underſtood. It is one of the myſteries of iniquitie, that, Ever there be two Quia's belonging to bad purpoſes (as Saint Marke ſaith:) 1 One, ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, within, in heart: 2 the other, λέγοντες, without, in ſpeech. Another quia they thinke in their hearts; and another, they ſpeake in our eares, which is the non quia. 1 The one, a true cauſe inwardly intended: 2 The other, onely a colour, outwardly pretended. As, in this: the true quia (ἐν ἑαυτοῖς) a wretched humour to provide for himſelfe: The pretenced quia (λέγοντες) a charitable affection to provide for the poore. All ſinnes have ſo. Mundus ſequitur Eum, the true cauſe (envie ἐν ἑαυτοῖς;) but, they told another quia; (λέγοντες) Venient Romani, the ſafety of the State. Herod would learne where he might finde CHRIST; the cauſe (indeed) to murther Him; the cauſe (in ſhew) to worſhip Him.

Iohn 12. 19.
Iohn 11. 48.
Matth. 2. 16. 8.

Intra ſe.

It is no new thing but common and uſuall, in all exceptions to Religion, the true cauſe is ἀγανάκτησις, a thinking all too much; a thinking, all is perditio, all loſt that commeth not to us, that wee gaine not by. Wee ſee, it was the true reaſon, the men of Sichem made among themſelves, why they would become of Iacobs Religion, and bee circumciſed: Nonne omnia quæ habent, noſtra erunt? Shall not all they have bee ours? It was the very reaſon, whereby Haman went about to perſwade Ahaſuerus to ſuppreſſe the Iewes Religion: Let it be done, and I will weigh ſo many thouſands to the Kings coffers. And, in the New Teſtament, it was the very reaſon, Demetrius there uſeth: O, crie for Diana, Magnifie her, Quia inde nobis erit acquiſitio, we ſhall be all gainers by it. GOD knowes, this is the true cauſe, and the Analogie of of Religion to many: It was ſo to Iudas: and, GOD grant, the like be not found in Iſrael.

Now, though this be the true, yet this in no wiſe muſt come into λέγοντες, and bee ſpoken. If Iudas had dealt plainly, he ſhould thus have framed his ſpeech: Vt quid perditio? potuit vendi & mitti in crumenam meam: but, that had beene too harſh; for, that had beene plaine ſacrilege: And, of Sacrilege, Saint Paul ſeemes to ſay, (*Rom.*2.22.) it is (if not worſe, yet) as bad as Idolatry: Thou that pulleſt downe Idols, committeſt thou ſacrilege? As if he held, as good a falſe religion, as a ſpoiling religion. Therefore, that muſt be kept ἐν ἑαυτῷ and not come into λέγοντες, but it muſt be ſhrowded; as indeed, the Heathen man ſaid, Μόνον δεῖται προφάσεως ἡ πονηρία, Bad attempts need onely an handſome pretence: for, with the reſt they can diſpence: with GOD, and His Word, and feare, and conſcience and all: and, ſo a pretence had, it is all they deſire. Dicentes.

Now, no pretence more fit (to make them perfect Maskers) than Saint Pauls vizor μόρφωσις εὐσεβείας; and Saint Peters cloke ἐπικάλυμμα; the vizor of godlineſſe, and the cloke of Religion. And, ſuch was Iudas here; a charitable, carefull proviſion for the releefe of the poore. Whom, though (the HOLY GHOST ſaith expreſly) he cared not for one jot, yet maketh he them his ſtalking-horſe; and Pauperibus is the point: that, is it, he ſeeketh for, and (GOD knoweth) nothing elſe. 2 Tim.3.5. Iohn 12.6.

This his ſacrilegious wicked humour he covereth under zeale of the poore: And ſo, to hide one fault, committeth two. Firſt, Sacrilege; then, hypocriſie.

And, it is no new thing under the Sunne (as Salomon tels us) to gild a pot-ſheard with gold-foile (that is) to over-lay a falſe heart, with zealous lippes. Abſaloms vow was the maske for his conſpiracie againſt DAVID. Iezabels faſt, her vizor, for the oppreſſing of NABOTH. And here, wee have an Invective againſt waſte, a ſupplication for the poore, in IVDAS mouth, and yet ſeven abominations in his heart. Prov.26.23. 2 Sam.15.7. 1 King.21.9. Prov.26.25.

Is it not heavineſſe unto death, to conſider this? Well ſaid the Wiſe-man: O wicked abomination, whence art thou come to cover the earth with deceit!

But, more need had we to beware, than complaine. And indeed, all wee learne from this point, is Noviſſe & Odiſſe, to know and avoid. To know, ſuch there be, as cover ſacrilege with zeale; and with good uſes, cover no good intents. To know them; and to avoid them. And, the better to doe that, to marke the end of him, that he euſed it, and ſee, what became of him: How, from this ſinne, by GODS juſt judgement, he fell to proditio; and from it (after) to make away himſelfe. To whom, in that caſe, truly might have beene ſaid, Vt quid perditio, indeed? But, this was his end in this life, and in the other, he hath his portion with hypocrites, and they, with him, in the lake of fire and brimſtone. Matth.24.51.

So much for the 1 Speech it ſelfe; 2 for the Speaker; and, in him, both his perſon, 3 and his intent.

II. CHRISTS Apologie.

Now, as Iuſtice would, let us heare alteram partem. Theſe are ſhrewd preſumptions: yet let us not reſolve, but ſtay, till CHRIST have ſaid; And if he miſlike it too, Sell it and ſpare not.

But IESVS, &c. There was (ſaith Saint Gregory) no errour of the Diſciples, præſente Magiſtro, while CHRIST was preſent with them, but it was Salutaris error, quia totius Mundi ſuſtulit errorem, a wholeſome and profitable error, for it rid the world of an errour for ever after. Wee may well apply it to this. Wee ſhould have beene of Iudas minde; and, that that carried the Diſciples, have gone for currant, had not our SAVIOVR CHRIST over ruled the caſe, and ſtayed the ſale of Mary Magdalens ointment; and in ſtaying it, ſaid enough to ſtop their mouthes for ever, that make the like motions.

Which to doe the more firmely, albeit CHRIST might well have excepted to Iudas perſon, as unfit: (what, the ſonne of perdition talke of perdition?) Or laid open his intent, as wicked and execrable (Vt quid hoc ſacrilegium? Vt quid hæc hypocriſis?) sis?) Yet, the more ſufficiently to doe it, Hee waves both, and joynes iſſue upon the very point it ſelfe; admitting, all had beene ſimply and honeſtly both ſaid and meant.

Wherein, Hee keepeth this order: Firſt, propoundeth, That, what was done, it was ſufferable, and ſhee not to be troubled for it: Sinite illam, &c. Secondly, it was a good worke: and therefore ſhee not onely to bee excuſed, but to be commended, for it. Thirdly, the reaſon and warrant of both, (In Me) for that, it was done upon Him: On whom, nothing that is beſtowed can be ſaid to be loſt, but muſt and ought to be ſaid, to be well beſtowed. So that, there is a full anſwer to every point of Iudas bill: Vt quid for Vt quid: Vt quid moleſtia hæc? for Vt quid perditio? Potuit vendi, is anſwered with Sinite, let alone: Perditio, with bonum opus: and Pauperibus with In Me, who is of more value than many poore; after whom it may well become the poore to be ſerved.

To begin then, with the firſt. Sinite illam (ſaith CHRIST.) Not, as they hoped, ſiſtite illam, Stay her, indeed it is but a waſte worke ſhee is about: but, Sinite illam, let her alone, the worke is good, ſuffer her to proceed. His meaning is: Such acts as this was, are to bee let alone, and they, that ſo diſpoſed, not to be troubled. Sure, Hee fore-ſaw, many would bee medling; many Vtquid's would bee framed, and many Potuit's deviſed, and much buſineſſe be made, about Mary Magdalens Ointment, and about workes of that nature: That every other while, ſome Motions, Petitions, Plots would be framed about the altering of it. To this day they will not let her alone, but diſquiet her ſtill. Hee hath therefore left in His Goſpell theſe words, as a fit anſwer, to ſtay their hands and ſtoppe their mouthes, for ever: Sinite illam, let them be, ſuffer them to remaine: Vt quid moleſtia hæc? a meet reply to Vt quid perditio hæc? to the worlds end.

And this requeſt (to my poore conceit) is very reaſonable: (If in this kinde, any thing may bee allowed for reaſonable.) It is not, Imitamini illam; or, adjuvate illam: Doe yee the like, contribute to her charge; further and helpe her, what you may; (which yet, Hee would have us:) That, would Iudas never bee got to: If CHRIST had wiſhed him to like coſt, what adoe then would there have beene? But this: doe but let her alone: If you will not further, yet hinder her not; trouble her not. That, ſhee hath ſpent, of her abilitie ſhee hath done it: ſhee hath not had of you, one penny toward her three hundred; nor ſhee asketh you none. Seeing you are at no coſt, why ſhould it grieve you? If you like not to follow her, yet let her alone.

And, may not the ſame in like reaſon be ſaid and entreated, at this day? That, what our Fathers and Elders in the CHRISTIAN Faith bounteouſly imployed on CHRIST; what they (I ſay) have that way dedicate, if we will not adde to it and imitate them, yet we will let it alone, and not trouble them; and at leaſt be not with Iudas, if we like not or liſt not to be with Mary Magdalen. (On CHRIST, it is, I dare boldly ſay; and if I ſay it, I ſhall have all the ancient Fathers on my ſide: and if I ſay it, Saint Paul will warrant me; who (in 1 Cor. 12. 12.) expreſly calleth the Church CHRISTS Bodie: And he might well doe it: the firſt ſpeech, CHRIST ever ſpake to him, Himſelfe calleth the Church, Me (the word He here uſeth.) On CHRIST, it is ſpent, any part of CHRIST, be His glory more than other; and, on that Office and calling of the Church, which Saint Paul (who beſt knew the dignitie of it) calleth the glory of CHRIST.) This (I ſay) under correction, is, as mee thinketh, not unreaſonable; that ſeeing, what ſuperſtition hath defiled, is removed and gone; touching that which is remaining, it be ſaid, Sinite illam.

Act. 9. 4.

2 Cor. 8. 23.

It is commendable. Bonum opus operata eſt.

From this firſt degree of Sinite, our SAVIOVR CHRIST aſcendeth to a higher: and, leſt we ſhould miſtake, as if He bare with her good minde and meaning; rather than allowed the worke; He tels us, the very work it ſelfe is good: and ſo pleads and juſtifies it, not as ſufferable only, but as commendable. For, that is the meaning of, Bonum opus operata eſt.

Wherein

Wherein, firſt, He anſwereth the principall reaſon, Perditio eſt. You may ſell, (ſaith Iudas) it is but waſte: You muſt let it alone, (ſaith CHRIST) it is Bonum opus. So that, as His former (of Sinite) croſſed the Motion; So, this (of bonum opus) overthroweth the Reaſon, Perditio.

In which, our SAVIOVR CHRIST looſeth the knot, and teacheth us a point: to enquire firſt, Ecquid perditio, whether it be a waſte? before we come to Vt quid, To what end is it? If it be waſte, it is well and truly ſaid: But, this (He pleadeth) is not any: unleſſe (which GOD forbid) good workes be waſte, with us. And therefore joyneth iſſue upon the word hæc: that is, that is done upon Him, is no waſte at all, as Iudas termeth it; but (as Hee chriſteneth it by a new name) Bonum opus. Therefore, his reproofe is nothing, tanquam cadens in materiam indebitam, as lighting upon an unmeet matter, which deſerveth no reproofe, but rather commendation.

Indeed if Iudas, ſometime before, had ſaid it to Mary Magdalen, in the dayes of her former vanitie, when ſhee waſted thus much and (peradventure) many a penie more, on her ryot and wantonneſſe; then (indeed) Vt quid perditio hæc? had hit right. But, now it was not on her ſelfe, but on CHRISTS head, it is out of ſeaſon. As, if our age (now) would apply to Nabals riotous feaſts; to the Aſſyrians ſuperfluous ſuits; to Eſau's ſuperfluous retinue; to the endleſſe building, Ieremie findeth fault with; to our manifold idle exceſſes, many wayes; to every and each of theſe, an Vt quid perditio? there now, it were right: there indeed were the true place of Vt quid perditio? But, this is (among many) a ſtrong illuſion of theſe dayes: that, whereas there are abroad in the world, ſo many true waſtes; ſo much, in ointments, and perfumes upon our ſelves; ſo many hundred denarii (indeed, no man can tell, what) daily laviſhed; wee can neither ſee (our ſelves) nor patiently heare of others, ut quid perditiones hæ? Here, all is well: all is well beſtowed. Neither Vt quid, nor potuit dari pauperibus; the poore, never comes in our head. No where, but in CHRIST, ought is amiſſe. Onely, in that that is meant to Him, and ſpent on Him, there comes out our Vt quid, there comes the poore into our minde. No way, to provide for them, but by ſale of CHRISTS ointment. That, is the waſte: and, none but that: and, none but that is maligned. Wee are perfect auditours, we can exactly reckon, how many hundreds CHRIST waſteth: but who keepeth any account of his owne? To our ſelves, too much is too little: To Him, too little is too much. And three hundred pence, that way beſtowed, is a greater eye-ſore than three hundred pounds (I dare be bold to ſay) to not ſo good uſes.

Thus it is: and, it is to be lamented, that thus it is. But, CHRIST teacheth us better, if wee will learne of Him, and let Iudas goe, that wee may better beſtow our Vt quid any where, than upon Him. And we ſhall finde it true: The day will come, when that onely, that goeth to Him, ſhall be found to be no perditio; and all elſe perditio indeed, whatſoever, or upon whatſoever. To be loſt indeed, and no fruit to come of it. That, which is ſowen in the fleſh, to be loſt in corruption; that, which on the belly, εἰς ἀφεδρῶνα; that, which on the backe, in ragges; that, which on building, in rubbiſh; that, which to our heires, in prodigalitie, riot, and exceſſe: And that, which is In Me, ſhall prove no perditio, waſte, loſt, or laviſht, but bonum opus, a good deed; to be rewarded with a bleſſed remembrance on earth, and with a crowne of glory, in the Kingdome everlaſting. Gal. 6. 8.

Thus (you ſee) Iudas is anſwered, and the worke quit from the name of perditio. So farre from perditio, that it is Bonum opus. A good worke, indeed; as, proceeding from a good minde, poſſeſſed with the vertue of vertues, thankfulneſſe. For, mercy, beſtowed on Him, who onely is good, and goodneſſe it ſelfe: who here alloweth it for good; cauſeth it to be regiſtred in His Goſpels, for good; in the day of Iudgement, ſhall pronounce it; good: Rewardeth it for good, in this world, with a good name; in that to come, with all the good of His Kingdome, where no good is wanting.

3 The reaſon: In Me.

The third remaineth [Vpon Me] wherein (properly) is meant His naturall body of fleſh, which ſhould not alway be with us. But they, of whom we have learned to interpret the Scriptures (in a manner, all) extend it to His Myſticall body too: and (as they thinke) by good conſequence. That, ſeeing He gave His naturall body to be bought and ſold, rent and torne, crucified and ſlaine for His body myſticall; His body myſticall is (certainly) dearer to Him, and better He loveth it: And then, if He will accept that, is done to the leſſe, and make it Bonum opus; He will much more, that, which is done to the more beloved; and it ſhall never goe forleſſe: Never did, I am ſure. The Scriptures record (as a good worke) that that was laid downe at the Apoſtles feet, no leſſe than this that was laid upon CHRISTS owne head: And, in them, Ananias a Church-robber, and Iudas a CHRIST-robber, both, in one caſe. Satan is ſaid to have filled both their hearts in that act: And like evill end came to both: And both are good remembrances for them, that ſeeke and ſay, as they did. Yea, which would not be content to detaine a part (Ananias and Iudas went no further:) but would ſeaze of all gladly, if a Gracious Lady did not ſay, Sinite.

Act. 5.

Luke 22 3. Act. 5. 3.

To conclude: It is Saint Auguſtine (and, ſo ſay all the reſt:) Tu intellige & de Eccleſiâ, Quia qui aliquid de Eccleſiâ prædatur Iudæ perdito comparatur: Vnderſtand this of the Church, and ſpare not: For, he that taketh any thing (I ſay, any thing) from it, is in Iudas caſe: For the ſinne, certainly; for the puniſhment, as it pleaſeth GOD.

Now, wee know what is meant, by In Me: it is no waſte word. Wee will conſider it (firſt) as a reaſon of the two former: and then, as a ſpeciall anſwer to that, of the poore.

It anſwereth Vt quid: To what end? why, In Me, to Mee, and for My ſake.

It anſwereth Perditio: In Me, why it is ſpent on CHRIST, on Me, on whom nothing that is ſpent, is miſ-ſpent.

It yeeldeth a reaſon of Sinite: Spare her; if not her, yet ſpare Me, trouble Me not. Yee cannot ſcrape off the oyntment, but with My trouble.

And a reaſon of Bonum opus eſt: For, His [In me] is warrant ſufficient, why the worke is to be reckoned good. Yea, in ſaying, it is not onely good done, but done to Him, He giveth it a dignitie, and lifteth up this worke above.

But eſpecially, it anſwereth the weight of Iudas reaſon (Pauperibus, the Poore.) Our SAVIOVR CHRIST plainly ſheweth, that Iudas is miſtaken, that draweth a diameter, and maketh oppoſition betweene devotion toward CHRIST, and Almes to the poore. Tabitha was good to the poore: Mary Magdalen, to CHRIST. Muſt we put Mary Magdalen to death, to raiſe Tabitha againe? and is there no other way? Yes indeed: Sinite illam (ſaith CHRIST, in this verſe) let this ſtand: and yet, dbe thoſe good too, Date eleemoſynam (in the next.) There be other meanes to provide for the poore, than by ſale of CHRISTS ointment: And we are not, in pretence of them, to omit this, or any office or dutie unto CHRIST.

Verſe 7.

Pauperibus, is not the onely good worke: this, is alſo. And, of the two, if any to be preferred, it is In Me: He (certainly) to be ſerved firſt. To which worke, not only thoſe of wealth (Mary Magdalen with her three hundred pence;) but, even poore and all (the poore Widow with her mites) is bound, as we ſee: Even, to adde ſomething even to the offerings of GOD: And, if not, with Nardus, yet with oile to anoint His head, as Himſelfe requireth. This, I ſay: if both could not ſtand. But, thankes be to GOD, there be wayes, they may both ſtand; and not one fall, that the other may riſe. Malachi telleth us a way; and it is a ſpeciall one: to doe as this vertuous woman here, Inferte in Apothecas meas, bring into mine (that is, My Churches) treaſures, and I will breake the windowes of heaven and ſend you ſuch plentie, as you and the poore (both) ſhal eat and have enough, and yet leave in abundance. So that (we ſee) the next and kindlieſt way, to have Iudas complaint redreſſed, is, to ſpeake and labour, that Mary Magdalens example may be followed.

Marke 12. 42.

Mal. 3. 10.

Secondly, by In Me, it plainely appeareth, how CHRIST ſtandeth affected to workes of this kinde. For, permitting them; ſtanding for them; defending and commending mending them, He ſheweth plainely, He will be content with ſuch as it is. For, albeit He were the very patterne of true frugalitie, and an enemie to all exceſſe, yet this ſervice (chargeable as it was) Hee well alloweth of. Shewing us this: that as He is Chriſtus Patris, anointed by GOD His Father (quem unxit Dominus, Act. 10.) ſo alſo He will be Chriſtus noſter (and that, paſſively) anointed by us (Quem unxit Maria, Iohn 11.) That, as here Hee commendeth Mary Magdalen, for the ſupply of it: So (in Luke 7.) He giveth Simon an Item (oleo caput meum non unxiſti) for being defective in this dutie. Ac. 10 38. Iohn 11.2. Luke 7.46.

I would gladly aske this queſtion: If the ointment may be ſold (as Iudas ſaith) and bought lawfully; and they that buy, may lawfully uſe; if they may uſe it, why may not CHRIST? Num ſolis ſtultis apes mellificant, doe Bees make honey, and Nardus beare ointment for wicked men only? May any that payes for it, and may not CHRIST? Is He onely, of all other uncapable or unworthy?

If it be, becauſe it is more than needs: Let that be a reaſon of all. Let the law hold us, as well as Him. But, if no man, but allowes himſelfe a more liberall diet and proportion of port, than in ſtrict termes is needfull, for all the poore; why ſhould wee binde CHRIST alone to that rule? Except we meane to goe further with Him; and not onely except to Maries ointment, but even to Simons feaſt alſo: Vt quid unguentum hoc? then, Vt quid convivium hoc, too? ſeeing, a ſmaller repaſt might ſerve, and the reſt be given to the poore. So that, His allowance ſhall be juſt as much, and no more than will ſerve to hold life and ſoule together. But, as He, without any barre or Vt quid, alloweth us, not onely indumenta for nakedneſſe, but ornamenta for comlineſſe; not onely alimenta for emptineſſe, but oblectamenta for daintineſſe: So, good reaſon it is, wee thinke not much of His Nardus, and tye Him only to thoſe rules, from which our ſelves plead exemption.

I demand againe, if ointment might be ſpent on Aarons head, under the Law; ſeeing a greater than Aaron is here, why not on His too? I finde, that neither under the Law, Hee liked of their motion, what ſhould the Temple doe with Cedar? neither, under the Goſpell, of theirs, what ſhould CHRISTS head doe with Nardus? But that, to his praiſe, he is recorded in the Old Teſtament, that ſaid; Shall I dwell in my ſeeled houſe, and the Arke of GOD remaine under Coats-skinnes? And ſhe, in the New, that thought not her beſt ointment too good for CHRISTS head. Surely, they, in Ægypt, had their ſervice of GOD, it may be in a barne, or in ſome corner of an houſe. Yet when Moſes moved a coſtly Tabernacle, no man was found that once ſaid, Our Fathers ſerved GOD well enough, without one, Vt quid perditio hæc? After that, many Iudges, and Prophets, and righteous men were well, when they might worſhip before the Arke: yet, when Salomon moved a ſtately Temple, never any was found that would grudge and ſay, Why the Arke is enough; I pray GOD, we ſerve GOD no worſe than they, that knew nothing but a Tent; Vt quid perditio hæc? Onely, in the dayes of the Goſpell (which, of all other, leaſt ſhould) there ſteps up Iudas, and dareth to ſay that againſt CHRISTS Church that no man durſt ever, either againſt Moſes Tent, or Salomons Temple. 1 Chron. 17. 1.

And, if CHRIST had taken it well, or paſſed it in ſilence, or ſaid Sinite illum, ſuffer Iudas motion to take place; we might have had ſome ſhew. But ſeeing, Hee ſaith Moleſtus eſt, to Iudas; Sinite illam, Suffer MARIE to goe forward; and not that onely, but Bonum opus, too: why ſhould any, after Iudas, be thought worthy the anſwering?

Surely, as the Goſpell (in this dutie) hath, and ſo ought to exceed the Law: So, in the Goſpell, we here and our Countrey above all other. I will but ſay with Chryſoſtome, Appende Chriſtum ô homo: doe but conſtrue theſe two words [In Me] aright: Poize and prize Who it is; Et ſufficit. It is CHRIST IESVS: Who hath not ſpared to anoint us with His owne bloud; and our ſoules, with all the comforts and graces of His Holy Spirit. If, toward us, neither bloud nor life were too deare, on His part; ſhall, on ours, any Nardus be too deare, or any coſt too much, that is on Him beſtowed?

Perhaps, our particular will more move us. It is CHRIST, that created for us, Nard and all other delights whatsoever, either for use and necessitie, wee have; or, for fruition and pleasure, wee enjoy. It is Hee, that hath enriched us, that we be able to bestow it, by this long prosperitie, plentie and peace, as no other Kingdome under Heaven: Is there any good minde can thinke, that this is an indignitie? that He is not worthy, hath not deserved, and double deserved this, and ten times more at our hands?

An extraordinary conceit is entred into the world (by a new found glosse) to make, whatsoever we like not or list not to doe our selves, extraordinary: and so, some deeme of this, as extraordinary, and whereof no example is to be made. (No ancient Luke 11.37. Writer is of that minde; but that, for us it was written; and that, Vade tu & fac similiter, may be written upon her box.) But, be it so. Why may not I wish on our parts, Let us be extraordinary? For, GOD hath not dealt ordinarily with us of this Land: He hath not beene to us, a wilderneſse or a barren Land: but hath (even our enemies being Iudges) beene extraordinary in His goodneſse toward us all. And sure, in us, ordinary common thankfulneſse is not enough. Shall I set my selfe to recount His benefits? An easie matter to finde entrance; but when then should I make an end? In one, I will abridge them all. We spake of ointment: Verily, CHRIST hath anointed over us, and given us a most Gracious Soveraigne, by whose happie and blessed reigne, we long Psal.45.7. have (and longer may we, He grant) enjoyed both the inward and outward anointing: the inward, the holy and heavenly comfort of GOD'S truth, and true oile of gladneſse; the outward, of earthly plentie and delight, which Nard or any rich confection may afoord; and (in a word) whatsoever happineſse can fall to any Nation under heaven.
Psal.133.2. From the holy oile of whose anointing (as the dew of Hermon on Sion, and as Aarons ointment upon the skirts of his clothing) there daily droppeth upon this whole Realme, pure Nard, or if any thing else be more precious, whether, in these earthly, or in those heavenly blessings. I speake no more than wee all feele. This, is that one, I spake of; and in this one, is all, Even the LORDS Anointed. Whom (I make no question, but) the LORD hath, and will more and more blesse, for that Her Highneſse hath said, as Himselfe said, Sinite illam. And, blessed be GOD, that hath put into Her heart, so to say; to like well of Vt quid perditio; but, to have it so applyed. I doubt not, but this Heroicall vertue, among many others, shall make Her Scepter long to flourish; shall make Her remembrance to be in blessing to all posterity; and shall be (among other) Her rejoycing in the day of the LORD, and an everlasting crowne of glory upon Her head.

This is that ointment, I spake of; that it selfe alone may make us all confesse, we have received from CHRIST, extraordinary mercy; and are therefore to returne more
Psal.147.20. than ordinary duty. Non taliter fecit omni; Nay, non taliter fecit ulli populo: Hee hath not dealt so with every; Nay, not so with any people, as with us: and therefore not any people, to deale so thankfully with Him againe.

This, if it were extraordinary. Howbeit, if Antiquitie may be admitted Iudge, this (as a good worke) is to be ordinary with us. Since, every thing done in this kinde to CHRISTS Church, only upon a thankfull regard, is (with them) reckoned a dram of Mary Magdalens ointment.

At least, if we will not come so farre as operata est, we doe yet thus farre favour it, as to yeeld to Sinite illam: Seeing, Mary Magdalen that gave it, paid for it; and it never came out of our purse.

And now, this question being thus dilated, it is every mans duty (saith Theophylact) to set downe, cujus partis sit, whose part he will take, whose minde he will be of. Whether, with Iudas, Perditio est; or, with CHRIST, Bonum opus est: whether Potuit vendi; or, Sinite illam.

But (I trust) we will stand to CHRISTS judgement; and rather take part with Him, for Mary Magdalen, than with Iudas, against her: that we may be with Mary Magdalen, that are of her minde; which, at the houre of death, we all shall desire.

From

The entrance I make. From this unhappy conjunction of Marie's good worke and Iudas evill ſpeech, this firſt conſideration offereth it ſelfe (nothing pleaſant, but wholeſome and requiſite to be called to minde, of all that meane to doe well.) That, things well done ſhall bee evill taken: and often, good affections have no good conſtructions; and that received with the left hand, that is reached with the right.

III.
The Doctrine.
1 That Good workes are maligned.

For this her act, that was well done, (if CHRIST knew, what it was to doe well) Yet, we ſee, it is diſdeigned, grudged at, and ſhe moleſted for it: (all three, are in my Text.) Whence we learne: Be a thing done to never ſo good purpoſe, yet ſome Iudas will mutter, and maligne, and come forth with his Vt quid? Some Iudas will caſt his dead fly into Mary Magdalen's box of ointment.

No one creature had ſo good experience of this, as this poore woman had. Three ſpeciall vertues of hers, the Goſpells record: and, in every one of the three, ſhee was repined at. 1. When, in the bitterneſſe of her ſoule, ſhee ſhewed her repentance with teares, Simon the Phariſee did what he could to diſgrace her (Luke. 7.) 2. When in a hungry deſire to receive comfort, by the word of grace, ſhe ſhewed her devotion in ſitting at CHRISTS feet, Martha (her owne ſiſter) made complaint of her. 3. And now here againe, the third time: when, in an honeſt regard of her duty, ſhe ſheweth her thankfulneſſe for comfort received, CHRISTS owne Diſciples both grudge and ſpeake againſt her. So that, if ſhe waſheth His feet with teares, it contents not: If ſhe annoint His head with balme, it is matter of miſ-like: If ſhe ſit ſtill, and ſay nothing, it is all one: Still, Marie is found fault with; ever, her doings ſtand awry.

Luc. 7. 3. 9.

Luc. 10. 40.

This is the lot and portion of all thoſe, that will follow their ſteppes. Not onely we of private eſtate, but even great Perſonages, As, Nehemias, by Geſhem, to bring detriment to the ſtate, by favouring the Churches caſe. Even Princes: David by Shemei, to be a bloody Perſecutor, when (if in any thing he offended) it was, in too much lenitie. Even CHRIST Himſelfe the SONNE of GOD; who neither could have His feet, but Simon the Phariſee; nor His head annointed, but Iudas (His Apoſtle) maligne and ſpeake againſt it.

Neh. 6. 6.

2 Sam. 16. 7.

So that, not onely Regium eſt (as the Heathen ſaid) benè cum feceris, audire malè, to have evill ſpeech for good deeds; but Divinum, a heavenly thing (as CHRIST ſaith) de bono opere lapidari.

Ioh. 10. 32.

This, is their lot. And it ſerveth us to two purpoſes: 1. For judgement: to ſee this evill diſeaſe under the Sunne: The evill aſpect which the world lookes with, on Marie Magdalen. Whereby many times, that which is commended in heaven, is condemned in earth: and Iudas bagge carrieth away even from CHRISTS. Whereby many times, all good is ſaid of them, by whom little good is done; and ſome mens flagitia (which the heathen ſtorie lamenteth, in Druſus) ſhall finde more favour and be better rewarded than Druſus's optimè cogitata, the good counſell and courſe of many a better man.

Such is the deceitfulneſſe of the ſonnes of men upon the weights. It ſerveth us (I ſay) to ſee, and to ſorrow at, and to ſay with Auguſtine: Væ tibi miſer, bonus odor occîdit te, Miſerable man that thou art, how art thou choked with ſo good a ſent? To ſorrow it, and to prepare our ſelves to it, and reſolve, that though we do well, yet we ſhall be evill ſpoken of.

Pſal. 61. 10.

That, firſt: and ſecond, this, for practice. That though we be evill ſpoken of, yet not to bee diſmayed or troubled with this hard meaſure; but to goe on and doe, as Marie Magdalen did; not once, or twice, but three ſeverall times one after another: Neither to hold our hand, or ſhut our box, not ſpare our ointment, if things well done bee evill taken. To looke, not to Iudas on earth, who diſliketh; but to Chriſt in heaven, who approveth it, and in all three caſes made anſwer for Marie Magdalen, againſt Martha, Simon and Iudas and all her accuſers. To know, that that, which in Iudas divinitie is perditio, in Chriſts divinitie, is bonum opus. In regard Aſſuring our ſelves, that it is well done; and ſhall be both commended on earth, and rewarded in heaven. On earth: For, poſteritie ſhall better like of the ſhedding, than of the ſale of this Ointment. In heaven: for the day will come, qui malè judicata rejudicabit, when all perverſe judgements ſhall have judgement againſt them, and Mary Magdalen ſhall looke cheerefully on Him, on whom ſhee beſtowed it; and Iudas rufully behold Him, from whom he ſold it.

This is Mary Magdalens part, as CHRIST telleth: that howſoever Mary Magda-

Verſ.9. as wide as the world is, and as farre as the Goſpell ſhall ſound, ſhee ſhall be well ſpoken of. Yea, when the great and glorious acts of many Monarchs ſhall be buried in ſilence, this poore box of Nardus ſhall be matter of praiſe, and never die. And contrary, howſoever Iudas motion may finde favour and applauſe in the preſent, yet Poſteritie ſhall diſlike and diſcommend it: And he be no leſſe infamous and hatefull, than Mary famous and well ſpoken of, in all ages to the end of the world.

This, is her portion from CHRIST: her ſoule refreſhed with the ſweet joyes of heaven; and her name, as Nardus through-out all generations. This is his lot from the LORD: A name odious, and lothſome to all that

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE QVEENE ELIZABETH, AT Hampton Court On VVednesday, being the VI. of March, A. D. MDXCIIII.

LVKE Chap. XVII. Ver. XXXII.

Memores estote Vxoris LOT.

Remember LOTS Wife.

A Part of the Chapter read this Morning, by order of the Church, for II. Lesson.

THe words are few, and the sentence short; no one in Scripture so short. But it fareth with Sentences as with Coines: In coines, they that in smallest compasse containe greatest value, are best esteemed: and, in sentences, those that in fewest words compriſe most matter, are most praised. Which, as of all sentences it is true; so specially of those that are marked with Memento. In them, the shorter, the better; the better, and the better carried away, and the better kept; and the better called for when we need it. And such is this here; of rich contents, and withall exceeding compendious: So that, we must needs be without all excuse, it being but three words, and but five syllables, if we doe not remember it.

The Sentence is our SAVIOVRS, uttered by Him upon this occasion. Before, (in Verse 18.) He had said: that the dayes of the Sonne of man should be as the dayes of LOT, in two respects: 1 In respect of the suddennesse of the destruction that should come: 2 and in respect of the securitie of the people, on whom it should come. For, the Sodomites laughed at it; and Lots wife (it should seeme) but slightly regarded it. Being then in Lots story; very fitly, and by good consequence, out of that story, Hee leaveth us a Memento, before He leaveth it.

There are in Lots storie, two very notable monuments of GODS judgement.

1 The Lake of Sodome, 2 and Lots Wives Pillar. The one, the punishment of resolute sinne; the other, of faint vertue. For, the Sodomites are an example of impenitent wilfull Sinners: and Lots wife of imperseverant and relapsing righteous persons.

Both these are in it: but CHRIST, of both these, taketh the latter onely. For, two sorts of men there are, for which these two Items are to be fitted: 1 To those in state of Sinne that are wrong, the Lake of Sodome: 2 To those in state of Grace, that are Deut.32.32. well (if so they can keepe them) Lots wives Pillar. To the first in state of Sinne, Moses propoundeth the Vine of Sodome and grapes of Gomorra, quæ contacta cinerescunt, that if Ier.8.4. yee but touch them, turne to ashes. To the other in state of grace, CHRIST here, 1 Cor.10.12. Lots wives Pillar. To the one, Ieremie crieth, Qui cecidit, adjiciat ut resurgat. To the
Gen.21.18. other, Saint Paul: Qui stat, videat ne cadat. Agar, that is departed from Abrahams house, with her face toward Ægypt, the Angell calleth to returne, and not to persevere:
Gen.19.17. Lots wife, that is gone out of Sodome, and in the right way to ZOAR, the Angell willeth to persevere and not to returne. So that, to them this Memento is by CHRIST directed, that being departed from the errours of VR, are gone out from the Sinnes of Sodome, are entred into the profession of the truth, or into the course of a vertuous life. So that, if wee lay it to our selves, wee shall lay it aright; that Lots Wife be our example, and that we sprinkle our selves with the salt of her Pillar, ne putescamus, that we turne not againe to folly, or fall away from our owne stedfastnesse. And, if it be meant to us, needfull it is, that wee receive it. A point (no doubt) of important consideration and necessitie, as well for Religion, to call on; as for our Nature to heare of. First, for Religion: her glory it is, no lesse, to be able to shew antiquos Discipulos, old Professours, as Mnason was, then daily to convert and make new Proselytes.
Matth.11.28. And therefore, with CHRIST, we must not ever be dealing with Venite ad me;
Iohn 15.4. but sometimes too, with Manete in me; That, hath his place: Not ever with stimuli, goades to incite men to; but, other-while, with Clavi, nailes to fasten them in. For, as Nature hath thought requisite as well the Brests to bring up, as the Wombe to bring forth: And Philosophie holdeth tueri of no lesse regard than quærere: And with the Lawyers, Habendum is not the onely thing, but Tenendum needfull too: And the Physitian as carefull of the regiment, and fearefull of the recidivation, as of the disease and Esay 7.9. cure: So Divinitie is respective to both; both, to lay the ground-worke surely Ne corruat, that it shake not with Esay's Nisi credideritis; and, to roofe it carefully, Ne perpluat, Rom.11.22. that it raine not thorow and rot the principals, with Pauls, Si permanseris, aliòquin excideris & tu.

Needfull then for Religion, to call on this vertue: and, as for Religion, to call on; so, for our Nature to be called on: Wherein, as there is tenellum quid, a tender part not able to endure the crosse, for which wee need the vertue of Patience: So is there also ἀφιλοεῦν τι, a flitting humour, not able to endure the tediousnesse of any thing long; for which we no lesse need the vertue of Perseverance. The Prophet (in Psal.78.57. the 78. Psalme) saith, our Nature is as a Bow, which when it is bent to his full, except it be followed hard, till it be sure and fast, starts backe againe, and is as farre off as ever
Rom.7.1. it was. The Apostle compareth it to flesh (as it is) which will sine sale putescere, and if it be not corned, of it selfe bring forth corruption. And to helpe this our evill inclination forward, there be in all Ages dangerous examples, to draw us on. The Israelites, after Exod.16.3. Numb.11.18. they had passed the red Sea and all the perils of the desart, and were now come even to 14.4. the borders of Canaan, even there, say Benè nobis erat in Ægypto, wee were better in Ægypt: Let us make a Captaine and returne thither. The Romans (in the New) at the first, so glorious Professours, that Saint Paul saith, All the world spake of their faith:
Rom.1.8. After, when trouble arose, and Saint Paul was called coram, of the same Romans hee
2 Tim.4.16. saith, Nemo mihi adfuit, sed omnes deseruerunt, None stood by mee, All shrunke away. And in these dangerous dayes of ours, The falling away quite of divers, and some Matth.26.33. such, as have said of themselves (with Peter) Etsi omnes, non ego; and others have said
Dan.2.32. of them, Etsi omnes, non ille: The declining of others, which (as Daniels image) decay by degrees; from a head of fine Gold fall to a silver brest, and from thence to loynes

of

of brasse, and thence to legges of iron, and last to feet of clay: The wavering and amaze of others that stand in the Plaine (with LOTS wife) looking about, and cannot tell, whether to goe forward to little Zoar, or backe againe to the ease of Sodome; shew plainly that LOTS wife is forgotten, and this is a needfull Memento, Remember Lots wife. If then it bee ours, and so neerely concerne us, let us see, quantum valent hæ quinque Syllabæ.

The Division

1 First, CHRIST sending our memory to a story past; of the use of remembring stories in generall. I.

2 Secondly, Of this particular of Lots wife, and the Points to bee remembred in it. II.

3 Thirdly, How to apply those points, that (as Saint Augustine saith) Condiant nos, & Sal Statuæ sit nobis condimentum vitæ, that the Salt of this Pillar may be the Season of our lives. III.

I.

THE Prophet Esay doth call us, that stand in this place, the LORDS Remembrancers: As to GOD, for the People, by the office of Prayers; So from GOD, to the People, by the office of Preaching. In which office of Preaching, wee are imployed as much about Recognosce, as about cognosce; as much in calling to their mindes the things they know and have forgot, as in teaching them the things they know not, or never learnt. The things are many, we have Commission to put men in minde of. Some touching themselves: For, it is, many times, too true, which the Philosopher saith: Nihil tàm longè abest à nobis quam ipsi nos, Nothing is so farre from our mindes, as we our selves. For, naturally (as saith the Apostle) wee doe παραῤῥυῶμεν, leake, and runne out; and when wee have looked in the glasse, wee straight forget our fashion againe. Therefore wee have in charge to put men in minde of many things, and to call upon them with divers Memento's. Memento quia sicut lutum tu, Remember the baseneſse of our mould what it is: Memento quia vita ventus, Remember the frailenesse of our life how short it is. Memento tenebrosi temporis, Remember, the dayes of darknesse are comming, and they be many. All which we know well enough, and yet need to be put in minde of them.

Eccles 1.8.

But, the store-house, and the very life of memory, is the History of time; and a speciall charge have we, all along the Scriptures, to call upon men to looke to that. For, all our wisdome consisting either in Experience or Memory; Experience of our owne, or Memory of others; Our dayes are so short, that our Experience can be but slender, Tantùm hesterni sumus (saith Iob;) and our owne time cannot afford us observations enough, for so many cases, as we need direction in. Needs must we then (as he here adviseth) interrogare generationem pristinam, aske the former Age, what they did in like case: search the Records of former times; wherein, our cases wee shall be able to match, and to patterne them all. Salomon saith excellently, Quid est quod fuit? Quod futurum est; What is that that hath beene? That that shall be: and backe againe, What is that that shall be? That that hath beene: Et nihil novum est sub Sole, and there is nothing under the Sunne of which it may be said, it is new, but it hath beene already in the former generations. So that, it is but turning the wheele, and setting before us some case of Antiquitie, which may sample ours, and either remembring to follow it, if it fell out well; or to eschew it, if the successe were thereafter. For example, By Abimelech's story, King David reproveth his Captaines, for pursuing the enemie too neere the wall, seeing Abimelech miscarried by like adventure; and so maketh use of remembring Abimelech. And by Davids example (that, in want of all other bread, refused not the Shew-bread) CHRIST our SAVIOVR defendeth His Disciples in like distresse, and sheweth, that, upon such extremitie, Necessitas doth even legem Legi dicere, give a Law, even to the Law it selfe.

Seven severall times we are called upon to doe it: 1 Memento dierum antiquorum, (saith Moses:) 2 Recordamini prioris Seculi, (Esay:) 3 State super vias antiquas, (Ieremie:) 4 Investiga patrum memoriam (Iob:) 5 Exemplum sumite Prophetas, (Iames:) 6 Rememoramini dies priscos, (Paul:) 7 Remember Lots wife, CHRIST, here; that is, To lay our actions to those, we finde there, and of like doings, to looke for like ends. So reade stories past, as we make not our selves matter for storie to come.

II. Of this of Lots Wife.

Now, of and among them all, our SAVIOVR CHRIST after a speciall manner commendeth unto us, this of Lots wife. Of which thus much wee may say, That it is the onely one story, which, of all the stories of the Old Testament, He maketh His choice of, to put in His Memento; which He would have them, which have forgotten, to remember, and those that remember, never to forget. Oft to repaire to this story, and to fetch salt from this Pillar: that they lose not that they have done, and so perish in the recidivation of Lots wife.

Then to descend into the particulars: I finde, in stories, two sorts of Memento: 1. Memento & fac, Remember to follow: 2. Memento & fuge, Remember to flie the like. Mary Magdalens ointment, an example of one; Lots wives Salt-stone, an example of the other. Or (to keepe us, to this story) Lot looked not backe, till he came safe to Zoar: memento & fac. Lots wife did, and died for it: memento & fuge.

The verse before sheweth, why CHRIST laid the memento upon her. Μὴ ἐπιστραφῇς Μὴ ἐπιστρεψάτω, that we should not turne or returne backe, as she did: that wee should not follow her, but, when wee come at this Pillar, turne at it and take another way. That is, wee should remember Lots wife, but follow Lot; remember her, but follow him.

Now, in either of both memento's, to follow, or to fly, wee alway enquire of two points (and so, here) 1 quid fecit, 2 quid passa est: what they did, whose story we reade; and, how they sped: The Fact and the Effect. The Fact, Vice or Vertue: The Effect, Reward or Punishment.

Gen.19.26.

Both which, concerning this unfortunate woman, wee finde set downe in one verse (in the XIX. of Genesis) what Shee did; that Shee drew backe, or looked backe: this was her Sinne. The effect, that She was turned into a Salt-stone: this was her Punishment. And these two, are the two Memorandum's concerning her, to be remembred. First, of her fault.

I Her fault.

The Angell had given charge to Lot and his company (in the seventeenth of that Chapter) Scape for thy life: Stay not in the Plaine: Looke not once behinde thee lest thou perish. Scape for thy life: She trifled for all that, as if no perill were. Stay not in the Plaine, yet stayed shee behinde. Looke not backe lest thou die; shee would, and did looke backe, to die for it. So that, she did all that she was forbid, and regarded none of the Angels words, but despised the counsell of GOD against her owne soule. This was her sinne, the sinne of disobedience; but consisteth of sundry degrees by which she fell: Needfull, all, to be remembred.

1 Wavering.

1 The first was: That she did not Severè custodire mandatum Dei, strictly keepe her to the Angels charge, but, dallied with it, and regarded it by halves; that is, say what he would, she might use the matter as shee would; goe, or stay and looke about as shee list. Such light regard is like enough to have growen of a wandring distrust; lest haply, shee had left Sodome in vaine, and the Angell feared them, with that which never should be. The Sunne rose so cleere, and it was so goodly a morning, she repented, she came away. Reckoning her Sonnes in Law more wise in staying still, than Lot and her selfe, in so unwisely departing. Which is the sinne of unbeleefe, the bane both of Constancie and Perseverance. Constancie, in the purpose of our minde; and Perseverance in the tenour of our life.

2 Fainting.

2 From this grew the second, That shee began to tire, and draw behinde, and kept not pace with LOT and the Angels. An evill signe. For (ever) fainting is next step ſtep to forſaking; and ſequebatur à longè, a preparative to a giving cleane over: Occaſionem quærit (ſaith Salomon) qui vult diſcedere ab amico, He that hath no liſt to follow, will picke ſome quarrell or other to be caſt behinde. Prov. 18. 1.

3 This tiring had it growen of weakneſſe, or wearineſſe, or want of breath, might have beene borne with; but, it came of another cauſe, which is the third degree. It was (ſaith the text) at leaſt to looke backe, and to caſt her eye to the place, her ſoule longed after. Which ſheweth, that the love of SODOME ſticketh in her ſtill: that though her feet were come from thence, her heart ſtayed there behinde: and that, in looke and thought ſhee returned thither, whither in body ſhee might not; but (poſſibly) would in bodie too, if, as NINIVE did, ſo SODOME had ſtill remained. 3 Looking back.

4 Looking backe might proceed of divers cauſes; So might this of hers, but that CHRIST's application directs us. The verſe before ſaith, Somewhat in the houſe, ſomething left behinde affected her: Of which He giveth us warning. She grew weary of trouble, and of ſhifting ſo oft: From Vr to Haran; thence, to Canaan; thence, to Ægypt; thence to Canaan againe; then to Sodome; and now to Zoar; and that, in her old dayes, when ſhe would faineſt have beene at reſt. Therefore, in this weariſome conceit of new trouble now to begin; and withall remembring the convenient ſeat, ſhe had in Sodome, ſhe even deſired to die by her fleſh-pots, and to be buried in the graves of luſt: wiſhed them at Zoar, that would, and her ſelfe at Sodome againe: deſiring rather to end her life with eaſe in that Stately Citie, than to remove, and be ſafe perhaps, and perhaps not, in the deſolate mountaines. And this was the ſinne of reſtineſſe of ſoule, which affected her eyes and knees, and was the cauſe of all the former. When men weary of a good courſe, which long they have holden, for a little eaſe or wealth, or (I wot not what) other ſecular reſpect, fall away in the end: ſo loſing the praiſe and fruit of their former perſeverance, and relapſing into the danger and deſtruction, from which they had ſo neere eſcaped. 3 Preferring Sodom to Zoar.

Behold, theſe were the ſinnes of LOT's wife; A wavering of minde: Slow ſteppes: the convulſion of her necke: all theſe cauſed her wearineſſe and feare of new trouble; ſhee preferred SODOM's eaſe before ZOAR's ſafetie. Remember LOT's wife.

This was her ſinne: and this her ſinne was, in her, made much more heinous by a double circumſtance, well worth the remembring: as (ever) weightie circumſtances are matter of ſpeciall regard, in a ſtorie ſpecially. 1 One, that ſhe fell, after ſhe had ſtood long. 2 The other, that ſhe fell, even then, when GOD, by all meanes offered her ſafetie, and ſo forſooke her owne mercie. The Aggravation of her fall.

Touching the firſt. Theſe a winter brookes (as Iob termeth flitting deſultorie Chriſtians) if they drie; theſe b Summer fruits (as AMOS) if they putrifie; theſe c morning clouds (as HOSEA) if they ſcatter; theſe d ſhallow rooted corne, if they wither and come to nothing, it is the leſſe griefe. No man looked for other. e PHARAO with his fits, that at every plague ſent upon him, is godly on a ſudden, and O pray for mee now; and when it is gone, as prophane as ever hee was; beginning nine times, and nine times breaking off againe; hee moves not much. To goe further: Saul, that for two yeares; Iudas, that for three; Nero, that for five kept well, and then fell away, though it be much, yet may it be borne. But, this woman had continued now thirtie yeare (for, ſo they reckon from ABRAHAM's going out of Vr, to the deſtruction of Sodome:) This, this is the griefe, that ſhe ſhould perſiſt all this time, and after all this time fall away. The rather, if wee conſider yet further, that not onely ſhee continued many yeares, but ſuſtained many things in her continuance, as being companion of Abraham and Lot, in their exile, their travell, and all their affliction. This is the griefe, that after all theſe ſtormes in the broad Sea well paſt, ſhe ſhould in this pitifull manner, be wracked in the haven. And when ſhee had beene in Ægypt, and not poiſoned with the ſuperſtitions of Ægypt; when lived in Sodome, and not defiled with the ſinnes of Sodome; Not fallen away for the famine of Canaan; nor taken harme by the fulneſſe of the Citie of the Plaine; after all this ſhee ſhould loſe the fruit of all this, and doe and ſuffer ſo many things all in vaine: This is the firſt: Remember it.

2 Now, when beſt meanes of ſtanding.

The ſecond is no whit inferiour: That, at that inſtant ſhee wofully periſhed, when GODS ſpeciall favour was profered to preſerve her: and that, when, of all other times, ſhee had meanes and cauſe to ſtand; then, of all other times, ſhee fell away. Many were the mercies ſhee found and felt at GODS hands, by this very title, that ſhee was Lots Wife. For, by it, ſhee was incorporated into the Houſe and Family, and made partaker of the bleſſings of the faithfull ABRAHAM. It was a mercy, to be delivered from the errours of Vr; a mercy, to be kept ſafe in Ægypt; a mercy, to be preſerved from the ſinne of Sodome; a mercy, to be delivered from the Captivitie of the five Kings; and this the laſt and greateſt mercy, that ſhee was ſought to be delivered from the periſhing of the five Cities. This (no doubt) doth mightily aggravate the offence, that, ſo many wayes before remembred by GOD in trouble, ſhee ſo coldly remembred Him: and that now preſently, being offered grace, ſhee knoweth not the day of her viſitation: But, being brought out of Sodome, and warned of the danger that might enſue; having the Angels to goe before her, Lot to beare her company, her daughters to attend her, and being now at the entrance of Zoar, the haven of her reſt; this very time, place and preſence, ſhee maketh choice of, to periſh in, and to caſt away that, which GOD would have ſaved; in reſpect of her ſelfe, deſperately; of the Angels, contemptuouſly; of her husband and daughters, ſcandalouſly; of GOD and His favours, unthankfully; forſaking her owne mercie, and periſhing in the ſinne of wilfull defection.

Remember LOTS Wife, and theſe Two, 1 That ſhee looked backe, after ſo long time, and ſo many ſufferings: 2 That ſhee looked backe, after ſo many, ſo mercifull, and ſo mightie protections. And remember this withall, That ſhee lookt backe onely, and went not backe: Would, it may be, but that it was all on fire. But, Whether ſhe would or no, or whether we doe or no, this fore-thinking our ſelves, we be gone our, this faint proceeding, this ſtaying in the plaine, this convulſion of the necke, and writhing the eyes backe; this irreſolute wavering whether we ſhould chooſe, either bodily pleaſures in periſhing Sodome, or the ſafety of our ſoules in little Zoar, was her ſinne; And this is the ſinne of ſo many as ſtand as ſhee ſtood, and looke as ſhe looked, though they goe not backe: but, if they goe backe too, they ſhall juſtifie her, and heape upon themſelves a more heavie condemnation. So much for the ſinne, which we ſhould remember, to avoid.

Now for her puniſhment, which we muſt remember, to eſcape.

This relapſe in this manner, that the world might know it to be a ſinne highly diſpleaſing His Majeſtie, GOD hath not onely marked it for a ſinne, but ſalted it too, that it might never be forgotten.

Death. Rom. 6. 23.

The wages and puniſhment of this ſinne of hers, was it, which is the wages of all ſin, that is, Death. Death, in her (ſure) worthily, that refuſed life with ſo eaſie conditions; as the holding of her head ſtill, and would needs looke backe and dye.

The ſound of death is fearefull, what death ſoever: yet it is made more fearefull foure wayes; which all be in this of hers.

1 Sudden.

1 Wee deſire to die with reſpite; and ſudden death, wee feare and pray againſt. Her death was ſudden, backe ſhe looked, and never looked forward more. It was her laſt looke.

2 In the act of ſinne.

2 We deſire to have remorſe of ſinne ere we be taken away; and death, in the very act of ſinne, is moſt dangerous. Her death was ſo. She died in the very convulſion; She died, with her face to Sodome.

3 Vnuſuall.

3 We would die the common death of mankinde, and be viſited after the viſitation of other men: and an un-uſuall ſtrange death is full of terrour. Hers was ſo. GODS owne hand from heaven, by a ſtrange and fearefull viſitation.

4 Without buriall.

4 Our wiſh is, to die, and to be buried, and not remaine a ſpectacle above ground which Nature abhorreth: Shee ſo died, as ſhee remained a ſpectacle of GODS wrath and and a By-word to posteritie, and as many as passed by. For untill CHRISTS time; and after, this monument was still extant, and remained undefaced so many hundred yeares. Iosephus (a Writer of good account, which lived after this) saith ἱσθμὸς αὐτὴ, ἐπ γὰρ κ) νῦν διαμένει: I my selfe have seene and beholden it, for it stands to be seene to this day. A reed she was, a Pillar shee is; which shee seemed to be, but was not. Shee was melting water: She is congealed to salt. Thus have we, both her fault and punishment: Let us remember both: To shun the fault, that the penalty light not on us.

III. Our Lesson from this.

Now, this Pillar was erected, and this verdure given it, for our sakes. For, among the many wayes that the wisdome of GOD useth to dispose of the sinne of man, and out of evill to draw good, this is one, and a chiefe one, that He suffereth not their evill examples to vanish as a shadow, but maketh them to stand as Pillars for Ages to come, with the Heathen mans inscription, Εἰς ἐμὲ τις ὁράων ἐυστοχήσεται, Looke on me, and learne by me, to serve GOD better.

And, an high benefit it is for us, that He not onely embalmeth the memory of the Iust, for our imitation; but also powdreth and maketh brine of the Evill, for our admonition: that, as a Sent, from Mary Magdalens ointment; So, a reliſh, from Lots wives pillar, should remaine to all posteritie.

Prophane persons, in their perishing, GOD could dash to peeces, and root out their remembrance from off the earth. Hee doth not, but suffereth their Quarters (as it were) to be set up in stories, Vt pœna Impii sit eruditio Iusti, that their punishment may be our advertisement. Powreth not out their bloud, nor casts it away, but saves it, for a Bath, Vt lavet Iustus pedes in sanguine peccatoris, that the Righteous may wash their foot-steps in the bloud of the ungodly: that all (even the ruine of the wicked) may co-operate to the good of them that feare GOD. Psal. 58 10. Rom. 8. 28.

This woman, in her inconstancie, could Hee have sunke into the earth, or blowen up as salt-petre, that no remembrance should have remained of her: Hee doth not; but, for us, and for our sakes, He erecteth a Pillar: And not a Pillar onely; to point and gaze at; but a Pillar of rocke of salt, whence wee may and must fetch, wherewith to season whatsoever is unsavoury in our lives. And this, this, is the life and soule of memorie: this is wisdome, The art of extracting salt, out of the wicked; Triacle, out of vipers; our owne happinesse, out of aliena pericula: and to make those that were unprofitable to themselves, profitable to us. For (sure) though Lots wife were evill, her salt is good: Let us see then, how to make her evill, our good; see, if we can draw any savoury thing from this example.

1 That which we should draw out, is perseverance, Muria virtutum (as Gregory calleth it) the Preserver of vertues, without which (as Summer fruits) they will perish and putrifie: The Salt of the Covenant; without which, the flesh of our Sacrifice will take wind and corrupt. But Saint Augustine (better) Regina virtutum, the Queene of vertues; for that, how ever the rest runne and strive, and doe masteries, yet, Perseverantia sola coronatur, Perseverance is the onely crowned vertue. 1 Perseverance.

2 Now Perseverance we shall attaine, if we can possesse our soules with the due care, and rid them of Security. Of Lots Wives security, as of water, was this Salt here made. And, if Security (as water) doe but touch it, it melts away presently. But Care will make us fix our eye, and gather up our feet, and, forgetting that which is behinde, tendere in anteriora, to follow hard toward the prize of our high calling. 2 Care. Phil. 3. 13.

3 And, to avoid Securitie, and to breed in us due care, Saint Bernard saith, Feare will doe it: Vis in timore securus esse? securitatem time; The onely way to be secure in feare, is to feare security. Saint Paul had given the same counsell before; that, to preserve Si permanseris, no better advice, than Noli altum sapere, sed time. 3 Feare. Rom. 11. 22.

Now, from her Story, these considerations are yeelded, each one as an handfull of salt, to keepe us, and to make us keepe. Considerations out of her fault.

First, that we see; as of CHRISTS twelve, which He had sorted and selected from from the reſt, one miſcaried; Et illum gregem non timuit lupus intrare, and that the Wolfe feared not to ſeaze, no, not upon that Flocke: and as of NOAH's eight that were ſaved from the Floud, one fell away too; So, that of LOTS foure, here, and but foure in all, all came not to Zoar, one came ſhort. So that, of twelve, of eight, of foure; yea, a little after (*verſ.*35.) of two, one is refuſed: that we may remember, few there be that ſcape from Sodome in the Angels company; and of thoſe (few though they be) all are not ſafe neither: Who would not feare, if one may periſh in the company of Angels.

2 Secondly, that as one miſcarrieth; ſo, not every one, but one that had continued ſo long, and ſuffered ſo many things, and after all this continuance, and all theſe ſufferings, falls from her eſtate, and turnes all out and in; and, by the inconſtancie of one houre, maketh void the perſeverance of ſo many yeares, and (as Ezekiel ſaith) in the day, they turne away to iniquitie, all the former righteouſneſſe they have done, ſhall not be remembred. Ezek.18.24.

3 Thirdly, that, as ſhee periſheth; So, at the ſame time, that Sodome: Shee, by it; and it, by her. That, one end commeth to the ſinner without repentance, and to the juſt without perſeverance. One end, to the abomination of Sodome, and to the recidivation of Lot's Wife; Et non egredientes, & egredientes reſpicientes: They that goe not out of her, periſh; and they that goe out of her, periſh too, if they looke backe. Lacus Aſphaltites, is a monument of the one; Lots Wives ſalt ſtone, a memoriall of the other.

4 Laſtly, that as one periſheth, and that ſuch an one; So, that ſhee periſheth at the gates, even hard at the entry of Zoar: which of all other, is moſt fearefull; So neere her ſafetie, ſo hard at the gates of her deliverance. Remember, that neere to Zoar gates, there ſtands a ſalt ſtone.

Theſe very thoughts, what her caſe was, theſe foure wayes; and what ours may be (who are no better than ſhe was) will ſearch us like ſalt, and teach us, that as, if we remember, what we have beene, we may (ſaith Saint Bernard) erubeſcere; ſo, if we remember what we may be, we may contremiſcere: that, we ſee our beginnings, but ſee not our ending: we ſee our Stadium, not our dolichum. And that, as we have great need to pray (with the Prophet) Thou haſt taught me from my youth up, untill now, forſake me not in mine old age, now when I am gray headed; So, we had need ſtirre up our care of continuing, ſeeing we ſee, it is nothing to begin, except we continue; nor to continue, except we doe it, to the end. Pſal.71.18.

Remember, we make not light account of the Angel's Serva animam tuam: bleſſing our ſelves in our hearts, and ſaying, Non fiet tibi hoc; we ſhall come ſafe, goe we never ſo ſoft: Zoar will not runne away. Matth.16.22.

Remember, wee be not weary to goe whither GOD would have us; not to Zoar, though a little one, if our ſoule may there live: and never buy the eaſe of our body, with the hazard of our ſoule, or a few dayes of vanitie with the loſſe of eternitie.

Remember, we ſlacke not our pace, nor ſtand ſtill on the Plaine. For, if we ſtand ſtill, by ſtill ſtanding, we are meet to be made a Pillar; even to ſtand ſtill, and never to remove.

Remember, we looke not backe, either with her, on the vaine delights of Sodome left; or with Peter on Saint John behinde us, to ſay, Domine, Quid iſte? both, will make us forget our following. None that caſteth his eye th'other way, is εὐθετὸς, meet as hee ſhould be, meet for the Kingdome of GOD. Iohn 21.20. Luke 9.62.

But ſpecially remember wee leave not our heart behinde us, but that wee take that with us, when wee goe out of Sodome: for if that ſtay, it will ſtay the feet, and writhe the eye, and neither the one nor the other will doe their dutie. Remember, that our heart wander not, that our heart long not. This Care, if it be fervent, will bring us Perſeverance.

Out of her puniſhment. Now, that we may the better learne ſomewhat out of her puniſhment too: Let us remember alſo, that as to her, ſo to us, GOD may ſend ſome un-uſuall viſitation, and take us ſuddenly away, and in the act of ſinne too.

Remember the danger and damage: It is no leſſe matter, wee are about, than perdet animam. Which if wee doe, wee fruſtrate and forfeit all the fruit of our former well continued courſe; all we have done, is vaine. Yea, all that CHRIST hath done for us is in vaine; whoſe paines and ſufferings we ought ſpecially to tender, knowing that Supra omnem laborem labor irritus, No labour to loſt labour; and CHRIST then hath loſt His labour for us.

Remember the folly: that beginning in the Spirit we end in the fleſh: turning our backes to Zoar, we turne our face to Sodome: joyning to a head of fine gold, feet of clay; and to a precious foundation, a covering of thatch. Gal 3.3.

Remember the Diſgrace: that we ſhall loſe our credit and accompt, while we live, and ſhall heare that of CHRIST, Hic homo; and that other, Quid exiſtis in deſertum videre? A reed ſhaken with the wind. Luke 14.30. Matth.11.7.

Remember the Scandall: That, falling our ſelves, wee ſhall be a blocke for to make others fall: a ſinne no lighter; nor leſſe, nor lighter than a mill-ſtone. Matth.18.6.

Remember the Infamie: That wee ſhall leave our memory remaining in ſtories, among Lot's Wife, and Iob's Wife, Demas and Ecebolius and the number of Relapſed, there to ſtand to be pointed at, no leſſe than this heape of Salt.

Remember the Iudgement that is upon them after their relapſe, though they live, that they doe even (with her here) obrigeſcere, wax hard and numme, and ſerve others for a caveat, wholly unprofitable for themſelves.

Remember the difficultie of reclaiming to good: Seven evill ſpirits entering in ſtead of one, that their laſt ſtate is worſe than the firſt. Matth.12.45.

And laſtly, Remember that we ſhall juſtifie Sodome by ſo doing; and her frozen ſinne, ſhall condemne our melting vertue. For, they in the wilfulneſſe of their wickedneſſe perſiſted till fire from heaven conſumed them: And, they being thus obdurate in ſinne, ought not ſhee (and wee much more) to be conſtant in vertue? And, if the drunkard hold out, till he have loſt his eyes; the uncleane perſon, till he have waſted his loynes; the contentious, till he have conſumed his wealth, Quis pudor quòd infelix populus Dei non habet tantam in bono perſeverantiam, quantam mali in malo! What ſhame is it, that GODS unhappie people ſhould not be as conſtant in vertue, as theſe miſcreants have beene, and be in vice!

Each of theſe by it ſelfe; all theſe put together, will make a full Memento: which if ſhe had remembred, ſhe had beene a Pillar of light in heaven, not of ſalt in earth. It is too late, for her: we, in due time yet, may remember it.

And, when we have remembred theſe, Remember CHRIST too, that gave the Memento: that He calleth Himſelfe Alpha and Omega; not onely Alpha for His happie beginning; but Omega, for His thrice happie ending. For that Hee left us not, nor gave over the worke of our redemption, till Hee had brought it to Conſummatum eſt: And that, on our part, Summa Religionis eſt, imitari quem colis, The higheſt act of Religion, is, for the Chriſtian to conforme himſelfe, not to Lot's Wife, but to CHRIST, whoſe Name he weareth. And though Verus amor non ſumit vires deſpe, True love (indeed) receiveth no manner ſtrength from hope, but, though it hope for nothing, loveth nevertheleſſe; yet, to quicken our love, which oft is but faint, and, for a full Memento, Remember the Reward. Remember, how CHRIST will remember us for it; which ſhall not be the wages of an hireling, or (Leaſe-wiſe) for time, and terme of yeares, but αἰῶνες αἰώνων, Eternitie it ſelfe, never to expire, end, or determine, but to laſt and endure for ever and ever. Apoc. 1.8.

But this reward (ſaith Ezekiel) is for thoſe, whoſe foreheads are marked with Tau, which (as Omega in Greeke) is the laſt letter in the Hebrew Alphabet, and the marke of conſummatum eſt, among them: They onely ſhall eſcape the wrath to come. And this crowne is laid up for them, not of whom it may be ſaid, Currebatis benè, Yee did runne well; but, for thoſe that can ſay (with Saint Paul) Curſum conſummavi, I have finiſhed my courſe well. Ezek.9.4. Gal 5.7. 2 Tim.4.7.

And (thankes be to GOD) we have not hitherto wanted this ſalt, but remembred Lots wife well. So that, this exhortation, becauſe wee have prevented and done that which it calleth for, changeth his nature and becommeth a commendation, as all others doe. A commendation (I ſay:) yet not ſo much of the people (whoſe onely felicitie is to ſerve and be ſubject to one that is conſtant; for otherwiſe, we know how wavering a thing the multitude is) as of the Prince, whoſe conſtant ſtanding giveth ſtrength to many a weake knee otherwiſe. And Bleſſed be GOD and the Father of our LORD IESVS CHRIST, that we ſtand in the preſence of ſuch a Prince: who hath ever accounted of Perſeverance, not onely as of Regina virtutum, the Queene of vertues; but, as of virtus Reginarum, the vertue of a Queene. Who (like Zorobabel) firſt, by Princely magnanimitie, laid the Corner-ſtone, in a troubleſome time: and ſince, by Heroicall conſtancie, through many both alluring proffers and threatning dangers, hath brought forth the Head-ſtone alſo, with the Prophets acclamation, Grace, grace, unto it: Grace, for ſo happie a beginning; and Grace, for ſo thrice happy an ending. No terrours, no enticement, no care of her ſafety hath removed her from her ſtedfaſtneſſe: but, with a fixed eye, with ſtraight ſteps, with a reſolute minde, hath entred her ſelfe, and brought us into Zoar. It is a little one, but therein our ſoules ſhall live; and we are in ſafetie, all the Cities of the Plaine being in combuſtion round about us. Of whom it ſhall be remembred, to her high praiſe, not onely that of the Heathen Illaque virgo viri; but, that of David, that, all her dayes ſhe ſerved GOD, with a covenant of Salt, and with her Iſrael, from the firſt day untill now. And of this be we perſwaded, that He which began this good worke in her, will performe it unto the day of IESVS CHRIST, to her everlaſting praiſe, comfort and joy; and, in her, to the comfort, joy and happineſſe of us all.

2 Chron. 13. 5.

Yet it is not needleſſe, but right requiſite, that we which are the LORDS Remembrancers put you in minde, that as Perſeverance is the Queene of vertues, quia ea ſola coronatur; ſo is it alſo, quia Satanas ei ſoli inſidiatur, for that, all Satans malice, and all his practices are againſt it: The more carefull need we to be, to carry in our eye this example. Which GOD grant we may, and that our hearts may ſeriouſly regard, and our memories carefully keepe it, Vt hæc columna fulciat nos, & hic ſal condiat nos, that this Pillar may proppe our weakneſſe, and this ſalt ſeaſon our ſacrifice; that it may be remembred, and accepted, and rewarded in the day of the LORD. Which, &c.

A SER

A SERMON PREACHED IN THE COVRT AT RICHMOND,

On Tueſday, being the V. of March,

Anno Domini MDXCVI.

LVKE Chap. XVI. Ver. XXV.

Fili, recordare, &c.

Sonne, remember that thou, in thy life time, receivedſt thy pleaſure (or, good things;) and likewiſe LAZARVS paines: Now therefore is hee comforted, and thou art tormented.

HIS Scripture hath the name given it in the very firſt words, Recordare Fili, Sonne remember: It is a Remembrance.

There be many Sermons of remembrance here on earth: this, is one from heaven, from the mouth of Abraham. Not now on earth, but in heaven, and from thence beholding (not in a glaſſe or darke ſpeech, but) intuitivè; that which hee telleth us: and Hee that ſaw it bare witneſſe, and His witneſſe is true. 1 Cor. 13. 2. Iohn 19 35.

Which may ſomewhat move attention: Or, if that will not, let me adde further, That it is ſuch a remembrance, that it toucheth our eſtate in everlaſting life; That is, the well or evill hearing of this Recordare, is as much as our eternall life is worth. For, we finde both in it. That our Comfort or Torment eternall (Comfort, in Abrahams boſome; Torment, in the fire of hell) depend upon it: and therefore, as much as we regard them, we are to regard it.

This Remembrance is directed to a Sonne of Abrahams; not ſo much for him, as for the reſt. For, it is to be feared, that both the ſonnes of Abraham, and the daughters of Sara forget this point overmuch; and many of them (with this partie here, to whom it is ſpoken) never remember it, till it be too late.

Sara

TO ABRAHAMS ſonnes then, all and every one. But ſpecially, ſuch of his ſonnes, as preſently are in the ſtate, that this Sonne (here) ſometime was, of whom it is ſaid: Hee had received good things in his life. By vertue whereof, I finde, this Recordare will reach home to us; for that, wee are within the compaſſe of this Recepiſti. For truely, the ſumme of our Receipt hath beene great; No Nations ſo great: And, our Recordare, little; I will not ſay, how little, but (ſure) too little for that, we have received.

Now, albeit it be all our caſe (for, we all have received) yet, not all our caſe alike; but of ſome, more than other. For, ſome have received in farre more plentifull manner, than other ſome; and they therefore more deepely intereſſed in it. And looke, who among us have received moſt, them it moſt concerneth: and they (of all other) moſt need to looke to it.

If you aske, why they more than others? For that (beſides the dutie) to whom a great Recepiſti is given, of them a great Recordare will be required. The danger alſo helpes them forward. For, ſo it oft happeneth unhappily: that, whereas Recepiſti is made (and ſo may well be) a motive, for us to remember: ſo croſſe is our nature, none is ſo great an enemie to Recordare as it. Our great receiving is oft occaſion of our little remembring. And, as a full diet in the veſſels of our bodie; ſo, a plenteous receipt breeds ſtoppings in the minde, and memorie, and the vitall parts of our ſoule.

We have hereof a lively example before our eyes: And ſuch an one, as if it move us not, I know not what will. A receipt, for memories that ſuffer obſtructions.

Our SAVIOVR CHRIST unlocketh hell gates to let us ſee it. In diſcovering what ſighes and what ſufferings are in the other world, he ſheweth us one lying in them, to whom Abraham objecteth, that this franke receiving had marred his memory. And, as he ſheweth us his fault, ſo (withall) what came to him for it, in that ſtrange and fearefull conſequent: Now therefore thou art tormented.

This example is told by our SAVIOVR (in the XIIII. verſe) to other rich men, and troubled with the ſame lethargie. Who, when Hee put them in minde, It
Verſe 9. would not be amiſſe, while they were here, to make them friends of that they had received, that, when this failed them (as, faile them it muſt) that might receive them into everlaſting tabernacles: forgate themſelves ſo farre, as they derided His counſell; not, in words, but per myćteriſmum. Which maketh Him fall from Parables, to a plaine ſtorie (for, ſo it is holden by the beſt Interpreters, both old and later:) and, from everlaſting tabernacles, to everlaſting torments: That, howſoever they regarded not His Recordare on earth, they had beſt give better eare to ABRAHAMS, from heaven.

It is His intent, in reporting of it, that our remembring of it ſhould keepe us from it. Non vult mortem, & minatur mortem, ne mittat in mortem, (ſaith Chryſoſtome:) Hee would not have us in that place; yet Hee telleth us of that place, to the end wee never come in that place.

Yea, it is Abrahams deſire too, we ſhould not be overtaken, but thinke of it in time; and prevent it, before it prevent us. And therefore, he lifteth up his voice, and crieth out of heaven, Recordare fili.

And, not onely Abraham, but he that was in the place it ſelfe, and beſt knew the terrour, becauſe he felt it; felt that, in it, as he heartily wiſheth and inſtantly ſueth, that they,
Verſe 27. 28. whom he loveth or any way wiſheth well to, may ſome way take warning, Ne & ipſi veniant, That they alſo come not into that place of torments.

This uſe, CHRIST on earth, Abraham from heaven, and he out of hell, wiſh we may have of it. And we (I truſt) will wiſh our ſelves, no worſe than they: and therefore looke to our Recordare, carry it in minde, and (in Recordare, there is Cor, too) take it to heart; and by both, in time take order, Ne & ipſi veniamus.

The verſe it ſelfe (if we marke it well) is, in figure and proportion, an exact Croſſe: For, as a Croſſe, it conſiſteth of two barres or beames ſo ſituate, as the one doth quarter the other. Thou receivedſt good things, and Lazarus received evill. Theſe two lye cleane contrary: But meet both, at the middle word, Now therefore: and there, by a new Antitheſis, croſſe each other: ὁ δὲ, He that received evill, is comforted: and σὺ δέ, thou that didſt receive good, art tormented. And, to make it a perfect Croſſe, it hath a title or Inſcription too, ſet over it: and this it is, Recordare fili. And ſure, next to the Croſſe of CHRIST and the memory thereof, this Croſſe of Abrahams invention and exaltation is (of all others) moſt effectuall. And I verily perſwade my ſelfe, if we often would fix it before our eyes, and well marke the Inſcription, it would be a ſpeciall preparation to our Paſſeover (meaning, by our Paſſeover, our end) whereby paſſe we muſt, yer long, into another ſtate, either of miſery or bliſſe: but, whether of miſery, or bliſſe, it will lye much in the uſe of this word Recordare. The Diviſion

I.

II.

Firſt then we will treat, 1 of the Croſſe: After, 2 of the Title.

We have, in the Croſſe, two Barres: But, with both, we will not meddle. For, why ſhould we deale with Lazarus? This place is not for him; nor he no roome in this Auditory. Therefore, waving his part, in this other (of the Rich mans) we have two quarters, repreſenting unto us two eſtates: a The upper part, or head, Recepiſti bona, in vitâ, his eſtate, in this life. b The nether, or foot; Iam verò torqueris: his eſtate, in the other.

Of theſe two: 1 That, two they are: 2 which they be: 3 and how they be faſtened, or tenanted the one to the other, with the Illative, Now therefore.

I.

Of the Croſſe.

TO quarter out this Croſſe: Two parts it ſtands of; which two parts are two eſtates; 1 One paſt, 2 The other, preſent: The one, in Memory: The other, in experience. Now, both memory and experience (Memory of things paſt, and Experience of things preſent) are (both) hand-maids to Providence, and ſerve to provide for things to come. And, of all points of providence, for that which is the higheſt point of all, that our memory of it, keepe us from experience of this place, this concluſion.

I

Theſe two are ſet downe: 1 The one eſtate, in the words Vitâ tuâ: 2 The other, in the words Iam verò, But now. The former, paſt with him, and yet preſent with us: For, we yet receive. The later, preſent with him, but (with us) yet to come, or rather (I truſt) never to come: Iam verò torqueris.

1 The firſt is the life in eſſe, which we all now live: which though it be one and the ſame, yet is there in it a ſenſible difference, Pauper & dives obviaverunt, of ſome poore, and ſome rich, every day meeting each other.

2 But, Nemo dives, ſemper dives: and againe, Nemo pauper, ſemper pauper. They that be rich in it, ſhall not ever be rich; nor they that are poore, poore alway. It came to paſſe (ſaith the Scripture) that the begger died (verſe 22.) Mortuus eſt etiam & dives, and the rich man (for all his riches) died alſo. There ends the firſt eſtate.

3 But, that end is no finall end. For, after Vitâ tuâ there is a Iam verò, ſtill: a ſecond ſtate in reverſion, to take place when the firſt is expired. Our hearts miſgive us of ſome ſuch eſtate: and (as the Heathen man ſaid) they, that put it off, with Quis ſcit? who can tell, whether ſuch eſtate be? ſhall never be able to rid their minds of Quid ſi? but, what if ſuch a one be, how then? But, to put us (that be Chriſtians) out of all doubt, our Saviour CHRIST, by this ſtory, openeth us a Caſement into the other life, and ſheweth us, whither we goe, when we goe hence.

1 Firſt, That, as in this life (though but one, yet) there are two diverſe eſtates; to death (though it be, but one neither) hath two ſeverall paſſages: And, thorow it, as thorow one and the ſame Citie gate, the honeſt ſubject walketh abroad for his recreation, and the lewd malefactor is carried out to his execution.

2 Two ſtates then there be, after death; and theſe two diſ-joyned in place, diſlike in condition: both ſet downe within the verſe; 1 One, of comfort: 2 The other, of torment.

3 And, that both theſe take place jam, preſently. For, immediately after his death, and, while all his five brethren yet lived, and yet any of them were dead, he was in his torments, and did not expect the generall Iudgement, nor was not deferred to the end of the world.

4 And (to make it a compleat croſſe, for ſo it is) as the poore and rich meet here, ſo doe they, there, alſo, otherwhile; and goe two contrary wayes, every one to his owne place. Lazarus to his boſome; the rich man, to his gulfe: and, ones miſery endeth in reſt; the others purple and fine linnen in a flame of fire. Verè ſtupendæ vices (ſaith Chryſoſtome) verily, a ſtrange change, a change to be wondered at: to be wondered at and feared, of thoſe whom it may concerne any manner of way, and (at any hand) to be had in remembrance.

1 To apply theſe two, to the party, we have in hand, and to begin with the firſt eſtate, firſt. Two things are in it ſet downe by him: 1 The one, in the word Fili: 2 The other, in the word Recepiſti.

1 Fili. Firſt, that he was Abrahams ſonne, and ſo, of the religion onely true: and one, that (as himſelfe ſaith of himſelfe) had had Moſes and the Prophets, though tanquam non habens, as though he had them not. For, little he uſed, and leſſe he regarded them; yet, a Profeſſor he was.

2 Recepiſti. Secondly: as by nature, ABRAHAMS ſonne: ſo by condition or office, one of GODS Receivers. Receivers we are, every one of us, more or leſſe: but yet, in receipts, there is a great latitude. Great, betweene her, that received two mites; and him, that received a thouſand talents. Betweene them, that receive tegumenta onely, covering for their nakedneſſe; and them, that receive ornamenta, rich attire alſo, for comlineſſe: and againe, that receive alimenta, food for emptineſſe; and oblectamenta, delicious fare for daintineſſe. Now, hee was not of the petie, but of the maine receipt. It is ſaid: Hee received good things, and it is told, what theſe good things were, Purple of the faireſt, and linnen of the fineſt; and quotidie ſplendidè, every day a double feaſt. Which one thing, though there were nothing elſe, asketh a great Receipt alone. Here, rich; in this life; and who would not ſue to ſucceed him in it? One would thinke, this wood would make no croſſe, nor theſe premiſſes ſuch a now therefore. But, to him, that was thus and had thus, all this plentie, all this pleaſure; poſt tantas divitias, poſt tantas delicias; to him, is this ſpoken, but now thou art tormented. Which firſt eſtate, as it was rich, ſo it was ſhort: therefore, I make ſhort with it, to come to cruciaris. Which, though in ſyllables it is ſhorter, yet it is in ſubſtance, that peece to which he is faſtened, in length of continuance farre beyond it.

Cruciaris is but one word, but much weight lyeth in it: therefore it is not ſleightly to be paſſed over, as being the ſpeciall object of our Recordare, and the principall part of the croſſe indeed. Two wayes our SAVIOVR CHRIST expreſſeth it: 1 One while under the terme Βασανος, which is torture: 2 Another, under the terme ὀδύνη, which is anguiſh of the Spirit: referring this, to the inward paine; and that, to the outward paſſion. The ſoule being there ſubjected by GODS juſtice, to ſenſuall paine, for ſubjecting it ſelfe willingly to brutiſh ſenſualitie, in this life, it being a more noble and celeſtiall ſubſtance.

Of which paine, Saint CHRYSOSTOME noteth, that becauſe many of us can skill, what torment the tongue hath, in extremitie of a burning ague; and what paine our hand feeleth, when from the hearth ſome ſparke lighteth on it: CHRIST choſe to expreſſe them in theſe two. Not, but that they be incomparably greater than than theſe: yea, farre above all we can ſpeake, or thinke: but that fleſh and bloud conceiveth but what it feeleth, and muſt be ſpoken to, as it may underſtand. And it is a ground, that, in termes (here and elſe-where) proportioned to our conceit, torments are uttered farre beyond all conceipt: which, labouring to avoid, we may; but labouring to expreſſe, we ſhall never doe it.

Yet, to helpe them ſomewhat, wee ſhall the more deeply apprehend them, if we doe but compare them: as wee may, and never goe out of the confines of our owne verſe.

With Recepiſti, firſt. To conſider this: that his torment is in the preſent tenſe, now upon him, Cruciaris: His good, all paſt and gone, Recepiſti. Marke (ſaith Saint Auguſtine) of his pleaſure, omnia dicit de præterito; Dives erat, veſtiebatur, Epulabatur, Recepiſti: He was rich, did goe, did fare, had received: was, did, and had; all paſt, and vaniſhed away; all (like the counterpane of a Leaſe) expired, and our Abraham likeneth it to wages, received and ſpent before-hand. 1

Secondly, If we lay together his torments, and bona tua in vitâ. For, we ſhall finde, they are of a divers ſcantling. The one had an end with his life; and ô quam ſubito! The other, when it beginneth once, ſhall never have an end. That life is not like this. No: if all the lives of all, (I ſay not, men, women and children, but of all) and every of the creatures, that ever lived upon the earth, or ſhall live to the worlds end, were all added, one to another, and all ſpunne into one life, this one exceedeth them all. This then (I make no queſtion) will make another degree, to thinke, quod delectabat fuit momentaneum, quod cruciat eſt æternum. 2

Thirdly, if wee match it with Lazarus autem; that is, with the ſight of others in that eſtate, whence he is excluded: and in them, with ſorrow to conſider, what himſelfe might have had and hath loſt for ever. There ſhall be (ſaith CHRIST of this point) weeping, and gnaſhing of teeth, to ſee Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob, and all the Prophets, in the Kingdome of GOD, and your ſelves thruſt out of doores. Not onely, weeping, for griefe that themſelves have loſt it; but, gnaſhing of teeth alſo, for very indignation, that others have obtained it. And, of others, not ſome other; but, that Lazarus iſte, one of theſe poore people, whom we ſhunne in the way, and drive our coaches apace to eſcape from: that, of them, it may fall, we may ſee ſome in bliſſe, when they ſhall lye in hell like ſheepe (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) that walked on earth like Lions. Will not this beare a third? 3 Chap. 13. 28. Pſal. 49. 14

But beyond all theſe, If we counterpoiſe it with the word παρακαλεῖται, is comforted, with which Abraham hath ſet it in oppoſition: Torment oppoſed to comfort; (that is) torment comfortleſſe, wherein, no manner hope of any kinde of comfort. Neither of the comfort of mitigation; for (in the verſe next before) all hope of καταψύξι, releeſe, is denied, even to a drop of water: Neither of the comfort of delivery at laſt; for (in the verſe next following) he is willed to know, that, by reaſon of the great partition, their caſe is ſuch, ut non poſſunt that they cannot preſently, or for ever, looke for any paſſage from thence, but muſt there tarry in torments everlaſtingly. So, neither comfort of releeſe, nor of delivery: nor the poore comfort, which, in all miſeries (here) doth not leave us, 4 Verſe 24. Verſe 26.

——dabit Deus his quoque finem;

An end will come: Nay, no end will never come. Which [never] is never deeply enough imprinted, nor ſeriouſly enough conſidered. That this [now] ſhall be ſtill now, and never have an end: and this cruciaris be cruciaris for ever, and never declined into a preter tenſe, as Recepiſti was. This is an exaltation of this croſſe, above all elſe: None ſhall ever come downe from it: none ſhall ever begge our body, to lay it in our ſepulchre.

Fifthly, If we lay it to Recordare. For, may I not adde to all theſe, that, being in this caſe, he heareth Recordare, and is willed to remember, when his remembring will doe him no good: but though he remember it, in ſorrow, and in the bitterneſſe of his ſoule: yea, though his ſorrow be above meaſure ſorrowfull, it will profit him nothing? I ſay, Griefe both utterly comfortleſſe, and altogether unprofitable. 5

Theſe five make him that feeles it (here) wiſh, that none of thoſe, he wiſheth well, may ever come there to know, how hot that fire, or how terrible that torment is.

These five words are (all) within the compasse of the Verse it selfe; and may serve (every one) as a naile, to fasten our memory to this crosse: that, we may ever remember it and never forget it, and, never forgetting it, never feele it.

This then is his crosse. We long (I know) to have it taken downe; our eares are dainty, and the matter melancholike, and we little love to heare it stood on so long. But, Chrysostome saith well of that fire: Nunquid, si tacuimus, extinximus? If we speake not of it, will it goe out? No, no: sive loquamur, sive taceamus, ardet ille: speake we, or keepe we silence, it burneth still, still it burneth. Therefore, let us speake, and thinke of it, and let it stand in the name of GOD: Et exerceamus auditum (saith the good Father) ne ita molleſcat, and keepe our eares in exercise, that they grow not nice. If, to heare of it, be painfull; to feele it will be more. The invention is to keepe the exaltation, to take it up. For, none so neere it as they, qui non tollunt, donec super-imponitur, that take it not up, till it be laid upon them.

3 The joyning, or Tenon. Iam verò.

Thus, we have severally seene the counterpoints of this crosse: the top, which is in vitâ, in this life; and the foot, which reacheth ad noviſsima inferni, to the bottome of hell. It remaineth we tenon both these together, as Antecedent, and Consequent: Thou didst receive: Now therefore. 1 First, that they may be: 2 And then, how they may be joyned.

1 First then we finde, that Recepisti is, as it ends: and that, by this example, it may end in cruciaris, and prove the one end of a heavie Crosse. Which first bringeth us out of admiration of the riches of this life. When we see, that these good things, which (after the tax of the world) are counted, and (in a manner) stiled the onely good things, and in the deceitfull ballance of this world, weigh downe ABRAHAMS bosome; be not ever demonstrative signes of GODS speciall liking: Nor they, ipso facto highest in His favour, that receive them in greatest measure: Nor peradventure (as CHRIST saith) so highly accompted of in Heaven, as they be on earth. Therefore, they that have them, not to reflect too much on them; nor be ideò inflati (as saith Saint Augustine) quia obsericati; as much pride in their soule, as purple on their body. And they that have them not, not to æmulari, vex and grieve themselves at Nabals wealth, Hamans preferment, this mans table; seeing there commeth a Iam verò; and when that commeth, wee shall see such an alteration in his state, as hee that wisheth him worst, shall wish, that for every good thing hee received here, hee had received a thousand; and (with Saint Bernard) Vt omnes lapides converterentur in rosas, that every stone under his feet here had beene turned into a rose. Such is his case, now: and such theirs, that come where he is.

Verse 25.

2 Is this all? No. But, as it bringeth us out of admiration; so it bringeth us into feare. For, two things it offereth, either of which is, or may be matter of feare. 1. First, in that he is Abrahams sonne. That Abraham hath, of his seed, in hell: and that all his sonnes shall not rest in their Fathers bosome. Which offereth us occasion to feare, for all our Profession. For, though he were a sonne too, and so acknowledged by Abraham, yet, there he is, now.

Esay 30. 33.

2 In that hee is of ABRAHAMS rich sonnes, and one that received good things in his life. Which ministreth new matter of feare: that (as the Prophet saith) Tophet is prepared of old, and that even for great ones; for such as goe in purple, and weare fine linnen, and fare full daintily: Even for such, is it prepared. Not, as every prison, for common persons; but, as Tophet (or the Tower) for great Estates. So that it may seeme, either of both these have their danger at their heeles; For, that, they to him were; to many, they are: and to us, they may be, as Antecedents to an evill Consequent.

Men verily may flatter themselves: But sure, I can never thinke but there is more, in this Now therefore, than the world will allow. And that this Recordare of

Abrahams

Abrahams is not a matter ſo ſleightly to be ſlipped over. There is ſome danger (no doubt) and that more than will willingly be acknowledged, to ſuch as are wealthy, and well at eaſe in Sion. Saint Gregory confeſſeth by himſelfe, that never any ſentence entred ſo deepe into his ſoule as this. And that, as Surgite mortui was ever in Saint Hieroms eare: And Non in comeſſationibus, not in ſurfetting, in Saint Auguſtines, by which he was firſt converted: So, this was with him; and he could not get it out of his minde. For, he ſitting in the See of Rome, when it was growen rich and of great receipt, was (as hee ſaith) ſtill in doubt of Recepiſti: whether his exalting into that Chaire might not be his recompence at GOD'S hands, and all that ever he ſhould receive from Him, for all his ſervice. And ever he doubted this Recepiſti (which we ſo eaſily paſſe over) and whether his caſe might not be like. Thus did the good Father; and (as I thinke) not unwiſely: And, would GOD, his example herein, might make due impreſſion, and worke like feare, in ſo many as have, in the eyes of all men, received the good things in this life. For, this may daily be ſeene every where, that divers, that received them, if ever any did; and that, in a meaſure heaped up and running over; carry themſelves ſo without remembrance or regard of this point, as if no ſuch Simile were in the Scripture, as that of the Needles-eye: No ſuch example, as of this Rich man: No ſuch Recordare, as this of Abraham, which we have in hand. It ſhould ſeeme, they have learned a point of divinitie, Abraham never knew: Balaams divinitie (I feare) to love the wages of unrighteouſneſſe and a gift in the boſome, and yet to cry Moriatur anima mea, His ſoule ſhould goe ſtraight to Abrahams boſome for all that: And ſo, in effect, to deny Abrahams Conſequence.

Amos 6.1. Rom.13.3. Matth.19.24. 2 Pet.2.15. Numb.23.10.

Wee muſt then joyne iſſue upon the maine point, wee cannot avoid it: To enquire, how this Now therefore commeth in: And how farre, and to whom, this Conſequent holdeth. I demand then: was hee therefore tormented, becauſe hee received good things? Is this the caſe of all them that weare purple and fare well in this life? ſhall every one, to whom GOD reacheth ſuch good things as theſe, be quit for ever from ABRAHAMS boſome? By no meanes. For, Cujus eſt ſinus, whoſe is the boſome? Is it not ABRAHAMS? And, what was ABRAHAM? Looke Gen. XIII. Verſe II. ABRAHAM was rich in cattell, in ſilver and gold. There is hope then for rich men, in a rich mans boſome. Then, the boſome it ſelfe is a rich mans, though a Lazarus be in it. Yea, though we finde here Lazarus in it: yet elſe-where, we finde, he is not all. For, the great [a] Lord that bare rule under Queene Candaces: The [b] elect Ladie: Ioſeph of Arimathea, and [c] the Areopagite (grave and wiſe Counſellours:) The [d] Purple-ſeller (and if the Purple-ſeller, why not the Purple-wearer?) Yes, the [e] Purple-wearer too, were in earth, Saints (as we reade) and are (we doubt not) in Abrahams boſome alſo.

[a] Act.8.27. [b] 2 Ioh.1. [c] Act.17.34. [d] 16.14. [e] Dan.5.29.

It was not therefore, becauſe hee was rich: for then muſt Abraham himſelfe have beene ſubject to the ſame ſentence. Nay, one may ſo be rich, and ſo uſe his riches together, as they ſhall conclude in the other figure and end in ſolaris; and no wayes hinder, but helpe forward his accompt; and bring him a ſecond recipies of the good things of that eternall life. And (if you marke it well) we have here, in this Scripture, two rich men: [1] One, that giveth the Recordare: [2] The other, to whom it is given. The example of a rich man, which rich men to avoid: The ſentence of a rich man, which rich men to remember.

It is evident: It was not, for that hee had received good things in this life: Seeing, as truly as ABRAHAM ſaid to him, Sonne remember, thou didſt receive good things: So truly might hee have rejoyned, Father remember, thou didſt receive, &c. It was not that. 1

Neither was it, becauſe he came by them unduely, by ſuch wayes and meanes, as the ſoule of GOD abhorreth: For, it is (ſaith Bernard) Recordare quia recepiſti; not quia rapuiſti, or quia decepiſti, by ravine, or deceipt. 2

Neither was it, becauſe he received them, and wrapped them up. For, as his receipts 3 are in this verſe: So his expences, in the XIX. So much in purple, and linnen; So much, in feaſting.

4 Neither was it, becauſe receiving plentie, he tooke his portion of that, he received, in apparell or diet. For, Num ſolis ſtultis apes mellificant (ſaith the Philoſopher) doe Bees make honey, or Wormes ſpinne ſilke for the wicked or reprobate onely? (Howbeit, it cannot be excuſed, that being but Homo quidam, he went like a Prince: for, purple was Princes weare.) Or, that he feaſted, and that not meanely, but λαμπρῶς, in all ſumptuous manner; and that, not at ſome ſet times, but καθ' ἡμέραν, day by day: (for, this portion was beyond all proportion.)

None of theſe it was. Yet we hold ſtill, ſome danger there is; there is ſome: and this Recordare is not idle or needleſſe.

What was it then, that brought him thither, or (as Saint Bernard calleth it) what was his Scala inferni, the ladder by which he went downe to hell? that we may know, what is the difference betweene Abrahams receipt and his: and when Recepiſti ſhall conclude with Cruciaris.

Saint Chryſoſtome doth lay the weight on the word Recepiſti, in his nature or proper ſenſe. For, it is one thing (ſaith he) λάβειν (that is, accipere) to perceive or take; another, ἀπολάβειν (that is, recipere) to receive it, as it were in full diſcharge and finall ſatisfaction. (And, the ſame diſtinction doth CHRIST Himſelfe obſerve in ἔχειν and ἀπέχειν, in Matth. 6. 16. the VI. Chapter of Saint Matthew.) Both have, and both receive: But, they that doe λάβειν, receive them, as a pledge of GODS further favour: But they that doe ἀπολάβειν, receive them, as a full and compleat reward, and have no more to receive, but muſt thereupon releaſe, and quite claime all demands, in whatſoever elſe. Tanquam arrham, and tanquam mercedem, is the diſtinction in Schooles.

1 With GOD verily it is a righteous thing, to let every man receive, for any kinde of good, he hath done here. Yea, even the Heathen, for their morall vertues (as Saint Auguſtine holdeth of the Romans, and the victories they received.)

2 But, righteous it is alſo, that the Reubenites, which chooſe their lot in Gilead on this ſide of Iordan, and there ſeat themſelves, ſhould not after claime their part too, in the Land of Promiſe. Even ſo, that they that will have, and have their receiving time, here, ſhould not have it here, and elſe-where alſo.

3 Then, all is in the choice, where we will lay our Recepiſti: whether here or there, in this or that life: In purple, and ſilke, and the delights of the world: or, in the reſt and comfort of Abrahams boſome. Whether we will ſay: LORD, if I may ſo receive, that I may be received: If I may receive ſo the good of this life, that I be not barred the other to come; tanquam arrham, as the earneſt of a better inheritance, Ecce me. But if my receiving here, ſhall be my laſt receipt: If I ſhall receive them tanquam mercedem, as my portion for ever; I renounce them, Put me out of this receipt, and reſerve my part in ſtore for the Land of the living. And, of evill: If it muſt come here, or there (with Saint Auguſtine) Domine, hîc ure, hîc ſeca; Ibi parce: Let my ſeering and ſmart be here; there let me be ſpared: And, from Cruciaris, the torment to come, Libera me Domine.

To very good purpoſe ſaid the Ancient Father: Quiſque dives, quiſque pauper, Nemo dives, nemo pauper: Animus omnia facit. It is ſomewhat, to be rich, or poore; it is nothing, to be rich, or poore; It is, as the minde is: The minde maketh all. Now (ſaith Saint Chryſoſtome) what minde he carried, is gathered out of Abrahams doubling, and trebling, Tu, tua, and tuâ: Recepiſti tu, bona tua, in vitâ tuâ: which words are working words (as he taketh them) and containe in them great Emphaſis. Vnderſtanding (by tua) not ſo much that, he had in poſſeſſion; as that, he made ſpeciall reckoning of: For, that, is moſt properly termed ours: Animus omnia facit.

1 This life is called his life; not, becauſe he lived in it, but becauſe he ſo lived in it, as if there had beene no other life but it. And in his accompt, there was no other; Δὸς μοὶ τὸ σήμερον, λάβε σὺ τὸ ἄυριον, Give him this life; let this day be his day; take to mor-
John 8. 56. row who will. This did not Abraham: For, he ſaw a day, and that after this life, that rejoyced him more than all the dayes of his life.

This

This life as it was his life; So the good of it, his good, Bona tua. This, his life, these the portion of his life: these he chose for his good: they, his; and hee, theirs. They that make such a choice, their Recepisti may well end in Cruciaris.

This way, Saint Chrysostome: by the minde. Saint Augustine taketh another, by the memory, more proper to the Patriarch's meaning: and that foure wayes:

1 For (saith he) Abraham willing him to remember, he had received such things; implieth (in effect) that he had cleane forgotten, that any such things he had ever received. Looke how Esau speaketh, Habeo bona plurima, I have enough, my Brother: And, as his pew fellow here, Luke XII. Anima habes, Soule, thou hast goods enough: Even so for all the world, it seemeth, this party here, he had them: Sure he was, he had them: but, that he received them, he never remembred. Now, he is put in minde, quia recepisti: Now therefore, thou art tormented. Gen.33.9. Luke 12.19.

2 Now, not remembring he had received them, no marvell if hee forgate, why hee received them, or with what condition: Forgetting GOD in heaven, no marvell if hee remembred not Lazarus on earth. Verily, neither he nor any man receive them, as Proprietaries; but as Stewards, and as Accomptants, as CHRIST telleth us, above in this Chapter. Not, for our selves onely, or for our owne use; but for others, too: And among others, for Lazarus by name. If Lazarus receive not, it was his fault, and not GODS, who gave him enough to supply his owne uses, and Lazarus want too. For both which two, he, and all receive, that receive at GODS hands. But he (it seemeth) received them to and for himselfe alone, and no body else: That Abraham saith truly, Recepisti tu; tu & nemo alius: You, and yours, and no body besides. For, his Recepisti ended in himselfe, and he made himselfe Summam omnium receptorum. For, if you call him to accompt by the writ of Redde rationem, this must be his Audit: In purple and linnen, so much; and in belly-cheere, so much: So much on his backe, and so much on his board, and in them endeth the Totall of his Receipt: Except you will put in his hounds too, which received of him, more than Lazarus might. This is indeed Recepisti tu solus. This did not Abraham: For, his receipt reacheth to strangers, and others besides himselfe; and, Lazarus he received in his bosome on earth, or else he had never beene in heaven, to have him there.

Will you see [now therefore] the Consequent in kinde? Therefore is this party now in the Gulfe, because (living) himselfe was a gulfe: It is now Gurges in gurgite, but one Gulfe in another. While he lived, he was as a Gulfe swallowing all: Now therefore, the Gulfe hath swallowed him. Remember this, for it is a speciall point. For, if our purple and fine linnen swallow up our almes: If our too much lashing on, to doe good to our selves, make us in state to doe good, to none but our selves: If our riotous wasting on expences of vanitie, be a gulfe and devoure our Christian imploying in workes of charitie, There is danger in Recepisti, even the danger of [Now therefore] Gurges eras & in gurgitem projicieris, a Gulfe thou wert, and into the gulfe shalt thou goe. Ever, for the most part, you shall finde these two coupled. In Sodome; Pride, and fulnesse of bread, with not stretching the hand to the poore. In Iuda: Great boules of wine, and rich beds of ivory, with little compassion on the misery of Ioseph. And here: Going richly, and fairing daintily, with Lazarus bosome and belly, both emptie. The saying of Saint Basil is highly commended, that ἀκόνη τῆς ἀσωτίας ἡ φιλοτιμία, Pride is Prodigalities whetstone. And so it is (sure;) and sets such an edge upon it in our expences, that it curs so deepe into our receipt, and shares so much for purple and linnen, as it leaves but a little for Lazarus portion. Sure, so it is: lesse purple must content us; and somewhat must be cut off from quotidie splendide, if we will have Lazarus better provided for. Ezek.16.49. Amos 6.4.

This, I have stood a little on, that it may be remembred. It is CHRISTS speciall drift, both in the Parable before, and in this Story here: and remember it we must, if either (as, in that) we will be received into everlasting tabernacles; or (as, in this) we will be delivered from everlasting torments.

3 Now I adde, that, in thus forgetting Lazarus, to remember himselfe, he remembred not himselfe neither, but failed in that too. For, whereas he consisted of two parts, 1 a body, and 2 a soule, he remembred the one so much, as he quite left the other out of his memento. For, his Recepiſti tu was his body, and nothing elſe. Now reaſon would, the body ſhould not take up the whole Receipt; but that the poore ſoule ſhould be thought upon too. Purple and ſilke, and Ede, bibe, they are but the bodies part: But almes and workes of mercy, they, they be the ſoules. May not our ſoules be admitted ſuitors, that we would remember them (that is) remember Lazarus? for, that is the ſoules portion: For, the other part, he and we all remember faſt enough.

4 Thus, remembring neither GOD nor Lazarus, nay, nor his owne ſoule; his memory thus failing him, GOD provided, and ſent ſome, to put him in minde. Sure, as he had received thoſe former good things, ſo alſo had he received Moſes and the Prophets, by his owne confeſſion: And, in receiving them, hee had received a great benefit, and (peradventure) greater in this than the other: And, Moſes had told him as much as Abraham tels him now: Vtinam noviſſima proviſerent, Would GOD (ſaith Moſes) men would remember the foure Noviſſima; 1. That there is a death; 2. there is a Iudgement; 3. there is a heaven; 4. there is a hell: But, of all the foure, Noviſſima inferni (in the ſame Chapter) the nethermoſt; Nunc igitur cruciaris, the place of torments. The Prophets ſaid as much: Icremie, Ever thinke, that an end there will be, Et quid fiet in noviſſimo, what ſhall become of us in that end? Who among us (ſaith Eſay) can endure devouring fire? who can dwell with ardores ſempiterni, everlaſting burnings? Theſe he had: and if he had heard theſe, it is plainly affirmed, Audiant ipſos would have done it; they would have kept him, for ever comming in that place. But, theſe alſo living he ſtrove to forget, and (as ingenderers of melancholie) to remove them farre away. And, that hee might the more eaſily doe it, it was thought not amiſſe, to call their authoritie in queſtion, whether they were worth the hearing or no. It is (in effect) confeſſed by him: that his five brethren and he were of one opinion; that the hearing of Moſes and the Prophets was a motive farre unworthy to carry ſuch men as they. An Angell from heaven, or one from the dead might (perhaps:) but, the Bookes of Moſes ſhould never move them. It was not, for nothing, he complaineth of his tongue: Illâ linguâ, with that tongue, hee had ſcorned the Holy Oracles: peradventure, that place, wherein he now lay, with that tongue which, in that place, feeleth the greateſt torment; and, from that place, the ſmalleſt comfort: both which it had before prophanely derided.

Deut. 32. 29.

Deut. 32. 22.

Ier. 5. 31.

Eſay 33. 14.

Thus then you ſee his Scalam inferni, the briefe of his faults, for which his Receipt endeth in this bitter Recipe of torments without end. [1] Epicuriſme: no life but this: No good but theſe here, Good attire, good cheere. [2] This was his reward: Amen, dico vobis, recepiſtis: (Saint Chryſoſtomes two.) [1] Remembring neither GOD in heaven, nor Lazarus on earth; [2] but being a Gurges, a Gulfe of all that he received, himſelfe: [3] No not his owne ſoule; [4] nor (laſt of all) this place of torments, before he was in it; and ſcorning at Moſes for remembring him of it. This you ſee: And, in him, you ſee who they be, over whom Abraham ſhall reade the like ſentence: Qui habet aures, &c.

Matth. 6. 2.

II. The title: Recordare fili.

Now then, we have ſet up both ſides of this Croſſe, and faſtened each part to other with Now therefore: Let us affix the Inſcription, and ſo an end. That, is Recordare fili: The want of which brought him thither; The ſupply of it ſhall keepe us thence.

Fili recordare: Optimè dictum ſed ſerò, Excellently well ſaid, but too late (ſaith Saint Bernard.) For, alas! commeth Abraham in now, with Recordare? doth he now affix the title? why, it is too late. True, it is ſo: But, till now, he would not ſuffer any to ſet it up. Before, while it was time, and when it might have done him good, then he would not endure it: Now he is faine (when it is out of time) to know, what in time might have done him good: and may doe others, if (in time) they looke to it. Indeed, to him now, it is of no uſe in the world; but only to let him ſee, by what Iuſtice he is where he is; and what he ſuffereth, he ſuffereth deſervedly. The beſt is, Abraham hath more ſonnes than this ſonne; and they may take good by it, and have uſe of that, whereof he had none. With this ſonne it is too late; with ſome other, it is not. Not with us: we are yet upon the ſtage: Our Iam verò is not yet come. And for us, is this Inſcription ſet up, and for our ſakes, both CHRIST reported, and Saint Luke recorded this Recordare.

If

If you aske, What good is that? What is the good of exemplarie Iuſtice? What good is it, to ſee a malefactor puniſhed, or to read in a paper the crime wherefore? What, but onely that by reading what brought him thither, we may remember what will keepe us from thence. The neglect of Recordare is the cauſe, he is there: why then, Recordare fili, and keepe thee from thence. So, with one view of this Inſcription, we reade both his ruine and our owne remedie.

This is the right uſe of this title: GOD forbid, we ſhould have no uſe of it, till wee come where he is. But, it is therefore ſet over his head in that life, that we may reade it in this: reade it, and remember it: remember it and never have title ſet over ours.

It will be good then, ſometimes to keepe ſome day holy to the exaltation of this Croſſe, and to ſet this title before our eyes: to approch it and read it over: Yea, not once, but often to record this Recordare. Indeed, it is that, Saint Gregorie ſaith: Recordatione magis eget verſus iſte quàm expoſitione: Indeed, it more needs a diſpoſition to remember it, than an expoſition to underſtand it.

We are yet: how long we ſhall, we know not, nor how ſoone vitâ tuâ will be gone, nor, how quickly this Iam verò will come in place. This we know: between his ſtate and ours, there is only a puffe of breath in our noſtrills. That this life (ſhort though it be, and in a manner, a moment, yet) hoc eſt momentum, unde pendet æternitas: On it, no leſſe matter dependeth than our eternitie: or bliſſe or bane, comfort or torment. That in that place, without all hope either of releefe, eſcape or end: and that from thence, neither our profeſſion of truth, nor the greatneſſe of our receiving ſhall deliver, but onely this Recordare. It ſtandeth us then in hand, to take perfect impreſſion of this Recordare: and (as Saint Auguſtine ſaith) Oblivi ſci quid ſimus, attendere quid futuri ſimus, to forget, what we now be; to conſider, what we ſhall be without all queſtion yer long, but we know not how ſoone: but, oft it falleth, the ſhorter and ſooner, the leſſe we thinke of it.

Three things then I wiſh, for concluſion: 1 that we may remember: 2 remember in time: 3 remember effectually. That we may remember the fire, the thirſt, and the torments; and know what they meane, by memorie, rather than by ſenſe. Abraham, from heaven calls to us to that end: The party in hell crieth, Ne veniant & ipſi. 1

That wee doe it in time: that we be not in his caſe, never lift up our eyes, till we be in hell; nor remember that may doe us good, till it be too late. 2

That we doe it effectually from the heart: For, there is a heart in Recordare: And that, this being our greateſt buſineſſe, we make it not our leaſt care. 3

Our Remembring will be effectuall, if we pray to GOD daily, we may ſo receive, as we may bee received. And our remembring ſhall be effectuall, if it have the effect, that is, make us remember Lazarus. Quotidiè Lazarus: You may find Lazarus, if you ſeeke him, every day: Nay, you ſhall finde him, though you ſeeke him not. Our preſent eſtate, by preſent occaſion of the dearth now upon us, makes the memorie more freſh, than at other times it would be. Remember then our being remembred there, lieth on this their remembrance here; and, upon their receiving, our recipies, or rather recipieris. And remember that day, wherein what we have received ſhall be forgotten; and what He hath received of us ſhall be remembred; and nothing elſe ſhall be remembred, but quod uni ex minimis. The attaining everlaſting tabernacles, the avoiding everlaſting torments lie upon it. That which noe remember now in Lazarus boſome, ſhall be remembred to us againe in Abrahams boſome. To which, &c. Mat. 10. 42.

A SERMON PREACHED IN THE COVRT AT GREEN-VVICH,

On Sunday, being the IV. of April,

A. D. MDXCVI.

II COR. Chap. XII. Ver. XV.

Ego autem libentiſſime impendam, & ſuper-impendar ipſe pro animabus veſtris : etſi licet plus vos diligens, minus diligar.

And I will moſt gladly beſtow, and will bee beſtowed for your ſoules; though, the more I love you, the leſſe I am loved.

THE Words be Saint Pauls; and to the Corinthians. And, if we neither knew whoſe they were, nor to whom; yet this we might know by the words themſelves, that it is Love that ſpeakes, and unkindneſſe, that is ſpoken to. Impendam; Super-impendar; libentiſſimè : this muſt needs bee love; and that, unkindneſſe, that requireth ſuch love, with ſuch an Etſi, Etſi minus diligar, Though, the more I love, the leſſe I be loved.

Many wayes it may be manifeſt, that Saint Paul loved the Church of Corinth more than many other (loved them, for he laboured more for them.) By the time he ſpent with them, a yeare and a halfe full: Scarce with any ſo much. By his viſiting them three ſeverall times: Not any ſo oft. By two of his largeſt Epiſtles ſent to them : Not, to any the like. And in the one of them we ſee here, how frank and how kind a profeſſion he maketh, in quâ omne verbum charitatis igne vaporatur, wherein, everie word carrieth a ſweet ſent of Loves perfume: (it is Saint Gregorie.) Theſe, each of theſe; but all theſe together, may prove his magis diligam, the abundance of his love to Corinth. 1

1 Cor. 5. 10. Act. 18. 11. ver. 14.

Now there ſhould be, in love, the vertue of the Load-ſtone, the vertue attractive, to draw 2 draw like love to it againe. There ſhould be: but was not. For, their little love appeared, by their many unloving exceptions which they tooke to him. To his office: That, hee was but an Apoſtle of the ſecond head, and no waies to bee matched with the Chiefe Apoſtles, *Ver.*11. To his Perſon: That he was one of no preſence: Somewhat good at an Epiſtle, but his Perſon (or preſence) nothing worth (Chap. 10.10.) To his preaching: that he was but ἰδιώτης τῷ λόγῳ, not ſo eloquent by much, as diverſe of them were; nor his Sermons ex opere Corinthiaco, of the Corinthian faſhion. Indeed, I know not how, but he could not hit on their veine.

Chap. 11.6.

3 This cold infuſion of ſo faint regard on their parts, might have quenched his love. It did, Apollo's, for Apollo was once at Corinth, but found them ſo diverſe to pleaſe, as he waxed weary and got him away; and when he was moved to returne to them πάντως ἐκ τῶ θέλημα, his minde was not at all to come there againe as yet, ſaith Saint Paul (1 Cor. 16.) It made Apollos give over. So might it Saint Paul too. But, him it did not: Charitas quâ ædificabat, the love wherewith he built, was like lime, ſlacked not, but rather kindled with water. For, notwithſtanding all theſe, ſuch was his zeale, and he Tantus zelator animarum, that we ſee his affection, and wee heare his reſolution what it is: unkind they might be, but no unkindneſſe of theirs, or verdict never ſo hard, or cenſure never ſo ſharp; no minùs diligar ſhould move him, or make him love their ſoules a whit the leſſe.

1 Cor.16.12.

4 Wherein, leſt they might bee jealous, he ſought to Corinth ſo oft, for the ore of it, becauſe the ſoile was rich, there was good to bee done (as men are ever that way quick-eyed:) hee appealed to all his former courſe with them, that hee had ſought nothing hitherto. Nothing hee had ſought, nor nothing he would ſeeke: And (to come to this our verſe) not onely ſeeke nothing; 1 But he would beſtow: 2 Beſtow, and bee beſtowed himſelfe: 3 and that, moſt willingly (indeed it is higher, ἥδιστα, moſt gladly) 4 and all this (to uſe Chryſoſtomes words) not, ὑπὲρ τῶν ἤδη φιλούντων, for thoſe that had not begun to love him firſt, but ὑπὲρ τῶν ἤδη ἀντιφιλούντων, for thoſe that being loved firſt did not love him againe. 5 And that, not κατ' ἴσα in equall meaſure (that, is not his complaint) but ſuch, as the more (it is fuller, in the Greeke, περισσοτέρως the more abundantly) they were loved, loved him the leſſe for it. The degrees are many: and looke how many degrees, ſo many ſeverall points of elevation.

Chap.11.8,9.

5 All which when I conſider, I cannot chooſe but marvell at his love; which truly is right admirable: And more, at their minùs, than his magis: But, at his heroicall ſpirit, moſt of all, whom ſuch and ſo great unkindneſſe could not over-come. The rather, when I lay it to, and compare it with ours in theſe times: in which, a kind of love wee have (ſuch as it is) but ſuch as will not endure Saint Pauls aſſay; Or, if in ſome degrees it doe, if it be not reſpected ſtraight (not as it deſerveth, for ſo haply it is, but as it ſuppoſeth it ſelfe to deſerve) if it be croſſed with any unkindneſſe, it groweth abrupt. Every minus diligar makes it abate; and farre wee are from this Chriſtian magnanimitie, to reſolve with him (in the 11. Chap.) quod facio, hoc & faciam, what I doe, that I will doe ſtill: Or, here: Love I will ſtill; though, the more I love, the leſſe I be loved.

Chap.11.12.

The thing loved, is the Corinthians ſoules. And (as Corinth it ſelfe was ſituate in a narrow land, between two Seas) ſo are they, in the verſe: having, on the one ſide, the Sea of ſelfe-love (in the former part:) and, on the other, the Gulfe of unkindneſſe (in the latter.) Through either of which, Saint Paul maketh a firſt and ſecond navigation, if haply hee may ſo adire Corinthum, gaine their ſoules to CHRIST, more precious to him, than Corinth it ſelfe and all the wealth in it.

The Diviſion

I. In the Love two things are offered. For, in the former moitie of the verſe, hee is encountred with ſelfe-love, 1 which beſtoweth nothing; 2 but, leaſt of all, his life: 3 Or if it doe, it is not moſt gladly; nay, not gladly at all. Theſe three hee beateth downe: the firſt, with Impendam; the ſecond, with Impendar: the third, with libentiſſimè. Thus having vanquiſhed the love of himſelfe in the former; in the latter moity, Vnkindneſſe riſeth up. Vnkindneſſe, in them, for whom he had done all the former

Over which ſecond enemie having a ſecond conqueſt alſo, and triumphing over it, with his Etſi; he ſheweth, his love to be a love of proofe, to have all the perfections and ſignatures of Love: all which are within compaſſe of this verſe. Amor (as in Shooles we reckon them) 1 Impenſivus; 2 Expenſivus; 3 Intenſivus and 4 Extenſivus. The two former, in the two verbes; 1 Active, Impendam; and 2 Paſſive, Impendar; Beſtowing, or ſpending; Beſtowed, or ſpent it ſelfe. The two latter, in the Adverb and the Conjunction: 3 Intenſive, ſtraining it ſelfe to the higheſt degree, moſt gladly: and 4 Extenſive, ſtretching it ſelfe to thoſe that are furtheſt from Love, and leſt deſerve it Etſi minus diligar. 1 To ſpend; 2 To ſpend and bee ſpent; 3 to ſpend and be ſpent moſt willingly. If the full point were there, it were enough. 4 But, not onely libentiſſimè; But, libentiſſimè, Etſi; moſt gladly, yea, though the more he, the leſſe they, that is all in all.

But then, leſt we miſtake our terme of love (as, eaſily we may, and confound it with luſt) we muſt looke to our Pro, in the ſecond part. It is, Pro animabus; ſoule-love, he meaneth, all the while. Love, the fruit of the Spirit; Not luſt, the weed of the fleſh. Not, of this fleſh ſiſter to wormes, and daughter to rottenneſſe; but, of the Spirit allied to the Angels, and partaker, in hope, of the Divine nature it ſelfe. And, not of one only; but animabus, of Soules: more than love of one ſoule; many ſoules, many thouſands of ſoules, of a whole State or country. Them to love, and to them thus to prove our love, is it, which Saint Paul would teach; and it, which we need to learne. Theſe be the two parts. Whereof, &c. II.

Gal 5.22. Iob 17.14. 2 Pet.1.4.

TO enter the treaty of the firſt part. Wee beginne at the foure points, 1 Impendam, 2 Impendar, 3 Libentiſſimè, and 4 Etſi. If Love be an Enſigne (as, Can. 6.) the Colours; If it be a Band (as, Hoſ. 11.) the twiſtes; If a Scale (as Chryſoſtome) the aſcents; If an Art, (as Bernard) the Rules of it. Indeed, they talke much of an Art of Love, and Bookes of verſes have beene written of it: but, above all verſes, is Carmen hoc amoris. This verſe hath more art than they all: and of this it may be ſaid, Me legat, & lecto carmine doctus erit: Learne it, and ſay you learned Love. To take them as they lye, and with the firſt, firſt. Ego vero impendam. I.

The Love. Cant.6.3. Hoſe.11.4.

1 There was a world, when one ſaid, da mihi cor tuum & ſufficit: Beſtow your heart on me, and I require no further beſtowing; and the beſtowing of Love, though nothing but love, was ſomething worth. 1 Amor impenſivus: Impendam.

2 Such a world there was: But, that world is worne out. All goeth now by Impendam: Love and all is put out to intereſt. The other empty-handed Love, is long ſince baniſhed the Court, the Citie and the Country. For, long ſince it is, that King Saul ſaw it, and ſaid it, to his Courtiers, that he was not regarded, but becauſe he gave them fields, and vine-yards, and offices over hundreds and thouſands. Nor yet Diana in the Citie of Epheſus, magnified there by the Craftſ-men, but, becauſe by her Silver Shrines, they had their advantage. Nay nor CHRIST Himſelfe neither, in the Country, but becauſe they eat of the loves and were filled. For, many miracles had they ſeen much greater than that, yet never profeſſed they ſo much, Sicut tunc exaturati, as when He beſtowed a good meale on them.

1 Sam.22.7. Acts.19.24. Ioh.6.26.

3 Such is now the worlds love, but ſpecially at Corinth, where they doe caponari amorem indeed; ſet love to hire, and love to ſale; and at ſo high a rate, as * ſome were forced to give over, leſt paying for love, they might buy repentance too; and both too deer.

4 There is no remedie then: Saint Paul muſt apply himſelfe * to time and place, wherein (as all things elſe, ſo) love depends upon Impendam, Yeelding and Paying.

5. Now,

5 Now, there is nothing ſo pliant as Love; ever ready to transforme is ſelfe, to whatſoever may have likelyhood to prevaile; and if it be Liberality, into that too. For, that Love is libcrall (nay prodigall) the Greeke Proverb noteth it, that ſaith, The Purſe-ſtrings of love are made of a Leeke blade; eaſily in ſunder, and wide open with no great adoe.

6 Saint Paul therefore commeth to it; and as hee maketh his caſe a Father's caſe towards them (in the verſe next before :) So hee ſaith with the kind Father (Luc. 15.) Ecce omnia mea tua ſunt. Fathers love and all muſt be proved by Beſtowing.

Ver.14. Luc.15.31.

7 Yea, I will beſtow : Now alas, what can Paul beſtow ? Eſpecially upon ſo wealthy Citizens ? What hath hee to part with, but his Bookes and his parchments ? Ware, at Athens perhaps ſomewhat; but at Corinth, little uſed and leſſe regarded. Indeed if ſilver and gold be all, and nothing elſe worth the beſtowing, nothing will come under Impendam, but it : his beſtowing is ſtalled. But, by the grace of GOD, there is ſomething elſe. There bee talents (ſo, the world will call them when they liſt, howſoever they eſteeme them ſcarce worth pence a peece.) And there bee treaſures of wiſedome and knowledge, in CHRISTO IESV (ſaith Paul.) Indeed, ſo had Saint Paul need to ſay; hee had beſt magnifie his owne Impendam, for hee hath nothing elſe to make of. Nay, it ſhall not ſtand upon his valuation. They that had both; both the wealth of Corinth, and the wiſedome of Paul, and both in abundance, as being both of them Prophets : The one of them (King David) preferreth this Impendam of Pauls before gold, fine gold, much fine gold; and that we may know how much that much is, before thouſands of gold and ſilver. This, was no poore Apoſtle. The other (King Salomon) ſaith directly : There is gold, and a multitude of rich ſtones; but, the lippes of knowledge, that, is the precious Iewel. And, not Policie; but Scientia Sacrorum, prudentia : the knowledge of holy things, is the wiſedome he meaneth. And, it was no flouriſh : hee was in earneſt : For, it is well knowne hee himſelfe choſe them before the other, when he was put to his choice; and, that his liking in that choice, was highly approved, by GODS owne liking. The truth is, Men have no ſenſe of their ſoules, till they be ready to part with them; and then is Saint Pauls impendam called for (and never ſeriouſly before;) when their caſe is ſuch as they can little feele, what the beſtowing is worth.

2 Tim.4.13. Pſal.19.10, 119.72. Pro.20.15. Pro.9.10. 1 Reg.3.9. 12.

And, becauſe they would not ſeeke to feele it before, it is GODS juſt puniſhment they feele it not then. But, if men will labour to have ſenſe of that part in due time, they ſhould find and feele ſuch an eſtate of mind, as none know, but ſuch as have felt : ſurely ſuch, as they would acknowledge to be worth an Impendam. Indeed, this it is, Saint Paul can beſtow; and this it is, Corinth needs; and the more wealthy it is, the more. The other, as hee hath it not, ſo they need it not, that is, [a] Aurum & Argentum : Quod autem habet, but that he hath, he is ready to beſtow. What would we have more. [b] Fecit quod potuit, ſaith our SAVIOVR in Marie Magdalens caſe; and [c] dedit quod habuit, in the eaſe of the poore Widowe's mites; and, that is as much as GOD doth, or man can require. But, bee it little, or bee it much, he that giveth all, leaveth nothing ungiven, and therefore his impendam is at the higheſt.

a Act. 3.6. b Marc.14.8. 12.44. c Luc.21.4.

2 Amor expenſivus; Impendar.

But, when it is at the higheſt, the Paſſive Impendar, is higher than it. Much more; to bee beſtowed, than to beſtow. And therefore it hath a Super-impendar beſtowed on it. 1 For firſt, they that beſtow, give but of their fruits; but, hee that is beſtowed, giveth fruit, tree, and all. In that, the beſtower remained unbeſtowed: here, hee himſelfe is in the deed of gift too. 2. Secondly, before, there was but one act (of beſtowing onely;) here, in one, are both beſtowing and being beſtowed; and there being both muſt needs be better than one. 3. Thirdly, before, that which was beſtowed, what was it ? our good, not our blood; our living, not our life : Nondum ad ſanguinem, not yet ſo farre, as to the ſhedding of bloud : Then, there is ſomwhat behind : But, if to the ſhedding of that, then is it love at the fartheſt : if it bee as Solomon ſaith, Fortis ſicut mors; dare throw death his gauntlet. Majorem hoc nemo (ſaith CHRIST) Greater love hath no man, than this, to beſtow his life. 4. And indeed, wee ſee, many can bee content to beſtow frankly; but at no hand, to bee beſtowed themſelves: Yea, that they may not bee beſtowed, care not, what they beſtow. For, Selfe-love crieth to us, ſpare our living; but in any wiſe, Propitius eſto tibi, to ſpare our life. Skin for skin is nothing but impendere ne impendamur; to ſpend all wee have, to ſpare our ſelves. But, hither alſo, will Saint Paul come from δαπανᾶν, to ἐκδαπανᾶσθαι, without any reſervation at all of himſelfe: To doe or ſuffer; to ſpend or to be ſpent. Cant. 8.6. Ioh. 15.13. Mat. 16.22. Iob 2.4.

How to bee ſpent? will hee die? Yea indeed: What, preſently here at Corinth? No; for, at this time, and long after hee was ſtill alive: and yet hee ſaid truly Impendar for all that. For, as before we ſaid, ſo ſay wee in this: If there bee no way to bee beſtowed, but by dying out of hand: they that, in field, receive the bullet; or they that, at the ſtake, have the fire ſet to them; they and they onely may be ſaid to bee beſtowed. That, is a way indeed, but not the onely way: but, other waies there bee beſide them too. As that is ſaid to bee beſtowed, not onely that, is defrayd at one entire payment; but, that, which by ſeverall ſummes, is paid in; eſpecially, if it bee, when it was not due; nor could not bee called for. This I meane: The Patriarch Lot, or the Prophet Ieremie, that dwelling where ſinne abounded, and ſeeing and hearing, vexed their righteous ſoules with the daily traſngreſſionsof the People, and for their unkindnſſe too; and thereby prevented their terme and paid Natures debt, yer their day came, beſtowed themſelves (ſay I) though, not at once. (For, hearts griefe & heavineſs do more than beſtow, for they even conſume & waſt a mans life.) And Timothee, that by giving attendance to reading, meditation, and ſtudie, grew into an ἀπυξία and often infirmities, and thereby ſhortened his time by much, beſtowed himſelfe (ſay I) though not at one inſtant. He that knew it bare witneſſe, that that courſe of life is a wearying, yea, and a wearing of it too; and ſpends another manner ſubſtance than the ſweat of the Browes. This then, for the preſent, was Saint Pauls impendar: By intentive meditation (for, his Books and Parchments tooke ſomewhat from his Summe;) By ſorrow and griefe of heart; for Quis ſcandalizatur & ego non uror? and that he ſaid (and ſaid truly) Quotidiè morior, He beſtowed himſelfe by inch-meale; and might avow his impendar before GOD or man. And ſo farre, it is the caſe of all them, that be in his caſe: Sal terræ, as CHRIST termeth them; which Salt, by giving ſeaſon, melteth it ſelfe away, and ceaſeth in ſhort time to be that it was. Lux mundi, the light of the world, Aliis miniſtrando, ſeipſos conſumendo, Lighting others, and waſting themſelves: that is, abridging their naturall courſe, and drawing on their untimely diſeaſes and death, before their race be halfe runne. 2 Pet. 2 7,8. 1 Tim. 4.13. 5.23. Eccleſ. 12,12. 2 Cor. 11.10. 1 Cor. 15.31. Mat. 5.13. 14.

But, to make it a perfect impendar and to give it his Super; after all this, he came to that other too. For ſo he did: in that point, like the poore labouring Oxe (to which, in the IX. Chapter of the former Epiſtle, he reſembleth his ſtate) ſpending his time, in earing the ground for corne, in inning the corne, in treading out the corne; his necke yoked, and his mouth muzzled; and, in the end when all is done, offered on the altar too, and made a ſacrifice of. It was his caſe, and thither hee came at laſt: and therefore in both caſes, hee might truly ſay Impendar, and Super-impendar both. 1 Cor. 9.9.

3 Amor Intenſivus: libentiſſimè

But, to elevate it yet a point higher, we ſay, that as either of theſe are much; and both exceeding much: yet above both theſe is that, which (though wee handle third, it) ſtandeth firſt, the adverbe Libentiſſimè. True it is, which in divinitie wee ſay: With GOD, the Adverbe is above the Verbe; and the Inward affection (wherewith) above the outward action or Paſſion of Impendam or Impendar, either. With men, it is ſo too: When a diſpleaſure is done us, Say wee not, wee weigh not ſo much the injurie it ſelfe, as the malicious minde of him that did offer it? And, if in evill it hold, why not in good much more? Not ſo much Impendar, the thing which; as Libentiſſimè, the good heart, wherewith it is beſtowed. And, will you ſee the minde wherewith Saint PAVL will doe both theſe? By this adverbe ἥδιστα, you may looke into his very heart. Beſtow hee will, and be beſtowed too; and that, not Vtcunque, in any ſort, be contented to come to it; but willingly: willingly, Nay readily; Readily, nay gladly (and the degree is ſomewhat, ἥδιστα) moſt gladly, in the very higheſt of all, in the ſuperlative degree. To ſpend, and ſpending to make no more reckoning of it, than of chaffe: Nay (it is more) to be glad of our loſſe; more glad, than others would be of their gaine. To be ſpent, and in being ſpent, not to hold our life precious: Nor ſo, but to rejoyce in it, and as if death were advantage; In hoc eſt charitas, certainly. Death (of it ſelfe) is bitter, and loſſe is not ſweet: Then, ſo, to alter their natures, as to finde ſweetneſſe in loſſe, whereat all repine; and gladneſſe in death, which maketh all to mourne; verily, herein is love: Or, if not here, where? Nay, here it is indeed; and before now, we had it not. For, in flat termes, he avoweth (in the XIII. Chapter before, of his former Epiſtle) if we ſever this from the other two: One may part with all his goods to feed the poore, and yet have no love: One may give his body to be burnt, and yet have no love: And then, though he doe impendere, beſtow all he hath; and though he doe impendi, be beſtowed himſelfe, nihil eſt, hee is nothing, if he want this affection, which is love indeed, the very ſoule of love, and the other but σκελετὸς, but the skinne and bones, and indeed nought elſe but the carcaſſe, without it. Therefore it was, that Saint Paul ſet this in the firſt place before the other two, becauſe the other two be but ciphers, and after this (the figure) ſet, they be tens and hundreds, and have their valuation: but without it, of themſelves they be but ciphers, juſt nothing. Thus much Saint Paul hath ſaid, in ſaying theſe three words, 1 Impendam, 2 Impendar, 3 Libentiſſimè. Thus much they amount to.

And now muſt we pauſe a little, to ſee, what will become of all this, and what theſe three will worke in the Corinthians.

We marvell at the Love: we ſhall more marvell, when wee ſee, what manner of men, on whom it is beſtowed. What his proofes are, we have heard; how large and how loving; and thus farre is he come, onely to winne favour and like mutuall love at Verſ. 14. their hands, without eye to any other thing in the world. No Veſtra: (no) but Vos only. This is all. And, not this; not ſo much; Nay not ſo little, as this, will come. Which Matth. 5. 46. if it did come, what ſingular thing were it? ſince the very Publicans doe the like; love him, that loveth them. Which we gather by his Etſi. Wherein (as he may) in no lowd and bitter manner he complaineth, but complaineth though; that, ſeeking their love, and nothing elſe, ſo hard was his hap, he found it not: Not, in a greater, or as great a meaſure, as his; but, minùs for magis, and ſo he a great loſer by it. The more, the higher, the neerer, his; the leſſe, the lower, the further off, theirs: ſo that, little likelihood of ever meeting.

This is Saint Pauls caſe, to meet with unkindneſſe: and not only his, but CHRIST
Luke 17. 14, 15, &c. met with nine for one, too. Indeed, it is common, and not to be noted, but for commonneſſe. De ingratis etiam ingrati queruntur, They that are unkinde themſelves inveigh againſt the unkindneſſe of others. And, as it was ſaid of them that made Ceſar away; Oderunt tyrannum, non tyrannidem, ſo may it truly here: The Perſons (that are unkinde) they hate, rather than the vice it ſelfe. Yet, even to know this, doth no hurt, what Saint Paul met with in the Corinthians; and this too, that all unkinde perſons dwell not at Corinth. And, as he to be pitied, ſo they to be blamed. All other commodities returne well from Corinth; onely Love is no trafficke. Saint PAVL cannot make his owne againe, but muſt bee a great loſer, withall. We cannot but pitie the Apoſtle in this Minùs of his. Saint Auguſtine ſaith well: Nulla eſt major ad amorem provocatio, quam prævenire amando: Nimis enim durus eſt animus, qui amorem etſi nolebat impendere, nolit tamen rependere. No more kindly attractive of love, than in loving to prevent: For, exceeding ſtony is that heart, which, though it like not to love firſt, will not love againe neither; neither firſt, nor ſecond. Yet ſo hard were theirs that neither one way nor other, rectè, nor reflexè, would either either begin, or follow. No not, provoked by all thoſe ſo many forcible meanes, that Saint Chryſoſtome maketh a wonder at it, Quomodo non converterentur in amorem; that they were not melted and reſolved into love it ſelfe.

Which cold ſucceſſe openeth a way to the laſt point, the point indeed of higheſt admiration, and of hardeſt imitation of all the reſt, in the conjunction Etſi. Which Conjunction is ſituated (much like Corinth it ſelfe) in a narrow Land (as it were) betweene two ſeas; beaten, upon the one with ſelfe-love, on th'other with unkindneſſe. Hitherto wee have had to doe, but with ſelfe-love, and his aſſaults: but now, unkindneſſe alſo is up. Theſe Corinthians (ſaith Saint PAVL) my affection ſtandeth toward them in all love: Love them and ſpare not (ſaith Selfe-love) but tene quod habes. Nay ſure, Impendam, I will beſtow it. Well; if there be no remedie: But (heare you?) Propitius eſto tibi, for all that. Nay, nor that neither: Impendar, I will be beſtowed my ſelfe too. Poteſnè bibere calicem hunc (ſaith Selfe-love?) and, can you get it downe, thinke you? Yea: Libentiſſimè exceeding gladly. There is the Conqueſt of Selfe-love.

Matth. 16. 22. Marke 10. 46.

But, all this while, he lived ſtill under hope, hope of winning their love, for whoſe ſakes, hee had trod under foot the love of himſelfe: Hope, that it had beene but Impendam all the while; hee ſhould have had returned his owne againe at leaſt. But, at this Etſi, all is turned out and in. For, this is as much to ſay, as, All is to little purpoſe: for (to his griefe) he muſt take notice, they care for none of them: nor for him ever a whit the more: yea, rather the leſſe by a great deale. So that, all three be in vaine: Et ſupra omnem laborem labor irritus; No labour to loſt labour; Nor expence of life or goods, to that is ſpent in vaine. For, that is not Impendam, but perdam, not ſpent, but caſt away. Therefore the former, though it were funiculus triplex, a threefold cord, and not eaſily broken, would not hold, but fly in peeces, but for this Etſi. To have then an Etſi in our love: this Etſi, this εἰ καὶ εἰκῆ, though in vaine, though our Impendam prove a perdam: That is it. To bee able to turne the ſentence and ſay, Though the more I love, the leſſe I be loved, Yet will I beſtow; yea, be beſtowed, and that moſt gladly, for all that. It is hard, I confeſſe: but, Solus amor erubeſcit nomen difficultatis, Love endureth not the name of difficultie, but ſhameth to confeſſe any thing too hard or too dangerous for it. For verily, unkindneſſe is a mightie enemie, and the wounds of it, deepe. Nay there be, that of themſelves are moſt kinde, in all the three degrees before remembred, as was King David, and as all noble natures are: why Selfe-love is nothing in their hands. But, let them be encountred with unkindneſſe (as David was in Nabal) they cannot ſtand the ſtroke; it woundeth deepe: and the feſter of diſcontentment more dangerous than it. Indeed (ſaith David) this fellow, I ſee, I have done all in vaine for him; for he rewardeth me evill for good: So and ſo, doe GOD to mee, if hee be alive to morrow by this time. Marke it in him; and in others infinite; and you ſhall ſee, whom Selfe-love could not, unkindneſſe hath overcome: and who paſſed well along the other three, at minùs diligar their Love hath wracked, and from kinde love, beene turned to deadly hate.

1 Sam. 25. 15. 21. 22.

But, neither can this appall the Apoſtle, or diſlodge his love: but thorow all the reſt, and thorow this too, he breaketh with his Etſi, and ſheweth, he will hold his reſolution maugre all unkindneſſe. Minus diligar ſhall not doe it; Vnkindneſſe muſt yeeld, Love will not.

And now we are come to the higheſt, and never till now: but, now we are; that further we cannot goe. The very higheſt pitch of well-doing, the Heathen man ſaw in part: for, he could ſay, Beneficium dare & perdere, to beſtow Love, and loſe it, is well done: but, that is not it. This is it; Beneficium perdere, & dare, to loſe the firſt, and yet beſtow the ſecond; Etſi, yea, though the firſt were loſt.

Seneca.

Yea, the Love of Loves, CHRISTS owne love, what was it? Majorem hâc charitatem nemo habet, quàm ut vitam quis ponat pro amicis. Whereto Saint Bernard rejoyneth well, Tu majorem habuiſti Domine, quia tu vitam poſuiſti etiam pro inimicis: Greater love than this hath no man, to beſtow his life for his friends: Yet LORD

Ichn 15. 13.

(ſaith Saint Bernard) Thou hadſt greater, for thou beſtowedſt thy life for thy very enemies. And, to this love it is, that Saint Paul aſpireth; and neere it he commeth; that in ſome ſort, we may likewiſe ſay to him, Tu majorem habuiſti Paule, yes, thy love (Paul) was greater: for, thou art ready to doe the like; not for thine enemies, but for thy unkinde friends, the next degree to profeſſed enemies. 1 To ſpend, 2 To ſpend and be ſpent: 3 To ſpend and bee ſpent, and that moſt gladly: 4 Not onely Moſt gladly; but moſt gladly, Yea though.

Thus you have now his double conqueſt: Over the Love of himſelfe firſt; and now, over Minùs diligar, an unkinde repulſe too. And, in ſigne of victory, hee ſetteth up his colours, even theſe foure: 1 Impendam, 2 Impendar, 3 Libentiſſimè, and 4 Etſi. But Etſi is the chiefe; it is CHRISTS colour; and, that no perfect Love, that wanteth Etſi.

II. The Object of his Love.

Thus wee have ſeene Love in his higheſt aſcendent, and heard Love in his Magiſterium, the hardeſt and higheſt, and indeed the Maſter-point of this Art. Which ſetteth us new on worke, to paſſe over into the ſecond part, and to enquire, what this object may be, ſo amiable, whereon Saint PAVL hath ſet his affection ſo, that for it, hee will doe and ſuffer all this; and that, ſo willingly without any exception, ſo conſtantly, without any giving over. All this, is nothing but the zeale of ſoules, Zelus animarum faciet hoc: It is, for their ſoules, all this. For their ſoules; and let their bodies goe.

1 Pro animabus, for your ſoules.

Which (firſt) draweth the diameter that maketh the partition betweene the two Loves: The love which Saint Paul found; and the love which Saint Paul left at Corinth. For, hee found that which is Scelus corporum, the bodies unruly affection, and infection too otherwhile; (if ever in any place, there, it abounded:) but, he left Zelus animarum, the Soules perfection. Indeed, it falleth out ſometimes, that, in carnall love (or rather luſt, than love) wee may patterne all the former; and finde (as the Wiſeman ſpeaketh) ſome one deſtitute of underſtanding, waſting his whole ſubſtance, hazarding his life (and that, more willingly than wiſely) perhaps to gaine nothing but a ſcorne for his labour; and yet perſiſting in his folly ſtill: and all this, in the paſſion of concupiſcence, to a vaine creature; pleaſing his phanſie to the diſpleaſing of GOD, and to the piercing of his ſoule one day with deepe remorſe for it: and except it doe, to the utter ruine both of body and ſoule. We have, here at Corinth, a ſtrange example of it, Of * one, ---Ad cujus jacuit Gracia tota fores, at whoſe doores, ſundry of all ſorts waited, ſuing and ſeeking, and (as one of them ſaid) buying repentance at too deare a rate. But, what need we ſaile to Corinth? Even in our owne Age, wee have enow fond examples of it: of Love ſet awry and ſorted amiſſe; diverted from the ſoule, where it ſhould be beſtowed, and laviſhed on the body, where a great deale leſſe would ſerve. It is Saint Auguſtines wiſh: O ſi excitare poſſemus homines & cum iis pariter excitari, ut tales amatores, &c.! O that we would in this kinde ſtirre up others, and our ſelves (with them) be ſtirred up, but even to beſtow ſuch love on the immortall ſoule, as wee ſee daily caſt away on the corruptible body! What, but ſo much? and no more? Abſit ut ſic: ſed utinam vel ſic: Till it might be more, would GOD, it were but as much in the meane time. Yet, more, and much more it ſhould be. Sed infelix Populus Dei non habet tantum fervorem in bono, quantum mali in malo, is Saint Hierom's complaint. But the People of GOD (unhappie in that point) hath not that courage or conſtancie in the love of the Spirit, that the wicked world hath, in the luſt of the fleſh. That courage? Nay, nothing like: Ad erubeſcentiam noſtram dico, to our ſhame it muſt be ſpoken. Looke but to the firſt point, Impendam: doth not the body take it wholly up? And, if we faile in the loweſt, what ſhall become of the reſt? Well: Saint Pauls love is; and ours muſt be, if it be right, pro animabus, Soule-love, which may ſerve for the firſt point of the ſequeſtration.

* LAIS. Demoſthenes.

1 Cor. 6. 5.

2 The Reaſon.

But, why Pro animabus, what is there in the ſoule ſo lovely, that all this ſhould be

ſaid

ſaid or done for it? Why for Soules? Why? 1 Why, take the ſoule out of the body which ſo much wee dote on, but even half an houre, and the body will grow ſo out of our love, ſo deformed, ſo ugly, ſo every way lothſome, as they that now admire it, will then abhorre it; and they that now cannot behold it enough, will not then, endure once to come neere it, not within the ſight of it. This a naturall man would anſwer: The ſoule is to be regarded of the body, for it maketh the body to be regarded. 2 But, a Chriſtian man will ſay more for it. That the Love of CHRIST muſt be the rule of the Love of Chriſtians, and ours ſuitable to His. And CHRIST hath valued the ſoule, above the world it ſelfe, in direct affirming, that hee, that to winne the world hazards his ſoule, makes but an unwiſe bargaine: which bargaine were wiſe enough, if the world were more worth. Appende animam homo (ſaith Chryſoſtome) & Impende in animam: If you would prize your ſoules better, you would beſtow more on them. This is nothing: CHRIST hath valued your ſoules; valued and loved them above Himſelfe; Himſelfe, more worth than many worlds, yea, if they were ten thouſand. I come now to the point. Is CHRIST to bee loved? Why, all that Saint Paul hitherto hath profeſſed, all and every part of it, it was but to the Soules at ſecond hand. His eye was upon CHRIST, all the time of his profeſſion. But, becauſe CHRIST hath, by Deed enrolled, ſet over His love to mens ſoules, and willed us, toward them to ſhew, whatſoever to Him wee profeſſe; therefore, and for no other cauſe, it is, that hee ſtandeth thus affected. For that, thoſe ſoules CHRIST ſo loved, that He loved not Himſelfe, to love them. Dilexiſti me Domine plus quàm te, quando mori voluiſti pro me (It is Auguſtine:) Dying for my ſoule (LORD) thou ſhewedſt, that my ſoule was dearer to thee, than thine owne ſelfe. In love then to CHRIST, we are to love them that CHRIST loved; not ſicut ſeipſum as Himſelfe, but pluſquam ſeipſum more than Himſelfe: and therefore, hath changed the Sicut of the Law, Sicut teipſum, as thy ſelfe, into a new Sicut, Sicut ego vos, as I have loved you. And, how did He love us? Even that He was the firſt that ever profeſſed theſe foure to us, 1 Did beſtow, 2 was beſtowed, 3 moſt gladly, 4 yea though the more He loved, the leſſe wee loved Him. Or (to give Him His right) a degree higher than Paul: Not, when we loved Him little, as faint friends; but hated Him greatly, as ſworne enemies. For, He it was, that profeſſed this art, firſt. The words are indeed CHRISTS owne: The primitive and moſt proper uttering them, belongeth to Him. None ever ſo fully or ſo fitly ſpake or can ſpeake them, as the SONNE of GOD, on the Croſſe, from the chaire of His profeſſion. And, of Him there, Saint Paul learned Hoc carmen amoris. Himſelfe confeſſeth as much (in the V. Chap. of this Epiſtle) that it was love; Not, his owne love, but CHRISTS love (Charitas CHRISTI extorſit) that brought theſe words from him. His, they be not, but ore tenus: the tongue his, but CHRIST the ſpeaker. His they were; His they are, out of whoſe mouth; or from whoſe pen ſoever they come.

Mat.16.26. Luc.23.34.

Wee are come then now, where we may read Love in the very Originall: yea in the moſt complete perfection, that ever it was: Profitente CHRISTO, CHRIST Himſelfe, the Profeſſor ſaith 1 Impendam firſt: Beſtow Hee will. If you will make port-ſale of your love, none ſhall out-bidd Him. Even whatſoever Himſelfe is worth, hee will beſtow; His Kingdome, and the fulneſſe of joy and glorie in it for ever.

2 Impendar. That? why Conſummatum eſt; it is done already: all, hands and feet, head and heart opened wide; and all, even to the laſt drop of bloud beſtowed for us, on His Croſſe: where, the love of ſoules triumphed over the love of His owne life.

Ioh.19.30.

3 Libentiſſimè, moſt gladly. Witneſſe that ſpeech: A Baptiſme I have to be baptized with, and quomodo coarctor, how am I pained, till I be at it! And, that too, That, to him that moved Him, not to beſtow, but favour Himſelfe, he uſed no other termes than to the devill himſelfe, Avoyd Sathan. Proofe enough (ſay I) how willingly He went, and how unwillingly He would be kept from it.

Luc.12.50. Mat.16.23.

4 And for His Etſi : would GOD, it were not too plaine : Both at His Croſſe; where the lowder their Crucifige, with the more ſtrong crying and teares He prayed Pater ignoſce : And ever ſince, uſque hodiè, till now, when (all may ſee) our regard is as little, as His Love great; and Hee reſpected, as if Hee had done nothing for us. Every part of His Love, and the profeſſion of his Love, but ſpecially the Etſi of His love paſſeth all. For, CHRIST, by deed enrolled, hath ſet over his love to them. Which is that, that ſetteth ſuch a price upon them, and maketh them ſo amiable, if not in their owne kindneſſe and lovelineſſe, yet in the love of CHRIST Himſelfe. And it is the anſwer, that David, when hee loſeth his ſleepe, to thinke upon the people of GOD; that Moſes, when he wearieth himſelfe in hearing cauſes from morning to night; that Ioſua, when hee fighteth the Lords battells, and jeopards his life in the high places of the field; that any, that weares and ſpends himſelfe in the common cauſe, may make, as well as Saint Paul : Why it is pro animabus, it is for ſoules; for ſafegard of ſoules, thoſe ſoules, which CHRIST hath ſo dearely loved, and ſo deerely bought, and to our love ſo carefully commended: Sicut ego vos, as He did or ever ſhall do for us, that we do for them. Whereto, if not the ſoules themſelves (for the moſt part unthankfull) yet, this motive of love, of CHRISTS love, doth in a manner violently conſtraine us. For, though nothing is leſſe violent in the manner, yet, in the worke, nothing worketh more violent than it.

Luc.23.34.

Pſal.132.4. Exod.18.14. 18. &c.

The Application. I conclude then with Saint Bernards demand : Quæ vero utilitas in ſermone hoc? What uſe have we of all that hath been ſaid? For, he that wrot it, is dead; and they, to whom it was written, are gone: But the Scripture ſtill remaineth, and we are to take good by it.

1 It ſerveth firſt, to poſſeſſe our ſoules of that excellent vertue, Major horum, the greateſt of the three; Nay, the vertue, without which, the reſt be but ciphers; the vertue that ſhineth brighteſt in CHRISTS example, and ſtandeth higheſt in His commendation, Love.

1 Cor.13.31.

2 But, Love, the action of vertue; not the paſſion of vice. Love, not of the body, the vile body (So, the HOLY GHOST termeth it Phil. 3.) but of the ſoule, the precious ſoule of man (Pro. 6.) Love of ſoules; the more, the more acceptable: If of a City, well; If of a County, better; If of a Country or Kingdome, beſt of all.

Philip.3.21. Pro.6.26.

3 And for them and for their love to be ready to prove it by Saint Paules triall; to open our Impendam, to vow our Impendar, and as neere as may be, to aſpire to the ſame degree of Libentiſſimè. Verily, they that either (as the Apoſtle) for the winning of ſoules; or for the defenſe and ſafety of ſoules, many thouſands of ſoules, the ſoules of an whole Eſtate, in high and heroicall courage, have already paſt their Impendam; and are ready to offer themſelves every day to Impendar, & with that reſolute forwardneſſe, which we all ſee (for, it is a caſe preſently in all our eyes:) They that do thus, no good can be ſpoken of their love anſwerable to the deſert of it. Heavenly it is, and in heaven to receive the reward.

4 But, when all is done, we muſt take notice of the worlds nature. For, as Saint Paul left it, ſo wee ſhall finde it (that is) wee ſhall not perhaps meet with that regard, wee promiſe our ſelves. Saint Paules magis diligam met with a Minus diligar.

Therefore above all remember his Etſi. For to be kind, and that to the unkind: to know, ſuch we ſhall meet with; yea, to meet with them, and yet hold our Etſi, and love nevertheleſſe. This certainely is that Love, Majorem quâ nemo; And, there is on earth no greater ſigne of a ſoule throughly ſetled in the love of CHRIST, than to ſtand thus minded: Come what will come, Magis or Minus, Si or Etſi; frown or favour; Reſpect or neglect; Quod facio, hoc & faciam, What I doe, I will doe, with eye to CHRIST, with hope of regard from Him, let the world be as it is, and as it ever hath beene.

Chap.11.12.

Samuel (this day in the firſt Leſſon) when he had ſpent his life in a well ordered Govern-

Government, that his very enemies could no way except to, in his old daies was requited with Fac nobis Regem; onely upon a humor of innovation. What then? Grew he discontent? No: Non obstante, for all their ingratitude (Good man) this he professeth: GOD forbid (saith he) I should sin in ceasing to pray for you; yea, I will shew you the good and right way of the LORD, for all that. That may serve to match this, out of the Old Testament. For, here in like sort, we have Paul's Minus diligar, before our eyes; and we see, hee is at his Libentissimè, Etsi, for all that. You learne then; as, that Minus diligar may come; so, in case it doe come, what to doe; even to consummatd your Love with a triumph over unkindnesse. Learne this, and all is learned: Learne this, and the whole Art is had. 1 Sam. 8. 5. 12. 23.

And we have, in this verse, and in the very first word of it, that, will enter us into this Lesson.

First, from Ego verò: from his, and from our owne persons, wee may beginne to raise this duty. When wee were deep in our Minùs diligar, and smally regarded CHRIST; Nay, Cum inimici essemus (to take as we should) when we were His enemies, of His over-abundant kindnesse it pleased Him to call us from the blindnesse of error, to the knowledge of His truth; and from a deep consumption of our soules by sinne, to the state of health and grace. And, if S. Paul were loved, when hee raged, and breathed blasphemie against CHRIST and His Name, is it much, if for CHRISTS sake, hee swallow some unkindnesse at the Corinthians hands? Is it much, if wee let fall a duty upon them, upon whom GOD the Father droppeth His raine, and GOD the Sonne dropps, yea shedds His bloud, ὑπὲρ ἀχαρίστους καὶ πονηρούς, upon evill and unthankefull men? 1 Rom. 5. 10. Act. 9. 1. Luc. 6. 35.

Surely, if Love, or well doing, or any good must perish (which is the second Motive) and bee lost through some bodies default (where it lighteth) much better it is, that it perish in the Corinthians hands, than in Pauls; by them, in their evill receiving, than by him, in his not bestowing; through their unkindnesse, than through our abruptnesse. For so, the sin shalbe theirs, and we and our soules innocent before GOD. Impendatur per nos: Pereat per illos. 2

But, perish it shall not (which is the third point) though, for them, it may. For howsoever, of them it may bee truly said; The more wee love, the lesse, they: Of CHRIST, it never can, nor ever shalbe said. For, Saint Paul, for the little love at their hands, found the greater at His. Though, the more hee loved, the lesse they loved him; yet the lesse they loved, the more CHRIST loved him. Of whom to bee loved, even in the least degree, is worth all the love of Corinth, and all Achaia too. So that, here wee find (that wee missed all this while) a tamen for our Etsi: Though not they, yet CHRIST. Which tamen maketh amends for all. Et vigilanti verbo usus est Apostolus; that Saint Paul spoke not at adventure, but was well advised when he used the word Impendam. For, it is Impendam indeed, not Perdam; Not lost, but laydout; Not cast away, but imployed, on Him, for whose love, none ever hath or shall bestow ought, but he shall receive a super-impendar of an hundred-fold. And indeed, all other loves, of the flesh, or world, or whatsoever else, shall perish and come to nothing; and of this, and this only, we may say Impendam, truely.

So that (to make an end) though true it be, that Saint Bernard saith, Perfectus amor vires non sumit de spe, Perfect love receives no manner strength from hope; yet, for that our Love is not without his imperfections, all under one view, we may with one eye behold CHRISTS Magis diligam, when we were scarce in our Minùs, nay scarce loved Him at all: and with the other, looke upon Impendam; that, what we doe herein, though at mens hands we finde no returne, at CHRISTS we shall, and it shall be the best bestowed service, that ever wee bestowed, that wee bestow in this kind.

Now, would GOD, the same Spirit, which here wrote this verse, would write it in our hearts, that those things are thus; That such a Rependam there shall be, and we well assured of it, ut & nos converteremur in amorem, that we might be transformed into this Love. Which blessing, Almighty GOD bestow on that which hath been sayd, for CHRISTS, &c.

ZACH. Chap. XII. Ver. X.

Reſpicient in ME, quem transfixerunt.

And they ſhall looke upon ME, whom they have pierced.

THat great and honourable Perſon the Eunuch ſitting in his Chariot, and reading a like place of the Prophet Eſay, asketh S. Philip. I pray thee, Of whom ſpeaketh the Prophet this? of himſelfe, or ſome other? A queſtion verie materiall, and to great good purpoſe; and to be asked by us, in all Prophecies. For, knowing who the Party is, we ſhall not wander in the Prophets meaning. Act. 8. 34.

Now, if the Eunuch had been reading this of Zacharie (as then he was, that of Eſay) and had asked the ſame queſtion of S. Philip, he would have made the ſame anſwer. And as he, out of thoſe words tooke occaſion; ſo may wee, out of theſe, take the like, to preach IESVS, unto them. For neither of himſelfe, nor of any other, but of IESVS, ſpeaketh the Prophet this: and the teſtimonie of IESVS is the Spirit of this Prophecie. Apoc. 19. 10.

That ſo it is, the Holy Ghoſt is our warrant; who, in S. Iohn's Goſpell reporting, reporting the Paſsion, and the laſt act of the Paſsion (this opening of the ſide, and piercing the heart of our Saviour CHRIST) ſaith plainly, that in the piercing, the very words of the Prophecie were fulfilled, Reſpicient in me quem transfixerunt. Ioh. 19. 37.

Which terme of piercing we ſhall the more clearely conceive, if with the ancient Writers, wee ſort it with the beginning of Pſalme 22. the Pſalme of the Paſsion. For, in the verie Front or Inſcription of this Pſalme, our Saviour CHRIST is compared Cervo matutino, to the morning Hart: that is, a Hart rowſed early in the morning, (as from His very birth He was by Herod) hunted and chaſed all His life long, and this day brought to His end, and (as the poore Deere) ſtricken and pierced thorow ſide, heart and all: which is it, we are here willed to behold.

There is no part of the whole courſe of our Saviour CHRIST's life or death, but it is well worthy our looking on; and from each part in it, there goeth vertue to doe us good: But, of all other parts, and above them all, this laſt part of His piercing, is here commended unto our view. Indeed, how could the Prophet commend it more, than in avowing it to be an act of grace, as in the fore-part of this Verſe, he doth: Effundam ſuper eos ſpiritum Gratiæ, & reſpicient, &c. as if he ſhould ſay: If there be any grace in us, we will thinke it worth the looking on.

Neither doth the Prophet only, but the Apoſtle alſo, call us unto it, and willeth us ἀφορᾶν to looke unto, and regard, IESVS the Author and Finiſher of our faith. Then ſpecially, and in that act, when for the Ioy of our Salvation ſet before Him, He endured the Croſſe, and deſpiſed the ſhame; that is, in this ſpectacle, when He was pierced. Heb. 12. 2.

Which (ſurely) is continually, all our life long, to be done by us; and at all times, ſome time to be ſpared unto it: But, if at other times, moſt requiſite at this time; this very day, which we hold holy to the memory of His Paſsion, and the piercing of His precious ſide. That, though on other dayes, we imploy our eyes otherwiſe, this day at leaſt, we fixe them on this Object, Reſpicientes in Eum. This day (I ſay) which is dedicated to none other end, but even to lift up the SONNE OF MAN; as Moſes did the ſerpent in the wilderneſſe, that we may look upon Him and live: When every Scripture that is read ſoundeth nothing but this unto us: when by the office of preaching, IESVS CHRIST is lively deſcribed in our ſight, and (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) is viſibly crucified among us: when in the memoriall of the Holy Sacrament, His death is ſhewed forth untill Hee come, and the myſterie of this His piercing, ſo many wayes, ſo effectually repreſented before us. This Prophecie therefore, if at any time, at this time to take place, Reſpicient in Me, &c. Ioh. 3. 14. Gal. 3. 1. 1 Co. 11. 26.

The Diviſion The principall words are but two, and ſet downe unto us, in two points: 1 The ſight it ſelfe, that is, the thing to be ſeene: 2 and the ſight of it; that is, the act of ſeeing or looking. Quem transfixerunt is the Object, or ſpectacle propounded. Reſpicient in Eum, is the Act, or duty enjoined.

Of

Of which, the Object though in place latter, in nature is the former, and firſt to be handled: for that, there muſt be a thing firſt ſet up, before we can ſet our eyes to looke upon it.

I. The ſight or object generally. 1. CHRIST. Dan. 9. 26.

OF the Object, generally firſt. Certaine it is, that CHRIST is here meant: Saint Iohn hath put us out of doubt for that point. And Zacharie (here) could have ſet downe His name, and ſayd, Reſpice in Chriſtum: for, Daniel (before) had named his name, Occidetur MESSIAS; and Zacharie being after him in time, might have eaſily repeated it. But, it ſeemed good to the HOLY GHOST and to him, rather to uſe a circumlocution; and ſuppreſsing His name of CHRIST, to expreſſe Him by the ſtile or terme, quem transfixerunt. Which being done by choice, muſt needs have a reaſon of the doing, and ſo it hath.

Firſt, the better to ſpecifie and particularize the Perſon of CHRIST, by the kinde, and moſt peculiar circumſtance of His death. Eſay had ſayd, Morietur, Dye He ſhall, and lay downe His ſoule an offering for ſinne, Eſa. 53. 10. 2 Dye, but what Death? a naturall, or a violent? Daniel tells us, Occidetur: He ſhall dye, not a naturall, but a violent death. Dan. 9. 25. 3 But many are ſlaine after many ſorts; and divers kinds there be of violent deaths: The Pſalmiſt the more particularly to ſet it downe, deſcribeth it thus: Pſal. 22. 16. They pierced my hands and my feet: which is onely proper to the death of the Croſſe. 4 Dye, and be ſlaine, and bee crucified: But, ſundry elſe were crucified; and therefore, the Prophet (heere) to make up all, addeth, that He ſhould not onely be crucifixus, but transfixus; not onely have His hands and His feet, but even His heart pierced too. Which very note ſevers Him from all the reſt, with as great particularity as may be: for that, though many beſides at other times, and ſome at the ſame time (with Him) were crucified; yet, the ſide and the heart of none was opened, but His, and His onely.

2. CHRIST pierced.

2. Secondly, as to ſpecifie CHRIST Himſelfe in Perſon, and to ſever Him from the reſt; ſo in CHRIST Himſelfe, and in His Perſon to ſever from the reſt of His doings and ſufferings, what that is, that chiefly concerneth us, and we ſpecially are to looke to: and that, is this dayes worke, CHRIST PIERCED: S. Paul doth beſt expreſſe this: I eſteemed (ſaith he) to know nothing among you, ſave IESVS CHRIST, and Him crucified: 1 Cor. 2. 2. That is, the perfection of our knowledge, is CHRIST: The perfection of our knowledge in, or touching CHRIST, is the knowledge of Chriſt's piercing. This, is the chiefe Sight; Nay (as it ſhall after appeare) in this ſight, are all ſights: So that, know this and know all. This generally.

2 The Object ſpecially. 1 The Paſſion it ſelfe Quid.

Now, ſpecially: In the Object, two things offer themſelves: 1 The Paſſion, or ſuffering it ſelfe; which was, to be pierced. 2 And the Perſons, by whom. For, if the Prophet had not intended, the Perſons ſhould have had their reſpect too: hee might have ſaid Reſpicient in Eum qui transfixus eſt, (which Paſsive would have carried the Paſsion it ſelfe full enough:) but, ſo, he would not; but rather choſe to ſay, quem transfixerunt; which doth neceſſarily imply the Piercers themſelves too. So, that we muſt needs have an eye in the handling, both to the fact, and to the perſons, 1 quid, and 2 quibus, both what, and of whom.

1. The Degree thereof: Transfixerunt.

In the Paſsion, we firſt conſider the degree: for, transfixerunt, is a word of gradation: more than fixerunt, or ſuffixerunt, or confixerunt, either. Expreſsing unto us the piercing, not with whips and ſcourges; nor of the nailes and thornes; but, of the ſpeare-point. Not, the whippes and ſcourges, wherewith His skin and fleſh were pierced; nor the nailes and thornes, wherwith His feet, hands and head were pierced; but, the Speare-point, which pierced and went through His very heart it ſelfe: for, of that wound, of the wound in His heart, is this ſpoken (Io. 19.34.) Therefore trans, is here a tranſcendent; through and through: through skinne and fleſh; through hands and feet; through ſide and heart and all: the deadlieſt and deepeſt wound, and of higheſt gradation.

2. The Extent, Me.

Secondly, as the Prepoſition (Trans) hath His gradation of divers degrees; ſo, the Pronoune (Me) hath his generality of divers parts; beſt expreſſed in the Originall. Vpon Me: not, upon my body and ſoule: Vpon Me, whoſe Perſon, not whoſe parts, either body without, or ſoule within: but Vpon Me, whom wholly, body and ſoule, quicke and dead, they have pierced.

1. His Body.

Of the bodies piercing, there can be no queſtion; ſince, no part of it was left unpierced. Our ſenſes certifie us of that, what need we further witneſſe?

2. His Soule.

Of the Soules too, it is as certaine; and there can be no doubt of it neither: that we truly may affirme, CHRIST, not in part, but wholly was pierced. For, we ſhould do injury to the ſufferings of our Saviour, if we ſhould conceive by this piercing, none other but that of the Speare.

And may a ſoule then be pierced? Can any Speare-point goe through it? Truly Simeon ſaith to the Bleſſed Virgin, by way of prophecie, that the ſword ſhould goe through her ſoule, at the time of His Paſsion. Luc. 2.35. And as the ſword through her's; ſo, I make no queſtion, but the Speare through His. And, if through her's, which was but anima compatientis; through His, much more, which was anima patientis; ſince Compaſsion, is but Paſsion at rebound. Howbeit, it is not a ſword of ſteele, or a Speare-head of iron, that entreth the ſoule, but a metall of another temper: the dint whereof no leſſe goreth and woundeth the ſoule in proportion, than thoſe doe the body.

body. So that, we extend this piercing of CHRIST further, than to the visible gash in His side, even to a piercing of another nature, whereby, not His heart onely was stabbed, but His very spirit wounded too.

The Scripture recounteth two: and of them both, expresly sayth, that they both pierce the soule. The Apostle sayth it, by Sorrow: And pierced themselves through with many sorrowes: The Prophet, of Reproach: There are, whose words are like the pricking of a sword: and that, to the Soule both: for, the body feeles neither. With these, even with both these, was the Soule of CHRIST IESVS wounded. 1 Tim. 6. 10. Psal. 64. 34.

With sorrow.

For sorrow: it is plaine through all foure Evangelists; * undiq; tristis est anima mea usq; ad mortem; My Soule is invironed on every side with sorrow, even to the death: [a] Cœpit IESVS tædere & pavere, IESVS began to be distressed and in great anguish. [b] Factus in agoniâ, being cast into an agonie. [c] Iam turbata est anima mea; Now is my soule troubled: Avowed by them all; Confest by Himselfe. Yea, that His strange and never else heard of sweat; drops of bloud plenteously issuing from Him all over his body, what time, no manner of violence was offered to His body, no man then touching Him, none being neere Him; that bloud came certainly from some great sorrow, wherwith His soule was pierced. And, that His most dreadfull crie, which at once moved all the powers of heaven and earth, My God, My God, &c. was the voice of some mighty Anguish, wherewith His soule was smitten; and that in other sort, than with any materiall speare: For, Derelinqui à Deo, the body cannot feele it, or tell what it meaneth. It is the Soules complaint; and therefore without all doubt, His Soule within Him was pierced, and suffered, though not that, which (except charity be allowed to expound it) cannot be spoken without blasphemy; Not so much (GOD forbid:) yet much, and very much; and much more than others seeme to allow; or how much, it is dangerous to define.

With sorrow. *Mat. 26. 38. Mar. 14. 34. [a] Mar. 14. 33. [b] Luc. 22. 44. [c] Ioh. 12. 27. Mat. 27. 19.

With reproach.

To this edge of sorrow, if the other of piercing despight, be added as a point (as, added it was) it will strike deepe into any heart; especially, being wounded with so many sorrowes before. But, the more noble the heart, the deeper; Who beareth any griefe more easily than this griefe, the griefe of a contumelious reproach. To persecute a poore distressed soule, and to seeke to vexe Him that is already wounded at the heart, why, it is the very pitch of all wickednesse; the very extremity that malice can doe, or affliction can suffer. And to this pitch were they come, when after all their wretched villanies and spitting, and all their savage indignities in reviling Him most opprobriously, He being in the depth of all His distresse, and for verie anguish of soule crying, Eli, Eli, &c. they staied those that would have relieved Him; and (void of all humanity) then scorned, saying: Stay, let alone, let us see, if ELIAS will now come and take Him downe. This barbarous and bruitish inhumanitie of theirs, must needes piere deeper into His Soule, than ever did the iron into His side. Psal. 69. 26. Mat. 27. 49.

To all which if wee it adde, not onely that horrible ingratitude of theirs, there by Him ſeen; but ours alſo no leſſe than theirs by Him foreſeene at the ſame time; (Who make ſo ſlender reckoning of theſe His piercings, and (as they were a matter not worth the looking on) vouchſafe not ſo much as to ſpend an houre in the due regard and meditation of them: Nay, not that onely, but further, by unceſſant ſinning, and that without remorſe, do moſt unkindly requite thoſe His bitter Paines, and as much as in us lies, even crucifie afreſh the SONNE OF GOD, making a mocke of Him and His piercings.) Theſe, I ſay (for, theſe all and every of them in that inſtant were before His eyes) muſt of force enter into, and go thorow and thorow His Soule and Spirit; that, what with thoſe former ſorrowes, and what with theſe after indignities, the Prophet might truly ſay of Him, and He of Himſelfe, In Me, Vpon Me; not whoſe body, or whoſe ſoule; but, whom entirely and wholly, both in body and ſoule, alive and dead, they have pierced and paſsioned this day on the Croſſe.

Heb. 6. 6.

2. The Perſons, a quibus.

Of the Perſons: which as it is neceſſarily implied in the word, is very properly incident to the matter it ſelfe. For, it is uſuall, when one is found ſlaine (as heere) to make inquirie, by whom he came by his death. Which ſo much the rather is to be done by us, becauſe there is commonly an error in the World, touching the Parties that were the cauſes of CHRIST'S death. Our manner is, either to lay it on the Souldiers, that were the Inſtruments; Or if not upon them, upon Pilate the Iudge that gave ſentence; Or if not upon him, upon the people that importuned the Iudge; Or laſtly, if not upon them, upon the Elders of the Iewes that animated the People: And this is all to be found by our Queſt of Inquirie.

But the Prophet here inditeth others. For, by ſaying, They ſhall looke, &c. whom They have pierced, he entendeth by very conſtruction, that the firſt and ſecond [They,] are not two, but one and the ſame Parties: And that they that are here willed to looke upon Him, are they, and none other, that were the authors of this fact, even of the murther of IESVS CHRIST. And (to ſay truth) the Prophet's entent is no other but to bring the malefactors themſelves that pierced Him, to view the body and the wounded heart of Him, whom they have ſo pierced.

In the courſe of Iuſtice, we ſay and ſay truly; when a party is put to death, that the Executioner cannot be ſayd to be the cauſe of his death; nor the Sheriffe, by whoſe commandement he doth it; neither yet the Iudge by whoſe ſentence; nor the Twelve men, by whoſe verdict; nor the Law it ſelfe, by whoſe authority it is proceeded in. (For, GOD forbid we ſhould endite theſe, or any of theſe, of murther:) Solum peccatum homicida: Sinne, and Sinne onely is the murtherer. Sinne (I ſay) either of the Party that ſuffereth: or of ſome other, by whoſe meanes, or for whoſe cauſe, he is put to death.

Now

Now, CHRIST's owne ſinne it was not, that He dyed for. That is moſt evident. Not ſo much by His owne challenge, Quis ex vobis arguit me de peccato? As by the report of His Iudge, who openly profeſſed, that he had examined Him, and found no fault in Him: No, nor yet Herod, for, being ſent to him, and examined by him alſo, nothing worthy death was found in Him: And therefore, calling for water, and waſhing his hands, he proteſteth his owne innocencie of the bloud of this IVST MAN: Thereby pronouncing Him Iuſt, and void of any cauſe, in Himſelfe, of His owne death. Ioh. 8.46. Luc. 23.14, 15. Mat. 27.24.

It muſt then neceſſarily be the ſinne of ſome others, for whoſe ſake CHRIST IESVS was thus pierced. And if we aske, who thoſe others be? or whoſe ſinnes they were? the Prophet Eſai tells us, Poſuit ſuper Eum iniquitates omnium noſtrûm, He laid upon Him the tranſgreſsions of us all: who ſhould (even for thoſe our many, great, and grievous tranſgreſsions) have eternally been pierced, in body and ſoule, with torment and ſorrowes of a never dying death, had not He ſtept betweene us and the blow, and receiv'd it in His owne body; even the dint of the wrath of GOD to come upon us. So that it was the ſinne of our polluted hands, that pierced His hands: the ſwiftneſſe of our feet to doe evill, that nayled His feet: the wicked devices of our Heads, that gored His head: and the wretched deſires of our hearts, that pierced His heart. We that looke upon, it is wee that pierced Him: and it is we that pierced Him, that are willed to looke upon Him. Which bringeth it home to us; to me my ſelfe that ſpeak, and to you your ſelves that heare; and applieth it moſt effectually to every one of us, who evidently ſeeing, that we were the cauſe of this His piercing, if our hearts be not too too hard, ought to have remorſe, to be pierced with it. Eſa. 53.3.4.

When for delivering to DAVID a few loaves, Ahimelech and the Prieſts were by Saul put to the ſword, if David did then acknowledge with grieſe of heart, and ſay, I, even I am the cauſe of the death of thy Father and all his houſe, (when he was but onely the occaſion of it, and not that direct neither:) may not wee (nay, ought not we) much more juſtly and deſervedly ſay of this piercing of CHRIST our Saviour, that we verily, even we, are the cauſe thereof: as verily we are, even the principals in this murther; and the Iewes and others, on whom wee ſeeke to derive it, but onely acceſſaries and inſtrumentall cauſes thereof. Which point, we ought, as continually, ſo, ſeriouſly to thinke of; and that no leſſe than the former. The former, to ſtirre up compaſsion in our ſelves, over Him that thus was pierced: the latter, to worke deepe remorſe in our hearts, for being authors of it. That He was pierced, will make our bowells melt with compaſsion, over CHRIST. That He was pierced by us, that looke on Him, if our hearts be not flint (as Iob ſaith), or as the nether milſtone, will breed remorſe over our ſelves, wretched ſinners as we are. 1 Sam. 22.3, 22. Iob 41.15.

II. The Act followeth in theſe words: Reſpicient in Eum. A requeſt moſt reaſonable, to looke upon Him; but to looke upon Him; to beſtow but a looke and nothing elſe; which even of common humanitie we cannot denie, Quia non aſpicere, deſpicere eſt. It argueth great contempt, not to vouchſafe in the caſt of our eye; as if it were an Object utterly unworthy the looking toward. Truely, if we marke it well, nature it ſelfe, of it ſelfe inclineth to this act. When Amaſa treacherouſly was ſlaine by Ioab, and lay weltring in his blood by the way ſide, the ſtorie ſaith, that not one of the whole Armie, then marching by, but when he came at him, ſtood ſtill and looked on him.

The Act. To looke upon Him.

2 Sam. 22. 12.

In the Goſpell, the party that going from Ieruſalem to Iericho was ſpoiled and wounded and lay drawing on, though the Prieſt and Levite that paſſed neere the place releeved him not, as the Samaritan after did: yet it is ſaid of them, they went neere and looked on, and then paſſed on their way. Which deſire is even naturall in us: ſo that even Nature it ſelfe inclineth us to ſatisfie the Prophet.

Luc. 31. 32.

Nature doth; and ſo doth Grace too. For, generally we are bound to regard the worke of the LORD, and to conſider the operations of His hands: and ſpecially this worke; in compariſon whereof GOD Himſelfe ſaith, the former workes of His, ſhall not be remembred, nor the things done of old once regarded.

Pſal. 28. 5.

Eſa. 43. 18.

Yea CHRIST Himſelfe, pierced as He is, inviteth us to it. For, in the Prophet heere, it is not In eum; but In me: not, on Him; but, on Me, whom they have pierced. But more fully in Ieremy: for, to CHRIST Himſelfe do all the ancient Writers apply (and that, moſt properly) thoſe words of the Lamentation: Have ye no regard all ye that paſſe by this way? Behold and ſee, if there be any ſorrow like my ſorrow, which is done unto me, wherewith the LORD hath afflicted me in the day of His fierce wrath.

Lam. 1. 12.

Our owne profit (which is wont to perſwade well) inviteth us: for that, as from the brazen Serpent no vertue iſſued to heale, but unto them that ſteddily beheld it; ſo neither doth there, from CHRIST, but upon thoſe, that with the eye of faith have their contemplation on this object: Who thereby draw life from Him; and without it may and doe periſh, for all CHRIST and His Paſsion.

Num. 21. 8, 9.

And, if nothing elſe move us, this laſt may: even our danger. For, the time will come, when we our ſelves ſhall deſire, that GOD looking with an angry countenance upon our ſinnes, would turne his face from them and us, and looke upon the face of His CHRIST, that is, reſpicere in Eum: which ſhall juſtly be then denied us, if we our ſelves could never be gotten to doe this duty, reſpicere in Eum: when it was called for of us. GOD ſhall not look upon Him, at ours; whom we would not looke upon, at His requeſt.

In the Act it ſelfe are injoyned three things: 1. That we do it with attention attention: for, it is not Me, but in Me: Not onely Vpon Him, but Into Him. 2. That wee doe it oft, againe and againe; with iteration. for, Reſpicient, is re-aſpicient. Not a ſingle act, but an act iterated. 3. That we cauſe our nature to do it, as it were, by vertue of an Injunction, per actum elicitum, as the Schoolmen call it. For, in the Originall, it is in the commanding Conjugation, that ſignifieth, facient ſe reſpicere, rather than Reſpicient.

First then, not ſlightly, ſuperficially or perfunctorily, but ſtedfaſtly; and with due attention, to looke upon Him. And, not to looke upon the out-ſide alone; but, to looke into the verie entrailes; and with our eye to pierce Him that was thus pierced. In Eum beareth both. 1 With Attention. Reſpicient In Eum.

1. Vpon Him, if wee looke, we ſhall ſee ſo much, as Pilate ſhewed of Him, Ecce Homo, that He is a Man. And, if He were not a man, but ſome other unreaſonable creature, it were great ruth to ſee Him ſo handled.

2. Among men wee leſſe pitie Malefactors, and have moſt compaſſion on them that be innocent. And, He was innocent, and deſerved it not (as you have heard,) His enemies themſelves being His Iudges.

3. Among thoſe that be innocent, the more noble the perſon, the greater the griefe, and the more heavy ever is the ſpectacle. Now, if we conſider the Verſe of this Text well, we ſhall ſee, it is GOD Himſelfe, and no man that here ſpeaketh (for, to GOD onely it belongeth, to poure out the Spirit of Grace; it paſſeth mans reach, to do it:) ſo that, if we looke better upon Him, we ſhall ſee as much as the Centurion ſaw, that this partie thus pierced is the SONNE of GOD. Mat. 27. 54. The SONNE of GOD ſlaine! Surely, he that hath done this deed is the Child of death, would every one of us ſay: Et tu es homo, Thou art the man, would the Prophet anſwere us: You are they, for whoſe ſins the SONNE of GOD hath His very heart-bloud ſhed forth. Which muſt needs ſtrike into us remorſe of a deeper degree than before: That not onely, it is we that have pierced the Party thus found ſlaine; but, that this Party, whom we have thus pierced, is not a principall perſon among the children of men, but even the Only begotten SONNE of the moſt High GOD: which will make us cry out (with S. Auguſtine) O amaritudo peccati mei, ad quam tollendam neceſſaria fuit amaritudo tanta! Now ſure, deadly was the bitterneſſe of our ſins, that might not be cured, but by the bitter death and bloud-ſhedding paſſion of the Sonne of GOD. And this may we ſee looking upon Him. 2 Sam. 12. 5. 7.

But now then, if we looke in Eum, into Him, we ſhall ſee yet a greater thing, which may raiſe us in comfort, as farre as the other caſt us downe. Even the bowels of compaſſion and tender love, whereby Hee would and was content to ſuffer all this for our ſakes. For that, whereas [a] no man had power to take His life from Him, (for He had power to have commanded [b] twelve Legions of Angels, in His juſt defence: and, without any Angell at all, power enough of Himſelfe, with His [c] Ego ſum, to ſtrike them them all to the ground.) Hee was content notwithſtanding all this, to lay downe His life for us ſinners. The greatneſſe of which love paſſeth the greateſt love that man hath: for [d] greater love than this, hath no man, but to beſtow his life for his friends; wheras, He condeſcended to lay it down for His enemies. Even for them that ſought His death, to lay downe His life, and to have His bloud ſhed for them that did ſhed it; to be pierced for His Piercers. Look how the former In Eum worketh griefe, conſidering the great injuries offered to ſo great a Perſonage; So, to temper the griefe of it, this latter In Eum giveth ſome comfort, that ſo great a Perſon, ſhould ſo greatly love us, as, for our ſakes, to endure all thoſe ſo many injuries, even to the piercing of His very heart.

[b] Mat. 26. 53
[c] Ioh. 18. 6.

[d] Ioh. 15. 13.

2 With Iteration: Reaſpicient.

Secondly, Reſpicient (that is) Re-aſpicient: Not, once or twice, but oftentimes to look upon it: that is (as the Prophet ſaith here) iteratis vicibus, to looke againe and againe: or (as the Apoſtle ſaith) Recogitare, to thinke upon it, over and over againe, as it were to dwell in it for a time. In a ſort, with the frequentneſſe of this our beholding it, to ſupply the weakeneſſe and want of our former attention. Surely, the more ſteadily and more often we ſhall fixe our eye upon it, the more we ſhall be enured: and being enured, the more deſire to doe it. For, at every looking, ſome new ſight will offer it ſelfe, which will offer unto us occaſion, either of godly ſorrow, true repentance, ſound comfort, or ſome other reflexion, iſſuing from the beames of this heavenly mirror. Which point, becauſe it is the chiefe point, the Prophet here calleth us to; even, how to looke upon CHRIST often, and to be the better for our looking. It ſhall be very agreeable to the Text, and to the HOLY GHOST's chiefe intent, if we prove how, and in how diverſe ſorts, we may with profit behold and looke upon Him, whom thus we have pierced.

Heb. 12. 3.

1. Reſpice & tranſfigere.

Firſt then, looking upon Him, wee may bring forth for the firſt effect, that which immediatly followeth this Text it ſelfe, in this Text, Et plangent Eum: Reſpice & plange. Firſt, looke and lament, or mourne: which is indeed the moſt kindly and naturall effect of ſuch a ſpectacle. Looke upon Him that is pierced; and with looking upon Him, bee pierced thy ſelfe Reſpice & tranſfigere. A good effect of our firſt looke, if we could bring it forth. At leaſtwiſe, if we cannot Reſpice & tranſfigere, looke and be pierced; yet, that it might be Reſpice & compungere, that with looking on Him, we might be pricked in our hearts; and have it enter paſt the skinne, though it goe not cleane through: Which difference in this Verſe, the Prophet ſeemeth to inſinuate, when, firſt he willeth us to mourne, as for one's onely ſonne, with whom all is loſt. Or, if that cannot be had, to mourne, as for a firſt begotten ſonne; which is, though not ſo great, yet a great mourning: even for the firſt begotten, though other ſonnes be left.

Acts 2. 37.

Verſe 11.

And, in the next Verſe, if we cannot reach to naturall griefe; yet he wiſheth us to mourn with a Civill; even with ſuch a lamentation as was made made for Iosias. And Behold a greater than IOSIAS is here. Comming not (as he) to an honourable death in battell; but to a most vile death, the death of a Malefactor: And not (as Iosias) dying without any fault of theirs; but mangled and massacred in this shamefull sort, for us; even for us and our transgressions. Verily, the dumbe and senseless creatures had this effect wrought in them (of mourning) at the sight of His death; in their kind sorrowing for the murder of the SONNE of GOD. And we truly shall be much more senseless than they, if it have in us no worke to the like effect. Especially, considering it was not for them, He suffered all this; nor they no profit by it: but, for us it was; and wee by it saved: And yet, they had compassion, and we none. Be this then the first.

Now, as the first is Respice & transfigere, Looke upon Him and bee pierced: so, the second may be (and that fitly) Respice & transfige; Looke upon Him, and pierce: and pierce that in thee, that was the cause of CHRIST's piercing: (that is) sinne and the lusts thereof. For, as men that are pierced indeed with the griefe of an indignity offered, withall, are pricked to take revenge on him that offers it: such a like affection ought our second looking to kindle in us; even to take a wreake, or revenge upon sinne, quia fecit hoc, because it hath been the cause of all this. I meane (as the HOLY GHOST termeth it) a mortifying or crucifying; a thrusting thorow of our wicked passions and concupiscences, in some kind of repaying those manifold villanies, which the SONNE of GOD suffered by meanes of them. At leastwise (as before) if it kindle not our zeale so far against sinne; yet, that it may slake our zeale and affection to sinne: that is, Respice, ne respicias: Respice CHRISTVM, ne respicias peccatum. That we have lesse mind, lesse liking, lesse acquaintance with sinne, for the Passion-sake. For that, by this meanes we doe in some sort, spare CHRIST; and (at least) make His wounds no wider: Whereas by affecting sinne anew, we do, what in us lyeth, to crucifie Him afresh, and both increase the number, and enlarge the wideness of His wounds.

2 Respice & transfige.

It is no unreasonable request, That, if we list not wound sinne; yet, seeing CHRIST hath wounds enough, and they wide and deepe enough, we should forbeare to pierce Him further, and have (at least) this second fruit of our looking upon Him: either to looke and to pierce sinne; or to looke and spare to pierce Him any more.

Now, as it was sinne that gave Him these wounds: so, it was love to us that made Him receive them, being otherwise able enough to have avoided them all. So that, He was pierced with love, no lesse than with griefe: and it was that wound of Love, made Him so constantly to indure all the other. Which Love we may read in the palmes of His hands (as the Fathers expresse it, out of Esay 49.16.) For, in the palmes of His hands He hath graven us, that He might not forget us. And the print of the nailes in them, are as Capitall letters to record His love toward us. For, CHRIST pierced on the Croſſe is liber Charitatis, the very booke of love laid open before us. And againe, this love of His we may read in the cleft of His heart, Quia Clavus penetrans factus est nobis Clavis reserans (ſaith Bernard) ut pateant nobis viscera per vulnera. The point of the Speare ſerves us inſtead of a key, letting us, through His wounds, ſee His very bowels, the bowels of tender love and moſt kind compaſsion, that would for us endure to be ſo entreated. That, if the Iewes (that ſtood by) ſaid truely of Him, at Ioh. 11. 36. LAZARVS grave, Ecce quomodo dilexit Eum! when He ſhed a few teares out of His eyes; much more truly may we ſay of Him, Ecce quomodo dilexit nos! ſeeing Him ſhed, both Water and Bloud, and that in great plentie; and that, out of His heart.

4 Respice & crede.

Which ſight ought to pierce us with love too, no leſſe than before it did with ſorrow. With one, or with both: for, both have power to pierce; but ſpecially Love: Which except it had entred firſt and pierced Him, no naile or ſpeare could ever have entered. Then let this be the third, Reſpice & dilige: Look and be pierced with love of Him, that ſo loved thee, that He gave Himſelfe in this ſort to be pierced for thee.

And foraſmuch as it is CHRIST His own ſelfe, that, reſembling His paſsion on the Croſſe to the Brazen Serpent lift up in the wilderneſſe, maketh a correſpondence betweene their beholding and our beleeving (for, ſo it is Ioh. 3. 14.) wee cannot avoid, but muſt needes make that an effect too: Even Reſpice & crede. And, well may we beleeve and truſt Him, whom looking a little before, wee have ſeene ſo conſtantly loving us. For, the ſight of that love maketh credible unto us, whatſoever in the whole ſcripture, is affirmed to us of CHRIST, or promiſed in His name: So, that beleeve it, and beleeve all. Neither is there any time, wherein with ſuch
Ioh. 20. 28. cheerefulneſſe or fulneſſe of faith we crie unto Him, MY LORD and MY GOD, as when our eye is fixed upon the print of the nailes, and on the hole in the ſide of Him that was pierced for us. So that, this fourth duty CHRIST Himſelfe layeth upon us, and willeth us from His owne mouth, Reſpice & Crede.

5 Reſpice & ſpera.

And, beleeving this of Him, what is there, the eye of our hope ſhall not look for from Him? What would not He do for us, that for us would
Rom. 8. 32. ſuffer all this? It is S. Pauls argument, If GOD gave His Sonne for us, how ſhall He denie us any thing with Him? That is, Reſpice & Spera. Look upon Him, and His heart opened, and from that gate of hope promiſe thy ſelfe, and looke for all manner of things that good are. Which our expectation is reduced to theſe two: 1 The deliverance from the evill of our preſent miſery: 2 and the reſtoring to the good of our primitive felicitie. By the death of this undefiled Lambe, as by the yearely Paſſeover, looke for, for, and hope for a paſſage out of Egypt: which ſpiritually is our redemption from the ſervitude of the power of darkeneſſe. And, as by the death of the Sacrifice, we looke to be freed from whatſoever evill: So, by the death of the High Prieſt, looke we for and hope for reſtitution to all that is good; even, to our forfeited eſtate in the land of Promiſe, which is Heaven it ſelfe, where is all joy and happineſſe for evermore. Reſpice & Spera, Looke, and looke for: by the Lambe that is pierced, to be freed from all miſerie; by the High Prieſt that is pierced, fruition of all felicity.

6 Reſpice & Recipe.

Now, inaſmuch as His heart is pierced, and His ſide opened; the opening of the one, and the piercing of the other, is, to the end, ſomewhat may flow forth. To which end (ſaith Saint Auguſtine) Vigilanti verbo uſus eſt Apoſtolus, the Apoſtle was well adviſed, when he uſed the word opening; for, there iſſued out water and bloud, which make the ſixt effect, Reſpice & Recipe. Marke it running out, and ſuffer it not to run waſte, but receive it. Of the former (the water) the Prophet ſpeaketh in the firſt words of the next Chapter, that out of His pierced ſide [a] GOD opened a fountaine of water to the houſe of Iſrael for ſinne and for uncleanneſſe: Of the fulneſſe whereof we all have received, in the Sacrament of our Baptiſme. Of the later (the bloud) which the Prophet (in the [b] IX. Chapter before) calleth the bloud of the New Teſtament, we may receive this day: for, it will run in the high and holy Myſteries of the Body & bloud of CHRIST. There, may we be partakers of the fleſh of the [c] Morning-Hart, as upon this day killed. There may we be partakers of the [d] Cup of ſalvation, the precious bloud [e] which was ſhed for the remiſſion of our ſinnes. Our part it ſhall be, not to accompt the [f] bloud of the Teſtament an unholy thing, and to ſuffer it to runne in vaine for all us; but with all due regard to receive it ſo running: for, even therefore was it ſhed. And ſo to the former, to adde this ſixt, Reſpice & Recipe.

7 Reſpice & Retribue.

And ſhall we alway receive grace, even ſtreames of grace iſſuing from Him that is pierced, and ſhall there not from us iſſue ſomething backe againe, that He may looke for and receive from us, that from Him have and do daily receive ſo many good things? No doubt there ſhall; if love which pierced Him, have pierced us aright. And that is (no longer to hold you with theſe effects) Reſpice & Retribue. For, it will even behave us no leſſe than the Pſalmiſt, to enter into the conſideration of quid retribuam. Eſpecially, ſince we, by this day, both ſee and receive that, which he and many others deſired to ſee, and receive, and could not. Or, if we have nothing to render, yet (our ſelves) to returne with the Samaritan, and falling downe at His feet, with a loud voice, to glorifie His goodneſs, who finding us in the eſtate, that other Samaritane found the forlorne and wounded man, healed us, by being wounded Himſelfe, and by His owne death reſtored us to life. For all which His kindneſſe, if nothing will come come from us, not ſo much as a kind and thankfull acknowledgement, we are certainly worthy, He ſhould reſtraine the fountaine of His benefits, (which hitherto hath flowen moſt plenteouſly) and neither let us ſee, nor feele Him any more.

But, I hope for better things: that, love, ſuch and ſo great love will pierce us, and cauſe both other fruits, and eſpecially thoughts of thankfulneſſe to iſſue from us. Thus many; and many more, if the time would ſerve: But, thus many ſeverall uſes may we have of thus many ſeverall reſpects, or reflexed lookings upon HIM whom we have pierced.

3 With enforcement of themſelves. Reſpicere ſe facient.

Thirdly, facient ſe reſpicere. For, the HOLY GHOST did eaſily foreſee, we would not readily be brought to the ſight, or to uſe our eyes to ſo good an end. Indeed, to fleſh and bloud it is but a dull and heavy ſpectacle: And, neither willingly they begin to look upon it; and having begun, are never well, till they have done, and looke off it againe. Therefore is the Verbe (by the Prophet) put into this Conjugation of purpoſe: which to turne in ſtrict propriety is Reſpicere ſe facient, rather than Reſpicient: They ſhall procure or cauſe, or even enjoine or enforce themſelves to looke upon it; or (as one would ſay) looke, that they looke upon it.

For ſome new and ſtrange ſpectacle (though vaine and idle, and which ſhall not profit us how ſtrange ſoever) we cauſe our ſelves ſometimes to take a journey, and beſides our paines, are at expences too, to behold them: we will not only look upon, but even cauſe our ſelves to looke upon vanities; and in them, we have the right uſe of facient ſe reſpicere. And why ſhould we not take ſome paines, and even enjoine our ſelves to looke upon this? being neither farre off, nor chargeable to come to; and ſince the looking on it may ſo many waies, ſo mainly profit us? Verily it falleth out oft, that of CHRIST's: violenti rapiunt illud, Nature is not enclined; and where it is not enclined, force muſt be offered; which we call in Schooles, Actum elicitum. Which very act by us undertaken, for GOD, and (as here) at His word, is unto Him a Sacrifice right acceptable. Therfore, facias, or fac facias; do it willingly, or do it by force: Do it, I ſay; for, done it muſt be. Set it before you and looke on it: or, if you liſt not remove it, and ſet it full before you, though it be not with your eaſe, Reſpice, Looke backe upon it with ſome paine: for, one way or other, looke upon it we muſt.

Mat. 11.12.

The neceſsity whereof (that we may the better apprehend it) it will not bee amiſſe, wee know, that theſe words are in two ſundry places, two ſundry waies applied: [1] Once, by Saint Iohn in the Goſpell; [2] and the ſecond time againe, by CHRIST Himſelfe in the Revelation. By Saint Iohn to CHRIST, at His firſt comming, ſuffering (as our Saviour) upon the Croſſe. By CHRIST to Himſelfe, at His ſecond comming, ſitting (as our Iudge) upon His Throne, in the end of the world. Behold He commeth in the Clouds, and every eye ſhall ſee Him, yea, even they that pierced Him.

Ioh. 19.37.

Apoc. 1.7.

Him: Et plangent ſe ſuper Eum omnes Gentes terræ. The meaning whereof is, Looke upon Him, here, if you will: Enjoine your ſelves if you thinke good: Either here, or ſome where elſe; either now or then, looke upon Him you ſhall. And, they which put this ſpectacle farre from them heere, and cannot endure to looke upon Him whom they have pierced, & plangere Eum, and be grieved for Him, while it is time: a place and time ſhall be, when they ſhall be enforced to looke upon Him, whether they will or no, Et plangent ſe ſuper Eum, and be grieved for themſelves, that they had no grace to doe it ſooner. Better, compoſe themſelves to a little mourning here, with ſome benefit to be made by their beholding; than to be drawne to it there, when it is too late, and when all their looking and grieving will not availe awhit. For, there Reſpicientes reſpiciet, & deſpicientes deſpiciet: His looke ſhall bee amiable to them that have reſpected His piercing heere; and dreadfull on the other ſide, to them that have neglected it. And, as they that have enured themſelves to this looking on (here) ſhall in that day, Looke up, and lift up their heads with joy, the day of their Rédemption being at hand. So, they that cannot bring themſelves, to looke upon Him heere, after they once have looked upon Him there, ſhall not dare to doe it the ſecond time; but crie to the mountaines, Fall upon us, and to the Hills, Hide us from the face of HIM that ſits upon the Throne. Therefore, Reſpicient is no evill counſell. No, though it be facient ſe reſpicere. Luc. 21. 28. Apoc. 6. 16.

In a word; if thus cauſing our ſelves to fixe our eyes on Him, we ask, how long we ſhall continue ſo doing, and when we may give over? Let this be the anſwere, Donec totus fixus in Corde, qui totus fixus in Cruce. Or if that be too much or too hard, yet ſaltem at the leaſt, Reſpice in Illum, donec Ille te reſpexerit. Looke upon Him, till Hee looke upon you againe. For, ſo He will. He did, upon PETER; and with His look, melted him into teares. He that once and twice before denied Him, and never wept, becauſe CHRIST looked not on Him; then denied, and CHRIST looked on him, and he went out and wept bitterly. And, if to Peter thus He did, and vouchſafed him ſo gracious a regard, when Peter not once looked toward HIM; how much more ſhall He not deny us like favour, if, by looking on Him firſt, we provoke Him in a ſort to a ſecond looking on us againe; with the Prophet, ſaying; Propoſui Dominum coram me, I have ſet thee, O LORD, before me; and againe, Reſpice in me, &c. O looke thou upon mee, and be mercifull unto me, as thou uſeſt to doe to thoſe that love thy Name. That love thy Name, which is, IESVS a SAVIOVR; and which love that ſight, wherein (moſt properly) thy Name appeareth, and wherein thou chiefly ſheweſt thy ſelfe to be IESVS a SAVIOVR. Luc. 22. 61. Pſal. 16. 8. Pſa. 119. 132.

And (to conclude) if we aske, how we ſhall know when CHRIST doth thus reſpect us? Then truely, when fixing both the eyes of our meditation upon Him that was pierced (as it were) one eye, upon the griefe; the other, upon the love wherewith He was pierced, we find by both, or one of these, some motion of grace arise in our hearts: the consideration of His griefe, piercing our hearts with sorrow; the consideration of His love, piercing our hearts with mutuall love againe. The one is the motion of compunction, which they felt, who when they heard such things were

Act. 2.37. pricked in their hearts. The other, the motion of comfort, which they felt, who when CHRIST spake unto them of the necessity of His piercing,
Luc. 24. 32. said; Did wee not feele our hearts warme within us? That, from the shame and paine Hee suffered for us: This, from the comforts and benefits, He thereby procured for us.

These have beene felt at this Looking on; and these will be felt. It may be, at the first, unperfectly; but after, with deeper impression: and that, of some, with such as Nemo scit, None knoweth, but He that hath felt them. Which that wee may endevour to feele, and endevouring may feele, and so grow into delight of this looking, GOD, &c.

LAMENT. Chap. I. Ver. XII.

Have yee no regard, ô all yee that paſſe by the way? Conſider, and behold, If ever there were ſorrow, like my Sorrow, which was done unto me, wherewith the Lord did afflict me in the day of the fierceneſſe of His wrath.

AT the very reading or hearing of which Verſe, there is none but will preſently conceive, it is the voice of a party in great extremity. In great extremity two waies: A complaint. 1 Firſt, in ſuch diſtreſſe, as never was anie, If ever there were ſorrow like my ſorrow: 2 And then in that diſtreſſe, having none to regard Him: Have yee no Regard all yee?

To bee afflicted, and ſo afflicted, as none ever was, is very much: In that affliction, to find none to reſpect him or care for him, what can be more? In all our ſufferings, it is a comfort to us that we have a ſicut: that nothing hath befallen us, but ſuch as others have felt the like: But here, Si fuerit ſicut; If ever the like were, (that is) never the like was. 1 Cor. 10. 13

Againe, in our greateſt paines, it is a kind of eaſe, even to finde ſome regard. Naturally we deſire it, if we cannot be delivered, if we cannot be relieved, yet to be pitied: It ſheweth, there be yet ſome, that are touched with the ſenſe of our miſery; that wiſh us well, and would give us eaſe if they could: But this afflicted, here, findeth not ſo much, neither Iob 19. 2 the one nor the other: but is even as He were an out-caſt both of Heaven and Earth. Now verily an heavie caſe, and worthy to be put in this booke of Lamentations.

CHRISTS Complaint.

I demand then, Of whom ſpeaketh the Prophet this? of himſelfe, or of ſome other? This I finde; there is not any of the ancient Writers, but doe apply, yea, in a manner appropriate this ſpeech to our Saviour CHRIST: And that this very day, the day of His Paſsion, (truly termed here the day of GODS wrath:) And whereſoever they treat of the Paſsion, ever this verſe commeth in. And (to ſay the truth) to take the words ſtrictly as they lie, they cannot agree, or be verified of any but of Him, and Him onely. For, though ſome other, not unfitly, may be allowed to ſay the ſame words: it muſt be in a qualified ſenſe: for, in full and perfect propriety of ſpeech, He, and none but He: None can ſay, (neither Ieremie, nor any other) Si fuerit dolor ſicut dolor meus, as CHRIST can: No day of wrath, like to His day: no ſorrow to be compared to His (all are ſhort of it;) nor His to any, it exceedeth them all.

And yet, according to the letter, it cannot be denied, but they be ſet downe by Ieremy, in the perſon of his owne people, being then come to great miſerie; and of the holy Citie, then laid waſte, and deſolate by the Chaldees. What then? Ex Ægypto vocavi Filium meum, Out of Ægypt have I called my Sonne, was litterally ſpoken of this people too: yet is by the Evangeliſt applied to our Saviour CHRIST. My GOD, my GOD, why haſt thou forſaken me? at the firſt uttered by David; yet the ſame words our SAVIOVR taketh Himſelfe, and that more truly and properly, than ever David could: and of thoſe of Davids, and of theſe of Ieremies, there is one and the ſame reaſon.

Matt. 2. 15.
Pſal. 22. 1.
Matt. 27. 46.

Of all which the ground is, that correſpondence which is betweene CHRIST and the Patriarchs, Prophets, and People before CHRIST, of whom the Apoſtles rule is, Omnia in figurâ contingebant illis: That they were themſelves Types, and their ſufferings, forerunning figures of the great ſuffering of the SONNE OF GOD. which maketh Iſaaks offering, and Ioſephs ſelling, and Iſraels calling from Ægypt, and that complaint of Davids, and this of Ieremies, appliable to Him; That He may take them to Himſelf, and the Church aſcribe them to Him, and that in more fitneſſe of termes, and more fulneſſe of truth, than they were at the firſt ſpoken by David, or Ieremy, or any of them all.

1 Cor. 10. 11.

And this rule, and the ſtepps of the Fathers proceeding by this rule, are to me a warrant to expound and apply this Verſe (as they have done before) to the preſent occaſion of this time; which requireth ſome ſuch Scripture to be conſidered by us, as doth belong to His Paſsion, who, this Day, powred out His moſt precious Bloud, as the onely ſufficient Price, of the deare purchaſe of all our Redemptions.

Be it then to us, (as to them it was, and as moſt properly it is) The ſpeech of the SONNE of GOD, as this day hanging on the Croſſe, to a

ſort of careleſſe people, that goe up and downe without any manner of regard of theſe His ſorrowes and ſufferings, ſo worthy of all regard. Have yee no regard? ô all yee that paſſe by the way, Conſider and behold, if ever there were ſorrow like to my ſorrow, which was done unto me, wherewith the LORD afflicted me in the day of the fierceneſſe of his wrath.

Here is a Complaint, and here is a Requeſt. A complaint, that we have not: A Requeſt, that we would have the Paines and Paſsions of our Saviour CHRIST in ſome Regard. For firſt He complaineth (and not without cauſe) Have yee no regard? And then (as willing to forget their former neglect, ſo they will yet do it) He falleth to intreat, O conſider and behold! The parts.

And what is that we ſhould conſider? The Sorrow which He ſuffereth: and in it two things: The Quality, and the Cauſe. 1. The Quality, Si fuerit ſicut; If ever the like were: and that either in reſpect of Dolor, or Dolor meus, The Sorrow ſuffered, or the Perſon ſuffering. 2. The Cauſe: that is GOD, that in His wrath, in His fierce wrath, doth all this to Him. Which cauſe will not leave us, till it have led us to another cauſe in our ſelves, and to another yet in Him: All which ſerve to ripen us to Regard.

Theſe two then ſpecially we are moved to regard. 1. Regard is the maine point. But becauſe therefore we regard but faintly, becauſe either we conſider not, or not aright; we are called to conſider ſeriouſly of them. As if He ſhould ſay, Regard you not? If you did conſider, you would: if you conſidered as you ſhould, you would regard as you ought. Certainly the Paſsion, if it were throughly conſidered, would be duly regarded. Conſider then.

So the Points are two: [1] The Quality, and the [2] Cauſe of His ſuffering. And the Duties two: [1] To Conſider, and Regard, [2] So to conſider, that we regard them, and Him for them. I. II. III. IV.

Have yee no regard, &c.

TO eaſe this Complaint, and to grant this Requeſt, we are to regard: and that we may regard, we are to conſider the paines of His Paſsion.

Which, that we may reckon no eaſie common matter of light moment, to doe or not to doe, as wee liſt: Firſt, a generall ſtay is made of all paſſengers, this day. For, (as it were from His Croſſe) doth our SAVIOVR addreſſe this His ſpeech to them that goe to and fro, the day of His Paſsion, without ſo much as entertaining a thought, or vouchſafing a looke that way. O vos qui tranſitis! O you that paſſe by the way, ſtay and Conſider. To them frameth He His ſpeech, that paſſe by: To them, and to them all, O vos omnes, qui tranſitis, O all ye that paſſe by the way, ſtay and Conſider. The Parties to whom. O all ye that paſſe by the way conſider:

Which very ſtay of His, ſheweth it to be ſome important matter, in that it is, of all. For as for ſome to be ſtaied, and thoſe the greater ſome, there may be reaſon; the moſt part of thoſe that go thus to and fro, may well intend it, they have little elſe to doe. But to except none, not ſome ſpeciall Perſon, is hard. What know we their haſte? Their occaſions may be ſuch, and ſo urgent, as they cannot ſtay. Well, what haſte, what buſineſſe ſo ever, paſſe not by, ſtay though. As much to ſay, as, Be they never ſo great, your occaſions; they are not, they cannot bee ſo great as this: How urgent ſoever, this is more, and more to be intended. The regard of this, is worthy the ſtaying of a journey. It is worth the conſidering of thoſe, that have never ſo great affaires in hand. So materiall is this ſight in His account. Which ſerveth to ſhew the exigence of this dutie. But as for this point, it needeth not be ſtood upon to us here at this time: we are not going by, wee need not be ſtaied; we have ſtaied all other our affaires, to come hither, and here we are all preſent before GOD, to have it ſet before us, that we may conſider it. Thither then let us come.

Sorrow. That which we are called to behold and conſider, is His ſorrow: And Sorrow is a thing which of it ſelfe Nature inclineth us to behold, as being
Heb. 13. 3. our ſelves in the body, which may bee one day in the like ſorrowfull caſe. Therefore will every good eye turne it ſelfe, and looke upon them that
1. Behold. lie in diſtreſſe. Thoſe two in the Goſpell, that paſſed by the wounded man,
Luc. 10. 32. before they paſſed by him, (though they helped him not, as the Samaritane did) yet they looked upon him as he lay. But, this party (here)
Ioh. 3. 14. lieth not, He is lift up, as the Serpent in the wilderneſſe, that unleſſe we turne our eyes away purpoſely, we can neither will nor chooſe, but behold Him.
Acts 1. 11. But becauſe, to Behold, and not to conſider, is but to gaze; and gazing the Angel blameth in the Apoſtles themſelves, we muſt do both: both Behold,
2. Conſider. and conſider: looke upon, with the eye of the body, that is, Behold; and looke into, with the eye of the mind, that is, Conſider. So ſaith the Prophet here. And the very ſame doth the Apoſtle adviſe us to do. Firſt, ἀφορᾶν,
Heb. 12. 2, 3. to look upon him (that is, to Behold) and then ἀναλογίζεσθαι, to think upon Him, that is, to Conſider His Sorrow: Sorrow (ſure) would be conſidered.

The quality, If ever the like. Now then, becauſe, as the qualitie of the Sorrow is, accordingly it would be conſidered, (for if it be but a common ſorrow, the leſſe will ſerve, but if it be ſome ſpeciall, ſome very heavie caſe, the more would be allowed it: for, proportionably with the ſuffering, the conſideration is to ariſe:) To raiſe our conſideration to the full, and to elevate it to the higheſt point, there is upon his Sorrow ſet a Si fuerit ſicut, a note of higheſt eminency: for, Si fuerit ſicut, are words that have life in them, and are able to quicken our conſideration, if it be not quite dead: For by them we are provoked (as it were) to Conſider, and conſidering, to ſee whether ever any Sicut may be found, to ſet by it, whether ever any like it.

For if never any, Our nature is, to regard things exceeding rare and ſtrange; and ſuch as the like whereof is not elſe to be ſeene. Vpon this point point then, there is a Caſe made, as if Hee ſhould ſay, If ever the like, Regard not this; but if never any, be like your ſelves in other things, and vouchſafe this (if not your chiefeſt, yet) ſome Regard.

To enter this Compariſon, and to ſhew it for ſuch. That, are we to do, three ſundry waies: For, three ſundry waies, in three ſundry words, are theſe Sufferings of His here expreſſed: all three within the compaſſe of the Verſe. In the three parts of His Sorrow.

The firſt is, מכ-אם Mac-ob (which wee read Sorrow,) taken from a wound or ſtripe, as all do agree. 1

The ſecond is, עלל Gholel; we read Done to me, taken from a word that ſignifieth Melting in a fornace; as S. Hierome noteth out of the Chaldee (who ſo tranſlateth it.) 2

The third is, הוגה Hoga; where wee read Afflicted, from a word which importeth Renting off, or Bereaving. The old Latine turneth it Vindemiavit me, as a Vine whoſe fruit is all plucked off. The Greeke (with Theodoret) ἀπεψίλωσε με, as a Vine or Tree, whoſe leaves are all beaten off, and is left naked and bare. 3

In theſe three, are comprized His Sufferings, Wounded, Melted, and Bereft, leafe and fruit, (that is) all manner of comfort.

Of all that is penall, or can be ſuffered, the common diviſion is, Senſus & Damni, Griefe for that we feele, or for that we forgoe. For that we feele, in the two former, Wounded in body, Melted in ſoule: for that we forgoe, in the laſt; Bereft all, left neither fruit, nor ſo much as a leafe to hang on Him. 1. Of the qualitie. Firſt, of His Paſſion.

According to theſe three; To conſider His Sufferings, and to begin firſt with the firſt. The paines of His Body, His wounds and His ſtripes. 1. Pœna ſenſus, in the bodie.

Our verie eye will ſoone tell us, no place was left in His Body, where He might be ſmitten, and was not. His skin and fleſh rent with the whips and ſcourges, His hands and feet wounded with the nailes, His head with the thornes, His very heart with the ſpeare-point; all His ſenſes, all His parts loden with whatſoever wit or malice could invent. His bleſſed Body given as an Anvile to be beaten upon, with the violent hands of thoſe barbarous miſcreants, till they brought Him into this caſe; of Si fecerit ſicut. For, Pilates (Ecce Homo!) his ſhewing Him with an Ecce, as if He ſhould ſay, Behold, looke if ever you ſaw the like ruefull ſpectacle: This very ſhewing of his ſheweth plainly, Hee was then come into wofull plight: So wofull, as Pilate verily believed, His very ſight ſo pitifull, as, it would have moved the hardeſt heart of them all to have relented, and ſaid, This is enough, we deſire no more. And this for the wounds of His body, (for on this we ſtand not.) Ioh. 19. 5.

In this one peradventure ſome Sicut may be found, in the paines of the body: but, in the ſecond, the Sorrow of the Soule, I am ſure, none. And indeed, the paine of the Body is but the Body of paine: the verie 2. Pœna ſenſus in the Soule.

Soule

Syra. 15.57. Pro.18.14. Soule of Sorrow and Paine is the Soules Sorrow and Paine. Give me any griefe, ſave the griefe of the mind, ſaith the Wiſe-man: For (ſaith Salomon) The ſpirit of a man will ſuſtaine all his other infirmities, but a wounded ſpirit, who can beare? And of this, this of His Soule, I dare make a Caſe, Si fuerit ſicut.

Ioh.12.27. Luc.22.44. Mar.14.33. Mat.26.38. He began to be troubled in Soule, (ſaith S. Iohn:) To be in an agony, ſaith S. Luke:) To be in anguiſh of mind and deepe diſtreſſe, (ſaith S. Marke.) To have His Soule round about on every ſide invironed with Sorrow, and that Sorrow to the death. Here is trouble, anguiſh, agonie, ſorrow and deadly ſorrow: But, it muſt be ſuch, as never the like: So it was too.

Luc. 22. 44. The eſtimate wherof we may take from the ſecond word of Melting, that is, from His ſweat in the Garden; ſtrange, and the like whereof was never heard or ſeene.

No manner violence offered Him in body, no man touching Him, or being neer Him; in a cold night (for they were faine to have a fire within doores) lying abroad in the aire, and upon the cold earth, to be all of a ſweat, and that ſweat to be Bloud; and not as they call it, Diaphoreticus, a thin faint ſweat, but Grumoſus, of great Drops; and thoſe, ſo many, ſo plenteous, as they went through His apparell and all; and through all, ſtreamed to the ground, and that in great abundance: Read, enquire, and Conſider, Si fuerit ſudor, ſicut ſudor iſte; If ever there were ſweat like this ſweat of His? Never the like ſweat certainly, and therefore never the like Sorrow. Our tranſlation is, Done unto me: but we ſaid, the word properly ſignifieth (and ſo S. Hierome and the Chaldee Paraphraſt read it) Melted me. And truly it ſhould ſeeme by this fearfull ſweat of His, He was neere ſome fornace, the feeling whereof, was able to caſt Him into that ſweat, and to turne His ſweat into drops of bloud. And ſure it was ſo: For ſee, even in the very next words of all to this verſe, He complaineth of Verſe 13. it, Ignem miſit in oſsibus meis, That a fire was ſent into His bones which melted Him, and made that bloudy ſweat to diſtil from Him. That houre, what His feelings were, it is dangerous to define: we know them not, we may be too bold to determine of them. To very good purpoſe it was, that the ancient Fathers of the Greeke Church in their Liturgie, after they have recounted all the particular Paines, as they are ſet downe in His Paſſion, and by all, and by every one of them, called for mercie; doe, after all, ſhut up all with this, Διὰ ἀγνοουμένων καὶ παθῶν καὶ ἁμαρτιῶν ἐλέησον καὶ σῶσον ἡμᾶς, By thine unknowne Sorrowes and Sufferings, felt by Thee, but not diſtinctly knowne by us, Have mercy upon us, and ſave us.

Now, though this ſuffice not, nothing neere; yet let it ſuffice (the time being ſhort) for His paines of Body and Soule. For thoſe of the Body, it may be, ſome may have endured the like: but the ſorrowes of His Soule are unknowne ſorrowes: and for them, none ever have; ever have, or ever ſhall ſuffer the like; the like, or neere the like in any degree.

And

And now to the third. It was ſaid before, To be in diſtreſſe, ſuch diſtreſſe as this was, and to finde none to comfort, nay not ſo much as to regard Him, is all that can be ſaid, to make His ſorrow a Non ſicut. Comfort is it, by which, in the midſt of all our ſorrowes, we are Confortati, that is, ſtrengthened and made the better able to beare them all out. And who is there, even the pooreſt creature among us, but in ſome degree findeth ſome comfort, or ſome regard at ſome bodies hands? For, if that be not left, the ſtate of that partie is (here) in the third word ſaid to be like the tree, whoſe leaves and whoſe fruit are all beaten off quite, and it ſelfe left bare and naked both of the one and of the other.

3 Pœna damni.

And ſuch was our SAVIOVRS caſe in theſe His Sorrowes this day, & that ſo, as what is left the meaneſt of the ſonnes of men, was not left Him: Not a leafe. Not a leafe! Leaves I may well call all humane comforts & regards, whereof He was then left cleane deſolate. 1. His owne, they among whom He had gone about all His life long, healing them, teaching them, feeding them, doing them all the good He could, it is they that cry, Not Him, no, but Barabbas rather; away with Him, His blood be upon us & our children. It is they, that in the midſt of His ſorrowes, ſhake their head at Him; and crie, Ah thou wretch: they, that, in His moſt diſconſolate eſtate, crie, Eli, Eli; in moſt barbarous manner; deride Him, and ſay, Stay, and you ſhall ſee Elias come preſently and take Him downe. And this was their Regard.

1 Leaves.

1 Withered leaves. Ioh. 18.40. and 19.15. Matt. 27.25. Mar. 15. 29. 36.

But theſe were but withered leaves. They then, that on earth were neereſt Him of all, the greeneſt leaves and likeſt to hang on, and to give Him ſome ſhade: even of them, ſome bought and ſould Him; others denied and forſwore Him, but all fell away, and forſooke Him. Ἀπεφύλλισε με (ſaith Theodoret) not a leafe left.

2 Green leaves.

But leaves are but leaves, and ſo are all earthly ſtaies. The fruit then, the true fruit of the Vine indeed, the true comfort in all heavineſſe, is Deſuper, from above, is divine conſolation. But Vindemiavit me, (ſaith the Latine Text) even that was, in this His ſorrow, this day bereft Him too. And that was His moſt ſorrowfull complaint of all others: not that His friends upon earth, but that His FATHER from heaven had forſaken Him; that neither heaven nor earth yeelded Him any regard; but that, betweene the paſsioned powers of His ſoule, and whatſoever might any waies refreſh Him, there was a Traverſe drawne, and He left in the ſtate of a weather-beaten tree, all deſolate and forlorne. Evident, too evident, by that His moſt dreadfull crie, which at once moved all the powers in heaven and earth, My GOD, my GOD, why haſt thou forſaken me? Weigh well that crie; conſider it well, and tell me, Si fuerit clamor ſicut clamor iſte, if ever there were cry, like that of His: Never the like crie, and therefore never the like ſorrow.

Fruit.

Matt. 27.46.

It is ſtrange, very ſtrange, that, of none of the Martyrs, the like can be read; who yet endured moſt exquiſite paines in their Martyrdomes:

yet we ſee, with what courage, with what cheerefulneſſe, how even ſinging they are reported to have paſſed through their torments. Will ye know the reaſon? S. Auguſtine ſetteth it downe, Martyres non eripuit, ſed nunquid deſeruit? He delivered not His Martyrs; but, did He forſake them? He delivered not their bodies, but He forſooke not their ſoules, but diſtilled into them the dew of His heavenly comfort; an abundant ſupply for all they could endure. Not ſo here, Vindemiavit me (ſaith the Prophet) Dereliquiſti me (ſaith He Himſelfe:) No comfort, no ſupply at all.

Leo it is, that firſt ſayd it, (and all Antiquitie allow of it,) Non ſolvit unionem, ſed ſubtraxit viſionem. The union was not diſſolved; True, but the beames, the influence was reſtrained; and, for any comfort from thence, His Soule was, even as a ſcorched heath-ground, without ſo much as any drop of dew of divine comfort: as a naked tree, no fruit to refreſh Him within, no leafe to give Him ſhadow without: The power of darkneſſe let looſe to afflict Him: The influence of comfort, reſtrained to relieve Him. It is a Non ſicut, this: it cannot be expreſſed as it ſhould, and as other things may: in ſilence we may admire it, but all our words will not reach it. And though to draw it ſo farre, as ſome doe, is little better than blaſphemy; Yet on the otherſide, to ſhrinke it ſo ſhort, as other ſome doe, cannot be but with derogation to His love, Who, to kindle our love and loving Regard, would come to a Non ſicut, in His ſuffering: For, ſo it was, and ſo we muſt allow it to be. This, in reſpect of His paſsion, Dolor.

Secondly, of the quality of his Perſon.

Now, in reſpect of His Perſon, Dolor meus. Wherof, if it pleaſe you to take a view, even of the Perſon thus wounded, thus afflicted and forſaken, you ſhall then have a perfect Non ſicut. And indeed, the Perſon is here a weighty circumſtance: It is thrice repeated, Meus, Mihi, Me, and we may not leave it out. For, as is the Perſon, ſo is the Paſsion; and any one, even the very leaſt degree of wrong or diſgrace, offered to a Perſon of excellency, is more than a hundred times more, to one of meane condition: So weighty is the circumſtance of the Perſon. Conſider then, how great the Perſon was; And I reſt fully aſſured, here we boldly challenge, and ſay, Si fuerit ſicut.

1 Ioh. 19. 5. Ecce Homo, ſaith Pilate firſt, A man He is, as we are: And were He but a man; nay, were He not a man, but ſome poore dumb creature, it were great ruth to ſee Him ſo handled, as He was.

2 Mat. 17. 19. A man, ſaith Pilate; and a Iuſt man, ſaith Pilates wife. Have thou nothing to doe with that Iuſt Man. And that is one degree further. For, though we pittie the puniſhment even of Malefactors themſelves: yet ever, moſt compaſsion we have of them, that ſuffer and be innocent. And He was Innocent: Pilate and Herod, and the Prince of this world (His very enemies) being His Iudges. Luc. 23. 14. & 15. Ioh. 14. 30.

3 Now, among the Innocent, the more noble the Perſon, the more heavy the ſpectacle. And never doe our bowels yerne ſo much as over ſuch.

ſuch. Alas, alas for that noble Prince, ſaith this Prophet (the ſtile of mourning for the death of a great Perſonage.) And, He that ſuffered here, is ſuch; even a principall Perſon among the ſonnes of men, of the race royall deſcended from Kings: Pilate ſtiled Him ſo, in his Title and Hee would not alter it. Ier. 22. 18. Ioh. 19 22.

Three degrees. But, yet we are not at our true Quantus. For He is yet more: More than the higheſt of the ſonnes of men: for He is THE SONNE OF THE MOST HIGH GOD. Pilate ſaw no further, but Ecce Homo; The Centurion did, Verè, FILIVS DEI erat hic, Now truly, this was the SONNE of GOD. And here, all words forſake us, and every tongue becommeth ſpeechleſſe. 4 Ioh. 19. 5. Mar. 15. 39.

We have no way to expreſſe it, but à minore ad Majus; (Thus.) Of this booke, the booke of Lamentations, one ſpeciall occaſion was, the death of King Ioſias: But behold, a greater than Ioſias is here.

Of King Ioſias (as a ſpeciall reaſon of mourning) The Prophet ſaith, Spiritus oris noſtri, CHRISTVS DOMINI, The very breath of our noſtrills, The LORD's Annointed (for ſo are all good Kings, in their Subjects accompts) He is gone. But behold, here is not CHRISTVS DOMINI, but CHRISTVS DOMINVS, The Lord's CHRIST, but the LORD CHRIST Himſelfe: And that not comming to an Honourable death in battaile, as Ioſias did; But to a moſt vile reproachfull death, the death of Malefactors in the higheſt degree. And not ſlaine outright as Ioſias was: but mangled and maſſacred in moſt pittifull ſtrange manner; wounded in body, wounded in Spirit, left utterly deſolate. O conſider this well, and confeſſe, the Caſe is truly put, Si fuerit Dolor ſicut Dolor meus. Never, never the like Perſon: And if, as the Perſon is, the Paſsion be; Never the like Paſsion to His. Chap. 4. 10.

It is truly affirmed, that any one, even the leaſt drop of bloud, even the leaſt paine, yea, of the body onely, of this ſo great a Perſon, any Dolor with this Meus, had beene enough to make a Non ſicut of it. That is enough; but that is not all: for adde now the three other degrees; Adde to this Perſon, thoſe Wounds, that Sweat, and that Crie, and put all together: And, I make no manner queſtion, the like was not, ſhall not, cannot ever be. It is farre above all that ever was, or can be. Abyſſus eſt: Men may drowſily heare it, and coldly affect it: But Principalities and Powers ſtand abaſhed at it. And for the Quality, both of the Paſsion and of the Perſon, That Never the like; thus much.

Now to proceed to the Cauſe, and to Conſider it: for, without it, we ſhall have but halfe a Regard, and ſcarce that. Indeede, ſet the Cauſe aſide, and the Paſsion (as rare as it is,) is yet but a dull and heavie ſight: we liſt not much looke upon ſpectacles of that kinde, though never ſo ſtrange: they fill us full of penſive thoughts, and make us Melancholike. And ſo doth this, till upon examination 1 Of the cauſe.

I. of the cauſe, we finde, it toucheth us neere; and ſo neere, ſo many waies, as we cannot chooſe, but have ſome regard of it.

1 GOD. What was done to Him, we ſee. Let there now be a queſt of Inqui-
Luk. 22.53. ry to finde, who was doer of it. Who? who, but the Power of darkeneſſe, wicked Pilate, bloody Caiaphas, the envious Prieſts, the barbarous Souldiers? None of theſe are returned here. We are too low, by a great deale, if we thinke to finde it among men. Quæ fecit mihi DEVS, It was GOD that did it. An houre of that day was the houre of the power of darkeneſſe: but, the whole day it ſelfe, is ſaid here plainly, was the day of the wrath of GOD. GOD was a doer in it; wherewith GOD hath afflicted me.

GOD's wrath. GOD afflicteth ſome in Mercie: and others in Wrath. This was in His wrath. In His wrath GOD is not alike to all; Some He afflicteth in His more gentle and milde; others, in His fierce wrath. This was in the verie fierceneſſe of His wrath. His Sufferings, His Sweat and Crie, ſhew as much: They could not come, but from a wrath, Si fuerit ſicut: (For, we are not paſt Non ſicut, no not here in this part it followeth us ſtill, and will not leave us in any point, not to the end.)

2 Sinne. The Cauſe then in GOD, was wrath. What cauſed this wrath? GOD is not wroth, but with ſinne; Nor grievouſly wroth, but with grievous ſinne. And in CHRIST there was no grievous ſinne: Nay, no ſinne at
Not His: all. GOD did it, (the Text is plaine.) And in His fierce wrath, He did it. For Ioh. 18.22. what cauſe? For, GOD forbid, GOD ſhould doe, as did Annas the high
Gen. 18.25. Prieſt, cauſe Him to be ſmitten without cauſe. GOD forbid (ſaith Abraham) the Iudge of the World ſhould doe wrong to any. To any, but ſpecially, to His owne Sonne: That His Sonne, of whom, with thundering voice from Heaven, He teſtifieth, all His joy and delight were in Him, in Him only He was well pleaſed. And how then could His wrath wax hot, to doe all this unto Him?

There is no way to preſerve GODS Iuſtice, and CHRISTS Innocencie both, but to ſay as the Angell ſaid of Him to the Prophet Daniel, The
Dan. 9.26. MESSIAS ſhall be ſlaine, ואין לו ve-en-lo, ſhall be ſlaine, but not for himſelfe.
But other mens. Not for himſelfe? for whom then? For ſome others. He took upon him the perſon of others; and ſo doing, Iuſtice may have her courſe and proceed.

Pitie it is, to ſee a man pay that, he never tooke: but if he will become a Surety, if he will take on him the perſon of the Debtor, ſo he muſt. Pitie to ſee a ſilly poore Lambe lie bleeding to death; but, if it muſt be a ſacrifice (ſuch is the nature of a ſacrifice) ſo it muſt. And ſo CHRIST, though without ſin in Himſelfe, yet as a Surety, as a Sacrifice, may juſtly ſuffer for others, if He will take upon Him their perſons; and ſo, GOD may juſtly give way to His wrath againſt Him.

Ours. And who be thoſe others? The Prophet Eſay telleth us, and telleth it Eſa. 53.4,5, 6. us ſeven times over for failing, He took upon Him our infirmities, and bare our maladies: He was wounded for our iniquities, and broken for our tranſgreſſions.

The

The chaſtiſement of our peace was upon Him, and with His ſtripes were we healed. All we as ſheepe were gone aſtray, and turned every man to His owne way: and the LORD hath layd upon Him, the iniquity of us all. All, all: even thoſe that paſſe to and fro, and for all this, regard neither Him nor His Paſsion.

The ſhort is: It was we, that for our ſinnes, our many, great and grievous ſinnes, (Si fuerit ſicut, the like whereof never were) ſhould have ſwet this Sweat, and have cried this Crie; ſhould have beene ſmitten with theſe ſorrowes by the fierce wrath of GOD, had not He ſtept betweene the blow and us, and latched it in His owne body and ſoule, even the dint of the fierceneſſe of the wrath of GOD. O the Non ſicut of our ſinnes, that could not otherwiſe be anſwered!

To returne then a true verdict. It is we, (we, wretched ſinners that we are) that are to be found the principalls in this act; and thoſe, on whom we ſeeke to ſhift it, to derive it from our ſelves, Pilate and Caiaphas and the reſt, but inſtrumentall cauſes onely. And it is not the executioner that killeth the man properly, (that is, They:) No, nor the Iudge, (which is GOD, in this caſe:) Onely ſinne, Solum peccatum homicida eſt, Sinne only is the murtherer, to ſay the truth; and our ſinnes, the murtherers of the SONNE of GOD: and the Non ſicut of them, the true cauſe of the Non ſicut both of GODS wrath, and of His ſorrowfull ſufferings.

Which bringeth home this our text to us, even into our owne boſomes; and applieth it moſt effectually, to me that ſpeake, and to you that heare, to every one of us: and that with the Prophet Nathan's application; Tu es homo, Thou art the Man, even thou, for whom GOD in His fierce wrath thus afflicted Him. Sinne (then) was the cauſe on our part, Why we, or ſome other for us. 2 Sam. 12. 7.

But yet, what was the cauſe, why He, on His part? what was that, that moved Him thus to become our Surety, and to take upon Him our debt and danger? that moved Him thus to lay upon His Soule, a ſacrifice for our ſinne? Sure, Oblatus eſt quia voluit (ſaith Eſay againe;) Offered He was for no other cauſe, but becauſe He would. For, unleſſe He would, He needed not. Needed not, for any neceſsity of Iuſtice: For, no Lambe was ever more innocent: Nor for any neceſsity of conſtraint; For, twelve Legions of Angells were ready at His command: But, becauſe He would. 3 Love of us. Eſa. 53. 7.

And why would He? No reaſon can be given, but, becauſe He regarded us: (Marke that reaſon.) And what were we? Verily, utterly unworthy even His leaſt regard; not worth the taking up, not worth the looking after. Cum inimici eſſemus (ſaith the Apoſtle) we were His enemies, when He did it; without all deſert before, and without all regard, after He had done and ſuffered all this for us: and yet He would regard us, that ſo little regard Him. Rom. 5. 8.

For when He ſaw us (a ſort of forlorne ſinners) Non priùs natos, quàm damnatos, Damned as faſt as borne; as being by nature children of wrath, and yet ſtill heaping up wrath againſt the day of wrath; by the errors of our life, till the time of our paſsing hence; and then, the Epheſ. 2. 3. Rom. 2. 5.

fierce Wrath of GOD, ready to overwhelme us, and to make us endure the terror and torments of a never-dying death, (another Non ſicut yet:) When (I ſay) He was in this caſe, He was moved with compaſsion over us, and undertooke all this for us. Even then, in His love He regarded us, and ſo regarded us, that He regarded not Himſelfe, to regard us.

Bernard ſaith moſt truly, Dilexiſti me Domine magis quàm te, quando mori voluiſti pro me: In ſuffering all this for us, thou ſhewedſt (LORD) that we were more deare to thee, that thou regardeſt us more, than thine owne ſelfe: And ſhall this Regard finde no regard at our hands?

It was ſinne then, and the hainouſneſſe of ſinne in us, that provoked wrath and the fiercenesſe of His Wrath in GOD: It was love, and the greatneſſe of His love, in CHRIST, that cauſed Him to ſuffer the Sorrowes, and the grievouſnes of theſe Sorrowes, and all for our ſakes.

And indeed, but only to teſtifie the Non ſicut of this His Love, all this needed not, that was done to Him. One, any one, even the very leaſt of all the paines He endured, had beene enough; enough, in reſpect of the Meus; enough, in reſpect of the Non ſicut of His Perſon. For, that which ſetteth the high price on this Sacrifice, is this; That He, which offereth it unto GOD, is GOD. But, if little had beene ſuffered, little would the Love have beene thought, that ſuffered ſo little; and as little regard would have beene had of it. To awake our regard then, or to leave us excuſeleſſe, if we continue regardleſſe, all this He bare for us: that He might as truely make a Caſe of Si fuerit Amor, ſicut Amor meus, as He did before, of Si fuerit Dolor, ſicut Dolor meus. We ſay, we will regard Love; if we will, here it is to regard.

So have we the Cauſes all three: 1 Wrath in GOD: 2 Sinne in our ſelves: 3 Love in Him.

Our Benefit by it Pertaines it not to us?

Yet have we not all we ſhould. For, what of all this? What good? Cui bono? That, that is it (indeed) that we will regard, if any thing: as being matter of Benefit, the only thing (in a manner) the world regardeth: which bringeth us about to the very firſt words againe. For, the very firſt words which we reade, Have ye no regard? are in the Originall, לא אליכם lo alechem, which the Seventy turne (word for word) οὐκ πρὸς ὑμᾶς; and the Latine likewiſe, Nonne ad vos pertinet? Pertaines it not to you, that you regard it no better? For theſe two, (Pertaining, and Regarding) are folded one in another, and goe together ſo commonly, as one is taken often for the other. Then to bee ſure to bring us to Regard, Hee urgeth this: Pertaines not all this to you? Is it not for your good? Is not the benefit yours? Matters of benefit they pertaine to you, and without them, LOVE, and all the reſt may pertaine to whom they will.

Conſider then, the ineſtimable benefit that groweth unto you from from this incomparable Love. It is not impertinent this; Even this; That to us hereby, all is turned about cleane contrary: That by His Stripes, we are healed: by His ſweat, we refreſhed: By His forſaking, we received to Grace. That, this day (to Him, the day of the fierceneſſe of GOD's wrath) is to us the Day of the fulneſſe of GOD's favour, (as the Apoſtle calleth it) A Day of Salvation. In reſpect of that He ſuffered, (I deny not) an evill day; a day of heavineſſe: But, in reſpect of that, which He, by it hath obtained for us, It is, (as we truly call it,) A good Day, a day of joy and Iubilee. For it doth not only ridd us of that wrath, which pertaineth to us for our ſinnes: but further, it maketh that pertaine to us, whereto we had no manner of right at all. 2 Cor. 6. 2.

For, not onely by His death, as by the death of our ſacrifice, by the blood of His Croſſe, as by the blood of the Paſchal Lambe, the Deſtroyer paſſeth over us, and we ſhall not periſh: But alſo by His death, as by the death of our High Prieſt (for He is Prieſt and Sacrifice both) we are reſtored from our exile, even to our former forfeited eſtate in the land of Promiſe. Or rather (as the Apoſtle ſaith) Non ſicut delictum ſic donum: Not to the ſame eſtate, but to one nothing like it: (that is) One far better, than the eſtate, our ſinnes bereft us. For they deprived us of Paradiſe, a place on earth: but by the purchaſe of His bloud, we are entitled to a farre higher, even the Kingdome of Heaven: And His bloud, not onely the bloud of Remiſsion, to acquite us of our ſinnes; but the bloud of the Teſtament too, to bequeath us, and give us eſtate, in that Heavenly Inheritance. Exo. 12. 15. Num. 15. 28. Rom. 5. 15. Mat. 26. 28.

Now whatſoever elſe, this (I am ſure) is a Non ſicut: as that, which the eye, by all it can ſee; the eare, by all it can heare; the heart, by all it can conceive, cannot patterne it, or ſet the like by it. Pertaines not this unto us neither? Is not this worth the Regard? Sure, if any thing bee worthy the Regard, this is moſt worthy of our very worthieſt and beſt Regard.

Thus have we conſidered and ſeene, not ſo much as in this ſight wee might or ſhould, but as much as the time will give us leave. And now, lay all theſe before you, (every one of them a Non ſicut of it ſelfe) the paines of His body, eſteemed by Pilate's Ecce; the ſorrowes of His Soule, by His ſweat in the Garden; the comfortleſſe eſtate of His ſorrowes, by His crie on the Croſſe: And with theſe, His Perſon, as being the SONNE of the Great and ETERNALL GOD. Then ioiue to theſe, the Cauſe: In GOD, His fierce wrath: In us, our heinous ſinnes deſerving it: In Him, His exceeding great Love, both ſuffering that for us, which we had deſerved; and procuring for us, that wee could never deſerve: Making that to appertaine to Himſelfe, which of right pertained to us; and making that pertaine to us, which pertained to Him onely, and not to us at all, but by His meanes alone. And after their view in ſeverall, lay them all together, The recapitulation of all:

together, ſo many Nonſicut's into one, and tell me, if His Complaint be not juſt, and His requeſt moſt reaſonable.

The complaint. The matter juſt.

Yes ſure, His Complaint is juſt, Have ye no regard? None? and yet never the like? None, and it pertaines unto you? No regard? As if it were ſome common ordinary matter, and the like never was? No regard? As if it concern'd you not a whit, and it toucheth you ſo neere? As if He ſhould ſay: Rare things you regard, yea, though they no waies pertaine to you: this is exceeding rare, and will you not regard it? Againe, things that neerely touch you, you regard, though they be not rare at all; this toucheth you exceeding neere, even as neere as your ſoule toucheth you, and will you not yet regard it? Will neither of theſe by it ſelfe move you? Will not both theſe together move you? What will move you? Will Pitie? Here is Diſtreſſe, never the like: Will Duty? Heere is a Perſon, never the like: Will Feare? Here is Wrath, never the like: Will Remorſe? Here are ſinnes, never the like: Will Kindneſſe? Heere is Love, never the like: Will bounty? Heere are Benefits, never the like: Will all theſe? Heere they be all, all above any Sicut, all in the higheſt degree.

The manner earneſt.

Truely the Complaint is juſt, it may move us: it wanteth no reaſon, it may move: and it wanteth no affection in the delivery of it to us, on His part to move us. Sure it moved Him exceeding much: For among all the deadly ſorrowes of His moſt bitter Paſsion; this, even this ſeemeth to be His greateſt of all, and that which did moſt affect Him, even the griefe of the ſlender reckoning moſt men have it in; as little reſpecting Him, as if He had done, or ſuffered nothing at all for them. For lo, of all the ſharpe paines He endureth, He complaineth not, but of this He complaineth, of No regard: That which grieveth Him moſt, that which moſt He moaneth is this. It is ſtrange, He ſhould be in paines, ſuch paines as never any was, and not complaine Himſelfe of them; But of want of regard only. Strange, He ſhould not make requeſt, O deliver me, or Relieve me: But only, O conſider and regard me. In effect, as if He ſaid; None, no deliverance, no reliefe doe I ſeeke: Regard I ſeeke. And all that I ſuffer, I am content with it: I regard it not: I ſuffer moſt willingly, if this I may finde at your hands, Regard.

The regard of the Creatures of it.

Truly, This ſo paſsionate a Complaint may move us; it moved all but us: For moſt ſtrange of all it is, that all the Creatures in heaven and earth, ſeemed to heare this His mournfull Complaint, and in their kind, to ſhew their regard of it: The Sunne in heaven ſhrinking in his light; the earth trembling under it; the very ſtones cleaving in ſunder, as if they had ſenſe and Sympathy of it: and ſinfull men only, not moved with it. And yet, it was not for the Creatures, this was done to Him; to them it pertaineth not: But for us, it was, and to us it doth; and ſhall we not yet regard it? Shall the Creature, and not we? Shall we not?

If we

If we doe not, it may appertaine to us, but we pertaine not to it: It pertaines to all, but all pertaine not to it. None pertaine to it, but they that take benefit by it; and none take benefit by it, no more than by the brazen Serpent, but they that fix their eye on it. Behold, Conſider, and Regard it: the profit, the benefit is loſt without Regard. The benefit, if.

If we doe not, as this was a day of GODS fierce Wrath againſt him, onely for regarding us; ſo there is another day comming, and it will quickly be here, a day of like fierce Wrath againſt us, for not regarding him. And who regardeth the power of his Wrath? He that doth, will ſurely Regard this. The perill, if not. Pſal. 90. 11.

In that day, there is not the moſt careleſſe of us all, but ſhall cry as they did in the Goſpell; Domine, non ad Te pertinet, ſi perimus? Pertaines it not to Thee, Careſt thou not that We periſh? Then would we be glad to pertaine to him, and his Paſsion. Pertaines it to us then, and pertaines it not now? Sure, now it muſt, if then it ſhall. Mar. 4. 38.

Then, to give end to this Complaint, let us grant him his requeſt, and Regard his Paſsion. Let the Rareneſſe of it: The Neereneſſe to us: Let Pitie, or Dutie: Feare, or Remorſe: Love, or Bounty: Any of them, or all of them: Let the juſtneſſe of his Complaint: Let his affectionate manner of Complaining of this, and only this: Let the ſhame of the Creatures regard: Let our Profit, or our Perill: Let ſomething prevaile with us, to have it in ſome regard. The Requeſt, Have ſome Regard.

Some regard! Verily, as his ſufferings, his Love, our good by them are; ſo ſhould our regard be, a Non ſicut too: That is, a regard of theſe, and of nothing in compariſon of theſe. It ſhould be ſo: For, with the benefit, ever the regard ſhould ariſe. 1 Our beſt Regard.

But GOD helpe us poore ſinners, and be mercifull unto us. Our regard is a Non ſicut, indeed: but it is backward, and in a contrary ſenſe: That is, no where ſo ſhallow, ſo ſhort, or ſo ſoone done. It ſhould be otherwiſe, it ſhould have our deepeſt conſideration, this; and our higheſt regard.

But if that connot be had, (our nature is ſo heavy, and fleſh and bloud ſo dull of apprehenſion in Spirituall things) yet at leaſt wiſe, ſome regard. Some, I ſay: The more the better; But in any wiſe, ſome. And not as here, No regard, none at all. Some waies to ſhew, We make accompt of it, to with-draw our ſelves, to void our minds of other matters, to ſet this before us, to thinke upon it, to thanke him for it, to regard him, and ſtay and ſee, whether he will regard us or no. Sure he will, and we ſhall feele our hearts pricked with ſorrow, by conſideration of the cauſe in us, our Sinne: And againe, warme within us, by conſideration of the cauſe in him, his Love; till by ſome motion of Grace He anſwer us, and ſhew that our regard is accepted of Him. 2 At leaſt ſome Regard. Act. 2. 37. Luc. 24. 32.

And this, as at all other times, (for, no day is amiſſe, but at all times, ſome time to bee taken for this duty) ſo ſpecially on this Day; 3 This Day ſpecially.

this Day, which we hold holy to the memorie of His Paſsion, this Day to doe it: to make this Day, the Day of GOD's wrath and CHRIST's ſuffering, a Day to us of ſerious conſideration and regard of them both.

It is kindly to conſider Opus diei in die ſuo, The worke of the Day, in the Day it was wrought: and this Day it was wrought. This Day therfore, whatſoever buſineſſe be, to lay them aſide a little; whatſoever our haſte, yet to ſtay a little, and to ſpend a few thoughts in calling to minde and taking to regard, what this Day the SONNE of GOD did and ſuffered for us: and all for this end, that what He was then, we might not be; and what He is now, we might be for ever:

Which Almightie GOD grant we may doe, more or leſſe, even every one of us, according to the ſeverall meaſures of His Grace in us.

A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED

before the KINGS MAIESTIE, at Greenwich on the XXIX. of March, A. D. MDCV. being GOOD-FRIDAY.

()

HEBR. Chap. XII. Ver. II.

Aſpicientes in Authorem fidei, & Conſummatorem IESVM; qui propoſito Sibi gaudio, ſuſtinuit Crucem, confuſione contempta: atque in dextera Sedis DEI ſedet.

Looking unto IESVS the Author and finiſher of our Faith; who for the joy that was ſet before Him, endured the Croſſe, and deſpiſed the ſhame; and is ſet at the right hand of the Throne of GOD.

SAINT Luke, though he recount at large our SAVIOVR CHRIST's whole ſtorie, yet in plaine and expreſſe termes hee calleth the Paſsion θεωρίαν, a Theorie or Sight, which Sight is it, the Apoſtle here calleth us to looke unto. Luc. 23. 48.

Of our bleſſed SAVIOVR's whole life or death, there is no part but is a Theorie of it ſelfe, well worthie our looking on; for from each part thereof, there goeth vertue to doe us good. From each part: but of all, from the laſt part, or act of His Paſsion. Therefore hath the HOLY GHOST honoured this laſt part only, with this name; and none but this. This, is the theorie ever moſt commended to our view. To be looked on He is, at all times, and in all acts: But, then, and in that act, ſpecially, When for the joy ſet before Him,

He endured the Croſſe, and deſpiſed the ſhame. Then, ſaith the Apoſtle, looke unto Him. Saint Paul being elſewhere carefull to ſhew the Corinthians (and with them, us) CHRIST; and as to ſhew them CHRIST, So to ſhew them, in CHRIST, what that is, that ſpecially concerneth them to know, or looke unto, thus he ſaith: That, though he knew many, very 1 Cor. 2. 2. many things beſides; yet he eſteemed not to know any thing, but IESVS CHRIST, & Hunc crucifixum, Him, and Him crucified. Meaning reſpectivè (as they terme it) that the perfection of our knowledge, is CHRIST: and the perfection of our knowledge, in, or touching CHRIST, is the knowledge of His Croſſe, and Paſſion. That, the chiefe Theorie: Nay in this, all; ſo that, ſee this, and ſee all.

The view whereof, though it bee not reſtrained to any one time; but, all the yeare long, yea, all our life long, ought to be frequent with us; (and bleſſed are the houres, that are ſo ſpent:) yet, if at any time more than other, certainely, this time, this day may moſt juſtly challenge it. For, this day was this Scripture fulfilled, and this day, are our eares filled full with Scriptures about it. So that, though, on other daies, we imploy our eyes otherwiſe; yet, that this day at leaſt, we would (as exceeding fitly the Apoſtle wiſheth us) ἀφορᾶν caſt our eyes from other ſights, and fix
Ioh. 12. 32. them on this object, it being the day dedicate to the lifting up of the SONNE of MAN on high, that He may draw every eye unto Him.

The Occaſion of the ſpeaking, is (ever) the beſt key to every ſpeech. The Occaſion then, of this ſpeech was this. The Apoſtle was to encourage the Hebrewes (and, in them, us all) to hold on the well begun profeſsion of CHRIST and His faith. This our profeſsion he expreſſeth, in the former verſe, in the termes of a Race, or Game; borrowing his ſimilitude from the Games of Olympus. For, from thoſe Games (famous then, over all the world) and by termes from them taken, it was common to all Writers of that Age, both Holy and Humane, to ſet forth, as, in the running, the laborious courſe; ſo, in the price of it, the glorious reward of a vertuous life.

Which race, truely Olympique (becauſe they and we (the moſt of us) either ſtand ſtill, or if we move, doe it but ſlowly, and are ready to faint upon every occaſion) that we may run the ſooner, and attaine the better, two ſights he ſets before us, to comfort us and keep us from fainting. One, a Cloud of Witneſſes, in the firſt Verſe, that is, the Saints in Heaven: Witneſſes, as able to depoſe, this race may be runne, and this prize may be wonne, for they have runne the one, and wonne the other long agoe. Theſe looke on us now, how well we carrie our ſelves; and we to looke to them, that we may carrie our ſelves well in the courſe we have undertaken.

On which Cloud when we have ſtaid our eyes awhile, and made them fit for a cleerer Object, he ſcattereth the cloud quite, and ſets us up a ſecond, even our bleſſed SAVIOVR His own ſelfe. And here he willeth us ἀφορᾶν, to turne our eyes from them, and to turne them hither, and to faſten them here, on IESVS CHRIST, the Author and finiſher of our faith.

As

As if He ſhould ſay; If you will indeed ſee a ſight once for all, looke to Him. The Saints, though they be Guides to us, yet are they but followers to Him. He, the Ἀρχηγὸς the Arch-guide, leader of them, and us all: Looke on Him. They but Well-willers to our faith, but neither Authors nor Finiſhers of it: He, both. Both Author to call us to it, and ſet us in it; and Finiſher to helpe us through it, and reward us for it: Looke to Him. Hunc aſpicite, is the Apoſtles voice, the voice that commeth out of this cloud; for, it is the wiſh of them all, even all the Saints, Hunc aſpicite. At His appearing therefore, the cloud vaniſheth. There is a time when Saint Iames may ſay, Take (my brethren) the Prophets for an example: But when He commeth forth that ſaid, Exemplum dedi vobis, I have given you an example; Exemplum ſine exemplo, an example above all examples; when He commeth in place, Sileat omnis caro, Let all fleſh keepe ſilence. Let all the Saints, yea, the Seraphins themſelves cover their faces with their wings, that we may looke on Him, and let all other ſights goe.

Iam. 5. 10. Ioh. 13. 15. Zac. 2. 13. Eſa. 6. 2.

Let us then turne aſide to ſee this great Sight. The principall parts thereof are two: 1 The ſight it ſelfe (that is) the Thing to be ſeen: 2 and the Sight of it (that is) the Act of ſeeing it, or looking on it. The Diviſion I.

The whole Verſe (ſave the two firſt words) is of the Object or Spectacle propounded. IESVS the Author, &c. The two firſt words ἀφορῶντες εἰς, is the other, the Act, or Duety enjoined.

But as in many other caſes, ſo heere, Et erunt primi noviſſimi, the firſt muſt be laſt. For, though the Act (in the verſe) ſtand formoſt, yet (in nature) it is laſt, and ſo to be handled. We muſt have a thing firſt ſet up before our eyes, before we can ſet our eyes upon it.

Of the Object then firſt, This Object is IESVS: Not barely, but with His double addition of 1 the Author, 2 the Finiſher of our faith, IESVS: And in Him more particularly, two Theories or Sights: 1. Of His Paſſion: 2. Of His Seſsion. 1. His Paſſion, in theſe words: Who for the joy, &c. 2. His Seſsion, in theſe: And is ſet, &c.

In the Paſſion, two things He pointeth at: 1 What He ſuffered, 2 and what moved Him to it. 1. What He ſuffered: The Croſſe and Shame: the Croſſe He endured; the ſhame He deſpiſed. 2. And what moved Him; For a certaine joy ſet before Him.

Then is to follow the Act or Duety of looking on this ſight, ἀφορῶντες εἰς 1. Wherein firſt, the two Propoſitions, 1 Ἀπὸ and 2 Εἰς, From and To: To looke from, and to looke to. 2. Then the two Verbes: 1 One in the Verſe expreſſed (that is) Ὁρᾶν in ἀφορῶντες. 2 The other of neceſsitie implied: for, we have never a Verbe in all the Verſe. Ἀφορῶντες is a Participle, and but ſuſpendeth the ſentence, till we either looke backe to the Verſe before; and ſo it is 1 Vt curramus: or to the verſe next after; and ſo it is 2 Ne fatigemur. In the one, is the Theorie or Sight we ſhall ſee, thus looking. In the other, the praxis of this theorie; What this ſight is to work in us: and II.

that is a motion, a ſwift motion Running: So to look on it, that we runne; and ſo to runne, that we faint not.

And, if the time will give leave, if our allowance will hold out, then we will take a ſhort view of the Seſſion: That He is ſet downe: Wherein is 1 reſt and eaſe oppoſed to His Croſſe, where He hung in paine. 2 And in a throne: wherein is glorie oppoſed to ſhame. 3 And at the right hand of GOD, wherein is the fulneſſe of both the joy wherein He ſitteth, and the joy which was ſet before Him, and which is ſet before us.

I. The Object. The Author, & Finiſher of our Faith, IESVS.

TO give the better aſpect to the Party whom He preſenteth to our view, that with better will we may behold Him, before He name His name, He giveth Him this double addition, as it were diſplaying an Enſigne, proclaiming His Stile before Him: wherof theſe two are the two colours, 1 The Author, 2 The finiſher of our faith, IESVS.

Author and finiſher are two titles, wherein the HOLY GHOST oft ſetteth Him forth, and wherin He ſeemeth to take ſpeciall delight. In the very letters, He taketh to Him the name of [a] Alpha the Author, and again of Omega the Fniſher of the Alphabet. From letters go to words: there is He [b] Verbum in principio, the Word at the beginning: And He is [c] Amen too, the word at the end. From words to book's: [d] In capite libri ſcriptũ eſt de me, In the very front of the book He is: and He is [e] ἀνακεφαλαίωσις, the recapitulation, or concluſion of it too. And ſo, go to Perſons: there He is [f] Primus and noviſſimus, the firſt and the laſt. And from Perſons to Things: and there He is, the [g] Beginning and the end; whereof ἀρχὴ the beginning is in ἀρχηγὸς the Author; and τέλος the end is in τελειωτὴς the Finiſher. The firſt beginning, á quo, He; by whom all things are made: and the laſt end He; Per or propter quem, by, for, or through whom all things are made perfect.

a Apoc. 1.8. 11. Apoc. 21.6. 22.13. b Ioh. 1.1. c Apoc. 3.14. d Pſal. 40.7. e Eph. 1.10. f Apo. 1.17. g Apoc. 1.8. h Coloſ. 1. 16.

Both theſe He is, in all things. And, as in all things elſe, ſo in faith, whereto they are here applied moſt fully and fitly of all other. Therefore looke not aſide at any in heaven or earth, for matter of Faith; looke full upon Him: He is worth the looking on, with both your eyes: He hath matter for them both.

The honor that Zorobabel had in the materiall, is no leſſe truly His in the Spirituall Temple of our faith: Manus Ejus, His hands have laid the corner ſtone of our beleefe, and His hands ſhall bring forth the head-ſtone alſo, giving us the end of our faith, which is the Salvation of our Soules.

Zac. 4.9.

Of our faith, and of the whole race of it He is the Author, caſting up His glove at the firſt ſetting forth: He is the Finiſher, holding out the price at the gole end. By His authoritie it is, our courſe is begunne: we runne not without warrant. By His bounty, it ſhall bee finiſhed and crowned in the end: we runne not in vaine, or without hope of reward.

But,

But, what is this title to the point in hand? So, as nothing can bee more. Author and Finiſher, they are the two points that move us to looke to Him. And the very ſame are the two points, wherein we are moved to be like to Him.

To fixe our eye, to keepe it from ſtraying, to make us looke on Him full, He telleth us, He is both theſe. In effect, as if He ſaid, ſcatter not your ſight, looke not two wayes, as if He (I ſhew you) were to beginne, and ſome other make an end. He (I ſhew you) doth both.

His maine end being to exhort them, as they had begunne well, ſo, well to perſevere; to very good purpoſe, he willeth them to have an eye to Him, and His example, who firſt and laſt, ἀπὸ φάτνης ἀχρὶ σταυροῦ, from the cratch to the Croſſe, from S. Luk's time [a] quo cœpit IESVS facere & docere, that He began to doe and teach, to [b] S. Iohn's time, that He cried conſummatum eſt, gave them not over [c] ſed in finem uſq; dilexit eos, but to the end loved them. And ſo muſt they Him, if the doe Him right. Both, ſet out with Him, as Author by a good beginning; and hold out with Him, as Finiſher, to a farre better end; and follow Him, in both, who is both. Were He Author onely, it would ſerve to ſtep forth well at the firſt. But He is Finiſher too: therefore, we muſt hold out to the laſt. And not rend one of them from the other, ſeeing He requireth both: not either, but both: and is (indeed) IESVS, a SAVIOVR of none but thoſe, that follow Him as Finiſher too, and are therfore marked in the [d] forehead with TAU the laſt letter of the hebrew, as He Himſelfe is OMEGA, the laſt of the Greeke Alphabet. This is the Party, He commendeth to our view; IESVS, the Author and the Finiſher of our faith. For theſe two, to looke upon Him: and, in theſe two, to be like unto Him.

[b] Iob. 19.30.
[c] Ioh. 13.1.
[d] Eze. 9.4. His Paſsion.

Our Sight then is IESVS: and in IESVS what? You have called us hither (ſay they in the Canticles) to ſee your Shulamite, what ſhall we ſee in Him? What? (ſaith the Eſpouſe) but as the companie of an armie (that is) many legions of good ſights, an Ocean or bottomleſſe depth of manifold high perfections. We ſhall loſe our ſelves, we ſhall be confounded to ſee in Him, all that may be ſhewed us: the Object is too great. Two peeces therefore He maketh choice of, and but two; and preſenteth Him to our eye in two formes only; [1] As hanging on the Croſſe; [2] As ſitting on the throne. [1] His Paſsion, and [2] His Seſsion; theſe two. And theſe two, with very good and perfect correſpondence to the two former. By the Croſſe, He is Author: By the Throne, He is Finiſher of our faith. As Man on the Croſſe, Author: As GOD on the Throne, Finiſher. Author, on the Croſſe: there he paid the price of our admitting. Fniſher, on the throne: there He is the prize to us of our courſe well performed, of the well finiſhing our race, the race of our faith.

1 Cant. 6.13.

And ſure, with right high wiſedome hath the HOLY GHOST, being to exhort us to a race, combined theſe twaine. For, in theſe twaine, are compriſed the two maine motives, that ſet all the world on running, 1 Love, and 2 Hope. The Love He hath to us, in His Paſsion on the Croſſe. The Hope we have of Him, in His Seſſion on the Throne. Either of theſe alone, able to move; but, put them together, and they will move us, or nothing will.

1. The Motives therto. 1. Love.

1. Love firſt: What moveth the Mother to all the travell and toyle ſhee taketh with her Child? Shee hopes for nothing, ſhe is in yeares (ſuppoſe;) ſhe ſhall not live to receive any benefit by it: It is Love and Love only. Love, firſt.

2. Hope.

2. And then hope: What moveth the Merchant, and ſo the Husbandman, and ſo the Military-man, and ſo all the reſt? All the ſharpe ſhowres and ſtormes they indure, they love them not: It is hope, and hope only of a rich returne.

If either of theſe will ſerve us, will prevaile to move us, heere it is. Eph. 5. 2. Here is Love; Love in the Croſſe: Who loved us, and gave Himſelfe for us, Apoc. 3. 21. a Sacrifice on the Croſſe. Heere is Hope; hope in the Throne: To Him that overcommeth will I give, to ſit with me in my Throne. If our eye be a Mothers eye, heere is Love worth the looking on. If our eye be a Merchants eye, here is hope worth the looking after. I know, it is true, that verus amor vires non ſumit de ſpe. (It is Bernard:) Love if it be true indeed, as in the Mother, receiveth no manner ſtrength from hope. Ours is not ſuch; but faint and feeble and full of imperfection: Here is hope therefore, to ſtrengthen our weake knees, that we may runne the more readily, to the high price of our calling.

2. What he ſuffered.

To begin then with His Love, the love of His Paſſion (the peculiar of this Day.) In it, we firſt look, to what He ſuffered; and that is of two ſorts: 1 The Croſſe, He indured: 2 The ſhame, He deſpiſed. 3 And then with what mind: for the mind is worth all; and love in it, ſheweth it ſelfe (if not more) as much as in the ſuffering it ſelfe: but certainly, more. And this is His mind, propoſito ſibi gaudio, as cheerfully as if it had bin ſome matter of joy. Of both firſt jointly under one. Then ſeverally each by it ſelfe.

1. The Croſſe and ſhame jointly.

Two things are to us moſt precious, 1 our Life and 2 our Reputation: Pari paſſu ambulant (ſaith the Lawyer) they goe arme in arme, and are of equall regard, both. Life is ſweet; The Croſſe coſt Him His life. Honour is deare; Shame bereft Him His honour. In the race, which before us and for us our Bleſſed SAVIOVR ran, theſe two great blocks, 1 Death and 2 Diſgrace were in His way. Neither ſtayed Him: to teſtifie His Love, over both He paſſed. Put His ſhoulders under the Croſſe and endured it, to the loſſe of His life. Set His foot upon ſhame and deſpiſed it, to the loſſe of His honour. Neither one nor other, life or honour, held He deare, to doe us good. O, if we ſhould hazard but one of theſe two, for any creature living, how much adoe would we make of it, and reckon the party eternally obliged to us! Or if any ſhould venture them for us, we ſhould be be the better, every time we ſaw him. O that it might be ſo here! O that we would meet this Love with the like meaſure! Certainly, in his Paſſion, the love of us triumphed, over the love of his life, and honour both.

One view more of both theſe under one, and we ſhall by theſe two diſcover two other things in our ſelves, for which, very agreeable it was, he ſhould ſuffer theſe two, that by theſe two of His, for thoſe two of ours, he might make a full ſatisfaction. It will ſhew a good congruitie between our ſickneſſe and his ſalve, betweene our debt and his diſcharge. 2

The Mother-ſinne then, the ſinne of Adam and Eve, and their motives to it, are the lively image of all the after-births of ſinne, and the baits of ſinne for ever. Now, that which moved them to diſobey, was partly pleaſure, and partly pride. Pleaſure; O the fruit was delightfull to ſee and to taſte. Pride: Eritis ſicut Dii, it promiſed an eſtate equall to the Higheſt. Behold then (in His Paſſion) for our pleaſure, His paine; and for our pride, His ſhame and reproach. Behold Him in His patience, enduring pain, for our wicked luſt; in His humility, having ſhame powred on Him, for our wretched pride. [a] The LORD of Life ſuffering death; [b] The LORD of glory, vile and ignominious diſgrace. [c] Tanquam Agnus, (ſaith the Prophet of Him) as a Lambe, pitifully ſlaughtered: [d] Tanquam vermis (ſaith He of Himſelfe) as a worme, ſpitefully trod upon. So, by His enduring paines and painfull death, expiating our unlawfull pleaſure: and, by His ſuſtaining ſhame, ſatisfying for our ſhamefull pride. Thus may we, under one, behold our ſelves, and our wretched demerits, in the mirrour of His Paſſion. Gregory ſaith well: Dicendum erat, quantum nos dilexit, ne diffidere; Dicendum erat & quales, ne ſuperbire & ingrati eſſe: How greatly He loved us, muſt be told us, to keepe us from diſtruſt: And what we were when He ſo loved us, muſt be told us, to hold us in humility, to make us everlaſtingly thankfull. Thus farre both under one view. Gen.3.6.5. [a] Act.3.15. [b] 1 Cor.2.8. [c] Ier.11.19. [d] Pſal.22.6.

2 The Croſſe and ſhame ſeverally.

Now are we to part them, to ſee them apart. Wee ſhall have much adoe to do it, they are ſo folded and twiſted together. In the Croſſe, there is ſhame; and in ſhame, there is a Croſſe, and that a heavy one.

The Croſſe, the Heathen termed, Cruciabile lignum, a tree of torture: but they called it alſo, arborem infœlicem, & ſtipitem infamem, a wretched infamous tree withall. So it was in His Crowne, the thorns pricked Him; there was paine: the Crowne it ſelfe was a meere mockerie, and matter of ſcorne. So, in His Robe; His purple bodie underneath in great paine certainely: His purple Robe over it, a garment of ſhame and diſgrace. All along the Paſſion, thus they meet ſtill together. In a word: the prints of His Paſſion, the Apoſtle well calleth Stigmata CHRISTI: Both, are in that word: not onely wounds and ſo grievous; but baſe and ſervile markes, and ſo ſhamefull; for, ſo are ſtigmata. Thus, ſhame and Croſſe, and Croſſe and ſhame runne interchangeably. Gal.6.17.

Yet, ſince the HOLY GHOST doth ſhew us them ſeverally, ſo to ſee them, them, as He ſhewes them. Enduring is the act of patience; and patience hath paine for her object. Deſpiſing ſhame is the propertie of humilitie, even

The Croſſe. of the higheſt humilitie; Not onely ſpernere ſe, but ſpernere ſe ſperni. Firſt then wee muſt ſee the paine, His patience endured; that is meant by the Croſſe: and then ſee the deſpiſing, His humilitie deſpiſed; that is meant by the ſhame. Firſt then of His Croſſe.

It is well knowne, that CHRIST and His Croſſe were never parted; but that, all His life long was a continuall croſſe. At the very Cratch, His Croſſe firſt began. There, Herod ſought to doe that which Pilate did; even to end His life before it began. All His life after (ſaith the Apoſtle in Verſe 3. the next Verſe) was nothing but a perpetuall gain-ſaying of ſinners: which we call croſsing; and profeſſe, we cannot abide, in any of our ſpeeches or purpoſes to be croſſed. He was. In the Pſalme of the Paſsion (the XXII.) in the very front or inſcription of it, Hee is ſet forth unto us under the terme of a Hart, Cervus matutinus, a morning Hart (that is) a Hart rowſed early in the morning: As, from His birth He was by Herod, and hunted and chaſed all His life long; and this day brought to His end, and as the poore Deere, ſtricken and wounded to the heart. This was His laſt, laſt and worſt: and, this we properly call his Croſſe, even this dayes ſuffering. To keepe us then to our day, and the Croſſe of the day. He endured the Croſſe.

He endured. Very enduring it ſelfe, is durum: Durum pati. Eſpecially, for Perſons of high power or place, as the SONNE of GOD was. For great Perſons to doe great things, is no great wonder: Their very Genius naturally inclineth to it. But, to ſuffer any ſmall thing, for them, is more than to doe many great. Therefore, the Prophet placeth his morall fortitude, and the Divine, his Chriſtian obedience, rather in ſuffering, than in doing. Suffering is (ſure) the more hard of the twaine. He endured.

If it be hard to endure, it muſt be more hard to endure hard things: And of all things hard to be endured, the hardeſt is death. Of the Philoſophers πεντὲ φοβερὰ, five fearefull things, it is the moſt fearfull: And what will not a man? Nay, what will not a woman weake and tender, in Phyſicke, in Chirurgerie endure, not to endure Death? He endured death.

And, that, if He endured, and no more but that, it might ſuffice; it is worth all we have; for, all we have, we will give for our life. But not Phil. 2. 8. death only, but the kind of death is it. Mortem, mortem autem Crucis (ſaith the Apoſtle, doubling the point:) Death He endured, even the death of the Croſſe.

The Croſſe is but a little word; but of great contents: but few letters; but in thoſe few letters, are contained, multa dictu gravia, perpeſſu aſpera, heavy to be named, more heavie to be endured. I take but the foure things aſcribed by the HOLY GHOST to the Croſſe, anſwerable to the foure ends or quarters of it. 1 Sanguis Crucis (Coloſ. 1. 20.) 2 Dolores Crucis (Acts 1. 2.) 3 Scandalum Crucis (Gal. 5. 11.) 4 Maledictum Crucis (Gal. 3. 13.)

that

that is, The death of the Croſſe is all theſe foure, a [1]bloudy, [2] dolefull, [3] ſcandalous, [4] accurſed death.

1. Though it be but a cold comfort, yet a kind of comfort it is (if dye we muſt) that our death is mors ſicca, a drie; not ſanguis Crucis, not a bloudie death. 2. We would dye, when we dye, an eaſie, (not ὠδῖνες σαυρῶ) not a tormenting death. 3. Wee deſire to dye, with credit, if it might be; if not, without ſcandall, (ſcandalum Crucis.) 4. At leaſt-wiſe to goe to our graves, and to dye by an honeſt, ordinary, and by no meanes, by an accurſed death, (maledictum Crucis.) In the Croſſe, are all theſe; all foure. The two firſt are in the Croſſe: The two latter, in the ſhame. For, the Croſſe and the ſhame are (in very deed) two Croſſes: the ſhame, a ſecond Croſſe of it ſelfe.

To ſee then, as in a ſhort time, ſhortly. That of the Poet (nec ſiccâ morte Tyranni) ſheweth plainly, it is no poore priviledge, to dye without effuſion of bloud. And ſo it is. 1. For, a bleſsing it is, and our wiſh it is, we may live out our time, and not dye an untimely death. Where there is effuſion of bloud, there is ever an untimely death. 1

2. Yet every untimely death is not violent: but a bloudy death is violent and againſt nature; and wee deſire to pay Nature her debt by the way of Nature. 2

3. A violent death one may come to, as in warre (ſanguis belli, beſt ſheweth it) yet by valour, not by way of puniſhment. This death is penall: not (as all death) ſtipendium peccati; but (as evill mens death) vindicta ſceleris, an execution for ſome Capitall offence. 3

4. And not every crime neither: Fundetur ſanguis is the puniſhment of Treaſon and other more heynous crimes, to dye embrued in their owne bloud. And even they that dye ſo, dye not yet ſo evill a death, as doe they that dye on the Croſſe. It is another caſe, where it is ſanguis mortis, the bloud and life goe away together at once; another, when it is ſanguis Crucis, when the bloud is ſhed, and the party ſtill in full life and ſenſe, as on the Croſſe it was: the bloud firſt, and the life a good while after. This is ſanguis Crucis, an [1] untimely, [2] violent, [3] penall, [4] penall in the higheſt degree: there, bleeding out His bloud before He dye, and then dye.

When bloud is ſhed, it would be no more than needs: ſhed it would be, not powred out. Or if ſo, at one part (the necke or throat:) not at all parts at once. But, here was fundetur, havock made at all parts, His Paſſion (as He termeth it) a ſecond Baptiſme, a River of bloud; and He even able to have bin baptized in it, as He was in Iordan. And where it would be Summa parcimonia etiam viliſſimi ſanguinis, no waſte, no not of the baſeſt bloud that is; waſte was made here. And of what bloud? Sanguis IESV, the bloud of IESVS: and who was He? Sure, by vertue of the union Perſonall, GOD; and ſo, this bloud, bloud of GODS owne bleeding; every droppe whereof was precious, more precious than (that, whereof it was the price) the world it ſelfe: Nay, more worth than many worlds; yea, if Mar. 10. 38.

they were ten thouſand. Yet was this bloud waſtfully ſpilt, as water upon the ground. The fundetur and the qui here, will come into conſideration, both. This is ſanguis Crucis : and yet, this is not all neither ; there is more yet.

For, the bloud of the Croſſe, was not onely the bloud of Golgotha, but the bloud of Gabbatha too. For, of all deaths, this was peculiar to this death, the death of the Croſſe ; that they that were to be crucified, were not to be crucified alone (which is the bloud of Golgotha :) but they muſt bee whipped too, before they were crucified, which is the bloud of Gabbatha ; a ſecond death, yea worſe than death it ſelfe. And in both theſe places Hee bled, and in either place twice. They rent His body with the [1] whips, they goard His head with the [2] thornes : both theſe in Gabbatha. And againe, twice in Golgotha; when they [1] nailed His hands & His feet; when He was [2] thruſt to the heart with the ſpeare. This is ſanguis Crucis. It was to be ſtood on a little : we might not paſſe it : It is that, whereon our faith de-
Rom. 3. 25. pends, Per fidem in ſanguinem Ipſius : By it, he is Author of our faith. Faith
Coloſſ. 1. 20. in GOD, and Peace with GOD, both : Pacificans in ſanguine Crucis, Pacifying all with the bloud of the Croſſe.

Now this bloudy whipping and nayling of His, is it which bringeth in the ſecond point of paine : that it was not bloud alone without paine, as in the opening of a veine ; but it was bloud and paine both. The tearing and mangling of his fleſh, with the whippes, thornes and nailes, could not chooſe but be exceeding painfull to Him. Paines (we know) are increaſed much by cruell, and made more eaſie by gentle handling, and even the worſt that ſuffer, we wiſh their execution as gentle, and with as little rigour as may be. All rigour, all cruelty was ſhewed to Him ; to make His paines the more painfull. In Gabbatha, they did not whip Him (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) they ploughed His back, and made (not ſtripes, but long furrowes upon it. They Pſal. 129. 3. did not put on His wreath of thornes, and preſſe it downe with their hands, but beat it on with batts, to make it enter through skinne, fleſh, skull, and all. They did not (in Golgotha) pierce his hands and feet, but made Pſal. 22. 16. wide holes (like that of a ſpade) as if they had beene digging in ſome ditch.

Theſe were paines ; and cruell paines : But yet theſe, are not ὠδῖνες (the Holy Ghoſts word in the Text ;) Thoſe are properly ſtraining paines, paines of torture. The Rack is deviſed as a moſt exquiſite paine, even for terror.
Pſal. 22. 14. And the Croſſe is a rack, whereon He was ſtretched, till (ſaith the Pſalme) all his bones were out of joynt. But even to ſtand (as He hung) three long hours together, holding up but the armes at length, I have heard it avowed of ſome that have felt it to be a paine ſcarce credible. But, the hands and the feet being ſo cruelly nayled (parts, of all other, moſt ſenſible, by reaſon of the texture of ſinewes, there, in them moſt) it could not but make His paine out of meaſure painefull. It was not for nothing, that dolores acerrimi dicuntur cruciatus (ſaith the Heathen man) that the moſt ſharpe and bitter paines of all other, have their name from hence, and are called Cruciatus, paines like thoſe of the Croſſe. It had a meaning, that they gave Him, that Hee had (for His welcome to the Croſſe) a Cuppe mixt with Gall or Myrrhe; and (for His farewell) a ſpoonge of vinegar: to ſhew by the one, the bitterneſſe; by the other, the ſharpneſſe of the paines of this painfull death.

Now, in paine (we know) the only comfort of gravis, is brevis; if we be in it, to be quickly out of it. This, the Croſſe hath not; but is mors prolixa, a death of dimenſions, a death long in dying. And it was therefore purpoſely choſen by them. Blaſphemie they condemned Him of; then was He to bee ſtoned: That death would have diſpatched him too ſoone. They indited him a new of Sedition; not, as of a worſe fault, but onely becauſe crucifying belonged to it: For, then He muſt be whipped firſt, and that liked them well: and then, He muſt dye by inch-meale; not ſwallow his death at once, but taſte it (as Chap. II. 9.) and take it downe by little and little. And then hee muſt have His legges and armes broken; and ſo was their meaning, His ſhould have been: Elſe (I would gladly know) to what purpoſe provided they to have a Veſſell of vinegar ready in the place (Ioh. XIX. 29.) but onely, that he might not faint with loſſe of bloud, but be kept alive till they might heare his bones craſh under the breaking, and ſo feed their eyes with that ſpectacle alſo. The providence of GOD (indeed) prevented this laſt act of cruelty: Their will was good though. All theſe paines are in the Croſſe: but, to this laſt ſpecially, the word in the Text hath reference ὑπέμεινε, which is, He muſt, μεῖναι ὑπὸ, tarrie, ſtay, abide under it: So dye, that He might feele Himſelfe dye, and endure the paines of an enduring death. Chap. 2. 9.

And yet, all this is but halfe, and the leſſer halfe by farre, of Cruciatus crucis. All this, His body endured: was His ſoule free the while? No; but ſuffered as much: As much? nay more, infinitely much more, on the ſpirituall; than His body did, on the materiall Croſſe. For, a ſpirituall Croſſe there was too: all grant a Croſſe; beſide that which Simon of Cyren did helpe him to beare. Great were thoſe paines, and this time too little to ſhew, how great; but, ſo great, that in all the former, He never ſhrunk, nor once complained, but was, as if he ſcarce felt them. But when theſe came they made Him complaine and crie aloud, κραυγὴν ἰσχυρὰν, a ſtrong crying. In all thoſe, no bloud came, but where paſſages were made for it to come out by: but in this, it ſtrained out all over, even at all places at once. This was the paine of the Preſſe (ſo the Prophet calleth it, Torcular:) wherewith as if He had beene in the wine-preſſe, all his garments were ſtained and goared with bloud. Certainly, the bloud of Gethſemane was another manner of bloud than that of Gabbatha; or that of Golgotha either; and that was the bloud of His internall Croſſe. Of the three Paſſions, that was the hardeſt to endure: yet that did He endure too. It is that, which beleefe it ſelfe doth wonder, how it doth beleeve; ſave that it knoweth, as well the Love as the Power of GOD to be without bounds; and His wiſedome as able to find, Heb. 5. 7. Eſa. 63. 2. 1.

how through love it might be humbled, as exalted through power, beyond the uttermoſt that mans wit can comprehend.

The Shame. And this is the Croſſe He endured. And if all this might have been endured, ſalvo honore, without ſhame or diſgrace, it had been ſo much the leſſe. But now, there is a further matter yet to be added, and that is ſhame. It is hard to ſay, of theſe two, which is the harder to beare; which is the greater Croſſe, the croſſe or ſhame. Or rather, it is not hard. There is no meane party in miſerie, but, if he be inſulted on, his being inſulted on more grieves him, than doth the miſery it ſelfe: But, to the noble generous nature, to whom Intereſſe honoris eſt majus omni alio intereſſe, the value of his honour is above all value; to him, the Croſſe is not the Croſſe: ſhame, is the Croſſe. And any high and heroicall Spirit beareth any griefe more eaſily, than the griefe of contemptuous and contumelious uſage. King Saul ſhewed it plainly, who choſe rather, to runne upon his owne ſword, than to fall into the hands of the Philiſtines, who (he knew) would uſe him with skorne, as they had done Sampſon before him. And even he (Sampſon too) rather than ſit down between the pillars and endure this, pulled down houſe and all, as well upon his owne head, as theirs that ſo abuſed him. Shame then, is certainly the worſe of the twaine. Now in his death, it is not eaſie to define, whether paine or ſhame had the upper hand: whether greater, Cruciatus or ſcandalum Crucis.

Iud. 16. 25. 30.

1. Was it not a foule diſgrace and ſcandall to offer Him the ſhame of that ſervile baſe puniſhment of the whip; not to be offered to any but to ſlaves and bond-men? Loris? liber ſum (ſaith he in the Comedie, in great diſdaine: as if being free-borne, he held it great skorne to have that once named to him.) Yet, ſhame of being put out of the number of free-borne men, he deſpiſed; even the ſhame of being in forma ſervi.

Phil. 2. 7.

2. That, this is ſervile, may yet be honeſt: Then, was it not yet a more foule diſgrace and ſcandall indeed, to appoint Him, for His death, that diſhoneſt, that foule death, the death of Malefactors, and of the worſt ſort of them? Morte turpiſſimâ (as themſelves termed it) the moſt ſhamefull opprobrious death of all other, that the perſons are ſcandalous that ſuffer it? To take Him as a thiefe, to hang Him betweene two thieves: nay, to count Him worſe than the worſt thiefe in the Gaole; to ſay and to crie, Vivat Barabbas, pereat CHRISTVS, Save Barabbas and hang CHRIST? Yet, this ſhame He deſpiſed too, of being in forma malefici.

3. If baſe, if diſhoneſt, let theſe two ſerve: uſe Him not diſgracefully, make Him not a ridiculum Caput, powre not contempt upon Him. That did they too: and a ſhame it is to ſee the ſhamefull cariage of themſelves all along the whole Tragedy of His Paſſion. Was it a Tragedie, or a Paſſion trow? A Paſſion it was: yet by their behaviour it might ſeeme a may-game. Their ſhouting and out-cries; their harrying of Him about, from Annas to Caiaphas; from him to Pilate; from Pilate to Herod; and from him to Pilate againe:

One

One-while in purple, Pilate's ſuit; another-while in white, Herod's livery: Nipping Him by the cheekes, and pulling off His haire; blindfolding Him and buffeting Him; bowing to Him in deriſion, and then ſpitting in His face, was, as if they had had not the LORD of glorie, but ſome idiot or dizard in hand. Died Abner, as a foole dyeth? (ſaith David of Abner in great regrett) 2 Sam. 3. 33. ô no. Sure, our bleſsed SAVIOVR ſo died; and, that He ſo died, doth equall, nay ſurpaſse even the worſt of His torments. Yet this ſhame alſo He deſpiſed, of being in formâ ludibri.

Is there any worſe yet? There is. For, though contempt be had, yet deſpight is beyond it, as farre as earneſt is beyond ſport: that, was ſport; this, was malice. Deſpight, I call it, when in the middeſt of His miſerie, in the very depth of all His diſtreſſe, they vouchſafed Him not the leaſt compaſsion: but, as if He had been the moſt odious wretched Caitive and abject of men, the very out-caſt of Heaven and Earth; ſtood ſtaring and gaping upon Him, wagging their heads, writhing their mouthes, yea, blearing out their tongues; rayling on Him, and reviling Him, ſcoffing at Him, and ſcorning Him: yea, in the very time of His Prayers deriding Him, even in his moſt mournefull complaint and crie for the verie anguiſh of His Spirit. Theſe vile indignities, theſe ſhamefull villanies, ſo void of all humanitie, ſo full of all deſpight; (I make no queſtion) entered into His ſoule deeper, than either naile or ſpeare did into His bodie. Yet all this He deſpiſed: to be in formâ reprobi, Men hid their faces at this; nay, to ſee this ſight, the ſunne was darkned, drew back his light, the earth trembled, ran one part from the other; the powers of Heaven were moved.

Is this all? No, all this is but Scandalum: there is a greater yet remaining, than ſcandalum; and that is maledictum Crucis: That the death Hee died, was not onely ſervile, ſcandalous, opprobrious, odious; but even execrable and accurſed: Of men, held ſo. For, as if he had been a verie reprobate, in His extreme drought, they denied Him a drop of water (never denied to any but to the damned in hell) and inſtead of it, offered Him vinegar in a ſpunge: and that in the very pangs of death, as one for whom nothing was evill enough.

All this is but man, and man is but man, his glorie is ſhame oftentimes, and his ſhame glorie: But, what GOD curſeth, that is curſed indeed. And this death was curſed by GOD Himſelfe, His owne mouth, as the Apoſtle deduceth, Galath. 3. 13. When all is ſaid wee can ſay, this, this, is the hardeſt point of His ſhame, and the higheſt point of His love in bearing it. CHRISTVS factus eſt maledictum. The ſhame of a curſed death, curſed by GOD, is a ſhame beyond all ſhames; and he that can deſpiſe it, may well ſay conſummatum eſt: there is no greater left for him to deſpiſe. O what contempt was powred upon Him! O how was He in all theſe deſpiſed! Yet He deſpiſed them all, and deſpiſed to be deſpiſed in them all. The higheſt humilitie, Spernere Se ſperni: theſe ſo many waies, ſpernere Se ſperni.

So have we now the Crosse ξύλον δίδυμον, the two maine barres of it 1 Paine and 2 Shame: and either of theſe againe, a Croſſe of it ſelfe; and that double, 1 outward, and 2 inward. Paine; bloudy, cruell, dolorous and enduring: Paine He endured. Shame; ſervile, ſcandalous, opprobrious, odious: Shame He deſpiſed. And beſide theſe, an internall Croſſe: the paſſion of Gethſemane, and an internall ſhame; the Curſe it ſelfe of the Croſſe, Maledictum Crucis. Of theſe, He endured the one; the other He deſpiſed.

3. Quo animo.

Theſe, all theſe: and yet there remaineth a greater than all theſe, even quo animo, with what mind, what having in His mind, or ſetting before His eyes, He did and ſuffered all this. That He did it not utcunq; but propoſito ſibi, with an eye to ſomewhat He aymed at.

We handle this point laſt, it ſtandeth firſt in the Verſe. And ſure, if this, as a figure, ſtand not firſt, the other two are but Ciphers: with it, of value; nothing without it.

To endure all this is very much, howſoever it were. So, to endure it, as to make no reckoning of it, to deſpiſe it, is more ſtrange than all the reſt. Sure, the ſhame was great, how could He make ſo ſmall accompt of it? and the Croſſe heavie; how could He ſet it ſo light? They could not chooſe but pinch Him, and that extremely: and how then could He indure, and ſo indure, that He deſpiſed them? It is the third point; and in it, is adeps arietis, the fat of Rammes, the marrow of the Sacrifice; even the good heart, the free forward minde, the cheareſull affection, wherewith He did all this.

There be but two ſenſes, to take this ἀντὶ in: Neither amiſſe; both very good, take whether you will. Love is in both, and Love in a high meaſure. Ἀντὶ, even either Pro or Præ: Pro, in ſtead; or Præ, in compariſon.

Ἀντὶ Pro, in ſtead of the joy ſet before Him. What joy was that? Ἔξιν γὰρ ἄνωθεν ἐν ἐκείνοις (ſaith Saint Chryſoſtome) for He was in the joyes of Heaven: there He Was, and there He might have held Him. Nothing did or could force Him to come thence, and to come hither thus to be intreated. Nothing but Sic dilexit, or Propter nimiam charitatem quâ dilexit nos; but for it. Yet was He content, being in the forme of GOD, ἀντὶ in ſtead of it, thus to transforme, yea, to deforme Himſelfe into the ſhape of a ſervant, a felon, a foole; nay, of a Caitive accurſed: Content to lay downe His crowne of glory, and ἀντὶ in ſtead of it, to weare a crowne of thornes: Content, what we ſhun by all meanes, that to endure (loſſe of life;) and what we make ſo great a matter of, that to deſpiſe (loſſe of honour.) All this, with the loſſe of that joy and that honour, He enjoyed in Heaven (another manner joy, and Honour, than any we have here) ἀντὶ for this, or in ſtead of this.

Eph. 2. 4.

Phil. 2. 6.

But, the other ſenſe is more praiſed, ἀντὶ, Præ, in compariſon. For indeed, the joy He left in Heaven, was rather παρακειμένη than προκειμένη, joy wher-

in

in He did already ſit, than joy ſet before Him. Vpon which ground, ἀντί, they turne Præ; and that better, as they ſuppoſe. For, that is, in compariſon of a certaine joy: which He comparing with the Croſſe and ſhame and all, choſe rather to goe through them all, than to goe without it. And can there be any joy compared, with thoſe He did forgoe? or, can any joy countervaile thoſe barbarous uſages, He willingly went through? It ſeemeth, there can. What joy might that be? Sure none other, but the joy He had to ſave us, the joy of our ſalvation. For, what was His glorie, or joy, or crown of rejoycing, was it not we? Yes truly; we were His crowne and His joy. In compariſon of this joy He exchanged thoſe joyes, and endured theſe paines: this was the honey that ſweetned His gall: And, no joy at all in it, but this, to be IESVS, the SAVIOVR of a ſort of poore ſinners. None but this: and therfore pitie He ſhould loſe it.

And, it is to be marked, that though to be IESVS, a SAVIOVR, in proprietie of ſpeech, be rather a title, an outward honour, than an inward joy, and ſo ſhould have been præ honore, rather than præ gaudio; yet He expreſſeth it in the terme of joy, rather than that of honour, to ſhew, it joyed Him at the heart to ſave us; and ſo, as a ſpeciall joy, He accounted it.

Sure, ſome ſuch thing there was, that made Him ſo cheerefully ſay to His Father in the Pſalme, [a] Ecce venio, Loe I come: And to His Diſciples in earth, This, this is the Paſſeover, that [b] deſiderio deſideravi, I have ſo longed for (as it were embracing and even welcomming His death:) And which is more, [c] quomodo coarctor! how am I pinched, or ſtreightned, till I bee at it! as if He were in paine, till He were in paine to deliver us. Which joy if ever He ſhewed, in this He did, that He went to His Paſſion with Palmes and with ſuch triumph and ſolemnity, as He never admitted al His life before. And that this His loweſt eſtate (one would thinke it) He calleth His Exaltation, Cum exaltatus fuero. And, when any would thinke, He was moſt imperfect, He eſteemeth (and ſo termeth) it His higheſt perfection, Tertio die perficior. In hoc eſt charitas, here is love: If not here, where? But here it is and that in his higheſt elevation. That the joyes of Heaven ſet on the one ſide; and this poore joy of ſaving us on the other; He quit them, to chooſe this. That thoſe paines and ſhames ſet before Him, and with them this joy, He choſe them rather than forgoe this.

1 Ioh. 4. 10.

Thoſe joyes He forſooke, and this He tooke up; and to take it, tooke upon Him ſo many, ſo ſtrange indignities of both ſorts; tooke them and bare them with ſuch a mind, as He not only endured, but deſpiſed; Nor that neither, but even joyed in the bearing of them, and all to doe us good. So to alter the nature of things, as to find joy in death, whereat all doe mourne; and joy in ſhame, which all doe abhorre, is a wonder like that of the buſh.

Exod. 3.

This is the very life and ſoule of the Paſſion; and all beſides, but the σκελετὸς only, the anatomie, the carkaſſe without it.

II. The Act, or Dutie.

So have we now the whole Object; both what, and with what mind. And, what is now to be done? Shall we not pauſe a while, and ſtay, and looke upon this Theorie yer we goe any further? Yes, let us. Proper to this day is this ſight of the Croſſe. The other (of the throne) may ſtay yet His time a day or two hence.

We are injoyned to looke upon Him: How can we, ſeeing He is now higher than the Heavens, farre out of our ſight, or from the kenning of any mortall eye? Yes, we may for all that. As (in the 27. of the Chapter next before) MOSES is ſaid to have ſeene Him that is inviſible: Not with the eyes of fleſh; ſo, neither he did, or we can: But (as there it is) by faith. So, he did, and we may. And, what is more kindly to behold the Author of faith, than faith? or more kindly for faith to behold, than her Author here at firſt; and her Finiſher there at laſt? Him to behold firſt and laſt; and never to be ſatisfied with looking on Him, who was content to buy us and our eye at ſo deare a rate.

Our eye then is the eye of our minde, which is faith: And our aſpicientes in this, and the recogitantes (in the next Verſe) all one; our looking to Him here, is our thinking on Him there: On Him and His Paſſion over and over againe, Donec totus fixus in corde, qui totus fixus in Cruce, till He be as faſt fixed in our heart, as ever He was to His croſſe; and ſome impreſſion made in us of Him, as there was in Him for us.

In this our looking then, two acts be riſing from the two prepoſitions: One before, ἀπὸ, in ἀφορῶντες, looking from: the other after, εἰς looking upon, or into.

I Looking from: Ἀπὸ.

There is ἀπὸ, from, abſtracting our eye from other Objects to looke hither ſometime. The Prepoſition is not idle, nor the note, but very needfull. For, naturally we put this ſpectacle farre from us, and endure not either oft or long to behold it. Other things there be, pleaſe our eyes better, and which we looke on with greater delight. And we muſt ἀφορᾶν, looke off of them, or we ſhall never ὁρᾶν, looke upon this aright. We muſt (in a ſort) worke force to our nature, and per actum ſelicitum (as they terme it in Schooles) inhibite our eyes, and even weine them from other more pleaſing ſpectacles that better like them, or we ſhall doe no good here; never make a true theorie of it. I meane, though our proſpect into the world be good, and we have both occaſion and inclination to looke thither oft; yet ever and anon to have an eye this way; to looke from them to Him, who, when all theſe ſhall come to an end, muſt be He that ſhall finiſh and conſummate our faith and us, and make perfect both. Yea, though the Saints be faire marks (as at firſt I ſaid) yet even to looke off from them hither, and turne our eye to Him, from all; even from Saints and all. But chiefly, from the baits of Sinne; the concupiſcence of our eyes, the ſhadowes and ſhewes of vanity round about, by which death entreth at our windowes: which unleſſe we can be got to looke from, this ſight will doe us no good; we cannot looke on both together.

Now

Now our theorie, as it beginneth with ἀπὸ, ſo it endeth with, εἰς. Therefore looke from it: that looke to Him: or (as the word giveth it rather) into Him, than to Him. Εἰς, is into, rather than to. Which proveth plainely, that the Paſſion is a peece of Perſpective; and, that we muſt ſet our ſelves to ſee it, if we will ſee it well; and not looke ſuperficially on it: Not on the outſide alone, but ὁρᾶν εἰς, pierce into it, and enter even into the inward workemanſhip of it; even of His internall Croſſe which He ſuffered, and of His entire affection wherewith He ſuffered it. 2 Looking unto: Ε. into.

And we may well looke into Him; Cancellis plenum eſt corpus, His bodie is full of ſtripes, and they are as lattices: Patent viſcera, per vulnera, His wounds they are as windowes, through which we may well ſee all that is within Him. Clavus penetrans factus eſt mihi clavis reſerans (ſaith S. Bernard:) The nailes and ſpeare-head ſerve as keyes to let us in. We may looke into the palmes of His hands, wherein (ſaith the Prophet) He hath graven us, that Hee might never forget us. We may look into his ſide (S. Iohn uſeth the word) opened. Vigilanti verbo (ſaith Auguſtine) a word well choſen, upon good advice; we may through that opening, looke into His very bowells, the bowells of kindneſſe and compaſſion, that would endure to be ſo entreated. Yea, that very heart of His, wherein we may behold, the love of our ſalvation to be the very hearts joy of our SAVIOVR. Eſa. 49.16. Ioh. 19.34.

Thus looking from, from all elſe, to looke into Him, what then? then followeth the participle, we ſhall ſee. What ſhall we ſee? Nay, what ſhall we not ſee? What theorie is there worth the ſeeing, but is there to be ſeene? To recount all, were too long: Two there are in eſpeciall. 2 To ſee ὁρᾶν.

There is a theorie medicinall, like that of the brazen Serpent; and it ſerveth for comfort to the conſcience, ſtung and wounded with the remorſe of ſinne. For, what ſinne is there or can there be ſo execrable or accurſed, but the curſe of the Croſſe; what ſo ignominious or full of confuſion, but the ſhame of it; what ſo corroſive to the conſcience, but the paines of it; what of ſo deepe or of ſo crimſin a dye, but the bloud of it, the bloud of the Croſſe will doe it away? What ſting ſo deadly, but the ſight of this Serpent will cure it? This is a principall theorie; and elſewhere to be ſtood on, but not here. For this ſerveth to quiet the mind; and the Apoſtle (here) ſeeketh to move it, and make it ſtirre.

There is then another theorie beſides, and that is exemplarie for imitation. There He died (ſaith S. Paul) to lay downe for us ἀντίλυτρον, our ranſome: that is the former. There He died (ſaith S. Peter) to leave unto us ὑπογραμμὸν, relinquens nobis exemplum, a paterne an example to follow, and this is it; to this He calleth us; to have a directory uſe of it, to make it our patterne, to view it as our idea. And ſure, as the Church under the Law needed not; ſo neither doth the Church under the Goſpell need any other precept than this one, Inſpice & fac, See and doe according to the theorie 1 Tim. 2.6. 1 Pet. 2.21. Exo. 25.40.

ſhewed thee in the Mount: To them in Mount Sinai; to us in Mount Calvarie.

Were all Philoſophie loſt, the theorie of it might be found there. Were all chaires burnt (Moſes chaire and all) the chaire of the Croſſe is abſolutely able to teach all vertue new againe. All vertues are there viſible: All, if time would ſerve: Now, I name only thoſe five, which are directly in the Text.

1 Faith is named there: It is, it was moſt conſpicuous there to bee ſeene: when being forſaken of GOD, yet He claſpeth (as it were) His armes, faſt about Him, with Eli, Eli, My GOD, My GOD, for all that.
Mat. 27. 46. 2 Patience, in induring the Croſſe. 3 Humility, in deſpiſing the ſhame. 4 Perſeverance, in that it was nothing for Him to be Author, unleſſe He were Finiſher too. Theſe foure. But above theſe and all, that which is the 5 ratio idealis of all, the band and perfection of all, Love, in the ſignature of love, in the joy, which He found in all this: Love, Majorem quâ nemo, to lay down
Ioh. 15. 13. His life: nay, parem cui nemo, in ſuch ſort to lay it downe. Majorem quâ nemo, to doe this for his friends: Parem cui nemo, to do it for his enemies. Notwithſtanding their unworthineſſe antecedent, to do it; and notwithſtanding their unkindneſſe conſequent, yet to doe it. This the chiefe theorie of all; but of Love (chiefly) the moſt perfect of all. For ſure, if ever ought were truly ſaid of our SAVIOVR, this was; that being ſpread and laide wide open on the Croſſe, He is [a] Liber charitatis: Wherein, he that runneth by may read [b] Sic dilexit, and [c] Propter nimiam charitatem, [d] and Ecce quantam charitatem; Love all over, from one end to the other. Every ſtripe as a letter, every naile as a Capitall letter. His [e] livores, as black letters; His bleeding wounds, as ſo many rubrikes, to ſhew upon record His Love to ward us.

[a] Hab. 2. 2.
[b] Ioh. 3. 16.
[c] Eph. 2. 4.
[d] 1 Ioh. 3. 1.
[e] Eſa. 53. 5.

Of which Love the Apoſtle when he ſpeaketh, he ſetteth it out with height and depth, length and bredth (the foure dimenſions of the Croſſe) to
Eph. 3. 18. put us in mind (ſay the ancient Writers) that, upon the extent of the tree, was the moſt exact Love, with all the dimenſions in this kind, repreſented that ever was.

2 That we may runne.

Having ſeene all theſe, what is the end and uſe of this Sight? Having had the theorie, what is the praxis of this theorie? what the concluſion of our contemplation? Looking into, is a participle; it maketh no ſentence, but ſuſpendeth it onely, till we come to a verbe, to which it relateth. That verbe muſt be either the verbe in the verſe before, Vt curramus; or the verbe in the verſe following, Vt ne fatigemur: that, thus looking, we runne; or that thus looking, we tire not. This, is the practice of our theorie.

We ſaid, the uſe was (and ſo, we ſee, it is) to move us, or to make us move: to work in our feet, to worke in them a motion: not any ſlow but a ſwift motion, the motion of running; to runne the race that is ſet before us. The operation it hath (this ſight) is in our facultie motive; if we ſtand ſtill, to cauſe us ſtirre; if we move but ſlowly, to make us run apace: if we run already, never to tire, or give over, till we doe attaine. And by this we may know, whether our theorie be a true one: if this praxis follow of it, it is: if not, a gaze it may be; a true Chriſtian theorie, it is not.

And here firſt our ἀφορᾶν (that is) our looking from, is to worke a turning from ſinne. Sure, this ſpectacle, if it be well looked into, will make, ſinne ſhall not looke ſo well favoured in our eyes, as it did, it will make us, while we live, have a leſſe liking to looke toward it, as being the onely procurer and cauſe of this Croſſe and this ſhame. Nay, not onely, ἀποτρέπειν, to turne our eye from it, but ἀποτρέχειν to turne our feet from it too; and to runne from, yea to flie from it, quaſi à facie colubri, as from the face of a Serpent.

At leaſt-wiſe, if not to runne from it, not to runne to it, as we have: to naile downe our feet from running to ſin, and our hands from committing ſinne, and (in a word) have Saint Peter's practice of the Paſsion, to Ceaſe from ſinne. This abſtractive force we ſhall find and feele: it will draw us from the delights of ſin. And not onely draw us from that, but draw from us too, ſomething; make ſome teares to runne from us, or (if we be drie-eyed, that not them, yet) make ſome ſighs of devotion, ſome thoughts of grace, ſome kind of thankfull acknowledgements to iſſue from our ſoules. Either by way of compaſsion, as feeling that, He then felt; or by way of compunction, as finding our ſelves in the number of the parties, for whom He felt them. It is a proper effect of our view of the Paſsion, this (as S. Luke ſetts it downe, at the very place where he termes it θεωρίαν) that they returned from it ſmiting their breſts as having ſeene a dolefull Spectacle, themſelves the cauſe of it. 1 Pet. 4.1. Luc. 23.48.

Now, as the looking from, worketh a moving from; ſo doth the looking to, a moving to.

For, firſt, who is there that can looke unto thoſe hands and feet, that head and that heart of His, that endured all this, but muſt primâ facie at the firſt ſight ſee and ſay, Ecce quomodò dilexit nos? If the Iewes (that ſtood by) ſayd truely of Him at Lazarus grave, Ecce quomodo dilexit eum! when He ſhedd but a few teares out of His eyes; how much more truely may it be ſaid of us, Ecce quomodò dilexit eos! for whom He hath ſhedd both water and blood; yea, even from His heart, and that in ſuch plenty? And He loving us ſo, if our hearts be not iron; yea, if they be iron, they cannot chooſe but feele the magneticall force of this load-ſtone. For, to a load-ſtone doth He reſemble Himſelfe, when He ſaith of Himſelfe, Where I once lift up, Omnia traham ad me. This vertue attractive is in this ſight, to draw our love to it. Iob. 11. 36. Iob. 12. 32.

With which (as it were the needle) our faith being but touched wil ſtir ſtraight. We cannot but turne to Him, and truſt in Him, that ſo many waies hath ſhewed Himſelfe ſo true unto us. Quando amor confirmatur, fides inchoatur (ſaith S. Ambroſe:) Prove to us, of any, that he loves us indeed, and we ſhall truſt Him ſtraight, without any more adoe: we ſhall beleeve any good affirm'd of Him. And what is there (tell me) any where affirm'd of

CHRIST

CHRIST to-us-ward, but this love of His, being beleeved, will make it credible.

Iam. 2.22. Now, our faith is made perfect by workes, or well-doing (ſaith S. Iames) it will therefore ſet us in a courſe of them. Of which, every vertue is a ſtadium, and every act, a ſtepp toward the end of our race. Beginning at humili-
Phil. 2.5. tie, the vertue of the firſt ſetting out: Let the ſame mind be in you, that was in CHRIST IESVS, who humbled Himſelfe: And ſo proceeding from vertue to vertue, till we come to patience and perſeverance, that keep the gole end.
1 Pet. 5.10. So ſaith S. Peter, Modicum paſsos perficiet, ſuffering ſomewhat, more or leſſe; ſome croſsing, if not the Croſſe; ſome evill report, though not ſhame; So, and no otherwiſe we ſhall come to our race end, our finall perfection.

And, as the reſt move us, if we ſtand ſtill, to runne: So, if we runne already, theſe two (Patience and Perſeverance) Patience will make us, for all
Ver. 3. our encounters μὴ κάμνειν (ſaith the Apoſtle in the next verſe) not to be weary; Not in our minds, though in our bodies we be: And Perſeverance wil make us μὴ ἐκλύεσθαι not to faint or tire, though the time ſeeme long and never ſo tedious: (Both theſe, in the Verſe following.) But, hold on our courſe till we finiſh it, even till we come to Him, who was not onely Author but Finiſher; who held out, till He came to Conſummatum eſt. And ſo muſt we fi-
Gal. 5.7. niſh, not ſtadium, but dolichum: not like thoſe, of whom it was ſaid, Curre-batis benè, ye did well for a ſtart; but like our Apoſtle, that ſaid (and ſaid
2 Tim. 4.7. truely) of himſelfe, Curſum conſummavi, I have finiſhed my courſe, I have held out to the very end.

3 That we faint not.

And in this, is the Praxis of our firſt theorie or ſight of our love. But our love without hope is but faint: That then, with better heart we may thus doe, and beſtirre our ſelves, it will not be amiſſe, once more to lift up our eyes, and the ſecond time to looke on Him. We have not yet ſeene the end: the Croſſe is not the end: There is a better end than ſo, And is ſet downe in the throne. As the Prophet ſaw Him, we have ſeen Him: in ſuch caſe, as we were ready to hide our faces, at Him, and His ſight. Here is a new ſight: as a Iob. 1.14. the Evangeliſt ſaw Him, ſo we now may: even His glorie as the a*glorie of the* b Iob. 19.5. onely begotten SONNE of GOD. b Ecce homo, Pilate's ſight we have ſeene!
c Iob. 20.28. c Ecce Dominus & DEVS meus, S. Thomas's ſight, we now ſhall. The former, in His hanging on the Croſſe, the beginning of our faith. This latter, ſitting on the throne, the conſummation of it.

Wherein, there is an ample matter of hope, as before of love; all being turned in and out. He ſitts now at eaſe, that before hung in paine. Now, on a throne, that before on the Croſſe. Now, at GOD's right hand, that before at
Zac. 3.1. Satan's left. (So Zachary ſaw him: Satan on His right hand, and then muſt He be on Satan's left.) All changed: His Croſſe, into eaſe; His ſhame, into glorie.

Glorie and reſt, reſt and glorie, are two things that meet not here in our world. The glorious life hath not the moſt quiet; and the quiet life is (for the moſt part) inglorious. He that will have glorie muſt make ac-

compt to be deſpiſed oft, and broken of his reſt: and he that loveth his eaſe better, muſt be content with a meane condition farre ſhort of glorie. Heere then, theſe meet not; there (our hope is) they ſhall: even both meet together, and glorie and reſt kiſse each the other: So the Prophet calleth it a glorious reſt. Eſa. 11. 10.

And the right hand addeth yet a degree further. For, dextera eſt pars potior. So that, if there be any reſt more eaſie, or any glorie more glorious, than other, there, it is, on that hand, on that ſide; and He placed in it, in the beſt, in the chiefeſt, the fulneſſe of them both. At GOD's right hand is not only power; power, while we be here to protect us with His might outward, and to ſupport us with His grace inward: but at His right hand alſo is the fulneſſe of joy, for ever (ſaith the Pſalme:) Ioy, and the fulneſſe of joy, and the fulneſſe of it for evermore. Pſal. 16. 11.

This is meant by his Seat at the right hand on the Throne. And the ſame is our bleſſed hope alſo, that it is not His place only, and none but His; but, even ours in expectation alſo. The love of his Croſſe, is to us a pledge of the hope of his throne, or whatſoever elſe, He hath or is worth. For, if GOD have given us CHRIST, and CHRIST thus given himſelfe, what hath GOD, or CHRIST, they will denie us? It is the Apoſtle's owne deduction. Rom. 8. 32.

To put it out of all doubt: heare we His owne promiſe, that never brake his word. To him that overcommeth, will I give to ſit with me in my Throne. Where to ſit, is the fulneſſe of our deſire, the end of our race, omnia in omnibus: and further we cannot goe. Of a joy ſet before Him, we ſpoke yer-while: here is now a joy ſet before us; another manner joy than was before Him: The worſe was ſet before Him the better, before us: and this we are to runne to. Apoc. 3. 21.

Thus do theſe two theories (or ſights) th'one worke to love, th'other to hope; both to the well performing of our courſe, that in this Theater, between the Saints joyfully beholding us in our race, and CHRIST at our end ready to receive us, we may fulfill our courſe with joy, and be partakers of the bleſſed reſt of His moſt glorious Throne.

Let us now turne to Him, and beſeech Him by the ſight of this day, by Himſelfe (firſt) and by his Croſſe and Throne both (both which He hath ſet before us, th'one to awake our love, the other to quicken our hope) that we may this day and ever, lift up our eyes and hearts; that we may, this day and ever, carrie them in our eyes and hearts, looke up to them both: ſo looke that we may love the one, and waite and hope for the other: ſo love and ſo hope, that by them both we may move, and that ſwiftly, even runne to Him; and running not faint, but ſo conſtantly runne, that we faile not finally to attaine the happy fruition of Himſelfe, and of the joy and Glory of His bleſſed throne: that ſo we may find and feele Him as this day here, the Authour; ſo, in that day, there, the Finiſher of our Faith, by the ſame our LORD, IESVS CHRIST. Amen.

RESURRECTION

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE THE KINGS MAIESTIE AT VVHITE-HALL, ON the VI. of April, A.D. MDCVI. being EASTER-DAY.

ROM. Chap. VI. Ver. IX. X. XI.

Scientes, quod CHRISTVS, &c.

Knowing that CHRIST, being raiſed from the dead, dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over Him.

For, in that He died, He died once to ſinne: but, in that He liveth, He liveth to GOD.

Likewiſe thinke (or accompt) yee alſo, that yee are dead to ſinne; but are alive to GOD, in IESVS CHRIST our LORD.

THE Scripture is, as the Feaſt is; both of them of the reſurrection: And this we may ſafely ſay of it, it is thought by the Church, ſo pertinent to the feaſt; as it ever hath beene and is appointed to be the very entry of this dayes Service; to be ſounded forth and ſung, firſt of all, and before all, upon this day, as if there were ſome ſpeciall correſpondence betweene the Day and it.

Two principall points are ſet downe to us, out of the two principall words in it: One, Scientes (in the firſt verſe) Knowing: the other, Reputate (in the laſt verſe) Compt your ſelves: Knowing, and Compting: Knowledge, and calling our ſelves to accompt for our Knowledge.

Two points very needfull to be ever joyntly called upon: and more than needfull for our times, being, that much we know, and little we compt: oft we heare and when we have heard, ſmall reckoning we make of it. What CHRIST did on Eaſter-day we know well; what we are then to doe, we give no great regard: our Scientes is without a Reputantes.

Now this Scripture, ex totâ Subſtantiâ, out of the whole frame of it teacheth us otherwiſe; that Chriſtian knowledge is not a knowledge without all manner of accompt; but that we are accomptants for it: that we are to keepe an Audite of what we heare, and take accompt of our ſelves of what we have learned. Λογίζεσθε, is an Auditors terme: thence the HOLY GHOST hath taken it; and would have us to bee Auditors in both Senſes.

And this to be generall, in whatſoever we know: But ſpecially, in our knowledge touching this Feaſt of CHRIST'S Reſurrection; where there are ſpeciall words for it in the Text, where in expreſſe termes an accompt is called for at our hands as an eſſentiall dutie of the Day. The benefit, we remember, is ſo great; the Feaſt, we hold, ſo high; as, though at other times we might be forborne, yet on this day, we may not.

Verſe 11. Now the ſumme of our accompt is ſet downe in theſe words [Similiter & vos:] that we faſhion our ſelves like to CHRIST, dying and riſing: caſt our ſelves in the ſame moulds; expreſſe Him, in both, as neere as we can.

To accompt of theſe, firſt: that is, to accompt our ſelves bound, thus to doe.

To accompt for theſe, ſecond: that is, to accompt with our ſelves, whether wee doe ſo.

Firſt, to accompt our ſelves bound, thus to doe: reſolving thus within our ſelves; that to heare a Sermon of the Reſurrection, is nothing; to keepe a feaſt of the Reſurrection is as much, except it end in Similiter & vos. Niſi (ſaith Saint Gregory) quod de more celebratur, etiam quoad mores exprimatur, Vnleſſe we expreſſe the matter of the Feaſt in the forme of our lives; Vnleſſe, as He from the grave, So we from ſinne: and live to godlineſſe, as He unto GOD.

Then to accompt with our ſelves, whether we doe thus: that is, to ſit downe and reflect upon the Sermons we heare, and the feaſts we keepe; how, by knowing CHRISTS death we die to ſinne; how, by knowing His Reſurrection, we live to GOD; how our eſtate in ſoule is bettered: how the fruit of the words we heare, and the feaſts we keepe, doe abound daily toward our accompt againſt the great Audite. And this to be our accompt, every Eaſter-day.

The Diviſion Of theſe two points, the former is in the two firſt verſes, what we muſt know: the latter, is in the laſt, what we muſt accompt for. And they be joyned with Similiter: to ſhew us, they be and muſt be, of equall and like regard: and we, as know; So accompt.

But becauſe, our knowing is the ground of our accompt, the Apoſtle beginneth with knowledge. And ſo muſt we.

I. Knowledge, in all Learning, is of two ſorts: 1 Rerum, or 2 Cauſarum; ὅτι, or διότι; That, or, in that. The former is in the firſt Verſe: Knowing that CHRIST, &c. The latter, in the Second: For, in that, &c. And becauſe we cannot caſt up a Summe, except we have a particular; the Apoſtle giveth us a Particular of either: A particular of

1 our Knowledge, Quoad res; which conſiſteth of theſe three: 1. That CHRIST is

2 riſen from the dead. 2. That now, He dieth not. 3. That from hence-forth death hath no dominion over Him. All, in the firſt Verſe. Then, a particular of our Knowledge, Quoad cauſas. The cauſe 1 of His death, Sinne, He died to ſinne: 2 Of His life, GOD; He liveth to GOD. 3 And both theſe, but once for all. All, in the ſecond Verſe.

II. Then followeth our Accompt (in the third Verſe.) Wherein wee conſider firſt;

1 1 The Charge; 2 and then the Diſcharge. 1. The charge firſt, Similiter & vos: That we be like to CHRIST. And then, wherein: 1 Like, in dying to Sinne; 2 Like, in living to GOD. Which are the two moulds, wherein wee are to be caſt, that wee may

2 come forth like Him. This is the Charge: 2. And laſt of all, The meanes we have to helpe us to diſcharge it, in the laſt words: in CHRIST IESV our LORD.

Before

BEfore we take view of the two Particulars, it will not be amiſſe to make a little ſtay at Scientes, the firſt word: becauſe it is the ground of all the reſt. Knowing that CHRIST is riſen. This, the Apoſtle ſaith, the Romans did: knowing. Did know himſelfe (indeed) that CHRIST was riſen, for he ſaw Him. But how knew the Romans, or how know we? No other way than by relation, either they or we: but yet we, much better, than they: I ſay, by relation, in the nature of a verdict, of them that had ſeene Him, even Cephas and the twelve; which is a full Iury, able to finde any matter of fact, and to give up a verdict in it. And that CHRIST is riſen, is matter of fact. But, if twelve will not ſerve in this matter of fact (which in all other matters with us, will) if a greater Enqueſt farre, if five hundred will ſerve, you may have ſo many; for, of more than five hundred at once, was He ſeene; many of them then living ready to give up the ſame verdict, and to ſay the ſame upon their oathes. 1 Cor. 15. 6.

I.

Our Knowing: The Meanes of it.

But to ſettle a knowledge, the number moveth not ſo much, as the qualitie of the Parties. If they were perſons credulous, light of beleefe, they may well be challenged; if they tooke not the way to ground their knowledge aright. That is (ever) beſt knowen, that is moſt doubted of: And never was matter carried with more ſcruple, and ſlowneſſe of beleefe, with more doubts and difficulties, than was this of CHRISTS riſing. Mary Magdalen ſaw it firſt, and reported it. They beleeved her not. The two that went to Emaus, they alſo reported it: They beleeved them not. Divers women together ſaw him, and came and told them: Their words ſeemed to them λῆρος, an idle fained fond tale. They all ſaw Him; and even ſeeing Him, yet they doubted. When they were put out of doubt, and told it but to one that happened to be abſent (it was Saint Thomas;) you know, how peremptory he was: Not hee, unleſſe hee might not onely ſee with his eyes, but feele with his fingers, and put in his hand into His ſide. And all this he did. Saint Auguſtine ſaith well: Profectò valde dubitatum eſt ab illis, ne dubitaretur à nobis: All this doubting was by them made, that wee might be out of doubt, and know, that CHRIST is riſen. Marke 16. 11. Luke 24. 13. 36. 11. 36. Iohn 20. 25. 27. 28.

Sure, they tooke the right courſe to know it certainly: and certainly they did know it, as appeareth. For, never was thing knowen in this world, ſo confidently, conſtantly, certainly teſtified, as was this, that CHRIST is riſen. By teſtifying it, they got nothing in the earth. Got nothing? Nay, they loſt by it: their living, their life, all they had to loſe. They might have ſaved all, and but ſaid nothing. So certaine they were; ſo certainely they did accompt of their knowing; they could not be got from it: but to their very laſt breath, to the very laſt drop of their bloud, bare witneſſe to the truth of this Article: and choſe rather to lay downe their lives, and to take their death, than to deny; nay, than not to affirme His riſing from death. And thus did they know, and knowing teſtifie, and by their teſtimony came the Romans to their knowing: and ſo doe we: But (as I ſaid before) we, to a much ſurer knowing than they. For, when this was written, the whole world ſtopt their eares at this report; would not endure to heare them; ſtood out mainly againſt them. The Reſurrection! why, it was with the Grecians at Athens, χλεύασμος, a very skorne. The Reſurrection! why, it was, with Feſtus the great Roman, μανία, a ſickneſſe of the braine, a plaine phrenſie. That world, that then was, and long after, in ſuch oppoſition, is ſince come in: and (upon better examination of the matter, ſo ſtrangely teſtified, with ſo many thouſand lives of men (to ſay the leaſt of them) ſad, and ſober) hath taken notice of it, and both knowen and acknowledged the truth of it. It was well fore-told by Saint Iohn, hæc eſt victoria, quæ vincit mundum, fides veſtra. It is proved true ſince: That this faith of CHRISTS riſing hath made a conqueſt of the whole world. So that, after all the world hath taken knowledge of it, we come to know it. And ſo, more full to us, than to them, is this ſcientes, knowing. Now to our particulars: what we know, Act. 17. 32. 26. 24. 1 Iohn 5. 4.

2 The Particulars Quoad nos. 1 That Christ is risen from the dead.

Our first particular is: That CHRIST is risen from the dead. Properly, wee are said to rise from a fall: and, from death, rather to revive. Yet the Apostle rather useth the terme of rising than reviving, as serving better to set forth his purpose. That death is a fall, wee doubt not: that it came with a fall, the fall of Adam. But, what manner of fall? for it hath beene holden a fall, from whence is no rising. But, by CHRISTS rising, it falls out to be a fall, that we may fall, and yet get up againe. For, if CHRIST be risen from it, then is there a rising; if a rising of one, then may there be of another: If He be risen in our nature, then is our nature risen; and if our nature be, our persons may be. Especially seeing (as the Apostle, in the fourth Verse before hath told us) He, and we, are σύμφυτοι, that is, so grafted, one into the other, that He is part of us, and we of Him: So that (as Saint Bernard well observeth,) Christus, etsi solus resurrexit, tamen non totus, that CHRIST, though Hee be risen onely, yet Hee is not risen wholly, or all, till we be risen too. He is but risen in part: and that He may rise all, we must rise from death also.

Exod. 15. 10. Ion. 1. 17. 2. 10. Matth. 12. 40. 25. 41. Esay 26. 19. 1 Cor. 15. 36.

This then we know first; That death is not a fall like that of Pharao, into the Sea, that sunke downe like a lumpe of leade into the bottome, and never came up more: but a fall like that of Ionas, into the Sea, who was received by a Fish, and after cast up againe. It is our SAVIOVR CHRISTS owne Simile. A fall, not like that of the Angels, into the bottomlesse pit, there to stay for ever: but like to that of men into their beds, when they make accompt to stand up againe. A fall, not as of a logge or stone, to the ground, which where it falleth, there it lyeth still; but, as of a Wheat-corne, into the ground, which is quickned and springeth up againe.

The very word which the Apostle useth (ἐγερθεὶς) implyeth the two latter; 1 either of a fall into a bed in our chamber; where though we lye (to see to) little better than dead for a time; yet in the morning we awake and stand up notwithstanding: 2 Or of a fall into a bed in our garden; where though the seed putrifie and come to nothing, yet we looke to see it shoot forth anew in the Spring. Which Spring is (as Tertullian well calleth it) the very resurrection of the yeare: and CHRISTS Resurrection falleth well with it: And it is (saith he) no way consonant to reason, that man, for whom all things spring and rise againe, should not have his Spring and rising too. But, he shall have them, we doubt not, by this Dayes worke. He that this day did rise, and rising was seene of Mary Magdalen in the likenesse of a Gardiner: this Gardiner will looke to it, that man shall have his spring. He will (saith the Prophet) drop upon us a dew like the dew of herbs, and the earth shall yeeld forth her dead: And so, as CHRIST is risen from the dead, even so shall we.

John 20. 15. Esay 26. 19.

1 That Christ now dieth not. Luke. 7. 11. 14. 8. 54. John 11. 43.

Our second Particular is: That as He is risen; so, now He dieth not. Which is no idle addition, but hath his force and Emphasis. For, one thing it is, to rise from the dead; and another, not to die any more. The Widowes sonne of Naim; the Rulers daughter of the Synagogue; Lazarus; all these rose againe from death, yet they died afterward: But, CHRIST rising from the dead, dieth no more. These two are sensibly different, Lazarus resurrection, and CHRISTS: and this second is (sure) a higher degree than the former. If we rise, as they did, that we returne to this same mortall life of ours againe; this very mortalitie of ours, will be to us, as the prisoners chaine, he escapes away withall, by it we shall be pulled backe againe, though we should rise a thousand times. We must therefore so rise, as CHRIST, that our resurrection be not reditus, but transitus; not a returning backe to the same life, but a passing over to a new. Transivit de morte ad vitam (saith he.) The very Feast it selfe puts us in minde of as much: It is Pascha (that is) the Passeover, not a comming backe to the same Land of Ægypt: but a passing over to a better, the Land of Promise; whither CHRIST our Passeover is passed before us, and shall in His good time, give us passage after Him. The Apostle expresseth it best, where he saith, that CHRIST by His rising hath abolished death, and brought to light life and immortalitie: not life alone, but life and immortalitie: which is this our second particular. Risen, and risen to die no more, because risen to life, to life immortall.

John 5. 24. Deut. 17. 16. 1 Cor. 5. 7. 2 Tim. 1. 10.

But,

But, the third is yet beyond both theſe : more worth the knowing, more worthy our accompt : death hath no dominion over Him. Where, as we before ſayd, one thing it was to riſe againe, another to dye no more : ſo ſay wee now ; it is one thing not to dye ; another, not to bee under the dominion of death : For death, and deaths dominion are two different things. Death it ſelfe is nothing elſe, but the verie ſeparation of the life from the body : deaths dominion, a thing of farre larger extent. By which word (of dominion) the Apoſtle would have us to conceive of death, as of ſome great Lord, having ſome large Signiorie : Even as three ſeverall times (in the Chapter before, hee ſaith) Regnavit mors, death reigned ; as if death were ſome mighty Monarch, having ſome great dominions under him. And ſo it is : For looke how many dangers, how many diſeaſes, ſorrowes, calamities, miſeries there be of this mortall life ; how many paynes, perills, ſnares of death ; ſo many ſeverall provinces are there of this dominion. In all which, or ſome of them, while we live we ſtill are under the juriſdiction and arreſt of death, all the dayes of our life. And ſay that wee ſcape them all, and none of them happen to us, yet live we ſtill under feare of them, and that is deaths dominion too. For hee is (as Iob calleth him) Rex paworis, King of feare. And, when wee are out of this life too ; unleſſe wee pertaine to CHRIST and His reſurrection, we are not out of his dominion neither. For Hell it ſelfe is ſecunda mors (ſo termed, by Saint Iohn) the ſecond death, or ſecond part of deaths dominion.

3 That from hence forth death hath no more dominion over Him.

Ver. 14. 17. 21.

Iob 18.14.

Apoc. 20.14. 21.8.

Now, who is there that would deſire to riſe againe to this life, yea, though it were immortall, to be ſtill under this dominion of death here ; ſtill ſubject, ſtill liable to the aches and paynes, to the griefes and gripings, to the manifold miſeries of this vale of the ſhadow of death ? But then, the other, the ſecond region of death, the ſecond part of his dominion, who can endure once to be there ? There they ſeeke and wiſh for death, and death flyeth from them.

Verily, riſing is not enough ; riſing, not to dye againe is not enough, except wee may bee quit of this dominion, and rid of that, which we either feele or feare, all our life long. Therefore doth the Apoſtle adde (and ſo it was needfull, hee ſhould) death hath no dominion over Him. No dominion over Him ? No ; for Hee, dominion over it. For, leſt any might ſurmiſe, He might breake through ſome wall, or get out at ſome window, and ſo ſteale a reſurrection, or caſually come to it ; He tells them, no : it is not ſo. Ecce claves mortis & inferni : ſee here, the keyes both of the firſt and ſecond death. Which is a plaine proofe, Hee hath maſtered, and got the dominion over both death and him that hath power of death, that is the devill. Both are ſwallowed up in victorie, and neither death any more ſting, nor hell any more dominion. Sed ad Dominum Deum noſtrum ſpectant exitus mortis : but now unto GOD our LORD belong the iſſues of death : the keyes are at His girdle ; He can let out as many as He liſt.

Apoc. 1.18.

1 Cor. 15.55.

Pſal. 68.20.

This eſtate is it, which he calleth, Coronam vitæ ; not life alone, but the Crowne of life, or a life crowned with immunitie of feare of any evill, ever to befall us. This is it, which (in the next verſe) he calleth living unto GOD, the eſtate of the children of the reſurrection, to be the ſonnes of GOD, equall to the Angels, ſubject to no part of deaths dominion, but living in ſecuritie, joy, and bliſſe for ever.

Apoc. 2.18.

Ver. 11.

And now is our particular full. 1 Riſing to life firſt ; 2 and life freed from death, and ſo immortall ; 3 and then exempt from the dominion of death, and everie part of it ; and ſo happy and bleſſed. Riſe againe ; ſo may Lazarus, or any mortall man doe ; that is not it. Riſe againe to life immortall : ſo ſhall all doe, in the end, as well the unjuſt, as the juſt ; that is not it. But, riſe againe to life immortall, with freedome from all miſerie, to live to, and with GOD in all joy and glorie evermore, that is it ; that is CHRISTS reſurrection. Et tu (ſaith S. Auguſtine) ſpera talem reſurrectionem, & propter hoc eſto Chriſtianus, Live in hope of ſuch a reſurrection, and for this hopes ſake, carrie thy ſelfe as a Chriſtian. Thus have wee our particular, of that we are to know touching CHRIST riſen.

And now we know all theſe, yet doe we not accompt our ſelves to know them perfectly,

2 fectly, untill we alſo know the reaſons of them. And the Romans were a people, that loved to ſee the ground of that they received, and not the bare Articles alone. Indeed, it might trouble them, why CHRIST ſhould need thus to riſe againe, becauſe they ſaw no reaſon, why Hee ſhould need dye. The truth is, wee can not ſpeake of riſing well, without mention of the terminus à quo, from whence He roſe. By meanes whereof, theſe two, 1 CHRISTS dying and 2 His riſing are ſo linked together, and their Audites ſo entangled one with another, as it is very hard to ſever them. And this you ſhall obſerve, the Apoſtle never goeth about to doe it, but ſtill (as it were of purpoſe) ſuffers one to draw in the other continually. It is not here alone, but all over his Epiſtles; ever they runne together, as if he were loth to mention one without the other.

3 And it cannot be denied, but that their joyning ſerveth to many great good purpoſes. Theſe two, 1 His death, and 2 His riſing, they ſhew His two Natures, Humane and Divine: 1 His Humane nature and weakneſſe, in dying, 2 His Divine nature and power, in riſing againe. 2. Theſe ſhew His two Offices; His Prieſthood and
2 His Kingdome. 1 His Prieſthood, in the ſacrifice of His death: 2 His Kingdome, in the glorie of His reſurrection. 3. They ſet before us, His two maine Benefits,
3 1 Interitum mortis, 2 and principium vitæ. 1 His death, the death of death; 2 His riſing, the reviving of life againe: the one, what He had ranſomed us from; the other, what He had purchaſed for us. 4. They ſerve as two Moulds, wherein our lives
4 are to be caſt, that the daies of our vanity may be faſhioned to the likeneſſe of the SONNE of GOD: which are our two dutyes, that we are to render, for thoſe two benefits proceeding from the two offices of His two natures conjoyned. In a word: they are not well to be ſundred; for, when they are thus joyned, they are the very abridgement of the whole Goſpell.

1 The cauſe of His dying. 1 His dying once. Of them both then briefly. Of His dying firſt: In that He died, He died once to ſinne: Why dyed He once, and why but once? Once He died to ſinne, that is, ſinne was the cauſe, He was to dye once. As in ſaying, He liveth to GOD, we ſay, GOD is the cauſe of His life: ſo, in ſaying, He dyed to ſinne; we ſay, ſinne was the cauſe of His death. GOD, of His riſing: ſinne, of His fall. And looke how the reſurrection leadeth us to death; even as naturally doth death, unto ſinne, the ſting of death.

To ſinne then He died: Not ſimply to ſinne; but with reference to us. For, a death leadeth us to ſinne; ſo doth ſinne to ſinners, that is, to our ſelves: And ſo will the oppoſition be more cleere and full: He liveth unto GOD; He died unto man. With reference (I ſay) to us. For firſt, He died unto us: and if it be true, that Puer natus eſt nobis, it is Eſay. 9. 6. as true, that Vir mortuus eſt nobis: If being a child, He was borne to us; becomming a man, He dyed to us. Both are true.

To us then firſt, He died, becauſe He would ſave us. To ſinne, ſecondly; becauſe elſe He could not ſave us. Yes, He could have ſaved us, and never died for us, ex plenitudine poteſtatis, by His abſolute power, if He would have taken that way. That way, He would not; but proceed by way of Iuſtice; doe all, by way of Iuſtice. And, by Iuſtice, Sinne muſt have death; death, our death; for the ſinne was ours. It was we, that were to dye to ſinne. But, if we had dyed to ſinne, we had periſhed in ſinne; periſhed here, and periſhed everlaſtingly. That, His love to us could not endure: that we ſhould ſo periſh. Therefore, as in Iuſtice Hee juſtly might, Hee tooke upon Him our debt
Ioh. 18. 8. of ſinne, and ſayd (as the Fathers apply that ſpeech of His) Sinite abire hos, let theſe goe their wayes. And ſo, that we might not dye to ſinne, He did. Wee ſee, why He died once.

which

which made the Prophet call it, copiosam Redemptionem a plenteous Redemption. But the Apostle he goeth beyond all, in expressing this: in one place terming it ἁφειδιαν, in another ὑπερπερισσευσαν, in another πλεονάζων: mercy, rich, exceeding, grace overabounding, nay grace superfluous (for so is πλεονάζων:) and superfluous is enough and to spare; superfluous is (cleerely) enough and more than enough. Once dying then, being more than enough, no reason He should dye more than once. That, of His death. Eph. 2. 7. Eph. 1. 8. 1 Tim. 1. 14.

Now of His life: Hee liveth unto GOD. The Rigour of the law being fully satisfied by His death: then was He no longer justly, but wrongfully detained by death: As therefore, by the power He had, He layd down His life, so He tooke it againe, and rose againe from the dead. And not onely rose Himselfe; But, in one concurrent action, GOD, who had by His death, received full satisfaction, reached Him (as it were) His hand, and raised Him to life. The Apostles word ἐγερθεις, in the native force doth more properly signifie, raysed by another; than risen by Himselfe. And is so used, to shew, it was done, not onely by the power of the Sonne, but by the will, consent, and co-operation of the Father; and He the cause of it, who for the over-abundant merit of His death, and His humbling Himselfe, and becomming obedient to death, even the death of the Crosse, not onely raysed Him, but propter hoc, even for that cause, exalted Him also, to live with Him, in joy and glorie for ever. For, as when He lived to man, He lived to much miserie; so, now He liveth to GOD, He liveth in all felicitie. This part being oppositely set down to the former: living, to exclude dying againe; living to God, to exclude deaths dominion, and all things pertaining to it. For, as with GOD is life, & the fountaine of life, against death; (even the fountaine of life never failing, but ever renewing to all eternity:) so with Him also, is torrens deliciarum, a maine river of pleasures; even pleasures for evermore; never ebbing, but ever flowing, to all contentment; against the miseries belonging to deaths dominion. And there Hee liveth thus: not now, as the SONNE of GOD, as Hee lived before all worlds, but as the Sonne of man, in the right of our nature: to estate us, in this life, in the hope of a reversion; and in the life to cowe, in perfect and full possession of His owne, and His Fathers blisse and happinesse: when wee shall also live to GOD, and GOD bee all in all; which is the highest pitch of all our hope. Wee see then, His dying and rising, and the grounds of both: And thus have we the totall of our Scientes.

1 The cause of His living. Phil. 2. 8, 9. Psal. 36. 10.

Now followeth our accompt. An accompt is either of what is comming to us, and that wee like well: or what is going from us, and that is not so pleasing. Comming to us, I call matter of benefit: Going from us, matter of duty: where (I doubt) many an expectation will be deceived, making accompt to heare from the resurrection matter of benefit onely to come in, where the Apostle calleth us to accompt for matter of duty which is to goe from us.

II. Our Accompt. 1 Of our commings in: the benefit.

An accompt there is growing to us by CHRISTS rising, of matter of benefit and comfort: such an one there is, and we have touched it before. The hope of gayning a better life, which groweth from CHRISTS rising, is our comfort against the feare of losing this. Thus doe we comfort our selves against our deaths: Now blessed bee GOD that hath regenerated us to a lively hope, by the resurrection of IESVS CHRIST: Thus doe we comfort our selves against our friends death; Comfort your selves one another (saith the Apostle,) with these words: what words be they? Even those of our SAVIOVR in the Gospell, Resurget frater tuus, Thy brother (or thy Father, or thy friend) shall rise againe. And not onely against death, but even against all the miseries of this life: It was Iobs comfort on the dung-hill: well yet, videbo Deum in carne meâ: I shall see GOD in my flesh. And not in our miseries alone, but when we doe well, and no man respecteth us for it: It is the Apostles conclusion of the Chapter of the resurrection: Be of good cheere yet, labor vester non erit inanis in Domino: your labour is not in vaine in the LORD: you shall have your reward at the resurrection of the just. All these waies, comfort commeth unto us, by it. 2 Pet. 1. 3. 1 Thes. 4 18. Ioh. 11. 23. Iob 19. 25. 1 Cor. 15. 58.

But

2 Of our goings out. 1 The duty or charge.

But this of ours is another manner of accompt, of duty to goe from us, and to be answered by us. And such an one there is too, and we must reckon of it. I adde, that this here is our first accompt; you see it here called for, in the Epistle to the Romans; the other commeth after, in the Epistle to the Corinthians.

In very deed, this of ours is the key to the other, and we shall never finde sound comfort of that, unlesse wee doe first well passe this accompt here. It is (I say) first, because it is present, and concerneth our soules, even here in this life. The other is future, and toucheth but our bodies, and that in the life to come. It is an error certainely, which runneth in mens heads, when they heare of the resurrection to conceive of it, as of a matter meerely future, and not to take place till the latter day. Not only CHRIST is risen, but if all be, as it should be, We are already risen with him, (saith the Apostle, in the Epistle this day, the very first words of it:) and even here now (saith Saint Iohn,) is there a first Resurrection, and happie is hee that hath his part in it. A like error it is to conceit the resurrection as a thing meerely corporall, and no waies to bee incident into the Spirit or Soule, at all. The Apostle hath already given us an Item to the contrarie, in the end of the fourth Chapter before: Where he saith; He rose againe for our Iustification: and, Iustification is a matter spirituall: Iustificatus est spiritu, (saith the Apostle) of CHRIST Himselfe. Verily, here must the spirit rise to grace, or else neither the bodie, nor it shall there rise to glory. This then is our first accompt; that accompt of ours, which presently is to be passed, and out of hand; this is it, which first we must take order for.

Coloss. 3. 1.
Apoc. 20. 6.
Chap. 4. 25.
1 Tim. 3. 16.

I To be like CHRIST.

The summe or charge of which accompt, is set downe in these words, Similiter & vos: That we be like CHRIST, carrie His Image who is heavenly, as we have carried the Image of the earthly: Be conformed to His likenesse; that what CHRIST hath wrought for us, the like be wrought in us: What, wrought for us, by His flesh; the like wrought in us, by His Spirit. It is a Maxime or maine ground, in all the Fathers, that such an accompt must be: The former, what CHRIST hath wrought for us, Deus reputat nobis, GOD accompteth to us: For the latter, what CHRIST hath wrought in us; Reputate vos, we must accompt to GOD. And, that is, Similiter & vos, that we fashion our selves like Him.

Like Him, in as many points, as we may: but namely, and expresly, in these two here set downe, 1 In dying to sinne, 2 In living unto GOD, in these two first: and then secondly, in doing both these, ἐφάπαξ, but once, for all.

1 In dying to sinne. Eph. 5. 1. 1 Pet. 2. 21.

Like Him in these two: 1 In His dying. For He died not onely to offer a Sacrifice for us (saith Saint Paul) but also to leave an example to us (saith Saint Peter.) That example are we to be like. 2 In His rising. For He arose, not onely that we might be regenerated to a lively hope, saith Saint Peter: but also, that we might be grafted into the similitude of His Resurrection; saith Saint Paul, a little before, in the fifth verse of this very Chapter: That Similitude are we to resemble. So have we the exemplarie part of both these, whereunto, we are to frame our Similiter & vos.

1 Pet. 1, 3.

He dyed to sin, there is our paterne: Our first accompt, must be Compt your selves dead to sinne. And that we doe, when, there is neither action, nor affection, nor any signe of life, in us, toward sinne; no more, than in a dead bodie: when, as men crucified (which is not onely His death, but the kind of His death too) we neither move hand, nor stirre foot, toward it: both, are nayled downe, fast. In a word, to dye to sinne (with Saint Paul here) is to cease from sinne (with Saint Peter, 1 Pet. 4. 1.)

Verse. 2.

To cease from sinne (I say) understanding by sin, not from sin altogether (that is a higher perfection, than this life will beare) but as the Apostle expoundeth himselfe, in the very next words, Ne regnet peccatum, that is, from the dominion of sinne, to cease. For till wee bee free from death it selfe (which in this life we are not) wee shall not be free from sinne altogether: onely we may come thus farre, ne regnet, that sinne reigne not, weare not a crowne, sit not in a throne, hold no Parliaments within us, give us no lawes; in a word (as in the fourth verse before) that we serve it not. To dye, to the dominion of sinne; that, by the grace of GOD we may: and that we must accompt for.

He

He liveth to GOD. There is our similitude of His resurrection: our second accompt must be, Compt your selves living unto GOD. Now, how that is, hee hath readie told us (in the fourth verse) even, to walke in newnesse of life. To walke, is to move; moving is a vitall action, and argueth life. But, it must not be any life; our old will not serve; it must be a new life; wee must not returne backe to our former course, but passe over, to another new conversation. And in a word (as before) to live to GOD (with Saint Paul here) is to live secundum Deum, according to GOD, in the Spirit (with Saint Peter, 1 Peter 4.6.) And, then live wee according to Him, when His will is our law, His Word our rule, His Sonnes life our example, His Spirit, rather than our owne soule, the guide of our actions. Thus shall wee be grafted into the similitude of His Resurrection. 2 In living to GOD.

Now, this similitude of the Resurrection, calleth to my minde, another similitude of the Resurrection, in this life too, which I finde in Scripture mentioned; it fitteth us well: it will not be amisse, to remember you of it, by the way, it will make us the better willing, to enter into this accompt.

At the time that Isaac should have beene offered by his Father, Isaac was not slaine: very neere it he was; there was fire, and there was a knife, and he was appointed readie to be a Sacrifice. Of which case of his, the Apostle, in the mention of his Father Abrahams faith (Hebr. 11.) Abraham (saith hee) by faith λογιζόμενος, made full accompt, if Isaac had beene slaine, GOD was able to raise him from the dead: And even from the dead, GOD raised him, and his Father received him, ἐν παραβολῇ, in a certaine similitude, or after a sort. Marke that well: Raising Isaac, from imminent danger of present death, is (with the Apostle) a kinde of Resurrection. And if it be so, and if the HOLY GHOST warrant us to call that, a kinde of resurrection; how can we, but on this day, the Day of the Resurrection, call to minde, and withall render unto GOD our unfained thankes and praise, for our late resurrection ἐν παραβολῇ, for our kinde of resurrection; Hee, not long since vouchsafed us. Our case, was Isaac's case, without doubt: there was fire; and in stead of a knife, there was powder enough, and wee were designed all of us, and even ready to bee sacrificed, even Abraham, Isaac, and all. Certainely if Isaac's were, ours was a kind of resurrection: and we so to acknowledge it. Wee were as neere as he; we were not onely within the Dominion, but within the Verge, nay even within the very gates of death. From thence hath GOD raised us, and given us, this yeare, this similitude of the resurrection, that we might, this day of the Resurrection of His SONNE, present him, with this (in the Text) of rising to a new course of life. Genes. 22 7. Hebr. 11.19.

And now (to returne to our fashioning our selves, like to Him, in these:) As, there is a death naturall, and a death civill; so is there a death morall, both in Philosophie, and in Divinitie: and, if a death, then consequently, a resurrection too. Every great and notable change, of our course of life, whereby we are not now any longer, the same men, that before we were, be it from worse to better, or from better to worse, is a morall death: A morall death, to that, wee change from; and a morall resurrection, to that, wee change to. If, wee change to the better, that is sinnes death: if wee alter to the worse, that is sinnes resurrection: when we commit sinne, wee die, wee are dead in sinne; when wee repent, we revive againe: when we repent our selves of our repenting, and relapse back, then sinne riseth againe, from the dead: and so toties quoties. And even upon these two, as two hinges, turneth our whole life. All our life is spent in one of them.

Now then, that we bee not, all our life long, thus off and on, fast or loose, in docke out nettle, and in nettle out docke: it will behoove us once more yet, to looke backe upon our similiter & vos; even upon the word ἐφάπαξ, semel, once. That is, that wee not onely dye to sinne, and live to GOD; but dye and live, as Hee did, (that is) once for all: which is an utter abandoning, once, of sinnes dominion: and a continuall constant persisting, in a good course once begun. Sinnes dominion, it languisheth sometimes in us, and falleth haply into a swoune: but it dyeth not quite, once for all. Grace, lifteth up the eye, and looketh up a little, and giveth some signe of life; but never 3 And that, once for all.

never perfectly receiveth. O, that once, we might come to this; No more deaths, no more reſurrections, but one! that, we might once, make an end of our daily continuall recidivations, to which we are ſo ſubject: and, once, get paſt theſe pangs and qualmes of godlineſſe, this righteouſneſſe, like the morning cloud, which is all we performe: that we might grow habituate, in grace; radicati & fundati, rooted and founded in it: ἐρριζωμένοι ſteddie, and Epheſ.3.17. 1 Cor.15. ult. ἑδραῖοι never to be removed! that ſo we might enter into, and paſſe a good accompt, of this our Similiter & vos.

2 The Diſcharge and meanes of it. In IESVS CHRIST our LORD. 2 Cor.3.5.

And thus, are we come to the foot of our accompt, which is our Onus; or Charge. Now we muſt thinke of our diſcharge, to goe about it: which maketh the laſt words no leſſe neceſſary for us to conſider, than all the reſt. For what? is it in us, or can we, by our owne power and vertue, make up this accompt? Wee cannot (ſaith the Apoſtle:) nay, we cannot (ſaith he) λογίζασθαι, make accompt of any thing, no not ſo much as of a good thought toward it, as of our ſelves. If any thinke otherwiſe, let him but prove his owne ſtrength a little, what he can doe, hee ſhall be ſo confounded in it, as hee ſhall change his minde (ſaith Saint Auguſtine) and ſee plainly, the Apoſtle had reaſon, to ſhut up all, with In CHRISTO IESV DONINO noſtro: otherwiſe, our accompt will ſticke in our hands. Verily, to raiſe a ſoule from the death of ſinne, is harder, farre harder, than to raiſe a dead bodie, out of the duſt of death. Saint Auguſtine hath long ſince defined it: that Mary Magdalens reſurrection, in ſoule, from her long lying dead in ſinne, was a greater miracle, than her brother Lazarus reſurrection, that had lyen foure dayes in his grave. If Lazarus lay dead before us, we would never aſſay to raiſe him our ſelves; we know, we cannot doe it. If we cannot raiſe Lazarus (that is the eaſier of the twaine) we ſhall never, Mary Magdalen (which is the harder, by farre) out of Him, or without Him, that raiſed them both.

But, as out of CHRIST, or without CHRIST, we can doe nothing toward this accompt: Not, accompliſh or bring to perfection; but not doe: not any great or notable Iohn 15.5. ſumme of it; but nothing at all; (as ſaith Saint Auguſtine, upon Sine me nihil poteſtis facere.) So, in Him, and with Him, enabling us to it, we can thinke good thoughts, ſpeake good words, and doe good workes, and dye to ſinne, and live to GOD, and all:
Phil.4.13. Omnia poſſum (ſaith the Apoſtle.) And enable us He will, and can, as not onely having paſſed the reſurrection, but being the reſurrection it ſelfe; not onely had the effect of it
Ioh.11.25. in Himſelfe; but, being the cauſe of it, to us. So He ſaith Himſelfe: I am the reſurrection, and the life: the reſurrection, to them that are dead in ſinne, to raiſe them from it; and the life, to them that live unto GOD, to preſerve them, in it.

Where, beſides the two former (1 the Article of the reſurrection, which we are to know: 2 and the Example of the reſurrection, which wee are to be like:) wee come to the notice, of a third thing; even a vertue or power flowing from Chriſts reſurrection, whereby we are made able to expreſſe our Similiter & vos, and to paſſe this our accompt, of dying to ſinne, and living to GOD. It is, in plaine words, called (by the Phil.3.10. Apoſtle himſelfe) virtus reſurrectionis; the vertue of CHRISTS reſurrection, iſſuing from it, to us: and he praieth that as hee had a faith of the former, ſo hee may have a feeling of this: and as, of them he had a contemplative; ſo he may of this have an experimentall knowledge. This enabling vertue proceedeth from Chriſts reſurrection.
Luk.8.46. For, never let us thinke, if in the daies of His fleſh, there went vertue out, from even the verie edge of His garment, to doe great cures (as in the caſe of the woman with the bloudy iſſue, wee reade:) but that, from His owne ſelfe, and from thoſe two moſt principall and powerfull actions of His owne ſelfe (His 1 death and 2 reſurrection) there iſſueth a divine power: from His death, a power working on the old man (or fleſh) to mortifie it; from His reſurrection, a power working on the new man (the Spirit) to quicken it. A power, able to roll backe any ſtone of an evill cuſtome, lye it never ſo heavy on us: a power, able to dry up any iſſue, though it have runne upon us twelve yeare long.

2 Cor.6.1. And this power is nothing elſe, but that divine qualitie of grace, which wee receive from Him. Receive it from Him we doe certainely; (onely let us pray, and endeuour devoure our ſelves, that we receive it not in vaine:) the HOLY GHOST, by waies to fleſh and bloud unknowne, inſpiring it, as a breath, diſtilling it, as a dew; deriving it, as a ſecret influence, into the ſoule. For, if Philoſophie grant an inviſible operation in us, to the celeſtiall bodies; much better may wee yeeld it, to His eternall Spirit: whereby ſuch a vertue, or breath, may proceed from it and be received of us.

Which breath, or Spirit, is drawen in by Prayer, and ſuch other exerciſes of devotion on our parts: and, on GODS part, breathed in, by and with the Word: (well therefore termed by the Apoſtle, the Word of grace.) And (I may ſafely ſay it, with good warrant) from thoſe words eſpecially and chiefly; which (as He Himſelfe ſaith of them) are Spirit and Life: even thoſe words, which joyned to the element, make the bleſſed Sacrament. Act. 20.32. Ioh. 6.63.

There was good proofe made of it, this day. All the way, did He preach to them, even till they came to Emaus, and their hearts were hot within them (which was a good ſigne:) but their eyes were not opened, but at the breaking of bread; and then they were: That, is the beſt and ſureſt ſenſe (we know) and therefore moſt to bee accompted of. There wee taſt, and there we ſee; Taſt and ſee, how gratious the Lord is. There wee are made to drinke of the Spirit: There our hearts are ſtrengthened and ſtabliſhed with grace. There is the bloud which ſhall purge our conſciences from dead works, whereby wee may die to ſinne. There, the bread of GOD, which ſhall endue our ſoules with much ſtrength; yea, multiply ſtrength in them, to live unto GOD: yea, to live to him continually; for, hee that eateth His fleſh and drinketh His bloud, dwelleth in Chriſt, and Chriſt in him: not inneth, or ſojourneth for a time; but dwelleth continually. And, never can wee more truly, or properly ſay, In Chriſto Ieſu Domino noſtro, as when we come new from that holy Action, for then He is in us, and wee in Him, indeed. And ſo wee to make full accompt of this ſervice, as a ſpeciall meanes, to further us to make up our Eaſter-dayes accompt, and to ſet off a good part of our Charge. In CHRIST, dropping upon us the annointing of His grace. In Ieſus, who will be readie, as our SAVIOVR, to ſuccour and ſupport us, with his Auxilium ſpeciale, His ſpeciall helpe. Without which aſſiſting us even grace it ſelfe, is many times, faint and feeble in us: And both theſe, becauſe He is our Lord, who having come, to ſave that which was loſt, will not ſuffer that to be loſt, which He hath ſaved. Luk. 24.32. Pſal. 34.8. 1 Cor. 12.13. Heb. 13.9. Heb. 9.14. Ioh. 6.33. Ioh. 6.56.

Thus, uſing His owne ordinance of Prayer, of the Word, and Sacrament, for our better enabling to diſcharge this daies dutie, wee ſhall (I truſt) yeeld up a good accompt, & celebrate a good Feaſt of His Reſurrection.

Which Almighty GOD grant, &c.

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE THE KINGS MAIESTIE AT VVHITE-HALL ON the V. of April, A.D. MDCVII. being EASTER-DAY.

I COR. Chap. XV. Ver. XX.

Nunc autem CHRISTVS resurrexit a mortuis primitiæ dormientium.

But, now is CHRIST risen from the dead, and was made the first fruits of them that sleepe.

Rom. 6. 4. Phi. 3. 21.

HE same Apostle, that, out of CHRISTS Resurrection taught the Romanes matter of duty; the same here, out of the same resurrection, teacheth the Corinthians matter of hope. There, similiter & vos, by way of patterne to conforme our selves to Him in newnesse of life: And here, similiter & vos, in another sense, by way of promise; that so doing He shall hereafter conforme us to Himselfe; change our vile bodies, and make them like His glorious body. That former is our first resurrection, from sinne: This later, our second resurrection, from the grave: This, the reward of that. In that, the work what to doe: In this, our reward, what to hope for. These two, Labour and Hope, the Church joyneth in one Antheme to day, her first Antheme. They sort well; and being sung together, make a good harmonie. But, that without this; labour without hope, is no good musike.

Chap. 9. 10.

To rise and to reclaime our selves, from a sinfull course of life, wee have long lived in, is labour (sure) and great labour. Now, labour, of it selfe, is a harsh unpleasant thing; unlesse it bee seasoned with hope. Debet, qui arat, in spe arare (saith the Apostle) above, at the I X. Chap. in the matter of the Clergies maintenance)

Hee

Hee that plowes muſt plow in hope : his plough will not goe deepe elſe; his furrowes wilbe but ſhallow. Men may frame to themſelves what ſpeculations they pleaſe; but the Apoſtles ſaying will prove true: ſever hope from labour, and you muſt looke for labour and labourers accordingly; ſleight and ſhallow (GOD knoweth) Labour then, leades us to hope.

The Apoſtle ſaw this; and therefore is carefull, whom hee thus preſſeth to newneſſe of life, and the labour therefore, to raiſe for them, and to ſet before them matter of hope. Hope, here in this life, he could ſet them none. They were, as he was himſelfe, at quotidiè morior (Ver. 31.) every houre, in danger to bee drawen to the blocke. It muſt therefore be from another; or at leaſt, as the Text is, by a hope of being reſtored to life againe. It was their caſe at Corinth, here in this Chapter, plainely; If we muſt die to morrow, if there be all, that ſhall become of us, then let us eat and drinke while wee may. If we be not ſure of another life, let us make ſure of this. But, when in the ſequele of the Chapter, he had ſhewed there was reſtoring; and that, ſo ſure he was of it, that he falls to inſult over them in theſe termes, they gird up their loynes againe, and fall to their labours afreſh, as knowing, their labour ſhould not be in vaine in the LORD. This hope leades us to our reſtoring. 2 Verſ. 32. Verſ. 32.

Our reſtoring is but a promiſe, ſhall bee reſtored: that, neceſſarily referres to a Party that is to make it good. Who is that? CHRIST: CHRIST is our hope, Why, hope is joyned to the living (ſaith the Wiſe-man:) CHRIST is dead; buried, laſt Fryday. If Hee bee our hope, and Hee bee dead; our hope is dead too: And, if our hope bee dead, our labour will not live long: nay, both are buried with CHRIST in His grave. It was their caſe this day that went to Emaus: ſay they (ſuppoſing CHRIST to bee dead) nos autem ſperabamus, we were once in good hope, by Him, that is, while He lived: as much to ſay, as, now He is in His grave, our hope is gone; we are even going to Emaus. But then after, as ſoone as they ſaw, Hee was alive againe, their hope revived; and with their hope, their labour: and preſently backe againe to Ieruſalem, to the Lords worke, and bad Emaus farewell. So Hee leads us to labour; labour, to hope; hope, to our reſtoring; our reſtoring, to Chriſts, who, as He hath reſtored Himſelfe, will reſtore us alſo to life. And this keepes us from going to Emaus. It is uſed proverbially; Emaus ſignifieth a people forlorne: all that are at ſperabamus, have loſt their hopes; are ſaid to goe thither: and thither wee ſhould all goe, even to Emaus, but for the hope that breathes from this verſe: without which, it were a cold occupation to be a Chriſtian. 3 Eccleſ. 9 4. Luke 24.21.

This then is the hope of this Text, ſpes viva, ſpes beata; worth all hopes elſe whatſoever. All hopes elſe, are but ſpes ſpirantium, hopes, while wee breath: This, is ſpes expirantium, the hope, when we can fetch our breath no longer. The carnall man, all he can ſay, is, dum ſpiro ſpero: his hope is as long as his breath. The Chriſtian aſpireth higher; goeth further (by vertue of this verſe) and ſaith, dum expiro, ſpero: his hope failes him not, when his breath failes him. Even then (ſaith Iob) repoſita eſt mihi ſpes in ſinu meo; this hope, and onely this, is laid up in our boſome: that though our life be taken from us; yet (in CHRIST) we, to doe it; and it, to us, ſhall be reſtored againe. Iob 29.17.

Our caſe is not, as theirs then was: No perſecution; nor we at quotidiè morior; and therefore, not ſo ſenſible of this doctrine. But yet, to them that are daily falling toward death, riſing to life is a good Text: Peradventure, not when wee are well and in good health; but the houre is comming, when we ſhall leave catching at all other hopes, and muſt hold onely by this: in horâ mortis, when all hope, ſave the hope of this verſe, ſhall forſake us. Sure it is, under theſe very words, are we laid into our graves, and theſe the laſt words that are ſaid over us, as the very laſt hold, we have: and we therefore to regard them with Iob, and lay them up in our boſome.

There is in this Text; 1 a Text, and an 2 Expoſition. 1. The Text, wee may well call the Angels Text: for, from them it came firſt. 2. The Expoſition is Saint Pauls. The Diviſion

These words, CHRIST is risen, were first uttered by an Angell, this day, in the Sepulcher; All the * Evangelists so testifie.

* Matth. 28.6. Marke 16.6. Luke 24.6.

This Text is a good Text, but reacheth not to us, unlesse it be helped with the Apostles Exposition: and then it will. The Exposition is it, that giveth us our hope, and the ground of our hope. CHRIST is risen, saith the Angell: CHRIST, the first fruits, saith the Apostle. And, marke well that word first fruits: For, in that word, is our hope. For, if Hee bee as the first fruits in His rising, His rising must reach to all, that are of the heape, whereof Hee is the first fruits. This is our hope.

II.

III. But, our hope must have a reason (saith Saint [a] Peter) and wee be readie with it. [b] The hope that hath a ground (saith Saint Paul) that is, [c] Spes quæ non confundit. Having then shewed us this hope hee sheweth us the ground of it. This: That, in very equitie, wee are to bee allowed to bee restored to life, the same way wee lost it. But, wee lost it, by man: or, to speake in particular, By Adam, wee came by our attainder. Meet therefore, that, by man (and to speake in particular) that, by CHRIST, wee come to our restoring. This, is the ground or substance of our hope.

[a] 1 Pet 3.15. [b] Heb 11.1. [c] Rom. 5.5.

IV. And thus hee hath set before us this day, life and death, in themselves and their causes; two things, that, of all other doe most concerne us. Our last point shall be to apply it to the meanes, this day, offered unto us toward the restoring us to life.

I. The Text, Christ is risen.

THe doctrine of the Resurrection, is one of the Foundations, so called by the Apostle, *Hebr.*6.1. It behoved him therefore (as a skilfull worke-man) to see it surely laid. That, is surely laid, that is laid on the rocke: and the rocke is Christ. Therefore, he laid it on Christ, by saying first, Christ is risen. Chap.10.4.

Of all that be Christians, Christ is the hope: but, not Christ every way considered; but, as risen. Even in Christ, un-risen, there is no hope. Well doth the Apostle begin here: and, when he would open to us a gate of hope, carry us to Christs Sepulcher empty; to shew us, and to heare the Angell say, He is risen. Thence after to deduce; If He were able to doe thus much for Himselfe, He hath promised us as much, and will doe as much for us. We shall be restored to life. Hosea 2.15.

Vers.19. Thus had he proceeded, in the foure Verses before, destructivè. 1 Miserable is that 18. man, that either laboureth, or suffereth in vaine. 2 Christian men seeme to doe so, and 17. doe so, if there be no other life but this. 3 There is no other life but this, if there be no Resurrection. 4 There is no resurrection, if CHRIST be not risen; for, ours dependeth, on His. And now he turneth all about againe. But now (saith he) 1 CHRIST is risen. 2 If He be, we shall: 3 If wee shall, wee have (as Saint Paul calleth it) a blessed hope, and so a life yet behinde. 4 If such hope we have, we, of all men, labour not in vaine. So, there are foure things: 1 CHRISTS rising, 2 our restoring, 3 our hope, and 4 our labour. All the doubt is, of the two first: The two other will follow of themselves. If a restoring; we have good hope: if good hope, our labour is not lost. The two first are in the first: the other, in the last words. The first are; Christ is risen; the last, we shall be restored to life. Our endevour is, to bring these two together: But first, to lay the corner-stone. Tit. 2.13.

1 Tim.3.16. Christ is risen, is the Angels Text: A part of the great mystery of Godlinesse; which, as the Apostle saith, was seene of Angels, by them delivered, and beleeved on by the world. Quod credibile primum fecit illis videntium certitudo, post morientium fortitudo, jam credibile mihi facit credentium multitudo. It became credible at first, by the certainty of them that saw it; then, by the constancie of them that died for confession of it; and to us now, the huge multitude of them, that have and doe beleeve it, maketh it credible. For if it be not credible, how is it credible, that the world could beleeve it? the world (I say) being neither enjoyned by authority, nor forced by feare, nor inveigled by allurements; but brought about by persons, by meanes lesse credible, than the thing it selfe. Gamaliel said, If it bee of GOD, it will prevaile. And, though wee cannot argue, all that hath prevailed, is of GOD: yet, thus wee can: That which hath beene mightily impugned, and weakely pursued, and yet prevailed, that was of GOD certainly. That which all the Powers of the earth sought, but could not prevaile against, was from Heaven certainly. Certainly, CHRIST is risen: for, many have risen, and lift up themselves against it, but all are fallen. But the Apostle saith, it is a foundation; that he will not lay it againe; No more will we, but goe forward, and raise upon it: And so let us doe. Act. 5. 37

CHRIST is risen: Suppose, Hee be: what then? Though CHRISTS rising did no way concerne us, or we that; yet, 1 first, in that a Man, one of our owne flesh and bloud hath gotten such a victory, even for humanities sake: 2 Then, in that, one that is innocent, hath quit Himselfe so well, for innocencies sake: 3 Thirdly, in that He hath foiled a common enemie, for amities sake: 4 Lastly, in that He hath wiped away the ignominie of His fall, with the glory of His rising againe, for vertue and valours sake: for all these, wee have cause to rejoyce with Him. All are matter of gratulation.

II. The Apostles exposition. CHRIST, as the first fruits.

But, the Apostle is about a further matter: that Text (the Angels Text) hee saw, would not serve our turne, further than I have said. Well may we congratulate Him, if that be all: but, otherwise it pertaines not to us, CHRIST is risen. The Apostle therefore enters further, telling us, That CHRIST did thus rise, not as CHRIST onely, but, as CHRIST the first fruits. CHRIST is risen, and in rising, become the first fruits: risen, and so risen: that is (to speake after the manner of men) that there is in CHRIST a double capacitie. 1 One, as a body naturall, considered by Himselfe, without any relative respect unto us, or to any: (In which regard, well may we be glad, as one stranger is for another, but otherwise His rising concernes us not at all.) 2 Then, that He hath a second, as a body Politike, or chiefe part of a Company or Corporation, that have to Him, and He to them, a mutuall and reciprocall reference: In which respect, His resurrection may concerne us, no lesse than Himselfe: It is that, He giveth us the first Item of, in the word Primitiæ; that CHRIST in His rising, commeth not to be considered as a Totum integrale, or body naturall alone; as CHRIST, onely: but (that which maketh for us) He hath besides another capacity, that He is a part of a corporation, or body, of which body we are the members. This being wonne; looke what He hath suffered or done, it pertaineth to us, and we have our part in it.

As a part of the whole.
b Apoc. 22. 16.

You shall finde (and, ever when you finde such words make much of them) CHRIST called a [a] Head; a Head is a part: CHRIST called a [b] Root, a Root is a part: and here CHRIST called first fruits, which (we all know) is but a part of the fruits, but a handfull of a heape, or a sheafe; and referreth to the rest of the fruits, as a part, to the whole. So that, there is (in the Apostles conceipt) one masse or heape of all mankind: of which, CHRIST is the first fruits; we, the remainder. So as, by the Law of the body, all His concerne us no lesse, than they doe Him: whatsoever He did, Hee did to our behoofe. Die He, or rise; we have our part, in His death, and in His Resurrection; and all: why? becaus He is but the first fruits.

And, if He were but Primus, and not Primitiæ dormientium, there were hope. For, Primus is an ordinall number, and draweth after, a second, a third, and GOD knoweth how many. But, if in that word, there be any scruple (as, sometime it is, Ante quem non est, rather, than post quem est alius) if no more come but one: all the world knowes, the first fruits is but a part of the fruits: there are fruits beside them, no man knoweth how many.

As a part for the whole.

But, that which is more; The first fruits is not every part; but such a part, as representeth the whole, and hath an operative force over the whole. For the better understanding whereof, we are to have recourse to the Law, to the very institution or first beginning of them, *Levit.*23.10. (Ever, the Legall ceremony is a good key to the Evangelicall mystery.) Thereby we shall see, why Saint Paul made choice of the word first fruits, to expresse himselfe by: that he useth verbum vigilans, a word that is awake (as Saint Augustine saith) or (as Salomon) a word upon his owne wheele. The Head, or the root would have served: for, if the head be above the water, there is hope for the whole body: and if the Root have life, the branches shall not long be without: yet, hee refuseth these, and other that offered themselves, and chooseth rather the terme of first fruits. And why so?

Prov.25.11.

This very day (Easter day) the day of CHRISTS rising, according to the Law, is the day or feast of the first fruits: the very Feast carrieth him to the word; nothing could be more fit or seasonable for the time. The day of the Passion, is the day of the Passeover; and CHRIST is our Passeover: the day of the Resurrection, is the day of the first fruits; and, CHRIST is our first fruits.

Chap.5.7.

And this terme thus chosen, you shall see, there is a very apt and proper resemblance betweene the resurrection and it. The rite and manner of the first fruits, thus it was. Vnder the Law, they might not eat of the fruits of the earth, so long as they were prophane. Prophane they were, untill they were sacred: And, on this wise were they sacred. All the sheaves in a field (for examples sake) were unholy. One sheafe is taken out of all the rest, which sheafe we call the first fruits. That, in the name of the rest, is lift up aloft and shaken to and fro, before the LORD, and so consecrated. That done, not onely the sheafe so lifted up, was holy (though, that alone was lift up) but all the sheaves in the field were holy, no lesse than it: The rule is, Rom. 11. 16. If the first fruits be holy, all the lumpe is so too.

Levit.23.10. 11. 14.

And thus (for all the world) fareth it in the Resurrection. We were all dead (saith the Apostle;) dead sheaves, all. One, (and that is CHRIST) this day, the day of first fruits, was (in manner of a sheafe) taken out of the number of the dead, and in the name of the rest, lift up from the grave (and in His rising, He shooke; for there was a great Earth-quake:) By vertue whereof, the first fruits being restored to life, all the rest of the dead, are in Him entitled to the same hope; in that, Hee was not so lift up for Himselfe alone, but, for us and in our names: And so the substance of this Feast fulfilled in CHRISTS Resurrection.

2 Cor.5.14.

Matth.28.2.

Not, of the dead, but, Of them that sleep: Our Hope.

Now, upon this lifting up, there ensueth a very great alteration, if you please to marke it. It was even now, CHRIST is risen from the dead, the first fruits (it should be, of the dead, too; for, from thence He rose; it is not so, but, the first fruits) of them that sleepe: that, you may see, the consecration hath wrought a change. A change, and a great change (certainly) to change νεκροὶ into κεκοιμημένοι, a buriall place, into a cœmetery, that is, a great Dortor: Graves, into beds; Death, into sleepe; Dead men, into men laid downe to take their rest; a rest, of hope; of hope, to rise againe. If they sleepe, they shall doe well.

Iohn 11. 12.

And, (that, which lyeth open in the word) Dormientium, the very same is enfolded, in the word first fruits: Either word affordeth comfort. For, first fruits imply fruits: And so we, as the fruits of the earth, falling, as doe the graines or kernells into the ground, and there lying to all mens seeming, putrified, and past hope, yet on a sudden, against the great Feast of first fruits, shooting forth of the ground againe. The other of Dormientium, the Apostle letteth goe, and fastens on this of fruits, and followeth it hard, thorow the rest of the Chapter: shewing, that the rising againe of the fruits sowen, would be no lesse incredible, than the Resurrection, but that, wee see it so, every yeare.

Vers.36.

These two words of [1] sleeping and [2] sowing would be laid up well. That, which is sowen, riseth up, in the spring: that, which sleepeth, in the morning. So conceive, of of the change wrought in our nature; that feaſt of firſt fruits, by CHRIST our firſt fruits. Neither periſh; neither that, which is ſowen, though it rot; nor they, that ſleepe, though they lye as dead, for the time. Both, that ſhall ſpring, and theſe wake, well againe. Therefore, as men ſow not grudgingly; nor lye downe at night unwillingly; no more muſt we: ſeeing, by vertue of this Feaſt, wee are now Dormientes, not mortui: now, not as ſtones, but as fruits of the earth: whereof, one hath an annuall, the other, a diurnall reſurrection. This, for the firſt fruits, and the change by them wrought.

III. The ground of our hope.

There is a good analogie or correſpondence, betweene theſe, it cannot bee denied. To this queſtion, Can one mans reſurrection worke upon all the reſt? it is a good anſwer, Why not as well as one ſheafe, upon the whole harveſt? This Simile ſerves well to ſhew it: To ſhew, but not prove. Symbolicall Divinitie is good: but, might we ſee it in the rationall, too? We may ſee it in the cauſe, no leſſe: in the ſubſtance, and let the ceremonie goe. This, I called the Ground of our hope.

Why (ſaith the Apoſtle) ſhould this of the firſt fruits ſeeme ſtrange to you? that by one mans reſurrection, we ſhould riſe all, ſeeing by one mans death we die all? By one man (ſaith hee, Rom. 5. 12.) ſinne entred into the world, and by ſinne, death: to which ſinne wee were no parties, and yet wee all die, becauſe wee are of the ſame nature, whereof he, the firſt perſon: Death came ſo, certainely; and it is good reaſon, life ſhould doe ſo likewiſe. To this queſtion, Can the reſurrection of one, a thouſand ſixe hundred yeares agoe, bee the cauſe of our riſing? it is a good anſwer, Why not, as well as the death of one, five thouſand ſixe hundred yeares agoe, be the cauſe of our dying? The ground and reaſon is, that there is like ground and reaſon of both. The wiſeſt way it is (if Wiſedome can contrive it) that a perſon bee cured by Mithridate made of the very fleſh of the viper bruiſed, whence the poiſon came, that ſo, that which brought the miſchiefe, might miniſter alſo the remedie: The moſt powerfull way it is (if Power can effect it) to make ſtrength appeare in weakeneſſe; and that He that overcame, ſhould by the nature which He overcame, be ſwallowed up in victorie. The beſt way it is (if Goodneſſe will admit of it) that as, next to Sathan, man to man oweth his deſtruction; ſo, next to GOD, man to man might be debtor of his recoverie. So, agreeable it is to the Power, Wiſedome, and Goodneſſe, of GOD, this; the three Attributes of the Bleſſed and Glorious Trinitie.

And, let Iuſtice weigh it in her ballance, no juſt exception can be taken to it, no not by Iuſtice it ſelfe; that, as death came, ſo ſhould life too: the ſame way at leaſt. More favour for life, if it may be: but, in very rigour, the ſame at the leaſt. According then to the very exact rule of Iuſtice, both are to be alike: If, by man, one; by man, the other.

We dwell too long in generalities: Let us draw neere to the perſons themſelves, in whom, wee ſhall ſee this better. In them, all anſwer exactly; word, for word. Adam is fallen, and become the firſt fruits of them that die: CHRIST is riſen, and became the firſt fruits of them that live (for, they that ſleepe, live.) Or you may (if you pleaſe) keepe the ſame terme, in both, thus: Adam is riſen (as we uſe to call rebellions, riſings:) He did riſe againſt GOD, by Eritis ſicut Dii: He had never fallen, if he had not thus riſen: His riſing was his fall. Gen. 3. 5.

We are now come to the two great Perſons, that are the two great Authors, of the two great matters in this world, life and death. Not, either to themſelves, and none elſe: but, as two Heads, two Roots, two firſt fruits; either of them in reference to his companie, whom they ſtand for. And of theſe two, hold the two great Corporations: 1 Of them that die; they are Adams: 2 of them, that ſleepe and ſhall riſe; that, is CHRISTS.

To come then to the particular: No reaſon in the world, that Adams tranſgreſſion ſhould draw us all downe to death, onely for that we were of the ſame lump; and, that CHRISTS righteouſneſſe ſhould not bee availeable to raiſe us up againe to life, being of the ſame ſheaves, whereof He the firſt fruits, no leſſe than before of Adam. Looke to the things, Death and life : Weakeneſſe is the cauſe of death; Raiſing to life commeth of Power. Shall there bee in Weakeneſſe more ſtrength to hurt, than in Power to doe us good ? Looke to the Perſons, Adam and CHRIST: ſhall Adam, being but a living ſoule, infect us more ſtrongly, than Chriſt (a quickning ſpirit) can heale us againe ? Nay then, Adam was but from the earth earthly; CHRIST the LORD from heaven : Shall earth doe that, which heaven cannot undoe ? Never : it cannot be, Sicut, Sic : As, and So : ſo runne the termes.

2 Cor. 13. 4.

Ver. 45. 47.

But the Apoſtle (in Rom. 5. where hee handleth this very point) tels us plainly, Non ſicut delictum, ita & donum; Not, as the fault, ſo the Grace : Nor, as the fall, ſo the Riſing : but, the Grace and the Riſing, much more abundant. It ſeemeth to bee, A pari; it is not, indeed : It is under value. Great odds betweene the Perſons, the Things, the powers, and the meanes of them. Thus then, meet it ſhould be: Let us ſee, how it was.

Rom. 5. 15.

Here againe, the very termes give us great light. Wee are (ſaith hee) reſtored: Reſtoring doth alwaies preſuppoſe an attainder going before; and ſo, the terme, ſignificant: For the nature of attainder is, One perſon maketh the fault, but it taints his bloud, and all his poſteritie. The [a] Apoſtle ſaith, that a Statute there is, All men ſhould die : But, when wee goe to ſearch for it, we can finde none, but [b] Pulvis es, wherein onely Adam is mentioned, and ſo none die but he. But, even by that Statute, death goeth over all men; even thoſe (ſaith Saint Paul) that have not ſinned after the like manner of tranſgreſſion of Adam. By what Law ? By the law of Attainders.

[a] Heb. 9. 27.
[b] Gen. 3. 19.

The Reſtoring then likewiſe was to come, and did come after the ſame manner, as did the attainders : That, by the firſt; this, by the ſecond Adam (ſo Hee is called Ver. 45.) There was a Statute concerning GODS commandements, qui fecerit ea, vivet in eis : Hee that obſerved the commandements, ſhould live by that his obedience, Death ſhould not ſeaze on him. CHRIST did obſerve them exactly; therefore ſhould not have been ſeazed on by death : ſhould not, but was : and that ſeaſure of his, was deaths forfeiture. The laying of the former Statute on CHRIST, was the utter making it void. So, Iudgement was entred, and an Act made, CHRIST ſhould bee reſtored to life. And becauſe, He came not for Himſelfe, but for us, and in our name and ſtead; did repreſent us, and ſo, we, vertually in Him, by His reſtoring wee alſo were reſtored : By the rule, ſi Primitiæ, & tota conſperſio ſic : as the Firſt fruits goe, ſo goeth the whole lumpe : as the Roote, the branches. And thus we have gotten life againe of mankind, by paſſing this Act of Reſtitution, whereby we have hope to be reſtored to life.

Lev. 18. 5.

Rom. 11. 16.

But, life is a terme of latitude, and admitteth a broad difference, which it behooveth us much that we know. Two lives there be : In the holy Tongue, the word which ſignifieth life, is of the duall number; to ſhew us, there is a dualitie of lives : that, two there be, and, that we to have an eye to both. It will helpe us to underſtand our Text. For, all reſtored to life : All, to one : not, all to both. The Apoſtle doth after (at the 44. Verſe) expreſly name them both. [1] One, a Naturall life, or life by the living ſoule : The other, [2] a Spirituall life, or life by the quickening Spirit. Of theſe two, Adam (at the time of his fall) had the firſt, of a living ſoule; was ſeazed of it : and, of him, all mankind, Chriſt and we all receive that life. But, the other the Spirituall (which is the life chiefly to bee accompted of) that, hee then had not, not actually; Onely, a poſſibilitie he had (if he had held him in obedience, and walked with GOD) to have beene tranſlated to that other life. For, cleere it is, the life which Angels now live with GOD, and which we have hope and promiſe to live with Him, after our reſtoring (when wee ſhall bee equall to the Angels :) that life, Adam at the time of his fall, was not poſſeſſed of.

Luc. 20. 36.

Now Adam, by his fall, fell from both, forfeited both eſtates. Not onely, that, he had in reverſion, by not fulfilling the conditions : but, even that, he had in eſſe too. For, even on that alſo did Death ſeaze after Et mortuus eſt.

CHRIST

CHRIST in his reſtitution, to all the ſonnes of Adam, to all our whole nature, reſtoreth the former: therefore, all have intereſt, all ſhall partake that life. What Adam actually had, wee ſhall actually have, wee ſhall all be reſtored. To repaire our nature, Hee came; and repaire it Hee did: all is given againe really, that in Adam really wee loſt, touching Nature. So that, by his fall, no detriment at all, that way.

The other, the ſecond, that, Hee reſtoreth too; but, not promiſcuè (as the former) to all. Why? for, Adam was never ſeazed of it; performed not that, whereunto the poſſibilitie was annexed; and ſo had in it but a defeicible eſtate. But then, by His ſpeciall grace, by a ſecond peculiar act, He hath enabled us to attaine the ſecond eſtate alſo, which Adam had onely a reverſion of, and loſt, by breaking of the condition whereto it was limited. And ſo, to this ſecond, reſtored ſo many, as (to uſe the Apoſtles words in the next verſe) are in Him: that is, ſo many, as are not onely of that maſſe or lumpe, whereof Adam was the firſt fruits (for, they are intereſſed in the former onely) but, that are beſides, of the nova conſperſio, whereof CHRIST is the Primitiæ.

[a] They that beleeve in Him (ſaith Saint Iohn) them He hath enabled, [b] to them Hee hath given power to become the ſonnes of GOD: to whom therefore, Hee ſaith, this day riſing, Vado ad Patrem veſtrum: In which reſpect, the Apoſtle calleth Him [c] Primogenitum inter multos fratres. Or (to make the compariſon even) to thoſe that are (to ſpeake, but as [d] Eſay ſpeaketh of them) His children; Behold, I and the children GOD hath given mee. The terme, He uſeth (Himſelfe) to them, after His reſurrection, and calleth them Children: And they, as His familie, take denomination of Him, Chriſtians, of CHRIST.

a Ioh 1.12.
b Ioh. 20.17.
c Rom. 8.29.
d Eſay 8.18.

Of theſe two lives, the firſt wee need take no thought for. It ſhall bee, of all; the unjuſt as well as the juſt. The life of the living ſoule, ſhall bee to all reſtored. All our thought is to bee for the latter; how to have our part in that ſupernaturall life: for, that is indeed to be reſtored to life. For, the former, though it carrie the name of life, yet it may well be diſputed, and is, Whether it be rather a death, than a life; or a life, than a death? A life it is; and not a life: for it hath no living thing in it. A death it is; and not a death: for it is an immortall death. But, moſt certaine it is (call it life if you will) they that ſhall live that life, ſhall wiſh for death, rather than it, and (this is the miſerie) not have their wiſh: for, death ſhall flie from them.

Out of this double life, and double reſtoring, there grow two Reſurrections, in the world to come, ſet downe by our SVVIOVR in expreſſe termes (Ioh. 19.) Though both bee to life, yet, [1] that is called condemnation to judgement: and [2] this onely, to life. Of theſe, the Apoſtle calleth one, the better reſurrection: the better, beyond all compariſon. To attaine this then, wee bend all our endevours; that, ſeeing the other will come of it ſelfe, without taking any thought for it at all, we may make ſure of this.

Heb. 11.35.

To compaſſe that then, wee muſt bee in CHRIST: So, it is in the next verſe: To all, but to every one in order; CHRIST firſt, the firſt fruits, and then, they that bee in Him. 1

Now, Hee is in us, by our fleſh; and we in Him, by His Spirit: and it ſtandeth with good reaſon, they that bee reſtored to life, ſhould bee reſtored to the Spirit: For, the Spirit is the cauſe of all life; but ſpecially, of the Spirituall life, which wee ſeeke for. 2

His Spirit then wee muſt poſſeſſe our ſelves of: and wee muſt doe that here: for, it is but one and the ſame Spirit, that raiſeth our ſoules here from the death of Sinne, and the ſame that ſhall raiſe our bodies there, from the duſt of death. 3

Rom. 8.11.

Of which Spirit there is firſt fruits (to retaine the words of the Text) and a fulneſſe: But, the fulneſſe, in this life, we ſhall never attaine: Our higheſt degree (here) is but, to bee of the number, whereof hee was, that ſaid, Et nos habentes primitias Spiritus. 4

Rom. 8.23.

Theſe firſt fruits wee firſt receive in our Baptiſme, which is to us, our Laver of 5

Tit. 3.5.

of regeneration, and of our renewing by the holy Spirit; where we are made and consecrate Primitiæ.

6 But, as wee need be restored to life, so (I doubt) had wee need to bee restored to the Heb.12.1. Spirit, too. Wee are at many losses of it, by this sinne that cleaveth so fast to us. I doubt, it is with us, as with the fields, that we need a feast of first fruits, a day of consecration, every yeere. By something or other, we grow un-hallowed, and need to bee consecrate anew, to re-seize us of the first fruits of the Spirit againe. At least, to awake it in us, as Primitiæ dormientium, at least. That which was given us; and by the fraud of our enemie, or our owne negligence, or both, taken from us, and lost, we need to have
1 Thes. 5.19. restored: that which we have quenched, to be light anew: that which we have cast into a Ephes. 5.14. dead sleepe, awaked up from it.

If such a new consecrating we need, what better time than the feast of first fruits? the sacring time under the Law; and in the Gospell, the day of CHRIST s rising, our first fruits, by whom wee are thus consecrate. The day wherein He was Himselfe restored to the perfection of His Spirituall life (the life of glorie) is the best for us, to be restored in, to the first fruits of that spirituall life, the life of Grace.

IV. The application of the Sacrament. And, if wee aske, what shall be our meanes of this consecrating? The Apostle telleth us (Heb. 10. 10.) we are sanctified, by the Oblation of the bodie of IESVS: That, is the best meanes to restore us to that life. He hath said it, and shewed it Himselfe; Hee
Ioh. 6.57. that eateth Me, shall live by Me. The words spoken concerning that, are both Spirit
63. and Life; whether we seeke for the Spirit, or seeke for Life. Such was the meanes of our death, by eating the forbidden fruit, the first fruits of death: and such is the meanes of our life, by eating the flesh of CHRIST, the first fruits of life.

And herein, wesshall very fully fit, not the time only and the meanes, but also the manner. For, as by partaking the flesh and bloud, the substance of the first Adam, we came to our death; so, to life we cannot come, unlesse we doe participate with the flesh and bloud of the second Adam, that is CHRIST. We drew death from the first, by partaking the substance: and so must we draw life from the second by the same. This is the way; become branches of the Vine, and partakers of His nature, and so of His life and verdure both.

So, the time, the meanes, the manner agree. What letteth then, but that wee, at this time, by this meanes, and in this manner, make our selves of that conspersion, whereof CHRIST is our first fruits: by these meanes, obtaining the first fruits of His Spirit, of that quickening Spirit, which being obtained, and still kept, or in default thereof, still recovered, shall here begin to initiate in us, the first fruits of our restitution in this life, whereof the fulnesse we shall also bee restored unto, in the life to come:
Act. 3.21. As Saint Peter calleth that time, the time of the restoring of all things. Then shall the fulnesse bee restored us too, when GOD shall bee all in all; not some in one, and some in another, but all in all. Atq; hic est vitæ finis, pervenire ad vitam cujus non est finis: This is the end of the Text, and of our life, to come to a life, whereof there is no end. To which, &c.

MARKE Chap. XVI.

Et cum transisset Sabbatum, &c.

VER. 1. And, when the Sabbath day was past, Mary Magdalen, and Mary the mother of Iames, and Salome bought sweet ointments, that they might come, and embalme Him.

2. Therefore, early in the morning, the first day of the weeke, they came unto the Sepulcher, when the Sunne was yet rising.

3. And they said one to another, Who shall role us away this stone from the doore of the Sepulcher?

4. And when they looked, they saw, that the stone was rolled away (for, it was a very great one.)

5. So they went into the Sepulcher, and saw a young man sitting at the right side; clothed in a long white robe: And they were afraid.

6. But, he said unto them, Be not afraid: Yee seeke IESVS OF NAZARET, which hath beene crucified, He is risen, He is not here: Behold the place, where they put Him.

7. But, goe your way and tell His Disciples, and PETER, that He will goe before you into Galilee: there shall yee see Him, as He said unto you.

THE Summe of this Gospell is, a Gospell: that is, a message of good tidings. In a message, these three points fall in naturally: 1 The Parties, to whom it is brought. 2 The Partie, by whom: 3 And, The Message it selfe. These three: 1 The Parties, to whom; Three women; the three Maries. 2 The Partie, by whom; an Angell. 3. The Message it selfe, the first newes of CHRISTS rising againe. These three make the three parts in the Text. 1 The Women, 2 The Angell, 3 The Message. The Summe. I. II. III.

Seven verses I have read yee. The first foure concerne the Women. The fifth, the Angell. The two last, the Angels message. In the Women, we have The Division

to to conſider: 1 Themſelves, in the firſt: 2 Their Iourney, in the ſecond and third: and 3 Their Succeſſe, in the fourth.

In the Angell, 1 The manner of his appearing, 2 and of their affecting with it.

In the Meſſage, The newes it ſelfe: 1. That CHRIST is riſen: 2. That Hee is gone before them to Galilee: 3. That there they ſhall ſee Him: 4. Peter and all: 5. Then, the Ite & dicite, The Commiſſion Ad Evangelizandum; not to conceale theſe good newes, but publiſh it: Theſe, to His Diſciples: they, to others, and ſo to us: we to day, and ſo to the worlds end.

I.

The Parties to whom: Three Women.

AS the Text lyeth, the part that firſt offereth it ſelfe, is The parties, to whom this meſſage came. Which were three Women. Where, finding that Women were the firſt, that had notice of CHRISTS Reſurrection, we ſtay. For, it may ſeeme ſtrange, that paſſing by all men, yea, the Apoſtles themſelves, CHRIST would have His Reſurrection firſt of all made knowne, to that ſex. Reaſons are rendred, of divers diverſly. We may be bold to alleage that, the Angell doth, in the Text (Verſ. 5.) Vos enim quæritis, for they ſought CHRIST. And, CHRIST is not unrighteous, to forget the worke and labour of their Love, that ſeeke Him. Verily there will appeare more Love, and Labour in theſe Women, than in Men; even the Apoſtles themſelves. At this time (I know not, how) Men were then become Women, and did animos gerere muliebres; and Women were Men: Sure, the more manly, of the twaine. The Apoſtles, they ſate mured up, all the doores faſt about them; ſought not, went not to the Sepulcher. Neither Peter that loved Him, nor John whom He loved; till theſe Women brought them word. But theſe Women (we ſee) were laſt at His Paſſion, and firſt at His Reſurrection: ſtaid longeſt at that, came ſooneſt to this: Even in this reſpect, to be reſpected. Sure, as it is ſaid of the Law, Vigilantibus & non dormientibus ſuccurrit lex; ſo may it no leſſe truly be ſaid of the Goſpell. We ſee it here, it commeth not to ſleepers; but, to them that are awake, and up and about their buſineſſe, as theſe Women were. So that, there was a capacitie in them to receive this prerogative.

Mary Magdalen, firſt.

Before I leave this part, of the Parties, I may not omit, to obſerve Mary Magdalens place, and precedence among the three. All the Fathers are carefull to note it. That ſhee ſtandeth firſt of them: For, it ſeemeth no good order. Shee had had ſeven devils in her (as wee finde, Verſe 9.) Shee had had the blemiſh to be called Peccatrix, as one famous, and notorious in that kinde: The other were of honeſt report, and never ſo ſtained: Yet, is ſhee named with them. With them, were much: but, not only with them; but before them. With them: (and that is to ſhew, CHRISTS Reſurrection (as well as His Death) reacheth to Sinners of both ſexes: And that, to Sinners of note, no leſſe than thoſe that ſeeme not to have greatly gone aſtray.) But, before them, too; And that is (indeed) to be noted; that, ſhee is the firſt, in the liſt of Women: and Saint Peter, in that of men. Theſe two: the two chiefe Sinners, either of their ſex. Yet they, the two, whoſe lots came firſt forth in Sorte Sanctorum, in partaking this newes. And this, to ſhew, that chiefe Sinners (as theſe were) if they carry themſelves, as theſe did, ſhall bee at no loſſe, by their fall: ſhall not onely be pardoned, but honoured (even as he was) like theſe, with ſtolâ primâ, the firſt robe in all the Wardrobe; and ſtand formoſt of all. And, it is not without a touch of the former reaſon; In that, the Sinner, after his recovery, for the moſt part ſeeketh GOD more fervently: Whereas they, that have not greatly gone aſtray, are but even ſo ſo; if warme, it is all. And with GOD, it is a Rule: Plus valet hora fervens quàm menſis tepens, An hower of fervor, more worth than a month of tepor. Now, ſuch was Mary Magdalen; here, and elſe-where, vouchſafed therefore this degree of exaltation, to be of the firſt

Col. 1. 12.

Luke 15. 22.

first three: nay, to be the first of the three, that heard first of His rising: Yea (as in the ninth Verse) that first saw Him risen from the dead. This of the Persons. 2 Sam. 23.19.

Their journey: and therein, their love.

And now, because their endevours were so well liked, as they were (for them) counted worthy this so great honour, it falleth next to consider, what those were: that we being like prepared may partake the like good hap. So, seeking as they, we may finde as they did. They were foure in number: The first and third in the II. the second, in the I. and the last, in the III. verse. All reduced (as CHRIST reduced them, in Mary Magdalen) to Dilexit multùm, their great Love; Of which these foure be foure Demonstrations: Or (if love be an Ensigne, as it is termed Cant. 2.) the foure Colours of it. 1. That they went to the Sepulcher: Love, to one dead. 2. That they bought precious odours; Love, that is at charges. 3. That out they went early, before breake of day: Love, that will take paines. 4. That for all the stone, still they went on: Love, that will wrestle with impediments. The first is constant, as to the dead. The second bounteous, as at expence. The third diligent, as up betimes. The last resolute, be the stone never so great. According to which foure, are the foure denominations of Love: 1 Amor, à morte, when it surviveth death: 2 When it buyeth dearely, it is Charitas: 3 When it sheweth all diligence, it is Dilectio: 4 When it goeth per Saxa, when stones cannot stay it, it is Zelus, which is specially seene, in encountring difficulties. It shall not bee amisse to touch them severally: it will serve to touch our Love, whether ours be of the same assay. Cant. 2. 4.

1 Love to the dead: Amor.

The first riseth out of these words [They went to the Sepulcher:] And (indeed) ex totâ substantiâ, out of the whole Text. For, for whom is all this adoe; is it not for CHRIST? But, CHRIST is dead, and buried three dayes since, and this is now the third day. What then, though He be dead; to their love, He liveth still: Death may take His body from their eyes, but shall never take His remembrance, from their hearts. Herein is Love, this is the first Colour (saith a great Master in that facultie) Fortis sicut Mors, Love, that death cannot foile: but continueth to the dead, as if they still were alive. And, when I say the dead, I meane not such, as the dead hath left behinde them (though that be a vertue, and BOOZ worthily blessed for it, that shewed mercy to the living for the deads sake:) But I meane performing offices of love to the dead himselfe: To see, hee have a Sepulcher to goe to: Not, so to bury his friend, as he would bury his Asse being dead. To see, he have one: and not thither to bring him, and there to leave him, and bury him and his memory both in a grave. Such is the worlds love. Salomon sheweth it, by the Lion and the Dog. All, after CHRIST living: But, goe to His Sepulcher who will, not we. The love that goeth thither, that burieth not the memory of Him that is buried, is Love indeed. Cant. 8. 6, Ruth 2. 20. Eccles. 9. 4.

2 Love that was at charges: Charitas.

The journey to the Sepulcher is Iter amoris: had it beene but to lament, as Mary Magdalen to Lazarus (Ioh. 11.) But then, here is a further matter: They went to anoint Him. That, is set for another signe: that they spared for no cost, but bought precious odours wherewith to embalme Him. Iohn 11. 31.

1. To goe to anoint CHRIST, is kindly: It is to make Him CHRIST, that is, Anointed. That terme referreth principally, to His Fathers anointing (I grant:) but, what if we also anoint Him, will He take it, in evill part? Cleerely, not: Neither quick, nor dead. Not quicke: Luke 7. Marke 14. Not dead; this place is pregnant; it is the end of their journey, to doe this. He is well content to be their, and our Anointed; Not His Fathers onely: yea, it is a way to make Him Christum nostrum, Our CHRIST, if wee breake our boxes, and bestow our odours upon Him. Luke 7. 46. Marke 14. 3.

2. To anoint Him; And, not with some odde cast ointment, lying by them, kept a little too long; to throw away upon Him: But to buy, to be at cost, to doe it, Emptis odoribus, with bought odours.

3. This to doe, to Him alive; that would they with all their hearts: But, if that cannot be, to doe it to Him dead, rather than not at all. To doe it, to whatsoever is left us, of CHRIST, to that to doe it.

4. To embalme CHRIST, CHRIST dead, yea, though others had done it
Ioh. 19. 39. before: for, so is the case. Ioseph and Nicodemus had bestowed Myrrh and Aloes to that end already: What then? Though they had done it, it is not enough: nay, it is nothing: Nay, if all the world should have done it, unlesse they might come with their odours and doe it too, all were nothing. In hoc est charitas, herein is love, and this a signe of it. A signe of it every where else; and, to CHRIST, a signe it was. Indeed, such a signe there was; but it is beaten downe, now. We can love CHRIST, absque hoc, and shew it some other way well enough. It sheweth, our love is not Charitas, no deare love; but Vilitas, love, that loves to be at as little charges with CHRIST, as may be: faint love. You shall know it thus: Ad hoc signum se contrahit, At this signe it shrinkes; at every word of it. 1. They bought; that is charge: we like it not; we had rather heare potuit vendi. 2. Odours: what need odours? An unnecessary charge: We like no odour, Marke 14. 5. but Odor Lucri. 3. To CHRIST: Nay, seeing it is unnecessary, we trust, CHRIST will not require it. 4. Not, alive; but especially, not dead: There was much adoe, while He lived, to get allowance for it; there was one of His owne Apostles (a good Marke 14. 4. charitable man, Pater pauperum) held it to be plaine perditio. Yet, to anoint the living; that, many doe: they can anoint us againe: But, to the dead, it is quite cast away. But then, if it had beene told us, He is embalmed already; why then, take away their odours; that, at no hand would have beene endured. This sheweth, our love is not Charitas. But, so long as this is a Gospell, it shall sound every Easter-day in our eare, That the buying of odours, the embalming of whatsoever is left us of CHRIST, is (and will be still) a signe of our loving and seeking Him, as we should: Though, not heretofore, yet now: Now especially, when that objection ceaseth; Hee is embalmed enough already. He was (indeed) then; but, most of the Myrrh and Aloes is now gone. That, there is good occasion left, if any be disposed in hic signo signari, with this signe to seale his love to CHRIST, anew againe.

3 Love, that takes paines: Dilectio.

From this of their expence [Charitas] we passe to the third, of their Diligence [Dilectio:] set downe (in the second verse) in these words Very early, &c. And but marke, how diligent the HOLY GHOST is in describing their diligence. The very first day of the weeke: The very first part of that first day, In the morning: The very first houre of that first part, Very early, before the Sunne was up, they were up. Why good LORD, what need all this haste? CHRIST is fast enough under His stone. He will not runne away (ye may be sure:) ye need never breake your sleepe, and yet come to the Sepulcher time enough. No; if they doe it not, as soone as it may be done, it is nothing worth. Herein is Love, Dilectio: whose proper signe is Diligentia, in not slipping the first opportunitie of shewing it. They did it not, at their leasure: they could not rest, they were not well, till they were about it. Which very speed of theirs doubleth all the former. For Citò (we know) is esteemed as much, as Bis. To doe it at once, is to doe it more than once, is to doe it twice over.

Yet, this wee must take with us [Διαγινομένης σαββάτου.] Where falleth a very strange thing: that, as wee have commended them for their quickneſse, so must wee now also for their slowneſse (out of the very first words of all:) When the Sabbath was past, then, and not till then, they did it. This diligence of theirs, as great haste as it made, stayed yet, till the Sabbath were past: and, by this meanes, hath two contrary commendations: 1 One, for the speed; 2 another, for the stay of it. Though they faine would have beene embalming Him, as soone as might be, yet not with breach of the Sabbath: Their diligence leapt over none of GODS Commandements for haste. No, not this Commandement, which (of all other) the world is boldest with; and, if they have haste, somewhat else may; but sure, the Sabbath shall never stay them. The Sabbath, they stayed: for then, GOD stayed them. But that was no sooner over, but their diligence appeared straight. No other thing could stay them

No,

Not their owne Sabbath (Sleepe,) but, before day-light, they were well onward on their way.

The laſt is in the third verſe, in theſe words, As they went, they ſaid, &c. There was a ſtone (a very great one) to be rolled away yer they could come at Him. They were ſo rapt with love, in a kinde of extaſie, they never thought of the ſtone; they were well on their way, before they remembred it. And then, when it came to their mindes, they went not backe though; but on ſtill, the ſtone non obſtante. And herein is love; the very fervour of it, Zeale: that word hath fire in it. Not only diligence (as lightneſſe) to carry it upward, but Zeale (as fire) to burne a hole and eat it ſelfe a way, thorow whatſoever ſhall oppoſe to it. No ſtone ſo heavie as to ſtay them, or turne them backe. And this is S. Iohns ſigne: Foras pellit timorem, Love (if it be perfect) caſts out feare; Et erubeſcit nomen difficultatis, ſhames to confeſſe any thing too hard for it. Ours is not ſo: we muſt have (not great ſtones (GOD wot) but) every ſcruple removed out of our way, or we will not ſtirre. But as, if you ſee one Qui laborem fingit in præcepto, that makes a great deale more labour in a precept, than needs; that is afraid where no feare is; Of Leo in viâ, a Lion, or (I wot not what) perillous beaſt in the way, and no ſuch matter: It is a certaine ſigne, his love is ſmall; his affection cold to the buſineſſe in hand. So, on the other ſide, when wee ſee (as in theſe here) ſuch Zeale to that, they went about, as (firſt) they forgot, there was any ſtone at all; and, when they bethought them of it, they brake not off, but went on though: yee may be bold to ſay of them, dilexerunt multùm, their love was great, that per ſaxa, thorow ſtones and all, yet goeth forward: that neither coſt nor paines nor perill can divert. Tell them, the Partie is dead, they goe to: It skills not, their love is not dead; that will goe on. Tell them, He is embalmed alreadie, they may ſave their coſt: It is not enough, for them, except they doe it too; they will doe it nevertheleſſe, for all that. Tell them, they may take time then, and doe it: Nay, unleſſe it be done, the firſt day, houre, and minute, it contents them not. Tell them, there is a ſtone, more than they remember, and more than they can remove: No matter, they will trie their ſtrength, and lift at it, though they take the foile. Of theſe thus qualified, we may truly ſay: they that are at all this coſt, labour, paines, to anoint Him dead, ſhew plainly, if it lay in them, to raiſe Him againe, they would not faile, but doe it: Conſequently, would be glad to heare, He were riſen: And ſo, are fit hearers of this Goſpell; Hearers well diſpoſed, and every way meet to receive this Meſſenger, and this Meſſage. Now to the ſucceſſe.

4 Love that wreſtles with impediments: Zelus.

1 Ioh. 4. 18.

Prov. 26. 13.

3 Their Succeſſe.

Wee ſee what they ſought; we long to ſee what they found. Such Love, and ſuch labour would not be loſt. This we may be ſure of, there is none ſhall anoint Him alive, or dead, without ſome recompence or conſideration; Which is ſet downe, of two ſorts: 1. They found the ſtone rolled away, as great as it was: That which troubled them moſt, how it might be removed, that found they removed, yer they came. They need never take paines with it; the Angell had done it to their hands. 2. They found not (indeed) whom they ſought, CHRIST: but, His Angell they found, and heard ſuch a Goſpell of Him, ſo good newes, as pleaſed them better, than if they had found His body to embalme it. That newes, which of all other they moſt longed to heare; that, He (they came to anoint) needed no ſuch office to be done to Him, as being alive againe. This was the Succeſſe.

And, from this ſucceſſe of theirs our leſſon is. 1. That, as there is no vertue, no good worke, but hath ſome impediment, as it were ſome great ſtone, to be lifted at, Quis revolvet? So, that it is (oft times) the lot of them, that ſeeke to doe good, to finde many imaginary ſtones removed to their hands: GOD ſo providing, Vt quod admovit Satanas, amoveat Angelus, what Satan layes in the way, a good Angell takes out of the way: That it may, in the like caſe be a good anſwer to Quis revolvet? to ſay, Angelus DOMINI, the Angell of the LORD, hee ſhall doe it; done it ſhall be: ſo did theſe here: and, as they did, others ſhall finde it.

2. Againe, it is the hope, that all may have, that ſet themſelves to doe CHRIST any ſervice; to finde His Angell at leaſt, though not Himſelfe: to heare ſome good newes, of Him, though not ſee Him at the firſt. Certaine it is, with Vngentes, ungentur,; None ſhall ſeeke ever to anoint Him, but they ſhall bee anointed by Him againe, one way or other: and finde, though not alwayes what they ſeeke, yet ſome ſupply, that ſhall bee worth the while. And, this wee may reckon of; it ſhall never faile us.

II. The Party by whom: the Angell.

To follow this further. Leave we theſe good Women, and come firſt to the Angell the Meſſenger, and after to his Meſſage. An Angell was the meſſenger: for, none other Meſſenger was meet for this meſſage. For, if His Birth were tidings of ſo great joy, as none but an Angell was meet to report it; His Reſurrection is as much: As much? nay, much more. As much: for, His Reſurrection is (it ſelfe) a birth, too. To it doth the Apoſtle apply the Verſe in the Pſalme, This day have I begotten thee (Act. 13.33.) Even this day, when He was borne anew Tanquam ex utero Sepulchri, from the wombe of the grave. As much, then; yea, much more. For, the newes of His Birth might well have beene brought by a mortall; it was but His entry, into a mortall life: But this, here, not properly, but by an Angell: for that, in the Reſurrection, wee ſhall bee like the Angels, and ſhall die no more: and therefore an immortall Meſſenger was meeteſt for it.

Luke 2.10.

Matth. 22.30.

I The Viſion.

We firſt begin with what they ſaw, the Viſion. They Saw an Angell in the Sepulcher. An Angell, in a Sepulcher; is a very ſtrange ſight. A Sepulcher is but an homely place; neither ſavoury, nor ſightly, for an Angell to come in. The place of dead-mens bones, of ſtench, of wormes, and of rottenneſſe: What doth an Angell there? Indeed, no Angell ever came there, till this morning. Not till CHRIST had beene there: but, ſince His body was there, a great change hath enſued. He hath left there Odorem vitæ, and changed the grave into a place of reſt. That, not onely this Angell here now: but, after this, * two more, yea, divers Angels, upon divers occaſions, this day did viſit, and frequent this place. Which very finding of the Angels, thus, in the place of dead bodies, may be, and is to us a pledge, that there is a poſſibilitie and hope, that the dead bodies may come alſo into the place of Angels. Why not the bodies in the grave to bee in heaven, one day; as well as the Angels of heaven to bee in the grave this day?

* Ioh. 20. 12.

* The manner of his appearing.

This for the Viſion; The next for the manner of his appearing; in what forme hee ſhewed himſelfe. A matter worth our ſtay a little; as a good introduction to us, in him, as in a mirrour, to ſee, what ſhall be the ſtate of us and our bodies in the Reſurrection: In as much as it is expreſly promiſed, we ſhall then be ἰσάγγελοι, like and equall to the Angels themſelves.

Matth. 22.30.

1 As a young man.

1. They ſaw a young man, one in the vigour and ſtrength of his yeares: And ſuch ſhall be our eſtate then: All age, ſickneſſe, infirmitie removed cleane away. Therefore it was alſo, that the Reſurrection fell in the Spring, the freſheſt time of the yeare; and, in the Morning, the freſheſt time of the day, when (ſaith Eſay) the dew is on the herbs. Therefore, that it was in a Garden (ſo it was) in Ioſeph of Arimathea's Garden: that, looke as that garden was, at that time of the yeare, the Spring; ſo ſhall our eſtate then be, in the very flower and prime of it.

Eſay 26.19.

2 Sitting.

They ſaw him ſitting: Which is (we know) the ſite of reſt, and quietneſſe; of them that are at eaſe. To ſhew us a ſecond quality of our eſtate then; that, in it, all labour ſhall ceaſe, all motions reſt, all troubles come utterly to an end for ever; and the ſtate of it, a quiet, a reſtfull ſtate.

3 On the right ſide.

They ſaw him ſit on the right ſide. And, that ſide is the ſide of pre-eminence and honour. To ſhew, that thoſe alſo ſhall accompany us riſing againe. That, we may fall on the left ſide, but, we ſhall riſe on the right; bee ſowen in diſhonour, but ſhall riſe againe in honour;

1 Cor. 15.43.

honour; that honour, which His Saints and Angels have and ſhall have for ever.

Laſt, they ſaw him clothed all in white. And white is the colour of gladneſſe, as we finde (*Eccleſ.*9.8.) All to ſhew ſtill, that it ſhall be a ſtate, as of Strength, Reſt, and Honour; ſo, of Ioy likewiſe. And that, robe-wiſe: not ſhort or skant, but (as his ſtoale) all over, downe to the ground. 4 Clothed in white.

Neither ſerves it alone to ſhew us, what then we ſhall be; but withall, what now we ought to be, this day, the day of His Riſing. In that we ſee, that, as the heavens at the time of His Paſſion, were in blacke; by the great Eclipſe, ſhewing us it was then a time of mourning: ſo, this day, the Angels were all in white, to teach us thereby, with what affection, with how great Ioy, and gladneſſe, we are to celebrate and ſolemnize this Feaſt of our SAVIOVRS riſing. Matth.27 45.

Their affection (here) was otherwiſe: And that is ſomewhat ſtrange. In the Apparition, there was nothing fearefull, as ye ſee; yet is it ſaid, they were afraid. Even now, they feared nothing: and now, they fall to be afraid, at this ſo comfortable a ſight. Had they beene guiltie to themſelves of any evill, they came to doe, well might they then have feared. GOD firſt, as the Malefactour doth the Iudge; and then His Angell, as the Executioner of His Wrath. But their comming was for good. But (I finde) it is not the Sinners caſe onely, but even the beſt's of our nature. Looke the Scripture: [a] Abraham, and [b] Iacob, in the Old: [c] Zachary and the [d] Bleſſed Virgin in the New, all ſtrucken with feare ſtill, at the ſight of good Angels; Yea, even then, when they came for their good. Their affecting therewith.

a Gen. 15.12.
b 28.17.
c Luke 1.12.
d 29.

It fareth with the Angels of light, as it doth with the light it ſelfe. Sore eyes and weake, cannot endure it: No more can Sinners, them; No more can the ſtrongeſt ſight neither beare the light, if the Obiect be too excellent; if it be not tempered, to a certaine proportion: Otherwiſe, even to the beſt that is, is the light offenſive. And that is their caſe; Afraid they are, not for any evill, they were about, but for that, our very nature is now ſo decayed, Vt lucem, ad quam nata eſt, ſuſtinere nequeat, as the Angels brightneſſe, for whoſe ſociety we were created, yet (as now we are) beare it we cannot, but need to be comforted at the ſight of a comfortable Angell. It is not the Meſſenger Angelicall, but the Meſſage Evangelicall that muſt doe it.

III.

Which leadeth us along, from the Viſion that feared them, to the Meſſage it ſelfe that releeved them: which is the third part. The ſtone lay not more heavie on the grave, than did that feare on their hearts, preſſing them downe hard. And no leſſe needfull was it, the Angell ſhould roll it away (this ſpirituall great ſtone) from their hearts, than hee did that other materiall, from the Sepulcher it ſelfe. With that, hee begins. The Meſſage.

1. Feare not. A meet Text for him, that maketh a Sermon at a Sepulcher. For, the feare of that place maketh us out of quiet all our life long (*Heb.*2.) It lyeth at our heart like a ſtone: and no way there is, to make us willing to goe thither, but by putting us out of feare; by putting us in hope, that the great ſtones ſhall be rolled away againe, from our Sepulchers, and we, from thence, riſe to a better life. It is a right beginning, for an Eaſter-dayes Sermon, Nolite timere. Feare not. Hebr.2.15.

2. And, a good reaſon he yeelds, why not. For, it is not every bodies caſe (this) Nolite timere vos, feare not You: Why not? For You ſeeke IESVS of NAZARETH, which hath beene crucified. Nazareth, might keepe you backe (the meanneſſe of His Birth;) and Crucified, more (the reproch of His Death:) In as much as theſe cannot let you, but ye ſeeke Him; are aſhamed neither of His poore birth, nor of His ſhamefull death, but ſeeke Him: And ſeeke Him, not (as ſome did) when He was alive, when good was to be done by Him, but even now, dead, when nothing is to be gotten: And, not to rob or rifle Him, but, to embalme Him, an office of love and kindneſſe (this touched before:) feare not You, nor let any feare that ſo ſeeke Him.

Now, that they may not feare, he imparts them his Meſſage full of comfort. And, it containeth foure comforts of Hope, anſwerable to the foure former proofes of their Love. 1 He is riſen; 2 But, gone before you; 3 Yee ſhall ſee Him; 4 All His Diſciples, Peter and all: Goe tell them ſo.

1 He is riſen.

In that you thus teſtifie your love in ſeeking Him, I dare ſay, ye had rather, He, yee thus come to embalme, that Hee were alive againe: and, no more joyfull tidings could come to you, than that He were ſo: Ye could (I dare ſay) with all your hearts be content, to loſe all your charge you have beene at, in buying your odours, on condition it were ſo. Therefore I certifie you, that He is alive, He is riſen. No more than Gaza gates could hold Samſon; or the Whale, Ionas; no more could this ſtone keepe Him in the Sepulcher, but riſen He is.

Iud.16.3. Ion.2.10.

Firſt, of this ye were ſure, here He was; ye were at His laying in; ye ſaw the ſtone ſcaled, and the Watch ſet: ſo that here He was. But, here He is not, now: Come ſee the place, truſt your owne eyes, Non eſt hic.

But what of that, this is but a lame conſequence, for all that; He is not here, therefore He is riſen. For, may it not be, He hath beene taken away? Not, with any likelyhood; though ſuch a thing will be given out, that the Diſciples ſtole Him away while the watch was aſleepe: But your reaſon will give you; 1. Small probability there is, they could be aſleepe, all the ground ſhaking and tottering under them by meanes of the * earthquake. 2. And ſecondly, if they did ſleepe for all that, yet then could they not tell (ſleeping) how, or by whom, He was taken away. 3. And thirdly, that His Diſciples ſhould doe it; they (you know) of all other were utterly unlike to doe any ſuch thing: So fearfull, as miſerably they forſooke Him yet alive, and have ever ſince ſhut themſelves up ſince He was dead. 4. And fourthly, if they durſt have done ſuch a thing, they would have taken Him away, linnen cloathes, and all (as, fearefull men will make all the haſte they can poſſibly) and not ſtood ſtripping Him and wrapping up the cloathes, and laying them every parcell, one by one in order, as men uſe to doe that have time enough and take deliberation, as being in no haſte, or feare at all. To you therefore (as we ſay, ad hominem) this conſequence is good, Not taken away, and not here; therefore riſen He is.

Matth.28.13.

* Matth.28.2.

He is gone before.

But, to put all out of doubt: you ſhall truſt your owne eyes; Videbitis, you ſhall ſee, it is ſo; you ſhall ſee Him. Indeed, Non hic would not ſerve their turnes: He knew their queſtion would be, Where is Hee? Gone He is; Not, quite gone, but only gone before, Which is the ſecond comfort: For, if He be but gone before, wee have hope, to follow after; I præ, ſequar; ſo is the nature of Relatives. But, that we may follow then, Whither is He gone? Whither, He told ye Himſelfe, a little before His Paſſion (Chap. 14. 28.) into Galilee.

1. No meeter place, for IESVS of Nazareth to goe, than to Galilee: there He is beſt knowne: there, in [a] Nazareth He was brought up; there, [b] in Cana He did His firſt miracle, ſheweth His firſt glory; meet therefore to ſee His laſt: there in Capernaum, and the coaſts about, preached moſt, beſtowed moſt of His labour.

a Matth.2.23. b Ioh.2.11.

2. Galilee; it was called Galilee of the Gentiles; for, it was in the confines of them: To ſhew, His Reſurrection (tanquam in meditullio, as in a middle indifferent place) reacheth to both; concerneth, and benefiteth both alike. As Ionas, after his reſurrection, went to Ninive; ſo, CHRIST, after His, to Galilee of the Gentiles.

Matth.4.15.

Ion 3.4.

3. Galilee; that, from Galilee (the place, from whence, they ſaid, No good thing could ever come) He might bring one of the beſt things, and of moſt comfort, that ever was; the ſight and comfort of His Reſurrection.

4. Galilee laſt, for Galilee ſignifieth a Revolution or turning about to the firſt point; Whither they muſt goe, that ſhall ſee Him, or have any part or fellowſhip in this feaſt of His Reſurrection. Thither is He gone before: and, thither if ye follow, there ye ſhall ſee Him.

This

This is the third comfort: and, it is one, indeed. For, Sight is the ſenſe of certaintie; and all that they can deſire: And there they did ſee Him. Not theſe here only, or the Twelve only, or the 120. names (in Acts 1.) only; but even 500. of them at once (ſayth the Apoſtle 1 Cor. 15.) a whole Cloud of Witneſſes, to put it cleane out of queſtion. And, of purpoſe doth the Angell point to that apparition, which was the moſt famous and publike of all the tenne.

3 Ye ſhall ſee Him. Act. 1. 15. 1 Cor. 15. 6.

This was good newes for thoſe here; and they were worthy of it, ſeeking Him, as they did. But, what ſhall become of the reſt; namely, of his Diſciples that loſt Him alive, and ſeeke Him not dead? They ſhall never ſee Him more. Yes: (which is Evangelium, good tidings indeed, the chiefe comfort of all) they too, that left Him ſo ſhamefully, but three dayes agoe; them He caſts not off, but will be glad to ſee Him in Galilee. Well whatſoever become of other, Peter (that ſo foully forſooke, and forſware Him both) hee ſhall never ſee Him more. Yes: Peter too, and Peter, by name. And indeed, it is more than needfull, Hee ſhould name him: Hee had greateſt cauſe of doubt; the greateſt ſtone upon him, to be rolled away, of any; that had ſo often, with oathes, and execrations, ſo utterly renounced Him. This, is a good meſſage, for him: and [1] Marie Magdalen as fit a meſſenger, as can be, to carrie it; one great Sinner to another. That not only CHRIST is riſen: but content, that His forſakers, deniers, forſwearers, Peter and all ſhould repaire to Him, the day of His Reſurrection: That, all the deadly wounds of His Paſſion have not killed His compaſſion over ſinners: That, though they have made wracke of their dutie, yet He hath not loſt His mercie, nor left it in the Grave; but is as readie to receive them as ever. His Reſurrection hath made no change in Him: dying, and riſing, He is to ſinners, ſtill one and the ſame; ſtill like Himſelfe, a kinde, loving, and mercifull SAVIOVR. This is the laſt: PETER and all may ſee Him,

4 And his Diſciples, Peter and all. Mar. 14. 71.

And with this Hee diſmiſſeth them, with Ite & dicite, with a Commiſſion and precept; by vertue whereof, Hee maketh theſe Women Apoſtolos Apoſtolorum; Apoſtles, to the Apoſtles themſelves, (for, this Article of the Reſurrection, did they firſt learne of theſe Women; and they were the firſt of all, that preached this Goſpell:) giving them in charge, that, ſeeing this day is a day of glad tidings, they would not conceale it; but impart it to others; even to ſo many as then were or would ever after bee Chriſts Diſciples.

2 Their commiſſion.

They came to embalme Chriſts bodie naturall: that needs it not; it is paſt embalming, now. But another body Hee hath; a myſticall body, a company of thoſe, that had beleeved in Him, though weakly: that they would goe and annoint them, for they need it. They ſit drying away, what with feare, what with remorſe of their unkind dealing with Him: they need to have ſome oyle, ſome balme, to ſupple them. That, they doe, with this Goſpell: with theſe foure: Of which foure ingredients is made the balme of this day.

Thus wee ſee, theſe that were at coſt to annoint CHRIST, were fully recompenſed, for the coſts they had beene at; themſelves annointed with oyle and odours of a higher nature, and farre more pretious, than thoſe they brought with them, Oleum lætitiæ (ſaith the [a] Pſalme) Odor vitæ (ſaith the [b] Apoſtle.) And that, ſo plenteouſly, as there is enough for themſelves; enough too, for others, for His Diſciples, for Peter and all.

[a] Pſal. 45. 7. [b] 2 Cor. 2. 15.

But, what is this to us? Sure, as wee learned by way of duty, how to ſeeke Chriſt, after their example; ſo, ſeeking Him in that manner, by way of reward, we hope to have our part, in this good newes, no leſſe than they.

The Application

1 CHRIST is riſen; that concerneth us alike. [c] The Head is got above the water; [d] The [c] Ephe. 4. 15.

d Rom. 11. 16. e 1 Cor. 15. 23. d The Root hath received life and ſap: e The Firſt fruits are liſt up and conſecrate: We, no leſſe than they, as His members, His branches, His field, recover to this hope.

2. And for His going before; that which the Angell ſaid here once, is ever true: He is not gone quite away; He is but gone before us: He is but the antecedent; we, as the conſequent, to be inferred after. Yea, though He be gone to Galilæa ſuperior, the Galilee that is above (Heaven) the place of the Celeſtiall Spheres and Revolutions; even thither is He gone, not as a party abſolute, of or for Himſelfe; but as a Herbenger (ſaith the Apoſtle) with relation to others, that are comming after, for whom He goeth before to take up a place. So, the Apoſtle there; So, the Angell here: So He Himſelfe, Vado; not Vado alone, but Vado parare locum vobis, I go to prepare a place, wherein to receive you, when the number of you and your brethren ſhall be full.

Hcb. 6. 20. Iohn 14. 2.

3. To us likewiſe pertaineth the third viditis: that, is the Goſpell indeed. He is riſen: Riſing, of it ſelfe, is no Goſpell. But, He is riſen and we ſhall ſee Him: that, is it. That the time will come alſo, that we ſhall ſee Him, in the Galilee Celeſtiall, that is above; yea, that all ſhall ſee Him, even they that pierced Him. But, they that came to embalme Him, with joy and liſting up their heads, they ſhall ſee Him: with that ſight ſhall they ſee Him, that ſhall evermore make them bleſſed.

Iohn 19. 37.

4. Laſtly (which is worth all the reſt:) That we ſhall not need to be dismayed with our unworthineſſe, in that, willing He is, Peter ſhould have word of this, and Mary Magdalen ſhould carry it. That (ſuch as they were) ſinners, and chiefe ſinners ſhould have theſe tidings told them, this Goſpell preached them: that He is as readie to receive them to grace, as any of the reſt; and will bee as glad to ſee them, as any others in Galilee.

But then are we to remember the condition; that (here) we get us into Galilee, or elſe, it will not be. And Galilee is a revolution, or turning ad principia to the firſt point, as doth the Zodiake, at this time of the yeare. The time of His Reſurrection is Paſcha, a paſſing over: The place Galilee, a turning about: It remaineth then, that we paſſe over, as the time; and turne, as the place putteth us in minde. Re-uniting our ſelves to His body and bloud, in this time of His riſing; of the diſſolving and renting whereof our ſinnes were the cauſe: The time of his ſuffering, keeping the feaſt, of CHRIST our new PASSEOVER offered for us; Leaving whatſoever formerly hath beene amiſſe, in CHRISTS grave, as the weeds of our dead eſtate, and riſing to newneſſe of life, that ſo we may have our parts in the firſt reſurrection: Which they are happie and bleſſed that ſhall have; for, by it they are ſure of the ſecond. Of which bleſſing and happineſſe, He vouchſafe to make us all partakers, that this day roſe for us IESVS Chriſt the RIGHTEOVS, &c.

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE THE KINGS MAIESTIE AT VVHITE-HALL ON the XVI. of April, A. D. MDCIX. being EASTER-DAY.

IOHN Chap. XX. Ver. XIX.

Cum ergo ſero eſſet die illo, una Sabbatorum, & fores eſſent clauſæ, ubi erant Diſcipuli congregati propter metum Iudæorum: venit IESVS, & ſtetit in medio, & dixit eis, PAX VOBIS.

The ſame day then, at night, which was the firſt day of the weeke, and when the doores were ſhut, where the Diſciples were aſſembled for feare of the Iewes, came IESVS and ſtood in the middeſt, and ſaid to them, Peace be unto you.

HIS is the enter-view of CHRIST and His Diſciples: and this, His firſt ſpeech, at His firſt enter-view: Both, this day, the very firſt day of His riſing: Five ſundry times, appeared He, this day. 1 To Mary Magdalen: 2 To the Women comming from the Sepulcher: 3 To the two that went to Emmaus: 4 To Saint PETER: 5 And here now, to the Eleven and thoſe that were with them. The two firſt, to Women; the three laſt to men: So, both Sexes. To Peter, and to Marie Magdalen: So, to Sinners of both Sexes. To the Eleven, as the Clergie; to thoſe with them, as the Laitie: ſo, to both Eſtates. Abroad, at Emmaus: at home, here. Betimes; and now, late. When they were ſcattered, ſeverally; and now joyntly, when they were gathered together. That no Sex, Sort, Eſtate, Place or Time excepted: but, as Viſitavit nos oriens ab alto; ſo Viſitavit, occidens ab imo: Riſing from above, at at His Birth; Riſing, from beneath, at His reſurrection, He viſited all.

But, of all the five, this is the chiefe. Thoſe were, to one; as Peter: Or two; as thoſe of Emmaüs: Or three, as the Women: This, to all: The more, the more Witneſſes; the better for faith. Thoſe when they were ſcattered: this (here) when they were all together: The more together, the more meet for this ſalvation here, Peace be to you.

The Diviſion

Which Salutation is the very ſubſtance of the text: the reſt but appendent, all.

I. In it, two things give forth themſelves: 1 The Perſons, to whom, Vobis. 2. The Matter of the Wiſh it ſelfe, Peace. The Perſons are thus ſet downe: Diſcipuli, congregati, concluſi: 1 His Diſciples they were; 2 gathered; 3 and the doores ſhut on them, for feare of the Iewes.

There will fall out beſides, foure other points. 1 CHRIST His Site; that, He ſtood, when He wiſhed it: 2 His Place; that, in the middeſt, He ſtood: 3 The Time; All this, the ſame day, the firſt day of the weeke, Sunday, Eaſter day: 4 and, the very time of the day; that, it was late.

II. The ſpeech, of it ſelfe, is a Salutation: any will ſo conceive it, at the firſt hearing. And, if it were but ſo, and no more; that were enough. Chriſts Salutations are not (as ours be) formall; but good matter in them.

But, it is more than a Salutation, ſay the Fathers, for this reaſon. At meeting, men uſe to ſalute but once: within a verſe, He repeateth it againe. So, it keepes not the law of a ſalutation: but, it is (certainely) ſomewhat, beſides. Votum Chriſti, they call it. Votum pacis, votum Chriſti: Chriſts Vow, or wiſh: His Vow; and His firſt Vow.

Now, every Vow implieth an advice, at the leaſt. What Chriſt wiſheth to us, He wiſheth us to. Every wiſh, ſo: But, if it be the wiſh of a Superior, in His Optative, there is an Imperative; His Wiſh, is a command, if hee have wit that heares it. So that theſe words (rightly underſtood) are both an Advice and an Injunction to it; of the nature of an Edict. Pax vobis, is as much, as Pacem habete in vobis, Be at peace among your ſelves. Mar. 9. 50.

Wee are then, to joine with Chriſt; to follow Him, in His Wiſh. To whom Hee wiſheth it: To all Chriſts diſciples, together, even to His whole Chriſtian Church; and, even them, that (it may be) as little deſerve it, as theſe here did. 1 To make it Caput voti, our firſt Vow: yea, firſt and ſecond; as Chriſt here did. 2 Oportet ſtantem optare, to wiſh it, ſtanding. 3 And, ſtanding where Chriſt ſtood (that is materiall) in the midſt. 4 This day to doe it; and thinke it pertinent to the time: It is Votum Paſchale. As for Serò, wee ſhall never need to take thought for it: It is never too ſoone; late enough, alwaies if it be not too late; that, is all the feare.

I. The perſonall part of Chriſts Salutation.

THe chiefe point, firſt: Pax vobis. The words are but two; yet, even betweene them there ſeemeth to be no peace: but one (in a manner) oppoſite to the other. Looking to Vobis (the Perſons) this ſhould not bee a ſalutation for them, Pax. Looking to the Salutation (Peace) it ſhould not be, to thoſe Perſons; Vobis, to you. So that, our firſt worke will be, to make peace between the two words. Pax and vobis, reconciled.

Vobis, to you. Will you know, who they bee? To you, Peter, and Iohn, and the reſt. To you, of whom none ſtood by me: To you, of whom ſome ranne away, ſome denied, yea, forſware me. To you, of whom, all, every one ſhrunke away and forſooke me. How evill doth this greeting agree with this Vobis? Yet, even to theſe, Venit, & ſtetit, & dixit; He came, ſtood, and ſaid, Peace be to you. Matt. 26. 56. 72. Mar. 14. 53.

Vſed

Vſed by them, as He had been, no cauſe, He ſhould come, or ſtand, or ſpeake at all: Or, if ſpeake, not thus. Not come to them, that went from Him: nor ſtand amongſt them, that had not ſtood to Him: nor ſpeake to them, that had renounced Him. It is ſaid, they feared the Iewes: All things conſidered, they had more cauſe to feare Him; and to looke for ſome reall revenge, at His hands: If not that, ſome verball reproofe, a ſalutation, of another ſtile or tenour: And well, if they might ſcape ſo. Confitemini Domino, quia bonus; It is not ſo: No evill deed, for all this: No, not ſo much as an unkind word. Above that, they could looke for; farre above that, they deſerved, it is, Pax vobis. You and I are at peace, you and I are friends; Peace bee unto you. This is His firſt goodneſſe: His making a peace betweene Pax and Vobis.

Mar.14.50. Ioh.9.22. Pſal.106.1.

This Speech to theſe Perſons, is much mended, by adding the Time in the text; that; it was illo die; the day of His riſing. Pax vobis, is a good ſpeech, for Good-friday, then, men grow charitable, when ready to dye. But, on their Eaſter-day, at their riſing, the day when Exaltavit Eum Deus, the day of their exaltation, they uſe to take other manner ſpirits, and remember former diſgraces, with a farre other congie. Hæc eſt lex hominis; Men doe thus: but, not CHRIST. Neither their indignitie, Vobis; nor His owne dignitie changeth Him. Riſing, exalted, the verie day of His exaltation, illo die, He ſaith, Peace be unto you.

Illo die, that is Primo die. Phil.2.9.

Another yet: That it was Primâ Sabbati, the very firſt day of the weeke: tooke no long day for it: Nay, no day at all, but the very firſt day. Ioſeph (exalted) dealt well with his brethren; but, not the firſt day: it was ſome time, firſt. He kept them in feare, a while; but ſhewed himſelfe, at the laſt. CHRIST doth not ſo; hold them in ſuſpence: illo die, primo die, the ſame day, the firſt day, He came, and ſhewed Himſelfe, and ſaid, Peace be unto you.

primâ Sabbati * Luc.24.1.

Yea, not ſo much as dixit (here) but (as it falls out) will beare a note. Even, that it is dixit, and not Reſpondit; a Speech, not an Anſwer. That Hee ſpake it, unſpoken to: He, to them, firſt; yet they, to Him. He might well have ſtayed till then: and reaſon would, they ſhould firſt have ſued for it. Yet they aske it, Hee giveth it: and prevents them with the bleſſing of peace. They firſt, in falling out: Hee firſt, at making friends.

Dixit. not, reſpondit. Pſal.21.3.

A great comfort for poore ſinners, when the many indignities, wee have offered CHRIST, ſhall preſent themſelves before us, to thinke of this Vobis. That, when the Diſciples had done the like, yet He forgat all; and ſpake thus kindly to them, this day: That He will vouchſafe us the like (ſpecially, if we ſeeke it, He will) and ſay to us, Pax vobis.

Will yee remember now, to extend your wiſh of Peace, 1 to them, that (it may bee) deſerve it as evill, as theſe, here: Even, his qui longè. 2 To doe it, at our riſing, at our high day, when it is Eaſter with us: 3 Not, to make their hearts to pant, and eyes to faile firſt; but, even primâ Sabbati, to doe it. 4 And not to take ſtate upon us, and be content, to anſwer, Peace; and not ſpeake: be moved for it; but, not move it: yes, even move it, firſt. If wee doe, we joyne with CHRIST, in His firſt part, the perſonall part of the wiſh.

Illis, end illo die, and primo die, what they were, wee ſee; and in what ſort. Yet, (not to grate on this point altogether) ſome ſmoke yet was there in the flaxe; ſome ſmall remainders, illices miſericordiæ (as Tertullian) to move his mercie: In theſe words, 1 Diſcipuli, 2 congregati, 3 concluſi, 4 propter timorem Iudæorum: That, His Diſciples (yet) they were; and, together they were; and, in feare of the Iewes, they were ſhut up.

2 The perſons to whom.

Whatſoever, or howſoever they were elſe, yet, they were His Diſciples: Vnprofitable ſervants, yet Servants: Loſt ſonnes, yet Sonnes: forgetfull Diſciples, yet Diſciples. His Diſciples they were: and, howſoever they had made a fault,

1 His Diſciples. Luc.17.10. 15.24.

fault (as it ſeemeth) ſo meant to hold themſelves, ſtill; and hereafter to learne their leſſon better.

2 For, In feare of the Iewes.

And, I like well their feare: that, they were afraid of the Iewes. It ſhewes, there were no good termes betwixt them; and that they ſhut their doores upon them; therefore they meant not to goe out to them, or ſeeke Pax vobis of the Iewes. They had no meaning (it ſeemeth) to give over CHRIST. If they had, what need they feare the Iewes? The Iewes would have done them no harme, they might have ſet open their doores, well enough.

3 Aſſembled.

And Congregatis (I take it well) is no evill ſigne. It would have beene Ex aliâ cauſâ; for love, rather than feare: And againe, for feare of GOD, rather than of the Iewes. Yet, even thus, I miſ-like it not: And, much better this feare, than that at the Paſſion: That, ſcattered them one from another; every man ſhift for one. This makes them draw together, and keepe together, as if they meant to ſtand out afreſh. Which very [Congregatis] makes them fit for this Salutation. It cannot well be ſayd, diſgregatis, to them that are in ſunder. Vnà, is a diſpoſition to unitie; and gathering, to the binding up in the band of peace. CHRIST (that ſayd, Quoties volui congregare?) liked it well, to finde them thus together: And, His comming was, as to take away their feare; ſo, to continue their gathering, ſtill.

Mat. 23. 37.

And, ſhall wee learne this of the Diſciples: 1 If a fault fall out, not to give over ſchoole, but to continue our Diſciple-ſhip, ſtill. 2 And, not to goe over, to ſeeke our Pax vobis, at the hands of His Enemies: To ſhut out both them, and their peace, too. 3 And laſtly, not to forſake the fellowſhip; to keepe together, ſtill. For, being ſo together, wee are neerer our Peace. This ſhall make CHRIST come and ſay it to us the ſooner, and the more willingly.

II. The reall part.

The reall part, Voti ſumma, that which He wiſheth, is Peace. Firſt, Why peace? Then, What peace?

I Why peace

Why, Peace? Is there nothing more worth the wiſhing? Nothing more, of it ſelfe; Nothing more fit for theſe perſons, this place, and this time.

Of it ſelfe: Votum pacis, Summa votorum. It is, all wiſhes, in one; Nothing more to be wiſhed. For, in brevi voce Breviarium, this little word is a Breviarie of all, that good is.

1 As; good Pſal. 133. 1. Pro 15. 16. 17. Pro. 17. 1.

To ſhew how, a little: quàm bonum, how good, how worth the wiſhing it is. It is tam bonum, ſo good, as, without it, nothing is good. With it (ſaith Salomon) an hand-full of herbes; without it, an houſe-full of ſacrifices, is not good. With trouble and vexation, nothing is good; nothing is to be wiſhed.

Rom. 10. 15.

And as, without it, nothing is to bee wiſhed: ſo, all that is to bee wiſhed (all good) is within it. Evangelizantium pacem, Evangelizantium bona; quia, in pace, omnia bona: To bring newes of peace, is, to bring newes of all good things; for, all good things are, in peace. Bona, is the true gloſſe or expoſition of peace.

2 Pleaſant. 4 Pſal. 133. 1. 3 Profitable. Pſal 72. 7.

* Quàm bonum, you know: And, quam jucundum, too: But good and pleaſant; and pleaſant, not onely, as Aarons ointment (which was onely pleaſant:) but, as Hermon dew, which brings profit with it. Abundantia pacis (ſaith the Pſalme) Peace, and Plentie goe together.

4 Wiſhed by all. Luc. 2. 14. 2 Cor. 13. 11. Phil. 4. 7. Luc. 4 34.

And yet, how much it is to bee wiſhed, this ſheweth, Pacem te poſcimus omnes: All wiſh it: Angels wiſh it (Heaven, to Earth) Pax in terris: And Men wiſh it (Earth, to Heaven) Pax in cælis. GOD wiſheth it: moſt kindly for Him; Deus pacis, pacem Dei; the GOD of peace, the peace of GOD. Yea, the enemie of all peace wiſheth it: for, hee complaines, Veniſti nos inquietare, are yee come to trouble us? So he would not be troubled, that troubles all; but, ſet all together by the eares, and ſit quiet himſelfe.

But, it is much for the honour of peace, that cum bellum geritur, pax quaritur: Even militare perſons, with ſword in one hand and fire in the other give this for their Embleme, Embleme, Sic quærimus pacem, Thus with ſword and fire, ſeeke we peace. As, ſeeke it, at laſt, they muſt; we muſt, all. Beſt, primâ Sabbati: but, Serò, ſooner or later, come to it we muſt: If it be not the firſt, it muſt be our laſt.

But, if there were nothing elſe, this onely were enough; and, though there bee many, this chiefly doth ſhew it: That our SAVIOVR CHRIST, ſo often, ſo diverſe wayes, ſo earneſtly wiſheth it. Going, Hee did it, Pacem meam do vobis: And now comming, He doth it. Sitting, He did it (Chap. 16.) and now, ſtanding. Living, when He was borne, Pax in terris, Xenium Chriſti, It was CHRISTS New-yeares-gift: Dying, when Hee was to ſuffer, Pacem meam relinquo vobis, it was Legatum Chriſti, CHRISTS Legacie. And now (here) riſing againe, it is His wiſh, ſtill. To ſhew, not onely the good of this life, but of the next, to be in peace. Prayed for it (Chap. 17.) Payed for it (Chap. 18.) Wept for it; O if thou hadſt knowne the things that pertaine to thy peace! Wept for it; and bled for it: therefore, immediately (the very next words) Hee ſheweth them His hands and His ſide: As much to ſay; See, what I have ſuffered, to procure your peace: Your peace coſt mee this: Pax vobis coſt Crux mihi; See, you hold it deare. Now (ſure) if there were any one thing better than other, thoſe hands would not have with-held it, and that heart would wiſh it. And, Peace it doth wiſh: therefore, nothing more to be wiſhed. Complete it is, Votum pacis, Summa votorum.

2 And by CHRIST, often.

Iohn 16 33.
Luke 2. 14.
Chap. 14. 28.
Chap. 17. 21.
Luke 19. 42.

There need no other ſigne be given, but that, of the Prophet Ionas; that CHRIST wiſhed his wiſh: So the tempeſt may ceaſe, and peace (as a calme) enſue, ſpare mee not; take mee, caſt mee into the Sea; make mee a Peace-offering, and kill mee. This, is enough to ſhew, it is to be wiſhed; to make it precious in our eyes. For, we undervalue it, at too low a rate, when (that, which coſt ſo deare) for every trifling ceremonie, we are ready to loſe it. Our faint perſwaſion in this point, is the cauſe, wee are faint in all the reſt.

Ion. 1. 12.

Well, though this be thus good; yet good it ſelfe is not good, unleſſe it be in ſeaſon, come fitly. Doth this ſo? Every way fitly. 1 For the Perſons: 2 For the Place: 3 and for the Time.

The Perſons: both 1 CHRIST by whom; and 2 they, to whom it is wiſhed.

1. CHRIST, by whom: Decet Largitorem pacis hæc ſalutatio (ſaith Cyril) It is meet, for Him, to give peace, that made peace: Nay, Ipſe eſt Pax noſtra (ſaith the Apoſtle;) and, for Peace, what fitter ſalutation, than Peace?

2. They, to whom: for, they needed it: with GOD, they had no peace, whom they had provoked: Nor peace with men; not with the Iewes about them: Nor peace with themſelves, for they were in feare, and night-feare, which is the worſt of all others. Fit for them; and they, for it: for, together they were, and ſo, not unfit to entertaine it.

And, with the Place, it ſuiteth well. For, they were ſhut up, as men environed and beleaguered with their enemies: Concluſi, & derelicti, ſhut up and forſaken: And to ſuch, Peace is ever welcome.

And, for the time, ſeaſonable. For, after a falling out, Peace is ſo: And, after a victory, Peace is ſo. Fit therefore, for this day, the day of the Reſurrection: for, till then, it was not in kinde. The great battell was not fought: The laſt enemie (death) was not overcome. Never, till now: but, now the laſt enemie is conquered, now it is in ſeaſon.

And, for the thing it ſelfe, Peace, is a kinde of Reſurrection. When CHRIST was riſen, His Diſciples were dead. Thoſe dead affections of ſorrow and feare, when they ſeaze thorowly upon men, what are they, but Mors ante mortem? Vpon good newes of IOSEPH, IACOB is ſaid to revive: as if, before, hee had beene given for dead. It was their caſe, here. The houſe was to them, as their grave; and the doore as the grave-ſtone; and they buried in feare: when they ſaw Him, in the next verſe, and were thus ſaluted by Him, they gat hope, were glad (that is) revived againe. For, if thoſe were the pangs of death, peace (after a ſort) is a reſurrection: and ſo, a fit wiſh for the time.

Never kindly till then.

And, to ſay truth, Peace is never kindly, till then. They define felicitie ſhortly, to be nothing elſe but Pax deſiderii. For, give the deſire perfect peace, and no more needs, to make us happie. Deſire hath no reſt; and will let us have none, till it have what it would; and, till the Reſurrection, that will not be.

Chap. 16. 33.

1. Pax & preſſura, our SAVIOVR oppoſeth (Chap. 16.) If we be pinched with any want, Deſire hath no peace. 2. Let us want nothing (if it were poſſible) No peace, yet: Pax & Scandalum (the Pſalmiſt oppoſeth:) When we have what we would, ſomewhat commeth to us, we would not; ſomewhat thwarts us: Till non eſt eis ſcandalum, till that be had away, deſire hath no peace. 3. Let that be had away, yet a new warre there commeth. Peace and feare, are (here) oppoſed. Wee are well: neither preſſura, nor Scandalum: but, we feare tolletur à vobis, that it will not hold, or we ſhall not hold. The laſt enemie will not let us be quiet. Till he be overcome, our deſire hath no perfect peace. That, will not be, till the Reſurrection. But, then, it is Pax plena, pura, perpetua: full without want; pure, without mixture of offenſive matter; and perpetuall, without all feare of forgoing, of tolletur à vobis. And that, is pax deſiderii; and that, is perfect felicitie: The ſtate of the Reſurrection; and the wiſh of the Reſurrection day.

2 What peace.

Thus (we ſee) good it is: and, fit it is. It remaines, we ſee, What it is; What, peace. When we ſpeake of Peace, the nature of the word leadeth us, to aske, With whom? And they be diverſe. But, as diverſe as they be, it muſt be underſtood of all; though, of ſome one, more eſpecially than the reſt.

1 Peace with GOD.

There is a peace above us in heaven, with GOD: that, firſt. They were wrong, here: their feare ran all upon the Iewes: It ſhould have looked higher. The Iewes they kept out, with ſhutting their doores: Againſt GOD, no doore can be ſhut. Firſt, peace with Him: and, with Him, they have peace, to whom CHRIST ſaith Pax vobis.

2 With our owne hearts.

1 Pet. 2. 11.

There is another peace, within us, in ſimu, with our heart. For, betweene our ſpirit and our fleſh, there is in manner of a Warre: The luſts of the fleſh, even Militant, wage Warre (ſaith Saint Peter) againſt the ſoule: And, where there is a warre, there is a peace, too. This is peace with feare, here. Which warre is ſometime ſo fearefull, as men, to rid themſelves of it, rid themſelves of life and all; Conclude a peace there. This, followeth of the firſt: If all be well above, all is well within.

3 With all men.

Matth. 5. 9.

There is a Peace without us, in earth, with men, with all men: The Apoſtle warrants it; peace with the Iewes here and all. I will never feare, to make civill peace, a part of CHRISTS wiſh; nor, of his Beati Pacifici, neither. He will be no worſe at Eaſter, than at Chriſt-maſſe, Hee was: at this, His ſecond; than, at that His firſt birth. Then, Ianus was ſhut, and peace over all the world. Orbem pacatum was ever a clauſe in the prayers of the Primitive Church; that the World might be quiet.

4 Among themſelves.

Pſal. 133. 2.

Pſal. 122. 3.

Act. 4. 32.

Yet is not this the peace of CHRISTS principall entendment; but, their peace, to whom CHRIST ſpake: Pax Diſcipulorum; Pax vobis, inter vos: Peace among them, or betweene themſelves. It was the ointment on Aarons head: Aaron, that had the care of the Church. It was the dew that fell upon Sion: Sion, the place, where the Temple ſtood. The peace of Ieruſalem; that it may be once, as a Citie at unity within it ſelfe. The primitive peace; that the multitude of Beleevers may be of one heart and one minde. All the reſt depend upon our peace with GOD; and, our peace with Him, upon this:

[a] Marke 9. 50. Phil. 4. 9. [b] Pſal. 122. 6. [c] Prov. 12. 20. [d] Matth 5 9.

[a] Pacem habete inter vos, and Deus pacis erit vobiſcum. The peace of Ieruſalem; [b] they ſhall proſper that love it, (ſaith David.) [c] Ioy ſhall be to them that counſell it (ſaith Salomon.) [d] Bleſſed ſhall they bee, that make it (ſaith CHRIST.) How great a reward ſhould he finde in Heaven; how glorious a name ſhould he leave on earth, that could bring this to paſſe!

This,

This, is CHRISTS wiſh: And what is become of it? If we looke upon the Chriſtian world, wee ſee it not; it is gone, as if CHRIST had never wiſhed it. Betweene Iehu and Ieroboam, Salomons ſeed went to wracke. Iehu, his proceedings (like his Chariot wheeles) headlong and violent. But Iehu, is but a brunt; too violent, to laſt long. Ieroboam is more dangerous: who makes it his wiſedome, to keepe up a Schiſme in Religion; they ſhall ſway both parts more eaſily. GOD forbid, we ſhould ever thinke Ieroboam wiſer than Salomon. If peace were not a wiſe thing, the Wiſeſt mans name ſhould not have beene Salomon. A greater than Salomon would never have ſaid, Habete ſalem & Pacem; If you have any ſalt, you will have peace. Sure, when the Diſciples loſt their peace, they loſt their wiſedome: Their wiſedome, and their ſtrength both. They were ſtronger, by congregatis, than by clauſis foribus; more ſafe, by their being together, than any doore could make them.

1 Peace, Chriſts wiſh.

Matt. 12 42.
Mar. 9. 50.

It is, as CHRIST told us (Luk. 10. where, He preſcribes this forme of ſalutation) it ſpeeds, or it miſſes, thereafter, as it meets with the Sonne of peace: Speeds, if it finde him; if not, comes backe againe, and takes no place.

Luk. 10. 5. 6.

Well, though it doe not, we muſt ſtill hold us to CHRISTS Wiſh: and, when all failes, ſtill there muſt bee Votum pacis in corde; though enmitie in the act, yet peace in the heart ſtill. Still, it muſt hold, Amicus, ut non alter; Inimicus, ut non idem: friends, as if never otherwiſe; Enemies, as if not ever ſo. Quaſi torrens, bellum: warre, like a land-floud, that will be drie againe: Quaſi fluvius, pax; Peace, as a river, never drie, but to runne ſtill and ever.

But yet, many times wee aske, and have not, becauſe wee aske not aright (ſaith Saint Iames:) We know not the things, that belong to our Peace; wee erre in the order, manner, ſite, place, or time.

Iam. 4. 3.

The Order: which helpeth much, firſt it is; firſt Primum & ante omnia; Caput fidei; the prime of His wiſhes. No ſooner borne, but Pax in terris: No ſooner riſen, but Pax vobis: Apertio labiorum, the very opening of his lipps was, with theſe words: The firſt words: at the firſt meeting: On the very firſt day. It is a ſigne, it is ſo in His heart. That, which moſt grieveth us, we firſt complaine of: and, that which moſt affecteth us, ever ſooneſt ſpeake of. This, is the firſt error. That which was firſt with CHRIST, is laſt with Chriſtians: and, I would it were ſo (laſt:) for, then, it were ſome: Now, ſcarce any at all, as it ſeemeth.

I
The order of it: firſt wiſhed.

In the Manner: for, firſt is but firſt, that is but once. This, is firſt, and ſecond. Here, Hee ſaith it: and, within a verſe, Hee is at it againe. Nay, firſt, ſecond, and third: 1 in this, 2 the XXI, and 3 XXVI. verſes: As if (like Actio, in Rhetorique) all in all.

The Manner: thrice wiſhed.

All CHRISTS vowes are to be eſteemed; ſpecially, His ſolemne vowes: And His ſpeeches; chiefly, thoſe He goeth over and over againe. That which, by Him, is double and treble ſaid, would not, by us, be ſingly regarded. He would have it better marked: therefore He ſpeaketh it the ſecond time. He would have it yet ſinke deeper; therefore, the third alſo. We fault, in the manner. Once, we doe it (it may be:) but, upon any repulſe, wee give over: if it come not at firſt, we go not to it Secundò & tertiò, repetitis vicibus. We muſt not leave at once, that CHRIST did ſo oft.

The ſecond error is; wee aske it ſitting (I feare;) and CHRIST ſtood: His ſtanding imports ſomething. Standing, is the ſite of them, that are ready to goe about a matter: as they, to take their journey, in the XII. of Exodus. That Site, is the Site of them, that wiſh for peace: Oportet ſtantem optare. A Sedentarie deſire (it may bee) wee have; but, loth to leave our cuſhion: Wee would, it were well; but not willing, to diſeaſe our ſelves. Vtinam hoc eſſet laborare, ſaid hee, that lay along and ſtretched himſelfe. So ſay we: Peace we would; but, ſtanding is painefull. Our wiſh hath lipps, but no leggs.

2 His Site in wiſhing it. Stetit.

Exod. 12 11.

But, it could not be ſaid: Beautifull are the feete of them that bring Peace, if the feet had

Eſay 52. 7.
Rom. 10. 15

had nothing to doe, in this buſineſſe. With ſitting and wiſhing, it will not be had. * Peace will hide it ſelfe; it muſt be ſought out: It will fly away, it muſt be purſued. This then, is a point, wherein, we are to conforme our ſelves to CHRIST: as well to uſe our legs, as to open our lips for it. To ſtand, is Situs venientis: To hold up the hands, Habitus orantis. The meaning of which ceremonie, of lifting up the hands with prayer, is, Vt, pro quo quis orat, pro eo laboret, what we pray for, we ſhould labour for: what wee wiſh for, ſtand for. Wee ſee, CHRIST ſheweth His hands and His feet; to ſhew, what muſt be done with both, for it. If we ſhould be put to doe the like, I doubt, our wiſh hath never a good legge, to ſtand on.

* Pſal. 34. 14.

3 His Place: In medio. Luke 1. 79.

To ſtand then: But, to ſtand, in a certaine place. Every where to ſtand, will not ſerve the turne. Stetit in medio, that ſtanding place is aſſigned for it, thus guiding our feet into the way of Peace. And, the Place, is materiall, for peace. All bodies naturall never leave moving, are never quiet, till they recover their proper places; and, there, they finde peace.

By nature.

The midſt is CHRISTS place, by Nature: He, is the ſecond Perſon in divinis; and ſo, the middle-moſt of the other two. And, on earth, follow Him (if you will) you ſhall not (lightly) finde Him out of it: Not, according to the letter, ſpeaking of the materiall place. At His birth; In medio animalium, in the Stable. After (a Childe) In medio Doctorum, in the Temple. After (a Man) Medius veſtrûm ſtetit (ſaith Iohn Baptiſt) in the midſt of the people; ſaith He of Himſelfe, Ecce Ego in medio veſtri, in the midſt of His Apoſtles. At His death, it fell to His turne likewiſe, that place; even then, He was in the midſt. And now (riſing) there He is (wee ſee.) They, in the midſt of the Iewes: and He, in the midſt of them. After this, in Patmos, Saint Iohn ſaw Him in Heaven, in the midſt of the Throne: in earth, walking in the midſt of the Candleſtickes. And, at the laſt day, He ſhall be in the midſt, too, of the ſheepe on His right hand, and the goats on His left. All which ſhew, the place and He, ſort very well.

Luke 2. 7. 46. Iohn 1. 26. Luke 22. 27. 23. 33. Apoc. 7. 17. 1. 13. Matth. 25. 33.

By office, as a Mediatour.

But, were it not naturall for Him, as the caſe ſtandeth, there, He is to ſtand, being to give peace. No place ſo fit, for that purpoſe: None, ſo kindly, as it. His Office being, to be a Mediatour, Medius betweene GOD and man, where ſhould a Mediatour ſtand, but in Medio?

1 Tim. 2. 5.

The reaſon of it.

Beſides, the two qualities of good, being to be Diffuſivum and Vnitivum; that, is the fitteſt place, for both. To diſtribute, beſt done, from the center. To unite, likewiſe; ſooneſt meet, there. The place it ſelfe hath a vertue ſpecially to unite: which is never done but by ſome middle thing. If we will conclude, we muſt have a Medius terminus: Elſe, we ſhall never get Majus and Minus extremum to come together. Nor, in things naturall; either combine two elements diſagreeing in both qualities, without a middle ſymbolizing with both: Nor fleſh and bone, without a cartilage betweene both. As for things morall; there, the middle is all in all. No vertue without it. In Iuſtice; encline the ballance; one way or other, the even poize is loſt: Et, opus Iuſtitiæ, pax: Peace is the very worke of Iuſtice. And the way, to peace, is the mid way: neither to the right hand, too much; nor, to the left hand, too little. In a word; all analogie, ſymmetrie, harmony, in the world, goeth by it.

It commeth all to this: The manner of the Place doth teach us, what manner of Affection is to be in them, that wiſh for, or ſtand for peace. The place is indifferent, equally diſtant, alike neere, to all. There, pitch the Arke; that, is the place for it. Indifferencie in carriage, preſerveth peace: By forgoing that, and leaning to extremities, it is loſt. Thither we muſt get againe, and there ſtand, if ever we ſhall recover it. Diſceßita medio loſt it: Stetit in medio muſt reſtore it.

Therefore when you heare men talke of peace, marke whether they ſtand where they ſhould. If with the Phariſee, to the corners, either by partialitie one way, or prejudice, another; no good will be done. When GOD will have it brought to paſſe, ſuch mindes He will give unto men; and make them meet, to wiſh it, ſeeke it, and finde it.

A little

A little (now) of the time. This, was CHRISTS wiſh, at this time: And CHRIST never ſpeakes out of ſeaſon. Therefore, a ſpeciall intereſt hath this Feaſt, in it. It is Votum Paſchale, and this is Feſtum pacis. 4 The Time; In illo die.

And ſure, Habemus talem conſuetudinem, & Eccleſiæ Dei: Such a cuſtome we have, and ſo, the Church of GOD hath uſed it; to take theſe words of CHRIST, in the nature of an Edict for pacification, ever at this time. That, whatſoever become of it; all the yeare beſide, this time ſhould be kept a time of peace; we ſhould ſeeke it, and offer it: ſeeke it, of GOD; and offer it, each to other. 1 Cor.11.16.

There hath not, theſe ſixteene hundred yeares, this day paſſed, without a Peace-offering. And, the Law of a Peace-offering is; he, that offers it, muſt take his part of it; eat of it, or it doth him no good. This day therefore, the Church never failes, but ſets forth her Peace-offering: the Body, whoſe hands were here ſhewed: and, the Side, whence iſſued Sanguis crucis, the bloud that pacifieth all things in earth and heaven: that we, in and by it, may this day, renew the Covenant of our peace. Then can it not be, but a great griefe, to a Chriſtian heart, to ſee many, this day, give CHRISTS peace the hearing, and, there is all; heare it, and then turne their backes on it; every man goe his way, and forſake his peace: in ſtead of ſeeking it, ſhun it; and, of purſuing, turne away from it. Col.1.20.

We have not ſo learned CHRIST: Saint Paul hath not ſo taught us. His Rule it is: Is CHRIST our paſſeover offered for us (as, now, He was:) Epulemur itaque (That, is his Concluſion) Let us then keepe a Feaſt, a Feaſt of ſweet bread, without any ſowre leven, that is, of Peace without any malice. Ephes.5.20. 1 Cor.5.7,8.

So to doe: and, even then (this day) when we have the peace-offering in our hands, then, then to remember, alwayes (but then, ſpecially) to joyne with CHRIST, in His wiſh; to put into our hearts, and the hearts of all, that profeſſe His name (theirs ſpecially, that are of all others moſt likely to effect it) that CHRIST may have His wiſh, and there may be peace thorow the Chriſtian world: That we may once all partake together, of one Peace-offering; and with one mouth, and one minde, glorifie GOD, the Father of our LORD IESVS CHRIST.

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE THE KINGS MAIESTIE AT VVHITE-HALL, ON the VIII. of April, A. D. MDCX. being EASTER-DAY.

IOB Chap. XIX.

Quis mihi tribuat, ut ſcribantur, &c.

VER. 23. Oh that my words were now written! Oh that they were written even in a booke!

24. And graven with an iron pen, in leade, or in ſtone for ever!

25. For I am ſure, that my Redeemer liveth, and Hee ſhall ſtand the laſt on the earth (or, and I ſhall riſe againe in the laſt day from the earth.)

26. And though, after my skin* wormes deſtroy this body: I ſhall ſee GOD in my fleſh.

27. Whom I my ſelfe ſhall ſee, and mine eyes ſhall behold, and none other for me, though my reines are conſumed within me. (Or, and this hope is laid up in my boſome.)

* Or, And I ſhall bee compaſſed again with my skinne.

THIS day calleth us, to ſay ſomewhat of CHRISTS Reſurrection. To finde CHRISTS Reſurrection, in the New Teſtament, is no maſtery: Out of many places, you have thence heard of it heretofore, many times; and many times may, hereafter, out of many places moe. If it be but for variety, it will doe well, not to dwell ſtill on the New; but, otherwhiles to ſee, if we can finde it, in the Old. It will give us good ſatisfaction to ſee IESVS CHRIST to day and yeſterday, the ſame: yeſterday, to them, to day, to us. to reade Reſurget in IOB, He ſhall riſe; as we reade Reſurrexit, in IOHN, He is riſen: To ſee their Creed, Hebr. 13. 8.

and ours differ but in tenſe, ſhall riſe, and is riſen : Shall and is : but, the REDEEMER all one, in both. Much adoe is made by your Antiquaries, if an old ſtone be digged up with any dimme letters on it. In this Text, I finde mention of a ſtone to bee graven; ſo that, I ſhall preſent you this day, with an Antiquitie; an old ſtone digged up in the land of Hus, as old as Iobs time, and that as old as MOSES; with a faire inſcription, the Characters of it yet legible, to prove the faith of this Feaſt, ſo ancient, that it began not with the Chriſtians; the Patriarchs had it as many hundred yeares before CHRIST, as wee are after. This Text is a monument of it. And, it will be never the worſe welcome to us that are Gentiles, that it commeth from one that is a Gentile (as IOB was) and not of IACOBS line. It is the ſtronger, for that MOSES and IOB, the Iew and Pſal.90.5. Gentile beleeved it : MOSES put it, in his ordinarie prayer (the ninetieth Pſalme) as it were, his Pater noſter; and IOB here, in his Creed.

Saint Hierome ſaith of IOB : Nullum tam apertè poſt CHRISTVM, quàm iſte hic ante CHRISTVM, de Reſurrectione loquitur CHRISTI & ſuâ : No man, ever ſince CHRIST, did ſo cleerely ſpeake of CHRISTS Reſurrection, and his owne, as Ioh.11.25. IOB did here, before CHRIST : That his Redeemer liveth and ſhall riſe againe. Which 1 Pet.1.3. is as much to ſay as, He is the Reſurrection and the life : (Saint Iohn could ſay no more.) It is his hope; He is by it regenerate, to a lively hope : (Saint Peter could ſay no more.)
1 Cor.15.53. Enters into ſuch particulars, this fleſh; and theſe eyes : (Saint Paul could doe no more.) There is not in all the Old; nay there is not in all the New, a more pregnant direct place.

There is then, in this monument of antiquitie, a direct prophecie; or (if you will) a plaine Creed, of the ſubſtance of this Feaſt, of his Redeemers riſing, and of his hope to riſe by Him; the one poſitivè, the other illativè. There is a patheticall Poëme ſet before it; and there is a cloſe or farewell, by way of Epiphonema, after it, no leſſe patheticall.

The Summe and Diviſion.

I. The two firſt verſes, we may well call the Paraſcue, or preparation to the Feaſt of Paſſeover : which ſerve to ſtirre up our regard, as to a Myſterie or matter of great moment; worthie not onely to bee written or enrolled in a booke, but to bee cutt in ſtone; a monument to be made of it, ad perpetuam rei memoriam, Oh that, &c.

II. Then followeth (in the third) his redeemer and his riſing; his paſſing over from death to life : I know, &c. and out of it (in the laſt) by way of inference, his owne : Et quòdego, &c. ſet downe with words ſo cleere, and ſo full of caution, as, in the Epiſtle to the Corinthians, it is not fuller expreſſed.

III. Vpon theſe two, there bee two Acts here ſet downe, 1 Scio, and 2 Spero. He beginnes with Scio, for the truth : and ends with Hæc mihi ſpes for the comfort, or uſe of this knowledge. Graven, that it may bee knowne : knowne, that it may bee our hope. His it was, and ours it muſt bee : repoſita, with him; reponenda, with us, to bee lodged and layed up in our boſomes, againſt we be layd into the boſome of the earth. Indeed, [ſculpſit in lapide] is nothing without [reponi in ſinu;] Graving in ſtone will doe no good, without laying it up in the boſome.

A SER-

I.

IOB, fearing (it ſhould ſeeme) if hee had but barely propounded the point following, it would have beene but ſlenderly regarded; doth enforce himſelfe, to ſet it downe with ſome ſolemnitie, to make the deeper impreſſion; (which I call the Paraſceue:) that wee might not reckon of it; as a light holy-day; but, as a high feaſt. He would have the Scio of it ſtamped in ſtone, as worthy everlaſting remembrance; and the Spero of it carefully laid up, as worthy pretious accompt. It is as much as Saint Paul had ſayd: It is a faithfull ſaying and by all meanes worthy to be received: For the Scio, faithfull; for the ſpero, worthy all receiving: For the truth, to be graven in marble; for the comfort, to be lodged in the boſome.

The Paraſceue or preparation. Iobs wiſh.

1 Tim. 1. 15. 4. 9.

For the firſt, thus hee proceedeth. Hee was dying now; and ſeeing he muſt dye, one thing hee had, hee would not have dye with him: It was that, when hee had loſt all, hee kept in his boſome ſtill; when all comforters, and comforts forſooke him, and (as hee ſaith) his Phyſicians grew of no value, hee found comfort in. This, hee thought, it was pittie ſhould periſh: but, though he dye, it live. It was certaine words; and, becauſe they had been cordiall to him (had been, to him; and might bee to others) hee deſires they might remaine to memorie; and becauſe writing ſerves to that end, they might be written.

Which his wiſh of writing conſiſts of three degrees; is as it were three wiſhes in one.

1 They be words; and becauſe words bee but winde (his owne Proverbe) that they might not blow away with the winde, he wiſheth they were written: Quis mihi tribuat, Who will helpe him to a Clerke, to ſet them downe in writing?

1 That it were written. Chap. 6. 26.

2 But then, hee bethinks himſelfe better: they were no common ordinarie matter, therefore not to be committed to common ordinarie writing. So, they might bee rent or loſt: they bee more worth than ſo. Therefore now ſecondly, hee mends his wiſh: hee would not have them to be barely written, but regiſtred in a booke, enrolled upon record, as publike inſtruments; mens deeds, judiciall proceeding; or (as the verie word gives it) Acts of Parliament, or whatſoever is moſt authenticall.

2 Written in a booke.

And yet, upon further advice, he calls backe that too, by a third wiſh. If they were upon record, Records will laſt long, yet, even them, time will iniure. No inke, no parchment, but will decay with time. Now, theſe he would have laſt for ever: therefore hee gives over his Scribe, and in ſtead of him wiſheth for a Graver: no paper, or parchment will ſerve; it muſt be ſtone, and the hardeſt ſtone, the Rocke. For this paper he muſt have a penne of iron: that he wiſheth too. But, here is mention of lead: what is to bee done with that? If wee beleeve the Hebrewes (that beſt knew the faſhion of their Country Monuments,) when it is graven, the graving may bee choked with ſoile, and the edges of the letters, being rough, and uneven, may bee worne in, or broken and ſo defaced; to provide for that, the graving he would have filled with leade, that ſo it might keepe ſmooth and even, from defacing; and full, from choking up. That it be לעד (the laſt word) that is, laſt for ever, to the laſt Ages and Generations to come, never to be worne but to hold for ever. If it were the beſt in the world, more cannot be done, or wiſhed, than this: and this he wiſheth and not coldly but earneſtly. Oh that it were, would God it were! Quis mihi tribuat? Who will doe ſo much, Who? as if he were earneſt begging of GOD and man to have it done.

3 Written in ſtone, with a pen of iron for ever.

Now in the name of GOD, what may this be, that all this worke is kept about? It is the worke of this day. And why would not a booke ſerve for this? Why no remedie but it muſt bee in ſtone? There want not reaſons: Let me touch ſome few. Moſes and Iob are holden to have lived at one time. Moſes Law was graven in ſtone, wee know. This of Iob (here) is Goſpel, the ſubſtance, the chiefe article of it. No reaſon

Why, in ſtone, &c.

1. Reaſon. Exod. 34. 1. 1 Cor. 15. 14.

reaſon, the law, in tables of ſtone; and the Goſpell, in ſheets of paper. Good reaſon, Iob, as zealous for the Goſpell, as Moſes, for the Law. If that wrought in ſtone, this no leſſe; as firme and durable, as it, every way. And the ſame reaſon is for the iron penne. As the ſtone for the law, ſo the penne for the Prophets. If, in the Prophet, Ier.17.1. mens ſinnes be written with a penne of iron; meet, the diſcharge ſhould be written no leſſe deepe, with as hard a penne, as it; that ſo, the characters of one, may match the other at each point.

2 Reaſon. This for Moſes: now for our Redeemer. There it was meet, ut de Petrâ, in petrâ: 1 Cor.10.4. Petra autem CHRISTVS, Our Redeemer is a Rock: O LORD my Rocke and my Re- Pſal.19.15. deemer (ſaith David) or my Redeemer of the Rocke, alluding to this of Iob: Kindly it is, it 1 Cor.15.54. ſhould bee wrought in the Rocke, that is of the Redeemer, who is the Rocke. And ſo the reſurrection, being a putting on incorruption, would not be written in corruptible ſtuffe, but in that commeth neereſt to incorruption, and is leaſt of all ſubject to corrupt and decay: The words would be immortall, that treat of immortalitie.

3 Reaſon. A third, in reſpect of thoſe Works, that are uſually wrought of ſtone, as Grave-ſtones, Hoſ.13.14. as Arches Triumphall. The Reſurrection is mors mortis (ſaith Oſee) ô death I will bee 1 Cor.15.54. thy death: for the death of him that is the death of us all, here, is a grave-ſtone allowed, 55. and an Epitaphe graven on it. Here it is, and ſo doth Nazianzen call this Scripture, Eſa.25.8. Deaths Epitaphe. Either (if as Eſay ſaith, Death by CHRISTS riſing be ſwallowed up 1 Cor.15.54. in victorie:) a trophee of this victorie would remaine; and that, as all victories, in a Pyramis of ſtone: and that Arch-wiſe on two pillars, 1 One for Chriſts; 2 One for our reſurrection.

4 Reaſon. One more: That Iob needeth this wiſh, in regard of thoſe, that were to receive this doctrine. It will not well bee written, there is ſuch unbeleefe and hardneſſe of heart, yea, even in the Diſciples, and ſo generally in our nature; as, enough to doe, to grave it in us: yet ſo neceſſarie with all, as where it will not be written, he wiſhes it graven. Written, where it may; but græven, where it muſt. But written, or græven, one of them in us all.

II.

The Object: Iobs Redeemer, and his reſurrection.

This for Iobs wiſh. Shall we now paſſe to the third verſe, and ſee what theſe words bee, that no paper will ſerve, but ſtone; nor penne, but iron; nor inke, but lead? Great expectation is raiſed with this ſo ſtately an entrie. The words be Iobs: His Scio, and his Spero, touching the two articles of this day, 1 His Redeemer, and His riſing; 2 and the traine of it, His owne riſing, and his ſeeing GOD. They beginne with Scio the pillar of this faith, and end with Hæc mihi ſpes the arch of his hope; ever, hope giving the aſſumption to faiths propoſition.

1 Quòd Redempton. Let's beginne with the object of his knowledge. The firſt is newes of a Redeemer. Wee owe this word to Iob: hee, the firſt, in the bible, that ever named Him ſo. Of the creation, wee read, in Moſes: and GOD provided well for us, that we ſhould no ſooner heare of a Creator by Moſes, but we ſhould, of a Redeemer, by Iob. For, though GOD by right of creation were (as ſaith Melchiſedeck) owner of heaven and earth, yet the Gen.14.19. creature being ſubject to vanitie ſhewed they were gone, aliened from GOD. But this is Rom.8.20. good newes, that ſeeing we were GODS and not our owne, He would not ſee that carried away that was His owne, but would bee content one ſhould redeeme it backe.

But, it is newes to heare, that Iob is at his Redeemer; Iob with all his innocencie, Iob 1.8. with his ſo juſt, and holy life, as GOD Himſelfe bare witneſſe unto it, as Sathan him- 9 ſelfe could not except againſt it; yet hee is not at Scio quòd Iudex; but Scio quòd Re- 2.3. demptor: doth deprecari judicem; and, for all his vertues, a Redeemer will doe well 4. though; and hee in the number of thoſe, that are glad to ſay Scio, to take notice of Him.

From which his Scio, his notice taking, we take a true eſtimate of Iobs eſtate. For if he looke after a Redeemer, then is hee, either ſold for a Servant, or carried away for a Captive: one of theſe. For, theſe two onely we read of; redeemed from Egypt the houſe of bondage: or redeemed from Babylon the land of their captivitie. Saint Paul confeſconfesseth both by himselfe; Sold under sin, and led away captive under the law of sinne. Rom.7.14. 23.

Iob confesseth as much: Peccavi, quid faciam? sinned he had, and by committing Iob.7.20. 6 10.
of sinne was become Servus peccati. Sold by himselfe, and made subject by sinne; and sold by GOD, and made subject to corruption: from both which hee needed a Redeemer. Whether servant, or captive, one or both, it falleth out well, that both states are redeemable; neither past redemption. Sinned; that hee needs a Redeemer: not so sinned, but a Redeemer will serve. GOD is willing (saith Elihu) to Chap.33.24. 26.
receive a reconciliation, to admit of a Redeemer: if wee can get us one, to lay downe 34 31. the price, there is hope, wee may bee restored, to see GOD againe. A Redeemer will doe it.

Why then, Scio quòd, hee knowes of one. Good tydings, to all that need to know, there is one, presently in being. For then, Nunc dimittis, may Iob say; he may depart in peace, dye when hee will, his Redeemer lives, who will never see that perish, He hath payd the price for; but, since He came to redeeme that which was lost, will not suffer that to be lost which He hath redeemed.

This of his Redeemer. Now, what he beleeves of Him. First, live hee must: be 2 a living, quick thing; not dead, or without life. Silver, gold will not doe it; our Quòd Vivit.
redemption is personall: not reall, to give somewhat and save himselfe. But such a Redeemer, as must answer body for body, and life for life; give Himselfe, for Iob, and those He redeemes: so is the nature of the word; so the condition of our redeeming.
There is His Person.

Of what nature, out of the word Redeemer. Sure, if a Redeemer, GOD. The His Natures: God.
Psalme deduceth at large: Man cannot redeeme his brother, nor give an attonement unto GOD for him. It cost more to redeeme soules: so that, hee must let that alone for ever. Psal.49.7. 8.
Then tells hee us plainely: it is GOD shall redeeme our soules from the hand of hell. Verse 15.
Iob saith the same in effect: In His Saints He found folly, and in His Angels pravitatem; Chap.15.15. 16.
somewhat awry: They (both) need a Redeemer, themselves. That, they want them- 25.4. 5. selves, they cannot performe to others: and, if neither Saint, nor Angell; then no Redeemer, but GOD.

On the other side, if a Redeemer, man He is to bee, of necessitie. So is the flat And Man.
law of redemption of persons. Hee must be frater, or propinquus, a brother or next of Levit.25 25.
bloud: else, not addmitted to redeeme a person. That He may be admitted then, He Ruth.3.12.
must bee flesh of our flesh; and then He may. The very word sheweth it which doth as properly signifie, to bee next of kinne, as to redeeme. Vpon the point then, both 3 N 2 Hee must be. Man cannot; GOD may not: But, GOD and man both, may and can.

But what stand we straying the word Redeemer, or the conditions of it, when we Deum, in carne.
have both twaine, his natures in formall termes, immediately in the verse following, videbo Deum in carne? There is GOD in plaine termes; and His flesh is humane flesh; and that is man. I know, in carne (there) may be construed two waies: But (I know) both waies well; and both waies it is taken, by the Fathers: [1] I in my flesh, shall see GOD: or: [2] I shall see Deum in carne, that is Deum incarnatum, GOD having taken flesh upon Him. This later way, I finde, Saint Augustine taketh it: Videbo Deum in carne, quod, ad id tempus pertinet cum CHRISTI Deitas habitu carnis induta est. I shall see GOD in my flesh: this pertaines to the time, when the God-head of CHRIST was clothed with the habit of flesh. And well both: For, one depends on the other; our seeing GOD in the flesh; upon GODS being seen in our flesh. But, Deus, in carne, are the two natures.

Now His office is Redeeming: How discharges He that? How brings He the quod resurget: worke of our redemption to passe? Many were His workes concurring to it. Iob His Office.
singles out, and makes choise of one among them all, which is the chiefe of all, the accomplishment of all, and where He shewed Himselfe a compleat Redeemer. For, then a Redeemer right, when He had brought His worke to perfection: and that He did, when He rose againe.

So I read; rise againe; and not stand. It is well knowen, it is the proper word for for riſing, and not ſtanding. The LXX. ſo turne it; not στήσεται, ſhall ſtand; but ἀναστήσεται, ſhall riſe againe. The Fathers ſo read it: Nec dum natus erat Dominus (ſaith Saint Hierome) & Athleta Eccleſiæ Redemptorem ſuum videt à mortuis reſurgentem, He was not yet borne, and the Churches champion, Iob, ſaw his Redeemer riſing from the dead. Victurum me certâ fide credo, Liberâ voce profiteor, quia Redemptor meus reſurget, qui inter impiorum manus occubuit: with aſſured faith I beleeve, and with free courage confeſſe, that riſe I ſhall, in as much as my Redeemer ſhall riſe, who is to dye by the hands of wicked men: (ſaith Gregorie, upon theſe very words.)

Riſe againe then ſhall our Redeemer from the dead. There He was then, or He could not riſe thence. How came He there? So that, here is His death implyed evidently, that brought Him thither. Riſe He cannot, except firſt He fall: Fall therefore He muſt and be layd up in the earth, before He can riſe from thence againe. Specially ſeeing, we find Him firſt alive (in the fore-part of the verſe;) and then riſe againe (in the latter.) For how can that be, unleſſe death come betweene?

Yea, the Fathers goe further: and from the words [carne me â] ſet downe the very ſtate of His death. In my fleſh, that is (ſay they) ſuch fleſh as mine, rent and torne. As (to ſay true) betweene CHRISTS fleſh, which Pilate ſhewed Him, with Ecce Homo, and Iob's, no great odds: Vnum in toto corpore vulnus: One reſembled ſomewhat the other; ſcarce any skinne left on Him, no more than Iob: poſtquam pellem meam contiverunt, might CHRIST as truly ſay. Ioh. 19. 5.

In this caſe, hee ſaw Him; brought to the duſt: and thence hee ſeeth Him riſing againe: and ſo now, it is Eaſter day with Iob. For, this Text, this day, was fulfilled. Then, Hee roſe againe: and riſing, ſhewed Himſelfe a perfect Redeemer. Then: for, till then, though the price were payd, nothing was ſeen to come backe. Now, His ſoule was not left in hell; and ſo that came backe: Nor His fleſh, to ſee corruption; and ſo, that came backe. And, having thus with a mighty hand redeemed and raiſed Himſelfe, He is able to doe as much for us. Quam in Se oſtendit, & in me facturus eſt (ſaith Gregorie) Exemplo hîc monſtravit, quod promiſit in præmio: What He ſhewed in Himſelfe, He will performe in us; and what we ſee now in this example, then we ſhall feele in our owne reward. Pſal. 16. 10. Act. 2. 31. 13. 35.

But, thus have wee, in this verſe compriſed, His Perſon, His two natures, God-head, and Man-hood; His Office, His Death, and His Reſurrection, and His Second comming: (for, at His firſt, Iob ſaw Him not, as Simeon; but, at His ſecond, ſhall.) What would we more? with a little helpe, one might make up a full Creed.

Iobs owne relurrection.

Very well then, on hee goeth, and out of this [Scio quòd Redemptor] hee inferreth [Scio quòd ego;] arguing, from his Redeemer to himſelfe. Eâdem catenâ revincta eſt CHRISTI reſurrectio, & noſtra; One chaine they are linked with, His and ours: you cannot ſtirre one end, but the other moveth with it. The ſinewes of which reaſon are in this; that the Redeemer doth but repreſent the perſon of the redeemed. For, a Redeemer is res propter alium; all he doth, is for another: Lives not, dyes not, riſes not, to or for himſelfe; but, to or for others: him or them, He undertakes for. His life, death, reſurrection, theirs; and the conſequence (ſo) good: Scio quòd ille, & quòd ego. So, there is no error, in reading as wee doe, in our Office of the dead, I ſhall riſe againe at the laſt. Though it be the third perſon, in the Text, the firſt is as infallibly deduced by conſequence, as if it were there expreſly ſet downe; as ſure as He ſhall riſe, ſo ſure Hee ſhall raiſe: for, to that, is He a Redeemer.

The Benefit.

Wee ſee the coherence; let us ſee the Benefit: which ſtandeth of theſe foure points. firſt. Hee ſhall ſee GOD: Secondly, See Him in his fleſh, and with his eyes: Thirdly, in the ſame fleſh, and with the ſame eyes and no other: Fourthly, and hee ſhall ſee Him, ſibi, for his owne good and benefit: and all this, non obſtante the caſe, hee was in, which gave but ſmall likely-hood of it.

The

The first and maine benefit, His Redeemer will raise him to, is to see GOD. That, he lost, when he became aliened: that, he recovers, being redeemed. Here beginns all miserie, to bee cast out of His presence: here, all happinesse, to be restored to the light of His countenance. Visio Dei, all along the Scriptures, is made our chiefe good; and our felicitie still set forth, under that terme. In Thy presence is the fulnesse of joy (saith the Psalme:) Ostende nobis Patrem & sufficit, and we will never desire more. A conjecture we may have, of the glorie of this sight, from Moses: he saw Him; and not His face neither; and that but a glimpse, and but as He passed by; yet, got he so glorious a brightnesse in his countenance, he was faint to be veiled; no eye could endure to behold him. And, a like conjecture of the joy, by the transfiguration: they did but looke up at it, they desired never to be anywhere but there; never to see any sight but that: so were they ravished with the beholding of it.

Videbo Deum. I shall see GOD. Psal. 16. 11. Ioh. 14. 8. Exod. 33. 22. 23. Matt. 17. 2.

See GOD: and so he may in spirit, as doe the soules of the righteous departed: it skils not for the flesh. Yes; see him, in the flesh. That, as proper to this text, and this day, which offers more grace. This day, CHRIST rose in the flesh, and this Text is, wee shall see Him in the flesh. It is meet, the flesh partake the redemption wrought in the flesh; and He be seene of flesh, that was seene in the flesh. He will doe it for the flesh; it is (now) His nature, no lesse than the God-head: He will not forget it, wee may bee sure It were hard, the Redeemer should bee in the flesh, and the flesh never the better for it.

2 Videbo in Carne. See him in my flesh.

For, the soule is but halfe; though the better halfe, yet but halfe; and the redeeming it, is but a halfe redemption; and if but halfe, then unperfect. And our Redeemer is GOD, and GODS workes are all perfect: if He redeeme, He doth it not by halves. His redemption is a compleat redemption, certainely. But, so it is not, except Hee redeeme the whole man, Soule, flesh and all: his soule from hell, his flesh from the grave, both, to see GOD. His redemption is unperfect, till it extend so farre. Therefore, at His comming againe, they are willed to lift up their heads, their redemption is at hand, their full redemption; then full, when both soule and body shall enjoy the presence of GOD.

1 Reason. Luc. 21. 28.

And, what wee say of GODS worke, the same we say of the soules desire: It is not full neither, without this. Every man, yea the Saints, Saint Paul, by name, professeth all our desire, Nolimus expoliari sed supervestiri, Wee would not be stripped of this flesh, but bee clothed with glorie immortall, upon soule and flesh both: which desire, being both naturall, and having with it the concurrence of Gods Spirit, cannot finally be disappointed.

2 Reason. 2 Cor. 5. 4.

I adde further, that it is agreeable, not only to the perfection of His worke; but even to His justice, that Iobs flesh should be admitted, upon the Septuagints reason, in the forepart of the verse, τὸ ἀναντλῆν ταῦτα, that it hath gone through, joyned in the good, endured all the evill, as well as the soule. For God is not unrighteous, to deprive the labourer of his hire; but, with Him, it is a righteous thing, to reward them joyntly, that have joyntly done service; and not sever them in the reward, that in the labour, were not severed. But, the flesh hath done her part, either in good or evill; her members hath beene members, either waies. In the good, the flesh hath kneeled, prayed, watched, fasted, wasted and wearied it selfe, to and for God: In evill, it hath done, I need not tell you what: and that, to and for sinne. Therefore, even justice would, they should share in the reward of the good; and in the evill, take like part of the punishment. This may serve for the flesh.

3 Reason. Heb. 6. 10. Rom. 6. 13.

And sure, the very same may bee said, and is no lesse strong for the third degree: as, for the flesh, and the eyes; so that the same flesh should participate, and the same eyes, and no other for them. No justice, one flesh should labour, and another reape that, it never laboured for. What comfort can it be for the poore body, to abridge it selfe of much pleasure, and to devoure much tediousnesse and many afflictions; and another strange body shall step up, come betweene, and carry away the reward. Nay, if these eyes of Iobs, have droppen many a teare, it is reason the teares be wip't from them, not from another payre of new-made eyes. If they have restrained themselves,

3 In carne meâ, &c. In my owne flesh, and with the same eyes. Chap. 16. 20.

Chap.31.1. even, by covenant, from ſtraying after objects of luſt; it is meet, they be rewarded with the view of a better object.

But, to ſay true: ſo ſhould there be no reſurrection indeed; a riſing up, rather, of a new, than a riſing againe of the old. Iob ſhould not riſe againe, this Iob; but, another new Iob, in his place, and ſtead. Therefore is this point ever moſt ſtood on, of the reſt.

1 Cor.15.53. Ioh.2.19. Saint Paul: not a corruptible, or a mortall, at large, but Hoc, this corruptible, this mortall. Yea, our SAVIOVR Himſelfe, ſolvite Templum hoc, this very Temple: and to ſhew, it was that very one indeed, it pleaſed Him, to retaine the print, both of the nayles and ſpeare. And Iob moſt plaine of all, uſing not onely the word His, as it were pointing to it with his finger, poſitivè; but by adding, this, and no other, excluſivè too, to expreſſe it the more fully above exception.

4 Videbo mihi. I my ſelfe ſhall &c. But now, theſe all, [1] ſeeing God, and [2] in the fleſh, and [3] in the ſame fleſh, all are as good as nothing, without the fourth. Videbo mihi, a little word, but not to be little regarded. In the tranſlation, it is left out ſometimes, never in the treaty. To ſee Him for our good; elſe, all the reſt is litle worth. For, all ſhall ſee Him, and in the fleſh, and in the ſame fleſh; but all, not ſibi; but many, contra ſe: not to their good, all; but many, to their utter deſtruction.

This very word is it, which draweth the Diameter, betweene the reſurrection of life and the reſurrection of condemnation; the right hand, and the left; the ſheepe, and the goates. They that ſee them ſibi; to them, Eſay: Ariſe and ſing. They that, contra ſe; of them Saint Iohn: Videbunt & plangent: ſee they ſhall and mourne. Thoſe ſhall fly, as Eagles, with all ſpeed to the body: Theſe other draw backe, and ſhrinke into their graves; creepe into the clifts and holes, to avoyd the ſight; cry to the hills, to fall upon them, and hide them from that ſight. One ſhall rapi in occurſum, be caught up to meet: the other ſhall converti retrorſum, be tumbled backward into hell, with all the people that forget God. So that, this word is all in all: which God after expounds, Videbit faciem meam in jubilo, with joy and jubilee, ſhall he behold my face; as a redeemer, not as a revenger: and, as it followeth, with hope (and not with feare) in his boſome.

Eſay 26.19. Apoc.1.7. Luc.17.37. 23.30. 1 Theſſ.4.17. Pſal.9.17. Chap.33.26.

And the very next point was it, that revived him; and in very deed, the tenor of his ſpeech, ſo often iterating the ſame thing, and dwelling ſo upon it, ſheweth as much. Once had beene enough; I ſhall ſee God: Hee comes over it againe, and againe; as if hee felt ſome ſpeciall comfort even by ſpeaking it. Three ſeverall times he repeats this ſeeing; and, three other, his perſon I, and I my ſelfe, and I and none other but I: And as if, he were not enough, he reckons up three parts, his skinne, fleſh, and eyes; As if being once in, hee could not tell how to get out. Blame him not: it ſeemes, hee felt ſome eaſe of his paynes; at leaſt forgat them, all the while, hee was but talking. It did ſo raviſh him, having begunne he knew not how to make an end.

III. The two Acts Scio. His Knowledge. Thus much for the object. Now to his Scio, his knowledge firſt; and then his Spero, his hope after. For his knowledge: there be foure things, I would note out of foure words. [1] His certainety out of Scio: [2] His proprietie, out of meus: [3] His patient waiting, out of tandem: [4] and His valour or conſtancie, in non obſtante.

I His certainty. Scio. Scio, his certainty: That he did not imagine or conceive, it might be; but knew it for certaine, even for a principle. Quis ſcit, Who knowes (ſaith one, Eccl. 3.21.) Who knoweth, whether men dye as beaſts? Quis ſcit? Scio: Who knowes? I know (ſaith Iob.) Putaſ-ne, (ſaith he, Chap. 14.) Thinke you, one that is dead may riſe againe? Thinke? I know it (ſaith Iob.) It was res facta, even this day, to His Diſciples. It was res certa, to him, many hundred yeares before: It is much to the praiſe of his faith: ſo much was not found, no not in Iſraël. And we ſhall not need to trouble our ſelves to know how hee knew it: Not by any Scripture; he had it not from Moſes, but the ſame way that Moſes had it; hee looked in the ſame mirror, Abraham did, when he ſaw the ſame Perſon, and the ſame day, and rejoyced to ſee it.

Mat.8.10. Ioh.8.56.

Out

Out of Scio his certaintie; and, out of Meus his peculiar, as it were. The Redeemer of the world would not ſerve him, nor Saint Pauls maximè fidelium, of the faithfull chiefely. This (of the Epheſians) would not content him, That loved us and gave himſelfe for us: None but (2. Gal.) That loved me, and gave himſelfe for me. My Redeemer; which they call Faith's Poſſeſsive.

2 His proprietie: Meus. 1 Tim. 4. 10. Epheſ. 5. 2. Gal. 2. 20.

In Tandem, the third word, his patient enduring. For, patience is not onely ſhewed in ſuffering the Croſſe, but in waiting alſo for the promiſe. It will not be done by and by, this: but Tandem, at the laſt it will. He ſhall riſe againe at the laſt: he ſhall; and wee ſhall. Qui crediderit, ne feſtinet, He that beleeveth, let him not be in all haſte. No: Si moram fecerit, expectaeum; If he ſtay, ſtay his leaſure. Tarry his Tandem.

3 His patient waiting. Tandem. Heb. 12. 6. Tit. 2. 13. Eſay. 28. 16. Hab. 2. 3.

And laſt, all theſe, Non obſtante, or Tametſi; the reſolute courage, or valour of his faith; that this he ſaith, being in caſe he was, ſmall likely-hood of it in appearance, ſeeing and feeling, that he ſaw and felt. There ſat he falling away by peece-meale, Vivum cadaver. For him then to talke of Scio, and meus thus, having no better ſignes and arguments than he had; in the ſenſe of his anger, to beleeve his favour; brought to the day of death, to promiſe himſelfe ſo glorious an eſtate: this is Abrahams faith, Contra ſpem in ſpe credere; faith without, nay, faith againſt feeling. His ſtate, in ſenſe of miſerie, want of comfort; his friends diſmaying him; for all that, he keepes to his Scio, and to his Meus ſtill. All elſe, even all hee hath (his righteouſneſſe too) they may take from him: Salutem non auferent, his REDEEMER they ſhould never get: non obſtante, he would hold him faſt.

4 His courage: Tametſi. Rom. 4. 18.

This for his Scio, and now to his Spero, which word leadeth us to the uſe, he did and we are to make, of this knowledge. Not, know, to know; or to be knowne to know; but, know, to lodge in our boſomes true hope: It is the generall uſe of all our knowledge of the Scriptures, whatſoever is written for our learning, that wee by patience and comfort in the Scriptures may have hope. Generally of all; but above all, of theſe, of CHRIST our REDEEMER: He is our hope; and His riſing, that is Caput bonæ ſpei, our cape of good hope; the moſt hopefull of all other.

2 Act, Spero: His Hope. Rom. 15. 4.

Spes repoſita. Hope layd up.

The uſe of hope is, to expell feare. No feare, to the feare of death: what ſhall become of us, after our ſhort time here, which makes us never quiet, but in the valley of Achor, all our life long: The reſurrection opens us a gate of hope. Therefore, this day, Noli timere, ſay the Angells: Nolite timere (ſaith CHRIST.) That our proper ſalutation of the day. This, a day of hope. And this uſe made DAVID of it: my fleſh ſhall reſt in hope, though he were not in IOBS caſe, but in all his royaltie. For, even Kings, in all their royaltie, ſometimes have before them the hand-writing on the wall: Numeravit, he hath numbred thy daies; and even then, they reſt on this hope, and read this inſcription not unwillingly. The ſame uſe doe the Apoſtles: Who hath regenerated us, in ſpe, to a lively hope, by the reſurrection of CHRIST (it is Saint Peter.) Reſt in hope (ſaith DAVID) a lively hope (PETER;) Reſt in hope of riſing and living againe.

Hoſ. 2. 15. Mar. 16. 6. Luk. 24. 38. Pſal. 16. 9. Dan. 5. 5. 26.

And the terme, that IOB here gives hope, is worth a note: he calls it the kidneyes of the ſoule. It made the Tranſlator miſſe, that knew not this idiome. For, as in that part of the body is bred, and from thence doth iſſue that ſame generativus humor, whereby wee propagate our kinde, and live here (in a ſort) after we be dead: In like manner, by this hope (ſaith IOB, and ſo ſaith Saint Peter) we are begotten anew; we are ſowen (ſaith Saint Paul) and of that ſeed, riſe againe in power, honour, and immortalitie.

1 Pet. 1. 1 Cor. 15.

And this is hæc ſpes, this hope. For, hope at large heareth evill, hath no good name; Many our hopes prove Vigilantis ſomnia, waking dreames: we cannot lay them up, and if wee would; they are not worth the laying up, no more than our dreames bee. That the Heathen man made it his happineſſe, to ſay: Vale ſpes, farewell all hoping. This is true, where the reſt of our hope is vaniſhing, as mans, whoſe breath

Repoſita in Now, the place is much, where we lay it: Every thing is beſt kept in his proper Sinu: place. IOB ſaith, he beſtowed it in his boſome, and would have us to doe the like. Of
In my boſome. that place, he made choice: of none without us, behind us. That wee might ever carrie it about us, ever have it before us, and in our ſight; ever at hand: not to ſeeke, but readie and eaſie to be had, when we call for it: and theſe, for the continuall uſe we are to have of it, in all the diſmayes and diſcomforts of our life. Beſide, there it will bee ſafely; that, being the ſureſt place, as being within the fold of our armes, Deut.13.6. where our ſtrength lyeth, and whence, hardeſt to take it from us. And there it will be beſt cheriſhed, in the warmth, and vitall heate of the boſome. There, the nurſe carrieth her childe: and the wife is called the wife of the boſome: And what is dearer to us than theſe two? But, above all, there it will bee next the heart, (for the boſome is but the cofer of the heart) and there IOB would have it. As well, for that, that place is the beſt place, and ſo beſt for the beſt hope: as that, there is in this hope, a ſpeciall cordiall vertue againſt the fainting of the heart: as (indeed) it is cor cordis, the very heart of the heart, and whereby the heart it ſelfe is more heartned.
IOB found it ſo: So did Saint Paul, when hee grew out of heart. Put his hand
2 Cor.4.16. in his boſome, tooke out this Hope, lookes upon it, preſently ſaith: propter quod

2 Tim.2.8. (What man! Memento, Remember, CHRIST is riſen, and wee ſhall riſe and ſee GOD; an amends for all, we can ſuffer:) as a ſpeciall receipt againſt all cardiaque paſſions.

But, in chooſing this place; Iob's minde was ſpecially, to except to the braine, where (commonly) men lodge it, and are miſtaken: it is not the right place. Scio, there
(if you will;) in the braine; It is the place of memorie: But Spero, in the heart, the place of affection (namely feare:) and till the heart be the leſſe fearefull, and the more cheerefull for it; it is not where it ſhould be; not layd in the right place. Nay, not Scientia cerebri; knowledge is not the beſt neither, not in the braine: Scientia Sinus, and corde creditur; beſt, when it hath his reſt there. When knowledge in the heart, and hope in the reines; and He that ſearcheth heart and reines, may there finde them. Erre not then in laying it up in the head, or any where, but whither Iob carried it, and where he layd it, in the boſome.

To end; becauſe wee be ſpeaking of a hope to be layd up in our boſome, it falleth out very fitly, that, even at this time (feſtum ſpei) the Church offereth us a notable pledge, Ioh.6.24. and earneſt of this hope there to beſtow. Even the holy Euchariſt, The fleſh wherein our Redeemer was ſeene, and ſuffered, and payed the price of our redemption; and toge-Epheſ.4.30. ther with it the holy Spirit, whereby we are ſealed to the great day of our redemption. To the laying up of which earneſt of our hope, and intereſt in all theſe, we are invited at this time, even litterally, to lodge, and lay it up in our boſome. We ſhall be the neerer our Scio, if we taſt & ſee by it, how gracious the Lord is; the neerer our Spero, if an earneſt or pledge of it be layd up within us: the neerer our redemption, if we have within us the price of it:
Ioh.6.54. and the neerer our reſurrection; they be his owne words, He that eateth my fleſh and drin- keth, &c. hath eternall life, and I will raiſe him up at the laſt day. So dwell we in Him, and He in us; we, in Him, by our fleſh in Him; and He, in us, by His fleſh in us. Thereby drawing life from Him, the ſecond; as we doe death, from the firſt Adam.

1 Ioh.3.3. But this hope hath this propertie (ſaith S. Iohn) it will mundifie the place where it lyeth (Every one that hath this hope cleanſeth himſelfe;) which place by verture of it, we ſhall ſo cleanſe, Vt videatur in carne noſtrâ Deus, that the life of Ieſus may be manifeſt in our

our fleſh; and all men ſee the vertue of His reſurrection, to have His worke in us, by our riſing out of the old duſtie converſation, to newneſſe of life: His reſurrection and the power of it being exemplarily ſeene in our fleſh, our end ſhall be, to ſee Him in our fleſh; and that, nobis (not, contra nos) for our eternall joy and comfort. And then have we the feaſt in kinde, and as much fruit of it, as either Patriarch, or Apoſtle can wiſh us. Which that wee may, pray we to Him, &c.

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE THE KINGS MAIESTIE AT WHITE-HALL, ON the XXIV. of March, A.D. MDCXI. being EASTER DAY, and being alſo the day of the Beginning of His Majeſtie's moſt Gracious Reigne.

PSAL. CXVIII. VER. XXII.

The Stone, which the Builders refuſed, the ſame Stone is become (or made) the Head of the Corner.

Caput Anguli.

HE Stone, which the Builders refuſed: ſaith the Prophet David. This is the Stone which yee Builders refuſed: ſaith the Apoſtle Peter. And ſaith it, of CHRIST our SAVIOVR, Hic eſt lapis, He is the Stone. And ſaith it, to Caiaphas and the reſt, that went for Builders. We know then, who this Stone is, and who theſe Builders be, to begin with. 1 Act. 4. 11.

And in the very ſame place, the ſame Apoſtle telleth us further, what is meant by Refuſed, and what, by made head of the Corner. Quem vos, whom ye denied and crucified: that was, His refuſing. And then, Quem Deus, whom GOD hath raiſed againe from the dead; that was His making Refuſed, when? Three daies agoe. Made Head, when? This very day: for, Hic eſt dies, followeth ſtraight, within a verſe, This is the day. Which Day: there is not one of the Fathers, that I have read, but interpret it of Eaſter Day. Act. 4. 10. Ver. 24.

And ſo wee have brought the Text, and the time together. Wee know, who is the Stone: CHRIST. Who the Builders: Caiaphas and thoſe with him. When refuſed? In His Paſſion. When made head? at His Reſurrection, that is, this day, which day is therefore (at the 27. verſe) ſaid to be, Conſtitutus dies ſolennis, made a ſolemne Feaſt day: In condenſis, on which the Church to ſtand thick and full: Vſque ad cornua Altaris, even up to the very Corners of the Altar.

This (I take it) is a good warrant, for our Church, to make this Pſalme, a ſelect choiſe Pſalme, for this Day; as peculiar and pertinent to the Feaſt it ſelfe. And a good warrant, for us, ſo to apply it. It is the HOLY GHOST'S owne application, by the mouth of Saint Peter: we may boldly make it, ours.

2 Apoc. 19. But though this be the cheefe ſenſe: yet, is it not, the onely. The cheefe it is: for the Spirit of Prophecie is in it, which is the teſtimonie of IESVS. Yet not the onely: for according to the letter, we cannot deny, but that originally, it was meant of David. He was a Stone too, and in his time refuſed: yet after, raiſed by GOD to the higheſt place, even to bee King over His people. The Chaldee Paraphraſt (the oldeſt we have) is enough for this, thus he turneth the verſe. סלא &c. The Child, whom the chiefeſt men oppugned, He of all the ſonnes of Iſhai, was made Ruler of Iſraël. A ſecond ſenſe then it hath, of David.

3 And, by analogie, it will beare a third; and it will ſort with Ours, or with any Prince, in like manner banded againſt, and ſought to be put by, as He: and yet after, brought by God, to the ſame place, that David was. To any ſuch it will well agree, and be truly verified of him, and rightly applied to him. And, I confeſſe, I choſe it the rather for this third. Becauſe, (as this yeare falleth out) upon one day (and Hic eſt dies, This is the day) We have in one, a memoriall of two benefits; 1 of our Saviours exalting, by His Reſurrection: 2 and of our Sovereignes exalting, and making Head of this Kingdome. Both, lighting together, we were (as we thought) ſo to remember the one, that we left not the other out. And this Text, will ſerve for both. Both, may in one be ſet before us: and ſo we reioice and render thanks to God for both: For the Lord CHRIST; and for the Lords CHRIST, under one.

Three ſenſes then, there are in the Text, and (to do it right) we to touch them all three. 1. CHRIST in prophecie. 2. David in hiſtorie. 3. Our owne in analogie. But we will give Chriſt the precedence. Both for His Perſon, He is Davids Lord, and the Head of all Head-ſtones: It is meet, Hee have Primatum in omnibus, Hee in all things, Col. 1.18. have the præ-eminence: And, for that the truth of the text, never was ſo verified in any, as in Him. Wee may truly ſay, None ever, ſo low caſt downe: None ever, ſo high lift up againe, as Hee. Others refuſed, but none like Him: and their heads exalted, but nothing in compariſon of His. 1. Firſt then of Chriſts, 2. after, of Davids briefly: 3. and laſt, of our owne.

I. To applie it to Chriſt. The ſtone, is the ground of all. Two things befall it: two things as contrary as may bee. 1. Refuſed, caſt away: 2. then, called for againe, and made Head of the Building. So, two parts there are, to the eye. 1. The refuſing. 2. and the raiſing: which, are His two eſtates, His humiliation: and His exaltation.

1 In either of theſe yee may obſerve two degrees. A quibus, and Quouſque: By whom, and How farre: By whom refuſed? We weigh the word, Ædificantes: Not by men unskillfull, but, by Workemen, Builders profeſſed: It is, ſo much the more.

2 How farre? We weigh the word, Reprobaverunt: uſque ad reprobari, even to a reprobation. It is not improbaverunt: diſliked, as not fit, for ſome eminent place: but reprobaverunt, utterly reprobate, for any place at all.

II. Againe, exalted, by whom? The next words are, á Domino, by God, as gooda 1 Builder, nay better than the beſt of them; which makes amends for the former.

2 And, how farre? Placed by Him, not in any part of the Building: but, in the part moſt in the eye (the Corner:) and, in the higheſt place of it (the very Head.)

So, Rejected, and that by the Builders, and to the loweſt eſtate: And from the loweſt eſtate, Exalted in Caput Anguli, to the chiefeſt place of all; and that by GOD Himſelfe. This for Chriſt.

And David is a Stone, and ſo is Ours, and ſo is every good Prince, Lapis Iſraël (as Gen. 49.24. Iacob, in his Teſtament, calleth them.) And Builders there be, ſuch as by office, ſhould, 3 but many times doe not their office, no more than Caiaphas here. Reprobaverunt is, Pſal. 62.4. when they deviſe to put Him by, whom God would exalt: And Factus Caput, when God, for all that, doth them right, and brings them to their place, the Throne Royall.)

As

As, This was the day, when God ſo brought David (as appeareth by the 24. verſe:) And Hic eſt dies, This is the day, when He brought His Majeſtie to be Head of this Kingdome. Of theſe in their order.

The Stone which the Builders refuſed, &c.

THe eſtate of mankinde, as they are in Societie, either of Church or Kingdome, is in diverſe termes ſet forth to us in Scripture: Sometimes of a Flocke, ſometimes of Husbandry: otherwhile, of a Building. Yee are His flocke, divers times in the Pſalmes. You are Gods husbandry, You are Gods building, both in one verſe. Now, the Style of this Text, runnes in termes of this laſt, of Building, or Architecture. For here are Builders, and here is Stone, and a Coigne or Corner, and a Top or Turret over it. 1 Cor. 3. 9.

Of this Spirituall Building, we all are Stones: and (which is ſtrange) we all are Builders too: To bee built, and to build, both ſtones; in regard of them whom God hath ſet over us; who are to frame us, and wee ſo to ſuffer them. Builders, in regard of our ſelves firſt: then, ſuch as are committed to us, by bond, either of duty, or charitie; Every one, being (as Saint Chryſoſtome ſaith well) de ſubditâ ſibi plebe, quaſi domum Deo ſtruere, of thoſe under his charge, to make God an houſe. As Stones; it is ſaid to us, by Saint Peter, Super-ædificamini, Be ye Built up, or framed. As Builders; it is ſaid to us, firſt, by S. Iude, Build your ſelves in your moſt holy faith. Then, by Saint Paul, Edifie ye, or build ye one another. Be built; by obedience and conformity: Build your ſelves, by increaſe, in vertue and good workes: Build one another, by good example, and wholeſome exhortation. The ſhort is: This is to be our ſtudy, all: if we be, but our ſelves, every one in himſelfe, and of himſelfe, to build GOD an Oratorie. If we have an Houſhold, of them, to build Him a Chappell. If a larger circuit, then a Church. If a country or Kingdome, then a Baſilica, or Metropolitan Church: which is properly, the Princes Building. 2 Pet. 1. 5. Iud. 20. 1 Thc. 5. 11.

This in the text (the Builders here were in hand with) as a Baſilica: for it was the frame of the Iewes Governement: but, is applied, to all States in generall. For, Iewry was the Scene or Stage, whereon the errors or vertues of all Governments, were repreſented to all poſterity.

Foure words there be in the Text: 1. Ædificantes, Builders. 2. Lapis, Stone. 3. Angulus, a Corner, and 4. Caput, the Head. From the firſt word Ædificantes, this we have: That States would not be, as tents: ſet up, and taken downe, and removeable. They would be buildings, to ſtand ſteddy and fixed. Nothing ſo oppoſite unto a State, as not to ſtand.

2. From the ſecond, Lapis: That, this building would be, not of clay and wood, or (as we call them) Paper-walls: but, Stone-worke, as ſtrong, as defenſible, as little ſubject to concuſſion, or combuſtion, as might be.

3. From the two parts ſpecified, firſt, Anguli: This Stone-worke, is not a wall forthright, to part in ſunder, or to keepe out: but, it conſiſts of diverſe ſides: thoſe ſides meete in one Angle: where if they meete, and knit well, all the better will the building be.

4. Caput. And they will knit the better, if they have a good Head. For, where they meete, no place ſo much in danger of weather going in, and making the ſides fly off, if it want a Covering. A head it would have, to cover it: It is a ſpeciall defence, and beſides, it is a Sovereigne beauty, to the whole building.

And that Head, would not be of playſter, to crumble away: or of wood, to warp or rot with the weather: or of lead, to bow or bend, and to cracke: but of Stone, and the principaleſt Stone, that could be. The chiefe part it is, the head: the chiefe care, and conſultation would be, what Stone meet for that place: for indeed, it is all in all.

That,

The first sense CHRIST.

That, is the consultation here. Here is CHRIST, what say you to him? He is a Stone. 2. A building stone. 3. A Corner Stone. 4. A Head Stone. A Stone. So the Prophet termes Him. Dan. 2. 34. Zachar. 3. 9. Esay 28. 16. And so the Apostles, Peter, Act. 4. 11. Paul, 1 Cor. 10. 4. 1. In His Birth: Daniels stone, cut forth without hands. 2 In His passion: Zacharies stone, graven and cut full of eyes, all over: 3. In His Resurrection: Esays stone, layd in Sion, Qui crediderit non confundetur, He that beleeveth in Him then, shall not be confounded, saith S. Peter, 1. Pet. 2. 6. Hic est lapis. He is the Stone of our faith, saith S. Peter, Lapis erat Christus. And Petra erat Christus, saith S. Paul. He is the Stone of our Sacraments, the Water of our Baptisme and of our Spirituall drinke (both) issue from Him. A Stone: first, for His nature, of the earth a s Stones are, out of Abrahams quarry (saith Esay) to shew His Humanity. And, out of κατώτερα τῆς γῆς the very lowest part of the earth (saith the Apostle;) to shew his Humility. Indeed, nothing so subject to contempt, to be troden on, to be spurned aside, as it. And such was His condition, Vermis, non homo, and, Lapis, non homo. A Worme, or a Stone, and no man.

2 A Stone will indure much sorrow, nothing more. And, who did ever suffer like Him? or in His suffering, who more patient, or still, or stone-like, than He?

3 But the chiefe vertue of a Stone is, that it is firme and sure: And so is He. Yee may trust Him, ye may build on Him. He will not faile you. What ye lay on Him is sure. [a] David may have sure footing, and rest his feet; [b] Moses, his hands; [c] Iacob, his head, on this Stone. This is it He hath His denomination from. He that trusts in him, nothing, not the gates of hell, shall prevaile against him. Trustinesse, with non confundetur, the chiefe vertue of a Stone: of CHRIST: and of those that are Head-stones by, and under Him.

But, there are Stones, that lye scattered, that will neither head well, nor bed well (as they say) not meet, to build withall: meet, for nothing but to hurle, and to doe hurt with. But CHRIST is a Stone, to doe good with, to build with. Lapis ad ædificationem. And He loveth not to scatter, or be by Himselfe, his delight is to be with the Sonnes of men: and to grow with them, into one frame of building.

Pro. 8. 31.

3 A Corner Stone. Of all the places in the building, that one speciall place, liketh Him: Where the sides meet, there He is. To joyne together, two make to one, He loveth it above all: stretching Himselfe, to both walls, that both may rest on Him.

Ephes. 2. 14.

4 And lastly, Lapis primarius, a Headstone. For, there he should be, there, is His right place, and it will never be well with the Building, till He be in that place, till CHRIST be Ἀκρογωνιαῖος, Caput, in omni procuratione, The highest and chiefest end of all. This He is, and in the end, This He will be: if not by Men, yet by GOD.

But now, we have to doe with Men: and we are to put it to voices, their voices, with whom He lived, what they thinke of CHRIST, for Caput Anguli. It is returned, Quem reprobaverunt: He is refused. Will ye heare it, from themselves? Nolumus hunc regnare, We will not have Him King; Not in that place; no Head, in any wise.

Luc. 19. 14.

But à quibus, Who were these? These were foolish people, that knew not the vertue or value of a Stone: no heed to be taken what they cry. We will get us, with Ieremie, to men of skill, that know, what Stone is for every place; professed builders, by their trade: But these also, were no better conceited of Him, than the other: for, doe any of the rulers make any account of him? Iohn 7. 48. As who say, None of them neither, The very Builders refuse Him too.

1 Ier. 5. 4. Ver. 5. 5.

2 Well, we will make the best of it: It may be, not for the Head: But there be more places than that: If not allow Him there, yet He may be in some else. Improbaverunt, it may be, but not reprobaverunt: disallowed, but not cast aside quite. We aske then, how farre? Will ye put Him up the second time, and (to see the Quousque in kind) will ye put up Barabbas with Him? Non hunc, sed Barabbam. So it went: That was their verdict. Now, by this time it is reprobaverunt (as flat as may be) a refuse indeed, and that with a foule indignity.

Ioh. 18 40.

But

But theſe, were but the Vulgar, againe. What ſay the Builders to this? He, of them, that tooke himſelfe for a very Vitruvius, ſuch a Workman, as he ſaid, all the reſt underſtood nothing at all, the Maſter-builder Caiaphas, he was flat, Expedit, It was expedient He ſhould dye; be caſt aſide into the heape of rubbiſh, be put out of the building, cleane. That, is his doome. Ioh.11.49,50

Now, lay theſe together. To bee refuſed, is not ſo much; it may be, it is of ſuch, as are ignorant. But, to be refuſed of Builders, and thoſe the chiefe, is much; for, they are preſumed to bee skilfull. Againe, to bee diſliked for the chiefe place, not ſo much; if not for that, hee may be for another: But, to be utterly reprobate (that is) not refuſed, for the Head, nor refuſed for the Corner, but refuſed ſimply for any roome at all: not in the toppe, nay, not in the bottome: not in the Corner, nay, not in any ranke of the Building: that, is as much as may bee. And this, was CHRISTS lot. 1 2

Yet this was all but in words, nothing was done to Him. But there is a reprobation, in deed, and that is yet farre worſe. And to that, they proceed, even to actuall matters, to reall reprobation. Before they caſt Him aſide (this poore Stone) they hackt and they hewd it, and mangled it piteouſly; they ſhewed their malice even in that, too. Cælaverunt Sculpturam ejus (ſaith the Prophet) their tooles walked on Him, they graved Him, and cut Him with a witneſſe, and made him full of eyes, on every ſide. What skilled that? What diſgrace, or what ſorrow is done, to a Stone? the Stone feeles it not. The cry, of Non hunc, or the edge of the graving toole, affect it nothing. True: But Hee was Lapis vivus, a living ſtone (as Peter calleth Him, 1 Peter 2. 5.) a Stone that hath life, life and ſenſe, and felt all: Felt His graving, the edge and point both: felt His deſpiſing, the ſcorne, and malice both: (of the twaine, this the more, but) both He felt. When they made furrowes on His backe, with the ſcourges: when they platted the Crowne of Thornes, and made it ſit cloſe to His head; when they digged His hands, and feete, He felt all. He endured it patiently, tanquam Lapis: but He felt it ſenſibly, tanquam vivus. Had quick ſenſe, of His paine in graving: had lively apprehenſion, of His contempt in refuſing. Zach. 3.9. Pſal.129.3. Matt.27.29. Pſal.22.16.

And theſe very two words (in the Text) Lapidem, and Reprobaverunt, ſet out unto us, both parts of His Paſſion fully: As if He had been Stone, ſo layd they on Him: As if He had beene a Reprobate, ſo powred they all diſgrace upon Him. And, even as a Stone He was, in His paſſion. For, as the Stones give againſt the weather: ſo was there not to be ſeene upon Him, a bloudy ſweate? Did He not give (as it were) of Himſelfe, againſt the tempeſt came? And when it came, was it not ſo ſtrange (even that, which this living ſtone ſuffered) as the dead Stones, that had no life, as if they had had life and compaſſion of His caſe, rent in ſunder with it? Lapidem then, is true. Luc.22.44.

And, for reprobaverunt, that, is as true. For how could they have intreated a reprobate, worſe than they entreated Him? in His thirſt, In His prayer, In the very pangs of death, what words of ſcorne and ſpitefull opprobrie? What deeds of malice and wretched indignitie? Of Himſelfe, it is ſaid (and by way of exaggeration) He humbled Himſelfe to death, the death of the Croſſe: of them, it may be no leſſe, Reprobaverunt ad mortem, mortem crucis, they rejected Him to death, the death of Reprobates; the death, whereunto a Curſe is annexed, the death of the Croſſe. And never gave Him over, till they brought Him, lapis ad lapidem, into a grave of Stone, and rolled a Stone upon Him, and there left Him. And thus much, for Lapis quem reprobaverunt. Matt. 27.51. Ioh.15.19. Matt.27.47. Phil.2.8. Mat.27.60.

It is the Feaſt of the Paſſeover: we now paſſe over, to His other eſtate; His Exaltation, ad Caput Anguli. Were it not ſtrange, the ſtone ſhould be rolled away, and this Stone ſhould bee digged up againe, and ſet up in the Antes, the place moſt conſpicuous (that is) made a Corner-ſtone: and that, in the very top, the higheſt part of all (that is) made a Head-ſtone? Were not this a ſtrange Paſſeover, from death, to life from loweſt reprobation, to higheſt approbation; from baſeſt reproach, to greateſt glorie? 2

But, ſeeing builders (we ſee) may be deceived, and that in Capite (as we finde here;) and that, though Caiaphas be one of them: and a ſtone may have wrong; Would it not not be well, we called to ſcrutinie againe? Is there any builder yet left, before whom wee may bring the matter? Yes, there is. Every houſe is built of ſome man (ſaith the Apoſtle) but Hee that is the builder of all, is GOD. He that ſet up this great vaulted worke, of Heaven over our heads: that layd the Corner-ſtone of the earth; Hee is a Builder. But, Hee that layd His Chamber-beames in the watters, Et appendit terram ſuper nihilum, hangs this great Maſſe, no man knowes upon what: Hee that beginneth at the toppe, and builds downewards, Heaven firſt, and then Earth (as Hee did:) Hee paſſeth all ours, He is a skillfull Builder indeed. Is Hee of the ſame minde? Offer CHRIST to His probation. Hee will reprobare reprobantes, condemne them, that ſo refuſed Him: And all will turne, quite contrarie. Saine Peter ſaith it: Hee was ἀποδεδοκιμασμένον, reprobate with men, but ἐκλεκτὸν choſen of GOD, ἔντιμον precious, with Him. Meet to be in the building; Nay, no building, meet to bee, without Him. And in the building, if any part more object to the ſight, than other, there. And in that, if any place higher than another; there. In ædificio, Angulo ædificii, Capite Anguli: In the Building, the Corner of the building, the Head of the Corner: (that is) in the higheſt place, of the chiefeſt part of all. This, He thought Him, and as Hee thought Him, ſo He made Him: and made Him ſo this day, the day of His Reſurrection. Whom they caſt downe, GOD lift up, from the grave: whom they vilified, He glorified; glorified, and made Him Caput Anguli, The Head of the Corner.

Anguli.

How of the Corner? The Corner, is the place, where two walls meet: and there bee many two's in this Building: The two walls of Nations, Iewes and Gentiles: The two, of Conditions, Bond and Free: The two, of Sexe, Male and Female: the great two (which this day we celebrate) of the Quicke and the Dead: above all, the greateſt Two of all, Heaven and Earth.

The two firſt meet in Him: There was a partition, but He downe with it: Et fecit utraque unum, Epheſ. 2. 14. So that, there is neither Iew nor Greeke, neither Bond nor Free, neither Male nor Female, but all one in CHRIST IESVS: Yea, the Quicke and the Dead, both live to Him. And all theſe, ſo many Combinations, as in the Center, meet in Him: and He in the mids of all, drawes all, and knits all, in one holy Faith, and bleſſed hope of His Comming; one mutuall unfained love towards each other. Exte Angulus, well ſaid Zacharie.

Caput.

And as Vnitie is in the Angle; ſo Order, is under the Head. As all, one, in Him; ſo, He is Head of all. Head of the Iewes, Ieſus in their tongue: Head of the Gentiles, CHRIST in their tongue: Head of the Church: Head of all Principality and Power. Therefore this day, CHRIST that dyed roſe againe, that He might be Lord both of Quicke and Dead, Rom. 14. 9. And of the great Angle of all, conſiſting of Heaven and Earth; for, all power was given Him in heaven and earth, and Hee made Head of both.

Col. 1. 18.
Col. 2. 10.

Matt. 28. 18.

1 Now then: will ye lay theſe together? There can come to a ſtone no greater dignity, than, there to bee (in the Head.) To any ſtone: but it is much increaſed, by

2 that Circumſtance, that it is not onely, Lapis (barely;) but, Lapis quem reprobaverunt, that now is there in the Head: Not any ſtone, but a ſtone ſo refuſed (as wee heard) for ſuch a ſtone, there to be; from that Terminus à quo, to come to this Terminus ad quem; from ſo baſe an eſtate, there to be, that is a great increaſe to it.

3 And thirdly, by ſuch a perſon, a Builder ſo match-leſſe, there to be: that is yet a degree higher: And this triplicity exalteth much His Exaltation. That by God, and not Gods ſuffering, but His doing: and that, factum mirabile, His wonderfull doing, it came to paſſe: As indeed, wonderfull it is to ſee, that which all the World now ſeeth: CHRIST, that (for the preſent) was ſo ſtrangely dejected; ſince, to be ſo exceedingly glorified: So many knees to bow to Him, ſo many tongues to confeſſe Him, His Name to be above all Names, Heaven and Earth to be full of the Majeſtie of His glorie.

Phil. 12. 19. 10, 11.

Now, from theſe words, Caput, Anguli: that which we learne morally, is: to make much of the two vertues commended to us, in theſe two words: [1] Virtus Anguli; [2] and Anguli ſub Capite.

First

First, the vertue of two walls united in one Angle, that is, Vnity. For CHRIST will not be Caput Macericæ, of a Party-wall, but of an Angle joyned. He is not of their ſpirit, that, ſo they may bee Head, care not, though it bee never ſo broken a wall.

Secondly, not every Vnitie, but Vnitas ordinata, that hath, or is under a Head. For it is not, Cujuſvis Anguli, but Anguli, cui Caput: not of every Angle, but of an Angle, the unity whereof, is neither in the taile, nor in the ſides, but in the Head: That is, commendeth to us, as Vnity againſt Diviſion; ſo Order againſt Confuſion. They that can be content to corner well, but would be Acephali, Head-leſſe, have no Head, pleaſe Him not: No more doe they, that would joyne, but would be Poly-cephali, have a Conſiſtory of heads, many heads; as many as the Beaſt of Babylon. For ſure it is, an Angle can have no more heads but one. To love an Angle well, but an Angle that hath an Head, and but One head. To love an Head well; but an head, not of a ſingle wall, but of an Angle. Both theſe, and both to be regarded. They be Zacharies two ſtaves, Bands, and Beauty, which uphold all government; breake one, and the other will not long be unbroken. The head, without Vnity: Vnity, without the head: either without other will not long hold. Zach. 11.7. 10.14.

Both then: but eſpecially Vnity, for that commeth in here, not neceſſarily (as doth the head) but extraordinarily. And therefore, extraordinary regard to be had of it. For I was thinking, why He ſhould here in this ſecond part, ſay, that He was made Head of the Corner? Why ſhould it not ſuffice, to have ſaid, factus eſt Caput, and no more? Or if more, factus eſt Caput Ædificii? To have ſaid, He was made the Head: at leaſt-wiſe, made the Head of the whole Building? Why muſt Anguli, be added? What needed any mention of the Corner? No occaſion was given, no mention was made of it, in His Refuſing: The word [Head] would have ſerved fully, to have ſet His Exaltation forth. Some matter there was, that this word muſt come in. And ſure, no other, but to ſhew CHRISTS ſpeciall delight and love of that place. At His riſing, this day, Stetit in medio: and here He is come to His place againe: for, Stetit in medio, and Caput Anguli, come both to one. Therefore, that like love, like ſpeciall regard be had by us of that place, and of the vertue of that place (unitie;) that it be ſought and preſerved carefully, that the ſides flie not off, the well knitting whereof, is the very ſtrength of the whole Building. Iohn 20.19.

By Bede, it is rendered, as a reaſon why the Iewiſh builders refuſed our SAVIOVR CHRIST, for the head-place, Quia in uno pariete, ſtare amabant. They could endure no Corner; they muſt ſtand alone, upon their owne ſingle wall; be of themſelves; not joyne with Gentile, or Samaritane. And CHRIST they endured not, becauſe they thought, if He had beene Head, He would have enclined that way. Alias oves oportet me adducere: Alias, they could not abide. But ſure, a purpoſe there muſt be alias oves adducendi, of bringing in others, of joyning a corner, or elſe we doe not facere ſecundùm exemplar, build not according to CHRISTS patterne; our faſhion of Fabricke, is not like His. They that thinke, to make CHRIST Head of a Single wall, are deceived: it will not be. They that ſay, ſo the head, all is well; it skills not for the Corner; erre too. He is γωνιαῖος, a Corner-ſtone firſt, and then ἀκρογωνιαῖος a Head-ſtone after. And they that had rather, be a Front in a wall, than in a meaner place ſub lapide Angulari; And they, that ſtand upon their owne partition, and will not endure to heare of any joyning; care not what become of Angulus, if it were ſtrucken out; the ſame mind, is not in them, in neither of them, which was in CHRIST IESVS. His minde we ſee. He lookes to the Angle, as to the Head; and to the Head, as to the Angle. And they build beſt, that build likeſt Him, Wiſdome is juſtified of all her Children. Iohn 10.16. Heb. 5.8. Philip. 2.5. Luke 7.35.

And laſt; the duty of the whole Second part, and ſo, this dayes dutie, is this. When the Head-ſtone is brought forth, and reared (as to day it was) we are to proſecute it, with Hoſanna, and Benedictus qui venit (as it ſtraight-way followeth in the Pſalme) with acclamation of Grace, Grace unto it. For ſo (ſaith the Prophet) Lapis primarius would be laid, with rejoycing. Rejoycing: as in His regard, that hath obtained his due: ſo, even in the Buildings, that hath got ſuch a Head: Such and ſo gracious a Head, as could endure, thus to be refuſed by them; and yet admit, yea, even thoſe, that ſo refuſed Him (if the fault be not in themſelves) to be Stones in His building, for all that: and to be members of the Body, whereof He is the Head.

2 Then ſecondly, as GOD hath: ſo we to make Him, Head. Actually, we cannot; He is made to our hands: but, in account, we may: Giving Him, the higheſt place in all our reſpects; Magnifying His Name, and His Word, above all things: His Pſal.138.2. Word; making it our chiefe ground: His Name, and the glory of it, making it our chiefe end. That other conſiderations carry us not away, as theſe Builders here it did, Iohn 11.48. of Venient Romani, or, I wot not what; but that ever (as the Heathen Lawyer ſaid) it be Potior ratio, quæ facit pro Religione, the beſt reaſon, that maketh beſt for Religion, and for the good of the Body of this Head (that is, the peace of His Church.) And this, for, Lapis erat CHRISTVS.

1 The ſecond ſenſe, David. But, Lapis erat David, is likewiſe true. Therefore, that we doe King David no wrong, let us ſhew, how it fits him too: but briefly, becauſe, this, is not His day. David was a ſtone. The Iewes ſay, it was his Nic-name, or name of diſgrace; that, in ſcorne they called him ſo. For that, all his credit (forſooth) came, by caſting a ſtone, and hitting Goliah, by chance, right in the fore-head: and ſo, they thwited him with that name. They gave it him, in ſcorne: but he bare it, in earneſt. For ſure, much ſorrow he endured: had, that property of a Stone. And nothing could remove him, or make him ſhrinke, from his Truſt in GOD, or from his Allegiance to Saul his liege-Lord: that qualitie alſo.

2 And refuſed he was: not as CHRIST, we muſt not looke for that, neither in him, nor in any. GOD forbid, that any, ever ſhould be ſo refuſed, as Hee. As CHRIST, none, but CHRIST. No: but yet, in his degree refuſed he was, though. A hard time he had, and many hard termes, and hard uſages he endured, for many yeares together; purſued, and followed, and ſhould have beene no Head, nay, ſhould have had no head, if he had beene gotten.

3 Refuſed, and by whom? Even by Saul, all his life-time: and when Saul was 2 Sam.2.8. dead, Abner refuſed him, and ſet up another againſt him. And when he was out of 1 Sam.29.4. his Countrey, in Gath, refuſed there too, by the Princes of Achis. And even at 1 Sam.17.28. home, by his owne brethren, and fathers houſe. Yea, Samuel himſelfe, had given it 1 Sam.16.6. away (the Head-place) from him, to Eliab, and ſo refuſed him; but, for GOD. And theſe, went then, for the chiefe Builders in Iſrael, at that time. So, the Builders refuſed Him.

4 But, after all this, all this notwithſtanding, this Stone became the Head, (that is) Chap.2.38. David got the Crowne, and was King at laſt. For (Head) is the Kings Name. So doth Samuel call the King, 1 *Sam.*15.17. So doth Eſay, Chap. 7. 4. So doth Hoſee, *Chap.*1.11. But eſpecially, ſo Daniel, in expreſſe termes, Tu es Caput aureum, ſpeaking to the King, Thou art the Head of gold.

Head, and of the corner: that is (as ſome interpret it) of Iuda, and Iſrael. But, that is thought ſomewhat hard. For, thoſe two, were not two Kingdomes, nor ever ſo reckoned, till Roboam's time. And, what if David had not happened to have beene firſt King of one Tribe, and after, of all; ſhould he have loſt this name then? Should he not have beene Ακρογωνιαῖος? Shall no King be Caput Anguli, if hee have but one entire Kingdome? Shall not Salomon, as well as David? No queſtion but he ſhall.

The better part therefore thinke good, to give it that ſenſe, which never failes in any State: and which ſundry times ye ſhall finde pointed at by David himſelfe, as in the [a] 115. before, and in the [b] 135. after: Yea, even here in [c] this Pſalme at the beginning; Domus Iſrael, and Domus Aaron, the Houſe of Iſrael, and the Houſe of Aaron; that is, the two eſtates, Civill and Eccleſiaſticall, which maketh the maine Angle, in every Government. GOD Himſelfe hath ſevered them, and made theſe, two; but to meet in one: Not one to maligne and conſume the other. And, the happie combining

c Verſ.1.3.

combining of theſe two, is the ſtrength of the Head, and the ſtrength of the whole Building. If it beare but upon one of them, it will certainly decay. It did ſo in Sauls time: He little regarded the Arke, and leſſe the Prieſts. David ſaw Sauls errour, and in his Pſalme (where he ſingeth Ne perdas, to a Common-wealth) promiſeth to have equall care of both pillars, and to uphold them both. Pſal.75.3.

The firſt Booke of Chronicles, is ſufficient to prove, and perſwade any, he dealt in both, as chiefe over both. Not by right of Prieſt-hood, for none he had. And that, of his Prophecie, is as cold. Others alſo did the like, Aſa, Ioſaphat, Ezekias, Ioſias, that were no Prophets, nor ever ſo accounted.

In the Law (it is Philo's note) both Tables meet in the fifth Commandement (which is the Crowne-Commandement) as it were in an Angle; which Commandement, is placed (ſaith he) ὡς ἐν μεσωρίῳ as it were in the middle, or confines of both tables; that of Religion, and this other of Iuſtice Civill: That, with the right arme, the Prince may ſupport that, and with the left, this; and ſo uphold both. And in the Goſpell, CHRIST applieth this very verſe, to Himſelfe, as Heire of the Vine-yard. Heire He was not, but as King, not as Prieſt: He could not; for, of that Tribe He was not borne, but was called to it, as was Aaron. Matth.21.42. Heb.7.13, 14.

Since then, here we finde both, and that David was both, it is no error (I truſt) to call a King, Caput Anguli; No more is it, to call him Lapidem primarium, or angularem, chooſe ye whether. The Perſian (by the light of nature) called the King Ahaſhueroſh (that is) Soveraigne head. The Grecian (by the ſame light) called the King, βασιλέα, that is, θάσιν τῶ λαῶ the Baſe or Corner-ſtone of his People.

Shall I adde this? This word (Stone) which is here affirmed, of David, in this verſe: is, in the new Teſtament, five ſeverall times, turned by the Syrian Tranſlator, Cepha: [a] thrice in the three Goſpels: once in the [b] Acts: and once in [c] Saint Peter. So that, he did not thinke it ſtrange, to call King David Cephas. So Cepha, as well ſaid of David, as of Peter. And [d] Tu paſces, as well ſaid to David, as Paſce to Peter. And [e] Zorobabel hath in his hand, the Line, as well as Ioſua the high Prieſt, towards the building of the Temple. The thing, the dutie it ſelfe, and the bounds of it, let us lay forth and agree of, as we can: but ſure, the Name is not to be ſtood on; it cannot be denied Him.

And now to our ſelves: to whom, as This is the day which the LORD hath made, touching CHRIST, and His Reſurrection; ſo is it, likewiſe, the day that He hath made, the ſecond time, by making on it, His Majeſtie, Head of this Kingdome, the very Name whereof, hath affinitie, and carrieth an alluſion to the terme, Anguli, in the ſound of it. 3 The third ſenſe. His Majeſtie.

And, neither were Your Majeſtie, without your part of refuſing, in a kinde: but did participate, ſomewhat of it, with David, though in a leſſe degree. Good, and firme, and ſure, though your Right were, as any ſtone; yet allegations were ſtudied, to ſubject it to queſtion, yea, to refuſing. For, did no body ever ſee a project drawen, wherein ſome other ſtone was marked out, to have beene Caput Anguli? Yes; it is well knowen, Titles were raiſed, and ſet on foot, and Bookes written, to that end. 1

And, they tooke themſelves for no meane Work-men, that were the deviſers of them: that, both at home and abroad, contrived it another way: and plotted, to have put You by, and to have had ſome other Head-ſtone, of their owne hewing out, in Your roome. 2

Yea, to make Your caſe, yet more like to CHRISTS caſe: even the High Prieſt, he that claimeth Caiapha's place, he and his crue, had their hands in it. Wee may no leſſe truly, ſay to them, than Saint Peter ſaid to Caiaphas; Quem vos, Whom yee would have caſt aſide, if yee might have had your wils. And to that end, had your firſt Breves ready drawen, and ſent abroad; and others, in a readineſſe, to ſecond them. 3

4 Yet for all their Breves, and Bulls; this Stone is the Head, for all that. Factus, made he is, and made by GOD. For, à Domino, GODS doing it was, evidently; that after ſo much plotting, ſo many yeares together, at the very time, GOD bowed the hearts, of ſo many thouſands, as it had beene the heart of one man, to agree in one: as that, all that fore-ſaw it, thought it had not beene poſſible; and all that ſaw it, confeſſed it admirable; and all men ſaid, This hath GOD done: for they ſaw evidently, it was His worke. Pſal.64.9.

4 The Head, You were then made: And Head, not of One Angle, as You were before (for, Caput Anguli, I hold a King to be, though he have but one Kingdome) but Caput Trianguli, Head now of three, even of a whole Triangle. So, their titles were daſhed, their plots diſappointed, and all their devices, as the Potters clay. Yours it was of right, and GOD hath brought You to it. So it is: and our eyes doe ſee it, and our hearts doe joy in it, and our tongues bleſſe GOD for it; and here wee are, this day, with all praiſe and thankes to acknowledge it, that ſo it is. It is a part of this Dayes dutie, that ſo wee ſhould acknowledge it, and give Him thankes for it, that brought it to paſſe. Eſay 29.16.

2 And, may I not further put you in minde, of another making yet? And it is not impertinent neither: to this day, eſpecially. For, after the firſt making or placing, looke, how many after-attempts are made, to un-make or diſplace the Head-ſtone againe; ſo many times, as it is heaved at, to that end, and thoſe attempts defeated: ſo many new placings, ſo many new makings, are we to reckon of. David was made Head, not only, when Saul and Abner ſought to put him downe, and were put downe themſelves; which was, before he came to the Crowne: but, even after he had it, and had worne it long, when Abſalom and Sheba refuſed him (being their Head) and cryed, No part in David, and ſo, ſought to ſet him beſides the Throne. 2 Sam.20.1.

And Builders there wanted not in that deſigne: Abſalom had Achitophel and Amaſa, two as principall Maſter-builders, as then were any. When GOD brought David backe to his Seat againe, and delivered him from them, that ſought to remove him from it: He did as good, as place him in it, anew. David himſelfe ſaith ſo, before (at the 13. Verſe.) He was ſhrewdly liſted at, and ready to turne over: but GOD ſtayed him, and ſet him right in his Seat againe. And in very deed, the Verſe next before, (the XXI.) where he ſaith, GOD had heard him, and was become his Deliverer, makes the Writers to thinke, this Pſalme was endited rather for this Second, than for his firſt placing. 15.30. 9.30.

Now, a like Second making, wee may well remember: and wee cannot doe it better, than upon this day. This day (as wee ſhall ſee) hath an intereſt in it. That, ſince Your ſetting in the Seat of this Kingdome, Some there were, Builders one would have taken them to be, if hee had ſeene them, with their tooles in their hands, as if they had beene to have laid ſome foundation; where their meaning was, to undermine, and to caſt downe foundations and all: Yea, to have made a right Stone of You, and blowne You up among the Stones, You, and Yours without any more adoe.

2 And, Maſter-builders they had amongſt them, (ſo they will needs be accounted) that encouraged their hearts, and ſtrengthened their hands to the Worke. And that, they might doe, there was no Seale to hinder it: But diſcloſe it, that, they might not; for feare of breaking a Seale: there was a Seale for that. And thus did they ædificare ad Gehennam: edifie their followers to Hell-ward; to ſet them forward and ſend them to their owne place. That Day, which GOD undid that wretched deſigne, and brought their miſchiefe upon their owne heads, That Day, did GOD make You Caput trianguli, the ſecond time. That Day, that Hee brought You backe (if not from death it ſelfe, yet) from deaths doore, from the very gates of deſtruction, That Day, was a very Eaſter-day to You, though it were in November. And, ὡς ἐν παραβολῇ, after a ſort, a very Reſurrection: as very a reſurrection, as Iſaacs was, which the Apoſtle there ſpeaketh of: That Day, the deſtroying Angell (I am ſure) paſt over You, and ſo, it was truely the Feaſt of the Paſſeover. Fit therefore to be remembred this Day, Act.1.25. 3 Hebr.11.19.

Hic

Hic eſt dies, This is the day of the Paſſe-over, This is Eaſter-day, the day of the Reſurrection.

But, to returne to the firſt making of all. By the true courſe of the yeare, this Moneth, being the very Moneth, this day being the very day, of that, of the firſt laying of this Head-ſtone: we are (as before in CHRISTO Domino, ſo againe here) in CHRISTO Domini, to proſecute it with Davids cry of Hoſanna, and Benedictus: and with Zacharies acclamation, of Grace, Grace unto it, even to this Head-ſtone. Grace, in His eyes that ſo made You: And againe, Grace in their eyes and hearts to whom He ſo made You: But above all, the Grace of all Graces, that you may make Him ever Your Ἀκρογωνιαῖον, Your ſtone of chiefe truſt, and Your marke of higheſt regard, in all Your Counſels and purpoſes, that ſo made You: And, ſeeke to reduce the diſiecta latera, the ſides and walls flyen off, of this great Building (for which the world it ſelfe was built) His Church, and reduce them to one Angle: The greateſt Service, that can be done Him, on earth.

And ſo: Hee that this day made You the Head, ſo make You, and ſo keepe You long, and many dayes. He that refuſed them, that refuſed You (refuſed them, with reprobation) ſtill may He ſo doe, toties quoties, to their continuall confuſion: That, the Head over the Triangle, and the Triangle under the Head, may many yeares ſtand faſt and flouriſh, in all peace, plentie and proſperitie, health, honour, and happineſſe. And, after all: Hee that hath crowned You here, with two Crownes, alreadie; crowne You alſo with the third, of Glory and Immortalitie, in His Heavenly Kingdome.

I have now done. Onely I would move one thing, and it ſhall agree well with that, hath beene ſaid of the Corner-ſtone: and it ſhall ſerve to further our dutie of thankes; and be a good cloſing up of the whole. Many wayes, was CHRIST our bleſſed SAVIOVR a Corner-ſtone: among others, eſpecially in this, ſaith Saint Hierome: Quando agnum, cum pane conjunxit, finiens unum, inchoans alterum, utrumque perficiens in ſemetipſo. One chiefe Corner-point of His, was: when He joyned the Lambe of the Paſſe-over, and the Bread of the Euchariſt: ending the one, and beginning the other, recapitulating both Lambe and Bread into Himſelfe: making that Sacrament (by the very inſtitution of it) to be, as it were, the very Corner-ſtone of both the Teſtaments.

No Act then, more fit for this Feaſt (the Feaſt of the Paſſe-over) than that Act, which is it ſelfe the paſſage over, from the Old Teſtament to the New. No way, better, to expreſſe our thankes, for this Corner-ſtone, than by the holy Euchariſt, which it ſelfe is the Corner-ſtone, of the Law, and the Goſpell.

And, there is in it, a perfect repreſentation of the ſubſtance of this verſe and Text, 1 ſet before our eyes. Wherein, two poore Elements of no great value in themſelves, but that they might well be refuſed, are exalted by GOD, to the eſtate of a divine Myſterie, even of the higheſt Myſterie in the Church of CHRIST.

And, a kinde of reſurrection there is in them, and therefore fit for the day of the 2
Reſurrection (as ever, in CHRISTS Church, Eaſter-day hath pleaded a ſpeciall propertie in them.) Sowen, as it were, in weakneſſe and diſhonour: and (after they be conſecrated) riſing againe, in honour and power. 1 Cor. 15. 43.

And that, a great honour and power: not only to repreſent; but to exhibite that, 3 it repreſenteth: nor to ſet before us, or remember us of; but even to ſerve us for a Corner-ſtone. Firſt, uniting us to CHRIST the Head, whereby we grow into one frame of Building, into one body myſticall, with Him. And againe, uniting us alſo, as living ſtones, or lively members, omnes in id-ipſum, one to another, and all together in one, by mutuall love and charitie. Qui comedit de hoc Pane, & bibit de hoc Calice, Iohn 6. 56.
manet in Me, & Ego in illo. Hee that eateth of this Bread, and drinketh of this Cup, abideth in Me, and I in him. There is our Corner with Him. And againe, Vnum corpus 1 Cor. 10. 17.
omnes ſumus, qui de uno Pane participamus: All wee, that partake of one Bread, or Cup, grow all, into one Bodie myſticall. There is our Corner, either with other. By the ſame meanes, expreſſing our thankes for it; and by the ſame; poſſeſſing our ſelves of it: Sealing up both wayes our dutie to GOD for making CHRIST the LORD, our greateſt and chiefeſt: and for making His Anointed this day, under Him, either in their ſeverall degrees, our Ἀρχηγωνιαῖον our Chiefe, or Head Corner-ſtone. For which, together with all other His benefits, but eſpecially, as the time calleth to us, for theſe two, [CHRISTS riſing] and [Our Soveraignes raiſing to His Royall place] render wee, as we are bound, to GOD the FATHER, &c.

A

SERMON PREACHED BEFORE THE KINGS MAIESTIE AT VVHITE-HALL, ON the XII. of April, A. D. MDCXII. being EASTER-DAY.

I COR. Chap. V.

Expurgate vetus fermentum, &c.

VER. 7. Purge out therefore the old leven, that yee may be a new lumpe, as yee are unlevened: For, CHRIST our Paſſe-over is Sacrificed for us.

8. Therefore, let us keepe the Feaſt, not with old leven, neither with the leven of maliciouſneſſe and wickedneſſe; but, with the unlevened bread of Sinceritie and Truth.

HERE be two things, give themſelves forth upon the very firſt view of this Text. 1 Firſt, here is newes, that we Chriſtians, we alſo have our Paſſeover: 2 Then, that in memory of it, wee are to keepe a Feaſt. Paſcha Iudæorum, the Iewes Paſſeover we finde, in Iohn, Chap. II. and XI. Paſcha noſtrum, our Paſſeover, never till now. And indeed, to finde a Paſſeover, in Saint Pauls Epiſtles, and his Epiſtle, not to the Hebrewes, but to the Corinthians; their Paſſeover as well as his: For him to call, not his Countrimen the Iewes at Ieruſalem, but the Gentiles at Corinth, to keepe ſuch a Feaſt, is newes indeed. But Pascha noſtrum; the words be plaine: One we have. Itaque, and therefore let us hold a feaſt, for it.

And truly, upon this word [Celebremus] may this Feaſt of our EASTER ſeeme to be founded. There, is not onely a Warrant, but an Order for the making it a feaſt. And ſure, howſoever it will fall out with other feaſts, this of Eaſter, if there were nothing elſe, but the Controverſie, that was about the time of keeping it, in the very prime of the Primitive Church, even immediately after the Apoſtles; it were enough to ſhew, it was then generally agreed of all, Such a feaſt was to be kept. And the alledging on either ſide (one, Saint Iohns manner of keeping; the other; Saint Peters) prove plainely, it is Apoſtolicall (this feaſt;) and that the Apoſtles themſelves kept it. Itaque celebremus, therefore let us keepe it.

The Diviſion The word Itaque, in the later Verſe, is ever a note of a Concluſion: And where a Concluſion is, there is an Argument: And ſo is the Text. It ſtandeth of an [1] Antecedent, and a [2] Conſequent. [1] The Antecedent, in theſe words: CHRIST our Paſſe-over, &c. [2] The conſequent, in theſe: Itaque Celebremus, &c. Supplie but this Maxime of reaſon and law; If we have one, we are to hold one; The Text will make up a compleat Argument: But, one we have; therefore we are to hold it. Habendum & tenendum, as our Tenures runne.

I. In the Antecedent there riſe theſe five points: 1. The maine word Paſſeover, what is meant by it: Paſcha. 2. That we have one, in the word noſtrum. 3. Who it is expreſly: CHRIST. 4. CHRIST how, or when? not every way, nor at every time conſidered; but, as, and when He was offered up; Immolatus, offered up as a Sacrifice. 5. And laſtly, the word of our intereſt, Propter nos, For us; that ſo, we might paſſe over our ſinnes, and be paſſed over by the puniſhment due to them.

II. In the Conſequent, there ariſe two points: 1. There is an Itaque, to conclude us to keepe this feaſt. 2. And there is a Non, and a Sed, to direct us how to keepe it. The former binds us to Celebremus, to celebrate a feaſt; or to Epulemur, to make a feaſt. Both are read; and both well, for both are due. The latter, by Non in fermento, ſed in azymis (not ſo, but thus) teacheth us, how to hold it: How to keepe a Paſſe-over? but as a Paſſe-over ſhould be kept. How was that? not with levin, but with ſweet bread. And then he takes off the veile from MOSES face, that under the legall types of Leven, and Sweet bread, theſe Evangelicall duties are expreſſed unto us: By leven, is meant Malice and lewdneſſe: and ſo, we may not. By ſweet bread, is meant Sinceritie and Truth: and ſo, we are (with them) to celebrate our feaſt.

So, in the Antecedent, there is the [1] Benefit, and the [2] Meanes: that is CHRISTS part. In the Conſequent, [1] the Feaſt, and the [2] Duty: that is Ours. Indeed, to the word Paſſe-over, yee may reduce them all. 1. The Benefit: for it is a Paſſe-over; even the paſſing over of the Deſtroyer. 2. The Meanes: that is CHRIST, by the Sacramentall figure called the Paſſe-over, as the meanes of it. 3. The Feaſt: whether that we ſolemnize, or that we are invited to, either is a Paſſe-over. 4. And laſt our Duty: for, that is alſo a kinde of Paſſe-over, from Vetus fermentum, to Nova conſperſio. So, [1] the Benefit, [2] the Meanes, [3] the Feaſt it ſelfe, and [4] the Duty of it, all are recapitulate, in this one word, Paſſe-over.

The Summe of all is; that we performe the duty, that we ſo may partake of the benefit: all is but to conclude us ad hoc Feſtum, ad hoc epulum, to the Feaſt and the feaſt of the Feaſt; that we paſſe not them over. This is all, that Saint Paul (here) pleades for, and all that wee. Enough, to let you ſee the Text, in the feaſt; and the feaſt, in the Text: in the Text, the parts and the order of them.

Paſcha

PAſcha, a Paſſe-over. * Quænam eſt hæc Religio (ſaith GOD) ſhall bee our queſtion? What is the meaning of this obſervance, and what good is there in it? For, every Feaſt is in remembrance of ſome beneſit (ἑορτὰ, ὅτι ἔκ τινος ἐστι.) Paſſing over is (of it ſelfe) a thing indifferent; good or badde, thereafter as that is, which paſſeth over us, or we over it. For, if any good over-paſſe us, we loſe by it; but, if any danger, wee are the better. Againe, if we paſſe from better to worſe, it is a detriment: But, if from a worſe caſe or place, to a better, it is a beneſit. And this is a benefit: for, here is a Feaſt holden for it. Then did ſome evill paſſe over us; or wee our ſelves paſſe over into ſome better eſtate. I. The Antecedent. 1 What is meant by Paſcha. * Exod. 12.26.

The Law muſt be our line, to lead us all along this Text; the Character of it is legall. How was it there? Evill paſſed them; a deſtroying Angell, that ſlew the firſt borne in every houſe through Egypt, but paſſed them over, and touched them not. And yet there was another: They paſſed out of Egypt, to the Land of promiſe, over the Redde ſea. They paſſed it well: as for Pharao and his hoſt, they periſhed in it. Ye ſhall finde both theſe thus ſet downe together (Heb. XI. in the 28. verſe) the Deſtroyer did paſſe over them: (In the 29. verſe) they did paſſe over into Canaan. The Egyptians periſhed in both; had no Paſſeover: GODS people had. Exod. 12.29.

But what is this to us? Here is Paſcha, but where is Noſtrum? We are not in Egypt, no feare of our firſt borne; here is no deſtroying Angell: And wee are farre enough from the redde ſea. What then, if our caſe fall out to be like, if our danger as great: and ſo it will. Here wee live, we call it a vale of miſerie; in a world, whereof Egypt is but a corner, and was but a Type; Nor their Pharao but a limme of the great Pharao, that tyrannizeth here in this world. 2 We have every one a ſoule; it is not our firſt borne, it is more; even Vnicam meam (as the Pſalmiſt calleth it) the firſt, and all that wee have. 3 It skills not for the Angell: GODS wrath is ſtill readie to bee revealed on our ſinnes: from that, commeth all deſtruction. The Angels doe but carrie the phials of it. 4 And death will match the Redde ſea: all muſt through it; and ſome paſſe well, but the moſt part periſh. 2 Our Paſſeover What it is. Pſal. 84.6. Pſal. 22.20. Apoc. 16.

Now then for Noſtrum. Our abode here is as dangerous, as theirs in Egypt: as many deſtroyers, yea, as many Crocodiles too; and therfore we need a Paſcha, to eſcape GODS wrath, to have it paſſe over us here.

And yet, there reſts another beſides. For, how well we ſhall doe with that former, I know not; but, to the latter we muſt all come, to death, to the Redde-ſea-brinke: and there, either periſh, or paſſe well over, one of the twaine. Sure, Paſcha noſtrum is not more than needs; Paſcha nobis opus eſt, we need one (a Paſſe-over) no leſſe than they.

Nay, I goe further: Ours is ſuch as theirs. Theirs is nihil ad noſtrum, nothing to ours. For, what talke we of a deliverie of one poore Nation; and that, but from a bodily danger; and but one neither? Call ye that a Paſſeover? How much more then, ours, the great, and generall Paſſeover, that freeth us? that freeth all mankind, from the totall deſtruction both of body and ſoule; and that by an eternall deliverie, both here and for ever? How to eſcape that, GODS wrath, ira ventura; that is the true Paſſeover. And what mention wee Canaan? Is there any compariſon, between the two kingdomes, of Canaan, and Heaven, whether CHRIST ſhall make us paſſe? Indeed, Paſcha noſtrum is it: ours, and none but ours. Theirs, but a ſhadow; Ours, the ſubſtantiall, very Paſſeover indeed. When all is done, Paſcha noſtrum is it. Matt. 3.7.

Will ye giveme leave, to preſent you with a meditation upon this point: it will fit fit the feaſt well, and ſerves us for a preparation to our Paſſe-over, and I will not fetch it farre, but even from the word Paſſe-over. For, all the labour is, but to make us feele the want of it.

Eccleſ.1.4. Eſt ſapientis querela, tranſire generationem, aliam ſuccedere, aliam quoque tranſire. It is that, the Apoſtle tells us, and we feele it, Mundus tranſit, that the world paſſes: Chap.7.31. 1 Ioh.2.17. Παράγει (ſaith Saint Paul) παράγεται (ſaith Saint Iohn) in the Active and Paſsive both, the world paſſeth away. Et en Paſcha, en tranſitus, a kind of Paſſe-over of the world it ſelfe, Heb.13.14. of this tranſitorie world (as we terme it) Vbi non habemus manentem, &c. where we cannot long have any abode.

2 But then, if we looke home to our ſelves, we ſhall finde another Paſſe-over there; Pſal.90.10. even that of the Pſalme, Citò tranſit & avolamus, we paſſe as a ſhadow, as a dreame, when one awaketh; we bring our yeares to an end, as it were a tale that is told. Citò tranſit, ſo ſoone paſſeth it and wee are gone. Iam 3.6. Saint Iames very excellently expreſſeth it: Τροχὸς, a very wheele of our nature whirling about: That the world paſſeth; but wee, faſter than it.

3 But the third is the complaint indeed: that tranſitorie though this world bee, and we yet more tranſitorie; yet we cannot paſſe it quietly for all that. But, ſome wipe wee have of the Angel's ſword; at leaſt-wiſe, in feare wee live ſtill, of thoſe in the Pſal.91.5.6. Pſalme, Sagitta volans, or Terror nocturnus, or Incurſus, or Dæmon meridianus; one Apoc 6.4. 5. 8. of Egypts ten plagues: One of the Angels phialls, or of the Horſes, redde, blacke, or pale, are ſtill abroad; much adoe we have, without ſome miſ-hap, to paſſe this life that paſſeth ſo faſt.

4 But laſtly, ſay that we have the good hap, to ſcape well here; yet hence we muſt yer long, to the redde-ſea-banck: we muſt come to death all: and death is not Interitus (a finall end) but Tranſitus (a paſſage over to a new eſtate.) There, is the maine perill, that we miſcarrie not; (great odds there is, for many doe;) but paſſe well over into the land of promiſe.

Theſe foure Paſſe-overs it will not be amiſſe to thinke of. And, in all theſe, need we not one, to helpe us well through, that theſe perills may well paſſe us over? Need wee not one, that may make the red-ſea paſſable for us, that we may well come to the land of the living?

And now then, tell me, what is the ſumme of all our deſires? Is it not Bonum Paſcha? While we are here, the Deſtroyers may paſſe, and when we goe hence, we may well get over? Is it not, Sic tranſire tranſitoria, ut tranſeundo perveniamus ad æterna? So to paſſe theſe tranſitorie things, that wee may well come to thoſe, that ſhall never paſſe? A good Paſſe-over is our wiſh; and againſt wee ſhall need it, a good one GOD ſend us. Vpon the point, if wee weigh well, Salus ipſa nihil eſt, niſi Paſcha. The benefit of all benefits (ſalvation it ſelfe) is compriſed, in this word; is nothing but a Paſſe-over: As much, in one word, as the other, tranſire à malo, to bee ſaved from evill; tranſire ad bonum, to be ſet ſafe in good: To theſe two may all be reduced. This is all wee need, and all we ſeeke. And this Paraſceue (or preparation) will ſet us in Luc.22.15. hand to ſeeke it, and make us ſay (with our SAVIOVR) deſiderio deſideravi ut, &c. earneſtly to deſire, to have our part in this Paſſe-over.

3 Who it is The next point; if we need one, and if we deſire one, where ſhall we have one? Mar.16.3. Quis revolvet nobis hunc lapidem? Who will rolle us away this ſtone (ſaid the Women this day.) To our line againe, the law. How did they there, in the Type? (for, ſo it muſt bee, in the truth.) They had a meanes, that helped them through both, which (per Metonymian cauſæ) they called their Paſſe-over. And it was a Lambe.

CHRIST the Lambe of GOD. Have wee ſo? yes: Ecce AGNVS DEI (ſaid the Baptiſt, at the firſt ſight.) But every Lambe will not ſerve; it muſt be a Paſchall Lambe. Is CHRIST that Lambe? S. Iohn puts it out of queſtion: That which was ſaid of the Paſchall lambe [ye ſhal not breake a bone of him] he applies to CHRIST; and ſaith, in Him the Scripture was Ioh.1.29. Ioh.19.36. fulfilled. Eodem tempore, illorum, & noſtrum: adductus in Feſto ipſo.

Then,

Then a Paſchall lambe, He is; and ſo in caſe, to be made a Paſſe-over of. But, a Paſſe-over He is not, till He be Offered. For (if ye marke it) offering is a paſsing over of that is offered, to Him, we offer it to: Offered He muſt be. Et oblatus eſt (ſaith Eſay) offered He was. 4 Chriſt offered in a ſacrifice. E.a 53.7.

Oblatus; ſo He may be, and yet alive: but the word is immolatus, offered, and offered in Sacrifice. A live lambe is not it; it is a lambe ſlaine muſt be our Paſſe-over. And CHRIST is a Lambe ſlaine (ſaith Saint Iohn) from the beginning; and the ſprinkling of His bloud in Baptiſme, maketh the Deſtroyer paſſe over us. Apoc. 5.12. 13.8.

There be many kinds of offerings: This determineth, which of them CHRIST was. Such an one, as wee muſt epulari; that is, the Peace-offering. For, of the Peace-offering, the fleſh was to bee eaten: Part GOD had; and part the offerer eate; in ſigne of perfect peace, and reconciliation betweene them. CHRISTS bloud not onely in the Baſon, for Baptiſme; but, in the Cuppe, for the other Sacrament. A Sacrifice; ſo, to be ſlaine: A propitiatorie Sacrifice; ſo, to bee eaten. As a Peace-offering. Levit. 7.15.

Thus CHRIST is a Paſſe-over. But, where is noſtrum, without which all this is nothing? Propter nos, for us, that maketh it ours. That which is for us offered, is ours: and we ſo reckon it. The lambe was not ſlaine, for it ſelfe: (Quid agnus committere?) but for the firſt borne: So CHRIST; not for Himſelfe (Nothing worthy death in Him, witneſſe Pilate;) but, for us. 5 Our interceſt. propter nos. Exod. 13.15. Luke 23.4. 14. 15.

For us, that is for our ſalvation, to ſave us: Save us, from what? from our ſinnes. And here now, wee are come to the point of the Paſſe-over indeed: the quitting us, and the manner of quitting us from our ſinnes. All the buſineſſe whereof was carried in the very manner of a Paſſe-over. To ſave us from our ſinnes.

First, ſinne it ſelfe, what is it but a tranſgreſsion, or paſsing over the lines and limits of our Dutie, ſet us, in the law of GOD? And why hovers the deſtroying Angell over us? Why goeth hee not on his way, but ſeeks to bring deſtruction upon our heads? What is the mark, he ſtriketh at? What, but our ſinnes? But for them, no Deſtroyer ſhould ever have power over us. But for them, that hang ſo heavie on us, and ſo preſſe us downe, we ſhould goe through well enough. 1 ἀνομία.

Why then, Hic eſt omnis fructus, ut auferatur peccatum: All is but this, to have our ſinnes taken away. And who ſhall take them away? Ecce qui tollit peccata mundi; that taketh away ours; nay, the ſinnes of the world. 2 Ioh. 1.29.

How taketh away? GOD hath taken away thy ſinne (ſaith Nathan to David:) the word is not abſtulit, but tranſtulit (that is) transferendo abſtulit; or (as the Hebrew word is) tranſire fecit: To take it from David, make it paſſe from him upon ſome other; (that is) even the Sonne of David, Him GOD hath given us, to paſſe our ſinnes over, from us to Him. 3 2 Sam. 12.13. העביר

And when that? when He was offered, made a ſacrifice for us. It is the nature of every Sacrifice, transferendo auferre: He, that offers it, lays his hands on the head of it, confeſſes his ſinnes over it, and his juſt deſert to be ſmitten by the Deſtroyer; but prays, he may put this offering, in his owne place, and what is due to him (that is death) may bee transferred from him, and light on the offering; that may ſerve, and hee ſcape. 4 Levit. 1.4. 3.2. 8. 13.

In all offerings thus it was: but, in the Paſchall lambe ſpecially: that it hath carried away the name, from all the reſt, to be called the Paſſe-over onely. In it (evidently) the death of the firſt borne was tranſlated over upon the poore lambe. The lambe died, the firſt borne was ſaved; his death paſſed over unto the lambe: that it was juſtly called the Paſſe-over, for ſo it was. 5 Exod. 13.15.

But much more juſtly CHRIST: who (ſure) was even a Paſſe-over throughout from the firſt to the laſt. At the firſt: His birth, what was it but a Paſſe-over, from the boſome of His Father, to the wombe of His Mother, to take our nature? And His Circumciſion. what, but a Paſſe-over, from the ſtate of one free; to the condition of one bond; 6 bond, to undertake our debt? And at the last, His Resurrection (this day) what was it, but a passage from death to life? and His Ascension another, de mundo ad Patrem, from the world to his Father? First and last, a Passe-over He was.

7 But, above all, His death, His offering, was it: then, He was Pascha pro nobis, indeed. For then, He passed over into the estate of us wretched sinners, layd off His own (as it were) and tooke upon Him our person; became tanquam unus è nobis, nay tanquam omnes nos. For, GOD tooke from us, and layd them on Him, Posuit super Eum iniquitates omnium nostrûm, Layd upon Him (our Passe-over) the transgressions of us all. Fecit peccatum, made Him sinne for us; there, our Sinnes passed from us; fecit maledictum, made Him a Curse for us; there the Punishment of our sinnes passed from us to Him. Then, and there, passed the Destroyer over us.

Esay 53.6. 2 Cor. 5.21. Gal. 3.13.

Over us, to Him. But, when He came at Him, He passed Him not: Transeat à me calix would not bee heard; and it was Pascha, non pascha; a Passe-over to us, No passe-over to Him. Wee had one: He had none. Him it passed not, but light upon Him so heavie, that, it made a sweat of bloudy drops, passe from Him; yea, life and soule and all, yer it left Him. At which His Passion, He was a right Passe-over; Christus πάσχων Christus pascha. Then, He was pro nobis; then, He was nostrum: CHRIST, CHRIST offered, offered for us. Of which passing our sinnes to Him, and GOD'S wrath over us, this day and the action of this day, is a memoriall.

Mat. 26.39. Luk. 22.44.

II. The Consequent

And so let us passe over from the Antecedent, to the Consequent: which is, Itaque Celebremus, Therefore let us keepe a feast. A Feast, and Christ slaine, and so handled as He was? A fast rather, one would thinke. True: but that, we heard againe of ours; so did not they, of theirs. For, this, He came againe safe; and opened unto us a new passage, by His second Passe-over. All we spake of right now, was done the third day since: But, we hold not our Feast, till this day. For, till this day, we knew not, what was become of Him. Passed He was hence; but, whether in His passage He had miscarried or no, we knew not. But now, this day, by His Resurrection (we know) He is well passed over; and, so, omni modo a true Passe-over. So now, we hold our Feast, as a feast should be holden, with joy. And, a double Feast it is: 1 One, that by His suffering, He passed from life to death for our sinnes. 2 A second, that by His rising againe, this day, Hee passed from life to death for our justification. And so, two Passe-overs in one. He died, and by His death made the Destroyer passe over us: He rose againe, and by it, made death (as the red sea) passable for us. Itaque celebremus, Itaque, epulemur.

Rom. 4.25.

Ἑορτάζωμεν, Celebremus, Epulemur.

Ἑορτάζωμεν, the word is one, but two waies it is turned. 1 Some read, Celebremus. 2 Some other, Epulemur. But well: for first, it is kindly, when we keepe a feast, wee make a feast. But this, this feast is not celebrated sine hoc epulo. If Christ bee a propitiatorie sacrifice, a Peace-offering, I see not how we can avoide, but the flesh of our peace offering must be eaten in this feast by us, or else we evacuate the offering utterly, and lose the fruit of it: And was there a Passe-over heard of, and the lamb not eaten? Time was, when He was thought no good Christian, that thought, hee might doe one without the other. No Celebremus, without Epulemur in it.

1 Immolatus and Celebremus

But first, will ye lay the former and this together, Immolatus and celebremus; and see how well it falleth out with us. Immolatus is His part, to be slaine: Celebremus is ours, to hold a Feast: Good-friday, His; Easter-day Ours. His premisses, bitter; our conclusion joyfull: a loving partition, on His part; an happie, on ours.

2 Immolatus and Epulemur.

Againe, will we lay Immolatus to epulemur. That the Passe-over doth not conclude in the sacrifice, the taking away of sinne onely; (that is) in a pardon, and there an end: But, in a feast; which is a signe, not of forgivenesse alone, but of perfect amitie, full propitiation: Ye may propius ire, draw neere unto Him; ye are restored to full grace, and favour, to eate and drinke at His table.

Heb. 10.22.

Besides, there was an offering in Immolatus; and here is another (a new one) in Epulemur. Offered for us, there; offered to us, here: There, per modum victimæ, here, here, per modum epuli. To make an offering of; To make a refreshing of. For us, in the Sacrifice: to us, in the Sacrament. This makes a perfect Passe-over. We reade both in the Gospell, πάσχα θύειν, to sacrifice the Passe-over; and πάσχα φαγεῖν, to eat it. It was eaten (the Paschal Lambe) and it was a sacrifice: It cannot be denied, there is a flat Text for it, *Exod.*12.27. Both propounded here, in the termes of the Text: 1 The Sacrifice, in Immolatus: 2 The Supper, in Epulemur. Luke 22.7. Matth.26.17. Iohn 18.28.

Celebremus, and Epulemur. There be, that referre Celebremus to the Day; Epulemur, to the Action: and so it may, well: Both Day, and Action have interest in this Text. And then, the Text is against them, that have never an Easter-day in their Calender. But the Fathers usually referre both to the Action. Their reason: Because (in truth) the Eucharist now, in the Gospell, is that, the Passe-over was, under the Law: The Antitype answering, to their type of the Paschal Lambe. It is plaine by the immediate passage of it from the one to the other: that, no sooner done, but this began. Looke, how soone the Paschal Lambe eaten, presently the holy Eucharist instituted, to succeed in the place of it for ever. And yet more plaine, that this very Scripture of my Text was thought so pertinent, and so proper to this Action, as it was alwayes said, or sung at it. And, I know no cause, but it might be so still. Two things CHRIST there gave us in charge: 1 Ἀνάμνησις, Remembring, and 2 Λῆψις Receiving: The same two, Saint Paul (but, in other termes) 1 Καταγγολία shewing forth; 2 Κοινωνία communicating. Of which, Remembring and Shewing forth referre to celebremus: Receiving and Communicating, to epulemur here. Chap 11.25. Chap. 11.29.

The first, in remembrance of Him, CHRIST: What of Him? Mortem Domini, His death (saith Saint Paul:) to shew forth the LORDS death. Remember Him, that we will, and stay at home; thinke of Him there: Nay, shew Him forth ye must. That we will, by a Sermon of Him: Nay, it must be Hoc facite. It is not mentall thinking, or verball speaking: there must be actually somewhat done, to celebrate this Memory. That done, to the holy symboles, that was done to Him, to His body, and His bloud, in the Passe-over: Breake the one, powre out the other; to represent κλώμενον, how His sacred body was broken; and ἐκχυνόμενον, how His precious bloud was shed. And in Corpus fractum, and Sanguis fusus there is Immolatus. This is it, in the Eucharist, that answereth to the Sacrifice, in the Passe-over: The memoriall, to the figure. To them it was, Hoc facite in Mei præfigurationem, doe this in prefiguration of Me: To us it is, Doe this, in commemoration of Me. To them, Prenuntiare; to us, Annuntiare: there is the difference. By the same rules, that theirs was; by the same, may ours be termed a Sacrifice. In rigour of speech, neither of them: for (to speake after the exact manner of Divinitie) There is but one onely sacrifice, veri nominis, properly so called: That is CHRISTS death. And that sacrifice but once actually performed, at His death: but ever before represented, in figure, from the beginning; and ever since repeated, in memory, to the worlds end. That only absolute; all else relative to it, representative of it, operative by it. The Lambe, but once actually slaine, in the fulnesse of time: but vertually, was from the beginning, is, and shall be, to the end of the world. That, the Center, in which their lines and ours, their types and our antitypes doe meet. While yet this offering was not, the hope of it was kept alive, by the prefiguration of it, in theirs. And after it is past, the memory of it is still kept fresh in minde, by the commemoration of it, in ours. So it was the will of GOD; that so, there might be with them a continuall fore-shewing, and with us a continuall shewing forth the LORDS death till He come againe. Hence it is, that what names theirs carried, ours doe the like, and the Fathers make no scruple at it; no more need we. The Apostle (in the X. Chapter) compareth this of ours, to the Immolata of the Heathen: And (to the Hebrewes) Habemus aram, matcheth it with the Sacrifice of the Iewes. And we know the rule of comparisons: They must be ejusdem generis. 1 Celebremus: In the Sacrifice. 1 Cor.11.26. 1 Cor.11.26. Luke 22.19. 1 Cor.11.26. Heb.10 4. Heb.9.28. 1 Cor.10.21, &c. Heb.13.10.

Neither doe we stay here, but proceed to the other [Epulemur.] For, there is another thing yet to be done, which doth present to us that, which Celebremus doth represent. 2 Epulemur; In the Sacrament.

repreſent. From the Sacrament, is the applying the Sacrifice. The Sacrifice, in generall, Pro omnibus. The Sacrament, in particular, to each ſeverall receiver, Pro ſingulis. Wherein, that is offered to us, that was offered for us; that, which is common to all, made proper to each one, while each taketh his part of it; and made proper by a communion, and union, like that of meat and drinke, which is moſt neerely and inwardly made ours, and is inſeparable for ever. There, Celebremus paſſeth with the repreſentation: But here, Epulemur (as a nouriſhment) abideth with us ſtill. In that wee ſee; and in this we taſte, how gracious the LORD is, and hath beene to us. And ſo much for theſe two, as two meanes, to partake the Benefit, and we to uſe them: and as Duties required of us, and we to performe them.

Pſal.34.8.

Will ye marke one thing more: That Epulemur doth here referre to Immolatus. To CHRIST, not every way conſidered, but as when He was offered. CHRISTS body that now is; True: but not CHRISTS body as now it is, but as then it was, when it was offered, rent, and ſlaine, and ſacrificed for us. Not as now He is glorified; for ſo, He is not, ſo He cannot be immolatus; For He is immortall, and impaſſible. But, as then He was, when He ſuffered death (that is) paſſible and mortall. Then, in His paſſible eſtate, did He inſtitute this of ours, to be a memoriall of His Paſſibile, and Paſſio, both. And we are, in this action, not only carried up to CHRIST (Surſum corda) but, we are alſo carried backe, to CHRIST; as He was at the very inſtant, and in the very act of His offering. So, and no otherwiſe, doth this Text teach. So, and no otherwiſe, doe we repreſent Him. By the incomprehenſible power of His eternall Spirit, not He alone, but He, as at the very act of His offering, is made preſent to us, and we incorporate into His death, and inveſted in the benefits of it. If an Hoſt could be turned into Him now glorified as He is, it would not ſerve: CHRIST offered is it: Thither we muſt looke. [a] To the Serpent lift up, thither we muſt repaire, [b] even ad cadaver: we muſt [c] hoc facere, doe that, is then done. So, and no otherwiſe, is this Epulare to be conceived. And ſo (I thinke) none will ſay they doe or can turne Him.

[a] Iohn 3.14.
[b] Luke 17.37.
[c] 1 Cor.11.24.

1 Itaque: We bound to keepe it.

Now, all we have to doe, is to ſhew what we thinke of this Itaque, whether it ſhall conclude us or no: and, that we ſhew it by our practice; for, other anſwer, the Apoſtle will take none. If we play faſt or looſe with it on this faſhion (as divers doe) upon the matter as good to ſay, The HOLY GHOST cannot tell, how to make an argument: CHRIST is offered, but no Itaque epulemur, for all that. Thus we will not ſay, for very ſhame. What then? will we diſpenſare contra Apoſtolum (which we blame as a foule abuſe in the Pope? and yet, I cannot ſee, but every meane perſon takes upon Him Papall authority, in this caſe;) and, as oft as we liſt, diſpenſe with the Apoſtle and his Itaque; exempt our ſelves from his concluſion: That wee will not ſeeme to doe. No: it is not at Itaque: The truth is, it is at Non in fermento, we ſticke: we love our leven ſo well (be it malice, or be it ſome other leven as bad:) ſo well we love it, we will not part with it; we loath the Lambe, rather than the leven ſhall out. But, in the meane time, there is no trifling with this concluſion; there is no diſpenſing with the Apoſtle: there is no wanton wilfull diſabling our ſelves will ſerve. Itaque will not be ſo anſwered: Not, but with Epulemur. It layeth a neceſſitie upon every one, to be a gueſt at this Feaſt. The Iewes (we know) were held hard to theirs, upon a great paine, to have (not their names, but) their ſoules cut out from GODS people. And is it a leſſe treſpaſſe for Chriſtians to paſſe by this Paſſe-over? or hath the Church leſſe band, to exact like care at our hands? No indeed: wee muſt know, the HOLY GHOST can tell how to inferre: And that this Itaque of the Apoſtles is a binding concluſion. To the next point.

Exod.12.19.

2 Direction how to keepe it.

Abſolutely, we are to keepe this Feaſt: but not to keepe it Quovis modo: No matter how: prepared, unprepared: in any garment in any ſort. No: this Non and this Sed; Not on that manner, but this; ſhew plainly every manner will not ſerve. What then is the Manner? Not in old leven. With the Paſſe-over he began, and he holds him to it ſtill: that, if it be a Paſſe-over, reaſon would, it ſhould be kept like a Paſſe-over, even even in the ſame manner. Now, the Paſſe-over was not a looſe lawleſſe thing; to hold it in any faſhion, it skilled not how. No: it had his lawes. Even that, Hæc eſt lex Paſchalis (ye ſhall reade it, *Exod.*12.43.) This is the law of keeping it.

Indeed, diverſe lawes it had in type, that concerne us in truth: Among the reſt this, for one, in the Text. The Lambe would not be eaten, with every kinde of bread: Ever paſte was not for this Feaſt; not levened, in any wiſe. Such an antipathie there was, betweene leven, and it, as it might not (I will not ſay, come to the board; but not) be endured in the houſe, all the Feaſt long, though it were neither taſted nor touched. If it were not throwen out; if any never ſo little of it remained in any corner, the Law was broken, the Feaſt illegitimate. To make it up then a perfect Paſſe-over; here is another yet (which I called our Paſſe-over-duty:) the not ſtaying ſtill, in our old leven; but paſsing over (as it were) to a new paſte, a neceſſary condition for the right holding this Feaſt. For ſweet bread was ſo proper to the Paſſe-over, as (Luke 22.) ye ſhall finde, they be but two divers names, of one and the ſame thing.

1 Non in fermento: Not with the old Leven.

Luke 22.7.

Omnia in figuram illis (ſaith the Apoſtle) With them, all was in type: What is the Spirit of this letter? What meant by leven? The Apoſtle tels us, the old leven of Ægypt, is our former vitious courſe of life, ſowred with the leven of the old Adam; and Nova Conſperſio is newneſſe of life. The time of offering the Lambe, is the time of caſting out this. Meet, if we would have our ſinnes paſſe from us, wee ſhould paſſe from them alſo, and throw their leven out.

1 Cor.10.11.

And well is Sinne reſembled to leven. Leven will grow noyſome, if it be kept long: and ſinne, if it have lyen long in us, or we in it, turnes to a certaine ſowreneſſe, that we our ſelves feele an unpleaſant ſavour or upbraiding of it, in our ſoules. Our SAVIOVR felt it ſo (I am ſure;) the Vinegar He tooke, ſhewed the reliſh of it. By which upbraiding, we finde, we need an Expurgate for it, as it were a corrupt humour in our ſoules, that needed to be purged out.

Generally, all old leven whatſoever: namely, two ſorts of it, [1] Κακία, and [2] Πονηρία, turned, Naughtineſſe and Malice. The words, in their owne nature (as they properly ſignifie) [1] One noteth a looſe licentious lewdneſſe, lightly ending in Luſt. [2] The other, an unquiet working wickedneſſe, that will take paines to doe a ſhrewd turne, commonly the effect of Malice. The ſinnes of luſt are well ſet out, in old corrupt leven: for, ſo they end, moſt-what in corruption, and rottenneſſe. The ſinnes of malice likewiſe. For, as leven, it makes men ſwell one againſt another as if they would burſt; and ſowre are the fruits of it, and unpleaſant, as any leven in the world.

Theſe two to be caſt out, as thoſe that have a ſpeciall antipathie with this Feaſt and Offering. For, no agreement betweene a foule life, and the feaſt of an undefiled Lambe. Nor, no fellowſhip, betweene ſowre malice, and the feaſt of Sweet-bread. And theſe two are ſpecially named, becauſe they were the faults wherewith the Corinthians ſpecially were levened, to whom he writes. Inceſt (at the firſt Verſe:) as (we know) Corinth heard evill for looſeneſſe: There is Nequitia. And againe, ſwelling one againſt another (at the ſecond) there is Malice.

As, to rid our ſelves of this leven; ſo to furniſh our ſelves (as with new paſte) with the two leven-leſſe vertues, Sinceritie, and Truth. Sinceritie (that is) cleanneſſe of life: (a word thought to be taken from Honey, which is then mel ſincerum, when it is ſine cerâ, unmingled, without wax, or any baggage in it.) Εἰλικρινέια the Greeke word is (properly) of uncounterfeit wares; ſuch, as we may κρίνειν ἐν ἠλίῳ, bring forth, and ſhew them in the Sunne; as need not the falſe light of a cloſe ſhop, to utter them. But, Truth, that, runnes thorow all; flat againſt all kinde of leven: if it have any manner leven, true it is not: and ſo, out it muſt.

Sed, &c.

1 The leven of Doctrine. Matth. 16. 6. 12.

Of leven in the Goſpell, I finde three ſorts interpreted to our hands, that we cannot miſtake. CHRIST willed His Diſciples, to beware of the leven of the Phariſees and Sadduces. It is after ſaid, He meant it of their doctrine, that was full of corrupt leven. 1. The Phariſees; of the leven of ſuperſtition conſiſting in phylacteries, phraſes, and obſervances, and little elſe. 2. The Sadduces; of a leven that ſmelt ſtrong of prophaneneſſe, in their libertie of prophecying, calling in queſtion Angels, and Spirits, and the Reſurrection it ſelfe. 3. And a third leven CHRIST names, the leven of Herod; ware that too: Many times, it is the bane of true Religion, when GODS truth and worſhip muſt be moulded up with Ieroboams, and with Herods ends; ſquared to them juſt, as is fitteſt to doe their turnes; that Ieroboam may be ſafe. No ſuperfluous Caveat: many times, this marreth all. Let all be abandoned; Phariſees, Sadduces, Herods, and the truth take place.

Marke 8. 15.

2 The leven of life. Luke 12. 1. Matth. 6. 16. Matth 23. 7. 27.

Now, as in that place, the Phariſees leven, is doctrine: ſo, in another, I finde, that CHRIST expounds it hypocriſie: and that is meerely oppoſite to truth, in meaning, ſpeaking, and dealing. The Phariſee was a great dealer with this leven. He had it on his face, to make him looke ſowre; men might take notice, when they faſted. Hee had it on his tongue; Rabbi, O you teach the truth, you reſpect no mans perſon; when they ſought to cut His throat. He had it in his whole courſe; all for ſhew; to ſeeme that, they were not: Gabbatha, without; and Golgotha, within.

But yet, even they, though they uſed it, they taught it not for a doctrine; nor avowed not the lawfull uſe of it; that one might ſpeake the one halfe without, and the other halfe within: (as our Phariſees now doe.) Men, ye ſhall never have any ſincere truth from them. Search them, they have ſtill a peece of leven in their boſome: ſpeake ſo, and deale ſo, as if they would take the ſentence by the end, and turne it cleane againſt the Apoſtle; to purge out all his ſweet bread, all ſinceritie, and truth; and hold their Paſſe-over in leven, or not at all. Antichriſts goat may be ſo eaten: The Lambe CHRIST cannot. To the Lambes nature (that is ſincere) nothing ſo contrary, as this, to meane, ſpeake, or deale un-ſincerely.

3 The leven of company corrupt in Life.

You ſee a leven of Doctrine, and Life: (that is, the leven of the Goſpell.) A third there is (the leven of the Epiſtle) and that is of Corrupt company: and that is (in very deed) the leven of this Text. For, when the Apoſtle would have this leven here purged, what meanes hee? To have the inceſtuous Corinthian removed, and caſt out of the fellowſhip of the faithfull, by the Cenſures of the Church. True: but thoſe, not in every mans power. But, this is: To avoid, and ſhunne them, and their company: ſo, we may; and ſo, we are bound to caſt them out.

There is very great danger in perſons ſo levened; great ſcandall, even to the well diſpoſed: but, farre greater danger, to the moſt; that will ſoone take this leven: Our nature is apt to take it; it is eaſily fermented that way. As much good leven, as will ſerve three pecks, ſo much evill will doe more than ſerve three buſhels, and never leave till it have ſowred them all. That, except this be looked to, all the reſt will be to ſmall purpoſe.

In Religion.

Now, when Saint Paul ſpeakes of perſons thus levened, he meanes not only ſuch, as are lewd of life, tainted that way: but, even ſuch alſo, as are unſound in matter of Religion, and have a ſowre ſavour that way. Here (to the Corinthians) he would have the inceſtuous perſon caſt out, with his levened life: But (to the Galathians, after) hee preſſeth the ſame point againſt another kinde; ſuch as levened the Goſpell, with MOSES ceremonies, and ſo corrupted the truth in Religion; and them he would have cut off: both Corinthian and Galathian leven, both muſt out. And marke: upon the ſame reaſon, both; and in the very ſame words. That a little leven doth not a little hurt; but, otherwhile, marreth the whole batch of bread. Evill doctrine is againſt Truth: Evill life, againſt walking in the truth: Evill company will bring us to both. Therefore, away with them: but, away with this eſpecially. If they will not purge out their leven, purge them out. And that eſpecially, againſt this Feaſt, in the nature whereof, there is a contrarietie to all leven.

Gal. 5. 3, 4. &c. 9. 11. Gal. 5 9.

Now

Now then, this is our concluſion: Come we muſt, and Itaque celebremus. This is our Caution: Thus we muſt come, Non in fermento, ſed azymis. If we ſay; it skills not, whither we come; Itaque meets with us: If we ſay; it skills not, how we come Non in fermento meets with us too. It is, with us here, as with the Prophet; when we would heale one, the other breaketh forth. If we preſſe Non in fermento, we loſe Itaque epulemur, they come not at all: No Feaſt. If wee urge Itaque epulemur, they come; how? levened, and unlevened, all; clap them downe together. We need a Quomodo intrâsti huc? to keepe ſome backe: And yet, we need a Compelle intrare, to bring others in. But, the manner, but the caution; remember that. The maine concluſion is, that we come. The other we muſt not leave undone: But, this (peremptorily) we are bound to doe. Hoſea 7. 1. Matth. 22. 12. Luke 14. 23.

The Apoſtle bindes us to doe it: The time to doe it, now. For, if this follow: CHRIST is offered, Therefore we are to come to His feaſt: This will follow as ſtrongly, CHRIST is now offered, therefore let us now come. Goe by degrees: The Chriſtian Paſſe-over (our Paſſe-over) a time it muſt have; ſometime it is to be kept. We would doe it, at that time, when it were beſt for us to doe it. When beſt for us to doe it, but at the time, He did it Himſelfe? And that did He, even at this feaſt, now. Now then, at this feaſt, it is moſt kindly to doe it: moſt like to pleaſe Him, and to proſper with us.

And indeed, if at any time we will doe it, Quando Paſcha, niſi in Paſcha, what time is the Paſſe-over ſo proper, as at the feaſt of the Paſſe-over? Quando tempus epulandi, niſi quando tempus immolandi, When the time of His receiving, as at the time of His offering? Therefore they both, the feaſt and the lambe, have one name; to ſhew the neere conjunction, that ſhould be betweene them. When the day commeth, to remember what was done on the day; and ſo, what we to do, on that day. Paſcha quod celebramus, to put us in minde, of Paſcha quod epulamur. For, tell me, will the ſacrifice commemorative, or the Sacrament communicative ever fall more fit, than, when that was offered, which we are to commemorate, and to communicate withall? Is not the fitteſt time of doing it, the time when it was done? of Hoc facite, then, when Hoc factum eſt? So that without any more adoe, the ſeaſon it ſelfe pleadeth for this effectually.

And now is the time of Expurgate; for our bodies: the corrupt humours, that leven it, now we caſt them out. And why not, now likewiſe, thoſe that lye ſowre in our ſoules? And even Natures Paſſe-over, the generall Paſſe-over is even at this time, both in heaven and earth. Above, in heaven: where, the Sunne having paſt over all the Signes is come about, and renewes his courſe, at the firſt Signe in the Zodiacke. And beneath in earth, from the ſharpe time of Winter, and fermenting time of the earth, to the renewing ſweet time, the time of the Spring, wherein there is nova conſperſio, in nature it ſelfe. And why ſhould not the Paſſe-over of grace be now likewiſe in ſeaſon, and have due concurrence with nature?

Sure, all agree well, if we but agree our ſelves. And if we agree, for our parts, to doe the dayes duty, CHRIST will not be behinde with His, the dayes benefit. But, during our time, and in the houre of death, be our true Paſſe-over; ſhielding us from all deadly miſhaps, while wee here live; and giving us a ſure and ſafe paſſage at our end, even a paſſage to the laſt and great Paſſe-over of all; the truth of that, whereof theirs was the ſhadow, and ours the image now. For, we have not yet done with our Lambe; nor the worke of this Paſſe-over is not yet fully accompliſhed.

There is a further matter yet behinde: for as this feaſt looketh backe, as a memoriall of that, is already paſt and done for us: ſo doth it forward, and is to us a pledge of another, and a better yet to come, The feaſt of the marriage of the Lambe here, that is our Paſſe-over: where, whoſoever ſhall be a gueſt, the Angels pronounce him happie and bleſſed for ever. Apoc. 19. 7. 9.

That, is the laſt and great Feaſt indeed, when all Deſtroyers and all deſtructions ſhall ceaſe and come to an end for evermore; and we heare that joyfull voice, Tranſi in gaudium Domini; Paſſe over into the joy of the LORD; the joyes of Heaven: Ioyes not mingled with any ſowre leven (as this worlds joy is) but pure and entire: nor tranſient (as Matth. 25. 21.

that of this world) and ever flitting and forſaking us then ſooneſt, when we thinke we have beſt hold of them; but permanent, and abiding ſtill. A Paſſe-over, that will never be paſſed-over, but laſt and continue a Feaſt to all Eternitie. Of that, this here is a pledge, if we neglect it not, as if it were not worth the taking. And Hee, that at this time gave us this pledge, in His good time alſo bring us to the Paſſe-over, whereof this is the pledge, even to the never paſsing, but everlaſting ioyes, and happineſſe, of His heavenly kingdome, through the offering of His bleſſed SONNE the very PASCHAL LAMBE. To whom with, &c.

A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE THE KINGS MAIESTIE AT VVHITE-HALL, ON the XVIII. of April, A. D. MDCXIII. being EASTER-DAY.

COL. Chap. III.

Igitur, ſi con-ſurrexiſtis cum CHRISTO, quæ ſurſum ſunt quærite, ubi CHRISTVS eſt in dextera DEI ſedens: Quæ ſurſum ſunt ſapite, non quæ ſuper terram.

VER. I. If yee then bee riſen with CHRIST, ſeeke thoſe things which are above, where CHRIST ſitteth at the right hand of GOD.

2 Set your affections (or minds) on things which are above; and not on things which are on the earth.

THE Wiſedome of the Church hath ſo diſpoſed of her Readings, in theſe great Feaſts; as (lightly) the Goſpell lets us know, what was done on the day, (done for us) and the Epiſtle, what is to be done by us. To inſtance in this preſent: Surrexit Dominus verè, The Lord is riſen indeed (ſaith the Goſpell:) In quo con-ſurrexiſtis & vos, and you are riſen with Him (ſaith the Epiſtle.)

2 That which is in the Goſpell, is CHRISTS Act, what Hee did: That which in the Epiſtle, our Agendum, what we to doe.

3 Or rather, both ours: 1 what He did, matter of faith: 2 what we to doe, matter of duty, our Agendum upon His Act.

The Common ſort looke to Eaſter day, no further, than Eaſter-day fare, and Eaſter-day day apparell : and other uſe they have none of it. The true Chriſtian enquireth further, what is the Agendum of the feaſt, what is the proper Act of Eaſter-day? The Church hath hers; and we have ours. Nothing more proper to a Chriſtian than to keepe time with CHRIST: to riſe with Him, this day, who this day did riſe. That ſo it may bee Eaſter-day with us, as it was with Him : the ſame, that was the day of His, be alſo the day of our riſing.

The ſumme. Thus then it lieth: CHRIST is riſen; And, if CHRIST, then We. If we ſo bee, then we ſeeke : and that we cannot, unleſſe we ſet our minds. To ſet our minds then. On what? On things above. Which above? Not on earth (ſo is the Text) but, where Chriſt is. And why there? Becauſe, where He is, there are the things, we ſeeke for, and here cannot finde. There, He is ſitting; So, at reſt : And at the right hand; ſo, in glorie : Gods right hand, and ſo, for ever. Theſe we ſeeke; reſt, in eternall glorie. Theſe CHRIST hath found: and ſo ſhall we, if we make this our Agendum; begin, this day, to ſet our minds, to ſearch after them.

Becauſe it is to the Coloſſians, the Coloſſus, or capitall point of all, is, To riſe with CHRIST: That is the maine point. And, if you would doe a right Eaſter-dayes worke, doe that. It is the way to entitle us to the true holding of the Feaſt. That ſo we may, theſe two Opera Paſchalia are commended to us. Things above, [1] to make them our ſearch, [2] to fixe our minds on them. Theſe two we read, quærite, ſapite, in the Imperative : wee may, in the Indicative, as well: ζητεῖτε is quæritis, as well as quærite; and φρονεῖτε ſapitis, as well as ſapite. If ye reade them imperativè, thus: This ye are to doe, to ſeeke, to ſee your minds; then be they in præcepto, and per modum officii, by way of precept, and in nature of a duty. If you read them indicativè, thus: If you bee riſen, then you doe ſeeke, and ſet your minds; then, they bee in elencho, and per modum ſigni, by way of triall, and in nature of a ſigne. Both well; and a good uſe of both.

The Diviſion The Parts lye thus. Two things are ſuppoſed: Two other inferred: And a third Two, we are referred to, or given hope of. The Two ſuppoſed, theſe: [1] Chriſt is riſen, [2] and We with Chriſt : If ye bee riſen with Chriſt. The Two inferred, theſe: If riſen, then [1] to ſeeke; [2] then to ſet our minds above, on things there, where Chriſt is. The two hee referreth to, or giveth hope of, Reſt with Him in glory. [1] Reſt, to ſit : [2] Glorie, at the right hand. And GOD maketh up all (the perfect number of ſeven:) For, eternall is the reſt, and eternall the Glorie, that is at His right hand.

I 1 2 II 3 4 III 5 6 7

Hebr. 1. Theſe we heard of at His Birth, in the Epiſtle then. This we heare of againe at His Riſing, or ſecond Birth, from the grave, in the Epiſtle, now. This wee ſhall

Act. 1. 11. heare of againe at His Aſcenſion too. This is remembred in all, as the fruit of all; at every Feaſt, ſet before us, as our hope, and all wee ſeeke, To ſit with CHRIST, at the right hand of GOD.

I. The two ſuppoſitions. 1 Chriſts riſing.

IF Ye be riſen. This ſeemeth primâ facie to bee but a ſingle Suppoſition: but being well looked into, reſolves into two riſings : [1] CHRISTS and [2] Ours : [1] Hee, and [2] we with Him. Of which, the firſt (Chriſts) doth immutabiliter ſupponere; His, needs no If. It is not, If Chriſt be : but, If we, with Chriſt. For, Chriſt is cerainely. Three hundred yeares the World oppoſed it: thirteene hundred (ever ſince) the World hath ſuppoſed it. And ſo let us: and ſo paſſe to our owne, and begin every yeare, to lay our grounds anew; every Eaſter, to be teaching our rudiments over againe.

There

There is an [If] that ſuppoſeth but mobiliter; may be, or not be, thereafter as wee ſeeke, and our minds be ſet. But yet (if ye marke it) is not His ſuppoſed, by it ſelfe, and ours inferred upon His; but ours ſuppoſed likewiſe: His, and ours (both) ſuppoſed under one: under one and the ſame If. And as they are cloſe lincked, that one ſuppoſition ſerveth for them: ſo are they woven together that one Prepoſition (Σὺν) holdeth them: under one Si, and one Σὺν both. The Apoſtle hath framed a new word here, for the purpoſe [con-ſurrexiſtis.] The reſurrection, we have heard of: The con-ſurrection we are now to heare, and take notice of.

To ſet our Suppoſe right, I aske two queſtions: 1 the one of theſe [If you:] 2 the other of theſe [If you be riſen.] Si vos, if you: Why, doth the Reſurrection pertaine but to ſome certaine vos? Is it not Si omnes? concernes it not all? As Chriſt died, ſo is He riſen for all: and ſhall not all riſe with Him? What doe wee then doe with Si vos? Yes, all riſe with Him out of their graves: but, not all riſe to the right hand after mentioned. A great part riſe, to ſtand on the left: not to ſit on the right hand of God. With that, the Apoſtle here dealeth. The Reſurrection reacheth to all: This reſurrection, to ſuch onely as Seeke, and ſet their mindes.

2 Our Riſing.
1 Si vos, If you.

The other, bee riſen (the tenſe) is that right? For (ever) when we heare of the Reſurrection, we are carried ſtraight, to that of the dead, from their graves, at the latter day. We conceive: Well, if He be riſen, we ſhall riſe: Shall, in the future tenſe. But, here is newes of another, in the preter tenſe: (For, ſo it is; Bee riſen, not ſhall riſe; be alreadie, not ſhall hereafter.) It cannot be taken of that, which is to come: It ſhould then be, Si conſurgetis. But needs, of one preſent, or paſt: it is, Si conſurrexiſtis.

2 Si conſurrexiſtis, If you be riſen.

How then? Fall we in with them, qui dicunt reſurrectionem jam eſſe factam, that ſay the reſurrection is already paſt? Nor that neither. We are no Sadduces: Nor wee are not of Hymenæus ſect, neither. But, this we beleeve: as there is one to come, of the body, at the laſt and great reſurrection, which he treats of, to the Corinthians: ſo is there alſo one, which we are to paſſe here, of the minde's; which here he commendeth to the Coloſſians.

2 Tim. 2. 18.

1 Cor. 15.

And theſe two leade us directly to the two Reſurrections, which Saint Iohn (after) doth more expreſly deliver, under the termes of firſt and ſecond (Apoc. 20. 6.) And this withall, that all the good or evill, of that of the Corinthians, doth depend much upon the well, or evill paſſing, of this of the Coloſſians.

This wee are to looke after, to riſe before; a reſurrection now in being. This of ours imports us (we ſee) no leſſe, than CHRIST'S owne (which, I wiſh, well laid up in minde) ſince both are under one If, ſuppoſed alike, one no leſſe than the other. CHRIST is riſen, is not enough; nay, is nothing at all, if that be all; if He be riſen without us; He riſen, and we lye ſtill: if, with this daies reſurrection on His part, there be not alſo a con-ſurrection on ours.

Now then we are to looke to our If; that it ſuppoſeth aright. And, if He be riſen, to cry to Him Trahe nos poſt Te, to draw us with Him, and not leave us ſtill in our graves of ſinne. He ſaid of Himſelfe, that if once He were exalted, Hee would make His magneticall vertue to appeare, and draw all to Him. All, but not all at once: but (as the Apoſtle ſaith) each in his order. And that order is to beginne with the ſoule firſt, and draw it. For, the ſoule being (as the very Philoſophers have acknowledged (it is Ariſtotles owne word) ἄνωθεν from above) will the more eaſily be drawne to τὰ ἄνω things above. It is kindly, it is con-naturall for it, to draw thither-ward. And then after, in the ſecond place, together with it ſelfe, to elevate and lift up the fleſh thither with it. For (as well obſerveth Chryſoſtome) theſe two were not thus joyned (the Spirit, and the fleſh, I meane) that the fleſh ſhould pull downe the ſpirit to earth, but that the Spirit ſhould exalt the fleſh to heaven. And this ſublimning or lifting up the Spirit, is the riſing with CHRIST, here in the Text. The other, in His time, and turne, to follow. But, if this goe not before, the other will not come after, take that for certaine. This then to endevour; and this day to ſet in hand with it. For, this is the maine point, that we finde our ſelves riſen with CHRIST; finde it, or procure it: finde it already, or procure it, as ſoone as may bee.

take

II.
The double Inference.
3 If we ſeeke.
4 If we ſet our mindes, &c. on things above.

Now, thus we ſhall know, if we be riſen, and thus procure it, if we be not: If wee ſeeke, if we ſet our minds on things above: which is the double inference, upon the former double ſuppoſe: which I divide into the 1 Act, and the 2 Object. The 1 Act, Quærere, and ſapere: the 2 Object, quæ ſurſum.

Of the two acts, one referreth to action: (ſeeking, is a matter of endevour.) The other to the affection: (ſet your affection, or minde; it is both) There be two works arguing the Spirit: 1 Motion, and 2 Senſe. Motion, in the one, Seeking: Senſe, in the other, ſo is it turned (Phil. 2. 5.) Idem ſentite, let the ſame minde be in you. There is Motus læſus, in them that ſeeke not: and Senſus læſus, in them that ſavour not. To theſe two reduce all: 1 Quærenda ſapere, 2 and Sapienda quærere: To minde, what we are to ſeeke; and to ſeeke, what we mind. Of theſe two 1 joyntly firſt: 2 then ſeverally; and 3 laſt of their order.

I
The two acts joyntly: Seeke, and ſet your mindes.
Matt. 16. 23.

Ioyntly: for, diſ-joyned they may not be. One is little worth, without the other. There bee, that ſeeke, and be very buſie in it, and yet ſavour not the things that are of GOD. So ſought a great Apoſtle once: and our SAVIOVR did not let to tell him of it; ϑ φρονεῖς (the very word here) thou ſavoureſt not. Men, that are poſſeſſed with falſe principles, and yet fall a ſeeking; zealous in their way, but want true knowledge, to fixe their minds aright. Now, without knowledge, (ſaith Salomon truely) the minde is not good: and we know, Mala mens, malus animus, the minde miſ-led, will ſet the affections awry ſtraight.

Pro. 19. 2.

Will yee ſee them in kinde? Looke but to the end of the laſt Chapter before. There, they ſeeke ſo, as they will neither taſt, handle nor touch. So ſeeke, as downe they goe to worſhip, not onely GOD, but the Angels too. So ſeeke, as ſpare not their owne bodies, and yet wrong all the while; and yet with all their ſeeking, not riſen with Chriſt, for all that. Why? For, quærunt, non ſapiunt.

Cap. 2. 21.
Verſe 23.

On the other ſide: there be, that ſapiunt, non quærunt; that ſapiunt quæ Chriſti, quærunt quæ ſua, Savour Chriſt, but ſeeke themſelves. Of whom the Apoſtle (Phil. 2. 21.) they have knowledge competent, but without ſo much as a ſparke of true endevour: Pariter intelligunt nobiſcum (ſaith Auguſtine) pariter non diligunt; Vnderſtand well enough, but coldly affected: So, Sit ſtill, and ſeeke not.

So that, both would be kept together; Quærite, and Sapite both. For, as in the body naturall, it fareth between the ſtomach and the head: (a r heumatique head ſpoyles the ſtomach with diſtillations; and a diſtempered ſtomach fills the head with raw vapours, and ſoone mars the other:) So is it here: our minde miſtaking, miſ-leads the affection: and a wrong ſet affection puts the minde out of frame. That, in ſunder they would not be, but joyned ever. Sapere, without quærere, will not riſe, but lye ſtill; and quærere, without ſapere, will riſe, but lead you aſtray.

2 The Acts ſeverally.
1 Seeke.
Matt. 7. 14.

Now ſeverally. If we be riſen, to move, and to ſeeke: that is, to reſolve, that with ſitting ſtill without ſeeking, what we are here willed to ſeeke, will not be had. Wee ſhall not ſtumble on it, or hit upon it unawares; there needs a ſeeking. If our Saviour knew the way well, it is hard to hit, and few there be that finde it. The ſhort: there goeth ſearch and enquiry to it; paines, and diligence are requiſite: wee ſhall not come thither, with the turning of a ginne. It were great folly (when we ſee dayly, things here beneath, without travaile, will not be come by) once to thinke, things above will drop into our lapps, without any ſeeking.

To ſeeke then: but, to doe it to purpoſe. For, that which wee call ſeeking, is nothing leſſe. Thoſe, to whom the Prophet Eſay ſayd (Chap. 21. 12.) Si quæritis, quærite, If yee will ſeeke, why then ſeeke: doe it, in earneſt; it ſeemes, they ſought ſo ſlightly, ſo ſlenderly, as it deſerved not the name of ſeeking. Pilate asked, Quid eſt veritas? & then, ſome other matter tooke him in the head, and ſo up he roſe and went his way, before he had his anſwer: He deſerved never to finde what truth was. And ſuch is our ſeeking moſt what; ſeldome or never ſeriouſly: but ſome queſtion, that comes croſſe our braine, for the preſent: Some Quid eſt veritas? ſo ſought, as if, that we ſought were as good loſt as found. Yet, this, we would faine have go for ſeeking: but it will not be. O ſi quæritis querite (ſaith ESAY; looke the place) The morning comes, ſo doth the night, that is, our dayes ſpend apace; and we ſay, we will ſeeke: If we will, let us once do it indeed: ſeeke it, as they did, this day; follow it hard, make it our race, with the one; our morning-worke with the other. Ioh. 18 38. Eſay 21. 12. Ioh. 20. 4.

2 Set your mind.

But, wee ſhall never ſeeke, as wee ſhould, unleſſe wee put to the other word, Set our mindes on them. For, will a man ever kindly ſeeke that he hath no minde to? Never. The minde is all. Be it what it will, or whence it will, above or beneath, if we affect is not, we ſhall ſeeke but faintly. That we may ſeeke things above, as it is meete, we muſt prize them; prize them, as a ſilver mine (ſaith Salomon:) as a treaſure hid in a field (ſaith our Saviour) and goe ſell all, to compaſſe them. Then ſhall we ſeeke to ſome purpoſe. Pro. 3. 14. Mat. 13. 44.

But in the word φρονεῖν there is more. There is (I told you) idem Sentite, the ſenſe; (Hee that ſeekes, ſhould have as well eyes to diſcerne, as feete to goe about it: It is no buſineſſe for a blinde man, no more than for a lame, to ſeeke:) And that is knowledge, which would be had too. To ſeeke, we know not what, is but to erre, and never finde that we ſeeke for. To quærere then; but, Sapere, to be wiſe in our ſeeking, to get us true directions; elſe, for all our ſeeking, we may be to ſeeke ſtill.

Which φρονεῖν is a word, the Apoſtle much uſeth, as being very ſignificant, full, and forcible. Foure things are in it: 1. To ſet the minde; the minde, not the phanſie: not to take up a phanſie, and fall to ſeeking, as wee ſee many now adaies; no ground in the world, but their owne conceipts. Yet ſeeke they will needs, and have all the world follow them, and have nothing to follow themſelves, but their owne folly. So as, being very idiots, they take themſelves, for the onely men; And till they come into it, never was wiſe man in the world, that knew what to ſeeke, or how.

2 It is then an act of the underſtanding (φρονεῖν) but not of it alone: for then νοεῖν were enough. Yet the greateſt part make no matter of it, but even noëma. It is, as to ſet our minde, not our phanſie; ſo, our minde, not onely to know it, but to mind it. It is Sentire, and Sapere; And it is beſt ſeen in Sapite, which is not onely to diſtinguiſh taſts; but, in and with the taſte, to feele ſome delight, to have a ſenſe of the ſweetneſſe withall, which will make us ſeeke it againe plus magis: and without it, our ſeeking will be but unſavorie.

3 So to ſavour it; as wee hold quærere, to be Sapere; that, to ſeeke, is our wiſedome; that wee doe not rectè ſapere, unleſſe wee doe hoc ſapere. Hæc erit ſapientia veſtra (ſaith Moſes) This ſhalbe your wiſedome, before GOD and man, and you ſo to reckon of it: even this, to ſeeke things above; and to thinke, when ye are about that buſineſſe, ye are about a point of high wiſedome; and that to performe it well, is the wiſeſt action of our life. Deut. 4. 6.

4 To hold it our wiſedome: and (laſt) I aske what wiſedome? Not that, which doth contemplate, that is σοφία; but the active wiſedome, for that is φρόνησις, rerum agendarum. To ſhew that not onely our Grounds, for Iudgement; but our Rules, for Action, are to bee fet thence. Thither to get us, thence to derive our reaſons, why wee doe things, or leave them undone. Thus to caſt with our ſelves: this, that now I am about, He that ſitteth on high, at GODS right hand, what will He ſay or thinke of it? May I offer it to Him? Will He allow of it? Will He helpe me forward with it? Will He in the end reward me for it? Yea, even our πολίτευμα (as to the Philipians) is to bee from thence, even the wiſedome, that ſwayeth there, to be from above, de ſurſum. If it be not, Saint Iames is ſomewhat homely with it. Philip. 3. 20. Iam. 3. 15.

By

3 The Order. Quærite, First.

By this time, we know, what it is to ſeeke, and what to ſet our mindes. But, in the marſhalling theſe, there is ſomewhat, that quærite is called on firſt. 1. To teach us, that it is the firſt thing, we are to have care of; Chriſts primùm quærite makes quærite, to be

1 Mat. 6.33. primùm, to ſtand firſt. That wee then doe it the honour, to make it our firſt act, our riſing with Him; at this feaſt, the riſing of the yeare; and on this feaſt, in the morning, the riſing of the day. For, then He roſe.

2 2 It is firſt called on, becauſe (to ſay truth) there is more need of diligence, in this buſineſſe, than ought elſe. Alwaies, we have more adoe, to quicken the affection, than to enforme the judgement. And that did they, this day, know: who ſought, before they had light, while it was yet darke. So much did they know, diligence to import, in this buſineſſe. The greateſt defect is in that point: therefore it needs firſt to be urged. For, though we ſee, yet we ſit ſtill and ſeeke not.

III. The thing referred to, or the Object. quæ ſurſum. Pſal. 24.6.

And now to the Object. Of ſeeking we ſhall ſoone agree: Generatio quærentium wee are all (ſaith the Pſalme:) even a generation of ſearchers. Somewhat wee are ſearching after ſtill. Our wants, or our wanton deſires finde us ſeeking-worke enough, all our lives long. What then ſhall we ſeeke, or where?

He (ſaith the Apoſtle) that will thus beſtow his paynes, let it be, where? Above. On what? The things there: Quæ ſurſum he repeats in both; tells it us twice over: 1 Quæ ſurſum quærite; quæ ſurſum ſapite. Above it muſt be.

And, of this alſo, we ſhall not varie with Him, but be eaſily enough entreated to it. We yeeld preſently (in our ſenſe) to ſeeke to be above others, in favour, honour, Iudg. 9.15. place and power, and what not? Wee keepe the Text fully in this ſenſe: wee both ſeeke, and ſet our whole minds upon this. Altum ſapimus omnes; all would be above, Bramble and all, and nothing is too high for us.

It is true, here; for on earth, there is a Surſum, above: there bee high places, wee would not have them taken away; wee would offer in them, and offer for them too, for a need. And, there is a right hand here too, and ſome ſit at it; and almoſt none, but thinkes ſo well of himſelfe, as why not he? Our SAVIOVR CHRIST,

Mat. 20.21. when it was phanſied, that Hee ſhould have beene a great King upon earth, there was ſuing ſtraight, for His right-hand-place. Not ſo much as Good-wife Zebedees two ſonnes (that ſmelt of the fiſher-bote) but, meanes was made for them, to ſit there.

But, all this while, wee are wide. For, where is all this? Here, upon earth. All our above, is above one another, here; and is Ambitions above; and further it mounteth not. But, this is not the Apoſtles; not the above, nor the right hand, he meaneth. No: not CHRISTS right hand upon earth: but, that right hand, Hee ſits at, Himſelfe, in Heaven. The Apoſtle ſaw cleerely, we would erre this error: therfore, to take away (as he goes) all miſtaking, he explaines his above, two waies. 1 Privativè: Non quæ ſupra terram, Heare you, not upon earth: His Above, is not here, upon earth. This is, where not? 2. Then poſitivè: to cleere it from all doubt, where; he points us to the place it ſelfe, above, there above, where CHRIST is (that is) not on earth: Earth is the place, whence He is riſen. The Angels tell us, Luc. 24.6. non eſt hîc; ſeeke Him not here now, but in the place, whither He is gone, there ſeeke Him; In heaven. Heaven is a great circle; where, in heaven? In the chiefeſt place: there where GOD ſits, and CHRIST at His right hand. That place ſeeke: there ſet your minds.

So that, upon the matter, the fault he findes, the fault of our [above] is; it is, not above enough: It is too low, it is not ſo high, as it ſhould be. It ſhould bee higher, above the hills; higher yet, above the clouds; higher yet, higher than our eye can carry, above the heavens. There now, we are right.

And

And indeed, the very frame of our bodies (as the heathen Poet well obſerved) giveth thither, upward: ---Cœlumque tueri Iuſſit, and bids us looke thither. And, that way, ſhould our ſoule make; it came from thence, and thither ſhould it draw againe: And we doe but bow, and crooke our ſoules, and make them Curvæ in terras animæ, againſt their nature, when we hang yokes on them, and ſet them to ſeeke nothing but here below. 1 The reaſons.

And, if Nature would have us no moules, Grace would have us Eagles, to mount, where the body is. And the Apoſtle goeth about to breed in us, a holy ambition; telling us, we are ad altiora geniti, borne for higher matters than any here: therefore, not to be ſo baſe minded, as to admire them; but, to ſeeke after things above. For contrary to the Philoſophers ſentence, Quæ ſupra nos nihil ad nos, Things above, they concerne us not; he reverſes that: Yes (and we ſo to hold) Ea maxime ad nos, they chiefly concerne us. 2 Luk. 17.37.

Come to the laſt now. And why this place, above? I ſhall tell you: For, there is CHRIST, and Him we ſeeke, to day, if it be Eaſter-day with us; and if we ſeeke where He is, He is above, certainly. But he implieth a further reaſon yet: Becauſe, in very deed, there, with Him, are the things which we, of all other, ſeeke for; and when all is done, all our ſeeking is to them referred, as to the end. We would not ever travaile but after our laborious toyling courſe here, find a place of reſt, and this we ſeeke. But, not this alone: but a ſeate of glorie withall. Sit we would; but in ſome eminent place; not, at the left foot, but at the right hand; in light, and honour, as much as might be. 3

We ſeeke reſt: Specially, they that are toſſed in a tempeſt, how doe they deſire a good haven, a harbour of reſt! And ſure, here we dwell in Meſech, meete with much diſquietneſſe. None but, ſometime, hath ſenſe of the verſe in the Pſalme: Oh that I had wings like a Dove! then would I flie and be at reſt. And the more our incolatus is prolonged, the more we ſeeke it, finde it how we may. What the things above are. Reſt. Pſal. 120.5. Pſal. 55.6.

And, it is not the bodies trouble ſo much, but Invenietis requiem animabus, to finde reſt to our ſoules; that, is it. And, the ſoule is from above; and but in her owne place; never findes it. Turne thee to thy reſt ô my ſoule, that is worth all. But, both are beſt: and not, after all our turmoiles here in this world, to heare non introibunt in requiem meam, in another world, but to be caſt into that place, where there is no reſt day nor night: but, enter into His reſt, which (in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes) he ſo much beats upon. Mat. 11.29. Pſal. 116.7. 95.11.

And verily, if we ſeeke reſt; glorie we ſeeke much more. For, for it, we are content to deprive our ſelves of all reſt, which otherwiſe we love well enough. And, a reſtleſſe courſe we enter into, and hold out in it, all our life long, and all to winne it, though it be but a little before our death. For, no reſt will ſatisfie, or give us full content, unleſſe it be on the right hand. Chap. 3. 11. 18. 19. 1 Glorie.

Theſe two then we ſeeke for; where are they to be found? Not in quæ ſupra terram: Not here therefore: but folly to ſeeke them here. We are by all meanes to avoid their errour, that ſought, this day, to ſeeke the living among the dead; a thing where it is not to be had. Luk. 24.5.

Never ſeeke, to ſet up our reſt here, in this tumultuous troubleſome place, this [a] vale of Achor right (as Hoſee;) this [b] ἔριδος (as Saint Iames) a wheele ever whirling about, [c] quærens requiem & non invenit eam. Where, we ſhall ſoone be diſeaſed with a Surgite poſtquam ſederitis, after we ſit a little, quickly diſquieted againe. The Prophet Mica tells us plaine, Non habetis hic requiem, here wee cannot have it, this is not our reſt. [a] Hoſ. 2. 15. [b] Iam. 3. 6. [c] Mat. 12. 43. Mic. 2. 10.

Nor never ſeeke for true glorie here: Why? Locus eſt pulicum & culicum. It is, the place of fleas and of gnats, this. In the garden, the place of our delight, we meet with wormes; and there be Spiders, even in the Kings Palace. This place of wormes and Spiders, call yee this the place of glorie, in duſt and cobwebs?

Say it be: yet ſuch is the nature of theſe two (ſuch as they be) the reſt, and the glorie here, as they divide it ſtill: have ye one, ye muſt quit the other. They that are in glorie have not the quieteſt life: And they that are moſt at reſt, fartheſt off from being glorious. Reſt is here, a thing inglorious: and glorie, a thing reſtleſſe. Thus it ſtands with us: Iſſachars condition like ſome; Reſt is good, though it be betweene a payre of panniers: If that like us, we muſt live in this eſtate, the moſt obſcure of all the Tribes. But, if we will have a name among the great ones of the earth, if be glorious, then farewell reſt: We muſt take our lot among them, that live not moſt at eaſe, certainly. For, here they meet not, but are in ſunder ſtill.

Gen. 49.14.

7 At the right hand of God.

But ſay yet, we could make them meete; Be at all eaſe, and in all glorie together: ſeated, and ſeated at the right hand both. (Now come we to weigh the word Dei.) The right hand (here) ſuper terram is not the right hand of GOD, but of a man, which ſhall wither, and within a certaine of yeeres (as the Prophets terme is) fall from the ſhoulder. And ſo this reſt, and this right hand, we can have no hold of either. It is ſaid in the Acts, After two yeares, Felix went his way, and another came Governour in his place. And then the places were changed; ſome were diſeaſed: and ſo is the caſe of all felicitie here.

Ioh. 31.22.

Acts 24.28.

Vpon the point then. Reſt, and glorie, we ſeeke not barely: but, we ſeeke them ſo as they may endure: and our wiſh is, if it might be, even for ever. And this may be had: but, it will be had at no right hand, but ad dexteram Dei; Gods only. Then, ſeeke them there. Not here: where either we ſhall ſeeke and not finde them; or finde one from the other; or, if both together, yet have no hold of them, but ſoone loſe them againe. Seeke, where we may; nay where we ſhall be ſure to find them; where, both will be had; and both together, and good aſſurance of both, even to eternitie, as, at Gods right hand, a right hand that withereth not. If ye ſeeke reſt, let it be in His holy hill; if glorie, Gloria in excelſis, where CHRIST is already: Set, ſo at reſt; at the right hand, ſo in glorie; at Gods right hand, and ſo, in both; for ever. There they be, there ſeeke, there ſet your mindes.

Pſal. 15.1. Luk. 2.14.

To withdraw our ſelves, to ſequeſter our mindes from things here below, to thinke of Him, and of the place where now He is, and the things, that will bring us thither.

The Application to the time.

It is a prerogative, that a Chriſtian hath: to make it Eaſter, any day in the yeare, by doing theſe duties on it. They come no day amiſſe. But, no day ſo fit, as this day, the very day of His riſing. Then, of very congruity; we to riſe alſo. For, no reaſon in the world, if He riſe, that we ſhould lie ſtill. Nor is it good for us, that He ſhould riſe, without us, and leave us behind in the grave of our ſinnes ſtill. But, when, He, then we too.

Riſing is not ſo proper to the day, but the two ſignes, or two duties (call them which yee will) are as proper. For, this day was (indeed) a day of ſeeking. I know whom you ſeeke, yee ſeeke Ieſus that was crucified (ſaith one Angell:) Why ſeeke yee the living among the dead (ſaith another?) To riſe, when He roſe; to ſeeke Him, when He was ſought. This day, He was ſought by men, ſought by women. Women, the three Maries; Men, the two Apoſtles. The Women, at charges; the Apoſtles at paynes. Early by the one, earneſtly, by the other. So, there was ſeeking of all hands.

Mar. 16.6. Luk. 24.6.

Luk. 24.13.

And they which ſought not, went to Emmaüs, yet they ſet their mindes on Him; had Him in minde, were talking of Him by the way. So that, theſe doe very fitly come into the Agendum of this day: Thus to ſeeke, and ſet our mindes. At leaſt, not to loſe Him quite, that day, we ſhould ſeeke Him; nor have our minds fartheſt from Him, that day, they ſhould be moſt upon Him.

The

The Church, by her Office, or Agendum, doth her part, to helpe us herein, all ſhe may. The things, we are willed to ſeeke, ſhe ſets before us; the bleſſed Myſteries. For, theſe are from above: the bread that came downe from heaven; the bloud that hath beene carried into the holy place. And I adde, ubi CHRISTVS: For, ubi Corpus, ubi ſanguis, CHRISTI, ibi CHRISTVS, I am ſure. And truly, here, if there be an ubi CHRISTVS, there it is. On earth, we are never ſo neere Him, nor He us, as then and there. There, in efficaciâ; and, when all is done, efficacie, that is it, muſt doe us good; muſt raiſe us heere, and raiſe us at the laſt day, to the right hand: and the locall ubi, without it, of no value. To the Sacrament. Ioh. 6. 50. Heb. 9. 12.

He was found in the breaking of bread: that bread She breaketh, that there we may finde Him. He was found by them, that had their mindes on Him: To that end, She will call to us, Surſum corda, lift up your hearts: which when we heare, it is but this Text iterated, Set your minds, have your hearts, where CHRIST is. We anſwer, We lift them up; and ſo (I truſt) wee doe; but (I feare) wee let them fall too ſoone againe. Luc. 24. 30. 35.

Therefore (as before, ſo after) when we heare, Thou that ſitteſt at the right hand of the Father; and when againe, Glorie to GOD on high, all is but to have this. But eſpecially, where we may Sentire and Sapere quæ ſurſum, and guſtare donum cæleſte, taſt of the heavenly gift (as, in another place he ſpeaketh:) ſee in the breaking, and taſt in the receiving, how gracious He was and is; was, in ſuffering for us; is, in riſing againe for us too, and regenerating us thereby to a lively hope. And gracious, in offering to us, the meanes (by His Myſteries and grace with them) as will raiſe us alſo and ſet our minds, where true reſt, and glorie are to be ſeene. Heb. 6. 4.

That ſo, at this laſt and great Eaſter, of all (the Reſurrection-day) what we now ſeeke, we may then finde; where we now ſet our minds, our bodies may then be ſet; what we now but taſt, we may than have the full fruition of: Even of His glorious God-head, in reſt, and glorie, joy, and bliſſe, never to have an end.

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE THE KINGS MAIESTIE AT WHITE-HALL, ON the XXIV. of Aprill, A.D. MDCXIV. being EASTER-DAY.

PHIL. Chap. II.

VER. 8. He humbled Himſelfe, made obedient, unto death, even the death of the Croſſe.

9. For this cauſe, hath GOD alſo highly exalted Him; and given Him a Name, above every name.

10. That, at the Name of IESVS, every knee ſhould bow, of thoſe in Heaven, and in earth, and under the earth.

11. And that every Tongue ſhould confeſſe, that IESVS CHRIST is the LORD, to the glory of GOD the Father.

FOR this cauſe, GOD hath exalted Him (ſaith the Text:) Him (that is) CHRIST. And, for this cauſe are we now here, to celebrate this exalting. Of which His exalting, this is the firſt day: and the Act of this day, the firſt ſtep of it: even, His riſing againe from the dead. Hæc eſt clarificatio Domini noſtri IESV CHRISTI, quæ ab Ejus reſurrectione ſumpſit exordium (ſaith S. Auguſtine upon this place:) This now, is the glorifying of our Lord IESVS CHRIST, which tooke His beginning, at His glorious reſurrection. The ſumme.

Thus, is the ſumme and ſubſtance of this Text, ſet downe by that learned Father. By Him alſo, is it likewiſe divided to our hands: Into Humilitas Claritatis meritum; The Diviſion.

I. and, Claritas humilitatis præmium. Humility, the merit of glory (in the firſt verſe of the foure.) And glory, the reward of humility (in the other three.) Which two, heere and ever, are ſo faſt linked together, as, there is no parting them. I cannot, but touch; and I will, but touch the Merit (in the firſt verſe:) It properly pertaines, to another day. And ſo, come to Opus diei.

II. The matter of this daies exultation, is called here, His Exaltation.

And is, of two ſorts. By GOD (in the ninth verſe:) And by us (in the two laſt.)

1 By GOD; And that, is double: Of His Perſon : Of His Name. Two Super's, either, one. Super-exaltavit Ipſum, His Perſon; there is one (in the forepart of the ninth verſe.) And Nomen ſuper omne nomen, His name; there is the other (in the latter part of it.) And this is GODS.

2 Then commeth ours. For GOD exalting it Himſelfe; He will have us to doe the like. And not to doe it inwardly alone: but even outwardly to acknowledge it for ſuch: And ſets down preciſely this acknowledgement, how, He will have it made a by us. Namely, two waies: By the Knee, by the Tongue. The Knee, to bow to it
b (verſe 10.) The Tongue, to confeſſe it (Verſe 11.) And both theſe, to be generall; Every Knee, every Tongue. And not in groſſe, but deduced into three ſeverall rankes: All in Heaven, All in earth, All under the earth : which comprehends all (indeed) and c leaves none out. This acknowledgement, thus, but onely inſinuated by the Knee, is d by the Tongue more plainly expreſſed: And this it is, That IESVS CHRIST is the LORD, LORD of all thoſe three. This, to be done, and ſo done, as it redound all, to the glory of GOD the Father.

But then laſt, take the Vſe with us: that, ſince in Him, His humiliavit ſe-ipſum, ends in Super-exaltavit Deus; His humbling Himſelfe, in GODS Exalting; That the Verſe 5. ſame minde be in us : And, the ſame end ſhall come to us. As His end was, ſo ours ſhall be, in the glory of GOD the Father.

Propter quod, For this cauſe.

I. Verſe 8. WE touch firſt upon this word. It is the Axis and Cardo, the very point, whereupon the whole Text turneth.

1 Propter. Eſay 22. 15. Eſt. 3. 1. Nehem. 4 1. Firſt, Propter; A cauſe there is. So GOD exalts ever, for a cauſe. Heere, on earth, otherwhile, there is an Exaltavit, without a Propter quod. Some, as Sobna, Haman, Sanballat, ſometimes exalted; no man knowes, wherefore. With GOD, there goeth ever; with men, there ſhould goe, a Propter quod, before Exaltavit.

2 Propter quod. For a cauſe : for what? for this cauſe. And this now, caſts us back to the former verſe, where it is ſet downe, Humiliavit : There it is, for His Humilitie.

Humiliavit. Now, of all cauſes, not for that: if we goe by this world, which (as the Proverbe is) was made for the preſumptuous. Not for that vertue of all others. A vertue (before CHRIST thus graced it) ſo out of requeſt, as the Philoſophers (look into their Ethickes) you ſhall not ſo much as finde the name of humilitie, in the liſt of all their vertues. Well, this caſt vertue, of no reckoning, is here made the Propter
Luk. 1. 48. quod, of CHRISTS exalting. As, Reſpexit humilitatem, the ground, of His Mothers Magnificat. And He, that, by Him brought light out of darkneſſe, at the firſt:
2 Cor. 4. 6. will by Him, bring glorie out of humilitie at laſt, Or this booke deceiveth us. With GOD, it ſhall have the place of a Propter quod; how poore account ſoever, we make of it here.

1 Ipſe. But, this Quod, is a Collective; there be in it more points than one. I will but point at them.

Hu-

Humiliavit ipſe, He humbled. (He) which many times is idle, but here, a circumſtance of great weight. He: ſo great a Perſon; being in the forme of GOD; and without any diſparagement at all, equall to GOD (as he tels us a verſe before) He humbled. Vbi, Majeſtatem præmiſit; ut humilitatem illuſtraret: That diſcourſe of His High Majeſtie, was but to ſet out, to give a luſtre to His humilitie. For, for one of meane eſtate, to be humble, is no great praiſe: It were a fault, if he were not. But, In alio nihil altum ſapere: For a King (as David) to ſay, I will yet be more humble: for the King of Kings, for Him, to ſhew this great humilitie; that is a Propter quod indeed. Humiliavit Ipſe. Verſe 6. 2 Sam. 6. 22.

Then ſecondly, that Humiliavit Ipſe ſe. Ipſe ſe, and not alius ipſum; that He was not brought to it by any other, but of His owne accord, He humbled Himſelfe. There is a difference betweene humilis, and humiliatus. One may be humbled; and yet not humble. Pharao was humbled, brought downe, by his ten plagues. Simeon of Cyrene, angariatus, to humble his necke under the Croſſe. This was, alius ipſos. But Ipſe ſe, is the true humility. For then, it is laudabili voluntate, not miſerabili neceſsitate: of a willing minde; and that is, commendable: not of force and conſtraint; for that, is miſerable. For this cauſe, that He humbled Himſelfe. 2. Se. Exod. 10. 16. Matt. 27. 32.

And thirdly, humiliavit ipſe ſe (Obediens.) It was not Abſaloms humility, in ſhew and complement; and his heart full of pride, diſobedience, yea rebellion. (And yet it is a glory for humility, that even proud men take a pride, to ſhroud themſelves in her mantle: that pride weares humilities livery.) But it is not humble courteſie, but humble Obedience, that is the Propter quod. Till it come to that, many beare themſelves in tearmes and ſhew, low, ad humum, even touch the ground. But come once thither, to obedience; then, give lawes they muſt, but obey none, make others obedient (and ye will) but not factus obediens, not made themſelves ſo. CHRIST was ſo made. And for this cauſe. 3. Obediens. 2 Sam. 15. 5.

And ſomething ſtrange it is, why Humiliavit ipſe ſe Obediens, would not ſerve, and no more; but (factus) muſt be added. Somewhat there was, in that. An Obedience there is, that commeth from the dictamen of naturall reaſon: in ſome things we ſo obey; we will do it, becauſe our reaſon ſo moveth us. That is, Obediens natus. But, ſome other there be, wherein there is no other reaſon, to leade us to doe it, but onely this, that it is injoyned us by a lawfull Superiour; and therefore we doe it, and for no other cauſe. This is Obediens factus; and that in true proper termes, is the right obedience indeed. All, looke to the former; and very few obey, thus. But even ſo obeyed CHRIST, & erat ſubditus illis. And for this cauſe then, that Hee was factus Obediens. 4. Factus. Luke 2. 51.

And Obediens factus: (uſque) is a fifth. For the very ſize, the extent of our obedience is a matter conſiderable. For if we come to any, it is Agrippa's, In modico, in ſome petty ſmall matter. Or Sauls, in the refuſe of the ſpoiles little worth. And, that obedience is little worth, that is ſo ſhrunk up. The drawing out, the uſque of it, is all in all. How farre obedient? untill what? Vſque quò? Which very Extent, or uſque, is many times as much worth as the Obedience it ſelfe. This alſo will come into the Propter quod. 5. Vſque. Acts 26. 28. 1 Sam. 15. 9.

Now many Vſque's there be, in this, of His. 1. Vſque naturam hominis, Thither. His very humanity had beene humility enough. 2. Vſque formam Servi, is more: How? Even to waſh the feet of thy ſervants (ſaid Abigail; and tooke her ſelfe to be very humble in ſo ſaying.) Thither He came too. Verſe 7. 1 Sam. 25. 41. Ioh. 13. 5.

What ſay yee to uſque mortem (the ſixth point?) Mortem? that will ſtagger the beſt of us. We love Obedience in a whole skin: Vſque any thing, rather than that. And (to ſay troth) no reaſon in the world, Obedience ſhould come to that. Death is the wages of ſinne, of diſobedience. Factus obediens? What, and factus reus too? Obedient, and yet put to death? Heaven and earth ſhould ring of it, if the caſe were ours. Well, even thither came His obedience: Et, ne perderet obedientiam, perdidit vitam. And rather than to loſe His obedience, loſt His life. This is indeed, a great Propter quod. 6. Mortem. Iob 2. 4. Rom. 6. 23.

5 Mortem autem Crucis.

Enough now: For, death is ultima linea (we ſay.) Nay, there is yet an Autem more behinde, to make it up full ſeven. For, One death is worſe than another. And His, was Mortem autem, the worſt death of all: the death of malefactors: and of the worſt ſort of malefactors, Mortem Crucis.

Chap.2.20.

Nay; if He muſt die, let Him die, an honeſt, a faire death. Not ſo: nay Morte turpiſſimâ (ſaid they of it, that put Him to it) the fouleſt death of all other: uſque mortem, mortem autem Crucis.

Luke 2.7.

Died, and, ſo died. Ever the (So) the manner is more than the thing it ſelfe, in all of CHRIST. To be borne (So) to be borne, uſque preſepe, to the Cratch: To die, nay (So) to die, uſque Crucem, to the Croſſe. Vſque naturam hominis; uſque formam ſervi; uſque mortem malefici. 1. So great a Perſon: 2. Thus to humble: 3. Humble His owne ſelfe: 4. To be obedient: 5. To be made obedient: 6. Obedient with an uſque, ſo farre; 7. So farre, as to death: 8. And to a death, ſo opprobrious: Theſe extenſives, and Intenſives put together, will (I truſt) make up a perfect Propter quod. And this, for humilitas claritatis meritum (in the firſt verſe.)

II.

Verſe 9.

Now, for Claritas humilitatis præmium (in the reſt.) And, will yee obſerve how they anſwer one another? For humiliavit there, here is exaltavit: For Ipſe there; DEVS, GOD here: For Ipſe ſe, DEVS ipſum. Hee, humbled himſelfe; GOD, exalted Him. For humiliavit uſque, there: here is exaltavit ſuper. For, factus obediens there; here factus dominus. For mortem Crucis, the death of the Croſſe there: here, is the glory of GOD the Father.

Super-exaltavit Ipſum.

This exalting, wee reduced to two: [1] Of His Perſon; [2] Of his Name. Of His Perſon, in ſuper-exaltavit Ipſum: Of His Name (in the reſt of the verſe.)

To begin with His perſonall exaltation. Super-exaltavit, is a de-compound. There is, Ex and Super (both) in it. His exalting hath an Ex, whence or out of what: His exalting hath a ſuper, whither or whereunto.

Ex.

Ex, from whence? from the two very laſt words, Mortem Crucis. His raiſing to life oppoſed to Mortem, the ſorrowes of death. The giving of His Name; to Crucis, the ſhame of the Croſſe. This dayes (Ex) was from death. His humiliavit, had beene ad humum, to the ground: Nay further, into the ground: Nay further yet,

His exaltavit then, was from thence, from death: and not the gates of death (then, He was not in:) nor the jawes of death (then, He was not, quite downe:) but from inferiora, and interiora, the lowermoſt, and innermoſt roomes of death. From under the Stone; thence: from the Dungeon, with Super.

Now then, whither? From Death, to life: From ſhame, to glory: From a death of ſhame, to a life of glory. From the forme of a ſervant, in factus obediens; to the dignitie of a Soveraigne, in factus Dominus.

But will ye marke againe? For, Non ſicut delictum, ſic donum (ſaith He, elſe-where) So here, not as His humbling, ſo was His exalting: but more. That, of His humbling, was diſpatched in one verſe. This, of His exalting, hath no leſſe than three. So the amends is large, three to one.

But, that is not it I meane: But this: Super is not thither only, but above and beyond it. From death to life: Nay, Super; more than ſo: Not to Lazarus life, to die

Levit.23.10. Ioh.2.10. 2 Reg. 2.11.

This day is the feaſt of the firſt fruits. On it, He had no more, but the firſt fruits of His exalting. He was exalted, but with Iona's exaltation onely, from the lower parts, to the upper parts of the earth. But we ſhall follow Him higher, to the exaltation of

Elias;

Elias, Super, above the cloudes: Nay, Super, above the Starres, above the Heavens, and the heavens of the heavens: till we have brought Him, from de profundis, to in excelsis; from the loweſt parts of the earth, to the higheſt place in Heaven, even to the right hand of GOD. And higher, we cannot goe.

Will ye obſerve yet once more, a kinde of Omen or preſage, of both theſe exaltings; and that, at the very time of His humiliation? For, even that His humiliation was acted, after the manner of an exalting (though in a meere mockerie.) For, to all their diſgraces, they added this, of ſcorne: They lift Him up, upon His croſſe, for all the world as the Philiſtines, did Samſon; ſet Him aloft, betweene the two pillars, to make ſport at Him. This was His exaltation. And they gave Him a Name too, Pilates title over His head; And bowed their knees; and cried, Ave Rex (a kinde of Confeſſion.) Iudic. 16.25. Mar. 15. 16. 19. 18.

This, as they performed it, was grande ludibrium; but as GOD turneth it, it was grande myſterium. For, to earneſt, GOD turneth both. A kinde of ſtrife, there ſeemed to be: the lower they, the higher GOD: the more odious they ſought to make Him; the more glorious GOD: He Exalted His Perſon, in ſtead of the Croſſe, to His owne high throne of Majeſtie. And in ſtead of Pilates title, gave Him a Title of true honour, above all the Titles in the world.

And this, for Super-exaltavit ipſum: And ſo, I paſſe from the exalting of His Perſon (the amends for Mortem.) And come to the exalting of His Name (the amends for Crucis, (in the latter part of the ſame verſe.)

He gave Him a Name. For, without a Name, what is exalting? What is His Nativitie without an Epiphanie? For, to thoſe two, may theſe two here well bee compared. His Reſurrection, is a very Nativitie. To it, doth Saint Paul apply the verſe of the Pſalme, Hodiè genui te, Acts 13. And this Name giving, is as the Epiphanie; to make it apparent and knowne to the world. And indeed, why are things exalted or lift up, but that they may be in view, and notice taken of them? So that, they which be exalted, ſeeme not ſo to be, till their ſo being be made publike, and, there goe a Name of it abroad in the world. Dedit Ei Nomen. Act. 13. 33.

And ſure, when men are ſo high, as higher they cannot be (as Kings) there is no other way to exalt them, left us, but this; to ſpread abroad, to dilate their names. Which every noble generous ſpirit had rather have, than any dignity; though never ſo high. For, being in their dignities, how farre will they venture; even to jeopard dignity, life and all: and all, but to leave a glorious Name behinde them? That, To give a Name, is even to exalt His very exaltation it ſelfe; and to make him, that is at the higheſt, higher yet.

A Name He gave Him: what Name? not (inter) among the famous names on earth; but (Super omne nomen) above them all. Here is, Super upon Super: another Super to His Name, no leſſe than His Perſon. That, above all perſons; and this, above all names whatſoever. And now, by this time, His exaltation is compleate, and not one (Super) to be added more. Super omne Nomen.

This Name, is named in the verſe, and it is the Name of IESVS. Of the giving firſt, And then of the Super, of it.

Of the giving, three doubts ariſe: 1. How given Him, and others had it alſo? 2. How given now, and He had it before, even in the womb of his Mother? 3. How given Him of grace, and yet He deſerved it? Propter quod. Dedit Ei.

How is this Name ſaid to be given Him; (as ſome ſpeciall dignitie) and others had it beſide, and before Him? Ieſus the Worthy, the ſonne of Nun: Ieſus the high-Prieſt, the ſonne of Ioſedek (to ſay nothing of Ieſus, the ſonne Sirach.) They had it (it is true) but not given them by GOD, as Hee, by the mouth of the Angell, GODS deputy. But they, by men, had men to their God-fathers, As, now, we have a Sect or Societie of Ieſus: but they gave themſelves the Name: GOD never gave it them. He gave it here, for humiliavit, a vertue they little regard: For he that doth but ſmell of it, is eo ipſo, not meet to be of that Companie. Other manner ſpirits, they. 1 Others had it. Heb. 4. 8. Agg. 1. 1. Matt. 1. 21.

Serm at Christm. 1610. Zac. 8. 23.

I have before this, told you, of foure maine differences, betweene this Ieſus, and all others. This one now, ſhall ſerve for all. All thoſe Ieſus, and every one of them, had need of, and were glad, to lay hold of the skirts of this Ieſus, to be ſaved by Him: otherwiſe, they had beene falſely ſo called; loſt men all. And ſo, will be willing, to reſigne this Name to Him; that He, may beare it (at leaſt) with a maine difference from them all.

Dedit Ei. 2 He had it before

But what tell yee us of it, now, after the Reſurrection? doe not we know it was given Him, being yet in the wombe? It was ſo, but by a kinde of anticipation. For, it never had the perfect verifying, the full Chriſtendome (as they ſay) till this day. Not yet full three daies ſince, they upbraided Him with it: IESVS, a SAVIOVR, A wiſe SAVIOVR, and cannot ſave Himſelfe! For, Hee ſeemed to periſh then, to loſe His life, in their ſight: but, now, this day taking it againe, Hee ſhewed, He did but lay it downe, He loſt it not: He was now IESVS indeed, able to ſave Himſelfe: and able to ſave all thoſe, that truſt in Him with their ſalvation. So; it was never in kinde till now: but now, it was.

Mat. 27. 42. Ioh. 10. 18. Heb. 5. 9.

Dedit Ei. 3 He did merit it

But, if He gave it Him, and ἐχαρίσατο, gave it Him, of grace: where is the merit then, the Propter quod we ſpake of, what is become of that? Safe enough, for all this. That, which is otherwiſe due, it may be ſo cheerefully parted with, as if it were a franke and free gift indeed. The Apoſtle elſe-where, hath taught us to joyne debita and benevolentia, in one: They will ſtand together well enough.

1 Cor. 7. 3.

In many things, we ſuffer ſlander by the Church of Rome: In this among many; as if we pinched at CHRISTS merit, and were loth, He ſhould be allowed Himſelfe to merit ought, becauſe of this ἐχαρίσατο that foundeth all upon grace. Wherein, it is well knowne, take the moſt that can be made of it, and we ſay no other thing, than doe their owne Schoolemen. It is not gratia adoptionis, this; the grace of adoption (as in us) that is, here ſpoken of: It is gratia unionis, the grace of union. And that grace CHRIST had. For, ſeeing, in the humanity of CHRIST, there was not, there could not be, any poſſibility of merit, to deſerve the uniting it ſelfe, or the being aſſumed into the God-head: To be ſo aſſumed, and ſo united, was that grace, we terme, the grace of union. Other grace, we know none in CHRIST. But being once ſo united, there was in Him, to deſerve, and deſerve againe, and that, amply. Propter quod, might then be truly ſaid of Him, every way.

Super omne. Above all names.

This, for the giving. But now, how is this Name, ſaid to be above all names? what, above the Name of GOD? We may ſay, with the Apoſtle, When he ſaith, GOD did give it Him, it is manifeſt, He is excepted, that did give it Him. But we need not ſo ſay, For, this is one of GODS owne Names. I am (ſaith He) and beſide me, there is no SAVIOVR:

1 Cor. 15. 27. Eſa. 43. 11.

How is it then given Him? Accepit ut homo, quod habebat ut Deus. What, as GOD; He had, as Man, He received: With His nature, His Name; and the chiefe of all His Names, the Name of a SAVIOVR. For Above all, it is: Above all, to Him; Above all to us.

Above all to Him.

To Him: for though many Titles of the Deitie, ſound, and ſeeme, to be more glorious; Yet, He eſteems them all, not like this: Why? For no other reaſon, but that, they had not, nos homines, and noſtram Salutem, in them. No Name He ſets by, like that, wherein, with His glory, is joyned, our ſafetie. And this, of all, He made choice of (as, to Him, above all) that we might accordingly eſteeme of Him, that eſteems it above all, onely for our ſakes.

Above all to us. Acts 4. 12.

But howſoever, to Him: To us ſure, above all. For no Name, doe we hold by, No name under heaven, given us, whereby we may be ſaved, but it. To us more worth it is, than all: yea (I may ſay) than the very name of GOD. For, GOD in Him reconcileth the world; without Him, is enemie to it, and to us: So, with this Name, there is comfort in the Name of GOD: without it, none at all. The Name (ſure) which we have uſe of above all. For it is the Name, which, in the depth of all our diſtreſſe, by ſinne or by miſery, we even adjure Him by, ut rem nominis impleat, that he make good

2 Cor. 5. 19.

His

His owne Name; shew, He beares it not for nought, and so, save us: That, He would never so remember our wretched sinnes, as that thereby to forget His owne blessed Name: That Name specially, which He of all other most esteemeth: and so, of all other will least forget. To Him then, and to us both; it is Nomen super omne nomen. And, so let it be: even Suprema lex, salus; and supremum nomen, Iesus. To save, the highest law: And the Name of a Saviour, the highest Name. Let it so be, let it ever stand Highest, and let no name whatsoever, get above it. And so, I come to the tenth verse.

That at the Name of IESVS, &c. Verse 10.

To give Him such a Name, is one gift: To give Him, that for such an one, it should be reputed and taken, is another; For, given it may be, on His part; and not acknowledged on ours. So that, this is a new degree. At the Name of IESVS.

That GOD, though He have so exalted it, yet reckons it not exalted, unlesse we doe our parts also, unlesse our exaltation come too. At which words, comes in our duty: The part, that concernes us. Thus to esteeme it Super omne nomen, above all: And in signe we so doe, to declare as much. And therein, He leaves us not to our selves, but prescribes the very manner of our declaration, how He will have it: Namely, these two waies: The Knee to bow to it; the tongue to confesse it.

Now, these are outward acts, both. So then: first we are to set downe this, for a ground; that the exalting of the soule within, is not enough. More is required by Him: more to be performed by us. He will not have the inward parts onely, and it skills not for the outward members, though we favour our Knees, and locke up our lippes. No: Mentall devotion will not serve: He will have, both corporall and vocall, to expresse it by. Knee and Tongue.

Our body is to afford her part, to His glory: And the parts of our body: And namely, these two, the Knee, and the Tongue. Not onely the upper parts, the Tongue in our head: but even the nether also, the Knee, in our legge. The words be plaine, I see not how we can avoide them.

For the Knee, two things: 1. He would have it bow. 2. He would have it bow to His Name. Bow, first: For, what better way, or more proper, than by our humilitie to exalt Him, who for His humilitie was exalted? Or what may more fit, to expresse our humilitie by, than by this signe of humblenesse? For, a speciall way it is of exalting, or making a thing high, by falling downe, and making our selves low before it. Then secondly, That GOD careth for our knees: will be served with them. Negatively; He will not have them, [a] bow to Baal. Positively; He will have them bow to Himselfe. Will yee beleeve Him, if He bind it with an oath? I have sworne (saith He) by my selfe, that every Knee shall bow to me, *Esa.*45.23. And will yee make GOD forsworne? And it cannot be said, this is Old Testament: For even in the New, Rom. 14. 11. these very words are applied to CHRIST, as meant to be fulfilled in, and to Him. Knee bow. 1 2

But, this here in the Text, is more strong: that, It is assigned Him (this honour) as a part of His reward, for Mortem Crucis. And shall we rob Him, or take from Him the reward of His Passion.

We beginne our Liturgie every day, with the [b] Psalme: (and we had it from the Primitive Church, they did beginne theirs with the same) Wherein we invite our selves to it: Come, Let us worship, and fall downe, and kneele before the LORD our maker. Shall we ever say it, and never doe it? Is not this to mocke GOD?

* They in the Scripture, They in the * Primitive Church, did so, did bow. And verily, He will not have us worship Him like Elephants, as if we had no joynts in our

Knees

Knees; He will have more honour of men, than of the pillars in the Church. He will have us bow the knees: And let us bow them in GODS Name.

Bow to His Name.

To bow the Knee, And to His Name, to bow it. For, this is another prerogative. He is exalted, to whose Person, Knees doe bow: but He, to whose Name onely, much more. But the cause, is here otherwise. For, His Person is taken up out of our sight: all we can doe, will not reach unto it. But, His Name, He hath left behind to us, that we may shew by our reverence and respect to it, how much we esteeme Him; how true the Psalme shall be, Holy and reverent is His Name.

Acts 1.9. Psal.16.2. Psal.111.9.

But if we have much adoe, to get it bow at all: much more shall we have, to get it done to His Name. 1. There be, that doe it not.

2. What speake I of not doing it? There be, that, not onely forbeare to doe it themselves, but put themselves, to an evill occupation, to finde faults where none is, and cast scruples into mens mindes, by no meanes to doe it.

3. Not to doe it at His Name? Nay, at the holy Mysteries themselves, not to doe it: Where, His Name is (I am sure) and more than His Name, even the body and bloud of our LORD IESVS CHRIST: And those, not without His soule: Nor that, without His Deitie: Nor all these, without inestimable high benefits of grace, attending on them. And yet they, that would be glad and faine, a Pardon for this life, or some other Patent, with all humilitie to receive upon their knees: This, so great, so high, so heavenly a Gift, they straine, and make dangerous, to bow their Knees to receive it: as if it were scarce worth so much. But, it hath ever beene the manner in CHRISTS Church, whether we * offer to Him, * or receive ought offered from Him, in this wise to doe it.

* Mat.2.11. * Chrys. hom. ad Pop. Antioc.61. Ambros. in Psal. 118. bis. & lib. 3. cap.12. De Spir.S. Aug. Epist.120. cap.27.

But, to keepe us to the Name: This is sure, the words themselves are so plaine, as they are able to convince any mans conscience: And there is no Writer (not of the Ancient) on this place, that I can finde * (save he, that turned all into Allegories) but literally understands it, and likes well enough we should actually performe it.

* Ambr. Hexam. lib.6. cap.9. Hiero. in Esa. 45. ver. 23. Cyril. in Esa. To. 4. orat.3.

Yet will yee see, what subtilties are taken up, to shift this duty?

All Knees are called for, and all have not Knees. Here are three rankes reckoned: and two of them have none. What is that to us? we have: To us, it is properly spoken, and we to looke to it. And if this were ought, that the spirits in Heaven and Hell have no bodies, and so no Knees: Why, they have no Tongues neither properly, and then by the same rule, take away confessing too, and so doe neither.

1 Cor.13.1.

But the Apostle, that in another place, gives the Angels tongues (with the tongues of men and Angels,) might aswell in this place, give them Knees: they have one, as much as the other. And in both places humanum dicit, he speakes to us, after the manner of men: that we by our owne language, might conceive, what they doe. For, sure it is, the spirits of both kindes, as they doe yeeld reverence, so they have their waies, and meanes, to expresse it, by somewhat, ἀναλογὸν to the Knee. They doe it, their way: we to doe it, ours. And this is ours: let us looke to our owne then, and not busie our braines about theirs. But for us, and for our sakes, they are divers times expressed in the Revelation, even doing thus, falling downe before Him.

Rom.6.19. Revel.4.10. 5.8.14.7.11.

The Name of IESVS.

Secondly, why to this Name, more than to the Name of CHRIST? There want not reasons why.

CHRIST is not, cannot be, the Name of GOD: GOD cannot be anointed. But, IESVS is the Name of GOD, and the chiefe Name of GOD (as we have heard.)

The name CHRIST, is communicated, by Him to others, namely to Princes. So is not IESVS: that is proper. Ego sum, & præter me non est alius. And ever that which is proper, is above that which is holden in common.

Esa.43.11.

CHRIST is anointed, to what end? to be our SAVIOVR. That is the end then. And ever, the end is above the meanes: ever the name of health, above the name of any medicine.

But,

But, when we finde expreſly in the verſe, this Name is exalted above all names, and this act, limited to it, in direct words; and ſo, this name above them, in this very peculiar: Why ſeeke we any further?

Thirdly, What? to the two ſyllables, or to the ſound of them? What needs this? Who ſpeakes of ſound or ſyllables? The Text ſaith, doe it to the Name. The name is not the ſound, but the ſenſe. The caution is eaſie then, doe it to the ſenſe; have minde on Him, that is named, and doe His Name the honour, and ſpare not. 3

Fourthly, But it cannot be denied, but there hath ſuperſtition beene uſed in it. Suppoſe there hath. And almoſt, in what not? In hearing of Sermons now, is there not ſuperſtition in a great many? What ſhall we doe then? Lay them downe? abandon hearing, as we doe Kneeling? I trow, not; but remove the ſuperſtition, and retaine them ſtill; Doe but even ſo here, and all is at an end. 4

Indeed, if it were a taken-up-worſhip, or ſome humane injunction; it might perhaps, be drawne within the caſe of the brazen Serpent. But being thus directly ſet downe by GOD Himſelfe; in us, there may be ſuperſtition; in it, there can be none. And, if it be in us, wee are to mend our ſelves, but not to ſtirre the act, which is of GODS owne preſcribing. It was never heard in Divinitie, that ever ſuperſtition could aboliſh a dutie of the Text. 2 Reg 18 4.

That we ſet our ſelves to drive away ſuperſtition, it is well: But it will be well too, that we ſo drive it away, as we drive not, all reverent regard and decencie away with it alſo. And are we not well toward it? we have driven it from our head: for we keep on, of all hands: And from our Knees; for, Kneele we may not: we uſe not (I am ſure.) Sure, heed would be taken, that by taking heed, we prove not ſuperſtitious, we ſlip not into the other extreme, before we be aware: Which, of the two extremes, Religion worſe endureth; as more oppoſite unto it. For, beleeve this, as it may be ſuperſtitiouſly uſed; ſo it may irreligiouſly be neglected alſo.

Looke to the Text then, and let no man perſwade you, but that GOD requireth a reverent carriage, even of the body it ſelfe: And namely, this ſervice of the Knee; And that, to His Sonnes Name. Yee ſhall not diſpleaſe Him by it, feare not: Feare this rather, for the Knee, if it will not bow; that it ſhall be ſtricken with ſomewhat, that it ſhall not be able to bow. And for the Name, that they, that will do no honour to it; when time of need comes, ſhall receive no comfort by it. And ſo I leave this point.

The Tongue. Pſal. 30. 12. 57. 8.

For, the Knee is not all: He further requires ſomewhat, from the Tongue. And, reaſon: That member, of all other, the Pſalmiſt cals our glory: a peculiar, we have more than the beaſts: They, will be taught to bow, and bend their joynts: We have Tongues beſides, to doe ſomething more, than they. And indeed, the Knee is but a dumbe acknowledgement; doth but ſignifie implicitè: but a vocall confeſſion, that doth utter our minde plainely. And ſo, is looked for, at our hands.

To confeſſe.

This He calls, ἐξομολόγησις. Three things are in it: First, λόγῳ: ſpeake we muſt, ſay ſomewhat. And ſecondly, ὁμοῦ: doe it together; not, ſome ſpeake, and ſome ſit mute. And thirdly, ἐξ ſpeake out, not whiſpering, or betweene the teeth; but clearely and audibly. And this is ἐξομολόγησις. And it was the praiſe of the Primitive Church, this, that joyntly they did it, and alowd: that their Amen (as Saint Hierome ſaith) was like a clap of thunder; And their Alleluja, as the roring of the Sea: And, no praiſe it is to us; who, as our joynts are ſtiffe to bow, ſo our voyces are hoarſe to confeſſe. We can neither ſee the former, nor ſcarce heare the latter: as if (there being but two duties in the Text) we meant to ſuppreſſe them both.

Knee firſt, and then Tongue.

The Knee, and the Tongue: Why the Knee firſt? why begins He there? They be marſhalled right. For, having by our Knee bowed, put our ſelves in minde of due regard of Him in feare and reverence; we are then the fitter to ſpeake of Him, and to Him, with that reſpect is meet: And, not be ſo homely with Him, as in their geſture and ſpeech both, ſome are: as if they were haile fellow, even familiar with GOD. And all (forſooth) as they call it, to caſt out the ſpirit of bondage. From a heart poſſeſſed with the humble feare of GOD, from ſuch an heart, Confeſſion is ever moſt kindly: Faith being, as the heart; and feare being as the lungs; (ſo the Fathers compare them:) It will get an heat, and an over-heat (our faith;) if by feare, as coole ayre, it be not tempered: But, faith and feare together, make the blessed mixture.

Every Knee. Every Tongue. The Tongue, and every Tongue; as the Knee, and every Knee: they to bow all, and these all to confesse. But for all that, not all alike. They, in heaven, cast downe their crownes, and fall downe themselves of their owne accord: And confesse Him, singing, as at His birth, and in the Revelation divers times. They, under the earth doe it too, but not ultrò, are throwen downe, and even made His foot-stoole. So; downe they goe, though sore against their wills: And confesse Him too, though roaring, and as it were upon the racke. They, on Earth (as in the midst) partake of both. The better sort, with the Angels, get them to their Knees, gladly; and cheerefully confesse Him: The rest (as Infidels, and some Christians little better) are forced to fall backward, and made in the end to crie Vicisti Galilæe, though they gnaw their Tongues when they have done.

1 Revel.4.10. Luke 2 14. Revel.15. 3. 4.8. 5.9.
2 Psal.110.1. Marke 9.26.
3 Iohn 18.6. Revel.16. 10.

So, we see our lot: One way, or other, we shall come to it, all: if not now, in die illo: Which is the reason, that *Rom.*14.11. the Apostle applieth this place in Esay, to CHRIST's sitting in Iudgement, at the latter day. Exalted, He shall be, with our good wills; or whether we will or no. Either fall on our Knees now; or be cast flat on our faces then: Either confesse Him Cantando, with Saints and Angels, or ululando, with devils and damned spirits. For, the Father will be glorified in the Sonne, by the glorious Confession, of them that yeeld; or the glorious confusion, of them that stand out.

Every Tongue. Psal.150. ult. The Tongue, and every Tongue: that is, every Speech, Dialect, Idiome, Language, in the world, stand charged with this Confession. Omnis spiritus, every spirit to give breath; and Omnis Lingua, every Tongue to be as a Trumpet, to sound it forth. And, where are they then, that deny any Tongue the facultie here granted; Or barre any of them the duty here injoyned? That locke up the publike Confession (the chiefe of all other) in some one Tongue or two, and send forth their Supersedeas to all the rest? No, His Title here, hath more Tongues than Pilate's on the Crosse: That, had but three; this, hath every Tongue, what, where, whose-soever, none except. A Præludium whereof, was in the Tongues sent from Heaven, whereby, every Nation under Act. 2. 6. Heaven, heard, each in their owne Tongue spoken, Magnalia Dei, the glad tidings of the Gospell.

Confesse that IESVS CHRIST is the LORD. But, though thus many Tongues, yet one Confession. Even this: that IESVS CHRIST is the LORD. And, a blessed Confession is it (this) that IESVS (that is) a SAVIOVR, that He, that such a one, is the LORD: that not a fleecer, or a flayer, but a SAVIOVR, hath the place. 2. That CHRIST (that is) one which saveth, and cureth anctione, non punctione, with anointing, not with searing or pricking, that we acknowledge Him to be the LORD. LORD: before, by that He is SONNE: And now LORD againe, by vertue of His Propter quod.

Lord, whereof? Nay not qualified, of such a Place, Baronie, Countie, Seigniorie, but Lord in abstracto. But, if we will qualifie Him, we may. Lord of these three rankes of Confessours (here in the Verse) and of those three places and Regions, that Matth.16.19. containe them: 1. Lord of heaven, He gave the Keyes of it: 2. Lord of earth: He Revel.3.7. hath the Key of David (and, if of His, of every Kingdome else:) 3. Lord of hell, for, loe, the Keyes of Hell and of Death, *Apoc.*1.18. Of Death, to unlocke the graves: Revel.20.3. Of Hell, to locke up the old Dragon, and his crew, into the bottomlesse pit. A great Lord: For, whither shall one goe, to get out of His dominion.

Well, if it be but to confesse this, that is no great matter, we will not sticke with Him; who cannot say, IESVS CHRIST is the LORD? That can no man (saith 1 Cor.12.3. the Apostle) say it, as it should be said, but by the HOLY GHOST. For, confessing Him LORD, we confesse more things by Him, than one. For, two things goe to it. Matth.14.30. Act.9.6. 1. Saint Peter gives us one; 2. Saint Paul, the other. 1. Domine salva, pereo, saith Saint Peter. Save Lord, I sinke: A Lord to save. 2. Domine quid me vis facere? saith Saint Paul. Lord what service wouldest thou I should doe? A Lord to serve.

Saint

Saint Peters, we like well; to ſuccour and ſave us, when we are in any danger: He ſhall heare of us, then. But Saint Pauls Quid me vis facere? when it comes to that, then our confeſſion fumbles, and ſtickes in our teeth: Nay, then, Quis eſt Dominus noſter? we have no LORD (wee) then. So, we play faſt and looſe, with our confeſſion; faſt, at ſuccour; looſe, at ſervice; in, at one, out, at the other. Pſal. 12. 4.

But what ſpeake I of doing His will? when, if He doe not ours, in each reſpect; if we have not this or that when we would, we fall from confeſſing, and fall to murmuring. And it fareth with us, not as if He were LORD, and we to doe His will: but as if, we (indeed) were the LORDS, and He to doe ours: As if, there were nothing betweene us and Him, but He to doe our turnes, and then Tu autem Domine, His Lordſhip were expired and at an end.

Vpon the point, thus it is: we confeſſe it, the wrong way; the Lord to be Ieſus: but not, Ieſus to be the Lord. O Lord be Ieſus: but not, O Ieſus be Lord. O Lord be Ieſus, to ſave us: but not, O Ieſus be Lord, to command us. So that, all our humiliavit ſtill, is without factus obediens.

Ye ſee then, it is worth the while, to confeſſe this, as it ſhould be confeſſed. In this wiſe none can doe it, but by the HOLY GHOST. Otherwiſe, for an Ore tenus only, our owne ghoſt will ſerve well enough. But that, is not it. Quid me vis facere? is it, that makes the Lord. He tels us ſo Himſelfe, and with a kinde of admiration, that any ſhould thinke otherwiſe: How call ye me Lord (ſaith He) and doe not as I will you? As much to ſay, as, It is to no purpoſe, though you ſay Domine, Domine, double it, and treble it too, it will goe for no confeſſion, if a factis negant come in the necke of it: if, Saint Pauls Quid me vis facere? be left out. Luke 6. 46. Matth. 7. 21. Tit. 1. 16.

And this, is yet more plaine, by the laſt words of all. Namely, that this confeſſion is ſo to be made, as it redound to the glory of GOD the Father. Whoſe great glory, it is, that His Sonne is Lord of ſuch ſervants: That men ſhall ſay, See what ſervants He hath! how full of reverence to His Name! how free, how forward to doe His will! Herein is His Name much magnified. As on the other ſide, it muſt needs be evill ſpoken of, and that among the very Heathen, when, not a Knee, got to bow; when this ſyllable (LORD) comes out of our mouth, but no Quid me vis facere? to follow it. When they ſee, how unſervice-like, our ſervice is; how rude, our behaviour toward Him, and His Name, whom we terme Lord (indeed) but uſe Him nothing ſo. But, come hither into His preſence, and carry our ſelves here, for all the world, as the fellow did before Auguſtus, of whom, Mecænas well ſaid: Hic homo erubeſcit timere Cæſarem. And ſo, we: as if we were aſhamed, to ſeeme to beare any reverence, at all, to Him, or His Name. It would not be thus. I am privie, there is no one thing, doth more alien thoſe, that of a ſimple minde refuſe the Church, than this; that they ſee ſo unſeemely behaviour; ſo ſmall reverence ſhewed this way. But ſure, the Apoſtle tels us, our carriage there, ſhould be ſuch, ſo decent, as if a ſtranger, or unbeleever ſhould come into our aſſemblies, the very reverence He there ſeeth, ſhould make him fall downe, and ſay, Verily GOD is among us; to ſee us, ſo reſpectively beare our ſelves, in the manner of our worſhip. Rom. 2. 24. 1 Cor. 14. 25.

This Confeſſion that Ieſus is the Lord, is to be, to the glory of GOD the Father: So we take it one way. Or, this Confeſſion is to be, that Ieſus is the Lord to the glory of GOD the Father: ſo another way. And both well. To confeſſe: that He is the Lord, that all His Lordſhip is, not to His owne glory; but to His Fathers. Thinke not then, that Gloria filio, ſhall abate ought of Gloria Patri. The Sonne is Lord, to the glory of His Father, and not otherwiſe. Let that feare then be farre from us, that in exalting the Sonne, we ſhall in the leaſt minute eclipſe the glory of his Father. Here is no feare of emulation, that it will prove the caſe, of Iupiter and Saturne. No, ſo bleſſed is the accord of this Father, and this Sonne, as the Father thinketh it ſome blemiſh to His glory, if ſo profound humility, ſo complete obedience, He had not ſeene highly rewarded, with Super upon Super. And the Son, will admit of no glory, that ſhal impaire His Fathers in the leaſt degree: For loe, He is Lord to the glory of God His Father. This, is the end of His (of CHRISTS:) And the ſame may be the end of all Exaltations; that Confeſſe to the glory of GOD the Father.

IESVS is the LORD to the glory of GOD the Father.

that a SAVIOVR ever may be LORD, hold that place: and hold it, and be LORD, not to His owne, but to the Glory of GOD, even GOD the Father.

The conclusion. Matth. 11.26. Iohn 13.15. Luke 2.12.

The end of all: And, we muſt needs know, and take that, with us; for which, all this here is brought. And it is a Leſſon; even, His Diſcite à me: and it is a Paterne; even, His Exemplum dedi vobis, to commend unto us, the vertue of the Text; the Propter quod of the Feaſt; even Humility: Hoc erit ſignum, it is His ſigne at Chriſtmas: As His ſigne then, ſo His Propter quod now, at Eaſter. So, the vertue of both Feaſts: I will offer you but three ſhort points touching it.

1 Humiliavit. CHRISTS Perſon.

It is no humble man is ſet before us here, it is the Sonne of GOD, and Himſelfe GOD: Et quomodo non humiliatur homo, coram humili Deo? How is not the Sonne of man humble, and the Sonne of GOD is? Even for Him, to love it; for His very Perſon.

2 Worke. Iohn 10.38. 14.11.

And, in this vertue, He is not barely ſet out to us, but in it, and by it, bringing to paſſe the workes of our redemption: Which, cannot but extraordinarily commend this vertue to us; in that it hath pleaſed GOD, to doe more for us, in this His Humility, than ever He did, in all His Majeſty: even, to ſave and redeeme us by it. To love it then; if not for Him, yet for the workes ſake.

3 Reward. Iames 4.10. 1 Pet. 5.6. Verſe 5.

But ſpecially (which is the third) for the Propter quod, in the Text: if not for the worke, yet for the Rewards ſake. That, as CHRIST, was no loſer by it, no more ſhall we: For, all this Glory here, the way to it, is, by the firſt verſe. Humiliavit, is the beginning, and the end of it is Exalting. That, the mother; this the daughter: all riſeth from Humiliavit ipſe ſe. Humiliamini ergo, ſaith Saint Iames: Humiliamini ergo, ſaith Saint Peter; and after it there followeth ſtill, & exaltabit vos Deus, a promiſe of a like glorious end. And what ſaith the Apoſtle here? This minde (ſaith he) was in CHRIST; and it was φρονεῖν, a wiſe minde: That, wee count it a wiſe minde, and worth the carrying, and carry it; and it ſhall carry us, to the ſame journeyes end, it brought Him: even to the glory of GOD the Father. This for Humilitie.

Obediens Domino. 2 Reg. 5. 13. Heb. 6.9.

And what? Shall we not give ſome light triall, of our Obedience alſo, to averre our Confeſſion, that, He is our LORD? It would be, by, Domine, quid nos vis facere? (that is the true triall.) Say then, Domine, quid nos vis facere? And, He will anſwer us; Hoc facite in Mei memoriam. Will yee know, what I would have you doe? Doe this, in remembrance of Me: In ſigne that I am LORD, doe but this: Here is a caſe of inſtance, and that now; even at this very preſent, a proofe to be made. By this, we ſhall ſee, whether He be LORD or no. For, if not this; but ſlip the collar here, and ſhrinke away: Si rem grandem dixiſſet, in a farre greater matter, how would we ſtand with Him, then? We were wrong before, here is the ſound and ſyllables (we ſpake of) here it is. For, all is but ſound and ſyllables, if, not this.

But of us, I hope for better things, that by our humble carriage, and Obedience (at leaſt, in this) we will ſet our ſelves, ſome way to exalt Him, in this His day of Exaltation: Which, as it will tend to His glory; ſo will He turne it to matter of our glory: and that, in His Kingdome of glory; or (to keepe the word of the Text) in the glory of GOD the Father. That ſo we may end, as the Text ends. A better, or more bleſſed end there cannot be. And, to this bleſſed end, He bring us, that by His humilitie and obedience, hath not onely purchaſed it for us: but ſet the way open, and gone it before us, IESVS CHRIST the Righteous, &c.

A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE THE KINGS MAIESTIE AT VVHITE-HALL, ON the IX of April, A. D. MDCXV. being EASTER-DAY.

IOHN Chap. II. VER. XIX.

Reſpondit IESVS & dixit, Solvite Templum hoc, & in tribus diebus excitabo illud.

IESVS anſwered and ſaid, Diſſolve (or, deſtroy) this Temple, and within three dayes I will raiſe it up againe.

HE anſwered and ſaid this, to the Phariſees. Who ſought a Signe of Him (the verſe next before.) A Signe they would have; And (Hee tells them) a Signe they ſhould have. Themſelves, ſhould miniſter Him occaſion, to ſhew a Signe; the like was never ſhewen. For, deſtroy Him they ſhould (His body, ſo) and He within three dayes, would raiſe it againe, from death to life. The Occaſion: A Signe. Verſ. 18.

But this Anſwer of His, is a figurative ſpeech, and runnes under the termes of the Temple. The reaſon whereof was: they were then in the Temple; there, fell out this Queſtion. And (as it appeareth in the Verſes before) much adoe there had beene betweene them, and that a long time, about the Temple. The ſpeech, figurative.

Now, His manner ſtill was; the Place, the Time, the Matter in hand, ever to frame the Tenour and termes of His ſpeech, according to them. And ſo, now being in the Temple, He takes His termes from thence; Even from the Temple.

But He doth (as I may ſay) Solvere Templum hoc, looſe and undoe this terme for us: For (within a Verſe) we are told, this Temple is no other, than the Temple of The figure interpreted. Verſ. 21.

His body. (Now the reſt followes of it ſelfe.) The Solvite, is a taking Him in ſunder, His ſoule from His body: The excitabo, is the ſetting them together, and raiſing them up againe. And both theſe, within three dayes (the onely word in the Text, wherein there is no figure.)

How a Signe in the true ſenſe.

And this now was His Signe. And a great Signe it was. Great, even in their ſenſe, if it had beene, but of the Pile of Building (as they tooke the word Temple.) But greater farre, farre another manner Signe in His ſenſe, in the true.

For, as for that Temple, Zorobabel, and Herod had raiſed it: and other great Perſons, as great Buildings as that. But, the Temple of the body, if that were once downe, all the Temple-builders that ever were, with all their care and coſt could never get it up more. Therefore, in His (in CHRISTS ſenſe) it is farre the greater ſigne, than as they phanſied it.

Luke 16.30.

Indeed, ſo great a Signe, as he, that was in hell fire, could not deviſe; nor did not deſire a greater. If but Lazarus, if but one come from the dead: then; then regard him: that ſigne, out of queſtion. Why, here is one come from the dead, and this day come, and a greater than Lazarus: I truſt then, we will regard Him, we will regard this ſigne, and not be worſe, than he in hell was. Let us then regard it.

The Diviſion

The ground of the ſigne (and of all here) is Templum hoc. About it, two maine Acts, they ſhew forth themſelves: The razing of it downe, in ſolvite; The raiſing of it up, in Excitabo. Theſe in figure. Anſwerable to theſe, This Temple, is CHRISTS bodie. The razing it downe, is CHRIST crucified and ſlaine. The raiſing it up, is CHRIST reſtored to life.

Of which two (to divide it by the Perſons) Solvite is their part: Excitabo, His. That, His Paſſion by their act (Solvite:) This, His Reſurrection, by His owne, (Excitabo.)

Now, this (He ſaith) ſhall be done: And ſaith further, ſhall not be long in doing: No longer than three dayes. And within the compaſſe of the time limited Hee did it: For, this is now the third day; And to day, by Sun-riſing, it was done.

I. II. III. IV.

So upon the matter, there come to bee handled theſe foure points: 1. That CHRISTS body is Templum hoc. 2. The Diſſolution of it by death, in Solvite. 3. The rearing it up againe by His Reſurrection, in Excitabo. 4. The time to doe it in, three dayes.

By which circumſtance of three dayes, and this day the third of them, commeth this time, to claime a kinde of propertie in this paſſage of Scripture. And that, two wayes:

For firſt: at this Feaſt, were theſe words here ſpoken: (you may ſee, they were ſo, at the thirteenth verſe before: at the Feaſt of Eaſter.)

And ſecondly; at this Feaſt againe, were they fulfilled after: the Solvite, three dayes ſince; the Excitabo this very day. So, at this Feaſt, the promiſe, and at the very ſame, the accompliſhment of it. The accompliſhment, once: the memoriall, ever.

Being then, at this very time, thus ſpoken, and done: Spoken, here now; done, three yeares after: Being (I ſay) ſpoken, and done, and at this time ſpoken and done; Never ſo fit as now.

I.

The two ſenſes of Templum hoc.

Verſe 20.

Solvite Templum hoc. Templum hoc, we begin with. It is a borrowed terme. But we cannot miſſe the ſenſe of it. For, both are ſet downe here to our hand: the wrong ſenſe and the right. The wrong (the next verſe of all) for the materiall Temple. So, the Phariſees tooke it, and miſtooke it. The right (the next Verſe after) for for the Temple of his body. So, they ſhould have taken it. For ſo He meant it: Ipſe autem dicebat, &c. But He ſpake of the temple of his body. And Hee knew his owne meaning beſt; and reaſon would, ſhould be His owne Interpreter. Ver. 21.

And this meaning of His it had been no hard matter for them to have hit on: but they came but a byrding, but to catch from Him ſome advantage, and ſo were willing to miſ-take Him. As, this they caught as an advantage (we ſee) and layd it up for a raynie day, and three yeares after, out they came with it, and framed an Inditement upon it, as if, He had meant to have deſtroyed their Temple. Matt. 26. 61. Mar. 14. 58.

But was it likely, or could it once be imagined, He meant to deſtroy it? It was GODS houſe. And the zeale of Gods houſe (but even a verſe before) conſumed Him. And doth His zeale now (like the zeale of our times) conſume Gods houſe? What, and that ſo quickly? but a Verſe between? But even very now, He purged it: And did He purge it to have it pulled downe? That were prepoſterous. Now it was purged, pull it downe? Nay, pull it downe, when it was polluted: Now it is cleanſed, let it ſtand. To reforme Churches, and then ſeeke to diſſolve them, wilbe counted among the errours of our Age. CHRIST was farre from it. He that would not ſee it abuſed, would never endure to have it deſtroyed; ſpecially, not, when Hee had reformed the abuſes: And yet more ſpecially, not even preſently upon it (they might be ſure.) The Phariſees ſenſe could not be true. Ver. 18.

But, that, which muſt needs lead them to the right meaning, was: that theſe words (Templum hoc) Hee could not ſay them, but by the manner of His uttering them, by His very geſture, at the delivery of this particle (hoc) they muſt needs know what Temple it was, Hee intended. It was eaſie to marke, whether He carried His hand, or caſt His eye up to the fabrique of it; or, whether He bare them, to His body: Which one thing onely, was enough to have reſolved them of this point, and to quit our Saviour of equivocation.

Wee will them wayve theirs as the wrong meaning, And take it (as hee wiſheth, who leant on his breaſt and beſt knew His minde) of the Temple of his bodie. The true ſenſe. Chap. 13. 23.

But what reſemblance is there, betweene a bodie and a Temple? or how can a bodie bee ſo termed? Well enough: For, I aske, why is it a Temple? What makes it ſo? Is it not, becauſe it is Domus Patris mei (as He ſaid, a little before) becauſe GOD dwelleth there? For, as that, wherein man dwells, is a houſe: So, that, wherein GOD, is a Temple properly. That (I ſay) wherein; be it place, or bee it bodie. So come wee to have two ſorts of Temples; Temples of fleſh and bone, as well as Temples of lime and ſtone. For, if our bodies be termed houſes, becauſe our ſoules (tenant-wiſe) abide and dwell, in them; If, becauſe our ſoules dwell, they bee houſes; if GOD doe ſo, they be Temples; why not? Why not? why know yee not this (ſaith the Apoſtle) that your very bodies (if the Spirit of GOD abide in them) eo ipſo, Temples they bee (ſuch as they be?) But then they bee ſo ſpecially, when actually we imploy them in the ſervice of GOD. For, being in His Temple, and there ſerving Him, then if ever, they be Templa in Templo, Living Temples in a Temple without life. A bodie then, may bee a Temple: Even this of ours. 1 Cor. 6. 19.

A Bodie, a Temple. Ver. 16.

And if ours, theſe of ours (I ſay) in which, the Spirit of God dwelleth onely by ſome gift or grace: with how much better right (better infinitely) His bodie (Chriſts) in whom the whole God-Head, in all the fulneſſe of it, dwelt corporally? Corporally (I ſay) and not Spiritually alone (as, in us:) By nature; by perſonall union: not (as, in us) by grace, and by participation of it, onely. Againe, if ours, which we ſuffer oft to be polluted with ſinne, that many times they ſtand ſhut up, and no ſervice in them for a long ſeaſon together; how much more His, that never was defiled with any the leaſt ſinne, never ſhut but continually taken up, and wholly imployed in His Fathers ſervice? His, above all exception; His, without all compariſon, certainely. Alas, ours but Tabernacles under goat skinns; His, the true, the Marble, the Cedar-Temple indeed. CHRIST s bodie then, a Temple.

CHRISTS body a Temple. Col. 2. 9.

But, a Temple at large, will not ſerve: It muſt be Templum hoc, that very Temple, they tooke it for. And ſo we to proceed yet further, and to ſeeke a congruitie of

Chriſts body. This Temple, or templum hoc.

His bodie with the materiall Temple (it was taken for) to which, there is no doubt, His intent was to reſemble it.

The Rabbins, in their Speculative Divinitie, doe much buſy themſelves, to ſhew, that, in the Temple, there was a modell of the whole world, and that all the Spheares in heaven, and all the Elements in earth were recapitulate in it. They were wide. The Fathers tooke the right, and beſtowed their time and travaile more to the point: to ſhew, how, that Temple and all that was in it, was nothing elſe, but a compendious repreſentation of CHRIST, for whom, and in whoſe honour, was that and all other true Temples. And this they did by Warrant, from the Apoſtle, who (in Heb. IX.)
Heb 9.5. aimeth at ſome ſuch thing.

Chriſts bodie & Templum hoc wherein like. Now the points of congruitie, they found, were many, they may be reduced to theſe foure: 1. Whether you looke to the compoſition or parts of it. 2. Or, to the furniture, and veſſells of it. 3. Or, to what was done in it. 4. Or, to what was done to it (that is) what, firſt and laſt, befell it. In all which, they hold, that Templum hoc might more truely be affirmed of Him, that was in the Temple; than of the Temple, He was in.

The laſt of the foure (what was done to that Temple, what befell it, and ſo what befell the Temple of Chriſts bodie) that (I take) to be moſt proper to this Text, and to that we have in hand. (For, to goe through all foure, would take up a whole ſermon.) So, I take my ſelfe to the Congruitie onely.

Marke then what befell either: by that, ſhall you beſt find, that Fata utriuſque Templi, the deſtinies of both Temples were alike.
Pſal. 132.6. Mat. 2.1.

They began alike. The firſt newes of the Temple was heard at Ephrata (which is Bethlehem.) So was it of Him; for there was He borne.

Like in Soluite. & excitabo. Like, in their beginnings: and in their ends, no leſſe. I appeale to this Text, and content me with thoſe two, Hee inſiſts on Himſelfe. Both were deſtroyed, both were reared againe; that in all things, His Bodie, and His Temple might be ſuitable.

2 Chro. 16.19. Pſal. 137.7. That Temple was deſtroyed by the Chaldees; downe with it even unto the ground. Imitated by them here: downe with it, even into the ground. For they never left it, till they had Him there: paſt Excitabo (as they thought) paſt riſing any more. But, as the Agge. 1 14. Temple, after it was ſo razed, had an Excitabo; was raiſed againe up by Zorobabel: So was this too. Solvite, tooke place: but, there came an Excitabo after, that made amends for it. And, as the glorie of the ſecond Houſe, was greater, than the firſt: So the Agge. 2. 10. eſtate, He roſe to, farre more glorious than that He was in before.

And marke (I pray you) if theſe two were not to be ſeene as brim, in the little glaſſes about it, as in the great Mirrour it ſelfe. For, the Temple was as a great Mirrour, and the furniture, as ſo many little glaſſes round about it. Take but the Arke (the Epitome as it were of the Temple.) The two Tables in it, the type of the true treaſures of
Col. 2.3. Wiſedome and Knowledge hid in Him: they were broken firſt, there is Solvite; but they Exod. 32.15. 34.4. were new hewen, and written over againe, there is excitabo. The Pot of Manna (a perfect reſemblance of Him; the Vrna, or the veſſell being made of earth, ſo earthly; The Manna, the contents of it, being from heaven, ſo heavenly:) The Manna (we Exod. 16 20. 24. know) would not keepe paſt two dayes at the moſt, there is Solvite: but, being put Exod. 16.32. into the Vrna, the third day it came againe to it ſelfe, and kept in the Pot without putrifying ever after; there is Excitabo. Aarons rod, (the type of His Prieſthood and of Num. 17.8. the rule of ſoules annexed to it) that Rod, was quite dead and drie; but revived againe and bloſſomed, yea, brought forth ripe Almonds. In every and in each of them, His deſtinie whom they repreſented; Solvite and Excitabo in all.

But, the End is all in all; and in reſpect of that (of the end) well ſaith Ambroſe, of His bodie, Verè Templum, in quo noſtrorum eſt purificatio peccatorum. Truly a Temple He, no Temple ever ſo truely, as wherein was offered up the true propitiation for, and the true purification of our ſinnes; and of us from them: which is the end of all Temples that ever were or ſhall be; and was but ſhaddowed in all beſides, but in this truly performed.

There, the onely true Holocauſt of His entire obedience, which burnt in Him bright and and cleare, from the firſt to the laſt, all His life long.

There, the onely true Treſpaſſe offering of His Death and Paſſion (the Solvite of this Temple) ſatisfactorie to the full, for all the treſpaſſes and tranſgreſſions of the whole world.

There, the Meat-and-drinke-offering of His bleſſed Bodie and moſt precious bloud.

And the Exta of this ſacrifice, the fat of the entrailes of it, that is the Love where-with He did it; the deſire, the longing deſire He had to it; that, that was the perfect Offering, that ſet at one all things both in heaven and earth. That, what ever was Sub figurâ in Templo illo, was really and in truth exhibited in Templo hoc. Luc. 12 50. 22 15. Col. 1. 20.

And judge now, whether the Signe were not well layd by our SAVIOVR in the Temple, which was it ſelfe a ſigne of Him. And whether, as He ſayd in a place, Ecce major Templo hîc: So He might not have ſayd Ecce majus Templum hîc, when He was in the Temple; Behold, a greater, a truer Temple now, in the Temple, than the Temple it ſelfe. Matt. 12. 6.

II.

Now to the ſecond maine point, Solvite. a The ſaying it firſt, b The executing it after. The Solvite, and the Solutum eſt.

a Solvite, the ſaying.

1 Firſt, by Solvite (that is) diſſolving, is meant death. * Cupio diſſolvi, ye know, what that is: And Tempus diſſolutionis meæ inſtat, the time of my diſſolution (that is, my death) is at hand. For, death, is a very diſſolution: a looſing the cement, the ſoule, and bodie are held together with. Which two, as a frame or fabrique, are compaginate at firſt; and after, as the timber from the lime, or the lime from the ſtone, ſo are they taken in ſunder againe. But death, is not, this way onely, a looſing; but a further than this. For upon the looſing the ſoule from the body, and life from both, there followes an univerſall looſing, of all the bonds and knotts here: of the Father from the Sonne; and otherwhile, of the Sonne from the Father firſt: Of Man from Wife, of friend from friend, of Prince from people: So great a Solvite is death; makes all, that is faſt, looſe: makes all knotts flye in ſunder.

1 Solvite, Death a looſing. * Phil. 4 23. 2 Tim. 4 6.

2 And all this in naturall death. But a further matter there is in Solvite. For that is againſt nature, aliis ſolventibus, by the hands of other, that are the Solventes (them, to whom this is ſpoken.) This Temple, dropps not downe for age, or weakneſſe; diſſolves not of it ſelfe: Others (they to whom, Solvite is here ſayd) they, pull it downe. It is then no naturall, but a violent death, this. Well therefore turned (Solvite, deſtroy it:) there is no deſtruction, but with force or violence.

2 Solvite. Violent.

3 So violent though, on theirs; as voluntary yet, on His part. Not againſt His will quite, not by conſtraint: For, Hee Himſelfe, that is to bee diſſolved, He it is, doth here ſay Solvite. He could have avoided it, if He would; He would not: In ſigne He would not (we ſee) Himſelfe ſaith Solvite. And Solvite He muſt have ſaid; He muſt have ſaid it, or they could not have done it. It had paſſed all their cunning and ſtrength, to have undone this knot ever, but that He gave way to it.

3 Solvite. Vo'untarie.

4. Gave way to it (I ſay) that we take not this Solvite otherwiſe, than He meant it. It is not of the nature of a charge, this; nor we, ſo to conceive it. Very expedient it is, that we know the nature of Solvite Templum.

Solvite Templum is no Commandement (be ſure) in no ſenſe; Hee commands not any Temple; not that, they themſelves meant, to be deſtroyed; It were Sacrilege that, and no better. And Sacrilege the Apoſtle rankes with Idolatry; as being full out as evill, if not worſe than it.

2 Solvite Templum No commandement. Rom. 2. 17.

But indeed worſe: for, what Idolatry but pollutes, Sacrilege pulls quite downe. And eaſier it is, to new hallow a Temple polluted; than, to build one anew, out of an heape of ſtones.

And if, but to ſpoile a Church, be ſacrilege: (as, it is granted:) yet, that leaves ſomewhat; at leaſt, the walls and the roofe (ſo it be not leade:) To leave nothing, but downe with it, is the crie of Edom, the worſt cry, the worſt ſacrilege, of all: and never given Pſal. 137. 7.

given in charge by GOD, to any (we may be ſure.)

1 Reg.8.18. 2 Chron.6.8. For, GOD Himſelfe, ſaid to David with his owne mouth, Whereas it was in thine heart, to build me an Houſe; thou didſt well, that thou waſt ſo minded. Didſt well? well done, to thinke of building? then, â ſenſu contrario, Evill done, to thinke of diſſolving. And, that which is evill, CHRIST will never injoyne.

But, what is to be thought of Solvite templum, I would have you to judge by theſe two (they bee both in the Text.) 1. To whom this is ſpoken. 2. And what is meant by it.

1 To whom Solvite Templum is layd.

1. To whom, this is ſpoken: Diſtingue Tempora, is a good Rule; So is, Diſtingue Perſonas. Diſtinguiſh the perſons then, give every one his owne, it will make you love Solvite Templum the worſe, as long as you know it. Solvite? To whom is this ſpoken? Who be they? The Phariſees. To them, is this ſpeech directed. That, is made their worke, worke for a Phariſee, to diſſolve Churches. And ſo it was. For, as Matt.23.5. 14. 17. hot and holy as they ſeemed, with their broad phylacteries and long prayers, our SAVIOVR ſaith; they loved the gold of the Temple, better than the Temple. So doe their poſterity, to this day. To the Phariſees then with them; to their marrowes: that would faine heare Solvite, given in charge. The other perſon, is CHRIST: CHRIST's word and worke both, is excitabo: Excitator Templorum He, a Raiſer of them; a Rayſer of them, when they be downe (we ſee here.) They will not let them ſtand when they be up. CHRIST, He ſets them up, for His part: When you will have them downe, you muſt beſpeake ſome Phariſee: And they will doe it, leviter rogati. For, as His ſpeech to them, is Solvite & excitabo; So, theirs to Him may ſeeme to be, Excita & ſolvemus. Set up, as many as He will, they will downe with them; firſt with Templum hoc, then with Templum illud; and ſo, one after another (if they may have their will:) they lacke but one, to give the Solvite to them, and to ſet them on worke. Diſtingue perſonas then, And they, to whom Solvite is ſaid, are but bad perſons certainly, and fit for a bad buſineſſe.

2 What is meant by Solvite Templum.

2. Will yee marke againe, what is meant here by it, by deſtroying the Temple? What, but even the killing of CHRIST? Now the ſuiting and ſorting of theſe two thus, hath but an evill aſpect neither: but, this worſe than the former, though. And, I wiſh but this one point well printed in all mens minds. Solvite Templum: quid vult dicere? Solvite Templum (id eſt) Occîdite CHRISTVM: that he that goes about to diſſolve the Church, it is all one, as if he went about to make away CHRIST. One of theſe is implied under the other. Enough (I think) to take off the edge of any that are glad to heare, and ready to catch Solvite Templum out of CHRIST's mouth, but quite beſides His meaning. For His meaning was (And it was one ſpeciall end of CHRIST's comparing His Body to the Temple;) to ſhew, He would have us ſo to make account of the Temple, and ſo to uſe it, as we would His owne very bodie: And to bee as far from deſtroying one; as we would be from the other. This may ſuffice, to let you know the nature of Solvite Templum once for all, that you bee not miſtaken in it.

3 Solvite Templum hoc. Not by way of commamdement

3 Of Solvite Templum (I ſay:) But now, to come to Solvite Templum hoc, to the Temple of his bodie. Concerning it; that it ſhould enter into any mans heart, to thinke, CHRIST would open His mouth to command, or to counſell His owne making away; (that is, the committing the moſt horrible foule murther that ever was) GOD forbid. It was a ſinne, out of meaſure ſinfull, that, if ever any were. And give me any Religion, rather than that, that draweth GOD into the ſocietie of ſin: makes Him, or makes CHRIST, either Author or Adviſer, Commander or Counſellor, of ought that is evill. Any (I ſay) rather than that.

But by way of prædiction.

1 How then? if no command, what is it? All that can bee made of it (ſay the Antient Fathers) is, but either, a prediction (in the ſtyle of the Prophets) Come downe Babel; (that is) Babel ſhall be brought downe: So Solvite, ye ſhall deſtroy; to warne them, what Hee ſaw, they were now caſting about, and whether their malice would Eſay 47.1. Act.7.52. carry them in the end, even to bee the deſtroyers and murderers of the SONNE of GOD.

2 Either

2. Either this; Or (at moſt) but a permiſsion; which, in all tongues, is ever made in this mood (in the Imperative.) So, we uſe to ſay; Goe to, doe and ye will; or, doe what ye will with my bodie; when, we meane but ſufferance, for all that, and no command at all. For all the world, this Solvite to them, as Fac citò, to Iudas after. Quod facis, that, which you are reſolved to doe, and have taken earneſt upon it; Fac, Doe it; and, Fac citò, Doe it out of the way; which yet (it is well knowne) was nothing but a permiſsion, and not a jot more. By way of permiſsion Ioh. 13.17.

2. But, ſhould ſuch, ſo foule an evill, as that, be permitted though? No, nor that neither, ſimply; It is not a bare permiſsion, but one qualified; and that with two limitations, Will ye marke them? 1. For firſt He would not ſuffer any evill at all (leaſt of all, that) but that, out of the evill He was able (able and willing both) to draw a farre greater good. Greater, for good (I ſay) than, that was, for evill. And that was Solutionem peccati, ex Solutione Templi. Permitted for a greater good.

For, we are not to thinke, that He would, thus downe with it, and up with it againe, onely to ſhew them feats and tricks (as it were) to be wondred at, and for no other end. No, the end was the deſtroying of ſinne, by the deſtroying this Temple. It went hard, Et væ tibi attrocitas peccati noſtri, and woe to the hainouſneſſe of our ſinnes, for the diſſolving whereof, neither the Prieſt might be ſuffered to live, nor the Temple to ſtand; but the Prieſt be ſlaine, and the Temple be pulled downe, Prieſt and Temple and all be deſtroyed. But, ſinne was ſo riveted into our Nature: And againe, our Nature ſo incorporate into His, as no diſſolving the one, without the diſſolution of the other. No way to over-whelme ſinne quite, but by the fall of this Temple. The ruine of it like that of Samſons: That, the deſtruction of the Philiſtines; this, the diſſolving of all the workes of the Divell. It is Saint Iohns owne terme, Vt Solveret opera Diaboli. Iudic. 16.30. 1 Ioh. 3.8.

2. But, neither was this enough yet: Neither would He, for all this, have at any hand let it goe downe, but that withall He meant to have it up againe preſently. Never have ſaid Solvite, but with an Excitabo ſtraight upon it; which is a full amends; ſo that the Temple loſes nothing, by the looſing. Permitted, for another as good.

The World with us, hath ſeene a Solvite, without any excitabo; Downe with this, but nothing raiſed in the ſtead. But, that is none of His: Solvite without excitabo, none of CHRIST'S. We ſee, with one breath, He undertakes, it ſhall up againe, and that in a ſhort time: There is amends for Solvite.

And ſo now with theſe two limitations, under theſe two conditions; 1 One of a greater good by it; the other, of another as good or better, in liew of it; may Solvite be ſaid permiſsivè: and otherwiſe not, by any warrant from CHRIST or from His example.

And thus, you have heard what He ſaith. Will ye now ſee, what they did: what became of this Solvite of His? Solvite (ſaith Hee) and when time came, they did it. But He ſaid Solvite, that is looſe; and they cryed Crucifige, at the time (that is) faſten; faſten Him to the Croſſe: but that faſtening was His looſing; for it loſt Him and coſt Him his life, Which was the Solutum eſt of this Solvite. b S. Ivite, the doing.

For indeed, Solutum eſt Templum hoc, this Temple of His bodie, the ſpirit from the fleſh, the fleſh from the bloud was looſed quite. The roofe of it (His head) looſed with thornes? the foundation (His feet) with nayles. The ſide Iſles (as it were) His hands both likewiſe. And His bodie, as the bodie of the Temple, and His heart in the midſt of His bodie, as the Sanctum Sanctorum, with the Speare: Looſed, all. What He ſaid, they did, and did it home.

Nay, they went beyond their commiſſion, and did more than, Solvere. A thing may be looſed gently, without any rigour: They looſed Him not, but rudely they rent and rived Him, one part from another, with all extremity; left not one piece of the continuum whole together. With their whips, they looſed not, but tore His skinne and fleſh all over; with their hammers and nailes, they did not Solvere, but fodere His hands and feet: With the wreath of thornes, they looſed not, but gored His head round about: and More then Solvite.

and with the Speare point rived the very heart of Him: as if He had ſaid to them, Dilaniate, and not Solvite. For, as if it had come è lanienâ, it was not Corpus Solutum, but lacerum: His bodie not looſed, but mangled and broken (Corpus quod frangitur:) And His bloud, not eaſily let out, but ſpilt and powred out (Sanguis qui funditur) even like water upon the ground. Well is it turned, Deſtroy: It is more like a deſtruction, than a ſolution: More than Solvite it was, ſure.

1 Cor. 11. 24. Matt. 26. 28.

The Solvite of this Temple ſenſible.

Now, will ye remember? This was a Temple of fleſh and bone, not one of lime and ſtone. Yet the ragged ruines of one of them demoliſhed, will pitie a mans heart to ſee them; and make him ſay Alas poore ſtones, What have theſe done? yet the ſtones neither feele their beating downe, nor ſee the deformed plight, they lye in. But He, Sic ſolutus eſt, ut ſe ſolvi ſentiret, the Solution of His skinne, fleſh, hands, feet and head, Hee was ſenſible of all; He ſaw the deformity, He felt the paines of them all.

The Solvite of this Sweat.

Luc. 22. 44.

So ſaw, and ſo felt, as with the very ſight and ſenſe, before it came, there befell Him another Solvite, a ſtrange one: Solutus eſt in Sudorem, the orifices of the veines, all over the texture of His bodie, were looſed, and all His bloud let looſe, that He was all over in a ſtrange ſweat, ſtood full of great droppes of bloud. A Solvite, never heard of, nor read of, but in Him onely.

The Solvite of the Veile.

Matt. 27. 51.

And yet another Solvite. For (that Solvite Templum hoc might every way be true, in all ſenſes verified) what time the Veile of His fleſh rent, that His ſoule was looſed and departed: at the very ſame inſtant, the Veile of the materiall Temple, that ſplit alſo in two, from the top to the bottome: as it were for companie, or in a ſympathie with Him: That, it was literally true (this Solvite) and of the Temple, that they meant. And ſo, two Solvite's, of both Temples, together at once.

The great Solvite at His Paſſion.

* Dion. Areop.

One more yet (and I have done with Solvite,) and that is, a Solvite in a manner of all; of the great Temple of heaven and earth. For the very face of Heaven, then all blacke and darke at noone day, yet no Eclipſe (the Moone was at the full) the Earth quaking, the ſtones renting, the graves opening, as they then did, ſhewed plainely, there was then toward, ſome univerſall Solvite, ſome great diſſolution (as the * Philoſopher then ſaid) either of the frame of nature, or of the GOD of nature.

Caſt your eye thither, looke upon that, and there you ſhall ſee Solvite Templum hoc plainely, and what it meanes. And, it had beene enough, if they had had any grace, even to have pointed them to the time, when this Solvite Templum hoc, was fullfilled by them. And this for both Solvite, and Solutum eſt (their part:) which was His paſſion, by their Act.

III. a Excitabo the ſaying.

Now (to anſwer them two) to Excitabo, and Excitavit (His part:) His reſurrection, by His owne.

And firſt to Excitabo. Hitherto, we are not come; but now, we come to the Signe: for the Signe is in Excitabo.

Et Excitabo, And I will rayſe it up. Which is ſpoken (as it were) by way of triumph, over all, they could or ſhould doe to Him. Goe to, diſſolve it, deſtroy it, downe with it; when you have done your worſt, it ſhall bee in vaine; Excitabo illud, my power ſhall triumph over your malice; I will raiſe it, I will up with it againe.

Excitabo how oppoſed to Solvite.

But, to looſe and to raiſe, theſe two are not oppoſite: Rather, to looſe and to ſet together againe. Rayſing is oppoſed to falling; and reſurrection to ruine, properly. But it comes all to one. Vpon the diſſolving of any frame, ſtraight downe it droppes. This goodly Temple of our bodie (on the decking and trimming whereof, ſo much is daily waſted) looſe the ſoule from it but a moment, and downe it falls, and there it lyes, like a logge (wee all know.) In oppoſition to this fall, it is ſaid He will raiſe. But, Hee will doe both: as it was looſed yer it fell; ſo will He ſet it together, yer He raiſe it againe.

Excitabo illud. Three points there are in it: 1 The Act; 2 And the Perſon, in Excitabo; and 3 the Thing it ſelfe in illud.

1. The

1. The act. The word He uſeth for it ἐγείρω, in proprietie, is a raiſing from ſleepe: And ſleepe (we know) is farre from deſtruction. It is, to ſhew us firſt, what a ſtrange metamorphoſis He would make in Death: turne it, but into a requieſcet, and a requieſcet in ſpe, and there is all. So made He His owne; ſo will Hee make ours. This day CHRIST is riſen againe, the firſt fruits of them that ſleepe; and the reſt that ſleepe in the duſt, when their time comes, ſhall doe the like.

Excitabo, the act, As from ſleepe. Pſal. 16. 9. 1 Cor. 15. 20. Dan. 12. 2.

2. To ſhew (ſecondly) they ſhould miſſe of their purpoſe quite. They reckoned indeed, to deſtroy Him; they were deceived; they made Him but ready for a nights reſt or two. They made full account, Death had devoured and digeſted Him too: they were deceived, it was not ſo: Death had but ſwallowed Him downe (as the Whale did Ionas) upon the third day to caſt Him up againe. Ion. 2. 10.

3. To ſhew (thirdly) not onely that, this He would doe, but, with what eaſe He would doe it. With no more difficulty, than one is waked up, after a nights reſt; with no more adoe, than a knot, that is but looſe and untyed, is tyed againe.

But beſides the Act, we are to looke to the Perſon, in Excitabo. It is not, deſtroy you, and ſome other ſhall raiſe it; but, I; even I my ſelfe, and none but my ſelfe, will doe it: Nec alienâ virtute, ſed propriâ, and by none others beſide; but, by mine owne proper vertue and power. An argument of His Diwine nature. For, none ever did; none ever could doe, that. Raiſed ſome were, but not any by himſelfe, or by his owne power; but by a power imparted to ſome Prophet by GOD for that time and turne: CHRIST, by none imparted from any other, but by His owne from Himſelfe. And let it not ſtumble any, that elſe-where, the Father is ſaid to raiſe and exalt Him: That is all one. Both will ſtand well. The ſame power, the Father doth it by, by the ſame doth it, He. There is but one power of both; Of both, or of either of them, it is alike truly verified. This for the Perſon.

Excitabo, the perſon. Hee Himſelfe.

Now for the thing: Illud. Templum hoc before, and illud here: Hoc and Illud are not two, but one, and the ſame. Not Solvite hoc, & ſuſcitabo aliud; downe with this, and I will up with another in the ſtead. No: but idem illud, the very ſame, againe. The very ſame you deſtroy, that, and no other, will I reare up againe. With us, with the world, it is not ſo; when we fall to diſſolve a frame of Government (ſuppoſe of the Church) it is not Solvite hoc, & excitabo illud; no, but excitabo aliud. We raiſe not the ſame, but another, quite another, nothing like it; a new one never heard of before. But let them keepe their aliud, and give us illud againe. Illud we love; It is CHRISTS excitabo, that: and if we follow CHRIST, in His raiſing, the ſame againe, or not at all.

Illud. The ſame Temple, In ſubſtance.

But, though illud be the ſame againe, in ſubſtance; yet not in qualitie the ſame for all that: but ſo farre different, as in that reſpect, it may ſeeme aliud, another quite. At leaſt, well may it be now called illud, as it were with an Emphaſis, as qualified farre beyond that it was before, when it was but Templum hoc. And to ſay truth, if it be but the ſame juſt, and no whit better; as good ſave His labour, and let the firſt ſtand. For, it is but His labour for His travell, if nothing wonne by it.

Not the ſame, In qualitie.

But if (though the ſame) yet not in the ſame, but in a farre better eſtate, than before; (Cedar, for Mulberry; Marble for Bricke, as the Prophet ſpeakes:) then, yee ſay ſomewhat, and then we will be content, to have it taken downe. Eſay 9. 10.

And ſuch was the eſtate of this Temple after the raiſing. And ſuch was it to be: For, the glory of the ſecond Houſe was much greater than of the firſt. Which increaſe or bettering is implied in the word excitabo. It is (I told you) a Riſing up after ſleepe. Now, in the morning, after ſleepe, the body riſeth more freſh, and full of vigour; than it was over night, when it lay downe. The Apoſtle ſpeakes it more plainly: Templum hoc (ſaith he) at the looſing, it was in weakneſſe, diſhonour, mortalitie; Templum illud, at the raiſing it, is in power and honour, and to immortalitie. Agge 2. 10. 1 Cor. 15. 42. 43.

And ſure, one ſpeciall reaſon of the diſſolving this Temple was, that, as then it was, Solvite might be ſaid of it; It was diſſoluble. But, being now raiſed againe, it is faſter wrought; indiſſoluble, now: No Solvite to be ſaid, not to be looſed ever any more. This for Excitabo illud. Now the laſt point, of the Time. The Signe is in that, too.

IV. The Time. Three dayes.

And when this? Within what time? Within three dayes. Which words, ſeemed to affect them moſt. All their exception lay to them. He looked not like one that would build Churches. But (let that paſſe) were Hee never ſo likely, Hee takes too ſmall a time, for ſo great a worke (as they thought.) But, if we agree once of His power to raiſe from death, the time will ſlide, we ſhall never ſticke at it much, but agree of that quickly. He that can raiſe from the dead (ten thouſand Churches will be built one after another, before one be raiſed thence:) To Him, that is able to doe that, fortie ſix houres are as good as fortie ſix yeares: all one. Nay, even forty ſix minutes; (but that it was held fit, Hee ſhould lye longer in His grave than ſo, that there might be the ſurer certaintie of His death:) Otherwiſe, yeares, dayes, or minutes, to Him, are all alike. The Signe is in both: but (to ſay truth) in Excitabo, rather than in the three dayes. For, to the power of Excitabo, Nullum tempus occurrit.

Why three.

But, why three dayes, juſt? Neither more nor leſſe? Becauſe, elſewhere He ſaith, No other time but Ionas's: that, ſhould ſerve Him. No other, than Moſes time (fortie dayes) in His faſting. No other than Ionas time (three) in His riſing. Content to keepe time with His Prophets before Him. Farre from the humour of ſome; that muſt varie (no remedie.) If Ionas three, they muſt foure, or three and a halfe, at leaſt. If Moſes fortie, they muſt be, a day under or over; have a number, have a tricke by themſelves, beyond others ſtill: Elſe, all is nothing worth. Farre from them (I ſay:) and to make us farre from them: by His example, to keepe us to that, which others before us, have well and orderly kept.

b Excitavit, the doing.

Now to the excitavit, of this Excitabo. Thus Hee ſaid it ſhould be, Et fuit ſic, and ſo it was. He would raiſe it, dixit: And He did raiſe it, factum eſt. His diſſolution laſted no longer than His limitation before-hand ſet. That, was not, poſt tres, but in tribus; not after, but within the compaſſe of three dayes. And He came within His time: For, this is but the third day, and this day, by breake of day, was this Temple up againe.

a Our dutie upon theſe. To rejoyce.

This then being the day, not only of Excitabo, but of Excitavit illud (of the ſetting it up:) accordingly we, this day, to celebrate the Encænia, or new dedicating of this Temple. A dedication was ever a Feaſt of Ioy, and that great Ioy. Every Towne had their Wake in memory of the dedicating of their Church. That we then hold it as a Feaſt of Ioy; that we be glad on it: as glad, nay more glad to ſee it up againe, this day; than the third day ſince, we were ſorry, to ſee it downe in the duſt. To Solvite, downe with it (Edoms cry) belongs Ieremies Lamentation: to Excitabo (this dayes worke) Zacharies joyfull ſhout, or acclamation, Gratiam Gratiæ, grace upon grace, and joy upon joy, and thankes upon thankes: Grace, Ioy, and thankes with an Emphaſis; for, it is now illud, with an Emphaſis indeed.

Zach. 4 7.

For our good. Rom. 3. 2. By Solvite.

But, our joy will quickly quaile, if we no good by it. I aske then, what is all this to us? And I anſwer (with the Apoſtle) Multum per omnem modum. 1. For, firſt, this Solvite of His, is a Solvite to us: a looſing us, not only from our ſinnes, the cords of our ſinnes here, as Salomon cals them; but the chaines, the everlaſting chaines of darkneſſe, and of hell, there, due to them, and to us for them.

Prov. 5. 22. Iud. 6.

By excitabo.

2. Then, this excitabo, is not to end in Him: What, we beleeve, He did for that Temple, of His Body naturall; the ſame, wee faithfully truſt, Hee will doe for another Temple, the Temple of His Body myſticall. For His myſticall, as much as for His naturall; for whoſe ſake He gave His naturall Body, thus to be diſſolved. Of which myſti-

call

call Bodie, we are parts (and the whole cannot be without his parts:) Every of us, members of this Body for his part: Every one living ſtones of this ſpirituall Temple. Diſſipentur illa, reſtaurabit denuò (ſaith Origen:) ſcattered we may be, He will gather us againe; looſed, He will knit us; fall downe and die, He will ſet us together and ſet us up againe. After two dayes, He will revive us, and in the third day raiſe us, And we ſhall live in His ſight, ſaith the Prophet Hoſea, of us all. Hoſea 6.2.

And this, is to us all, matter of great Ioy. For, to this Solvite, in the end we muſt all come; Statutum eſt hominibus, There is an Act paſſed for the diſſolution of theſe our earthly tabernacles. Looſed they ſhall be, Spirit from fleſh, Fleſh from bone, each bone from other; No avoiding it. Heb. 9.27.

All our care, to be this; how to come to a good excitabo. Good (I ſay:) for, excitabo, wee ſhall never need to take thought for: we ſhall come to that, whether wee care for it or no. But to a good Excitabo: ſuch an one, as He, as CHRIST, as this Temple is come to (that is) to a joyfull reſurrection (as we call it.) That, is worth our care: For, in the end, that will be worth all. b Our morall dutie.

That, ſhall we come to, if we can take order, that while we be here, before we goe hence, (our bodies) we get them Templified (as I may ſay:) procure, they be framed after the ſimilitude of a Temple, this Temple in the Text: For, if it be Solvite Templum; at the diſſolution, a Temple; a Temple it will riſe againe, there is no doubt of that. To make our bodies Temples.

Our bodies (as we uſe the matter many of us) are farre from Temples; rather Proſtibula than Templa; brothel-houſes, brokers ſhops, wine-caskes (or I wot not what) rather than Temples. Or, if Temples, Temples the wrong way, of Ceres, Bacchus, Venus: or (to keepe the Scripture phraſe) of Camos, Aſhtaroth, Baalpeor; and not Domus Patris mei (as this here, He ſpeakes of.)

But, if this be the fruit of our life, and we have no other, but this; to fill and farce our bodies, to make them ſhrines of pride, and to maintaine them in this exceſſe; to make a money-change of all beſides, Common-wealth, Church and all: I know not well, what to ſay to it: I doubt, at their riſing; they will rather make blockes for hell fire, than be made Pillars in the Temple of GOD, in the holy places made without hands. Apoc. 3.12. Hebr. 9 11.

Otherwiſe, if they prove to Temples here, let no man doubt, then, let them be looſed when or how they will, Hee that raiſed this Temple (ſo they be Temples) will raiſe them likewiſe; and that, to the ſame glorious eſtate, Himſelfe was raiſed to.

A courſe then muſt be taken, that while we are here, we doe Solvere Templa hæc, diſſolve theſe Temples (of Camos and Aſhtaroth;) and upon the diſſolution of them, we raiſe them up, very Temples to the true and living GOD: That wee downe with Beth-aven, this houſe or ſhop of vanity (as by nature they are;) and up with Bethel, GODS houſe, as by grace they may be. The morall ſolvite of them.

For, a Solvite, and an excitabo, we are to paſſe here in this life: and this, this excitabo, is the firſt reſurrection here to be paſſed: He that hath his part in this firſt, he ſhall not faile but have it in the ſecond. The morall. Excitabo. Apoc. 20.6.

If then, Temples they would be, that we ſo make them: for, to make them ſo, is the Excitabo of this life.

And ſo ſhall we make them, even Temples: and no way ſooner, than if we love this place (the Temple) well, and love to reſort to it, and to be much in it. By being much in it, we ſhall even turne into it. And ſure, if ever we have aliquid Templi, any thing of a Temple in us; then it is, when we are duly and devoutly occupied, and imployed, they and we, in His worſhip and ſervice. Then are we Temples. That they may be Temples.

But, to be Temples, is not all; we are further to be Templum hoc, this Temple: and this, was the Temple of His body. And that are we, if at any time, then certainly, when, as if we were Temples in very deed, we prepare to receive, not the Arke of His preſence, but Himſelfe, that He may come into us and be in us: Which is, at what time, we preſent our ſelves, to receive His bleſſed bodie and bloud: that bodie, and that bloud, which for our ſakes was diſſolved; diſſolved three dayes ſince, when it ſuffered for our ſinnes: Temples. Corporis ſui.

Rom. 4. 25. ſinnes. And this day raiſed againe, when it roſe for our juſtification.

Which, when we doe; (that is) receive this bodie, or this Temple: (for, Templum hoc, and Hoc eſt Corpus meum are now come to be one: for, both Templum hoc, and corpus hoc, are in Templum corporis ſui:) and, when the Temples of our body, are in this Temple, and the Temple of His body in the Temples of ours; then are there three Temples in one, a Trinitie, the perfecteſt number of all. Then, if ever, are we, not Temples onely, but Templa Corporis ſui, Temples of His bodie; and this Scripture fulfilled in us.

This Feaſt a fit time for it. This are we, when we receive. Now, at no time, is this act of receiving, ſo proper, ſo in ſeaſon, as, this very day (ſo hath CHRISTS Church thought it, and ſo practiſed it, ever) the very day of this His Excitabo; the day of His Riſing: And by meanes of it, of our raiſing; our raiſing firſt, to the life of righteouſneſſe (to the eſtate of Temples) here in this world: And after, of our raiſing againe, to the ſecond, the life of glory and bliſſe (of glorious Temples) in the world to come; which is the Excitabo when all is done. What time, they and we ſhall be looſed: as now, from ſinne; ſo then, from corruption. And raiſed, and reſtored: as now, to the eſtate of grace; ſo then, to the ſtate of glory, and glorious liberty of the ſonnes of God. To which happy and bleſſed eſtate, may He raiſe us all in the end, that this day, was raiſed for Vs, &c.

A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE THE KINGS MAIESTIE AT WHITE-HALL, ON the XXXI. of March, A.D. MDCXVI. being EASTER-DAY.

()

I PET. Chap. I. Ver. III. IV.

Benedictus Deus, &c.

Blessed bee GOD, and the FATHER of our Lord Iesus Christ, which according to His abundant mercie, hath begotten us againe unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Iesus Christ from the dead.

To an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you.

THE Summe of this Text, and (if ye will) the Name of it too, is set downe in the very first word of it. It is a Benedictus: The first word is so. The first word Benedictus: and (if you looke) the last word is [for You.] Give me leave to reade it, for Vs; to put in our selves: Seeing to us, and for us, it was written. So, a Benedictus it is; from us, to GOD, for something comming from GOD, to, or for us. The Summe.

Something? Nay many. Benedictus is but one word, but the first word: the rest of the words, of both the Verses, are for us, all.

And, many they are: Wee reduce them to three: 1 Our regeneration which is past: 2 Our hope, which is present: 3 and our our Inheritance, which is to come. 1. Regenerating, or begetting, is (of it ſelfe) a benefit: We get life by it, if nothing elſe. 2. But, to beget to an Inheritance, is more than ſimply to beget. 3. And yet, more than that, to beget, to Such an Inheritance, as this; of which, ſo many excellent things are here ſpoken.

Three then, in this; 1 To be begotten: 2 To be begotten to Inherite: 3 To be begotten to Inherite, ſuch an Inheritance.

Titus 3. 7. But then, an inheritance is no preſent matter. All heires be heires, under hope, Vſque dum, till the appointed time. So comes hope in. Therefore, firſt to hope. After, to the thing hoped for, the Inheritance it ſelfe. There is a reſemblance of both theſe, in the two Seaſons of the yeare. At this time, the time of CHRISTS Reſurrection, and of our celebrating it, to hope; as to the bloſſome or blade, riſing now in the Spring: To the Inheritance; that, as the crop or fruit to come after, at harveſt:

Matth. 13. 39. And the harveſt of this crop (ſaith our SAVIOVR) is the end of the world.

Wee are not yet come to the point. Regenerate, whereto? to a lively hope: Hope, whereof? of an Inheritance: Inheritance, what manner one? Such as is here ſet downe.

But, all theſe, whereby? Per reſurrectionem, by the Reſurrection of CHRIST: All, by Him: All, by that. This By, is the maine, here. This Διὰ the διὰ πασῶν, that runnes thorow all this Text. For, all ariſe, from CHRIST ariſing from the dead.

Now, if from CHRIST riſing, then from CHRIST, at this Feaſt. For this is the Feaſt of CHRISTS riſing: And ſo, this the proper Benedictus, for Luke 1. 68. this Feaſt. We had a Benedictus made by Zacharie, Saint Iohn Baptiſts Father, for His Birth, for Chriſtmaſſe day (knowne by the name of Benedictus:) We have here now another, for His riſing, for Eaſter day, of Saint Peters ſetting. And, this it is.

The Diviſion For the Order, wee will put the words in no other, for wee can put them in no better, than they ſtand: Every one is in his due place, from the firſt to the laſt.

1. GOD firſt, and the true GOD, the Father of our LORD IESVS CHRIST. 2. Then, His mercie, the cauſe moving. 3. Then, CHRISTS Reſurrection, the meanes working. 4. Then, our regeneration the act producing.

Producing 1 hope (firſt) of the Inheritance: 2 then after, the Inheritance, wee hope for. Of which, two points there are: 1 How it is qualified: Vncorrupt, undefiled, not fading: Every one hath his weight. 2 Then, how Seated: Even, in Heaven: There it is; there kept it is. And, which is the Capitall chiefe point of all, kept, for us, there.

Now then, for theſe. 1 For His Mercy, firſt. 2 For our Regenerating, by His Mercie. 3 For the Hope, of this Inheritance; 4 but more, for the Inheritance it ſelfe: Specially ſuch an one, ſo conditioned, as here is ſet downe. 5 For keeping it for us

Verſe 5. in Heaven (in this Verſe:) 6 For keeping us for it, on Earth (the next Verſe.) For theſe all: but above all, for the meanes of all, the riſing of CHRIST (this dayes worke) the dew of this new birth, the gate of this hope, the pledge of this Inheritance. For theſe, owe we this Benedictus, to GOD. And, this day, are we to pay it, every one of us. It is a Sinne of omiſſion, not to doe it; he that doth not, is a debtour.

To GOD the Father, the Qui; and to CHRIST our LORD, the Per quem, by whom and by whoſe riſing, loſe this life when we will, we have hope of a better; betide our Inheritance on Earth what ſhall, wee have another kept for us in Heaven. Thus, every one naturally ariſeth out of other.

Bleſſed

I.
The Act.
Benedictus:
Blessed be God.

Blesse GOD we may.

Heb. 7. 7.

Ephes. 1. 3.

How we may blesse GOD.

Psal. 16. 2.

In His Name.

In His Word.

*Le*ſſed be GOD. Yea, bleſſed and thanked, and praiſed; Benedictus, Magnificat, Iubilate, and all. All; But, here, bleſſed ſuits beſt: that, the beſt, and moſt proper returne, for a bleſſing. That, we Inherite, is the Bleſſing (Chap. III. verſe 9.) The hope, is a bleſſed hope (Tit. II. 13.) But, the *Inherit*ance is, the State of bleſſedneſſe it ſelfe. Therfore, Benedictus benè dicitur, Benedictus is ſaid well. Said well, of GOD, who is above all bleſſed for ever: well alſo, of a Father; Benedictus, a fit terme, for him. And GOD, in the Tenour of this whole Text, is brought in, as a Father, a father begetting; begetting us firſt by nature; begetting us againe, in it, by grace.

2
The Partie,
GOD.
Rom. 9. 5.

But thereby hangs a Scruple: For, what are wee that wee ſhould take upon us to bleſſe GOD? Saint Peter ſaies it, here: Saint Paul ſeemes to gaine-ſay it, Without all queſtion (ſaith he) the leſſe is bleſſed by the greater. And is He leſſe, or we greater, that we ſhould offer to bleſſe Him? And, if not as GOD; not, as a Father (the next word.) For, ſhall the Child preſume to bleſſe his Father? It becomes Him not. He us, then: and not we, Him.

Yes, He us; and we Him, too. Wee have ſo many Texts for it, I make no doubt, but there is bleſſing both waies. Of the many, I remember that one of Saint Pauls (Epheſ. 1.) Benedictus Deus qui benedixit nos, Bleſſed be GOD for bleſſing us. As if they were reciprocall, theſe: One, the Echo, the reflection of the other. Equall they are not. It were fond, to imagine, the Father gives the child no other bleſſing, but the childe can give him as good againe. No: aliter nos Deum, aliter Deus nos; Otherwiſe, GOD bleſſeth us; and the Parent, who repreſents GOD, in begetting our bodies; and the Prieſt, who repreſents Him, in begetting againe our ſoules. Otherwiſe, we them. GODS, is reall: ours, but verball. His, cum effectu, ever: Ours, if it be but cum affectu, that is all. His, Operative; ours, but Optative. What then? he, that wiſheth heartily, would doe more than wiſh, if his power were according. Even that then, in want of power, to ſhew a good will (I know not how, but) wee take it well, ever. GOD doth, I am ſure: as appeareth, by the goates haire of the Old Teſtament, and by the Widdowes mites in the New. And this is Saint Peters, but expreſſing a good minde onely. And, without all queſtion, thus, the Greater may be bleſſed, even of the leſſe: Not, tanquam poteſtatem habens, but tanquam vota faciens. So, we may ſay Benedictus Deus: And let us then ſay it.

What ſay wee then, when wee ſay Benedictus? It is a word compound: Take it in ſunder, and Dicere, is to ſay ſomewhat, to Speake; and that we can: and benè, is (ſpeaking) to ſpeake well; and, that we ought. To Speake, is Confeſſion: To ſpeake well, is Praiſe: And Praiſe becommeth Him, and us to give it Him.

Put together in one word, and then, Benedicere to bleſſe, in the phraſe of ours; and of all tongues elſe, is, not ſo much omnia bona dicere, to ſpeake all good of Him, as omnia bona vovere, to wiſh all good to Him. And that becomes Him too: not onely Laus, but Votum: ſpecially, where Votum is totum, where we have little elſe left us, but it.

And, what good can we wiſh Him, that He hath not? Bonorum noſtrorum non eget (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) nor Benedictionum, neither. We can adde nothing to Him by our Benedictus: Say we it, ſay we it not, He is bleſſed alike.

True, to Him, wee cannot wiſh; not, to His perſon: But, to His Name, wee can: (And He is bleſſed, when His Name is bleſſed:) We can wiſh His name more bleſſedly uſed, and not in curſing, and curſed othes, as daily wee heare it.

And, to His Word, we can: We can wiſh it more devoutly heard, and not, as a few ſtraines of wit, as our manner is.

In His Perſon as united to his Church.

Yea, even to His perſon, we can: There is a way, to doe that, inaſmuch as He, and His Church, are now growen into one, make but one perſon: what is ſayd or done to it, is ſaid or done to Himſelfe: Bleſſe it, and He is bleſſed.

In a word then: to bleſſe GOD, is to wiſh, His Name may be glorious; to wiſh, His Word may bee proſperous; to wiſh, His Church may be happie. By wearing of which Name, and by hearing of which Word, and by being in, and of which Church, wee receive the bleſſing here upon earth, that ſhall make us for ever bleſſed in heaven. This we ſay, if we marke what we ſay, when we ſay Bleſſed be GOD.

GOD, and the Father of our LORD IESVS CHRIST. This is ſtylo novo, the ſtyle of the New Teſtament; ye read it not in the Old: No, nor in Zacharies neither. Betweene that of Zacharies, and this of Saint Peters, it fell out, this. The Sun was yet under the Horizon, when Zacharie made his: But (now) up, and of a good height. And thereupon, this taken up by Saint Peter, here: by Saint Paul, 1 Cor. 1. Epheſ. 1. and upon great reaſon.

GOD, and the Father of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: the Style of the New Teſtament. 1 Cor. 1. 3. Epheſ. 1. 3.

1 Bleſſed bee GOD: Say that, and no more, and never a Iew, Turke, or Pagan, but will ſay as much. Bleſſed bee GOD, wee; Bleſſed be GOD, they. It is never the worſe for that. But yet, ſeeing the world then was, ſtill is, full of many Gods, and many Lords (1 Cor. 8.) It would bee knowne, which GOD. For, we would not beſtow our Benedictus upon any, but the true GOD: neither they, nor we, I dare ſay. Which is then the true GOD? Pater Domini noſtri Ieſu Chriſti: and Hee that is not ſo, is a falſe fained God; is an Idoll. Put them to it then, put this addition to, and neither Turke, Iew, nor Pagan will ſay after you: None, but the Chriſtian. For, this is the Chriſten mans Benedictus.

1 To ſever Him from all falſe Gods. 1 Cor. 8. 5.

Now, ever ſince Idolatrie firſt tooke head, it hath beene held fit, they that are GODS choſen People of all the people upon earth, they ſhould have ſome marke of ſeverance, to diſtinguiſh, as theirs, the true GOD; ſo themſelves, the true worſhippers, from the falſe. So, to ſettle our Benedictus right, upon the right GOD, this is added.

a As His beſt Title.

2 For this cauſe: but, not for this alone. When we bleſſe Him, I dare ſay, wee would bleſſe Him, with His beſt Title. So hath it beene ever. You ſhall obſerve in Titles, ever, upon the comming of a greater, the leſſe is layd downe. No more, the Lord liveth that brought thee out of Egypt; but, the Lord liveth that brought thy captivitie from the North. And now, no more that neither; For, here is one, that after it came, puts them downe all, as being indeed the greateſt of them all, the greateſt that ever was, or that ever ſhall be. One, which when we adde, we ſet our Benedictus at the higheſt.

Ier. 23. 7, 8.

For, if this bee to bee GOD, to bee bounteous, beneficiall (as wee ſeeme to thinke, when we ſay homo homini Deus:) In nothing, was GOD ever ſo beneficiall, ſo bounteous; and ſo, in nothing ever ſo GOD, as in ſending His onely begotten Sonne into the world. In that, GOD, ſpecially; and, for that, ſpecially to be bleſſed. And becauſe, a greater than His Son He hath not, and ſo a greater than this ſhall never come, therefore this ſhall never bee layd downe. This ſhall bee His Title, for ever. For ever to have a place, and a chiefe place, in our Benedictus.

Ioh. 3. 16.

3 To bring CHRIST in, too.

And yet there is another, on CHRISTS behalfe, Our Lord: even to bring Him in too. For, ſeeing all that which followes, comes not, but by the riſing of Chriſt, and ſo, by CHRIST; I ſee not, how (well) wee can leave Him out. All the good, that comes to us, as it comes to us from God, ſo it comes to us, by Chriſt. God, the Qui; Chriſt, the Per quem. God, the cauſe; from Him commeth all, Chriſt and all: Chriſt the meanes; by Him commeth all, God and all. All things from God; and nothing from GOD immediately, but mediante Chriſto. Hee, the cauſe mediate, the Mediator, the Medium. No benefactus (and ſo, no benedictus) without Him.

This is moſt plaine, in this here. Benedictus Deus, qui generavit Chriſtum: firſt, that did generate Chriſt; before Benedictus Deus, qui regeneravit nos, that did regenerate us.

us. If Hee not generate, wee not regenerate: then, no children; then, no Inheritance; then, all this Text void. For, in Him, this Text and all other Texts are Yea and Amen.

By this time we ſee, why this addition. 1 It is His Title of Severance: 2 It is the higheſt Title of His honour: 3 It takes in CHRIST, who would not be left out, in our Benedictus. Dixit Dominus Domino meo, The LORD ſaid to my LORD, to take both LORDS in, and leave neither out. And ſo ſhall we knit it well to that, which followes. Pſal. 110. 1.

3 The cauſe why.

From the Partie whom, we paſſe to the cauſe, why. For, we ſay not this Benedictus, as wee ſay many an one here, without any cauſe: Benedictus, for nothing: Nay, otherwhile a Benedictus, for a malefactus, for a ſhrewd turne; yea, and glad and faine too. No, here is a Qui, and in this qui, there is a quia. That doth it (that is) for doing it: that regenerates us (that is) for regenerating us. For, GOD is ever aforehand with us: Regeneravit, is the Preter; that is paſt, before any Benedictus can come from us.

1 Mercie.

Pater, qui Regeneravit followes well, is kindly. For, Generation, it is Actus paternus, the proper act of a Father. But, before we come to it, let us not ſtride over that, which (in the Text) ſtands before it, Secundum miſericordiam. GOD did this, did all that followes, but upon what motive? According to what did He it? According to His mercie. And Mercie accords well with a Father: No compaſſion, no bowels like His. And as well, with regeneravit; for, of His owne good will begate He us. How elſe? when as yet we were not, what ſhould move Him, but His meere mercie? Well therefore ſaid, regeneravit ſecundum: for regeneration is but ſecundum, but a ſecond, not a firſt: Would ye have a primum, a firſt for it? that firſt is His Mercie, ever.

His abundant (or great) mercie.

But the benefits enſuing are too great to runne in the common current of Mercy. As they then are, ſo is the mercie that goes to them. Great: Therefore according to His great Mercie. Mercie, the thing; Great, the meaſure. And, great would not be paſſed by, leſt we paſſe not greatly by it; leſt we conceive, and count of it, as but of ſome ordinary matter.

His manifold mercie.

But (indeed) πολὺ is rather Multa, than Magna; a word of number, rather than Magnitude. The meaning is: no ſingle mercie would doe it; no, though Great: there muſt be many. For, many the defects to be removed, many the ſinnes to be forgiven, many the perfections to be attained: Therefore, according to his manifold Mercie.

According is well ſaid. For, that indeed is the chord, to which this and all our Benedictuſſes are to be tuned. That, the Center, from which all the lines are drawne. The line of CHRISTS Birth, in Zacharies Benedictus, through the tender mercies of our GOD, whereby the day-ſpring from on high did (lately) viſite us. The line of CHRISTS Reſurrection, in Saint Peters Benedictus, according to His manifold mercies, whereby, this day ſprung from on high doth now viſite us. The line of all the reſt, if we had time to goe through all the reſt. Luke 1. 78.

At all times, mercy commeth in; at no time out of time (I truſt;) we ſhall die with it, in our mouthes: let us make much of it while we live: Never paſſe by it, but ſay it; ſay it, as oft as we can; bleſſed be GOD: bleſſed be His mercy. GOD, that doth it: His mercy, according to which He doth it. Doth it, and doth all elſe, at this and all other Feaſts: at Eaſter, at Chriſtmas, the fifth of November, and all. Bleſſed be He for His mercy: Yea, many times bleſſed, for His manifold mercies.

4 Regeneravit nos.

Mercy then firſt: Regeneravit ſecundùm, the act, of this mercy, the ſecond, that is Regeneravit. Regeneravit may be ſaid, with reference to CHRIST. Generavit Chriſtum, regeneravit nos; and not amiſſe. But, better and more properly, both to us. Generavit nos, begot us firſt, in Adam, to this: regeneravit nos, begot us againe, in CHRIST the ſecond Adam, to the hope of a better life.

1 Hath begotten us againe.

But

But, why is it not ſo then, qui generavit without re? Why begin wee not with that? Verily, even for that, even for our naturall generation, we owe Him a Benedictus. But, what ſhould I ſay? Vnleſſe (beſide our firſt generavit) we be ſo happy, as to have our part in this ſecond regeneravit, the former (I doubt) will hardly prove worth a Benedictus. But, if this come to it, then, for both, a benedictus indeed. Otherwiſe (as our SAVIOVR ſaid to Nicodemus) No man, unleſſe he be thus borne againe, by his firſt birth, bee it never ſo high or noble, is a whit the neerer this Inheritance following. For all our goodly generavit, we ſo much boaſt of, it would goe wrong with us, but for this. Well therefore, may wee all ſay, Benedictus qui regeneravit.

Ioh.3.3.

Againe that is the ſecond time.

Now Re hath in it two powers, Re is, againe, the ſecond time: So, it ſuits well with Secundùm, it is the ſecond. For, two there be: [1] that old creation; [2] and the new Creature in CHRIST: And, two births; (We ſee it daily:) A child is brought into the world, but it is carryed but againe, to the Church, there to bee borne and brought forth anew, by the Sacrament of Regeneration.

Gal.6.15.

Againe, that is upon a loſſe.

But Re is not onely againe, but againe (as it were) upon a loſſe. Not, a ſecond only, but a ſecond, upon the failing of the firſt. So doth Re imply, ever. Red-emption, a buying againe, upon a former aliening. Re-conciliation, upon a former falling out. Re-ſtitution, upon a former attainder. Re-ſurrection, upon a fall taken formerly. Regeneration, upon a former degenerating, from our firſt eſtate.

Epheſ.2.3. Pro.16.14.

Our firſt would not ſerve; it was corrupt, it was defiled, it did degenerate. Degenerating, made us Filios iræ: And, ira principis (much more ira Dei) mors eſt. So, children of death, death and damnation: and there left us, and all by meanes of the corruption and ſoile of our former degenerate generation.

Never aske then Quid opus eſt re? Re cannot be ſpared. There was more than need of a new, a ſecond, a re-generation, to make us children of grace againe, and ſo of life: which He hath given us power to be made, by the waſhing of the new birth, the fountaine which Hee hath opened to the houſe of Iſraël for ſinne and uncleanneſſe; even, for the ſinne and uncleanneſſe of the firſt. Will ye have it plainely? Benedictus Deus qui generatos ad mortem, regeneravit ad vitam: or, qui generatos ad timorem mortis, regeneravit ad ſpem vitæ. That wee, wee that were begotten to the feare of death, or to a deadly feare; Vs, He hath begotten anew, to the hope of life, or to a lively hope.

Tit.3.5. Zach.13.1.

This act of regenerating is determined doubly: Εἰς is twice repeated. [1] To hope firſt: [2] then, to the Inheritance: ye may put them together, to the hope of an Inheritance. But, thus parted, they ſtand, becauſe of our two eſtates, to ſerve them both: [1] Hope, in this life; [2] Inheritance, in that to come: Hope, while here, in ſtate of grace; Inheritance, when there, in ſtate of glorie.

In Spem. To Hope.

But becauſe (as wee ſaid) an Inheritance, is no preſent matter: It is to come, and to bee comen to: From begetting, wee ſtep not ſtraight to entring upon our Inheritance; but, the ſtate of heires, is a ſtate of expectancie, and ſo a fit object for hope, Donec, till the time come: therefore wee beginne, with that: Regeneravit in Spem.

There needs no great Benedictus for in Spem: Hope, is no great matter. For, what is hope? What, but vigilantis ſomnium, a waking mans dreame? And ſuch a hope indeed it may bee: for, ſuch hopes there bee many, in the world. But, this is none ſuch.

To ſhew, it is none ſuch, it is ſevered by two termes: [1] Regeneravit, and [2] Vivam. They are worth the marking, both.

a Spem genera-tam.

1 Regeneravit, firſt: that it is Spes generata; which implies, there is another, but inflata, but blowne into us, or we ſprinkled or perfumed with it. Such there is, but, not this: but this is per viam generationis, and Generatio (we know) terminatur ad ſubſtantiam, brings forth a Subſtance. So, this, a ſubſtantiall hope; called therefore by Saint Paul, the Helmet of hope (Theſſ. V.) the Anchor of hope (Heb. VI.) things of ſubſtance, that will hold; that have metall in them.

1 Theſſ.5.8. Heb.6.19.

b Spem vivam.

2 Then marke Vivam. And, vivam followes well, of regeneravit. For, they that that are begotten, are ſo to live; to have life. Vivam alſo imports, there is a dead, or a dying hope: but, this is not ſuch, but a living.

Nay, Viva is more then Vivens; lively, than living. Where, Viva is ſaid of ought (as, of ſtone, or water) the meaning is they ſpring, they grow, they have life in themſelves. And, ſuch is the Water of our regeneration: not from the brooks of Teman (in Iob VI.) that in Summer, will be drie; but the water of Iordan, a running river. There, CHRIST was Himſelfe baptized: there, He began, and laid the Sacrament of our New birth; to ſhew what the nature of the hope is, it yeelds: even viva, with life in it. Iob 6.15.16. Matt.3.13.

And indeed, Regeneravit is a good Verbe, to joyne with hope. There is, in hope, a kind of regendring power: It begets men (as it were) anew. And, Viva is a good Epithet for it. When one droopes, give him Hope, his ſpirits will come to him afreſh; it will make him alive againe, that was halfe dead. As Iacob, when he was put in hope to ſee Ioſeph alive, it is ſaid, Revixit ſpiritus Iacob, his ſpirit revived in him: he ſhewed, Spes was viva, hope was a reviver. Gen.45.24.

Never ſo well ſeene (this) as this day, in them, that went to Emmaus: With cold hearts; cold and dead (God wote) till they heard the Scriptures opened to this point: and then, Did wee not (ſaid they) feele our hearts warme (nay hot) within us? Such a vitall heat, they found, and felt, came from this hope. For (to ſay truth) what is it, to give life, to them that have it already; dum ſpiro, that are alive, that can fetch their breath? it is not worthy (that) to be called Spes viva: Spes viva (indeed) is, that, which, when breath, and life, and all faile, failes not: that, that then puts life into us; dum expiro, when life is going away: that when this life wee muſt forgoe, bidds, let it goe; when that is gone, ſhewes us hope of another. Luk.24.32.

This is Viva indeed. Nay, this is Vita; for the hope of that life immortall, is the very life of this life mortall. And, for ſuch a hope, Benedictus Deus, Bleſſed bee GOD.

And, whence hath it this life? The next word ſhewes it, vivam, per Reſurrectionem. The Viveneſſe (as I may ſay) the vivacitie, the vigor it hath, from CHRIST riſing, and by His riſing, opening to us the gate of life at large. What life? Any life? this life? No: vivam, per reſurrectionem. Not this (here) falſi ſeculi vita (as even the Heathen man called it;) but, the other, the life by the reſurrection, the true life indeed. Not to live here ſtill, as wee doe: But, to riſe againe and live, as CHRIST (this day) did. That ſo, wee miſtake not the life, and take the wrong, for the right. For, ſo ſhall wee miſtake, in our hope alſo, as commonly wee doe. [i] Vivam, per Reſurrectionem Ieſu Chriſti.

For, ſhall we doe hope no wrong? The truth is Hope heares evill without a cauſe. The fault is not hope's, the fault is our owne; wee put it where we ſhould not, and then lay the blame upon hope; where we ſhould blame our ſelves, for wrong putting it. For, if yee put it not right, this is a generall rule: As is that, wee hope in; ſo is our hope. [a] Ye leane on a reed (ſaith Eſay.) [b] Ye take hold by a cobweb, (Iob.) [c] Ye catch at a ſhadow, (ſaith the Wiſe man.) And can it bee then, but this hope muſt deceive you? [a] Eſay 36.6. [b] Iob 8.14. [c] Eccleſ 34.2.

We for the moſt part, put it wrong: for we put it in them, that live this tranſitory periſhing life; we put it in them, that muſt die, and then muſt our hope die with them, and ſo prove a dying hope. Miſerable is that man, that among the dead is his hope (ſaith the Wiſe man.) The Pſalme beſt expreſſeth it: Our hope is in the Sonnes of men; and they live by breath, and when that is gone, they turne to duſt; and then, there lies our hope in the duſt. For, how can (ever) a dying object yeeld a living hope? Sap.13.10. Pſal.146.3.

But, put it in one that dies not, that ſhall never die, and then it will be Spes viva, indeed. No reed, no cobweb-hope then; but helmet, anchor-hope; hope, that will never confound you.

And who is that, or where is He, that we might hope in Him? That is IESVS CHRISTVS

CHRISTVS ſpes noſtra, IESVS CHRIST, our hope: ſo calls Him Saint Paul (1 *Tim.*1.1.) Such ſhall their hope be, that have CHRIST for their hope.

Yet, not CHRIST every way conſidered; not, as yeſterday, in the grave; not, as the day before, giving up the Ghoſt upon the Croſſe: dead and buried yeelds but dead hope. But, in IESVS CHRISTVS hodiè, IESVS CHRIST to day, that is, CHRISTVS reſurgens, CHRIST riſing againe; CHRIST not now a living ſoule, but a quickning ſpirit.

In CHRISTS life then: But, not in His mortall life. They, that ſo hoped in Him, to Emmaus they went, this day, with Nos autem ſperabamus, we did hope: Did, while Luk.24.21. He was alive; but, now, now Hee is dead, no more hope now. And, for two daies, as He was, ſo was their hope; dead, and buried: and if He had riſen no more, had beene quite dead for ever. But, this day, He revived and roſe againe: So did their hope too.

To this life we are regenerate, by the reſurrection of Chriſt: Right. As to death generate, by the fall of the firſt Adam: So, to life regenerate, by the riſing againe of Chriſt, the ſecond.

And, theſe two, Reſurrection, and regeneration match well. The Regeneration of the ſoule, is the firſt Reſurrection. And, the Reſurrection of the bodie, is the laſt Regeneration.
Matt.19.28. So doth our SAVIOVR CHRIST terme it (*Mat.*19.) In the regeneration, when the Sonne of Man ſhall ſit, that is, at the generall reſurrection. So was His owne; His reſurrection, His regeneration. This day have I begotten thee (the verſe of the Pſal 2.7. Pſalme) the Apoſtle applies to Chriſts eternall generation (*Heb.*1.5.) But, ſo doth he, to his Reſurrection alſo (Act 13.33.) For, then was Chriſt Himſelfe regenerate (as it were) begotten in a ſort anew, and brought forth out of the grave, as out of the wombe, the very wombe, wherein He was borne to the immortall, that is, to the true life.

By His reſurrection: and if ye aske how, Eſay tells us; There goeth from His re-
Eſay 26.19. ſurrection an influence, which ſhall have an operation like that of the dew of the ſpring; which when He will let fall, the earth ſhall yeeld her dead, as at the falling of the dew, the herbes now riſe, and ſhoot forth againe. Which terme therefore [of regenerating] was well choſen, as fitting well, with His riſing, and the time of it. The time
Luk.24.1. (I ſay) of the yeare, of the weeke, and (if ye will) of the day too. For, He roſe in the dawning: then is the day regenerate: and in primâ Sabbati, that, the firſt begetting of the Weeke: And, in the ſpring, when all that were winter-ſterved, withered, and dead, are regenerate againe, and riſe up anew.

2 In hæreditatem. To an inheritance.

We paſſe now to the Inheritance. But, as we paſſe, will ye obſerve the ſituation firſt. It is well worth your obſerving, that the Reſurrection is placed in the midſt, betweene our Hope, and our Inheritance. To hope before it; before the reſurrection, hope: But, after, to the Inheritance it ſelfe, to the full poſſeſsion and fruition of it. So, from the ſtate of hope, by the reſurrection (as by a bridge) paſſe we over, to the enjoying our Inheritance. And, that falls well with the feaſt, which is the feaſt of the Paſſe-over. The Reſurrection is ſo, too; paſſe wee doe, from ſpes, to res. So paſſed CHRIST: So, we to paſſe. Every word ſtands exactly in his place and order.

An Inheritance accords well with according to His mercie. Wee have it not of our ſelves, or, by our merits, by the πολὺ of them; but, of Him, and by His mercies, and the πολὺ of them: Elſe were it a purchaſe, and no Inheritance. It comes to us freely; as the Inheritance, to children.

Well, with Mercie: and well, with Regeneravit. For, the Inheritance is of Children, pertaines to the Children, either of generation, by Nature; or of Regeneration, by Grace: By the former, Hee is Pater Domini noſtri; by the later, Hee is Pater noſter.

But

But yet, for all that, Ad hæreditatem is a new point. Begetting is (properly) but to life, and nothing elſe: The greater part, by farre, are begotten ſo. To Inherit, beſides, not one of a thouſand. Aske poore mens children: Aske younger brethren. But this (here) not in Vivam only; but in Hæreditatem alſo, and theſe are two. 1 To be begotten, vivam: 2 To be heires, hæreditatem. It is not Lazarus's reſurrection; to riſe againe to the condition, he had before. It is CHRIST'S; riſing, to receive an Inheritance withall.

Nor ſhall we need to doubt any prejudice to GOD, from whom it comes, by our comming to this Inheritance. Vivam and Hæreditatem (there) will ſtand well together. Here, they will not. Here, the Inheritance comes not, but by the death of the partie in poſſeſſion: But there, no prejudice to the Anceſtor; he dies not, for the heire to ſucceed. There is Succeſsio minorum ſine receſsione majorum. A ſucceſsion, as of lights; the ſecond burnes cleere; yet the firſt goes not out, but burnes as cleere as it.

Nor no prejudice to the Heire neither: To us, by Him; nor to Him, by us. It is not, as here: One carries it from all, and all the reſt goe without; Or, if they come in, his part is the leſſe. No: it is of the nature of light, and other ſuch ſpirituall things (as ſounds, and ſmells) which be Omnibus una, & ſingulis tota. If there be a thouſand together, every one ſees, heares, ſmells as much, as he ſhould doe, if there were no more but himſelfe alone. Such is this: not, erga aliquos veſtrûm, but erga vos.
